Collection of records lost to fire

DALLAS (AP) — A drummer with Willie Nelson's band lost what he considered a valuable collection of gold records, musical equipment and photographs to a fire that also destroyed his $100,000 home.

Paul English, who spent 20 years playing in Nelson's band, was dazed by smoke from the Sunday afternoon blaze, firefighters said, but he did not require medical treatment.

"We're estimating $100,000 fire damage to the building and $50,000 damages to contents, but that could easily go higher," said Dallas fire Capt. Mike Southerland.

He said the cause of the fire was being investigated but probably was started by a table saw English was using in the garage. Sparks from the saw may have ignited sawdust.

Neighbor Larry Shobe said several explosions were heard inside the garage after a smoke alarm went off.

"I saw him (English) in the garage trying to get the table saw out," Shobe said.

English was married to a woman named Janis.

She said she had some of the most valuable records in the band's career were gone.

City ponders surcharge question

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

The city should place an estimated $56,000 a year in sewer service surcharge funds not used to pay a 1979 debt into an interest-bearing account, former Councilman Jack Watkins said at a Council work session this morning.

Watkins spoke at a Council long-range planning session expected to continue throughout the day at the Big Spring Airpark meeting room. The Council's regular meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday there.

Watkins accused the city of robbing the public by placing the money intended for the debt into the sewer general fund.

Watkins, who served on the Council in the early 1970s, said he discovered the situation several weeks ago when Mayor Cotton Mize asked him to review the city's financial books and advise as to possible savings.

Watkins contends that the $56,000 was to be placed in an interest-drawing account to be used for the early retirement of the bonds, or in case of a future fund shortfall.

However, the ordinance says nothing of such an account. In reference to the surcharge, the ordinance states it is to be used "for the financing of the city's waterworks and sewer system revenue bonds, series 1979."

Watkins said that when he discussed the matter recently with Finance Director Tom Ferguson, the finance director told him such an account had never been established, and the extra money goes into the general fund for the sewer.

"But that's not what the ordinance says," nor is it what the Council at that time intended, Watkins said. He said he spoke to four people who were Councilmen then, and all indicated they intended the money to be placed into a special account.

Councilman Harold Hall said the ordinance should have specified the money be placed in an interest-bearing account. He said he believes the city should begin such a procedure.

Councilman Russ McEwen suggested instead that the city consider decreasing the surcharge to only what's needed to pay the debt.

Mayor Cotton Mize indicated his concern that the sewer budget would be decreased below what's necessary to provide the services

Officer asks for additional personnel

Howard County's juvenile detention center needs additional employees, Juvenile Probation Officer Margie Thompson told county commissioners today.

The request was prompted by the detention of a male juvenile until an April 30 certification hearing to waive him to adult court.

Standards prohibit a female officer from guarding a male juvenile, District Judge James Gregg said.

Thompson, who said she doesn't know yet how many temporary employees she will hire, said long-term detention of this sort is unusual.

Approval was given today to hire a part-time secretary in the county welfare office on a motion by commissioner Bill Crooker during the regular meeting of the commissioner's court. Welfare and Indigent Health Care Coordinator Irene Rodriguez made the request for additional help during the meeting.

Rodriguez said she handles approximately 25 applications a month for indigent health care, and has been swamped with paper work. As a result, it has been difficult to leave the office to make home evaluations of the applicants, she said.

Commissioners also considered a new insurance package that County Treasurer Bonnie Franklin said would benefit both employees and the County.

Under the program, taxes and social security wouldn't be assessed on money deducted for child care or medical expenses, and take-home pay would increase as a

Student disputes penalty period

Dwayne Anderson, a 17-year-old junior honor student at Big Spring High School, would agree with any teacher that education is more important than athletics.

At the same time, Dwayne also believes athletics are an important part of his high school years.

He was just beginning to develop his playing talents on the varsity boy's basketball team this past semester, he says, when he was notified that he had failed the third six-week period of his computer math class.

Dwayne had played basketball about six weeks when the notification came.

According to Texas' no-pass, no-play ruling, Dwayne was ineligible to play ball for the next six weeks. As a result, he missed nearly all district action, he said.

The ruling bans students who have failed a six-week period from participating in all extracurricular activities for six weeks. The grade must be raised to at least 70 before the student can resume participate in such activities.

Dwayne received a 92 the first six weeks, an 84 the second six weeks and a 62 the third six weeks. Although he passed the course, Dwayne failed the third six-week period.

"I couldn't believe it; I was pretty sad at first, then I got a bad attitude," he said.

He attributes his failing six-week grade to at least two weekend tournaments in a row that caused him to miss several days of classes.

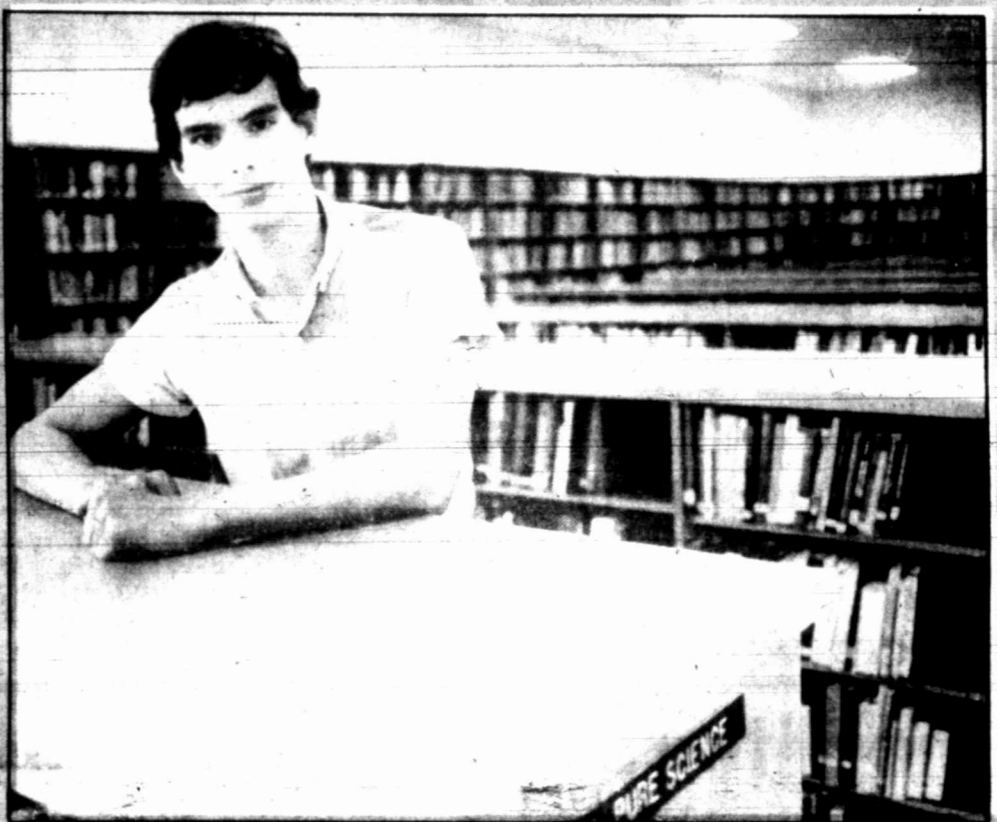

Actually, it was during the final three weeks of the semester that he got behind in his work and had to take several zeros on incomplete projects, he said.

Notices are sent to parents of students who are failing after the first three weeks of each six-week period. Dwayne didn't receive a notice, and said he wasn't prepared for the failure report.

Dwayne said he questions the purpose of a rule that punishes a student who passes his semester courses, while allowing others to participate who have failed a course but passed a six-week grading period.

It's possible for a student to fail the first two six-week periods and pass the third, thus failing the course overall — but remain eligible for activities during the fourth six-week period, Big Spring High School principal Murray Murphy explained.

It is, Dwayne pointed out, the semester grade that remains on the transcript, not the Having experienced the penalty of the no-pass, no-play rule, Dwayne Anderson is one Big Spring student who would like to see a change in the period from six weeks to three weeks. More than a dozen bills have been introduced into the state Legislature to change the ruling — most amend the penalty to a shorter period.

six-week grade.

"I just don't think that's fair at all," he said. Murphy acknowledges that is "a major problem — it's purely built on the six-week basis."

Dwayne said he knows of two students who actually failed a six-week period, but whose teachers went easy on them and issued them passing report cards.

He has seen discrimination both in favor and against athletes, but is quick to add that his failure can't be blamed on his teacher.

"I got behind and just couldn't get caught up," he said.

Dwayne said he tried to come in after school to make up the work, missing several practices in the effort.

Because of a zero hour half-credit health class he was taking before the regular school day began, he said he was unable to make up the missed work before school. The class was part of the required honors curriculum, he said.

Students who fail state-approved honors class can participate in extracurricular activities, provided they receive an exemption, Murphy said. He can grant an exemption the first time failure in an honors class occurs for a student; parental request is needed for an exemption the second time.

Dwayne's computer math class wasn't considered an honors class, although he said he needed the class to comply with honors diploma requirements.

"Everyone thinks it's kind of unfair," Dwayne said, expressing the sentiment of other students about the no-pass, no-play penalty.

He said he hopes that the penalty period of the ruling will be shortened.

Stock prices fall following Texaco bankruptcy filing

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. became the biggest U.S. company ever to file for bankruptcy protection in a move it blamed on Pennzoil Co.'s "greed" for trying to collect an $11.1 billion judgment from a battle over Getty Oil Co.

Texaco said its filing Sunday under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code would prevent its devastation while it appeals the judgment. The action drew an angry response, however, from Pennzoil, which now faces a complex fight to collect from a company 18 times its size.

Stock prices of both companies tumbled today.

Orders to sell companies' stocks swamped the New York Stock Exchange when it opened, causing trading in the two stocks to be temporarily delayed. Once trading began, Texaco's stock fell $3.12 1/2 a share to $28.75, and Pennzoil's stock plunged $12.75 a share to $79.50.

Analysts said Texaco's move could pressure both companies to settle their bitter dispute, in which Pennzoil accused Texaco of illegally interfering in a planned merger between Pennzoil and Getty in 1984.

Baine P. Kerr, chairman of Pennzoil's executive committee, accused Texaco of arrogant, improper behavior.

Texaco president James W. Kinnear said Pennzoil had "bludgeoned Texaco with unreasonable demands" and "placed its own greed above any consideration of fundamental fairness or the public welfare."

Texaco, the country's third-largest oil company, remains solvent, analysts said, and its day-to-day operations should be unaffected. But the filing gives Texaco a reprieve from creditors, freezes Pennzoil's attempts to seize Texaco assets and places Texaco under strict supervision of a federal court.

"This was a most difficult, painful and wrenching decision for me and the other members of Texaco's board of directors," Kinnear, the company's chief executive officer, told a New York news conference.

"However, we had no choice in the matter," he said. "We were, quite simply, forced to make a Chapter 11 filing because Pennzoil has rejected any reasonable basis for settling the absurd $11.1 billion

Hockley County pursuing Collider

LEVELLAND (AP) — Northeastern Hockley County is mostly a land of farms, pump jacks, isolated homes and an occasional small town.

But the county is making a run for a $4 billion energy research project that could bring more than 2,000 top scientists to the doorstep, as well as an army of construction workers.

The project sought is the proposed superconducting supercollider that the federal Department of Energy wants to build.

"I think it's a great idea. Everybody over here is pretty thrilled," commented Hockley County Judge Don Avery, although he concedes there's tough competition among a dozen Texas sites — including Garden City — along with other out-of-state locations.

"It's kind of like filling an inside straight," Avery said. "The odds aren't that good."

"All of Hockley County needs some help, and I think (SSC) would help," commented Ruth St. Clair outside the Smyer Community Center, in this city of 11,000 west of Lubbock.

It would bring some employment to COLLIDER page 2A

this area. A lot of people are out looking for jobs."

Not many in Hockley County appear to know much about a super-collider or the scientific research, but there is widespread knowledge about what it could do to turn around a county hit hard economically by a downturn in farming and oil industries.

"Our little area needs something here for a lift. Farming has been so bad," observed Smyer Alderman Charlotte Kiser.

Anton City Manager Larry Conkin voiced a similar opinion: "I'm sure people would be thrilled if something came in here and helped our economy. We've got lots of boarded up and vacant buildings in downtown Anton."

And Levelland could use the boost, given its close reliance on an oil industry that has soured enough to contribute to a 9 percent unemployment rate for the city.

Projections call for the project to employ about 4,500 workers in the construction phase and 2,500 technical and professional employees on the site once it's completed.

"In essence we would be building another Texas Tech out there in terms of professional personnel," said Dr. Ernst Kiesling, chairman of Tech's civil engineering department and coordinator of Lubbock's site characterization study on the collider.

The support for the project among Hockley County's community leadership also extends to some of those whose property is on or near where the SSC would be located.

The 17,000-acre Spade Ranch is located in the southern portion of the proposed SSC and near where the main buildings for the project would be located. Elwood Keeney, one of the ranch principals, offered support for the SSC.

"Anything that's going to do this county some good financially, I'm not going to have any objections," Kenney said.

According to the Hockley County Farmers Home Administration office, farm land in the vicinity of the SSC now sells for $200 to $400 an acre. FmHA official Bob Sparkman declined to speculate on how much the land values would increase for the SSC.

But Dr. Mason Somerville, Texas Tech engineering dean and one of many advisers on the SSC, said cost projections take into account the possibility a huge increase in land values — to as much as $1,500 an acre, or a total of $30 million to acquire up to 20,000 acres.

Police beat

Shoplifters arrested in three incidents

Shoplifters robbed three Big Spring department stores Saturday afternoon and evening.

Three bicycles, valued at $249.57, and a $12.27 pair of bolt cutters were taken from in front of Wal-Mart.

A shoplifter was arrested at K-Mart Saturday afternoon after being observed exiting the store without paying for six flashlights, valued at $56.76, which he was seen placing into his coat pocket.

A shoplifter was arrested at Wonder World Saturday afternoon after leaving the store without paying for 11 mini mag lights valued at $131.89.

Someone broke into Putt Around Golf, 3202 E. Interstate 20, early this morning, causing $50 damage to a vent fan grill. Nothing was reported stolen.

Clydette Martin, 2900 W. Highway 80 Apt. 18, told police she was assaulted three times by someone she knows between 7 p.m. Friday and 5 p.m. Saturday. She was treated at Scenic Mountain Medical Center for bruises to her neck and shoulder, police reports state.

Mary Hernandez, 626 N.W. Third St., told police that someone she knows struck her in the mouth with his fist Saturday night. She was taken to Hall-Bennett Hospital for medical treatment.

A window was damaged, a $50, 22-caliber revolver and a $3 flashlight were stolen in the rear apartment at 816 N.W. Fifth St., resident James Howell told police. The incident occurred between 1 and 8 p.m. Saturday.

Two windows were shot out of 801 Wyoming St. between 4:05 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. Saturday, owner Robert Scott, 3208 Cornell St., told police.

Someone damaged a window at the residence of Shirlene Gunter, 3602 Hunter St., at 9 p.m. Sunday.

Timothy Lee Threats, 17, 511 S. Goliad St., was arrested at 100 S. Goliad St. Saturday night on charges of possessing drug paraphernalia and marijuana under two ounces, possessing alcohol while under age 21, resisting arrest, evading arrest, and on a warrant for criminal mischief, according to police reports. He was transferred to the county jail and released on a total of $2,750 bonds.

Eugene Maxwell William, 23, 1002 N. Main St., was arrested Saturday on suspicion theft. He was transferred to the county jail and released on $1,000 bond.

Allen Richard Frecke, 18, of Huntington Beach, Calif., was arrested at 1601 S. Gregg St. early Sunday morning on suspicion of theft.

Rosendo Cruz Rodriguez, 17, 107 Algerita St., was arrested at 107 Belvedere St. Saturday night on suspicion of theft over $200 but under $750. He was transferred to the county jail and released on $1,000 bond.

Trina Dianne Henderson, 25, 1202 Stanford St., was arrested at 500 S. Birdwell Lane early Sunday morning on a warrant for theft. She was transferred to the county jail and released on $1,000 bond.

William Dean Woodard, 17, 1202 Harding St., was arrested at 600 Goliad St. Sunday on a warrant for driving while intoxicated.

Andrew Perry, 28, of El Paso was arrested at 200 N.W. Second St. early Sunday morning, charged with driving without a license.

Surcharge

and a government-mandated renovation.

He suggested addressing the matter at a future work session, so that solutions can be discussed.

A 1979 city ordinance set a $1.25 per customer per month surcharge on sewer system bills to finance the city's waterworks and sewer system revenue bonds series 1979, according to city records.

None of the present Council members, the mayor or city department heads, except Ferguson, held their respective positions then, Watkins said.

The city code states the surcharge is now $2. Watkins said he believes the charge was increased in 1981. The code states the charge will remain in effect until the bonds are paid.

Public Works Director Tom Decell has said the city has approximately 9,000 sewer accounts.

The figures indicate approximately $216,000 a year is collected with the surcharge. Of that, $160,000 is the minimum needed annually to pay the debt, Watkins said. The difference is $56,000.

Watkins said he doesn't know what to advise the Council do about the estimated half-million dollars that he says should have been placed into the account over the past eight years.

He noted the city has approximately $700,000 in a cash reserve fund. Ferguson agreed with that figure.

Watkins said that in a discussion with Mize, City Manager Mack Wofford and others, he listed ways the city could save money. He said this morning that in his opinion the city has 10-15 too many employees, and suggested reducing the number of police cars.

Texaco

Texaco judgment."

Texaco and Pennzoil have been fighting in Texas and federal courts since a Houston jury agreed that Texaco unfairly acquired Getty and awarded Pennzoil a record $10.5 billion damages.

The Texas Court of Appeals cut the award by $2 billion, but with interest Texaco owes $11.1 billion. Last week the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Texas law requires Texaco to post a bond in that amount while it appeals the judgment.

A hearing on the bond had been scheduled today in a Texas appellate court in Houston, but the hearing was stayed because of the bankruptcy filing.

Kinnear said uncertainty over the outcome of the dispute has frightened Texaco customers, lenders and suppliers, making it difficult for the company to arrange credit and conduct business. Texaco immediately suspended a $3-a-share annual dividend on its common stock and said interest and principal on its publicly held debt also would not be paid.

Texaco's stock value eroded while Pennzoil's stock soared in recent days because of the dispute. On Friday, Texaco dropped 37 1/2 cents a share to $31.87 1/2, and Pennzoil jumped $5.25 to $92.25.

Texaco acknowledged that it purposefully announced before financial markets opened today that the company had filed the Chapter 11 petition in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in White Plains, where Texaco is headquartered.

Kerr, of the Houston-based Pennzoil, said he was surprised and annoyed.

"It shows in my judgment an arrogance and disregard for the whole judicial process and an attempt to use the bankruptcy laws improperly," Kerr said. "They talked a lot about making a settlement offer, but the fact is that they have never offered anything substantial or anything close to what we or anybody else would have expected or thought to be appropriate."

Asked in an ABC interview whether he believed Pennzoil would collect on the award, Kerr said: "I'm not too worried about that. They have enormous assets. They're not bankrupt. They have no business in the bankruptcy system. We are their largest creditor and I think we'll collect our debt."

Outside observers disagreed, arguing that Texaco's move would likely prolong legal wrangling with Pennzoil for years, thereby pressuring Pennzoil to settle the case. Analysts also said the bankruptcy filing could improve Texaco's cash position by temporarily freeing it from paying interest on debts. "Ultimately, it will be good news for Texaco and it will be bad news for Pennzoil," said Martin Klein, attorney with Dreyer & Traub in New York and former chairman of American Bar Association's Bankruptcy Litigation Committee. "It's almost like a weight has been lifted off of Texaco's shoulders."

With $35 billion in assets, Texaco is the largest U.S. company to file for Chapter 11 protection.

Commissioners

result, Franklin said.

The county would save money because it wouldn't be paying social security on the amount deducted for those services, she said.

Commissioners approved a motion to have Franklin send out letters describing the Cafeteria Plan to all employees.

Franklin also informed the commissioner's court of the 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act that will require the county to verify future employees' eligibility by examining proper documents.

Under the law, prospective employees must present a U.S. passport, a certificate of U.S. citizenship, a certificate of naturalization, a resident alien card or an unexpired foreign passport with work authorization endorsement.

They can also provide two of the following documents and be eligible for employment: A social security card, birth certificate, work authorization card with driver's license, state issued identification card or another approved I.D. card, she said.

Both the employee and a county official will be required to sign a form stating that the documents meet the requirements of the reform act, she said.

In other action the court: Commissioners discussed installing an alarm system in the Courthouse annex at the request of Tax Assessor/Collector Dorothy Moore. County Judge Milton Kirby said he would look into a system that would connect the annex to the sheriff's office. Moore also said typewriters in the tax office need repairs. The annex will have an open house at 2 p.m. April 27, Kirby said.

Approved the treasurer's quarterly report of a total cash balance and certificates of deposit at $4,480,078.20.

County Auditor Jackie Olson presented the monthly financial report of $4.3 million in all county funds.

The commissioner's court approved a request to purchase a photocopying machine for $4,930 to be placed in the District Clerk's Office.

Commissioners approved authorization to advertise bids on two county dump trucks and two pick-up trucks that need to be replaced. The current trucks are at least six years old, County Engineer Bill Mims said.

County Librarian Judith Gray said she would ask the court to drop a $1.50 fee charged to non-resident users of the county library. Martin and Glasscock residents are charged the fee, but often support the Big Spring area economically by shopping here, she said.

Gray also said the library will no longer accept employment applications unless an opening is available. All current applications will be disposed of, she said.

Sheriff's log

Four arrested on charges of intoxication

Jerry Lee Dugan, 56, 1601 Meadow, was released early Sunday morning on a $1,000 bond. He had been arrested at 12 a.m. on Rockhouse Road on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, first offense.

Clifford Arvin Hart, 23, 3234 Drexel Ave., was released Sunday after serving time and paying a fine on a capias warrant.

Ricky Dale Martin, 33, 3222 Auburn, was released Sunday after serving 26 days on a driving while intoxicated judgment, second offense.

Bill Clarence King, 48, Coahoma, was released after serving time on a driving while intoxicated judgment.

Leslie Robert Lloyd, 21, 3900 Parkway, was released Sunday after serving 24 hours on a driving while intoxicated judgment.

Roger Dale Northcutt, 39, 105 E. 17th St., was released Sunday on bonds totaling $700. He had been arrested at 12 a.m. Sunday at the intersection of Todd Road and U.S. 87 on suspicion of unlawfully carrying a weapon and public intoxication.

Girl injured in car accident

An 11-year-old Big Spring girl suffered minor injuries as a passenger of a pickup that drove into a house at 3002 Parkway St. Sunday night.

Misty Clark, 1416 S. Johnson St., was treated and released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Clark and 31-year-old Carolyn Clark of that address were passengers in a gray and blue Chevrolet pickup driven by Brenda Blackwell Riffy, 34, 701 S. Bell St. Neither of the two adults were reported injured.

Riffy was driving east in the 1800 block of Wason Road at the Town and Country convenience store when a vehicle pulled off Parkway in front of her, she told police.

In order to miss hitting the vehicle, she veered hard left, but accidentally pushed the accelerator rather than the brake. Her pickup struck the house behind the store.

The house is occupied by Joe Dominguez, police reports state.

Riffy was ticketed for failure to control speed.

'Super Tuesday'

may prompt shift away from South

ATLANTA (AP) — The "Super Tuesday" primaries to be held by at least 16 states next March are designed to swing the spotlight to the South, but some politicians worry they may instead add importance to the traditional early contests in Iowa and New Hampshire.

The Democratic Leadership Council, a group of moderate and conservative Democrats, is worried enough to be planning a publicity campaign, including panel discussions in Super Tuesday states featuring notables such as Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and former Virginia Gov. Charles Robb.

"If what we do induces candidates to look up from the corn fields (of Iowa) and head to the Super Tuesday states to do some campaigning, I don't think that's a bad thing at all," said council policy director Will Marshall.

Getting candidates and their staffs into Dixie was one of the primary goals of Southerners, who aimed for a coordinated March 8, 1988, primary date to combat the impact of February's Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primary.

"They've always been, as far as I'm concerned, too important," said Al LaPierre, executive director of the Alabama Democratic Party.

At stake on Super Tuesday will be more than one-fourth of the delegates to both the Republican and Democratic conventions.

But some politicians argue the sheer size of Super Tuesday, and its date soon after Iowa and New Hampshire, will make those two early contests even more crucial. The theory is that because they won't have the time or money to campaign throughout the Super Tuesday states, candidates will try to impress those states with news coverage of their showings in Iowa and New Hampshire.

"There's one school of thought that Super Tuesday will basically magnify the result of the early contests, Iowa and New Hampshire. We think if things continue as they are today, that probably is true," Marshall said. "But we also think there is still time to change the dynamic."

He said the Democratic Leadership Council will stage events in the Super Tuesday states to try to "put New Hampshire and Iowa in the proper perspective" and to convince candidates they must immediately start courting Super Tuesday conservatives and moderates who helped elect Ronald Reagan.

Nunn, who has refused to rule out a presidential bid of his own, has argued that candidates should prepare for Super Tuesday now because it may open a Democratic race muddled by the early votes.

Southern party officials report presidential candidates are showing interest with appearances in the region.

"I think the candidates are coming in a little earlier," said Ken Eudy, executive director of the North Carolina Democratic Party.

The same trend has been noticed in Texas, but Ed Martin, the state's Democratic executive director, said it is difficult to gauge how much candidates are responding to Super Tuesday and how much to the state's switch from a caucus system to a primary.

While predicting that candidates will swarm over the South before the primary, LaPierre said, "Unless you're the front-runner or have a lot of bucks, it's going to be a logistical nightmare to try to run a major campaign in all the states."

He said some candidates may have to select a few Super Tuesday states for major efforts.

Campaign staffs remain heavily weighted toward Iowa and New Hampshire.

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, for example, keeps seven paid staffers in Iowa and five in New Hampshire but none in the South.

"You have to do well in Iowa and New Hampshire ... because we've discovered that Southerners do not want to waste a vote on someone who does not perform well in those forums," said deputy press secretary Vada Manager.

Conservative and moderate hopes for Super Tuesday also could be hurt if the Rev. Jesse Jackson unites the region's large black vote and gains a sizeable block of liberal delegates.

On the other hand, last week's decision by Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., to run could bring more attention to the Southern Super Tuesday states.

Videotape fought over

AMHERST, Mass. — Videotapes showing a teen-ager dying of cyanide poisoning during a live, closed-circuit TV show at Hampshire College are at the center of a three-way fight over who should get ownership of them.

The mother of 17-year-old Andrew L. Hermann, the college and the tapes' producer have been arguing over them since they were made last April 16 by students who thought the teen-ager was joking when he collapsed on camera.

District Attorney Edward Etheredge's office has possession of the tapes and has asked Hampshire County Superior Court to determine the rightful owner, but he said the parties are trying to work out an agreement in the meantime.

The producer, Philip Jackson, 24, now a senior at the progressive college, maintains the tapes belong to him because of a college policy granting ownership of academic work to students.

He said he has no intention of distributing the tapes.

"They're not very graphic," he said. "Somebody drinking a cup of fluid, walking offstage and lying down is not exactly what people are worried about."

Four die in air crashes

Engine failure forced a commuter plane to make an emergency landing in Massachusetts, an amphibious plane slammed into a California waterway and a small plane crashed near a Maine neighborhood's barbecue pit in weekend crashes that left four dead and 11 injured.

Provincetown Boston Airlines Flight 1032, bound for Massachusetts' Nantucket Island with a pilot and eight passengers aboard, had just taken off Sunday when it had to land on a fire road off the end of the runway, said Carolyn Conlin and Tim Snow of the airline.

Off the coast of California, a twin-engine Grumman Widgeon crashed Sunday into the Santa Barbara Channel and burst into flames when it hit the water.

Witnesses in Berwick, Maine, said a Cessna 172 crashed Saturday near a swimming pool and barbecue stand in a housing development. Four teen-agers were aboard the plane, and all died in the crash.

Gas prices on the rise

LOS ANGELES — The average retail price of gasoline was 6 cents higher this month than last April, and an industry analyst predicts prices will continue to rise.

"This continues the overall rise in prices since they bottomed out last November," Trilby Lundberg, publisher of the Lundberg Survey, said Sunday.

She said the trend was sparked by rising wholesale costs. Prices may also go up because May is the start of seasonal gasoline consumption increases, Ms. Lundberg said.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz, right, and his wife, Helena, arrive at Moscow's Sheremetyevo Airport Monday morning for talks with Soviet officials on U.S.-Soviet relations.

Arms talks Moscow meeting 'humiliating'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union said today it is humiliating for Secretary of State George P. Shultz to meet Soviet officials in Moscow, and the discussions should have been held elsewhere.

Shultz began talks today with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, hoping to negotiate a treaty that would rid Europe of medium-range missiles and give the United States and its allies the right to match 130 shorter-range rockets stationed in East Germany, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union.

"I think it's rather humiliating for Mr. Shultz to meet Shevardnadze in Moscow at this particular time when our security is an incredible mess, largely because of Soviet machinations," former Ambassador Malcolm Toon said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "I think he should have met him outside of Moscow — Helsinki or Stockholm, some neutral capital — if in fact there is a chance of moving ahead toward a constructive relationship between us."

"If that's the case, then he should have met, but not in Moscow, I don't think," said Toon, who served as U.S. ambassador in Moscow from 1976 to 1979.

"I think there is a prospect of making progress on a long-range intermediate missile agreement in Europe," Toon said, "but I think ... we've got to be awfully careful that while ... we're negotiating that sort of agreement, we also negotiate a reduction in the shorter range missiles because of the tremendous conventional superiority that the Soviets have in Europe."

The Senate last week passed a resolution calling on Shultz to cancel his Moscow trip or hold his talks in a more secure place than Moscow. Sen. Bob Dole said the protest was symbolic and not meant to jeopardize the Reagan administration's chance at an arms agreement.

"Notwithstanding my statements on all the bugging and spying, it is an important mission," Dole, the Senate Republican leader, said Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"I happen to believe that if Secretary Shultz and the Soviets can't reach some agreement and some timetable, we're not going to have an arms control agreement in the Reagan administration," the Kansas senator said.

Man killed in floods

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Up to six inches of rain fell in eastern and northern Puerto Rico, causing flash floods that killed one man, Civil Defense officials reported.

The officials said the body of 45-year-old Juan Ortega Vega of Guaynabo was recovered Sunday after his car was carried away by floodwaters as he tried to cross a bridge in Guaynabo, a suburb of San Juan.

In sectors of Vega Baja, about 15 miles west of San Juan, helicopters were mobilized to help rescue people off the roofs of their homes, the Civil Defense officials said. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity.

No figures were available on the number of people evacuated.

Pope returns to Rome

ROME — Pope John Paul II, returning from a two-week pilgrimage to South America, today condemned the violence that broke out between police and leftist demonstrators during a Mass in Chile.

He called the clash, in which about 260 people were injured, a "brutal action," and added, "one cannot remain indifferent to such a show of violence."

The pope was questioned by Chilean and Argentine journalists at the end of a 13-hour flight from Buenos Aires, Argentina, the final stop on a trip that also took him to Uruguay and Chile.

The Aerolineas Argentinas Boeing 747 landed at Rome's Ciampino Airport early this afternoon.

John Paul was asked about the riot that disrupted his Mass in a Santiago park on April 3, during which rock-throwing demonstrators battled police using tear gas and water cannons.

Clergy opposes new rule

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Black Archbishop Desmond Tutu today defied a new police decree by urging more than 700 people at an Anglican church service to join in calling for the release of people detained without charge.

The overflow crowd at St. George's Cathedral included ambassadors from the United States, Canada, Sweden and Austria, and other foreign diplomats.

U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins joined the widening protest today. Perkins, the first black U.S. ambassador to South Africa, issued a statement condemning the new state-of-emergency regulations as he arrived at the church.

Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize and the highest ranking Anglican clergyman in southern Africa, told the congregation, "I will continue to urge, as I do now, the authorities to release all detainees or bring them to court. And I hope you support me in such a call. Do you?"

Hundreds in audience shouted back, "Yes!" and the congregation broke into applause for 20 seconds.

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the state.

Urges against raising speed limit

There is not much of a chance that Texas will retain the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit. The highway bill allowing states to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on most stretches of interstate highways is law, and a lot of people want to drive fast, regardless of the likely increase in deaths and fuel use.

The highway commission — and legislators who might think about changing the truck speed limit — ought to consider the probable carnage that would ensue if people were given the green light to speed on interstates. The current average on interstates is roughly 65 mph now. With a 65 mph limit, the traffic will likely move up to 75, wasting lives and fuel unnecessarily.

Texas doesn't have to change the speed limit, and it would be good if the commission and lawmakers decided not to go along with the crowd on this one.

Texans 'need their air space'

Yeah, we've heard about smokers' rights. Smokers should have rights. However, let's hear it for breathers' rights. They should take precedence.

The Texas Senate struck a blow for people who like to breathe when it approved a bill restricting smoking to designated areas in public places.

The Texas Smoke-Free Indoor Act would require businesses, stores, restaurants, bars and other establishments to limit smoking to designated areas except for the smallest establishments that have no room to make provisions. As many as 40 states and 800 cities have done likewise.

The long-range effects of ambient smoke have been documented, although the tobacco lobby will dispute them. What is beyond dispute is that people with allergies and respiratory problems are affected by smokers' exhaust, and that the smoke is otherwise an unpleasant nuisance. Texans need their air space. This legislation gives it to them.

Texaco fight should be in Texas

The unanimous U.S. Supreme Court ruling that a federal district court in New York had no right to interfere in the Pennzoil suit against Texaco in the Texas state courts was an important affirmation of both the primacy of the state judiciary and the maintenance of equal protection under the law.

The immediate issue involves the posting of an $11 billion bond by Texaco, an amount equaling the damages awarded Pennzoil by a trial jury and affirmed Dec. 10, 1985. Texaco tried an end run around the state judicial system by securing a bond reduction to $1 billion by Federal District Court Judge Charles Briaent in White Plains, N.Y., Texaco's corporate headquarters.

Texaco, fighting for its corporate life, understandably utilized every legal means possible to win the day. But now that the diversions have been thwarted and the case is back where it belongs, it is time for Texaco and Pennzoil to end this workfare program for attorneys and try to negotiate an equitable settlement.

Texas needs to 'blow its horn'

Despite its Sun Belt locale and amenities that include miles of sandy beaches, historic sites and amusement parks galore, Texas has a poor record of attracting tourists.

In light of many tourist attractions, the tourism-travel white paper found that Texas spends less than a nickel per capita advertising itself and concluded that Texas is not aggressive enough in seeking tourist dollars.

Tourism is a fast-growing, highly competitive business. It's clean, requires little public sector investment and attracts heavy private enterprise investment.

Politicians have for a long time lived by the adage that if you don't promote yourself, no one will do it for you. It's time for Texas to quit resting on its laurels and start blowing its own horn.

Says Clements must be realistic

Croakings of gloom and alarm from the upper echelons can be virtually guaranteed to sow panic in the lower ranks.

Even conceding that much, though, you have to wonder whether it isn't time for Gov. Bill Clements to lay off the Pollyanna act and acknowledge the formidable challenges facing the state just now.

Clements, you see, is involved in a little difference of opinion with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and state Treasurer Ann Richards, both of whom are predicting that state checks will begin to bounce next autumn unless lawmakers enact substantial tax increases.

The governor, however, was having none of that. "Let's wait to see what happens," he said. "Let's don't push the panic button too early."

Hobby and Richards have offered mature, informed counsel. The governor would be wise to act on it — and he would do well to remember that when the time does come to push the panic button, it's generally too late.

Approves affirmative action ruling

Controversy thrives in the U.S. Supreme Court decision for affirmative action in a California hiring case. But the case only seems to prove one item: that such cases can't be dealt with wholesale, but on a case-to-case basis.

Any employer, whether there is a history of discrimination in the firm or not, should aim for a better balance of employees. If a white, Anglo male has qualifications far above any other minority, he should be hired. If the qualifications between the two are similar, why not hire the minority, give him or her the step up? At the same time, it does a disservice to minority hiring if a minority is given a promotion when not capable of handling the job.

Supreme Court judges saw that the employer had taken the right steps and made the right decision. And they affirmed it.

Industry experts say fake bolts still threat to safety

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Eight years after a federal agency warned that substandard steel bolts in commercial airliners could lead to disaster, bogus bolts still pose a threat to air travelers.

"As few as three bogus bolts in the wing root assembly of a jumbo jet could potentially cause the crash of that aircraft and the death of all its hundreds of passengers and crew," a 1979 Federal Trade Commission report warned. The report documented 11 instances where the dangerously weak bolts were found in airplanes.

Despite the uproar that greeted the 1979 report, back-alley bolt shops are still operating, industry experts told our associate Stewart Harris. The momentary publicity, plus tighter controls by aircraft companies, forced some of the potential killers out of business, but others simply got better at covering their tracks.

"I suspect they did a little of both," said Jim Costello of Standard Pressed Steel in Jenkintown, Pa., one of the largest makers of high-strength aviation bolts in the country.

Here, for example, are two recent cases known to Costello:

• About 18 months ago, a West Coast machine shop cut off the ends and re-threaded several SPS bolts. This drastically altered the temper of the carefully crafted bolts. The machine shop tried to get the dangerously altered bolts certified by a laboratory, but the lab instead turned them over to an SPS affiliate in the area, which identified them as bogus, reworked

• Air Italia last year found a box of out-and-out counterfeit bolts on its shelf. The counterfeiters had put the SPS trademark on their phony fasteners. They looked like similar counterfeits found years earlier at Aerospatiale, maker of the A-300 Airbus jumbo jet.

The Federal Aviation Administration has recorded only one instance of a bogus fastener since the 1979 report: In 1983, the FAA issued an alert on bogus nuts made by a Florida firm and provided to Pratt & Whitney for engines.

They did not meet specifications, and the alert warned that "there is a potential that some of these parts may have entered the commercial aviation market and could cause an unsafe condition." Pratt & Whitney discarded the bogus nuts.

Unlike cheap counterfeits found in other industries, most of the bogus aviation bolts are not imports, but domestically modified, high-tech bolts originally made to exact standards by reputable manufacturers.

High-quality aviation bolts are about the strongest industrial fasteners money can buy — but it takes a lot of money to buy them. They're designed to withstand repeated shocks of 160,000 pounds per square inch or more, and they take days to manufacture. A rush job can run the cost up to hundreds or even thousands of dollars per bolt.

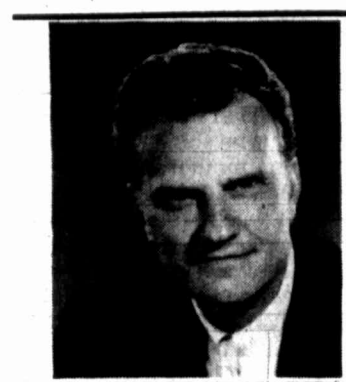

Like Costello of SPS, distributor Roy Oliver of Inglewood, Calif., is convinced that the threat is still there. He told us of firms that regularly place orders with him for bolts of a specified length "or longer."

"This is a tipoff that the bolt will be cut and replated," Oliver explained. Both steps require reheating the bolts, which were carefully tempered by the manufacturer; the reheating leaves them either too soft or too brittle.

"The frequency of bogus parts getting into the system is probably continuing at the same basic rate" as in the early 1980s, said Oliver, who has been working for 10 years to stop the flow of bogus bolts.

Another West Coast distributor, who requested anonymity, told us that at least one major airplane maker still resells bolts — some of them rejects — that are swept up from the floor of its assembly line. The 1979 FTC report noted that this was one source of inexpensive material for the bogus-bolt shops.

80-year-old Christian says God is faithful

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am 89 years old, and I have been a Christian 80 of those years. I see so many young people today who believe that God is useless, but I know through personal experience that that is not true. Life has not always been easy (in fact at times it has been very hard), but God has always been faithful. — Mrs. E.R.

DEAR MRS. E.R.: Thank you for your testimony about God's faithfulness. Yes, no matter what problems we face in life, Christ is always faithful and He never abandons us. "Because of the Lord's great love we are not consumed, for his compassions never fail. They are new every morning; great is your faithfulness ... The Lord is good to those whose hope is in him, to the one who seeks him" (Lamentations 3:22-23, 25).

One reason I wanted to print your letter is that it reminds me of several spiritual truths we need to recall. The first is what I have just said: God is always faithful to His promises.

Perhaps someone is reading this who is facing some kind of difficulty, and that person is wondering if God really cares. Yes, He does — as you have discovered repeatedly during the 80 years you have known Christ. Even when doubts come, "he will remain faithful, for he cannot disown Himself" (2 Timothy 2:13). We do not face our problems alone when we know Christ and are trusting Him.

Your letter reminds me also of our need to be faithful to Christ. It is easy for us to begin the race — but it also is easy for us to drop out of the race when the going gets tough. Your example of remaining faithful to Christ during your long life is a challenge to all who are younger.

Near the end of his life the Apostle Paul could look back and say, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith" (2 Timothy 4:7). May this be true of every one of us who claim to belong to Christ.

Affirmative action ruling prejudicial

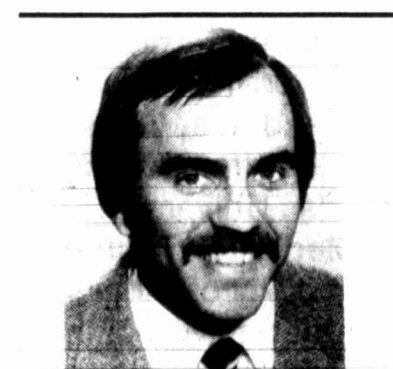

By STEPHEN CHAPMAN

In recent years, the issue of civil rights has been dominated by a conflict between two ideas of how to bring about racial and sexual equality: One that favors removing barriers of discrimination, and one that wants to compensate for past discrimination by mandating preferential treatment for its victims. Last week, the Supreme Court came down in the latter camp.

The ruling was the latest in a long string of bad decisions on this topic. It was notable in allowing preferential treatment even though there was no past discrimination to undo.

But the damage to principle is greater than the effect on practice. The verdict doesn't mean that companies will rush to install new hiring and promotion programs to help minorities and women. It simply means that those plans already in place are largely exempt from court scrutiny.

The case involved a white man who was passed over for a job as a road dispatcher for Santa Clara County in California, losing out to a woman who was marginally less qualified for the job. Justice William Brennan said the county had not violated the 1964 Civil Rights Act — which bars discrimination on the basis of race or sex, among other criteria — and that its policy was a "moderate, flexible, case-by-case approach to effecting a gradual improvement in the representation of minorities and women" in its work force.

The ruling was defective on both philosophical and legal grounds. The Civil Rights Act reflected a national consensus that minorities and women shouldn't suffer for their race or sex. In the place of the race — and sex-based standards of the past, it enshrined the ideal of blindness to such factors.

But the plan upheld by the court, like most affirmative action programs, returns race and sex to a central place in decisions about hiring and promotions — with minorities and women now favored instead of penalized.

Like the oppressive regime of the past, this one requires that innocent parties be punished for traits that are beyond their control. That the innocent parties now are white males doesn't make the principle morally appealing.

For the court to embrace this doctrine, it had to ignore the clear language and intent of the Civil Rights Act. Congress could have outlawed racial or sexual discrimination only against groups that historically had suffered from such bigotry.

Instead, it decreed that employers may not "discriminate against any individual...because of such individual's race, color, religion, sex or national origin (my emphasis)."

Santa Clara County is not making a benign effort to give minorities and women a fair chance. The plan says its ultimate goal is for women and minorities to be represented in every job category in close proportion to their numbers in the local population.

This policy rests on the absurd premise that in a world without discrimination, every occupational group would perfectly mirror the population as a whole.

In depicting the plan as "moderate" and "flexible," Brennan and company had to conclude that the county doesn't mean what it says. Its instructions require supervisors to explain, whenever a job is filled by a white male, why eligible minorities or women weren't hired instead — with a strongly implied threat to the supervisor's career prospects. If this is not a quota system, it comes close.

This reversal would be bad enough if it merely gave private employers, as Justice John Paul Stevens put it, some "breathing room" in dealing with minorities and women. In fact, those firms that don't now favor these groups are likely to feel coerced into doing so.

As Justice Antonin Scalia pointed out in his scathing dissent, the decision "effectively requires employers, public as well as private, to engage in intentional discrimination." Employers who grant preferential treatment to minorities and women are now shielded from lawsuits by minorities and women.

For most companies, Scalia argued, taking that risk would be "economic folly." The result is likely to be a general drift toward racial and sexual quotas.

Jews, Chinese-Americans and assorted other victims of prejudice have proven that bigotry is not a necessary bar to economic progress. Preferential discrimination of the sort upheld here starts from the premise that other groups, by contrast, can't succeed without special breaks. It not only inflicts an arbitrary penalty on white males who have done nothing wrong, but patronizes those whom it aims to help.

Steve Chapman is a member of the Chicago Tribune editorial board. His commentary is distributed by Tribune Media Services.

Hunts await ruling on offshore plan

DALLAS — The wealthy Hunt brothers are awaiting a ruling that lawyers claim is essential to their off-shore oil business.

Lamar Hunt, Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt, along with Placid Oil Co., are seeking approval for a $31 million financing plan to continue developing a deep-water oil production project they claim would extract 75 million barrels of oil from the Gulf of Mexico.

The oil company, owned by a joint trust of the brothers, filed for bankruptcy protection last August after 23 creditor banks sought to foreclose on assets in lieu of collecting more than $773 million in debts.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Harold C. Abramson heard nearly 10 hours of testimony Saturday. He must rule whether to allow Placid Oil to develop its Green Canyon drilling project off the Louisiana coast despite objections from 23 creditor banks who are attempting foreclosure on Hunt assets.

Abramson has told the Hunts and their creditors to return to court Tuesday.

The brothers claim they can reap $650 million in profits and salvage their beleaguered oil empire in the deep-sea drilling project if they win court approval to prevent creditors from raiding assets needed for the project.

Videotaped slaying trial to begin

DALLAS — A man charged with capital murder in the slaying of a convenience store customer whose death was captured on videotape is scheduled to go on trial this week.

It is the second time that a trial has started in the case. The first ended with an innocent man being freed after he spent eight months in jail before being exonerated as the jury selection for his capital murder trial began last September.

Andre Anthony Lewis, 20, is to be tried in the slaying of Matt McKay, a 17-year-old Oklahoma resident who died following the Nov. 21, 1985 robbery at a convenience store in suburban Carrollton.

The shooting was videotaped by a store security camera and was broadcast repeatedly by television networks during the search for McKay's killer.

A Michigan man was arrested and was on trial on the charge before new evidence proved his innocence and resulted in the indictment of Lewis.

Marvin Maurice Wells, of Flint, Mich., was implicated after a Dallas County jail inmate viewed the videotape and said two of the three robbers shown were suspects in another holdup at a gasoline station in suburban Mesquite.

Prosecutors dismissed the charge against Wells after a scientific comparison of the voice on the videotape with Wells' voice proved that he was not the gunman.

Officials say arson evident in fire

LUBBOCK — Authorities say a three-alarm fire that swept through the interior of the Red Raider Nite Club appears to have been deliberately set, perhaps to cover up a burglary.

The Sunday afternoon fire, punctuated by at least one explosion, was reported after several passing motorists saw smoke coming from the building.

Authorities said when they were able to enter the gutted club, the office safe was empty and standing open, leading investigators to believe the fire may have been set to cover up a burglary.

The burglary motive, though, is just one of several possibilities being investigated, officials said.

Assistant Fire Marshal Harold Eckles told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal late Sunday night that investigators have ruled arson to be the cause of the blaze, which left the building standing but caused extensive structural damage.

Third 1987 execution set tomorrow

HUNTSVILLE — A Houston man faced execution early Tuesday for the 1978 rape-slaying of a 13-year-old girl.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was considering last-minute appeals today for Anthony Charles Williams, who already has had two execution dates stayed by the courts.

Williams, 27, was convicted of the June 12, 1978, bludgeoning death of Vickie Lynn Wright of Houston. The girl was abducted from a bowling alley parking lot in a car Williams allegedly stole and then was strangled, raped and beaten about the head with a two-by-four board.

A week ago, the U.S. Supreme Court rejected by a 7-2 vote an emergency request and formal appeal filed in Williams' behalf. A new appeal then was filed and rejected late last week by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and a federal district judge in Houston.

Williams, who was 18 at the time, was arrested for the Wright slaying after neighbors tipped police that he had been seen driving the car. He was found hiding in a vacant house.

He has refused recent requests for interviews but in the past insisted he was innocent.

"I wouldn't even think about hitting no girl," he said. In 1983, Williams considered volunteering to be executed, saying he was innocent but was tired of waiting.

In a statement to police at the time of his arrest, however, Williams told of abducting her and taking her to a field.

"She told me she was scared," he said. "I got her out of the car and hit her two or three times. I then picked up a board and hit the girl in the head and she fell back into some bushes."

Prisons, abortion top state agenda

AUSTIN — The leader of an anti-abortion group said he was confident bills that would regulate late-term abortions would get the approval of the committees hearing testimony on them.

"Since we now have statistics from the Department Health on the number of late abortions occurring in Texas, it is much easier for us to make a case for a post-viable abortion ban," said Bill Price, director of the Texas Coalition for Life.

Price said witnesses in support of the measures today would include a former owner and operator of a Dallas abortion clinic.

"Because of the record number of co-sponsors that are supporting this bill (75 representatives and 11 senators) we are quite optimistic about our chances of getting anti-abortion legislation to the floor of both houses this session," he said.

Meanwhile, the state Attorney General's office headed today to Houston to prove to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice that it has improved the Texas prison system.

If the improvements don't meet to Justice's satisfaction, the state could end up with paying $800,000 dollars a day in fines.

The hearing is being held for Justice to consider the state's progress in complying with court mandated improvements and a motion by the state that the judge modify orders regarding the prison system.

Lake lovers wary of diversion plan

POTTSBORO — Mal Curtis has a job that many would envy. He spends his days fishing on Lake Texoma.

But Curtis, a fishing guide, fears his job could be jeopardized by a plan to divert water from Lake Texoma to provide drinking water in North Texas.

"I fish between 250 and 300 days a year. It's the only income my family has," said Curtis, 35. "If they kill this lake ... we can't survive. My boat'll be sitting on dry land."

The North Texas Municipal Water District, which supplies water to 50 customers including the Dallas suburbs of Richardson, McKinney, Garland and Mesquite, has a plan that has riled Curtis and other outdoor enthusiasts.

It is a proposed $34 million project to pipe water from Lake Texoma 27 miles to Sister Grove Creek, where it would flow 28 miles into Lake Lavon, northeast of Dallas.

"We need the water to provide for the continuing demands," said Reagan Cook, an official with the water district headquartered in Wylie near Dallas.

A number of outdoor and wildlife groups, led by the Oklahoma Wildlife Federation, filed suit April 3 in federal court in Tulsa.

They claim the water isn't needed as badly as the water district says.

Diabetes: The dark ages are past

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My 23-year-old granddaughter has diabetes that requires insulin injections. She's bright and determined to succeed despite this. She is presently on the job market and I think feels threatened by her problem. I know you have written positively about much worse ailments and wonder if you feel the same about diabetes. — Anon.

She doesn't need encouragement from me. All she has to do is contact any local branch of a diabetes organization (your phone book) and get the positive side of the coin. The dark ages of restrictions is long past and today people with insulin dependence are succeeding in just about any field you can mention.

She will very quickly learn to adapt her insulin needs to her employment schedule. A talk with her doctor might be helpful if she anticipates any trouble. Thanks to educational efforts by the various diabetes groups, employers today are quite positive about taking on young people with the illness. Examples of diabetics succeeding in specific fields, including Olympic competition, abound.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Son's freeloading friends become burden

Models wear Michael Kor's 1987 fall and winter fashion short skirts and tailored jackets Thursday in New York.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 25 years is an excellent provider, a non-smoker and non-drinker, he doesn't chase other women, and he's an elder in our church. But he allowed our son, "Dickie"—an only child—to quit school at 15 and get married at 16. We supported Dickie, his wife and child for five years. (We even gave his wife $1,000 for flying lessons.) They separated, so now Dickie and his son are living with us.

No sooner did they move in, when five of Dickie's friends (two girls and three boys) moved in on us! One of the girls has a 13-month-old child, is unmarried, and she's pregnant again by the same guy. I am not only raising our grandchild, but I have these five bums here all day long. They sleep till noon, play loud music all day and nobody works. They won't even pick up after themselves.

After three weeks, I told my husband I wanted those hoodlums out of our house. He put them up in a motel, but they were kicked out before the week was over for disturbing the peace. Now my husband has let them move into our beautiful home on the lake where all of our silver and fine furniture are stored! They have broken our crystal, burned holes in the couch and set wet glasses on our good wood furniture. And now I find they are stealing!

Dear Abby

I am ready to divorce my husband over this! He has paid lawyer fees, fines and bail money for these bums. What should I do? Don't tell me to talk to our pastor. He tells everything he knows.

HEARTSICK: I see several problems here: an uncaring son who allowed five friends of questionable character to sponge off you, abuse your property and steal from you; and a husband who gave you no support when you tried to get rid of these freeloader.

You and your husband should form a united front and order Dickie's friends off your property by nightfall. (Supervise their packing to be sure they don't get your things mixed up with theirs.) If you need the sheriff to escort them off your property, call him.

Once you're rid of that motley crew, go to work on making a man out of Dickie. You owe it to him because either you spoiled him rotten or he's mentally deficient. But that's another letter. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend hit me last night. He has hit me before, only this time he hit me harder than usual. Afterward he tells me how sorry he is, begs my forgiveness and tells me how much he loves me. He promises it will never happen again, but it does.

He refuses any counseling. He's so sweet to me at other times, but he has a violent temper.

I am considering marrying this man. Should I?

UNDECIDED IN HYATTSVILLE, MO.

DEAR UNDECIDED: Absolutely not! Tell him that unless he agrees to counseling now, you prefer to go your way and let him go his. Trust me. Your boyfriend's behavior is typical of a wife-beater. His promises mean nothing. Don't wait until his abusive behavior escalates into a full-blown beating.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Easter is nearly here, so if you plan to surprise a child with a live rabbit or a baby chick, please consider this: Living creatures need proper care, so unless you are certain that the rabbit or chick will receive the care it needs to survive, give a stuffed bird or animal instead. Living creatures are not "toys" to be mauled, abused or neglected.

DEAR ABBY: My wife has a degree in the medical field from a large, respected university, yet she thinks it's perfectly all right to allow our dog to drink out of the toilet bowl! The dog is even allowed to drink of our swimming pool. She says it won't hurt him. This makes no sense at all to me. The pool man puts chemicals into the pool to kill the algae, so wouldn't that be harmful to our dog?

Please hurry your answer. We are having words about this. This is a second marriage for both of us, and I can't afford another divorce.

DOG TIRED: Some dogs view toilets as humans view watering holes, and as long as the toilets are not contaminated with excessive amounts of strong disinfectants, detergents or bleaches, it won't hurt the dog. However, unless you know for certain that the water in your toilets is dog drinkable, you'd be wise to keep the lid down.

The swimming pool is another story. If the pool has been treated with a heavy dose of chemicals, your dog could get sicker than a dog.

Key dates in Texaco - Pennzoil battle

Texaco Inc. and Pennzoil Co. battle for control of Getty Oil Co.
Dec. 28, 1983:	Pennzoil Co. launches bid for Getty Oil Co.
Early 1984:	Getty Oil Co. contacts Texaco and others for competing bids.
Jan. 6, 1984:	Texaco reaches agreement to acquire Getty.
Feb. 8, 1984:	Pennzoil sues Texaco in Houston.
Nov. 19, 1985:	Jury returns a verdict in favor of Pennzoil and awards $7.53 billion in compensatory damages and $3 billion in punitive damages.
Jan. 10, 1986:	Injunction is granted against Pennzoil. Texaco must put up only $1 billion for a bond while it appeals the case.
Feb. 20, 1986:	A federal appeals court in New York upholds judge's ruling.
May 2, 1986:	Pennzoil asks the U.S. Supreme Court to review the appeals court decision.
April 6, 1987:	The U.S. Supreme Court rules unanimously that the judge should not have gotten involved in the issue of Texaco's bond before the Texas courts reviewed the matter.
April 7, 1987:	The Texas Court of Appeals puts the $11 billion bond requirements on hold pending a hearing Monday, April 13.
April 12, 1987:	Texaco announces that it has filed for bankruptcy in a federal court in White Plains, under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law for protection from its creditors.

Oil giant Texaco Inc., fighting an $11 billion judgment in favor of Pennzoil Co., filed Sunday for protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy laws, its president and chief executive officer James Kinnear said in New York Sunday. Texaco, the nation's third largest oil company, is also the largest U.S. industrial company to file for protection under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy laws.

Despite filing, Texas Texaco will continue

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Work will continue as normal at Texaco Inc.'s local plants, part of the Texaco holding company's operating subsidiaries unaffected by the company's Chapter 11 filing for protection from creditors, officials said.

At a Sunday evening press conference, Lee Townsend, Port Arthur area manager, read excerpts from a 10-page statement issued earlier by Texaco President James Kinnear and Chairman Alfred DeCrane. Townsend declined to answer questions, saying only that the filing would not affect the local plants.

"We'll be here tomorrow," he said. "We'll be here next month. We'll be here 10 years from now."

Texaco Refining and Marketing Inc. and Texaco Chemical Co., which own the two local plants, are considered separate subsidiaries of Texaco Inc. and therefore are not involved in the bankruptcy action, according to the statement.

Townsend said union leaders were informed of the filing earlier in the afternoon and had been given copies of the statement.

"Business will go on as usual," said Jerry Sparks, chairman of the workman's committee of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International at Texaco.

"The employees are not totally shocked," Townsend said with a pause and shrug, "but shocked. We'll have to wait to see what happens. Texaco employees are good employees — tough."

He said all employees should report for work as usual. The plants employ 6,900 people.

Mayor Malcolm Clark expressed disappointment but hope about the bankruptcy.

"I was disappointed to hear that," Clark said. "As I understand it, that it will have no effect on the refinery or marketing divisions here. It appears it is the main holding company filing this. They apparently felt this was the best way to recoup and have time to work out an arrangement between them and Pennzoil."

Pennzoil won a $11 billion judgment in state civil court for what Pennzoil claimed was Texaco's interference in a proposed merger between Getty and Pennzoil. An $11 billion bond required for Texaco to appeal the award in state court led to the Chapter 11 filing for protection from creditors.

Texaco operations in the Golden Triangle of Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange, which have an annual payroll of $125 million, fall under one of three subsidiaries: Texaco Refining & Marketing Inc., Texaco Chemical Co. or Texaco Marine Services Inc. Texaco Refining & Marketing includes the Port Arthur Refinery and a Port Neches Asphalt Plant.

Texaco Chemical includes the Port Arthur Chemical Plant, Port Neches Chemical Plant and Port Neches Butane Plant, with a total of 350 employees. Texaco Marine in Port Arthur conducts worldwide oil tanker transportation services and has 60 employees.

Jerry Little, president of Pipefitters Local 195, was pleased with the filing.

"It couldn't happen to a nicer bunch of old boys," Little said. "They went solid rat. I'm a union man, and I say good riddance to them. They kicked us out and hired a bunch of rat laborers. Maybe Pennzoil would be better to us — couldn't be ... worse."

"It's very shocking," Port Arthur City Council representative Banner Baptiste said. "We don't know the total ramification as yet. All we can do is hope for the best and that we'll have Texaco continue to operate as it has in the past."

"We just received word ... and I guess the word is shocked and surprised," said Jim Breaux, president of the Port Neches Chamber of Commerce.

Breaux said a change in the chemical plant could have quite an effect on the city of Port Neches.

Texaco: Third largest U.S. oil concern

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc., started 85 years ago by investors hoping to exploit a famous oil discovery in Texas, has since grown to become the third-largest U.S. oil concern, with operations in 140 nations.

Texaco's revenue totaled $32.6 billion last year, ranking it behind industry leader Exxon Corp., with $76.2 billion in revenue, and Mobil Corp., with $49.4 billion.

Texaco's net income in 1986 totaled $725 million, or $3.01 a share, and its total assets at year end were $34.9 billion, compared with total liabilities of $21.2 billion.

Based in White Plains, N.Y., Texaco has about 55,000 employees, and the company says it supplies about 6 percent of the non-Communist world's petroleum needs.

The company was founded in 1902 as The Texas Co., after Texan Joseph Cullinan and New York investor Arthur Schlatt joined the rush that followed the legendary 1901 discovery of oil at Spindletop, near Beaumont.

Today, Texaco is a lot more than the corner gas station. Its activities include oil exploration and production in the United States and abroad; oil refining and marketing; oil trading and transportation, including a fleet of 56 oil tankers and a large U.S. pipeline network; chemicals and petrochemicals, and research and development.

Texaco's major divisions cover the United States, Europe, Latin America, West Africa, the Middle East, Asia and Canada.

Caltex, a 50-50 joint venture owned by Texaco and Chevron Corp., has oil refining and marketing operations in 55 countries.

At the end of 1985, Texaco's estimated oil reserves were equivalent to about 3.3 billion barrels, while its reserves of natural gas were estimated at 8.8 trillion cubic feet.

In January 1984, Texaco acquired Getty Oil Co. for $10.1 billion, touching off the legal battle with Pennzoil Co., in which Pennzoil claimed Texaco illegally interfered with a proposed Pennzoil-Getty merger.

The suit led to an $11 billion court judgment against Texaco in late 1985, and prompted Texaco's decision Sunday to seek protection under the federal bankruptcy laws.

Now one of Texaco's divisions, Getty reported 1986 revenue of $455.4 million.

In Fortune magazine's list of the 500 largest U.S. industrial companies for 1986, Texaco ranked eighth, down from sixth in 1985.

Analysts predict filing will hurt firms' stock

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — The bankruptcy-protection filing by Texaco Inc. is likely to hurt not only the oil giant's stock but also that of its principal antagonist, Pennzoil Co., industry analysts say.

Texaco announced Sunday that it was compelled to seek protection from creditors to avoid paying an $11.1 billion judgment awarded to Pennzoil by a Texas court. Texaco claims the award would destroy the company.

Analysts said the bankruptcy filing probably would compel many investors to dump Texaco shares when the stock market opened today because of the uncertainty it arouses about the nation's third-largest oil company. But they also said the filing jeopardizes Pennzoil's chances of getting paid.

Texaco stock has been declining ever since the award was announced in November 1985, reflecting investor anxiety over the outcome of the case. Texaco closed at $31.87 1/2 Friday on the New York Stock Exchange, down 37 1/2 cents.

Pennzoil stock, meanwhile, had been increasing sharply in value in investor anticipation that the company would collect at least part of the huge award. Pennzoil shares rose $5.25 a share Friday to $92.25.

Poll: Most Americans not offended by sex in media

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans are not offended by sex in advertising, books, television and movies, and they oppose banning sexually explicit magazines in their communities, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

A majority of Americans also believe pornography is not generally harmful to adults, according to the poll. Eight in 10 admitted to having looked at a magazine featuring nudity, and six in 10 said they'd seen an X-rated movie or videocassette.

Most people seem to tolerate sexually related matter in their communities, as long as it was kept under the counter or out of sight, and out of the hands of children, according to the nationwide telephone poll of 1,402 adults.

In recent months, anti-smut drives have led to the disappearance of Playboy and Penthouse magazines from many convenience stores and newsstands. The sex scenes in the movies "9½ Weeks" and "Angel Heart" also brought new debate.

The issue of sex in the media has also been heated by the Reagan administration's anti-smut efforts.

Attorney General Edwin Meese launched a nationwide campaign against hard-core pornography last year, creating a task force of Justice Department prosecutors so the $8 billion smut industry can be "pursued with a vengeance and prosecuted to the hilt."

Meese declared there has been an "explosion of obscenity" in the past 15 years. He said he would implement many of the recommendations made by his Commission on Pornography.

That commission's 92 recommendations ranged from making it an unfair labor practice to hire someone to participate in commercial sexual performances to outlawing doors on booths in porn parlors. The report also included the controversial contention that pornography can cause acts of sexual violence.

In the Media General-AP poll, respondents were asked if they thought pornography was generally harmful to adults. A 64 percent majority said it wasn't generally harmful, 29 percent said it was, and 7 percent were unsure.

Those who thought it harmful most often said it led to sexual crimes and was psychologically damaging, or it violated religious and moral beliefs.

Stores that removed magazines like Playboy and Penthouse from newsstands got the support of 48 percent of the respondents, while 41 percent thought such action was inappropriate.

Those who supported such actions most often said they did so because young people should not have access to the magazines. But when access to the materials was controlled, most people said there was a place for such magazines, and for more explicit sexual materials as well.

Fifty-five percent of the respondents said magazines that show nudity should be allowed if they're carried out of sight, while 18 percent said such magazines should face no restrictions at all. Twenty-two percent said they should be banned.

Nearly half said magazines that show adults having sexual relations should be allowed under cover, and an additional 8 percent said they should be allowed with no restrictions. Forty-one percent supported banning such magazines.

Nearly half of the respondents want X-rated movie houses banned in their communities, while 44 percent said they should not be banned. Most people didn't mind X-rated movies at home; 60 percent said the sale or rental of X-rated videocassettes should be allowed in their communities.

Respondents were also asked if they were offended by the sexual content in a variety of media, and in each case a majority said no. Sex in advertising offended 35 percent of the respondents. Sex in contemporary novels offended only 16 percent. Sex in television shows disturbed 39 percent, while sex in Hollywood movies offended 33 percent.

In general, younger people were far more tolerant of sexually explicit materials than were older people. And women objected to sexually explicit materials far more frequently than did men.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,402 adults across the country Jan. 16-24. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,400 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for several reasons. Differences in exact wording of questions, in the timing of interviews and in the interview methods could also cause variations.

Poll Questions

1. First, do you think reading or looking at pornography is generally harmful to adults, or not?
Yes: 29 percent. No: 64 percent. Don't know, no answer: 7 percent.
2. (If yes) In what way? (Multiple answers OK)
Leads to sexual crimes: 27 percent. Causes psychological problems: 27 percent. Is against religious or moral beliefs: 23 percent. Other: 35 percent.
3. What do you think of stores that remove magazines like Playboy and Penthouse from newsstands? Do you think such action is appropriate or inappropriate?
Appropriate: 48 percent. Inappropriate: 41 percent. Don't know, no answer: 11 percent.
4. (If appropriate) Why do you feel that way? (Multiple answers OK)
Should not be accessible to young people: 45 percent. Don't like magazines: 23 percent. Seller should be allowed to decide: 16 percent. Other reasons: 31 percent.
5. Are you offended by sexual content in advertising, or not?
Yes: 35 percent. No: 58 percent. Don't read or watch: 1 percent. Don't know, no answer: 6 percent.
6. Contemporary novels?
Yes: 16 percent. No: 70 percent. Don't read: 10 percent. Don't know, no answer: 4 percent.

8. Hollywood movies?
Yes: 33 percent. No: 56 percent. Don't watch: 7 percent. Don't know, no answer: 4 percent.
9. Do you think magazines that show nudity should be banned in your community, allowed as long as they are carried out of sight or under the counter, or allowed with no restrictions?
Banned: 22 percent. Allowed out of sight: 55 percent. Allowed with no restrictions: 18 percent. Don't know, no answer: 5 percent.
10. How about magazines that show adults having sexual relations? Should they be banned from your community, allowed as long as they are under cover, or allowed with no restrictions?

Doctor hits producers of aspirin

CHICAGO (AP) — Aspirin manufacturers pressured the government to delay public warnings that their product could cause a rare, sometimes fatal illness in children with flu or chicken pox, a physician contends.

The aspirin industry disputes the allegation, and one industry spokesman called it "an unbelievable slap in the face." It says evidence linking the over-the-counter headache remedy with Reye syndrome stems from so few cases that many in the medical community have questioned its reliability.

The contention that the industry pressured federal officials appeared in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association, in an editorial by Dr. Edward A. Mortimer, professor of pediatrics and epidemiology at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

Mortimer contends that a 1980 report by the federal Centers for Disease Control provided conclusive evidence of a link between aspirin and Reye syndrome, characterized by tiredness, vomiting, convulsions and coma.

The illness is fatal in 25 percent of its victims and many survivors suffer brain damage, he said.

Warning labels were not required until March 1986, when the federal government ordered their use to caution that aspirin could cause the potential fatal syndrome in children and teen-agers with influenza-type illnesses or chicken pox.

"Why so long?" Mortimer said, adding that from 1981 to 1985, the CDC received reports of 1,003 cases of the syndrome that included 291 deaths.

He answered that question by saying that aspirin manufacturers — including Plough Inc., maker of St. Joseph aspirin, and Sterling Drug Co., the maker of Bayer aspirin — applied "direct and successful pressure" on the Office of Management and Budget that blocked 1982 efforts to mandate warning labels.

"I don't think it was very smart of them to do it," he said in a telephone interview Friday. "I also believe that it was a very destructive approach" and unnecessarily jeopardized the health of children.

There has been "considerable professional controversy" and disagreement among doctors over whether aspirin plays any role in the development of the illness, said spokesman Lewis Nolan of Memphis, Tenn.-based Plough in a telephone interview.

Plough was the first company, Nolan said, to respond to a 1985 call from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services for voluntary warning labels on aspirin containers.

Since then, he said, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has twice commended Plough for its handling of Reye warnings.

Terry Kelly, New York spokesman for Sterling Drug, said he could not confirm that Sterling had pressured the government.

But, he said, "Any activities that we undertook throughout this was to assure appropriate scientific interchange."

The industry has made every effort to warn the public of possible links between Reye syndrome and aspirin, said Dr. Joseph White, president of the Washington-based Aspirin Foundation.

International space project planned

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Sixty people from around the world gathered here to help launch the International Space University Project, designed to share knowledge and increase cooperation among members of the "space generation."

"It's interdependency that we are trying to build this institution upon," said Todd Hawley, executive director of Space Generation Foundation Inc., a Washington, D.C.-based, non-profit organization that coordinated the weekend conference.

"It's the whole sense that there's a definite need at the outset to interlink nations, to pool resources, to create a sense of teamwork in doing things that benefit humanity as whole."

The project's goal is to bring together top graduate students from around the world to receive advanced instruction from leading scientists, engineers and other experts in space-related fields.

The aim is both to enhance space curricula and to set the stage for international cooperation among those born since the Space Age.

Reagans host birthday party

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan and his wife Nancy spent Palm Sunday hosting a birthday party at their mountain-top ranch for their 7-year-old granddaughter.

The White House press office said the president and Mrs. Reagan had invited the president's adopted son Michael and his family to the 688-acre spread high in the Santa Ynez Mountains, where they planned a party for granddaughter Ashley.

The president and first lady arrived Saturday to spend a week-long Easter vacation at Rancho del Cielo, or Ranch in the Sky.

It is the first time the president has returned to his horse ranch since undergoing prostate surgery in January.

While the president planned to relax, top White House aides set up shop in Santa Barbara, nearly 30 miles away.

Count on our caring, competent people.

We care enough to ask the family, patiently, for each important detail and instruction ... and to explain, and help control, funeral costs. Competence joins caring to assure a serene funeral service, one which reflects personal warmth and dignity.

BIG SPRING SKIPPER TRAVEL

TRAVEL TALK

by Mary Valli

NOT ATOLL BAD

How many times have you seen an aerial photograph of an atoll and imagined visiting such an unspoiled place? Unfortunately, there are not many of these coral islands. Those that do exist are so heavily populated that the South Pacific flavor is missing. Christmas Island, however, the largest atoll in the world, is now readily accessible. Visitors will find that this friendly speck in the Pacific Ocean offers visitors a unique bit of nature. This island features a lagoon that stretches for miles and has become the in spot for American bonefish anglers. For bird watchers, Christmas Island may be second only to the Galapagos in terms of the vast numbers of birds to be seen. While accommodations are not fancy, the island does offer a real glimpse of Pacific paradise.

From the simple and basic to the luxurious, from vacation to business conventions and emergency travel ... when it comes to travel planning more and more people are coming to BIG SPRING SKIPPER TRAVEL, 612 S. Gregg. Time schedules, rates, etc. are more complex than ever before. Here you will find the experienced professionals with the understanding and resources to attend to all such details. Whatever your travel needs, you can count on us. Tel. 263-0225, 263-7637. Open 8:30-5:30 Mon.-Fri.

New IRS tools

An engineer at Zenith Data Systems plant in St. Joseph, Mich., examines a central processing board which will be used in the laptop portable computers that Internal Revenue agents use to access IRS mainframe computers from office or home locations in the field. The IRS will deploy 15,000 of the units in a contract worth $27 million to Zenith Data Systems.

Senate subcommittee considers law to protect taxpayers from IRS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pennsylvania businessman told senators Friday how he and his girlfriend were harassed into bankruptcy by the Internal Revenue Service, an agency that a former IRS official said is intent on driving taxpayers to the wall.

"Their value systems are screwed up," Joseph B. Smith Jr. of Las Vegas, Nev., an accountant who spent 18½ years with the IRS, said of his ex-employer. But he assured a Senate Finance subcommittee that "the IRS is really a top professional organization."

The subcommittee, which is considering legislation to protect taxpayers against IRS excesses, heard Thomas L. Treadway of Pipersville, Pa., tell how he lost his trash-management business and all he owned, and how the IRS even seized $22,000 from his girlfriend's bank account to cover his alleged back taxes.

"You are looking at a man the IRS totally destroyed," Treadway said. "The government has stripped me of everything and ... nothing they did had any basis in fact ... I used to pray at night that this would happen to every American, because only then would the system change."

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., chairman of the subcommittee and a chief sponsor of the "taxpayers' bill of rights," praised Treadway as deserving "a chapter in F. Orlin's 'Courage.'" He said the IRS would be asked to tell its side on April 21.

Pryor, acknowledging the tough job facing the 100,000-employee tax-collecting agency, said his investigations have led him to the conclusion that the IRS suffers from a bully mentality.

"Today there is no confidence in the tax-collecting apparatus in this country," added Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., another sponsor of the bill.

The legislation would require the IRS to prove in civil cases that its tax assessment was correct. The agency would have to inform taxpayers of their rights in much the same way that police must tell people arrested on criminal charges they are allowed to remain silent.

The measure would bar the IRS from evaluating its employees on the basis of how much money they collect; prevent collection of interest and penalties that are assessed because of an error caused by written advice from the agency; triple, to 30 days, the notice required before the IRS can seize property, and create an IRS ombudsman who would look out for taxpayers' rights and be accountable to the president and Congress.

"The bill grows out of a long list of 'horror stories' — complaints that lawmakers generally concede are isolated incidents. But there also is a growing feeling in Congress that some IRS powers may need to be curbed.

"If taxes are the price we pay for a civilized society, let us make sure they are collected in a civil manner," said Rep. Robin Tallon, D-S.C., a sponsor of the legislation.

Treadway offered one of the more dramatic horror stories.

In 1982, IRS Agent Richard Boandl began auditing Treadway's tax returns and issued an assessment for $247,000. Before he could protest, Treadway said, the IRS began seizing his property.

Boandl, suspecting that Treadway was transferring assets to his girlfriend, Shirley Lojeski, seized her bank accounts without giving her a chance to file a challenge. Ms. Lojeski was totally innocent, Treadway said.

In 1983, an IRS appeals officer held the entire $247,000 assessment was unreasonable and threw it out. But Boandl and revenue officer George Jessup "kept threatening to do the whole thing all over again," Treadway testified.

"Officer Jessup was so obsessed with harassing me that he tried to contrive an excuse to start seizure actions all over again.

Dream chip gives Mize the jacket

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Larry Mize, the hometown boy, needed a miracle shot to realize his childhood fantasy.

He got it. It came on a chip from the right side of the green, about 140 feet from the flag. It bounced on the fringe, hopped onto the green and rolled, finally hitting the pin and dropping into the cup.

"It was like a dream come true," Mize said. It gave him the title in the 51st Masters golf tournament on the second hole of a sudden death playoff Sunday, and left Australian Greg Norman, the game's greatest player today, wondering, "Why me?"

"It was the toughest loss I ever had. I can't believe it went in," Norman said. "I guess it wasn't meant to be."

Norman had challenged for all four major championships last year, leading each after three rounds.

But he was able to win only one, the British Open. Another miracle shot beat him out of the 1986 PGA title when Bob Tway holed out from a sand trap on the final hole.

Mize also had another foreign giant to contend with in the playoff, but Seve Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard and two-time winner of this prestigious event, bowed out when he three-putted for bogey on the first extra hole.

The trio had completed regulation in 3-under-par 285, with Mize and Ballesteros closing with 71s and Norman a 72 in the gusty winds that so often make the 6,905-yard, par-72 Augusta National such a challenging layout.

It was only the second professional victory for Mize, who had finished second at least a half-dozen times and built a reputation as a player who couldn't win the big one. The reputation stemmed primarily from blowing a four-shot lead in the final round of the Tournament Player's Championship last year, with John Mahaffey taking advantage of the Georgian's collapse to win.

Mize, who earned $162,000 for the victory, had rolled in an eight-foot birdie putt on the final hole of regulation to gain his spot in the playoff. Norman, who had six bogeys and six birdies, had holed a 24-foot birdie putt on 17 to make the playoff, and almost won it in regulation, narrowly missing a 20-footer for birdie on the 18th.

Ballesteros scored birdies on the 15th and 17th holes to gain his share of the lead and then saved par on 18 after blasting from a bunker to within six feet.

That set up the playoff, Mize against the two dominant players in the game today.

Mize had a chance to win it on the first extra hole, but left a birdie putt of about 12 feet hanging on the edge.

Six players either led or share the lead over the final 18 holes.

Ben Crenshaw, Roger Maltbie and Jodie Mudd were the others. They missed the playoff by a single stroke, finishing in a tie at 286.

Jack Nicklaus, who fashioned a miracle of his own last year when came from four shots behind on the final day to capture his sixth Masters, couldn't get it going on a warm Sunday afternoon, closing with a 70 for a 289, four shots off the pace.

Nicklaus finished in a five-way tie for seventh place, along with West Germany's Bernhard Langer, Tom Watson, D.A. Weir and Jay Haas.

Mantle fair after scare

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Baseball Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle was in fair condition today after suffering chest pains on a jetliner, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Mantle was enroute to the Dallas area aboard a Delta Airlines jet when he became ill late Sunday, said Ramona Bevir, administrative assistant at Irving Community Hospital.

As soon as the plane landed, the former New York Yankees star was rushed to the hospital in an ambulance. "They (doctors) have confirmed that he did not have a heart attack," she said.

His condition was upgraded today from serious, she said. He was being treated in the hospital's intermediate coronary care unit.

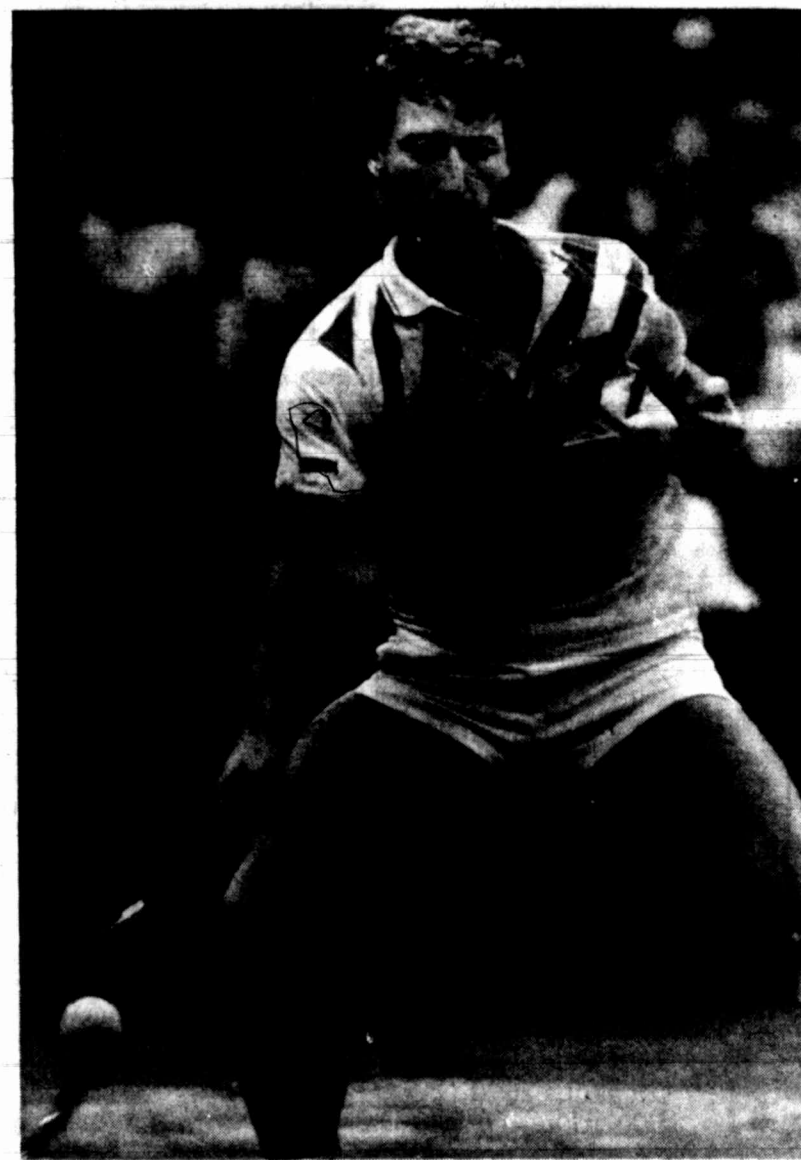

Jim Ewing, a spokesman for Delta at the airline's Atlanta headquarters, said he could not comment on where Mantle's flight originated.

Mantle, 55, starred for the Yankees from 1951-68 and was elected to baseball's Hall of Fame in 1974.

Mantle won the American League Triple Crown in 1956 and led the league in home runs four times, ending his career with 536 — third highest in history at the time.

He hit a record 18 homers in 12 World Series and was selected to play in 20 All-Star games. He was voted the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1956, 1957 and 1962.

The 'Big Cat' whips Johnnie Mac

Miloslav Mecir hits a forehand during his 6-0, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2 win over John McEnroe Sunday in the Buick WCT Finals in Dallas.

DALLAS (AP) — Miloslav Mecir bought his first softball, glove and bat Saturday during a shopping spree at a Dallas sporting goods store. Such items aren't readily available in his native Czechoslovakia.

Add one more footnote to the Mecir biography. Previous tidbits about the mysterious character included his love of fishing and his nickname, "Big Cat." Tennis fans will be seeking additional personal data after Mecir captured his biggest title to date with a 6-0, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2 victory over John McEnroe in the World Championship Tennis Finals on Sunday.

It was Mecir's fourth title in five tournaments this year. The $200,000 payday was the largest of his six-year pro career.

Mecir won $112,000 for the Lipton International crown at Key Biscayne, Fla., in February. That victory was more important to Mecir because it was his first over countryman Ivan Lendl, the top-rated player in the world.

Mecir, 22, now adds McEnroe to his hit list. Mecir hadn't won a set in two previous meetings with McEnroe.

Mecir beat the comeback-minded McEnroe in every phase of the game. He broke McEnroe's serve 10 times, was successful on 78 percent of his first serves (to 64 percent for McEnroe) and had 35 unforced errors to 51 for his opponent.

"I was returning quite well and wasn't missing as much as he was," said Mecir, who answers questions cautiously. "I don't know how much better I can play."

Mecir also was able to keep his concentration while McEnroe engaged in a running battle with chair umpire Gerry Armstrong. In the third set McEnroe threatened to walk off the court when Armstrong would not overrule a line call. Armstrong assessed McEnroe a one-point penalty for an "audible obscenity."

"It's not very nice to play in such an atmosphere," said Mecir, ranked fifth in the world. "Sometimes it looks like he's going to do it (argue) again, then he starts to play. I try to behave like my parents learn (sic) me."

The incident may have been more of a distraction to McEnroe, who usually raises the level of his game after an outburst. McEnroe was fined $2,500 for various code violations during his three matches in the tournament.

"When that thing happened in the third set, what I had going for me — getting a couple of breaks, hitting the ball better — it all seemed to cave in," said McEnroe, who had four previous WCT Finals titles to his credit.

McEnroe said the hip injury he aggravated during Friday's semifinal victory over Stefan Edberg and the 10 a.m. starting time also were factors.

"What the hell are they having us get up at 10 o'clock in the morning for?" said McEnroe. "I don't think it's good to have TV dictate when you play."

"If it were being shown live (by CBS), that's one thing. But it was taped. The level of play goes down. It was the same for both players."

"You're used to a schedule of 7:30 matches at night, then you've got to play at 10 in the morning. I just wasn't my best physically," McEnroe said.

UT refutes some NCAA charges, accepts others

AUSTIN (AP) — Fewer than half of the allegations of wrongdoing made against the University of Texas football program by the National Collegiate Athletic Association will be contested, a school lawyer says.

Lawyer Knox Nunnally told the Austin American-Statesman his final report to the NCAA will include denials in categories such as excessive entertainment money for host student-athletes during recruits' visits.

Nunnally said the report, about 70 pages, will be sent by special delivery to the NCAA later today.

The report is broken down into four areas: allegations UT considers substantially correct, those considered correct but with mitigating circumstances, those involving conflicting evidence and those UT denies.

"A lot of those on the entertainment expenses are denied," Nunnally said.

Walker was alleged to have provided legal assistance to 26 Longhorn athletes, but the lawyer also was found to have assisted 190 other UT students.

Mitigating circumstances were discovered on some of the allegations involving 15 loans to athletes totaling $670, Nunnally said.

Nunnally and UT officials will meet with the NCAA Infractions Committee for a preliminary conference before the school's official hearing at Hilton Head, S.C., April 24-26.

"There is also conflicting evidence on the legal assistance given by (Austin attorney) Albert Walker," Nunnally said. "We're not sure the athletes got something that wasn't also available to other student-athletes."

Hawks batter baseballs, Northwood

In three games, Hawks had 52 hits, 41 runs

DALLAS — What the Howard College Hawks did to Northwood College over the weekend bordered on the obscene.

In the three game series, Coach Bill Griffin's Hawks scored 41 runs on 52 hits, including eight home runs. New check out these season totals: five players hitting over .500 and 50 home runs in 34 games. And how about this — catcher Randy Deal has 61 RBI in that many games.

After whipping the host team 17-3 on Saturday, the Hawks swept Sunday's doubleheader by 7-4 and 17-8 scores. Those wins boost the Hawks overall record to 29-5, and their region record to 13-3. They remain a half-game behind McClenan, but are way ahead of third place Northwood, and their 6-9 mark.

In the opener, the Hawks spotted Northwood a one-run lead, but Ernesto Castro put Howard on the board with a solo shot in the third. Castro hit another homer, his eighth of the year, in the fifth, also scoring Frank Medina.

The Hawks scored five runs in the fifth inning, and added another in the seventh on Deal's 10th homer of the year.

Howard Landry went the distance for the Hawks, and raised his record to 7-1.

The second game was no contest, and Griffin couldn't conceal chuckling as he reported it. Though Derek Matlock was roughed up for five runs in the first three innings, Griffin replaced him with Thad Weber, who shut the host team down the rest of the way.

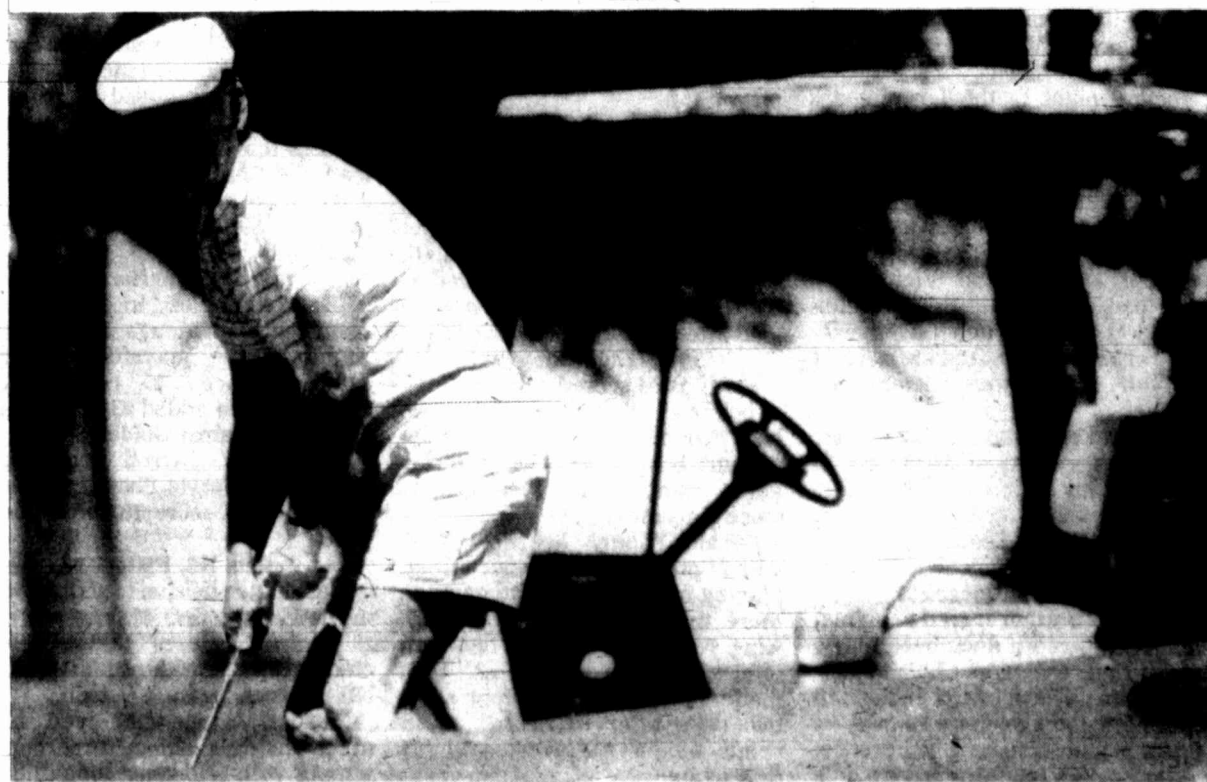

Meanwhile, the Hawks caught fire. In the second, Juan Rodriguez, Frank Medina and Joe Camarillo had singles, and Castro hit his third homer of the day, a two-run shot, as the Hawks scored four runs. In the third, Rodriguez slammed a three-run shot, his 12th of the year, to account for all of the Hawks scoring in that inning.

In that game, Castro went five for five, and Freddie Lopez hit a three-run homer to add to the rout.

The Hawks play a doubleheader Wednesday against Lubbock Christian College, beginning at 1 p.m. at Jack Barber Field.

James' shotgun blast sinks Mets

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

With LaGuardia Airport less than a mile away and other smaller aviation facilities in the immediate area, there's plenty of traffic in the sky over New York's Shea Stadium.

Fortunately, all the planes got where they were going Sunday. The same can't be said for a solitary dove, however. He was the lone victim of a mid-air collision with a batted ball.

The Atlanta Braves were leading 2-1 when Dion James, leading off the top of the third inning, hit a fly ball toward left fielder Kevin McReynolds. But the ball hit the bird and both dropped dead in short left field, as James eased into second with a double.

"When the ball was hit, someone on the bench saw the bird and yelled 'hit that bird' and it did," said Graig Nettles, a New York Yankee in 1983 when Dave Winfield threw a ball and killed a seagull in Toronto.

Dale Murphy, who otherwise would not have come to bat in the inning, hit his first homer of the season two outs later, and the Braves coasted to a 12-4 victory over the New York Mets.

"The only thing I thought was that I lost it in the sun," McReynolds said. "Then I saw two objects falling."

"I've never seen anything like it in 41 years in baseball," Atlanta Manager Chuck Tanner said.

James said he was confused. "The moment I hit the bird," said James, who said he had no idea what had happened until he stopped on second and saw Mets shortstop Rafael Santana picking up the dead dove. "A bounce here, a bounce there. It was just our day."

It was, according to the Elias Sports Bureau, the first bird hit by a batted ball in major-league history. Eric Davis, now with Cincinnati, hit one as a minor leaguer in 1981. That ball was caught.

Murphy also hit another homer and drove in five runs as Atlanta won for the fourth time in five games.

"It very satisfying to come in here and win two of three," said Murphy, who hadn't homered in 84 at-bats dating back to last year until his post-bird homer.

Randy O'Neal, making his first NL start after being obtained in the off-season from Detroit, was the winning pitcher. Bob Ojeda, 1-1, took the loss.

Dodgers 7, Giants 5
At 26 years, five months, Fernando Valenzuela became the second-youngest Dodger pitcher ever to win 100 games. Hall of Famer Don Drysdale accomplished it in 1962 at 26 years, one month.

Pedro Guerrero, who hit his second homer in as many days, and Mike Marshall drove in three runs apiece for Los Angeles.

Padres 5, Reds 2
San Diego's Steve Garvey was 1-for-15 without an extra-base hit coming in. But the 38-year-old first baseman, who hit a three-run homer in the first inning to give Larry Bowa his first managerial victory, wasn't worried.

"After 17½ years, you learn patience is a virtue. You stay calm," Garvey said.

The victory was San Diego's first after five losses, the loss Cincinnati's first after five victories.

Buddy Bell and Eric Davis hit homers off Ed Whitson, 1-1, to account for the Cincinnati offense.

Phillies 9, Cubs 8
Philadelphia, with Von Hayes getting five hits and two RBI, looked like a easy winner as it took the field with an 8-5 lead in the ninth inning.

But winning pitcher Steve Bedrosian gave up a two-out, two-run homer to pinch-hitter Jerry Mumphrey. Then Leon Durham tied the game with a homer into the upper deck in right field at Veterans Stadium.

"That wasn't a struggle," Phillies Manager John Felske said.

"It was a heart attack."

But he survived when Glenn Wilson hit a bases-loaded single off loser Lee Smith through a draw-in infield to score Juan Samuel from third base in the 10th. That gave Philadelphia its first victory after four losses.

Astros 1, Expos 0

With a one-run lead, Houston did the obvious, and reliever Dave Smith did as has become almost automatic for him — save another game for the unbeaten Astros.

"I haven't had the consistent velocity that I have now in the past," said Smith, who saved his fourth game for the 6-0 Astros.

Billy Hatcher had two hits and drove in the only run in the fifth inning for the Astros, off to the best start in their 26-year history. Left-hander Bob Knepper, 1-0, limited winless Montreal to six hits over 7 1-3 innings.

Bob Sebra, 0-1, took the loss for Montreal, 0-5.

Pirates 7, Cardinals 4

Pittsburgh resembled its Lumber Company of the 1970s with Jim Morrison homering and droving in three runs, John Cangelosi getting four hits and scoring three times and former Cardinal Andy Van Slyke adding a pair of run-scoring singles in an 11-hit attack.

Rangers succumb to smoking Brewer bats

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Milwaukee Brewers hoped their young pitchers could carry them this year. But it's their offense that has them off to their best start ever.

"I've got to be happy with the way the guys are swinging the bats so far," Manager Tom Trebelhorn said Sunday after the unbeaten Brewers downed the Texas Rangers 7-5 in 12 innings.

Rookie B.J. Surhoff's two-out, two-run single in the 12th gave Milwaukee its sixth straight victory. In the first week of the season, the Brewers have scored 46 runs. Last year, they ranked 12th among the 14 American League teams in runs scored.

Milwaukee, whose previous best start was 5-0 in 1978, did what it took to win Sunday in the AL — score either seven or eight runs.

Paul Molitor's solo home run lifted the visiting Brewers into a 2-2 tie in the eighth inning. After both teams scored three times in the 11th, Surhoff sent Milwaukee ahead after Texas reliever Scott Anderson, 0-1, walked the bases loaded. In all, Texas pitchers, who led the majors in walks last season, issued 12 bases on balls.

Clear, 1-0, got the victory despite ineffective relief and Chris Bosio got his first major-league save.

Orioles 7, Indians 1
Rookies Eric Bell and Mark Williamson combined on a three-hitter and Eddie Murray and Alan Wiggins homered to lead Baltimore past Cleveland.

The Orioles swept the three-game series in Cleveland and extended their winning streak to four.

Athletics 7, Angels 1
Carney Lansford drove in four runs and Mike Davis homered and knocked in three, backing Curt Young's five-hitter as Oakland beat visiting California for its first victory of the season.

Twins 8, Mariners 5
Kirby Puckett hit a solo home run, his fourth of the season, and added a two-run triple as Minnesota won in Seattle.

Tim Lardner hit a two-run homer for the Twins while Ken Phelps hit two solo home runs for the Mariners.

Red Sox 8, Blue Jays 3
Don Baylor homered twice and drove in five runs and Dave Henderson hit a two-run homer, powering Boston over visiting Toronto.

Reliever-turned-starter Bob Stanley, 1-1, pitched eight innings and won his first game as a starter since June 19, 1980.

Henderson gave the Red Sox a 2-0 lead in the second inning against Jim Clancy, 1-1, with his second home run of the season.

Baylor ended an 0-for-15 slump with a three-run homer in the third and hit a two-run homer in the fifth. Baylor's first home runs of the season marked the 16th time he has connected for two or more homers in a game.

Tigers 7, White Sox 1
Tom Brookens drove in four runs and Matt Nokes homered as Detroit beat Chicago for its fourth straight victory.

Jeff Robinson won his major-league debut, giving up one run on six hits in seven innings.

Brookens, filling in at short-stop while Alan Trammell's thigh injury heals, hit a two-run triple in the second inning and two-run single in the seventh. Nokes went 3-for-5 with a solo home run, his second of the season.

Joel Davis, 0-1, took the loss for the host White Sox.

Royals 8, Yankees 2
Angel Salazar singled twice during a six-run fifth inning and Bo Jackson continued his hot hitting against New York as Kansas City beat the visiting Yankees.

Salazar, Danny Tartabull and Jackson had RBI singles in the fifth and Juan Beniquez added a two-run single. Beniquez wound up with three RBI and Jackson went 2-for-4, making him 8-for-12 in the three-game weekend series.

Jordan, Bird combine for 100

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The sun is setting on the race for the 16 NBA playoff spots.

Phoenix, ninth in the Western Conference, delayed the clinching of post-season berths by winning seven consecutive games, but that streak was broken by a 119-104 loss Sunday night to the Los Angeles Lakers, who won their 10th straight.

The defeat clinched a spot in the Western Conference playoffs for the Seattle SuperSonics and, with three games remaining, put Denver within one victory or another loss by the Suns of clinching the eighth and final berth. The Eastern Conference's eight playoff teams were determined earlier.

The Lakers, who improved their NBA-best record to 64-15, got 26 points from James Worthy and 19 points and 19 assists from Magic Johnson. Byron Scott also had 19 points from Los Angeles.

Bulls 116, Pacers 95
Michael Jordan scored 53 points, his sixth performance over the 50 mark this season, as Chicago pulled within a half-game of Indiana in the race for the seventh playoff position in the Eastern Conference.

Jordan now has 40 or more points in 35 games this season and needs 87 in his last three games to become the second player ever to finish with 3,000 in one year. He had 13 straight during one stretch of the fourth quarter as the Bulls outscored the Pacers 31-13 in the final period.

Both teams have clinched postseason berths, and the one that finishes seventh will meet the No. 2 team in the Eastern Conference playoffs.

Hawks 115, Nets 88
Atlanta won its first Central Division title since 1980 as Dominique Wilkins scored 17 of his 19 points in the first half against New Jersey.

The Hawks' victory, their sixth straight, was virtually assured at halftime as they grabbed a 68-42 lead after the first two periods.

Celtics 119, Knicks 107
Larry Bird scored a season-high 47 points as the Boston Celtics, who let a 28-point third-quarter lead slip to four, held on to break a three-game losing streak, their longest since November 1983.

Gerald Wilkins led New York with 21 points, while Bernard King, playing in only his second game in more than two years, scored 20. King, who suffered a torp ligament in his right knee on March 23, 1985, made three of his first four shots two days after he scored seven points against Milwaukee in his first game.

Trail Blazers 113, Clippers 100
Portland handed Los Angeles its 10th consecutive loss as Kiki

Vandeweghe scored 29 points and broke the team's single-season scoring record.

Vandeweghe has 2,049 points this season, eclipsing the previous mark of 2,031 held by Geoff Petrie, who scored his total as a rookie in 1970-71, the first year the Trail Blazers were in existence.

Clyde Drexler added 27 points, including 18 in the first half as the Blazers moved to a 60-44 halftime lead. The Clippers, who have lost 19 consecutive games in Portland, got no closer than five points in the second half.

Jazz 109, Warriors 107
Utah came close to clinching a homecourt advantage in the first round of the playoffs as Karl Malone scored 25 points and Rickey Green added 23 points and 10 assists against Golden State. Joe Barry Carroll scored 24 points and Purvis Short came off the bench to score 18 for Golden State.

Bullets 103, Pistons 98
Washington held on to sixth place in the East as Jeff Malone scored 28 points and Moses Malone 27, including the 20,000th of his 11-year NBA career, against Detroit.

Moses Malone achieved his milestone on a 12-foot turnaround jumper with 5:16 remaining in the game, becoming the 12th player in NBA history to score 20,000 points. He finished the game with 20,004.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, APRIL 14, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to work out some cooperative arrangements with associates, so contact them today. Investigate all the phases of your current activities.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Finish talks and make contracts with others. Civic work can be handled today. Keep any promises you have made.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Handle whatever work you need to do, but later make new contacts and look into new interests.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make arrangements for pleasure in the days ahead, then get busy at your work and continue until it's done.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) It's a good day to make the improvements at home that are sorely needed. Be cheerful and enthused.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Discuss with associates what is best to do to become more successful and band together more wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Add new touches to property and other possessions so they become more valuable. Don't waste time foolishly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be charming and magnetic with everyone you see today. Make an effort to see good friends now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get together with cooperative friends and form an alliance to get a mutual project working efficiently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You make greater progress by combining your efforts with those of others, so don't go it alone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Handle civic or credit affairs wisely now and you can make your prestige soar to new heights.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study how to improve your present set-up. Try to meet one who is famous and can be of help to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your hunches concerning your mate are accurate now and you can have a closer relationship.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will get along well with just about anyone who comes in contact with him, or her, and it would be wise to slant the education along lines of work in humanitarian professions. One who can balance any standpoints wisely and finish any project tackled.

Recalling the terror: 'I am a monster, the Son of Sam'

EDITOR'S NOTE — A man with a .44-caliber gun stalked New York City by night for 12 months in 1976 and '77, killing six young people and wounding seven others. The gunman's sixth attack, on April 17, 1977, marked the start of the largest manhunt in New York history.

NEW YORK (AP) — For six hours the killer had cruised the city, hunting in vain for what the note in his pocket called "fair game — tasty meat." Finally, as he was heading home along a quiet street lined with neat brick houses, he found what he was looking for: Two young people necking in the front seat of a parked car.

Valentina Suriani, 18, and Alexander Esau, 20, had returned to the Bronx around 3 a.m. after a night out in Manhattan. A block away from Valentina's apartment house, they pulled over to the curb. They stopped under a row of trees, two blocks from where the killer had claimed his first victim nine months earlier.

He drove past them, turned the next corner, parked, and walked back to Esau's maroon Mercury.

First, the killer dropped a note on the ground addressed to Joseph Borrelli, the detective captain who was leading the hunt for him. Then he pulled a .44-caliber Charter Arms Bulldog revolver from his jacket. Holding the weapon with both hands, he calmly fired four shots through the windshield.

"It was my best job, because it resulted in two deaths," he would later recall. "Plus, I left my first, carefully concocted note."

Borrelli was handed the note when he arrived at the scene 45 minutes later.

"I am a monster," the killer had written. "I am the 'Son of Sam.'"

Borrelli scanned the rambling, erratically scrawled note for clues, but was left only with a warning. "Let me haunt you with these words: I'll be back! I'll be back!"

That was 10 years ago Friday — April 17, 1977. Before police arrested David Berkowitz, a 24-year-old mail sorter, nearly four months later, there would be two more attacks.

Each sundown brought the prospect of more gunshots, and more victims.

"I was making the papers nearly every day," Berkowitz later wrote. "The chase was on, and the public was watching out for me."

Donna Lauria was the first victim, shot and killed July 29, 1976, in the Bronx, an apparently senseless murder. It wasn't until after the fifth attack the following March 8 that police put the pattern together; ballistics tests confirmed that one gunman was responsible for all five shootings. By then, three young people were dead and four others had been wounded.

Two days after the Esau-Suriani shooting, Police Commissioner Michael Codd announced the formation of a task force that eventually swelled to 100 detectives and 200 uniformed officers. The squad handled more than 200 telephone calls a day, compiled a file of more than 10,000 suspects and interviewed 3,167 of the leading candidates.

Four detectives spent four weeks locating all 56 Charter Arms Bulldog .44-caliber revolvers registered to owners in the New York area, and contacted about 2,000 gun dealers around the nation — to no avail.

After the killer wrote to Daily News columnist Jimmy Breslin, three fingerprint specialists spent nearly six weeks running tests on the letter.

Decoy police teams spent night after night sitting in unmarked cars.

Borrelli consulted psychologists, hypnotists, handwriting analysts and astrologists, who produced dozens of theories and scenarios as to who the killer was and where he would strike next.

When a psychologist hired by a newspaper to profile the killer said he was impotent, callers flooded the police hotline with the names of more than 200 impotent men.

"Don't think that because you haven't heard from me for a while I went to sleep," the killer warned in a note to Breslin during a lull in the shootings. "I am still here. Like a spirit roaming the night. Thirsty, hungry, seldom stopping to rest; anxious to please Sam. I love my work."

Many New Yorkers — particularly young women — were increasingly uneasy. Many brunettes, for example, had their hair cut or colored; most of the victims had long brown hair.

On June 26, Judy Placido and Sal Lupo were wounded as they sat in a car near a Queens disco, discussing the Son of Sam. On July 31, the gunman killed Stacy Moskowitz and wounded Robert Violante. They were sitting in a car in Brooklyn — the first time the killer had struck outside the Bronx or Queens.

For the next 14 hours, police hotlines rang constantly. "People were giving up their brothers, their fathers, their uncles," recalls Borrelli. "That's how frightened they were."

"NO ONE IS SAFE," headlined The New York Post. In at least two cases, innocent men who seemed to fit police descriptions of the gunman were attacked.

But the eighth shooting produced a break.

Police began checking all cars that had been ticketed on the night of July 31 in the vicinity of the Moskowitz-Violante shooting. One, which was parked in front of a hydrant, was registered to a David Berkowitz of Yonkers.

When a detective called Yonkers police Aug. 10 to ask about Berkowitz the phone was answered by a female dispatcher who happened to know something about him — she said her father, Sam

Carr, was a neighbor of Berkowitz and had complained of harassment by him. Sam Carr believed Berkowitz had sent him hate mail and shot his dog.

Detectives wanted to know more. That evening a police team stopped Berkowitz — a pudgy man with curly black hair and a sweet smile — as he stepped into his car in front of his apartment building.

"You got me," Berkowitz said, smiling. "How come it took you so long?"

Police found a .44-caliber revolver in the front seat and eight .44-caliber bullets in his pocket.

Berkowitz' fingerprints matched print fragments found on the April 17 note. "That's when I knew we had the right man," Borrelli recalls.

When he finally came face-to-face with Berkowitz, Borrelli asked, "Do you know me?" "Sure," Berkowitz replied. "I wrote you a letter."

A decade later, David Berkowitz is said to miss the attention.

"He feels let down because the newspapers do not write about him," says Dr. David Abrahamson, a psychiatrist who has examined and corresponded with Berkowitz since his arrest.

Berkowitz is in Clinton state prison in Dannemora, N.Y., assigned to a ward for inmates who are segregated for their own protection.

"He has resigned himself to his situation, and he tries to take it in stride," says Abrahamson. "He realizes he has done wrong, and he is sorry for the crimes he has committed."

In 1979, another inmate opened a seven-inch gash in Berkowitz's neck with a razor blade. Berkowitz refused to identify his assailant, joking, "He's a real pain in the neck."

Although he once corresponded regularly with reporters, Berkowitz now communicates mostly with a few relatives and friends. Raised as a Jew, he has rediscovered an earlier interest in born-again Christianity.

He is eligible for parole in 2002.

Why Berkowitz killed, and whether he acted alone, are questions that have never been entirely laid to rest.

David Berkowitz, also known as the "Son of Sam" killer, is escorted by police after his arrest in New York in August, 1977. He stalked New York City for 12 months in 1976 and 1977 killing six people and wounding seven others and explained that he took orders issued by a demon through dogs.

Victims of Son of Sam: a decade after tragedy

A decade later, Neysa Moskowitz can neither forgive nor forget the killer called Son of Sam who made her daughter, 20-year-old Stacy Moskowitz, the last of his victims. "I was angry. I wanted to kill. I still want to kill," she said in an interview. "I think I am capable of murder without remorse," she added. "Someone who took a budding life? I could kill him and eat, sleep, watch TV."

For Mrs. Moskowitz and others whose lives he tore apart, Berkowitz is only one of the villains.

Even though New York may have forgotten, the wounded survivors, of course, cannot forget. They include Joanne Lomino, a paraplegic who is confined to a wheelchair; Robert Violante, who lost one eye and suffers reduced vision in the other; Judy Placido, whose face and neck bear the scars of the gunman's .44-caliber bullets. Donna DiMasi has bullet fragments in her neck, and Carl DeNaro has a surgically implanted plate in his head.

The worst scars, in most cases, are psychological. Violante, a postal worker, "is extremely bitter," according to a spokesman for his lawyer, Harry Lipsig. "He feels a lot of people have sensationalized his situation."

"I still have bad dreams," Violante said in an interview several years ago. "Emotionally, I'm very scarred. I'm still paranoid about walking alone at night."

Berkowitz, he said, "got off too easily. He's in jail and living like a king." Like Mrs. Moskowitz, he favors the death penalty.

Most of the survivors have gotten on with life. Ms. Placido is a paralegal, DeNaro a construction worker. Ms. DiMasi and Ms. Lomino have both married.

A lawsuit filed by the survivors and the victims' families against Berkowitz's estate has been settled, with the estate's conservator admitting liability of $20 million. But the estate has less than $100,000, most of it a publisher's payment for rights to Berkowitz's psychiatric interviews.

Even a meager payoff, however, is being delayed by disputes over lawyers' fees and administrative costs.

"I'm appalled it has taken this long," says Richard Naidich, Donna DiMasi's lawyer. "These people have been victimized twice — by David Berkowitz and the legal system."

Immediately after his arrest he told detectives that he took orders issued by a demon — a 6,000-year-old man, personified by Sam Carr — through dogs, notably Carr's But court-appointed psychiatrists declared Berkowitz mentally fit to stand trial, and he pleaded guilty.

He told psychiatrists the demons had gone, and that he was reading the Bible daily, to "repent my sin" and "unburden my conscience."

On the day of his scheduled sentencing, May 22, 1978, Berkowitz lurched into the courtroom, wild-eyed, struggling with court officers. "Stacy was a whore! Stacy was a whore!" he chanted, before he was pulled from the room.

Two weeks later a more composed Berkowitz was sentenced to 25-years-to-life in prison.
