Five place at contest

Five Big Spring High School students won awards at the University Interscholastic League district spring literary contest, conducted at Howard College Friday and Saturday.

The debate team of juniors Laura Ogburn and Jennifer Poe won first place in debate, according to theater and speech teacher Denise Gandy.

Sophomore Diana Fish won first place in typing. Freshman Marc Schwarz won second place in extemporaneous speaking.

and senior Chris Walker won third place in literary criticism. The students competed against as many as 90 others per contest, she said. Other students were from Monahans, Fort Stockton, Pecos, San Angelo Lakeview, Lamasa, Snyder, Sweetwater and Andrews high schools.

Winners are eligible to participate in the regional competition, April 24-25 at Howard Payne University in Brownwood, Gandy said.

Marital rape bill facing lawmakers

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

Although sexually assaulting one's spouse is not a crime in Texas, that may soon change.

The state Senate was to vote on a bill at 2 p.m. today, and the House is expected to review the measure "any day now," according to Cecilia McKenzie, executive director of Rape Crisis-Victim Services in Big Spring.

The bill makes it a crime for someone to sexually assault his or her spouse, she said. Law currently prohibits sexual assault against anyone except against a spouse, Police Lt. Jerry Edwards explained.

Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, said this morning that the bill hasn't been presented to the House yet.

He said that although he hasn't seen the bill, his general reaction is that "a marriage license shouldn't give someone the right to beat someone up and rape them," and allow the attacker to escape the law.

McKenzie serves on the board of directors for the Texas Association Against Sexual Assault, which has been lobbying heavily for the bill with other organizations.

The bill is sponsored by Senator Cindy Krier of San Antonio, and by Rep. Deborah Danburg of Houston, she said.

Although the bill has been voted down by the past three Legislatures, McKenzie said that the organization is "a lot more positive this time" that it will pass.

In addition, the organization is sponsoring National Victims Rights Week and Statewide Sexual Assault Awareness Week April 26-May 2. Sexual assault by a spouse is the focus of this year's campaign, McKenzie said.

Lt. Edwards said that the rate of sexual assaults and attempted sexual assaults in Big Spring has nearly doubled so far this year.

During 1986, 11 sexual assaults were reported to police, while six have been reported during the first three months of 1987, he said.

Police continue investigating six assaults reported by four Big Spring women last week. The incidents occurred at night on the west end of town over a period that ranges from Dec. 12 to March 23, Edwards has said that the victims knew their assailant.

Texas Department of Human Services statistics show that 29 percent of women entering Texas battered women's shelters were sexually abused by their spouses.

In 1985 in Texas, 1,905 women who were battered by their husbands or partners reported that they also were sexually assaulted by them.

Of those, 1,715 were forced to have sex with their partners, 114 were forced to engage in sexual activities with another person, 152 were sexually abused with objects, and 191 by other means.

Men also can be victims of violence.

Statistics from the Bureau of Justice Statistics show that men are victimized by violent strangers at a rate almost triple that of women. Each year, about one in 12 males between the ages of 16 and 24 is a victim of a violent crime.

Most of the cases never reach trial, statistics reveal. An average of four of every 100 arrests go to trial. Of felony court cases, 8 percent go to trial.

According to information from the local Rape Crisis center,

Senate bill drawing local support

At least one savings and loan president in Big Spring favors a U.S. Senate-approved bill designed to help the troubled financial institutions in Texas.

A second S and L president in Big Spring was noncommittal, however, explaining that he did not want to comment until he studied the action in detail.

The bill, approved in the Senate this past Friday, is expected to help more than 50 financially troubled savings and loans in Texas, Larry Neal, press secretary for Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said today.

If the House approves the bill, and President Reagan signs it into law, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board then will formulate a plan to administer the guidelines, Neal said.

"I'm pleased that Congress is giving that much attention to the industry ... especially economically depressed areas," said Charles Beil, president and chairman of the board at First Federal Savings, 500 Main St. "It's definitely a step in the right direction."

Jerry Williams, president of the Big Spring Savings Association, 604 Main, declined to comment on the guidelines until he has studied them further.

"There are a lot of different plans floating around right now," he said.

LaMar Heath, president of City Savings, 1810 East FM 700, whose office is located in San Angelo, was unavailable for comment.

The Senate adopted the "Thrift Industry Recovery Guidelines" proposed by Sen. Gramm to assist hard-pressed communities across Texas, his press secretary said.

"This self-help program will allow financially stricken Texas savings and loan associations a fair chance to pull themselves out of a deep hole," Gramm said in a news release.

The guidelines will attract new investors and will speed the economic recovery of both the savings and loans and the communities they serve, he said.

The guidelines include restructuring of loans to enhance the ability of borrowers to repay their loans and more realistic appraisals of real estate by federal legislatures.

Other guidelines are the creation of an appeal system so S and L's can challenge disputed appraisals by regulatory officers and the creation of a "capital certificate" program to help well-managed institutions maintain capital reserves required by federal law.

Upon recovery, the S and L would pay interest for use of the certificates into the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Fund.

Candidates face forum in Coahoma

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

Candidates for the Coahoma school board faced questions about school district financial troubles and budgeting, attracting quality personnel, and vocational education at a Monday night forum.

The forum at the Coahoma Elementary School cafeteria featured questions by students of Cheryl Green's high school government and economics classes.

Seven candidates are running for two at large seats on the Coahoma school board. They are: incumbent Guy White, DeWayne Wallace Jr., Dean Richters, Phillip Reid, Daryle Coates, Nick Nichols and Maxwell Barr. Incumbent Bruce Griffith is not a candidate.

When asked what the board should do if the school district is faced with more economic hardship next year, White suggested asking the Legislature to grant more funds.

Barr said more businesses should be attracted to Coahoma, to increase the tax base. The tax rate should be kept low to attract the businesses, he said.

Nichols said "we'll keep our school, whatever the burden, whatever the price."

When asked how resources should be channeled when economic times improve, Richters said his top priorities would be reinstating vocational education programs and hiring teacher aides.

Wallace and other candidates recommended establishing a savings "cushion to fall back on" in case hard times returned. He added that he would favor increases in teacher salaries and more funding for extracurricular activities.

White said his top priorities would be to increase teacher salaries, provide more funding for academic programs, establish a reserve fund and lower the tax rate.

Barr suggested reinstating curriculum that was cut during the recent budget crunch, re-establishing teachers on the career ladder and lowering taxes.

Coates recommended establishing a reserve fund and replacing worn equipment.

Reid said "valued programs," including vocational education, should be brought back and salaries raised.

When asked how to attract quality personnel to the school district, Nichols replied that the district should "treat teachers with the dignity and respect due a professional" and should provide job security.

Reid said it should set goals to establish a quality system, involve the community, and offer a "good" salary.

Richters said teachers would be attracted by "an administration that will back the teachers" and student respect for teachers — a respect that can be taught in school and at home, he said.

Wallace said teachers want to feel wanted and important. He said Texas has a high teacher drop-out

Smoking bill to face Senate

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Sen. Chet Brooks said he would seek final Senate passage today of a bill to prohibit smoking in public places except in designated smoking areas.

His bill was tentatively approved on voice vote Monday, but Brooks failed to get enough votes to win final passage and send the measure to the House.

Approximately 40 states already have adopted public smoking laws, according to a printed analysis of Brooks' bill.

Asked if his bill might be considered as government "meddling," Brooks, D-Pasadena, replied, "No, not at all unless you want to say we're going to try to save as many people as we can from cancer and heart disease."

The proposed Texas Smoke Free Indoor Act would make it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of up to $200, to smoke in a prohibited area.

Brooks said, however, based on experience with city ordinances that restrict smoking, "Very seldom are any penalties brought against anyone."

Bars, tobacco shops and restaurants with a capacity of 25 persons or less would be excluded in that they could designate their entire area as smoking areas.

The bill was amended to give operators of stores of less than 4,000 square feet the option of allowing smoking everywhere in the store or nowhere in the store. This was aimed at drive-in grocery stores.

The bill also was amended so that it would not apply to "service lines," such as at concession stands in the Astrodome at Houston or Texas Stadium at Arlington.

"We are trying in this bill to be even-handed and recognize both the smoker's rights and the non-smoker's rights," Brooks said.

"We've tried to draw it in a way so there will be no mean confrontation or angry confrontation between the (store) operator and public," he said.

The bill would apply to government buildings, Brooks said, including the Senate chamber. He said presumably the Senate caucus would decide if there would be a smoking area.

Asked if a person could smoke in his or her own office, Brooks said, "Of course."

He also said the state proposal would serve as a minimum restriction, and cities could adopt stiffer ordinances.

Seventeen Texas cities have adopted ordinances and 14 others are known to be in the planning stages, the bill analysis stated.

So many possible situations were questioned that Brooks was asked if it might take a couple of years to determine how the bill would apply to certain situations. "It will take some time for people to develop their policies and their solutions," he said.

Rattlesnake Round-up: 4,000 pounds, $4,000

Big Spring's 25th Rattlesnake Round-up grossed $20,000 and netted 4,115 pounds of snake meat, American Business Clubs treasurer Dearl Pittman said.

The Club expects earnings of $4,000-$5,000 after all bills are paid, a decrease from last year's roundup, he said. Pittman attributed the lower amount raised to a lower turnout.

Proceeds will go toward the AMBUCS' scholarship fund for therapists and the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, 308 W. Third St.

Hunters Dalton Carr and Ronnie Burleson won $100 and shared a trophy for the most pounds of snake. The two had 784 lbs. of the reptile. Second place went to Jack and C.A. Tom with 383 lbs., third went to Weldon Rainey and Randy Dickens with 272½ lbs. and fourth went to D.W. "Dub" Day with 264 lbs. All are from Big Spring.

Ronald Allen won $75 and a trophy for the heaviest snake at 7 lbs. Second place went to Jack and C.A. Tom with a 9 lbs., 13 oz. entry.

Rick Baker and Lynn Hedges won $50 and a trophy for the snake with the most rattles. Their snake had 18 rattles and a button, a partially formed rattle.

Round-up activities included handling, milking and skinning demonstrations, several shows by the Pitmanators, professional snake handlers, and an arts and crafts show.

Enforcement group opposes gun bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Combine Law Enforcement Associations of Texas has asked Texas House members to oppose a pending bill that would allow Texans to carry handguns after getting a permit.

"We believe that this could lead to increased violence, both in the home and in the street," said a letter from Chris W. Jones, executive director of CLEAT, to all House members.

The bill, by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, was approved last week by the House Public Safety Committee and cleared for floor debate.

Speaker Gib Lewis told reporters he supported the bill because it would attempt to clarify Texas' confusing laws concerning handguns.

"People don't understand them. I think mainly we need to clarify them," Lewis said.

Wilson's bill would allow law-abiding citizens "of sound mind" to get a permit to carry handguns anywhere except on school grounds, at polling places, in government offices, places that sell alcohol, or in a motor vehicle while the person is drinking an alcoholic beverage.

Jones said CLEAT, which represents 7,000 licensed Texas peace officers, believes the legislation could lead to more victims of crimes.

"When you put a handgun in the hands of someone, that person is automatically given an additional psychological sense of power," Jones' letter said. "This sense of power, known as the 'John Wayne syndrome,' will cause more confrontations which will lead to bloodshed."

CLEAT said if the House does pass Wilson's bill it was hoped the measure would be amended to limit permits to persons who can demonstrate a need to carry a firearm, "such as businessmen who carry large sums of money or valuable commodities."

CPR course offered at college

A CPR class will be offered at Howard College Thursday, April 9 and Thursday, April 16 from 6 to 10 p.m. The fees for the class are $12 and $4.75 for the book. The instructor will be Charla Lewis, who teaches EMT classes here at Howard College. Students may preregister by calling Elaine Oliver at 267-6311 extension 315.

Military academies begin recruiting

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Applications are being accepted to the United States Academies for the 1988 cycle, according to a release from Congressman Charles Stenholm.

Individuals who are at least high school juniors, and who will be between 17 and 21 years of age on July 1, 1988 may be eligible for consideration to the United States Air Force, Merchant Marine, Military or Naval Academy.

Application forms and information are available through area high schools, according to the release.

Selections are made in mid-December, using a formula based upon the candidate's high school record, class standing, SAT and/or ACT scores. Involvement in athletics and school and community extra-curricular activities are important factors, according to the release.

For more information contact: Congressman Charles W. Stenholm, 1226 Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515, ATTN: Academy Applications.

TU to employ 90 in new project

About 90 people will be employed at the peak of a construction project at the TU Electric plant in Monahans, the company said in a release.

TU Electric awarded a general construction contract to Fluor Daniel Power Services, Southwest, of Dallas, for three new combustion turbine generating units to be built at TU Electric's Permian Basin power plant.

Hooper Sanders, regional manager of the Big Spring TU Electric office, said the Dallas firm will begin work about April 1 at the plant located about four miles west of Monahans.

Sanders said the Texas Employment Commission's Odessa office will take initial applications for jobs associated with the project.

The three combustion turbines at Permian Basin will be the first such generating units to be built in the TU Electric system, which spans much of the northern one-third of Texas.

Combustion turbines differ from conventional power plants in that they burn natural gas or oil to turn a turbine generator to produce electricity, without the intermediate step of converting water into steam to turn a turbine.

UIL literates

Car's tires punctured

Ricky Coppedge of Gail told police that two people he knows punctured his car's four tires with a sharp object and stole a tire valve stem. The incident occurred at the Exxon gas station at Interstate 20 and Highway 87, between 10:45 and 11:30 p.m. Monday.

Stanley Laverne Clark, 40, 3310 Drexel St., was arrested at 1000 E. FM 700 Monday on suspicion of driving with a suspended license. He was transferred to county jail and released on $500 bond.

WASHINGTON (AP) — While America's elderly are in an increasingly better financial shape as a group, more than one in 10 still live in poverty, according to a study issued Monday.

Citing the "need to dig beneath the averages," the report found that two out of 10 elderly women who live alone exist in poverty and that three out of 10 elderly blacks fall below the federal poverty standards.

Moreover, more than one-third of the nation's disabled adults below age 65 also are officially poor. In total, about 13 percent of the elderly are poverty stricken.

The poverty line for a single person over 65 is $4,775 income per year and $6,023 for an elderly couple.

The report by the Urban Institute outlined a range of options to finance increased benefits for the elderly poor and disabled adults under the federal Supplemental Security Income program established in 1974.

Although none of the proposed changes would involve an income tax rate increase, all would raise taxes one way or another — such as expanding Social Security payroll withholding or changing income tax deductions.

The 125-page report was scheduled for discussion today by its authors and a panel including Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., a member of the House Ways and Means public assistance subcommittee.

The study was commissioned by two nonprofit elderly advocacy groups — The Villers Foundation and The Commonwealth Fund.

"The tremendous success of public policies ... in raising the standard of living of the elderly as a whole has obscured ... the continuing plight of a significant number of senior citizens living in poverty," the report said.

"Many older people are subsisting on meager incomes even as the average senior citizen has reached a state of rough equivalence with non-elderly adults in terms of per capita income."

rate because it doesn't make the teachers feel wanted. White added that high salaries, good benefits, quality working conditions, adequate teaching materials and equipment and a good relationship with the administration and school board would attract quality personnel.

When asked how to respond if the state continues to require more local funding for vocational education programs, Reid said the board and parents should protest in Austin.

Nichols said the programs would be funded if the taxpayers are willing to pay.

Ritchers suggested cutting funding for other programs, or raising taxes.

Barr said the board should "put people in Austin that will help us, and keep in touch with them."

Coates said he would "do everything possible to keep the programs," and would treat them equally with other programs.

Nearly all candidates listed involvement with the education of their children a main reason for their candidacy.

Barr said he favors involvement in school spending and ensuring the system gets good value for its money.

Coates said that taxpayers "need somebody to take a firm stand on their behalf."

Nichols said he believes that the school system is worth whatever sacrifices may be necessary, and that he is opposed to consolidation.

Reid said he does not want to see children burdened with too many restrictive laws, he is concerned about attracting quality personnel, and that "I want to be able to say 'I did my best' to help."

Ritchers said since he has been both teacher and coach in addition to student, that "puts me on both sides of the desk."

Wallace, a teacher in the Big Spring school system, said he understands teachers' problems and feelings. "Through our teachers we can help our children," he said.

White said he wants to "help keep our school as strong as possible." He said hard economic times haven't ended, and that he would keep track of school system spending.

Weather

Forecast

West Texas - Sunny and warmer through Wednesday. Clear and not so cold tonight. Lows tonight will be in the mid 30s in the north and far west to lower 40s in the extreme south, except upper 20s in the mountains. Highs Wednesday will be in the mid 70s Panhandle to near 80 in the south, except mid 80s in the Big Bend.

State

Record low temperatures were recorded across Texas at dawn today, but forecasts called for a warming trend to follow the record-breaking cold.

Records for the coldest March 31 on record included 39 at Brownsville, 30 at Corpus Christi, 31 at Houston and 30 at Dallas-Fort Worth.

The state at dawn remained under the influence of a cold, dry Arctic air mass, but temperatures did not get quite as cold as expected, forecasters said.

Temperatures were expected to dip into the mid 20s in North Texas, but remained in the low 30s to upper 20s because the air mass moderated somewhat, the National Weather Service said.

Forecasts called for a statewide warming trend through Wednesday and most of the state will have warmer temperatures through Thursday and Friday.

Lows tonight will be in the 30s and 40s over all of West Texas except in the mountains where readings will dip into the 20s, in the 30s and 40s in North Texas and in the 40s in South Texas.

Highs Wednesday will be in the 70s and 80s in West Texas, in the 70s in North Texas and in the 70s and 80s in South Texas.

Nation

Snow piled up in the Midwest today and record-breaking cold swept into the South, while much of the West was under fair skies.

Snow extended from the Tennessee Valley across the lower Ohio Valley to Lake Erie. Snow mixed with rain, sleet and freezing rain across the upper Ohio Valley.

Cold air that moved into the Deep South set off freeze warnings and pushed temperatures early today into the 20s to 30s from the southern Plains across the central Gulf Coast states and the Tennessee Valley.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms ranged across much of the Florida Peninsula and rain extended over the remainder of the Atlantic Coast region into southern Maine.

Rain was scattered across the Appalachians and fair skies prevailed west of the Mississippi River.

A winter storm warning was posted through today for most of Ohio, where Cleveland and Dayton were blanketed with 8 inches of snow Monday evening and a snowfall of up to a foot was possible in the southwestern part of the state.

Snow-prompted travelers' advisories were posted for western and middle Tennessee, eastern Kentucky and western central Indiana. Rain was changing to snow across western Pennsylvania early today and a snowfall of up to a half foot was possible.

women sexually assaulted by a spouse report symptoms similar to those assaulted by a stranger or acquaintance: fear, shame, guilt, disruption of their lives, an extreme lack of trust and loss of self worth.

"Contrary to what has been believed in the past, the abuse does escalate," the literature states. "Forcing intercourse on her is not sufficient after a time. The batterer often pushes further," using objects and weapons.

The batterer's main purposes are power, control and manipulation, the literature continues.

"Once he conquers her on one level, he moves on to the next, more degrading act."

The Rape Crisis Center further notes that "a woman raped by a stranger has to live with the memory of that experience. A woman raped by her husband has to live with her rapist. Many wife victims, trapped in a reign of terror, experience repeated sexual assaults over a number of years."

Deaths

Willie Belle Heckler

Willie Belle Heckler, 75, Coahoma, died Sunday, March 29, 1987 at Scenic Mountain Medical Center after a lengthy illness.

Services will be Wednesday, at 2 p.m. at the First Baptist Church of Coahoma, with Rev. Kim Neese, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be at Trinity Memorial Park, under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch.

She was born Sept. 15, 1911 in Ardmore, Okla. She married Albert William Heckler on Nov. 7, 1931 in Lovington, N.M. He preceded her in death in 1972.

She was a member of the First Baptist Church of Coahoma.

She came to Big Spring as a one-month-old infant with her parents, who were pioneer farmers in the Green Valley community, northeast of Coahoma.

Heckler worked at the Wagon Wheel Drive-In on 4th and Birdwell Lane for over 21 years and had worked all her life as a cook.

She is survived by one daughter, Annie Belle Daniell of Midland; one brother, Leonard Grisham of Big Spring; one sister, Maggie Harrington of Coahoma; six grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by one daughter, Helen Beth Heckler in 1977, and one son, Albert Melburne Heckler in 1980. She was also preceded in death by seven brothers and sisters.

Willie Camp

Willie Camp, 69, 631 Caylor, died Friday, March 27, 1987 at Scenic Mountain Medical Center after a lengthy illness.

Graveside services will be at 2 p.m. today at Mount Olive Memorial Park, under the direction of Myers & Smith Funeral Home, with Rev. Earl O. Wood, pastor of Faith Baptist Church, officiating.

She was born Dec. 23, 1917, and had lived in Big Spring since 1965.

She was a member of Faith Baptist Church.

House to reject veto

WASHINGTON — A hostile Democratic majority and rebellious GOP leaders were poised to override President Reagan's veto of the $88 billion Highway bill today, but presidential aides were pinning their hopes on the Senate.

"I feel confident we will override it in the House," Democratic Speaker Jim Wright of Texas predicted on Monday, and Republican congressional aides acknowledged the best the White House could hope for in the vote was a respectable showing.

White House aides were more confident about the eventual vote in the Senate, and Reagan has summoned some wavering senators to the Oval Office for a series of private chats.

Judge appeals ruling

BOSTON — A Housing Court judge had no authority to appoint a guardian for a hermit fighting eviction from a lean-to on public land, a judge ruled Monday.

State Appeals Court Judge Joseph Warner ordered a stay of a lower court's ruling naming a guardian for Bill Britt, who has lived nearly 20 years at the Chestnut Hill Reservoir. The stay is effective pending an appeal.

Britt has been in and out of court in recent months fighting a state effort to make him leave the five-acre patch he calls home.

Housing Court Judge E. George Daher has given Britt until July 1 to find a new home. But earlier this month, after Britt resisted offers of housing alternatives, Daher said he would name a guardian to work with Britt's children to find him a new place to live.

Britt refuses public assistance and subsists on money he makes redeeming discarded cans and bottles.

Class witnesses suicide

SANTA ANA, Calif. — A woman carried two semi-automatic handguns into a fifth-grade classroom and shot herself to death in front of 27 students, after saying she was sorry for what she was about to do.

Mary Jo Jansen was pronounced dead Monday at Western Medical Center about an hour after she walked into the Panorama Elementary School classroom and shot herself in the head, said Orange County sheriff's Lt. Bob Rivas.

Ms. Jansen, 44, of Irvine, was a stranger to the school, he said.

She walked through the classroom's rear door and told the teacher, "I'm sorry I have to do it this way," Rivas said.

The teacher, Paddy Kakihara, ordered the children to put their heads down when she saw the woman was carrying two guns.

"I didn't want them to see it," she said. "I don't know the woman at all. I just praise the Lord that my kids are safe."

Oscars

Deaf performer triumphs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Platoon," the grim saga of war without glory in Vietnam, was named 1986's best picture in a night of emotional triumph in which Paul Newman won his first Oscar and Marlee Matlin became the first deaf performer to win an Academy Award.

Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters" earned him a best screenplay Oscar on Monday night and captured supporting actor and actress honors for Michael Caine and Dianne Wiest.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences also awarded Ralph Bellamy, still handsome at 82, an honorary Oscar for his 103 movie roles. He said it was "the greatest honor that could be given to an actor — consideration by one's peers in every area of the business."

It also voted the special Irving G. Thalberg achievement award to director Steven Spielberg, the box-office champion snubbed repeatedly by Oscar.

The victory of "Platoon," whose four Academy Awards led the pack, was hailed by its director and producer as an American commitment to peace.

"I think what you're saying is that for the first time you really understand what happened over there," said Oliver Stone, who was named best director. "And I think what you're saying is that it should never ever in our lifetimes happen again."

Miss Matlin, who overcame her deafness to claim an Oscar as best actress for "Children of a Lesser God," said she hoped it would open new doors.

"I just want work, anything any actress would want," the 21-year-old star said in sign language backstage. "I'm an actress who just doesn't happen to hear. I have my own hearing. It's different from yours, but it's mine."

Miss Matlin's award was made doubly poignant by its presenter — William Hurt, her romantic co-star on and off screen who kissed her softly as he placed the golden statuette in her hands.

The 59th Academy Awards brought long-awaited validation to Newman and Michael Caine, whose names glittered in lights for decades while Oscar eluded their grasp.

A radiant Marlee Matlin, best actress for her portrayal in "Children of a Lesser God," signs her jubilation Monday night as she stands with her Oscar after being honored at the 59th Annual Academy Awards at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion in Los Angeles.

But neither Newman as best actor nor Caine was on hand to savor the triumph. Newman said he was too superstitious to risk disappointment for an eighth time. And Caine, who took the Oscar after four tries, was filming "Jaws IV" in the Bahamas.

"The jinx is broken. He's in!" rejoiced Robert Wise, president of the academy, who accepted Newman's award for the reprise role of "Hustler" Eddie Felson in "The Color of Money." Newman won a special Oscar last year for his career achievements.

Thatcher talks rights

MOSCOW — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev he should release more political prisoners and allow freer emigration if he wants friendly relations with the West.

Gorbachev responded that he was ready to discuss human rights "openly and loudly" if the debate includes unemployment, homelessness and discrimination in the West. He also accused the United States of putting too many conditions on reaching an agreement to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

Both leaders spoke Monday night at a state banquet in the Grand Kremlin Palace.

British sources said that to emphasize her concern for human rights, Mrs. Thatcher will have lunch today with Andrei D. Sakharov, who is the Soviet Union's best-known dissident.

Pope to visit Chile

ROME — Pope John Paul II embarked today on one of the most sensitive trips of his papacy, a visit to South America that will include meetings with President Augusto Pinochet of Chile and his church opponents.

The pontiff, making his 33rd foreign pilgrimage since becoming head of the Roman Catholic Church in 1978, left in a special Boeing 747 from Rome's Ciampino Military Airport at about 10 a.m. (3 a.m. EST), airport officials said.

He plans an overnight stop in Uruguay, six days in Chile and six days in Argentina.

Most attention is focused on the pope's visit to Chile, where local Roman Catholic Church leaders have been the most consistent and outspoken critics of Pinochet's right-wing military government.

The Vatican has labeled the pope's stay in Chile, which begins Wednesday, as a strictly "pastoral visit," but several stops in Chile have political overtones and local opposition groups have looked to the visit with hope.

The pontiff is scheduled to hold private meetings with Pinochet on Thursday, and also will meet with Chilean church leaders.

$40 million bid for art

LONDON — Spectators gasped and applauded as Vincent van Gogh's "Sunflowers," which the impoverished Dutch artist failed to sell for $125 before his suicide in 1890, was auctioned for $39.85 million.

An anonymous buyer bidding by telephone Monday paid 24.75 million pounds for the famous painting at Christie's auction house, more than tripling the record for a painting sold at auction.

Before the sale, Christie's had said it expected about $16.1 million would be bid for the painting.

Phone deregulation passes committee

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers say they are ready to put their regulating sword in its sheath, but warn they will draw it again if deregulating AT&T Communications turns into a mistake.

The Senate State Affairs Committee sent to the full Senate a bill that would deregulate the long-distance company, but that would allow the PUC to regulate it again if the company isn't operating in the best interest of consumers.

The bill, passed on a 10-2 vote, would make Texas the second state in the nation to deregulate AT&T.

Under the bill, sponsored by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, intrastate rates would be calculated on a statewide average basis. The bill also would guarantee no Texan would be left without long-distance service.

The bill drew strong opposition from Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, who said the measure would put long-distance rate setting "in the hands of a few managers in New Jersey."

But in the end, Edwards voted for the bill because of an amendment offered by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, that would allow the Public Utilities Commission to again regulate the long-distance company if it doesn't operate in the best interest of consumers.

"I thought we ought to give the free market a chance, but if it doesn't work, then we allow the PUC to bring the carrier back under a regulatory scheme," Lyon said. "It allows us to keep a sword over them."

AT&T is the only regulated long-distance company in Texas. But Montford says there is sufficient competition to allow the marketplace to set rates and services.

"I just call it equal regulation," said Tom Jones, AT&T vice president for government relations. "The time has come for us to quit this business of people using the deregulatory process for their own competitive advantage."

The bill would take effect Dec. 31, 1988.

Edwards argued that the Legislature would be deregulating AT&T without sufficient information. During public hearings on the bill, the company only offered one Texas A&M study showing AT&T is not a dominant carrier, he said.

"Who paid for that study?" Edwards asked. "The very company that wants to be deregulated."

Edwards contended that current law already allows AT&T to go before the commission and request a hearing to prove they are not a dominant carrier and therefore should not be regulated.

He later proposed an amendment that would require the PUC to hold such a hearing before Jan. 15, 1988, but the amendment was tabled on a 7-4 vote.

Another proposal by Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, that would have allowed AT&T to lower its rates without PUC approval, but require it to seek commission approval to raise its rates also was tabled on a 7-6 vote.

"Without Lyon's amendment, we would have given AT&T carte blanche to set rates at any level," said Edwards who said he is unsure how he will vote when the bill reaches the Senate floor.

Teacher fired after engaged to student

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — A 40-year-old former teacher says she is being harassed by school officials after she announced plans to marry an 18-year-old student.

"We feel very persecuted," former teacher Marty Sims told the Beaumont Enterprise in a telephone interview from Colorado. "It is beyond my comprehension how we can be persecuted for loving."

Ms. Sims said school officials pressured her to resign in January from a special program at Lincoln High School because of her relationship with Todd Colletti.

Colletti, a senior at the school and a participant in the program, said school officials are not allowing him to represent the district at future conventions of the Office of Education Association because of his involvement with Ms. Sims. Colletti is the outgoing national president of the association's high school division.

Ms. Sims is an adviser and Colletti a participant in the Summit III program, which was created several years ago to bring about integration in Port Arthur schools. It is intended for students whose achievement test scores are in the top 25 percent of all students.

School district officials say violations of district policy and not the relationship led them to take disciplinary action.

Louis Reed, assistant superintendent for instruction, said the district's teacher code of ethics prohibits teachers from developing romantic attachments to their students.

He said if district officials had sufficient evidence about such a relationship between the teacher and Colletti in January, they would have considered disciplinary action.

He said Ms. Sims resigned after school officials questioned a trip she and Colletti made to Boston at school district expense to attend a conference that had been canceled.

Ms. Sims said she and Colletti traveled to Boston Oct. 24 for an Office of Education Association professional development seminar, but they did not discover until arriving that it had been cancelled.

On two separate occasions Harold Hall has been called to serve Big Spring as a City Councilman, and always he has achieved a record of steady hand and a straight-shooter.

His tenure has made him a seasoned performer who knows the ropes of city government, and at this moment when we have a new city management, this is doubly important.

We face some critical financial decisions, and yet we must go forward within our means to help promote the growth and development of our city.

Please give Harold a vote of confidence Saturday by voting to return him.

Shortchanging reserve a risk

Since oil is relatively cheap and plentiful, why worry about filling the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve?

Because today's glut could become tomorrow's shortage. Ignoring history, the Reagan administration would add to the nation's supply — stored in huge salt domes along the coasts of Louisiana and Texas — at the rate of only 35,000 barrels a day, less than half the level Congress demanded last year.

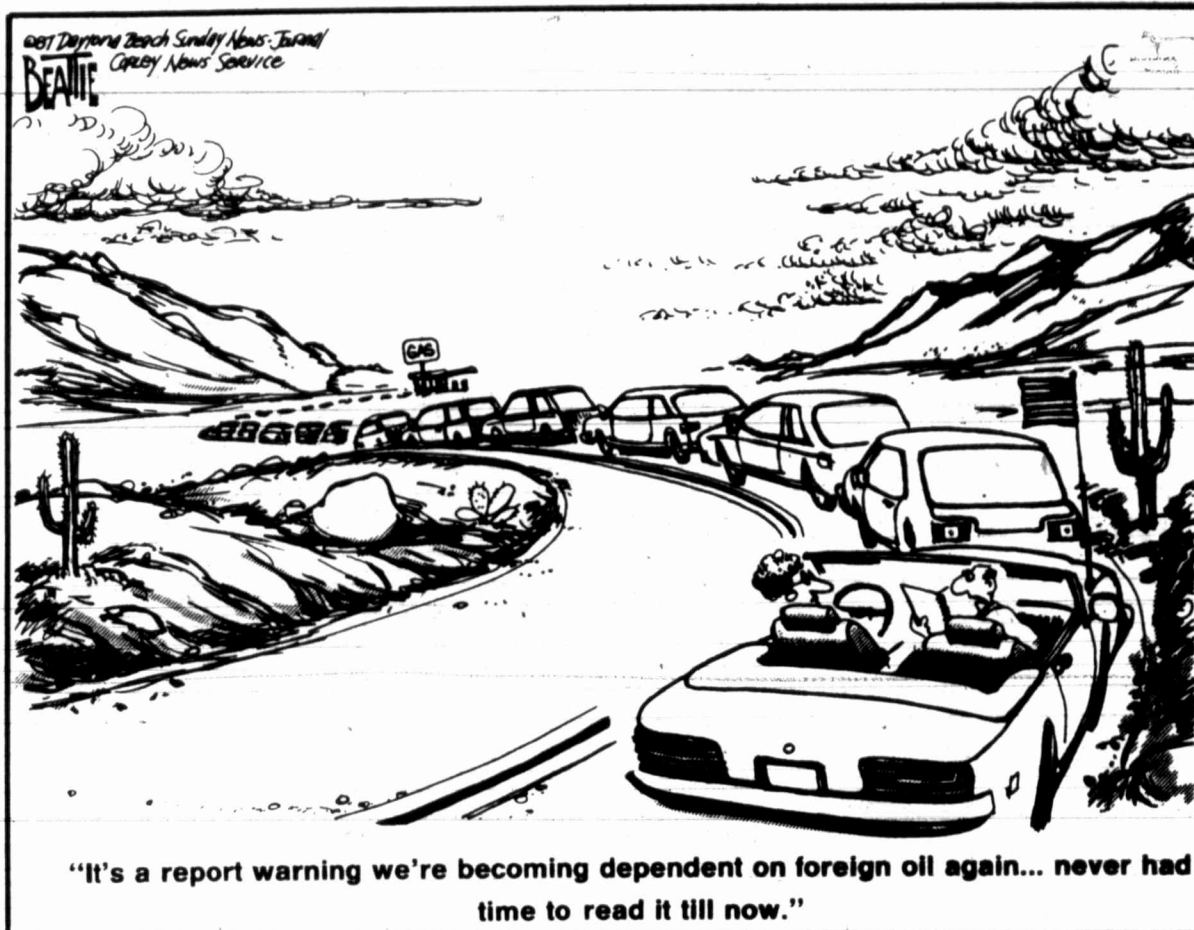

The administration also wants to stop filling the reserve when it reaches 580 million barrels, as opposed to the 750 million that lawmakers had envisioned.

The decision, which would save an estimated $225 million next year, is shortsighted from the standpoint of both economics and national security.

At $18 a barrel, oil is a bargain too good to pass up. Why risk paying the higher prices that will result if, as experts predict, OPEC nations eventually regain control of the market?

Moreover, the United States spends many times the projected savings to protect its foreign oil supplies, which nonetheless remain vulnerable to disruption. Where is the sense in shortchanging a more reliable source of oil?

There's another good reason for filling the reserve at the faster pace: Virtually all of the oil being pumped into storage comes from Mexico, whose foreign debt now exceeds $100 billion; about one-quarter of which is owed to American banks. Every dollar the United States spends on Mexican oil is an investment in that nation's economic stability — as well as our own.

SBA gave Rockefeller loan with four percent interest

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR
WASHINGTON — Despite a "means test" for assistance to borrowers, the Small Business Administration gave a company owned by the family of an affluent businessman — a Rockefeller, no less — a low-interest loan subsidized by the taxpayers.

Godfrey A. Rockefeller, president of Acosta Groves, the family citrus business in Florida, signed for a $231,000 loan from the SBA at 4 percent, the lowest interest rate the agency charges.

When our reporter Lisa Sylvester asked Rockefeller, a distant relative of world-class banker David Rockefeller, if the company had been unable to get a bank loan, he replied, "Frankly, we didn't try."

The 10-year subsidized loan was obtained in December 1984 to bail the Rockefeller citrus grove out of hard times stemming from the 1983 Florida freeze.

Rockefeller lives in the exclusive Maryland community of Gibson Island, on the Chesapeake Bay near Annapolis, where guards man the gates to keep out all but residents and invited guests. We reached him in the resort area of Del Ray, Fla., where he was vacationing and entertaining friends.

Rockefeller readily acknowledged that he had obtained the disaster-relief loan, but said, "We abided by all the rules and regulations in applying for the loan."

He was absolutely correct. Here's how the SBA rules and regulations allowed a Rockefeller-owned business to qualify for a loan intended for the needy:

A Small Business Administration official said the agency — which no longer lends money to farmers — subjects loan applicants to a "credit-elsewhere test" that is supposed to keep "fat cats from taking advantage of the government."

The official, who insisted on anonymity, said he would have a hard time explaining the credit-elsewhere test in layman's terms, because "I don't speak layman's terms."

Jack Anderson

The complex test involves cash flow, existing debts and the effect a higher-interests loan would have on the prospective borrower's business. But despite its name, the test has nothing to do with the applicant's actual ability to find credit elsewhere — demonstrated in the case of Rockefeller, who didn't even try.

Bob Alexander, the SBA's Atlanta area counsel, said the credit-elsewhere test was implemented in the early 1980s in hopes of encouraging borrowers who could afford it to get their funds from private lenders.

He acknowledged, however, that there is no requirement that applicants try the private sector before seeking a government-subsidized loan.

In defense of the SBA's loan methods, Alexander said, "There are 10,000 things you have to go through, and the requirements are more stringent than a bank's."

A couple of other citrus farmers with SBA loans agreed that the loan process is painful, like picking your way through a barbed-wire entanglement.

David Bailes, whose now-retired father, Harry, got a couple of SBA disaster-aid loans in 1984, said his family "had to mortgage everything," including his grandmother's house, to get the loans. Bailes said the family citrus grove is still struggling to recover from the 1983 freeze, and said: "A lot of people applied for the loans and didn't get them. Many people were afraid to mortgage their homes."

Another citrus grower, William C. Keebler, said an important reason many farmers didn't get loans was because they didn't have "someone in their office" who could figure out how to meet the credit-elsewhere test. Keebler said he made it through the SBA maze because an employee had a master's degree in business administration.

KREMLIN WATCH: In the supposedly classless Soviet society, rank has its privileges even into the younger generation. According to our intelligence sources, the sons of Communist Party apparatchiks, the intelligentsia and other members of the Soviet elite are not being sent to do their military duty in Afghanistan.

Instead, these privileged draftees are sent to Poland, East Germany or Czechoslovakia, where the living is relatively easy and there are no mujahideen aiming missiles and rifles at them. The favoritism is so blatant, we're told, that it has caused some grumbling among the peasants, whose sons are being killed and wounded in Afghanistan.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We've already chided the members of Congress who slept on the steam grates of Washington for one well-publicized night. So, to be fair, we should now point out that the stunt at least didn't keep them from putting in a full day's work after their ordeal.

We checked the offices of 11 House members who slept on the grates, and found that they were all at their offices by 8 or 9 a.m. A 12th member, Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn., didn't sleep on a grate, because he had only recently had pneumonia, but he served soup and coffee to the homeless until about 1 a.m.

Art Buchwald Families' power in TV control

By ART BUCHWALD
The big question is: "Who holds the power in the average American home?"

Until recently the answer was up for grabs. Now this has changed. Dr. Jungfreud, a visiting psychiatrist at Panetel University, told me, "The power in America rests with the person who controls the TV remote unit."

"Zap!" I said. "Studies show the man or woman who has the ability to change a TV channel from bed is the one who will get the respect in the family."

"But all one is doing is selecting programs. That doesn't make you a god."

"It's not just controlling a TV set. The person who has his finger on the clicker is making a powerful statement. He is saying in no uncertain terms: 'You mess with me and you'll never see Channel 9 again.'"

I said, "I personally don't care who holds the remote in our family. There are many nights when I've let my wife click it as long as she wants to. We've had no power problems, except on the occasional evening when I have asked her in a very nice way to give the remote back to me and she refused. I got really mad because she knew it was my turn."

"And what did you do when she refused to give back the remote?" Dr. Jungfreud asked.

"I told her she wasn't being fair, and that no marriage can survive if one spouse switches channels more than the other."

"Did your wife keep the remote?"

"She did for 'I'll Take Manhattan,' but I took it back when she dozed off during 'People's Court.'"

"Can you tell me how often you've let her use the TV clicker?"

"More than a lot of husbands I know."

"Yet you feel that when she holds the remote she has the upper hand?"

"Not all the time. But I think I should be consulted when she uses the 'mute' button during Dan Rather. She also changes programs without asking me. I'm for women's rights, but how many women in this country do you know who are up to operating a remote button on a 19-inch Sony?"

"On the other hand, they have come a long way since the fine tuner was invented," Dr. Jungfreud said. "Frankly I think you are in a power struggle with your wife. Every time she grabs the clicker and goes by the 'A-Team' you feel emasculated."

"Maybe you're right, but what do I do?"

"You two have to gain equal control of the channels. This can be done either with a remote TV marital agreement, specifying how much time a person will have to hold the clicker or, if that doesn't work, by purchasing a second remote so each of you will have your own in bed."

"I like the second idea better than the first. This will give me a chance to zap her 'Wheel of Fortune' off the screen."

"And she can do the same to your wrestling. It will become a game, and there is nothing like a game to keep two people happy in the bedroom."

"Are couples all over America experiencing the same problem?"

"I am afraid they are. Most people don't even know they're at war when they're watching TV."

"The whole thing seems sick."

"No one ever told you mixing remote TV with marriage would be easy."

1787 Constitution Daybook

From The Associated Press Saturday, March 31, 1787 PHILADELPHIA TODAY

The weather today was 44 degrees, overcast, with a strong west wind. For the month, the low was 24, the high 69. There were six inches of rain and three inches of snow.

Jacob Hiltzheimer, businessman and state assemblyman, was one of the few Philadelphians who kept a diary during 1787. Today he reported that he, John Lowne, and William Gray met at the Sign of the Waggon tavern to referee a dispute about a quantity of hay purchased by a local citizen. One man said the hay weighed nine tons; the other claimed it only weighed a little over seven tons. The man claiming the lesser weight produced vouchers for his claim, the other did not. The referees found in favor of the man with the proper documentation.

Frederic Snider was paid 15 pounds, 10 shillings for serving as doorkeeper at the State House for the month of March.

CONFEDERATION TODAY
Congress was not in session in New York today, and William Samuel Johnson took the opportunity to write Hugh Williamson of North Carolina. Williamson, a former member of Congress, had written to ask about the affairs of state and offer some opinions. Johnson reported that Congress was grinding along without making very much progress. Many were hoping that the Constitutional Convention would solve some of the nation's problems, but Johnson was doubtful that it could do very much good. Something, however, was needed to improve the nation's governing system, or it would "soon be in a deplorable situation."

DELEGATES TODAY
Two days earlier, George Washington had written Virginia Gov. Edmund Randolph that he would attend the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia. Today he wrote James Madison and said a great deal in the letter, but did not mention his decision. Washington mentioned that he was glad Congress had sanctioned the meeting and thought it was wise that it had not enumerated what the convention should accomplish. He also thought that the leaders who were suggesting a monarchical form of government had "not consulted the public mind" or were unaware of "the levelling principles in which they were bred, being entirely irradicated."

He concluded that "a thorough reform of the present system is indispensable, none who have capacities to judge will deny, and with hand and heart I hope the business will be essayed in a full Convention."

LOOKING BACK

Freemasonry
Three days ago, Benjamin Franklin was appointed a delegate to the Constitutional Convention. This was only one of his activities during the year. He also was the president of Pennsylvania, president of the American Philosophical Society, president of the Society of Political Enquiries, and a member of many other national and local organizations. For example, he was a Freemason and a charter member of the Philadelphia Lodge, which was organized early in the 18th century.

The archives of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania include an account book of St. John's Lodge, listing officers as early as 1730-31. The membership included such distinguished citizens as Franklin; William Allen, mayor of Philadelphia; Joseph Shippen, scientist; and Philip Syng, silversmith. Philadelphia's lodge was associated with the Grand Lodge of England for over 50 years; then, in 1786, it separated and became the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. So, during 1787 the Philadelphia Freemasons were adjusting to their new independent status.

During the year, the Grand Lodge and its four subordinate lodges met at a building at Videll's Alley on Second Street below Chestnut, only a couple of blocks from the Pennsylvania State House. It is conceivable that those delegates to the Constitutional Convention who were Masons attended one or more of the meetings. The early lodge records list only the surnames of attendees, so it is not possible to identify lodge members or visitors who were at meetings. It is known, however, that there were a number of prominent Freemason delegates: Franklin, George Washington, Rufus King of Massachusetts, Gunning Bedford Jr., and John Dickinson of Delaware, and others.

Today, the Grand Lodge of Philadelphia is headquartered in one of the city's most elegant buildings, at 1 North Broad St. Early minutes of lodge meetings and other artifacts from the lodge's history are on display in the Museum of the Masonic Temple.

Record collector shares memories with music fans

ODESSA (AP) — Brent Walker has enough albums in his private collection to start his own radio station, he said. His 1,200 records include 250 compilation albums and boxed sets.

He shares his collectors' know-how with an irregular stream of regular customers who browse through his racks at the Golden Years, the store he opened in January.

Walker has a constant supply of "new" old records because he buys albums, cassettes and related memorabilia, as well as sells them. "If you don't know your records and the music, you can't possibly be in this business," said Walker. "I don't pick a figure out of the sky like most flea markets."

Walker's qualifications are simple.

"I became a teen-ager when rock 'n' roll began," he said.

One regular customer, Keith Cookson, is eager to hear Marshall Tucker sing "Sweet Caroline" on vinyl.

"I got two more Marshall Tuckers to go, then I got all of them," Cookson said.

Walker told Cookson he needs to come in "quite often," since his merchandise has a rapid turnover and many customers are searching for exactly the same thing.

"I might spend a day in here and it's deadlier than the dickens, and other days getting away from the counter to go to the restroom is difficult," Walker said.

One customer recently bought several classic album covers, with only mediocre-quality albums, from Walker's wall display. Walker said he is often surprised by what his customers want. So he offers a little of everything.

On the wall, everything from Nancy Sinatra's "Boots" album, "These Boots are Made for Walkin'," and Bob Dylan's "Bringin' it all Back Home," to early Hank Williams, The Troggs, Bobby Vee, Buddy Holly and Ricky Nelson are displayed. A special case holds imports by the Rolling Stones and the Animals.

The really rare stuff is stored in the back, he said, to avoid possible fingerprints.

In the racks, groups as modern as Spandau Ballet are available.

Prices range from $2 to $125, depending on condition and relative rarity. As for related memorabilia, a set of 1964 Beatles dolls, released for the group's first American tour, would net $150 in mint condition. Yet because one tiny plastic guitar is missing, Walker will get less, he said.

"Any record is just like a coin," he said. "It's only worth what somebody is willing to pay. Some people see a record and say the price is too high, others are glad to get it."

"I deal mostly with collectors," he said. "They want particular groups or artists or a particular era."

Many of the regulars watch at yard sales for records they know Walker wants, he says.

Lately, he said, Odessans have been forced to rid themselves of cherished records they've had for 25 or 30 years just to earn a few dollars.

Others are just cleaning out what they consider junk. "People just want to get rid of something that's been in the closet a long time."

Brent Walker of Odessa stands in front of some of the record albums that cover the walls of his record shop — Golden Years. Walker estimates that he has over 1,200 individual on his collection.

Tattooed husband may deserve to be tanned

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who wants to preserve her husband's tattoo after he dies rang a bell with me. It has been done!

In 1969, I visited the Kyoto National Art Museum in Japan where I was privileged to view an exhibit of Scythian, Persian and Central Asian art from the Hermitage Collection in Leningrad. One of the most impressive exhibits in that collection was the tattooed shoulder and arm of a man buried in the fourth century. It was preserved as a work of art by tanning the skin like leather.

Instead of ridiculing the lady, as others have done for wanting to preserve her husband's tattoo, I would recommend that she arrange now, with her husband's permission, for someone qualified to preserve this work of art that she loves. (Human skin tans beautifully — like leather, then she must find a mortician willing to cooperate with the procedure.)

To prove that I am not making this up, I am enclosing a picture of the preserved tattooed shoulder and arm as it appears in the art catalog.

Dear Abby

COY CONNER, TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY, LUBBOCK

DEAR COY CONNER: Thank you for some fascinating information. Seeing is indeed believing. Now, all the woman needs in order to preserve her husband's tattoo after his death is to find a mortician who will cooperate with someone who is qualified (and willing) to preserve this work of art tattooed on human skin by using a leather tanning technique.

Then she should find out if the law in her state permits parts of human remains to be preserved and framed.

DEAR ABBY: After years of reading you, I'm finally motivated to write in answer to "Jealous" whose husband "slow-danced" with a co-worker at an office party.

I'd like to comment on husbands dancing with others while their wives sit alone — by choice — while I encourage my husband to dance with the widows, divorced women and older singles who like to go out for an evening of music and dancing.

I was a widow myself for three years before remarrying, and although I love to dance, I seldom had the chance to. Now when my husband and I go out and I see many women without escorts, I insist that he dance with as many as possible.

I don't mind sharing my husband of 18 years on the dance floor, since we're so happy at home where it counts.

WILLING TO SHARE IN BAYSIDE, CALIF.

DEAR WILLING: Thank you for writing. You show a great empathy for the loneliness of others. You are obviously very secure in your own marriage. My hat is off to you, dear lady; your husband is a lucky hooper.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Looking Heavenward," who asked you whether she would be reunited in marriage with her first love in heaven, or would she be stuck with her "worthless" husband: That question has been of concern for many centuries.

According to the writings of Matthew in the New Testament, Jesus was asked this question regarding a woman who had been married to each of seven brothers: "When the dead rise to life, whose wife will she be?"

Jesus answered that when the dead rise to life, they will be like angels in heaven, and will neither be married or given in marriage.

Lecithin story still being written

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have been reading and hearing about the vitamin lecithin lately. Is it true that it rejuvenates brain cells and definitely improves one's memory? What do you think about it? — J.A.N.

This is a story I have been following with interest. Hardly a week goes by without a query or two about lecithin.

First, I have to correct you. It is not a vitamin. It's a phospholipid — part fat, part phosphorus. It makes up part of the membranes of cells. The body makes it from raw material, that is from food, where it is found widely and in abundance.

To be technical about it, lecithin is a large molecule, meaning it contains different kinds of atoms. Some of them are choline, another substance you have probably read about in literature on lecithin. Most choline is sold as lecithin, in fact.

It's the choline that draws the attention of investigators. Choline helps create the chemical signals our nerves discharge in a kind of chain reaction with neighboring nerves. This process goes on in the brain, and this is why some believe choline may help restore memory. There are studies showing it may help. Underline may.

So far, the effect of choline therapy has not been sufficient to make headlines or cause long lines to form where it is sold. But the effect has been intriguing enough to keep investigators looking into it.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am writing about our youngest boy, 21 years old, who is diagnosed as having high blood pressure. He is now taking medicine for it daily. Do you think he should have a second opinion? I am concerned because heart attack and stroke runs in my family. — Mrs. J.C.

When unusual things happen, unusual causes must be looked for, and high blood pressure in one this age is unusual. In mid life and later, the usual cause of high blood pressure is essential, which really means no specific cause can be found. A whole lot of disparate factors can add up to that kind of high blood pressure.

In younger people, things like adrenal tumors have to be ruled out as causing the rise. That can also occur in an older person, but we suspect it more as a cause in young people.

I don't think you need a second opinion. You do need the follow-up attention to find the cause of your son's pressure rise. See the booklet "Blood Pressure and Your Health," which other readers may order by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and $1.25.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I heard that for gout, three tablespoons of apple vinegar helps. I've also heard that a person on medication for gout can get leukemia. Please comment. — B.C.B.

I've heard about apple cider vinegar and I don't believe it will help. Gout medicine doesn't cause leukemia. You may have heard that sometimes in leukemia and other cancers, especially during treatment, blood uric acid levels rise as they do in gout. If that happens you can use gout medicine to lower the acid level.

Syracuse Smarting from Hoosiers' win

Indiana's Keith Smart gives the number one sign after Indiana won the NCAA Championship over Syracuse and Smart was named Most Valuable Player for the game in New Orleans Monday.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bob Knight has his third national basketball championship as coach at Indiana University — unexpectedly, and with help from an unlikely source.

Led by junior college transfer Keith Smart, a support player during the season, the Hoosiers defeated Syracuse 74-73 Monday night to win the same title they won under Knight in 1981 and '76.

"Those first two teams were teams that couldn't be beat," Knight said. "They were dominant. This team won the thing by hanging in there and making some big plays.

"This will not go down as one of the dominant NCAA teams. We won some games by the skin of our teeth. But we were competitive, and we did get there. And we surpassed some things I wasn't sure we could do."

In 1976, the Indiana stars were Kent Benson and Scott May. In 1981, it was Isiah Thomas and Ray Tolbert. This time, it was Smart and Steve Alford and Daryl Thomas and Dean Garrett.

For Syracuse, the game represented 30 seconds of broken dreams. Leading 73-72 with a half-minute to play, Syracuse saw its star forward, freshman Derrick Coleman, miss from the free-throw line. Then, after Smart's baseline jumper with five seconds left put Indiana ahead, the Syracuse players were unable to get a timeout until the clock had ticked down to one second.

"There's only one team in the country better than us, and they're only one point better," Syracuse center Rony Seikaly said.

On their road to the championship final, both Indiana and Syracuse disposed of teams that had lived by the NCAA's newest wrinkle, the 3-point goal.

Providence, the top 3-point shooting team in the country, lost 77-63 to Syracuse in one semifinal, and the Hoosiers defeated top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, the country's No. 2 long-range team, 97-93 in the other semifinal Saturday.

Ironically, when it came to the championship, Indiana profited mightily from the rule that Knight hates so much. Alford, Indiana's all-time leading scorer, hit 7-of-10 3-point attempts and scored all but two of his team-leading 23 points from outside the 19-foot, 9-inch stripe.

"I got on Ed Steitz (secretary of the NCAA's Rules Committee) about the 3-point shot, and he's never hesitated to come back at me about it," Knight said. "He told me he put it in so I could use it with Steve Alford and win the national championship.

"The thing I like least in basketball is the 3-point shot. Thanks, Ed."

The championship was the fifth overall for the Hoosiers, 30-4, who also won in 1940 and 1953 under Branch McCracken. Only UCLA, with 10, has more.

With the victory, Knight joined Adolph Rupp and John Wooden as the only coaches to win at least three times. Wooden led UCLA to 10 titles, while Rupp coached Kentucky to four NCAA crowns.

It came in an unusually quiet season for Knight, whose career has been marked by tantrums and chair-throwing. He was assessed only two technicals this season, and one came after he told an official he finally had made a good call.

"Things couldn't have ended up better for the three seniors on this team," Alford said of himself and teammates Thomas and reserve Todd Meier. "Over the years, we have grown very close as friends, and this year were able to provide leadership to this team."

"We were able to criticize each other and respond to it in a positive manner. For me, it has been a very rewarding experience playing for Coach Knight."

Although there was little consolation in losing, Syracuse could look back at one of its best seasons. The Orangemen finished 31-7 and were in their first NCAA championship game.

"The kids did everything we asked them to do the whole game, and it came down that somebody had to make a play at the end," Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim said. "Indiana made a great play, and that's why they won. They deserved it.

"It wasn't a foul shot that lost the game."

Boeheim has taken the Orangemen to the tournament nine times in his 11 seasons but had never gotten past the second round until this year. After Syracuse's second-round victory over Western Kentucky, Seikaly pronounced the monkey off Boeheim's back.

Boeheim bristled when reminded that he carried a reputation as a coach who couldn't win the big ones. "The media puts too much attention on tournament records," he said. "We could have lost in the first round, and if he had, I guess I would still be a lousy coach."

Perhaps the monkey is back, but his younger players were optimistic of a bright future. "There's no reason for us to hang our heads," Coleman said. "Hopefully, we'll be back."

Smart scored 21 points for Indiana and was named the Most Outstanding Player of the Final Four. He had six assists, five rebounds and a lean-in jumper after driving the left baseline to win the game.

Fans are rocking in Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana University fans jammed streets and night spots around the campus early today, celebrating their Hoosiers' victory over Syracuse for the NCAA basketball championship.

"Nobody's really tried to tear up anything," Bloomington police Sgt. John Coleman said. "We've seen some people throwing bottles, and that's a little scary but nothing real serious."

Bloomington Hospital treated about 50 people Monday night and early today for minor injuries, mostly bruises and sprains, said Sandy Fiscus, the hospital's director of marketing.

Ice and snow covered the streets, prompting a few snowball fights.

Thousands of fans gathered beneath an informal fireworks show at Showalter Fountain on campus.

"This is great, I love it," Frank S. Haut said. "I've been here for three years. I'm a junior, I've been waiting for this."

"This is bedlam, chaos, completely frantic," Matt Lucas, a cook at a popular student hangout, said after Indiana's 74-73 victory over the Orangemen.

"It kept you on the edge of your seat the whole time," said Ken Bonningson of Clyde, Ohio, in town for a convention. "That's the kind of game you hope you see once in awhile."

"It was close all the way," said Merle Booker of Connell, Wash. "I didn't think they were going to pull it out."

Police blocked off the area around Dunn Street and Kirkwood Avenue near the campus to avoid a repeat of Saturday night, when celebrants dented car roofs and hoods by jumping onto the tops of vehicles.

But a pickup truck that made it through the cordon became a makeshift parade float for more than two dozen fans as the truck edged its way through the thick crowds.

Police acted swiftly to quell a battle that erupted between fans on the roof of one building who fired off rockets at celebrants throwing snowballs at them.

"We're doing OK right now," said Capt. Steve Sharp, night shift commander who cleared some of the fans from the roof of Nick's English Hut.

Carlos Burgos was selling T-shirts and hats commemorating the championship.

"Business is great," he said. "They've been all over me. They aren't asking me what it costs. They are just grabbing it."

Screams and blaring horns could be heard across the southern Indiana campus and around the surrounding area as fans celebrated the victory. Students ran through the Memorial Union on campus shouting IU slogans and cheering.

Orangemen followers take loss hard

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The sober mood in Syracuse turned into one of frustration and violence early today as thousands of Syracuse University fans went on a rampage following their team's heartbreaking one-point loss to Indiana in the battle for the national basketball championship.

Police said an estimated 4,000 youths stormed university streets, some of them taunting police, throwing beer cans and causing damage to businesses and each other. Police had charged about 15 people with disorderly conduct by 12:30 a.m. today, after moving into the huge crowd and ordering people to disperse.

The throng, still chanting obscenities aimed at Indiana Coach Bob Knight, began to disperse shortly before 1 a.m.

In the hours after Indiana had posted its 74-73 triumph, however, youths broke windows, tore down signs and swung from telephone lines in a repeat performance of the destruction that took place Saturday after Syracuse's semifinal win over Providence.

Numerous people suffered minor injuries in drunken brawls and others were hurt by flying beer cans, police said.

The trouble started about 11 p.m. and surprised police, who had reported no major problems in the hour immediately after the end of Monday night's game.

Then youths started ripping down trees and throwing beer cans through store windows along Marshall Street and South Crouse Avenue.

Police Capt. Dean Bender said officers were forced to move into the crowd after employees in an ice cream store told them a man was lying in front of their store injured.

The man's injuries apparently were not serious.

A force of 100 police officers, some in riot gear and some on horseback, marched into the crowd shortly before midnight and hauled off some of the more unruly fans. Both the police and their four horses quickly became the targets of the youths, who threw beer cans and bottles at them as they moved through the crowd.

Police Chief Leigh Hunt said he ordered his force to disperse the crowd after the fans became violent and the situation appeared to be getting out of control.

"Climbing up on the trees is a problem because that's when they become dangerous to themselves," Hunt said. "If they fall off they could get hurt pretty bad."

At several points, police moved away from the crowd and stood back as a line of youths taunted them and threw cans at them.

Fifty officers were on duty from the start of the game and were able to keep matters under control until about 11:30 p.m. Additional officers in riot gear were bused to the scene before midnight.

Warriors player get NBA honor

NEW YORK (AP) — Forward Larry Smith, who averaged 19.3 rebounds per game in leading the Golden State Warriors to a 3-0 record, was named the NBA's Player of the Week for the period ending March 29.

Smith had 19 rebounds in a 127-115 victory over Detroit last Wednesday, 15 rebounds in a 106-105 triumph over Seattle on Friday and a season-high 24 rebounds in Saturday's 116-110 decision over Utah.

Site of Davis Cup announced

NEW YORK (AP) — The Hartford, Conn., Civic Center has been selected as the site for the Davis Cup match between the United States and West Germany from July 24-26, the U.S. Tennis Association announced.

USTA Davis Cup Committee Chairman David Markin said that five other locations were in the running for the site.

Baja 150 offroad race set for Saturday

Big Spring race fans will get a chance to see some quality action this Saturday when the 150 Mile Baja Midwest Offroad Challenge Series begins at noon.

The race will be at a track located two miles north of Interstate 20 on Midway Road just east of Big Spring. The course is six miles in length, and to finish, drivers will have to complete the 25 laps in a five-hour time limit.

The Big Spring course is an excellent spectator course with about 65 visibility to spectators, according to Dottie Leffler, Officer Manager of Sunstar Raceways Inc.

This race is the second of the 1987 Midwest Offroad Challenge Series. This is the first year for the series which has a total of eight races in three states. Other race sites are El Paso, Albuquerque, N.M. and Mt. Freedom, Okla. Two races at each location make up the eight race series.

All classes cars and trucks compete over a cross country course that tests man and machine to ability and durability. Race vehicles vary from sportsman type to the full blown professionals who sometimes have as much as $20,000 to $30,000 invested in their vehicles, said Leffler.

Leffler said the series will attract at least 50 entrants from all over the Southwest and is the most ambitious series east of the Rockies. The race goes on in any type of weather.

Saturday, the track will open at 8 a.m. with practice until 11 a.m. The race will start at noon. Admission is $5 per person with children under 12 admitted free.

Bobby was a good boy

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — There is just no satisfying some people. Bobby Knight's Indiana Hoosiers had just won the national championship, but the coach still saw room for improvement.

"I'm still not sure we're a really good basketball team," he said dryly after Indiana's 74-73 victory delivered the NCAA tournament title Monday night. "We will not go down in history as one of the dominant NCAA champions."

Knight, however, must go down as one of the dominant coaches, winning his third NCAA title. Only UCLA's John Wooden, with 10, and Kentucky's Adolph Rupp, with four, have won more.

If this Indiana team did not enchant its coach, at least he granted that it had made some progress.

"Three years ago, this team had a tough time asserting itself, hanging on to leads," he said. "We were ahead of Louisville in one game and then got outscored 28-7. Then, at South Bend, we were ahead of Notre Dame and got outscored 29-8. That's 21 points in five or six minutes in two games. That's how far this team has come from that."

"I'm pleased for them and with them."

Knight, dressed in what has become his trademark red pullover sweater, spent a quiet night on the sidelines, rarely yelling at his players or the officials. The volatile image he has developed over the years was absent. It was almost as if he had changed with the times.

On one second-half sequence, Syracuse's Rony Seikaly blocked a shot that the Indiana bench thought was goaltending. Every man on the Hoosier sidelines leaped up in protest — except the man in the red sweater.

Another time, when Keith Smart, Indiana's eventual hero, threw the ball away badly on a turnover, Knight yanked him immediately. But when Smart came to the bench, the coach did not yell at him, choosing instead to pat the player on the back. The support may have paid important dividends later when Smart won the game.

When he was exasperated

Indiana coach Bobby Knight and player Steve Alford share a moment on the sidelines after Indiana won the NCAA championship over Syracuse in New Orleans Monday.

with plays or players, Knight simply leaned back in his chair, sometimes covering his eyes, sometimes holding his head. At halftime, when Steve Alford's 3-point shot just before the buzzer gave Indiana a one-point lead, Knight was the last man off the bench, trailing his team into the locker room.

"I didn't feel really good walking off the floor at the half because we weren't as sharp as we were on Saturday," he said. "Syracuse had us standing around a little bit. We were pressing a little bit more than we should and not really getting the ball where we wanted to."

Alford's 3-pointer was one of seven that the All-America guard hit in the game. Knight saw some irony in that, considering his well-documented opposition to the new rule.

"I got on Ed Steitz (secretary-editor of the rules committee) about the 3-point shot the first time I saw him after the rule was put in," Knight said. "He never hesitates to go back at me. He said, 'We put it in so you could use it with Alford and win the national championship.' I said, 'OK, you come in and draw the offenses.'"

"The thing I like least in basketball is the 3-pointer. Then I look at tonight's statistics and we made three more 3-pointers than Syracuse and that's the difference."

"Thanks, Ed."

Syracuse players Ron Seikaly (left) and Derrick Coleman sit dejected on the bench after their team was defeated by Indiana for the national championship.

For Syracuse, last minute was fatal

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Syracuse experienced a season full of highs and lows in one final frustrating minute.

The 10th-ranked Orangemen failed to win their first national championship Monday night, falling to No. 3 Indiana 74-73 when Keith Smart hit a side jumper with five seconds to play to give the Hoosiers their fifth national championship and third under Coach Bob Knight.

Syracuse called a timeout with one second to play and the missing four seconds after Smart's shot were just 1-15th of the frantic, controversial final minute.

When the last minute of play began, the game was tied 70-70. Four seconds later, Syracuse had a two-point lead when Howard Triche, who was 1-for-7 from the field in the first half, hit his second straight field goal. Triche grabbed his only rebound of the game 18 seconds later when Smart missed a jumper from the right baseline, and was fouled by Steve Alford.

Triche made the front end of the 1-and-1, but missed the second. Smart grabbed the rebound and drove the length of the court for a driving basket that brought the Hoosiers within one point.

Smart then fouled freshman forward Derrick Coleman, who had 19 rebounds in the game, and sent him to the foul line. Indiana called timeout.

"I felt confident, there wasn't any emotion," Coleman said. "I wasn't nervous, I knew it could be the game."

Coleman was the only Syracuse player on the Orangemen's side of the court as Coach Jim Boeheim decided to have his other four players back for defense.

Coleman missed and Indiana's Daryl Thomas grabbed the rebound.

After Smart's basket, Syracuse then had trouble calling time, or at least getting the officials to recognize that it wanted a timeout.

"Both Howard and I signaled time out and I thought there were about three seconds left," said Greg Monroe, who finished with 12 points, including two of eight 3-point attempts. "I was a little more toward halfcourt and Howard was there by the official and we both signaled time out. Two ticks went off and there was one second left."

"I guess the ref didn't hear us," Coleman, who scored eight points, said. "We tried (to call the timeout). We all tried."

Syracuse loses only Monroe and Triche, the third- and fifth-leading scorers, respectively. Coleman and Seikaly will be back on the frontline and sophomore Sherman Douglas, who led the Orangemen with 20 points and seven assists against Indiana, will anchor the backcourt.

Can there be anything positive for Syracuse about the toughest and last loss of a 31-7 season?

Outdoor Trails

Fruitless fishing trips and two good rec spots

By H. BOYCE HALE

On a recent fishing trip to Port Aransas, Delnor Shaw and W.E. Napper of Big Spring were fishing at the Fina dock when they caught a Blue Heron Crane.

W.E. caught a small croaker and put it on his long stringer, then returned to his fishing.

Delnor was fishing a few feet from the stringer when he noticed a blue heron trying to swallow the croaker. He yelled at both the bird and W.E. But it was too late.

The crane finished swallowing the fish and then attempted to fly. Soon after becoming airborne, it reached the end of the rope stringer. Down came the bird with a large splash.

As the crane thrashed about in the water, both men tried to help it. But after the crane made a couple threatening gestures, they backed off.

Again the crane took to the air. This time the fish was pulled out of its gullet, and the crane escaped.

While laughing about the incident, Delnor said it was the biggest "fish" caught on the trip.

It was snowing when wife Jean and I left Big Spring on Feb. 19 for Lake Corpus Christi at Mathis.

As we drove, the snow turned to rain and the rain to fog. It took an additional three hours to get to our destination. At times, I wished we had stayed home. Rain and high winds continued the next two days, and finally on Sunday afternoon it cleared.

My brother Crockett of Corpus Christi left his boat and trot lines at the lake for our use. So on Sunday, Jean and I put the boat into the water and headed out, searching for the trot line.

It was late before we found and finished baiting the line. After supper, we talked about the fish we would take off the line the next morning.

It turned out to be all talk, because when we ran the line the next day, we had no fish. We rebaited and returned to camp.

At camp, while Jean prepared breakfast, we talked about how nice the weather had become. Again it was all talk. Within an hour the winds and rain returned. We never got back to the trot line. We came home without fish.

with. At the headquarters building is a museum and snack bar. The museum has a collection of Indian artifacts.

According to employee Martha Lindsey, the arrowhead collection is second to none for this area. During the school term, she said, busloads of children visit the park each week, weather permitting.

The park has wave after wave of sandhills — covering six square miles.

A way to enjoy the dunes is to take wax paper and sit on it to slide down the dunes. Sometimes you will tumble head over heels.

Care should be taken in the selection of clothes because you are sure to get sand all over you — in your nose, eyes, ears and every pocket.

Showers are available to wash away the sand, or you can wait until you get to Balmorhea for enjoyable swim.

Balmorhea Recreation Area is located about three miles east of the town of Balmorhea — 33 miles south of Pecos. Built mostly in the 1930s by the Civilian Conservation Corps, it remains a favorite swimming hole for many people.

According to Katherine Crenshaw of the Parks and Wildlife Department, about 26 million gallons of fresh spring water surge through the pool each day.

She added that because the water is displaced every six hours, there is no need for chemical purification.

Although the court is open year-round, the pool is open only from May 22 through Labor Day, and from noon to 8 p.m. No restaurant is available at the park, but a snack bar is open during swimming hours.

Swimming fees are $1 for persons over 12 years old and 50 cents for those under 12.

Dallas Cowboys founder dies

DALLAS (AP) — Clinton Murchison Jr., the Texas businessman who created football's Dallas Cowboys and built a massive fortune only to watch it crumble along with his health, died Monday night after a lengthy illness. He was 63.

Wheelchair-bound and so debilitated he could barely speak in his last years, Murchison was involved in what officials said was one of the largest personal bankruptcies in Texas history.

Murchison's wife, Anne, was at his bedside at Gaston Episcopal Hospital when he died, a hospital spokesman said. He had been hospitalized for about two weeks, the spokesman said.

The Murchison fortune — begun by Clinton Sr., a famed wildcat oilman who appeared on Time magazine's cover in 1954, and fueled by Clinton Jr. to reach an estimated $250 million — also will go down in Texas annals as one of the biggest.

But the bankruptcy, which forced even the sale of Murchison's 25-acre estate in north Dallas — signified more than the collapse of a great American fortune. It brought to a bitter finale one of the more fascinating of the Texas "wheeler-dealer" sagas.

Murchison's father had a name for his way of doing business: "financin' by finagin'." By whatever name, it required a shrewd mind, a gambler's instinct and nerve, a finely tuned sense of timing and more than a little luck.

Murchison Jr., too, had all those. He was described as "gutsy" and "decent" and as one of the most likeable multimillionaires in Texas.

His friends said he was known for his willingness to help others, for his unwillingness to "act rich," for his loyalty to his friends, for his shyness and his sense of humor.

He was the man who oversaw more than 100 corporations and who created his city's first great professional sports franchise — the

CLINT MURCHISON
...sold Cowboys in '84

National Football League's Cowboys, in 1960.

Cowboys president Tex Schramm said Monday he was deeply upset to learn of Murchison's death.

"It's just a very, very sad ending for a great guy. He's what kept the whole thing here together," Schramm said. "He was the glue. Our 25-year record is a tribute to him. I don't think he ever got the credit he deserved."

Murchison's love of football began early. Although only 5-7 and 120 pounds, he played halfback for Lawrenceville, his prep school in New Jersey. He later made Phi Beta Kappa in electrical engineering at Duke University in North Carolina and earned a master's degree in math at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve, and after the war returned to Dallas to learn how to wheel and deal at his father's side. "Money is like manure," Clint Sr. told his boys. "If you spread it around, it does a lot of good. But if you pile it up in one place, it stinks like hell."

Clint Jr. followed that advice, and it worked until interest rates soared and the bottom dropped out of the oil market in the late 1970s. In addition, he invested in some huge real estate ventures that later fell apart.

Besides those bad investments, his fortune was squeezed tighter when family squabbling began after his brother and partner, John, died in 1979 and Murchison's sister-in-law filed suit. That court battle forced him to liquidate many of his holdings.

Then his health began to decline from a neurological disease similar — if not identical — to the one that killed his father in 1969.

The reports of his poor health surfaced at the time he sold the Cowboys in 1984 for $60 million, creating the final catalyst for the stampede of banks and other Murchison creditors.

World champs lose relief pitcher to hernia

New York Mets relief pitcher Roger McDowell was in satisfactory condition after undergoing surgery for a hernia. The Mets said McDowell's 90-minute operation was routine. He is expected to miss 6-8 weeks and the Mets put him and rookie third baseman Dave Magadan on the disabled list. Magadan was treated for a viral infection of the lymph nodes two weeks ago and cannot throw or swing a bat for 11 more days. Toronto pitcher Craig McMurtry and Atlanta second baseman Damaso Garcia, who were traded for each other last month, both went on the disabled list. McMurtry underwent an emergency appendectomy, while Garcia has a sore knee and will undergo arthroscopic surgery this week. The Blue Jays also put reliever Gary Lavelle on the 15-day disabled list as part of his scheduled rehabilitation from a tendon transplant.

Exhibition Games
 —Rick Mahler allowed one run and seven hits in eight innings as the Braves defeated the New York Yankees 6-1. The Braves broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth inning with a four-run outburst against loser Charles Hudson.
 —Mike Mason became the first Texas pitcher to go eight innings, giving up one run and seven hits as the Rangers beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1. Oddibe McDowell homered for Texas.

—Milwaukee's Bill Wegman allowed one run and six hits in seven innings as the Brewers edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1.
 —Candy Maldonado hit a two-run homer and an RBI single in San Francisco's eighth-inning sixth inning as the Giants totaled 19 hits in a 19-8 victory over the Oakland Athletics.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today it is necessary to use much caution where financial and other practical interests are concerned. Expect delays in being able to put across any deals.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Scheduling a wise course to handle your material affairs is necessary to gain your ambitions accurately.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You may find it difficult to get your point across, but don't fret since tomorrow conditions improve for you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) The best way to handle a problem is to study it objectively and handle it logically. You're soon rid of it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You may be closer to gaining some goal for which you have long labored, so don't give up now.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't get involved in outside matters of a credit nature today. A bigwig who understands you is too busy to help.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Avoid an argument with one who is very stubborn. Make an effort to understand his, or her, views.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have made a promise that you want to break, but do nothing as yet. Your mate needs your support now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure you listen attentively to what a partner says. Keep working on a public affair that seems stalemated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You may be annoyed at some part of your activities, but handle this objectively for the right results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good friend may be in a strange mood today and will not agree with an amusement plan you've made, so forget it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Control your temper since the wrong word at home could cause a severe quarrel to ensue.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study communications well and overcome any difficulties connected with them. Don't take any risks today.

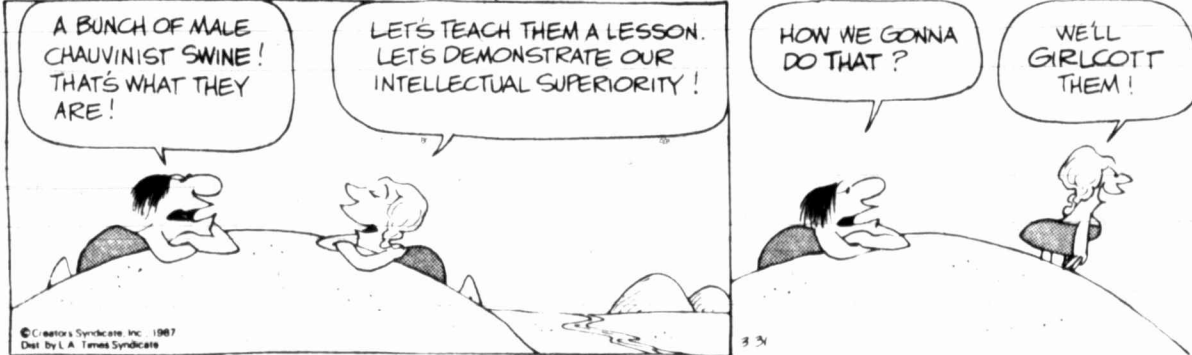

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be very strong willed and selfish, so teach this one to take the views and feelings of others into consideration, thus becoming more cooperative and well-liked. Your progeny can become successful in any line of business he, or she, finds appealing.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
