Parking for handicapped enforced

The Big Spring Police Department wants to remind residents that it is enforcing parking for the handicapped on a daily basis, Lt. Troy Hogue said Friday.

Anyone without a permit displayed on the left side of the car windshield or a handicapped sticker on the license plate will be ticketed if parked in an area designated for the handicapped, he said.

People whose vehicle blocks access curb ramps or architectural improvements designed to aid the handicapped, or park a vehicle displaying a handicapped permit when they aren't authorized or aren't transporting a disabled person will also be ticketed, Hogue said.

"Handicapped persons who don't display the card will also be ticketed," Hogue said, explaining that the police department has no way of knowing if the individual is handicapped if a permit isn't displayed.

Fines of $50 will be assessed to violators, Hogue said.

Residents air concerns at forum

By KERRY HAGLAND
Staff Writer

Residents concerned about flooding, street conditions, taxes and other city issues attended a public forum Friday night that introduced city council candidates.

About 20 people attended the forum, sponsored by the Fire Fighters Association, at the International Union of Operating Engineers Union Hall at Cosden Refinery. Only five of the seven candidates running for District 1 and 3 attended the forum.

Elaine Oliver, running for District 1, and Harold Hall, running for re-election in District 3 were absent. Councilman Henry Sanchez, Pat Deanda, and Lee Young running for District 1, and D.D. Johnston and Patsy Cawthon running for District 3 attended the forum.

Each candidate gave a short introduction. After all introductions were given, the audience was allowed to address questions to one or more candidates.

"I'm sensitive to the working man; times are hard," Pat Deanda said. Lawmakers need to talk in laymen's terms to help residents understand city issues, Deanda said.

Audience members criticized current and past councils for lack of communication with their constituents.

"Everyone's intentions have been real good — while they're running for office," Nolan Beall, 1731 Yale Ave., said, complaining that council members don't discuss issues often enough with their constituents.

A council member only has so much time to devote to the part-time position, candidate Lee Young said. Because he is retired, he can devote more time than others who must work, he said.

Attending meetings are important, Deanda said, but it's a council member's job to make residents aware of what is being addressed at those meetings.

Henry Sanchez, seeking re-election in District 1, said he would like to see the industrial area by the airport developed and would also like to develop the quality of streets and city water plants.

D.D. Johnston stressed his involvement in community service organizations and said citizens will have to compromise on a lot of things because of economic hardships. "We can't throw up our hands and quit," he said.

Both Sanchez and Young said raising taxes might be unavoidable. Cawthon said cuts should be made to avoid raising taxes. She recommended shutting down businesses with delinquent taxes as one method to avoid an increase.

Several residents also questioned the handling of flooding in the Jones Valley area. All candidates conceded that the drainage problem must be addressed.

Each candidate said repairing city streets was also a top priority.

Economist: state income tax needed

By ANDREW MANGAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — With Texas reeling from low oil prices, shrinking agriculture markets and a sagging border economy a state income tax is needed to open the door to economic expansion, an SMU economist said Friday.

"Unless Texas undertakes sweeping tax reform, the state will not see companies from outside coming in and will begin seeing those that are here moving out," said Harold Gross, assistant director of the Center For Enterprising at Southern Methodist University.

Speaking at the 1987 meeting of the Texas Associated Press Managing Editors, Gross said the state is in the middle of a major restructuring of its economy and will have to respond with major changes.

"Right now Texas is for sale," Gross said.

The state's hemorrhaging economy has seen oil prices drop from $30 a barrel 18 months ago to as low as $8 a barrel this past summer, a fall in real estate values and a loss of billions of dollars in tax revenues and thousands of jobs.

A new tax structure would not only provide a way to generate revenues to keep the government operating, it would send a message to the financial markets that Texas is "coming out swinging," Gross said.

"Eventually we're going to have to have an income tax to fund basic services," he said.

The alternative of expanding the state sales tax base will only alienate industries that can find more hospitable tax environments elsewhere, he said.

The idea of an income tax has been bandied about in the state legislature for years without success, but a bill introduced this session is getting more favorable attention because under federal tax reform, sales tax is no longer deductible while income tax is.

Gross said that if the legislature passes a measure calling for a constitutional amendment prohibiting an income tax it would doom the state to higher rates in financial markets and discourage industrial development.

In addition to tax reform, the state's regulatory structure needs to be dismantled to open a variety of businesses to greater competition, which would work to draw in outside capital and competitors, Gross said.

dam site. District Manager Owen Ivie told board members Tuesday during a board of directors meeting.

Biologists have counted about 800 Concho water snakes surviving in the shrinking range from San Angelo down the Concho River to below the dam and from Robert Lee down the Colorado River.

The CRMWD, primary sponsors of the dam, pledged the money in a memorandum of agreement signed last week in Washington by CRMWD General Manager Owen Ivie and Frank Dunkle, Director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Owen told board members.

• The death of an Irving man from a rattlesnake bite prompted this weekend's Big Spring snake roundup sponsors to warn hunters of the dangers of hunting the reptile.

"The first two rules are never hunt alone and always take a first aid pack," Tom Vernon, an American Business Club member, said. "The main thing is to remain calm, as calm as possible, that is."

Glen R. Alexander, 29, died at 1:33 a.m. Wednesday of the toxic effects of venom, according to an Associated Press report.

Sponsored by American Business Clubs and Coors, the 25th Big Spring roundup will be Friday through Sunday at the Howard County Fair Barns, featuring Pitmasters Snake Handlers. Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for children six through 12, and will open at 10 a.m. Saturday.

• A local educator is one of six finalists being considered to replace Big Spring Independent School District Superintendent Lynn Hise.

William McQueary, Big Spring schools' assistant superintendent, is among the finalists announced Wednesday. Other finalists include: Carl Craighead, Booker superintendent; Don Crockett, Pittsburg superintendent; H.J. Fuller, Muleshoe superintendent; Robert M. Glover, San Marcos assistant superintendent; and Bill Walker, Ector assistant superintendent.

• The City Council approved budget revisions and awarded a bid for construction of an airport runway at its Tuesday night meeting.

The budget includes reduction of capital expenses and employee overtime, and deferred paybacks to the revolving capital fund, City Manager Mack Wofford has said.

• Tuesday is the deadline to vote absentee in the City Council and school board elections.

Registered voters may cast absentee ballots at the City Hall office of Tom Ferguson, finance director, through 5 p.m. March 31, Ferguson said.

A valid reason must be given for voting absentee, such as plans to be outside the city on election day, April 4, he said.

Midland foundation pledges SSC $2 million

MIDLAND (AP) — A Midland foundation has pledged to spend up to $2 million to buy land for the superconducting supercollider project if the atom smasher is built near Garden City, officials said Friday.

The Industrial Foundation of Midland Inc., an independent non-profit organization that Midland Chamber of Commerce employees help run, buys and sells property to assist economic development and diversification, said Steve Hardin, manager of economic development for the chamber and foundation manager.

The foundation committed the $2 million as its share of the land purchase price if the project is built near Garden City, about 55 miles east of Odessa, Hardin said.

"They want to make a statement to the people of Texas, the people of Midland and the Energy Department" about how seriously the project is taken in the area, he said.

The Garden City site is one of nine in Texas competing for the project, and Texas is vying with about several other states.

Estimates of the cost of the supercollider run as high as $10 billion, and its construction will employ about 3,000 workers for seven years, according to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Superconducting Supercollider Steering Committee.

After construction, the project will employ 2,500 to 3,000 people.

The supercollider has been described as the ultimate research tool for high-energy physics. It will accelerate subatomic particles near the speed of light around a 52-mile circumference circular tunnel with the help of electromagnets cooled almost to absolute zero.

Candidates plan forum

The candidates for the two school board positions are: incumbent Guy White, DeWayne Wallace, Jr., Dean Richters, Phillip Reid, Daryl Coates, N.T. "Nick" Nichols, and Maxwell Barr.

Official: Criminal aliens can't be reported

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Aliens wanted for serious crimes such as murder, robbery and theft will slip through the criminal system under the new legalization program, an Immigration and Naturalization Service official says.

INS District Director Richard Casillas says that under the new law he and his staff will be helpless to inform other authorities if they discover during the legalization process that an alien is wanted for a crime.

"We will be fingerprinting applicants and checking their records," Casillas said. "But, if we find a guy wanted for rape and murder in Oklahoma, we can't tell the sheriff, or any law enforcement agency for that matter."

Aliens wanted for crimes cannot be brought to face charges though his staff knows about the cases, Casillas told the San Antonio Express Thursday.

"According to the law, if we use that information gained in background checks for anything but determining if the person is eligible for legalization, we face up to five years in prison and fines," Casillas said.

But these people wanted for crimes will not be allowed to receive amnesty, Gary Renick, chief investigator for the INS at San Antonio, said.

"The charges would disqualify the alien from eligibility to be legalized, but we could find someone wanted on a capital murder warrant, and couldn't do anything at all about it," he said.

Such a person would be allowed to leave the INS office a free man, Renick said.

But he not noted aliens who use fake documentation or who falsify information given in applying for amnesty can face three years in prison and fines.

Casillas said that although criminals or suspected criminals who try to hide their identities by using fake documents can face some prison time, but many will escape prosecution although federal officials know they are wanted.

"If you are at all law enforcement minded, you are just going to have to swallow it, because that is the way Congress in its wisdom has set up the law," he said. "It's hard to see these people you know are wanted and yet not do anything. But I sure wouldn't tell the other agencies and face prison myself for it."

• Colorado River Municipal Water District board members authorized District President John Taylor and District General Manager Owen Ivie to grant Brown & Root, USA Inc. the job of constructing Stacy Dam Reservoir.

The authorization however is contingent upon approval by the Army Corps of Engineers for a building permit. Ivie told board members he expected the Corps to grant the permit Friday.

Brown & Root must also agree upon a clause that excludes the water district from liabilities filed from accidents or deaths that may occur during job construction.

• Councilmen appear to favor an Airpark location near the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp for the planned softball park.

Council and city staff discussed proposed locations for the park for about an hour at a work session Monday afternoon at the Airpark meeting room. A Council meeting is scheduled there for 6:30 tonight.

A second location considered also is at the Airpark, off Interstate 20 near the Freecom manufacturing firm. Public Works Director Tom Decell displayed maps detailing the proposed locations plus others off Driver Road and Parkway.

• Overcrowding in the county courthouse will soon be relieved as Howard County commissioners Monday afternoon officially accepted the courthouse annex building at the southwest corner of Main and Fourth streets.

Commissioners toured the 14,000 square foot facility with Architect John Gary and Contractor D.D. Johnston before unanimously accepting to approve completion.

The county purchased the building for $62,000 in July 1985 from Big Spring attorney R.H. Weaver.

The facility will house the tax assessor/collector's office, the tax appraisal office, the adult probation department, juvenile probation, and the Department of Public Safety license and weight division.

The courthouse annex also provides four juvenile detention holding cells that were certified by the state on March 13, County Judge Milton Kirby said.

• AUSTIN — At the same time the governor's energy adviser urged cooperation Monday among regional groups hoping to lure the Superconducting Super Collider research project, the site proposal draft by the West Texas committee was submitted and is "one light-year ahead of anyone else," according to Big Spring's Ralph McLaughlin.

"We aren't building a chicken coop. We're trying to get a national research laboratory," Dillard Hammett told about 120 people from across the state who packed a briefing organized by the governor's office.

Clements: Don't push panic button

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Friday that Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Treasurer Ann Richards, who predict state checks will bounce in the fall if taxes are not increased substantially, are sounding a false alarm.

"Let's wait to see what happens. Let's not push the panic button too early," Clements said.

"My parachute is not packed at this point," he told reporters.

Hobby warned Thursday that state checks will bounce later this year if taxes are not raised $5.4 billion. Clements has vowed to veto any tax increase beyond the extension of the current temporary increases in sales and motor fuels taxes. The House has approved the continuation of those taxes, which would raise $2.9 billion in 1988-89. The Senate has not acted.

"It's not that it might happen. It will happen," Hobby said. "The checks will bounce."

Ms. Richards said it might be time to set a priority list that anticipates that not all state payments could be made in the fall. She organized a Friday closed-door meeting of top staffers from the offices of Clements, Hobby, Speaker Gib Lewis, Comptroller Bob Bullock, Attorney General Jim Mattox and others.

The treasurer agreed with Hobby's prediction that the state could not cover its checks in the fall if taxes are not raised.

"If I saw one glimmer of hope, one ray of light that led me to believe we were going to get that done, I would be the happiest, most relieved person in state government. But I don't see anything happening over there and I don't hear anything from the governor that would indicate if it did happen over there it was going to be successful," she said.

Clements said Hobby and Ms. Richards were entitled to their opinions, but they are wrong.

"Everybody is inclined to make headlines, if you will. Let's just wait and see what happens," he said.

"I'm not convinced we are going to go through any period where our Texas credit has disappeared and checks bounce. I do not believe that," Clements added.

Fourth graders given ag insight

The Tejas CattleWomen (formerly the Tejas CowBelles) took Coahoma Elementary School fourth graders on their annual Ag Day Tour March 20.

Paul Allen, Coahoma farmer, was the host of a tour of his land and provided information about the agricultural industry. He was assisted by Richard Christy, representative of the Soil Conservation Service, and Mike Bragg, Assistant County Agent, also provided information to the children.

The first part of the tour included an overview of the beef industry where the children observed Brangus Cattle. Our speakers explained how beef is processed from the barn to the dinner table.

The second stop was an overview of the farming industry, where the students actually felt the soil and were able to walk around in a field. Speakers discussed the various types of soil, terracing, cover and residue crops, and erosion and conservation methods.

Christy demonstrated effectively how terracing and cover crops prevent erosion. He emphasized to the children the necessity of proper management and productivity of resources.

The third stop was an overview of other livestock, where the students were able to see horses and sheep. Speakers explained registered horses, breeding horses and sheep raising and shearing.

Throughout the tour speakers answered the children's questions.

Coahoma fourth graders observe Richard Christy as he describes the various types of soil and agricultural techniques. The students were participating in the national Ag Day sponsored by the Tejas CattleWomen.

Soviets shown embassy

WASHINGTON — Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree, the Marine guard arrested for spying last December, escorted Soviet agents through the American embassy in Moscow for hours at a time on numerous occasions last year, the Marine Corps charged Friday.

The corps, in a formal "charge sheet" explaining why it increased the number of charges pending against Lonetree from 19 to 24, further alleged the 25-year-old Marine conspired with another guard, Cpl. Arnold Bracy, to allow Soviet agents into sensitive areas, including the room where classified messages are decoded.

Bracy, 21, worked as an embassy guard in Moscow with Lonetree for roughly eight months in 1985 and 1986. He was arrested on suspicion of espionage last week.

The Marine Corps charged that Bracy served as a lookout on the nights that Lonetree allowed Soviet agents inside the embassy, shutting off security alarms that were set off by the Soviets.

Bakker, Hahn dispute

(AP) Jim Bakker and Jessica Hahn pointed at each other Friday as the seducer in their one-night stand which eventually toppled the evangelist from his PTL television ministry, and her adviser claimed she succumbed to drugged wine.

"Jessica says she had sex with Bakker after her wine was drugged and (she) was incapable of firmly resisting," Paul Roper told The Associated Press Friday.

Meanwhile, Bakker's successor, the Rev. Richard Dortch, faced accusations of conflict of interest because he is involved in investigating a financial settlement which he reportedly helped arrange for the woman. Louisiana evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, a severe critic of Bakker, called for Dortch to step down.

Critics question launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Engineers on Friday examined wreckage from a $161 million rocket that was destroyed after a possible lightning strike as critics asked: Why was it launched in a rainstorm?

Security patrols found several pieces of the Atlas-Centaur rocket that had washed ashore near a space shuttle launch pad. Handling the debris was tricky because some of it contained explosive charges and other ordnance devices.

The chunks were being studied for clues to what caused the unmanned booster to tumble out of control 51 seconds after launch Thursday.

Former officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration questioned the decision to launch at a time when the agency says it is taking a conservative approach to safety as a result of the space shuttle Challenger explosion that killed seven crew members on Jan. 28, 1986.

Officials: Man sought mentally ill

By MIKE OWEN
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA — The self-styled minister accused of murdering one woman and keeping others shackled in a basement chamber of horrors was often on the prowl for mentally retarded black women, according to authorities and acquaintances.

Gary Heidnik had been treated for mental problems himself while in prison on a 1978 conviction for locking a woman in a coal bin, but also was a financial whiz who in 10 years built a $35,000 investment into $500,000, according to published reports Friday.

"He dealt with the handicapped, you see," said Jewel Cintron, who has called herself a "spiritual wife" of Heidnik's in the church he ran out of his home. "He thought that was nice. He thought God would like that. In God's eyesight he thought that would be good."

Heidnik, 43, has been charged with murder and ordered held without bail in the death of Deborah Dudley, whose body was found in a New Jersey state forest. Police said Ms. Dudley also used a surname of Johnson.

Digging also continued Friday at Heidnik's north Philadelphia row house, where three women were found alive early Wednesday after a fourth woman told police she escaped.

Workers on Friday carried out pieces of pipe, which police said was the sewer pipe in the basement to which the half-naked women had been chained by the ankles, their hands in handcuffs.

Cyril Brown, 31, is charged with the murder of Sandra Lindsay, 24, a second victim in the case. He and Ms. Lindsay were once clients of the Elwyn Institutes workshops for the handicapped and had been dating at the time of her death.

Sources in the city's mental retardation system told The Philadelphia Inquirer that Elwyn was aware of Heidnik's involvement with its clients and had repeatedly complained to police.

In January 1986, a document filed in Family Court said Heidnik regularly picked up "black, handicapped women for the purpose of having sex with them."

That document was filed as part of a legal action in which a Common Pleas Court judge granted Heidnik's wife, Betty Heidnik, an order barring him from striking, harassing or threatening her. Mrs. Cintron said Heidnik had treated her well. She said she accepted a situation in which "all he wanted was extra girlfriends."

Brown told police Ms. Lindsay died in February after hanging for days by one hand shackled to a cellar beam, the Philadelphia Daily News reported Friday. The newspaper said he told police that Heidnik made him help carry her body to a bathtub and help cut her up with a power saw.

Brown said he moved out of the house that night, although he returned occasionally to work for Heidnik, the newspaper reported. Police said Brown had been dating Ms. Lindsay for about two years and had introduced her to Heidnik.

Albert Bussone, vice president of operations at the headquarters of Elwyn Institutes in nearby Media, said Friday that police had requested that all questions be referred to officials.

Police spokesman Gerald Whartenby said Friday the department was looking into any complaints the private, non-profit rehabilitation center may have made, and was investigating allegations that police did not act on neighbors' complaints of odors and loud music coming from his house.

Described by sources as an astute investor who bought and sold stocks of large, blue-chip companies, Heidnik outperformed Standard & Poor's 500 Index, the Inquirer said.

Greece closes base

Turkey and Greece threatened war as a Turkish oil exploration ship prepared to move into the Aegean with a naval escort, but Turkey said Friday night the vessel will stay out of disputed waters if the Greek military does the same.

Greece blamed Washington for the crisis and said it was closing a U.S. Navy communications base near Athens.

Premier Turgut Ozal of Turkey said exploration ship Sismik-1 would remain in territorial waters and "wait for them to make the first move. If the Greeks intervene against our ship we will intervene in exactly the same way. This may be cause of a war which we do not at all want."

The Navy base in Greece, which monitors shipping movements in the Aegean Sea, is linked to the U.S. Sixth Fleet and bases in Italy and Spain. Greece apparently wants to shut it for fear of information leaks through its connection with a facility near Izmir on the Aegean coast of Turkey, which like Greece is a NATO member.

Thatcher visits Moscow

LONDON — Margaret Thatcher leaves Saturday on the first official visit to Moscow by a British prime minister since 1975. She hopes to "get a finger on the pulse of Russia" and to advance nuclear arms control, her aides say.

They say her talks with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev would produce no major decisions or "grandiose pieces of paper." It was the Kremlin that first pinned the "Iron Lady" label on the 60-year-old Mrs. Thatcher. Two days before leaving on her five-day trip, she vowed in the House of Commons to take a strong line on human rights, Afghanistan and preserving Britain's nuclear deterrent.

The Thatcher aides, who spoke on condition of not being identified, say she feels she is going at the most "fascinating time in the postwar period." The last British prime minister to go to Moscow was Laborite Harold Wilson.

Arab wives refuse plea

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The wife of hostage American Jesse Turner said Friday that as an Arab, she could not heed his plea that she and three other wives go to Israel to discuss a swap of their husbands for Arabs held there.

"I am an Arab and Mrs. Feryal Polhill is an Arab," Badr Turner, 35, a Lebanese, told The Associated Press. "We cannot go to Israel." The four hostages, kidnapped by Moslem extremists on Jan. 24 from Beirut University College campus in west Beirut, are educators Turner, 39, of Boise, Idaho; Alann Steen, 47, of Boston; Robert Polhill, 53, of New York City; and Mithileshwar Singh, 60, an Indian and a resident alien of the United States.

Turner said in a videotape released Thursday by the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine that Steen was ill and dying.

Reagan plans to impose penalty on Japanese imports

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, contending Japan has reneged on a major trade agreement on computer chips, announced plans Friday to impose stiff penalty duties on a wide array of Japanese products including television sets and pocket calculators.

Reagan said in a statement that the action — the most sweeping trade retaliation the United States has taken against Japan since the end of World War II — would cover as much as $300 million in Japanese exports to the United States. U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter told reporters, "This action should come as no surprise to the government of Japan."

Penalties on selected Japanese products will be as much as 100 percent, or equal to the current prices of the products themselves, potentially doubling the cost of those items to consumers.

However, Yeutter and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said they didn't expect the action to result in actual major price increases to U.S. consumers.

They said they doubted Japanese companies would risk such big increases in the face of competition from elsewhere.

Products selected for targeting are only those which are also widely available from non-Japanese manufacturers.

Disk drives for computers, air-conditioning machines, refrigerators, personal computers and radio-tape players were on a preliminary list of dozens of Japanese products targeted by the White House.

Reagan accused the Japanese of failing to live up to an 8-month-old agreement to stop "dumping" semiconductors in markets outside the United States at prices far below their true value.

The president also said the Japanese have not lived up to another part of the agreement: opening their markets more fully to U.S. semiconductor sales.

"I am taking these actions in response to Japan's inability to enforce our September 1986 agreement on semiconductor trade," Reagan said.

Officials said there would be a two-week waiting period before the actual tariffs take effect.

At that point, the list of targeted products will be narrowed, so that the penalty duties cover no more than about $300 million in products, officials said.

"We've tried to pick products on which there is considerable competition to the Japanese," said Baldrige. "It would be difficult for them to raise their prices. We don't think we'll see much of a price effect."

Baldrige told a White House briefing that he didn't expect the action to trigger an all-out trade war. But, he said, "We're looking at an 8-month-old agreement and we're looking at American jobs."

"We do this more in sorrow than in anger," Baldrige added. Semiconductors are the tiny electrical chips that run computers and most other modern-day electronics devices.

Japan had agreed last July to stop dumping computer chips in the United States and other markets at prices far below their true value.

Deaf newcomer captures light

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four stars in the prime of their careers and one 21-year-old newcomer who cannot speak are the candidates who make the 59th Academy Award race for best actress the most arresting in recent years.

Jane Fonda, Oscar winner for "Klute" in 1971 and "Coming Home" in 1978, was nominated for her performance as the boozing, ex-actress caught in a murder plot in "The Morning After." It is her seventh nomination.

Sissy Spacek, who won the best actress prize for her portrayal of country star Loretta Lynn in the 1980 "Coal Miner's Daughter," was cited this year for her role as the dippy, husband-shooting sister in "Crimes of the Heart."

Kathleen Turner, who rose to stardom after her first film, "Body Heat," was nominated for her role as the housewife who relives her teen years in "Peggy Sue Got Married."

Sigourney Weaver, a dramatic actress ("The Year of Living Dangerously"), was nominated for her Rambo-like space adventurer in "Aliens."

Marlee Matlin, deaf from the age of 18 months, won her nomination for portraying the wordless cleaning woman who learns to conquer her fury in "Children of a Lesser God."

It is Miss Matlin who has captured the most media attention. At a recent luncheon for the nominees, she impressed interviewers with her sprightly, rapid-fire answers delivered by signing and relayed by an interpreter. Asked if she expected to find other film roles, she replied: "That depends on how imaginative producers are."

Did she expect to be the sentimental favorite at this year's awards?

MARLEE MATLIN

Children of a Lesser God

"I expect to have a good night at the Oscars," she said. "I tend to be courageous. I've been that way all my life. I go for what I want, and I speak what I feel."

Some might argue that sentiment affords her an unfair advantage against the four other candidates, that she must have found it easy to play a deaf woman.

However, she said making "Children of a Lesser God" was "a lot of physical and emotional, good and bad times." Out of the film came her real-life romance with co-star William Hurt; they continue to share a New York apartment.

For her role as the alcoholic actress in "The Morning After," Miss Fonda researched with her customary thoroughness.

"A few times I got very drunk, then I'd go in the bathroom and say, 'Now I'm going to study myself.' I didn't learn anything, so I put that aside," she said. "I began to talk to doctors, sober alcoholics, went to a number of A.A. (Alcoholics Anonymous) meetings." Her best coaching came from an alcoholic actress who told her: "I feel insecure unless I'm out of control. Drink to me means the loss of control, and that's how I feel secure."

Miss Spacek's feat in "Crimes of the Heart" was extraordinary: outshining two other Oscar winners, Jessica Lange and Diane Keaton. It could be argued that she had the showier role: She shoots her husband in the stomach and has an affair with a teen-ager.

Miss Spacek was also nominated for "Carrie" (1976), "Missing" (1982) and "The River" (1984). "I've always tended to play very strong women, and they rubbed off on me and made me stronger. Now I suppose I feel strong enough to play troubled women," she said.

But roles such as the quirky Babe McGrath Botrelle of "Crimes of the Heart" apparently don't rub off on her: "People perceive me as a happy-go-lucky, stable person, and it's perfectly true. Maybe I can be the way I am in real life because I get paid to freak out."

Kathleen Turner won her first Academy nomination for "Peggy Sue Got Married." However, in six years she has acquired enough luster to be dubbed "The New Queen of the Screen" by People magazine. She made it with a series of stunning and varied portraits in "Body Heat," "The Man With Two Brains," "Romancing the Stone," "Crimes of Passion" and last year's "Prizzi's Honor."

If Miss Weaver wins the Oscar next Monday, she will achieve a new record: the first time a woman has won for repeating a role.

Translator gets work

By MICHAEL BEZDEK
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — When Harvard University Press editors sought a translator for the massive five-volume "A History of Private Life," they settled on Arthur Goldhammer, who has a Ph.D. in algebraic topology from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The connection? Vietnam. "I was drafted while I was in graduate school, and they needed interpreters. So, I used my French," Goldhammer said.

He greatly expanded his knowledge of the language he had learned in school and eventually made his way to Paris where he tried to write a novel. He got some more translation work there and turned his attention away from mathematics.

In the past 10 years, he has translated about 40 French scholarly works into English, and is among what is only a small group of regular freelance translators for publishers.

He spends much of his time working alone, hunched over a word processor and measuring out much of his life in paragraphs. "There are people who say this is boring. But that's an insult. It is often very satisfying and interesting. For me, it sure beats teaching math," he said.

Goldhammer is engaged in "A History of Private Life" for Harvard Press. The first volume in the five-book series was recently published, but he has thousands of pages to go on the remainder of the writings about how people lived through the ages.

One of the main contributors to the series is Paul Veyne, a man whose work Goldhammer has admired for years. But as is so often the case with translators, Goldhammer knows Veyne only through correspondence.

Cosden blood donors give 235 units

Blood donors contributed 44 units at a Fina blood drive Wednesday, according to drive coordinator Robyn Drinkard.

The effort was a replacement drive for Arden Drinkard, Robyn Drinkard's brother-in-law. Before his death of cancer in late January, 51 units of platelets were used in his battle with the disease.

Fina was awarded a community service appreciation award for the 191 units of blood donated at Fina drives in 1986, Robyn Drinkard said. The award is on display in the refinery lunchroom and will soon be placed in its permanent location in the conference room.

San Angelo United Blood Services representatives have been frequenting the refinery since July of 1986. The first blood drive netted 55 units. Every contributing employee received a coffee mug from the UBS.

A second drive was conducted in September as a replacement drive for the family of James Baird, operator tester in the control lab, whose daughter Sherrie was killed in an automobile accident.

The drive netted 81 units. UBS provided a baseball cap to each employee who donated and a sun shade screen for a drawing after the drive. Cosden Employees Credit Union offered a $50 cash prize in a drawing for donors. David McWerther won the sun shade screen, and Kenny Hart won the $50.

A Christmas drive, conducted Dec. 11, netted 55 units. In keeping with the season, the credit union and Fina offered a trip to Dallas in a drawing for donors.

The credit union provided two round-trip airline tickets, two admission tickets to the Dallas Cowboy-Chicago Bears football game and one night's lodging at the Holiday Inn in Dallas. Fina added $100 cash to cover trip expenses. Jack Downey won the drawing.

Lorie Booth, right, who became a research and development clerk earlier this month at Cosden Refinery, donates blood under the direction of Jannie Hanson, United Blood Services representative. The blood drive Wednesday at Cosden netted 44 units of blood.

Drilling report

A new producer was brought on line in Howard County's Southeast Luther Field, with BTA Oil Producers as the operator.

Located five miles southeast of Vealmoor, the well is in a 678-acre lease in the T&P Survey. It is designated as the No. 6-8611 J.V.P. Lockhart. The well pumped 53 barrels of oil per day, plus 40 barrels of water. It bottomed at 10,000 feet, and will produce from perforations in the Silurian-Devonian Formation, 9,842 to 9,848 feet into the wellbore.

Enduro Oil has posted production figures on an oil well in the Moore Survey, Howard County. The No. 5 Quinn "H" showed ability to pump 26 barrels of oil per day, plus 38 barrels of water. The operator has 100 acres leased, with drilling in the Moore Survey, five miles southwest of Big Spring.

The well will produce from perforations in the Grayburg Formation, 3,236 to 3,255 feet into the wellbore. Total drilling depth was 3,350 feet.

Conoco Inc. has cancelled its plans to drill the No. 19 G.O. Chalk "B", a projected 3,900-ft. Gloria Formation test in Howard County's Howard Glasscock Field. The well was to have been located seven miles northeast of Forsan.

Spartan Natural Resources has temporarily abandoned the No. 1 Parks, a wildcat well in Borden County. The well is located 17 miles northeast of Gail in a 376-acre lease in the T&N Survey.

The operation was bottomed at 8,310 feet and plugged back to 5,715 feet.

Remington Resources of Midland has revealed plans to drill a 5,450-ft. wildcat well in Borden County. The operator has 480 acres leased, with drillsite in the H&T Survey. The well has been designated as the No. 1 Miller. Drillsite is 12 miles north of Gail.

W.H. Munn Operating of Midland is planning to conduct a re-entry operation at the No. 1 Clayton, a developmental well in the Southeast Good Field, Borden County. Penrose Oil Corp. originally completed the well as a dry hole April 30, 1963, at a total depth of 9,757 feet. Munn plans to seek production in the Fusselman Formation at approximately 9,900 feet.

Drillsite is 13 miles southwest of Gail in an 80-acre lease in the T&P Survey.

Martin County's Spraberry Trend Field gained three new producers when Parker & Parsley Petroleum completed the No. 1 Alico "A" and the Nos. 1 Glass "H" and 1 Glass "I". The Alico well is located four miles northwest of Tarzan in an 80-acre lease in the M. Curtis Survey. It pumped 32 barrels of oil per day, plus 116 barrels of water. It bottomed at 9,600 feet, and will produce commingled from perforations in the Spraberry Formation, ranging from 8,060 to 9,486 feet into the wellbore.

The Glass wells are located 15 miles northwest of Stanton in an 80-acre lease, T&P Survey. The wells showed potential to pump oil at the combined rate of 117 barrels of oil per day, plus a combined 62,000 CF casinghead gas and 381 barrels of water. Total drilling depth for each well was 9,425 feet, and production will be commingled from perforations in the Spraberry Formation, ranging from 7,783 to 9,324 feet into the hole.

Texahoma Oil & Gas of Dallas has filed for permit to drill the No. 1 Spraberry Trend Prospects, a 9,200-ft. developmental well five miles north of Stanton. Location is in a 112-acre lease in Martin County's T&P Survey. The well will be drilled in the Spraberry Trend Field.

An 11,800-ft. developmental well is planned by Tri Service Drilling of Midland at a drillsite one mile southeast of Lenora, Martin County. The location is in a 320-acre lease in the T&P Survey. Well's designation is the No. 1 Lesley. Drillsite is in the Clem Field.

The No. 1 C.J. Cox "A" was finaled by Autry C. Stephens.

It is a developmental well in the Spraberry Trend Field, Glasscock County, ten miles northwest of St. Lawrence. Drillsite is in a 160-acre lease in the T&P Survey.

Daily potential of 38 barrels of oil was posted with the Railroad Commission. The well also made 92,000 CF casinghead gas and 43 barrels of water per day. Total drilling depth was 8,800 feet, and production will be from perforations in the Dean and Wolfcamp Formations, ranging from 8,155 to 8,695 feet into the wellbore.

Hanley Petroleum has abandoned its plans to conduct a re-entry operation at the No. 1 T.X.L. "B", a developmental well in the Spraberry Trend Field. Drillsite was 11 miles southwest of St. Lawrence in Glasscock County's T&P Survey. Sohio Petroleum originally completed the well Oct. 21, 1955, and it flowed 430 barrels of oil per day from Clear Fork Formation perforations at 6,390 to 6,321 feet.

Hanley Petroleum had planned to seek production at approximately 6,450 feet in the Clear Fork Formation.

Consumer prices, reflecting increase for energy and a wide range of other goods, rose 0.4 percent in February, the government reported Friday.

Lessons not to learn from the Tower Board

By TOM PETERS
The Tower Board report has inspired scores of observers to interpret the consequences of the Iran-contra debacle for management in general. Such interpretation is wise, but we should avoid making glib generalizations. I, therefore, propose six things we should not learn from the report:

Peters on excellence

1. — Delegation is dangerous. Most boss' acts don't affect the future of the world. The manager is paid principally to energize, coach, facilitate — and delegate. Delegation, pre- or post-Tower Board, remains every manager's chief task. Moreover, in my experience, at least nine out of 10 managers err on the side of not delegating enough, rather than delegating too much. Our productivity and quality problems are mainly the result of not trusting our workers and junior managers and not sufficiently developing their skills so that they can act more independently. Let's not allow one manager's style (President Reagan) to give delegation in general a black eye.

2. — You should always thoroughly consider every point of view before reaching a decision. President Reagan was appropriately chastised for not taking Caspar Weinberger's or George Shultz's concerns seriously enough. But taken to an extreme, mulling over every facet of an issue can, and all too often does, lead to paralysis.

President Harry Truman is said to have begged for "a one-armed economist." His problem: "I'm so tired of 'on the one hand this, on the other hand that.'" He has a good point.

Computervision Corp. co-founder Philippe Vilers defined entrepreneurship as an "unreasonable conviction based on inadequate evidence." When all the evidence is in, it's too late. In today's complex world of foreign affairs or computers, if we gave equal weight to all views, we would never do anything.

3. — Unfailingly delve into details. Former President Jimmy Carter, say analysts, was "all details, no vision." President Reagan is "all vision, no details."

The trick is to occasionally probe deeply into a problem from all angles, to assure yourself that key projects and key players are on track. When we read that self-destructing dollars allegedly were offered in exchange for hostages by a fellow in the next office without the President's knowledge, you know we have stumbled over an extreme case of detachment, from which there is probably very little we can learn.

4. — Make sure the vision is crystal clear. President Reagan apparently gave off conflicting signals. His vision was staunchly anti-terrorist, and equally staunchly "get the hostages back at all costs."

Of course a leader's vision should be unambiguous, but the world and the marketplace do change, and flexibility is a requirement for the mom-and-pop grocery store as well as for the presidency. We must constantly talk up our vision — and adjust it — in the context of current events that affect it.

5. — The President is a manager like all managers. He's not. Most presidents, unlike most business chiefs, didn't get to the top by exhibiting superior management skills. The strengths that aid you in getting through the primaries and general election are the antitheses of what it takes to manage effectively.

Especially in today's world of the 15-second news bite, the knack for creating catchy oversimplifications is the antithesis of a knack for managing 5 million people (the federal payroll including the military) and negotiating with 535 members of Congress.

6. — All managers can learn from the Iranian affair. I'd acknowledge that an "executive vice president" — like Don Regan in this instance — who works assiduously to concentrate power in his own hands, and has thereby exacerbated an already hopeless degree of information distortion, is

A very tough decision

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

The tough decisions are the ones that may hurt or disappoint others. It's probably true that the more talented you are, the more tough decisions you'll have to make. People expect a lot from talented people.

Brian Mayfield is immensely talented, of that there's no question. Recently he made a tough decision.

Make that a very tough decision. Mayfield, an all-state punter and defensive back, will not play football next season. Instead, he'll concentrate his efforts on basketball and track, two sports he does very well in.

"It was a real tough decision, but I want to play college basketball, so I thought I might get in the gym and get the little things down. I talked it over with my parents, and they said they would back me in whatever I did," Mayfield said this Tuesday.

Mayfield's explanation makes good sense.

Basketball is and always has been his favorite sport. In his sophomore year, he dominated district 4-5A basketball. This year, however, after a long football season that lasted far into November, Mayfield started slowly on the basketball court.

The Steers had a new coach in Boyce Paxton, and subsequently a new system. Mayfield, after having spent every afternoon since August on the football field, joined the team after they'd already played a few games.

By his own admission, Mayfield was not the player who won the 4-5A sophomore of the year award a year earlier. He was out of sync with his teammates, his shot felt funny, and at times he looked confused on the court.

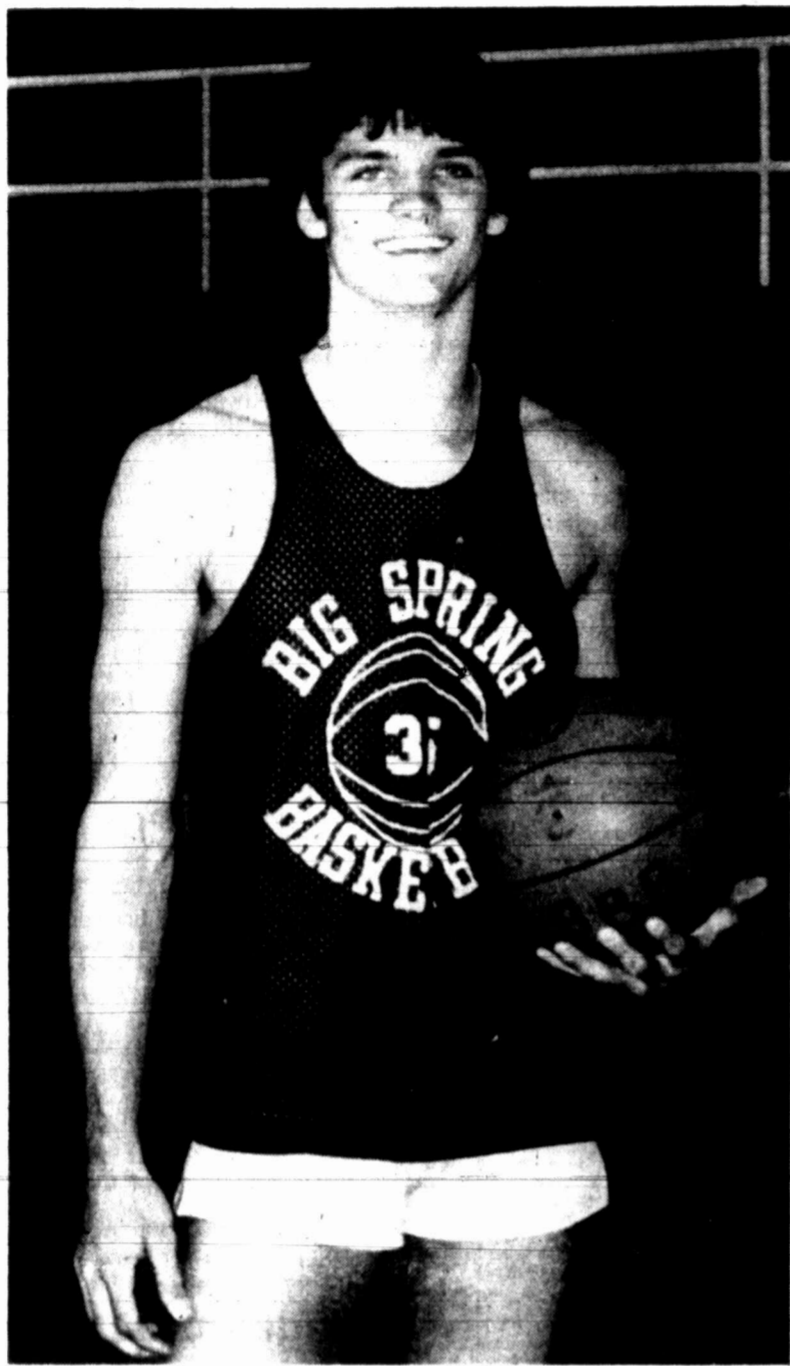

"I didn't really start playing good until the last two weeks," he explained. "I didn't really have my shot down. It took me longer than I thought it would to get back in the groove."

"By doing this I should be in full stride when the season starts next year," he said.

And it's important that he be in stride next year. It could determine his future.

Mayfield is 6-5, which is taller than most high school players. His height allows him to rebound and score over post players shorter than he'll find in college ball.

Since he wants to play college basketball, that means he's going to have to make changes in his game. Rather than playing center or big forward, Mayfield will be a guard or small forward in college. To play those positions, he must improve his ball handling and shooting skills.

That takes time. If he were to play football, he could forget making improvements in August, September, October and November.

Maybe, like this season, he wouldn't start playing his best until the last two weeks of the season. Maybe by then the scouts would have long since started ignoring him. Maybe he wouldn't have played at all, because maybe a running back would have wiped out his knee.

Most likely, though, he would have played football, then played basketball well enough to warrant several basketball scholarship offers. But the scholarships might be to junior colleges or Division II schools.

Mayfield, understandably, wants to play for a good Division I program. To do that, he's got to be his best next year. Therefore, the decision.

"I'll miss football — there's no doubt about it. It'll be tough, but this is what I want to do in college. I'll be sitting in the stands, but I'll be up there supporting them," the Big Spring junior said.

"It's not going to be much of a loss for them. They're going to be good with me or without me. I'm not going to make that much difference."

"I can't worry about it. I've made my decision and I can't look back. I have to go on and do the best I can do," Mayfield said.

Right now, Mayfield doesn't have time to look back. He's looking up, rather, to the seven foot mark.

Last year, he high jumped 6-10, and though he hasn't cleared that mark this year, he's jumping more consistently this year than last. In four meets this season, he's broken four meet records. He jumped 6-8 the first three meets, and 6-9 last weekend.

"Seven feet is way in reach this year, no doubt about it," Mayfield said.

His coach, Randy Britton, believes it will happen.

"He's been consistent at 6-8 and 6-9, so I'm saying the kid's doing pretty well. It'll take the right environment and the right chemistry for him to go 6-11 or seven, but I think he's got a seven foot jump in him."

"He's going to have to catch a pretty day and he's going to have to feel good, and he'll go," Britton said. He added that Mayfield may not clear the heralded seven mark until the state meet, when the competition might push him that high.

Incidentally, Mayfield made one other decision this spring. He plays baseball in the summer, but not in the spring because of track. But in preseason, Steers' pitcher Carey Fraser injured his knee, and coach John Velasquez considered asking Mayfield to pitch once a week.

Velasquez didn't push it, and Mayfield, though he thought about it, decided against the extra load.

"I thought that would be a little too much, playing two sports at one time," he said.

The voice of reason. That's what Mayfield had to listen to when he decided to forego football. He's an A and B student, and he wants to major in engineering. The better he does in basketball next year, the wider his choice of selections — for engineering programs as well as basketball programs.

"I just want to go to a good school and get a good education, and let basketball take me through college," he said.

It wasn't an easy choice, but that's what he'll do.

Louisiana Tech dethrones Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Tori Harrison and Nora Lewis each scored 20 points Friday night to lift underdog Louisiana Tech to a 79-75 upset of defending national champion Texas in the semifinals of the NCAA Women's Basketball Final Four.

upset Long Beach State 74-64 in the other semifinal Friday night.

Louisiana Tech All-American Teresa Weatherspoon helped beat back a late Lady Longhorn rally with four free throws in the final minute of play and finished with 19 points.

Louisiana Tech snapped the Lady Longhorns' 25-game winning streak with a strong inside game on Texas' homecourt and held All-American Andrea Lloyd to only six points. She fouled out with 2:42 left to play trying to guard Harrison.

Texas was led by All-American Clarissa Davis' 24 points, but the Lady Techsters had more balanced scoring before the sellout crowd of 15,513 fans in the Special Events Center.

The Lady Techsters beat Texas at its own running game in the first half, building a 40-36 lead despite Davis' 18 points for the Lady Horns. Texas never could recover.

Louisiana Tech, the 1982 national champions, has hurt Texas in the past, twice knocking it out of regional championship play.

Beach, 33-3, well under its 96.7 average with a tenacious defense, although Cindy Brown of the Lady 49ers scored 27 points and Penny Toler added 23.

With the score tied at 55, the Lady Vols made a 9-0 run that put the game away before a record tournament crowd of 15,615 at the Special Events Center.

Melissa McCary, who scored 14 points, made two quick baskets and Tennessee proceeded to hit 11 straight free throws as Long Beach fouled trying to play catch-up.

Long Beach led 30-28 at halftime after overcoming a 10-point deficit when the Lady 49ers went 5 minutes, 11 seconds without scoring a basket.

Tennessee of the Southeast Conference were able to control the pace and worked the ball to Gordon, who had 14 points.

Brown and Toler came alive in the final 5:21, and Brown's 3-point play with 1:37 left and a corner jumper with 10 seconds to go gave Long Beach State the lead. It outscored Tennessee 15-3 to close out the first half.

Time for Final Four

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Coaches from across the country rate this Final Four a toss-up.

The Final Four begins Saturday with the semifinals at the Louisiana Superdome. No. 10 Syracuse, 30-6, faces unranked Providence, 25-8, in an all-Big East semifinal at 2:42 p.m. CST. Top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, 37-1, meets No. 3 Indiana, 28-4, in the second semifinal 30 minutes after the conclusion of the first game.

The championship game will be played Monday beginning at 7:12 p.m.

Nevada-Las Vegas has won 22 straight since losing to Oklahoma 89-88 at Norman. Like Providence, the Runnin' Rebels have built much of their success on the 3-point field goal.

Nevada-Las Vegas, led by Freddie Banks, made the most 3-point field goals of any NCAA team this season, hitting 296, while Providence, led by Billy Donovan, made the most per game, with an average of 8.1. Banks hit 142-of-339 3-point attempts for UNLV, while Donovan shot 96-of-234 from the 19-foot, 9-inch range for Providence.

"The 3-point field goal helped two teams for sure," said Pitt Coach Paul Evans, whose team beat both Providence and Syracuse twice during the Big East season.

Syracuse is led by 6-foot-10 junior center Rony Seikaly, who averaged 15 points and 8.1 rebounds per game despite being slowed in early season during his recovery from a broken foot. Seikaly scored 104 points and had 37 rebounds in four tournament games and was named Most Valuable Player of the East Regional after the Orangemen beat second-ranked North Carolina 79-75 behind his 26 points and 11 rebounds.

Indiana's prime offensive weapon is Steve Alford, who averaged 21.7 points per game and broke the Hoosier's all-time scoring mark this season. While both UNLV and Providence have several 3-point shooters, Alford made 98 of Indiana's 121 long-range shots during the season.

"I think probably Syracuse's inside game will take its toll on Providence, and I think when Bobby has a week to prepare, he can beat anybody," Evans said in picking the Orangemen and Hoosiers in the semifinals.

In the final, Evans said, "I would hope for Syracuse, but probably Indiana."

Michigan Coach Bill Frieder, whose team lost twice to Indiana during the Big Ten season, said it was "an interesting Final Four — a wide open tournament. It's a tough call."

"Seikaly's play made Syracuse what it is now," Frieder said. "Indiana is in every game it plays, and Las Vegas has probably the best athletes, the best talent. Providence, the 3-point play has really benefited him."

While Frieder called Indiana's Dean Garrett, at 6-10 and 220 pounds, the only "true center in the conference," he said Alford could be the key to the tournament. "If he gets on a roll," Frieder said, "a lot will depend on how Vegas does at containing him."

Georgetown Coach John Thompson, whose Hoyas beat Syracuse to win the Big East tournament final, felt it would be tough for the Orangemen to defeat Providence a third time. Syracuse won two regular-season meetings with the Friars and have won 15 straight Big East games against Providence.

"It's very unpredictable anytime you have two league teams," said Thompson, whose Hoyas lost to Providence in the Southeast Regional final after winning two of three during the Big East season and tournament.

Cowboy poet Roddy Schoenfeldt of Dallas reflects at the first Texas Cowboy Poetry Gathering earlier this month in Alpine. Schoenfeldt said stories told around the campfire give fellow ranch hands an outlet for their own machismo. "That's our MTV," he said.

ALPINE (AP) — Roddy Schoenfeldt says that even when he was growing up in Dallas, he felt more comfortable with a campfire's glow than with city lights.

Schoenfeldt, 42, one of the organizers of the first Texas Cowboy Poetry Gathering conducted recently in Alpine, recalled feeling the lure of the lasso even before he lived on a ranch.

The yearning led to his joining a 4-H club in metropolitan Dallas and later to his becoming a real-life cowboy on a 22-section ranch near Hovey, northeast of Alpine.

Cowboys who tell stories around the campfire provide a much-needed service for fellow ranch hands and at the same time find an outlet for their own machismo, Schoenfeldt said.

"That's our MTV," Schoenfeldt said. "But the cowboy mystique is nothing new. We've just changed clothes. Anytime you get a bunch of men together doing a dangerous job, there's a camaraderie."

"It's he-men, doing he-man stuff," Schoenfeldt said. "These stories are a release because it's hard to get cowboys to tell their feelings."

Schoenfeldt said he and other organizers of the Alpine event revived a "dying art" with the cowboy poetry gathering: dying because the cowboy way of life got the boot from the 20th Century's age of technology.

Cowboy storytellers evoke the same nostalgia for things past that watching a Shakespeare play or a reading of Chaucer creates, Schoenfeldt said. That's compared with other art forms of today, such as heavy metal music that registers on Schoenfeldt as "nothing human."

Gary Morton, 35, a cowboy and nationally known Western artist from Lincoln, N.M., was one of more than 30 working cowboys who read both original and classic range-rider poetry during the Alpine gathering.

Morton said he never sat astride a horse until he turned 18, when he was living with an aunt and uncle who thrived on a steady social diet of attending rodeos.

It struck a chord inside Morton to see rodeo cowboys striving so hard to wrestle a calf to the dirt, lightning-quick, or to clutch a bronco's mane and hang on for dear life. The poetry of the cowboys' motions spurred Morton to try his own hand at riding, he said, and out his own of pure ignorance, his first horse was a bucking bronco.

From there, Morton took a job as a cowhand on the 455-section Bell Ranch in New Mexico. The experience taught him the pleasure of creating things, he said.

Writing poetry forces him to reach inside and grab his feelings — an unfamiliar action for supposedly rough-and-tumble cowboys, Morton said.

But he defended cowboys as "very gentle people." "Taking care of an old cow or horses, you have to be gentle," Morton said. "And cowboys are nature lovers. You've had a drought and it rains, and it makes you feel good inside."

Organizers of the Texas Cowboy Poetry Gathering, modeled after the 3-year-old Elko Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Nevada, branded the Alpine event as an attempt to dispel the macho myths surrounding cowboys, Morton said.

"They may not be the literary types," Morton said, "and they may not be writing good poems, to an English professor, but most of their poems are showing an emotion."

"They're baring their soul," Morton said. Schoenfeldt said he hopes cowboy poetry gatherings remind people about their beginnings. "This has got to bring back the 'old days,'" he said sadly. "We're running out of land, and now we can annihilate ourselves. Man has gotten away from the basics. And when people get off the farm is when they get in trouble. They don't know it, but Mother Nature is one of the best teachers."

Schoenfeldt said he can't recall a time when he didn't want to move to the country. He studied animal husbandry at Texas A&M, then moved to Lajitas and ran a trading post for seven years.

Later he ran the 40-section Elephant Mountain Ranch and finally assumed the management of his wife's family ranch, where he oversees the grazing of 250 head of cattle. Inside the ranch house he oversees the growth of his children Shad, 13, and J.J., 12.

Schoenfeldt made light of his decision to join in the cowboy poetry storytelling.

"The general public needs to be aware that not all cowboys drink and cuss," Schoenfeldt said. "These cowboys here are the real thing."
