Holiday travel kills five Texans

By The Associated Press
 Four people died Saturday when their car struck a truck parked along Interstate 10 near Beaumont, bringing the unofficial Texas Memorial weekend holiday death count to five.
 Department of Public Safety Trooper Barry Bridges said the four, in their late teens or early 20s, were involved in an accident around 5 a.m. Their car ran into a parked semi tractor-trailer, Bridges said.
 The trooper identified the dead as car driver Quentin Jurek, 20, of Bay City; Leslie Stamply, 19, of Nederland; Steven Follis, 21, of Beaumont; and Sybil Skaggs, 22, of Nederland.
 Earlier Saturday, an elderly El Paso pedestrian died after an apparent hit-and-run. The victim was Jose Acosta, 76, according to El Paso police records.
 No arrests have been made in connection with the El Paso accident, which occurred at 1:25 a.m., officials said.
 The unofficial tally by The Associated Press began at 6 p.m. Friday and runs through midnight Monday.

Rains pour, Dam Lake is no threat

By SPENCER SANDOW
 Staff Writer
 Storms that had brought nearly five inches of rain to parts of Howard County Saturday afternoon continued, and Natural Dam Lake appeared to pose no danger, officials said.
 Although the lake had a substantial inflow, it has gone up one-half vertical foot, to an elevation of 2248 feet, said Joe Pickle, secretary/treasurer for the Colorado River Municipal Water District.
 He added Lakes Thomas and Spence are expected to catch a substantial amount of runoff.
 Pickle, 2803 Cactus Drive, recorded 4.5 inches of rain Saturday morning. He said Vealmore had had 4.9 inches, but further north the amount of rainfall had declined somewhat, to about 2 inches near Gail.

 Elton Hartin, 203 N. Nolan St., at 3 p.m. Saturday reported 4.7 inches of rainfall since Friday night. Tommy Hart, 1750 Purdue St., measured 3.95 inches, while Red Thomas reported rainfall of 5.2 inches.
 Neil Fryar of Lomax recorded 2.2 inches, and said the heavy rains would wash away recently planted crops.

Farmers will have to plant again, he said, adding that could be a financial hardship because last year's small cotton crop made cottonseed scarce this year.
 Most farmers had been two-thirds finished planting, he said. The ground must dry three or four days before planting can begin, he said.

Boyce Hale, near Highway 33 and Wason Road, measured 3.65 inches at 10 a.m. Saturday. That brings the monthly rainfall to 5.91 inches, and the yearly to 9.29 inches. Last year at this time, Howard County had had 1.07 inches of rain, he said.
 Wendell Shive of Coahoma received 3.4 inches, and Mrs. John Couch of Luther 3.1 inches. She added hail had damaged nearby crops and buildings Thursday night.

Tornado destroys cheerful situation

SARAGOSA (AP) — Preschool children had sung a song of goodbye to classmates and a poem about growing up. They were donning caps and gowns for their graduation in the tiny community center decorated with tinsel and packed with 100 people.
 Then everything tragically changed.
 Someone shouted something about a tornado, teachers herded the 20 3- and 4-year-olds off the stage, and everyone ran outside, then inside, then under tables.

They waited, crying and confused, mothers separated from children, fathers braving winds to shield families from the force.
 In a matter of minutes, Saragosa was flattened by a killer tornado that struck through the heart of the community center. Thirty people died and 121 were injured — about half of them at the Head Start graduation.

"I had about 10 kids with me under a table and I was trying to shield them. I could see cars flipping over and turning in the air. The windows were breaking, and it was blowing dirt and hail and cement," Mary Jane Ontiveros, 23, the Head Start program's cook, said Saturday.
 "One of the daddies was still getting his wife and three kids under a table when it hit. He didn't have time for himself, and he was killed," Mrs. Ontiveros said. The town was about half-way through its annual preschool graduation when the tornado struck at about 8 p.m. Friday night.

Parents had spent the day decorating the gathering hall, and children had rehearsed in the morning. They gathered in the evening in their finest Sunday clothes, Mrs. Ontiveros said, and then performed songs and read a poem called "Rose," about a flower that would grow and grow.
 The children were being dressed in tiny caps and gowns when the funnel was spotted.
 "We took the kids down from the stage. People were yelling and screaming. Then we went to the door and we could see it, cone-shaped, very gray," Mrs. Ontiveros said.
 "The daddies said there wasn't time to run home so we started grabbing kids and getting them under tables. We waited, it seemed like 15 minutes, and most of the moms were screaming because they couldn't find their kids."

Legislators may return for summer session

AUSTIN (AP) — State legislators have little more than a week to go in their 140-day regular session, but they will be summoned back for a summer special session if they fail to act on several issues.
 Calling lawmakers into a 30-day overtime period is a power that rests with the governor, who also can limit the agenda to whatever subjects he pleases.
 Gov. Bill Clements has a list of items he considers important enough to bring lawmakers back after the June 1 adjournment.
 Heading the list is the tax-and-spending dilemma that has kept the House, Senate and governor tangled in knots for months.
 Clements says flatly that he will veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion. Both the House and Senate have passed budgets that would require at least $2 billion more new money than the governor's limit.
 Quoting actor Clint Eastwood and President Reagan, Clements encouraged lawmakers to "make my day" if they don't believe his veto threat. Since state government's fiscal year ends Aug. 31, action would have to be taken this summer to keep the doors open.

 The governor says he is determined to get legislative action on several other matters as well, even if it means overtime.
 One is tort reform, the complicated question of revising the state's civil justice system for personal injury and liability lawsuits.
 Clements recently said he believes the problems of obtaining liability insurance are so severe that they affect consumers, public services, tax rates and even job growth.
 "There is no question that state government can be part of the solution of stabilizing the liability insurance market through reforms that restore the predictability of the civil justice system," he said.
 The House and Senate have passed different tort reform bills and the matter is before a conference committee. If that fails, lawmakers will be back, Clements says.

 "I have made it clear that should these efforts fail in this regular legislative session, I will submit the issue to special session. It is that vital," he said.
 A second vital issue, Clements says, is an odd-sounding item called "budget execution authority."
 Such authority would allow a SUMMER SESSION page 2A

Hazardous materials contained Saturday

By SPENCER SANDOW

 No one was injured and no hazardous materials were released when a Union Pacific Railroad Company train derailed near Big Spring Saturday morning, a company spokesman said.
 The 111-car train derailed near the Interstate 35 crossing west of town at 3:25 a.m. The tracks could be reopened by this afternoon, the spokesman said.
 The train's regional office in Houston, and was in charge of an investigating team, he said.
 The cause is still under investigation, he said, but severe thunderstorms may have played a role.
 The train had received nearly five inches rain Saturday.
 The train was blocked, and officials are working to get it moving. Davis said, adding that the train was blocked during the holiday weekend.
 The train was from El Paso when the derailed. The train was carrying hazardous materials, Davis said.
 The train was empty, four derailed cars were empty, Davis said.
 The train was carrying hazardous materials, Davis said.

Saragosa aid sought nationwide

SARAGOSA (AP) — The call went out nationwide Saturday for donations to help survivors of a powerful tornado that nearly leveled this remote West Texas community.

"At this point, we're specifically requesting donations of money because of the devastating nature of this," said Michelle Fail, with the American Red Cross in Austin. "It's going to be economically hard for the town to get back on its feet."

Groups from Midland-Odessa, San Angelo and Big Spring began dispensing food, blankets and refreshments to residents and rescuers, Carr said. Clothing, groceries and financial help can be offered through local Salvation Army offices, he said.

People can make pledges through a national toll-free number, 800-453-9000, Ms. Fail said. Those wanting information about the victims can call 512-928-4271, she said.

A volunteer carries a woman from the Saragosa community hall after a tornado flattened the city Friday evening. In the photo below, Paula Tarnago replaces a portion of a church statue damaged when the local church was destroyed, as was most of the community.

Tornado aftermath shocks residents

SARAGOSA (AP) — When daybreak came, people in this town got their first full glimpse of what a tornado can do.

They gazed in shock at the splintered pile that was their community.

Dogs that apparently didn't know they were homeless ran up and down the main street nosing at the rubble.

A few ducks emerged from a house, while an injured pig roamed from lot to lot. A single running shoe that looked brand new was wedged between two cinder blocks.

The twister that hit Friday night turned the town upside down, tossing kitchen utensils on top of window frames and leaving a cherished rocking chair apparently intact atop a shattered house.

All around trees were snapped in half, their bare and sharpened branches pointing skyward.

The tornado killed at least 28 and injured 121. By mid-afternoon, officials said they didn't expect to find any more bodies. But they continued to search.

It came with no warning, Reeves County Sheriff Raul Florez said. "It was a surprise to these people here."

One resident said she and some friends successfully escaped the tornado by driving away from it.

"We were watching the weather," said Patsy Montez. "We always look outside when it's like that."

When they saw the funnel cloud, they jumped in a car and drove out of town.

But Saturday as she wearily surveyed the rubble of her home, Ms. Montez said, "I'm happy that we're alive, yeah, but..."

Florez estimated about 80 percent of the town of 350 was destroyed, and it was hard to tell how it had once looked.

The Catholic church was destroyed. But two statues — of Jesus and Joseph — were unscathed. Someone placed them on top of the church foundation, and later flowers appeared at the base of the statues.

At daybreak police dogs checked debris for signs of life before heavy equipment moved in to cart the rubble away.

"This was our house," said Sergio Candelas, pointing to the remains of a frame building that was both his family's dwelling and a small grocery store.

He said his family escaped Friday by getting into a car and driving out of town, seeking shelter in a nearby cotton gin.

Saturday, family members came by for odds and ends: his mother's rocking chair, an encyclopedia.

A wheelchair they owned came to rest upright at the corner of the lot. But their pickup truck had vanished.

"I'm not too worried about the house," Candelas said. "We've got a lot of friends here we're worried about. This house can be rebuilt somehow."

His family, in fact, was among the lucky.

Candelas said his mother, who takes care of his children, had not sent them to the special pre-school graduation Friday at a community building where about half of the 28 deaths occurred.

The ominous weather had made her keep the children at home, he said.

His sister, Priscilla Rodriguez, who lives in Pecos, said the family didn't have insurance. "Most of the people around here couldn't afford insurance," she said.

Ambulance bids top city council agenda

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council is to discuss and take unspecified action on ambulance proposals at its meeting at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Airpark meeting room.

The Council is expected to act on advice from the ambulance advisory committee, which is expected to meet Tuesday morning.

Because of the Memorial Day holiday, no Monday work session has been scheduled.

The city received six ambulance service proposals by the Thursday afternoon deadline, including bids from Lee Ambulance, which currently operates in Howard County, and a company that proposes to establish a service the city and county would own.

First Responder of Sanger, a company selling ambulances, has a consulting service that establishes ambulance services for municipalities, Fire Chief Carl Dorton has said.

City and county funds would be used to purchase equipment and operate the service, and the company would be paid a consulting fee, he said.

The annual cost for the first three years would be $263,233 and would then be reduced about $50,000 per year, he said. But he added that is a "worst case scenario," and the overall cost could be lower.

Rural Metro of Scottsdale, Ariz., submitted the lowest bid, for an annual subsidy of $101,149, said Purchasing Agent Leonard Hadley. The second lowest bid was from Med Care EMS of Breckenridge, for $120,000 annually. Texas EMS of Houston bid $204,000.

Lee Ambulance's bid was the highest from a private company, for $360,000 a year, Hadley said. The company currently is being subsidized about $98,000 a year in goods and services from the city and county.

The city began its ambulance service search in April when Lee Ambulance owner Charles Ginn decided to end the contract with the city and county because of too many uncollected debts.

In other business the Council will consider:

- A resolution authorizing Mayor Cotton Mize to execute an annual contract concerning the housing voucher program.
- Appointments to the Civil Service Commission and the Audit Committee.
- Bids for a fairway mower.
- A livestock permit for Mical Morgan, 2909 Old Highway 80.
- A temporary mobile home permit for Cynthia Clanton, 401 Westover Road.
- Presentation of a monetary gift from the Big Spring Motorcycle Association.

Summer session

governor to shift funds from one state agency to another in times of fiscal crisis if the Legislature isn't in session.

Voters approved a constitutional amendment two years ago that allows the Legislature to grant such power to the governor. But lawmakers, who traditionally guard their power over state spending, have been reluctant to part with any.

Various proposals have been floated to give the new clout to the governor and a panel of other officials. Clements says some plan must pass, although the Senate early this year voted against even bringing the question before debate.

"The people of Texas, who voted for the constitutional amendment, are just being ignored by certain people in the House and Senate," Clements said.

According to Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary, two other unresolved issues also may be subjects raised in a special session, although Bashur said he doesn't know if either by itself would force the additional 30 days.

Clements favors House-passed legislation to regulate abortions, but Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, has threatened to "talk for two days" to filibuster and kill the bill if it reaches the Senate floor this session.

Bashur said Clements has discussed the possibility of the abortion question as a special session agenda item.

"He did not say definitely," Bashur said. "He said he would seriously consider it. He very well may. It's not definite."

Also not definite for a special agenda, but quite important to the governor, are several economic development bills, including one that would merge the seven state economic-development agencies into a unified Texas Department of Commerce.

"He considers that a highest priority," Bashur said.

Police beat

Thieves disturb household

Thieves broke into the residence of Estelita Franco, 906 Aylford St., between 10:30 and 11:50 p.m. Friday, and stole a $75 color TV, a purse with $12 cash and a $30 battery charger. She told police everything in the house was disturbed.

• Someone threw a rock that broke the windshield of a 1978 Dodge owned by Donald Deen Booth of Midland, as he drove on FM 700 in the 1000 block at 8:50 p.m. Friday. Monetary loss was listed as $280.

• Three tires were damaged on two Trinity Baptist Church vehicles and a van battery was stolen between 5:30 p.m. Thursday and 8 a.m. Friday. Monetary loss was listed as $365.

• Sanjuana Ochoa Ortega, 31, and Juan Lopez Ortega, 43, both of Box 116, were arrested at 2505 S. Gregg St. early Saturday morning on charges of disorderly conduct.

Confessed killer is freed

AUSTIN (AP) — This weekend, for only the second time in almost 22 years, James C. Cross Jr. is a free man — at least temporarily.

Except for a short furlough last year, Cross had been incarcerated continuously since Aug. 6, 1965, the day he confessed to killing University of Texas students Susan Rigsby and Shirley Stark.

Cross posted $150,000 bail and was freed from the Travis County Jail on Friday after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals let stand a decision that lowered his bond from $1 million.

Cross is due back in the courtroom of State District Judge Mace B. Thurman on Tuesday for a hearing in the retrial of the 22-year-old murder case against him. The proceedings are expected to last several days. The trial is set for June 15.

Freedom Bail Bonds, an Austin bail bond company, posted two cashier's checks totaling $65,000. Cross then put up $85,030 as collateral and was released.

Cross left jail about 6:30 p.m., smiled as David Botsford, his attorney, told reporters they would not talk to them, and then walked off. Botsford refused to say where Cross would spend the weekend. Cross, sporting a new beard, carried a brown grocery bag full of belongings.

Miss Rigsby and Miss Stark, both 21-year-old University of Texas students, disappeared July 18, 1965, after arriving in Austin for the second summer session. Twelve days later, the bodies of the Chi Omega sorority sisters were found in a field north of Austin.

Closed meetings at issue

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — City council members who divulge the proceedings of legally closed sessions — and reporters who write about what they're told about closed meetings — could be fined up to $300 under an ordinance proposed by Mayor Malcolm Clark.

The city needs the ordinance, Clark said, because some council members have talked to reporters about what happened during executive sessions.

The mayor accused Councilman Willie Lewis Jr. of divulging the proceedings of executive session on at least four occasions. Specifically, the mayor said, Lewis revealed council discussions concerning replacement of a councilman.

"We have people who have no ethics on this council," Clark said. "Those members of the council need to be brought to task."

By publishing or broadcasting Lewis' remarks, the media was "acting as an accessory after the fact," Clark said.

But Lewis said, "It's a vendetta against me for exposing him."

Lewis said he talked about the executive sessions regarding the selection of the new member because the council violated the state open meetings act. He said Clark called for a show of hands in closed session on each of five candidates considered for the council seat.

Divulging the executive session proceeding is similar to that revealing grand jury deliberations, Clark said. State law prohibits grand jury members and witnesses from discussing testimony and deliberations made behind closed doors. "We'll go to court on this," Clark said. "We've been there before."

'Firsts' for Texas clubs

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A woman is poised to take the helm of the Texas Jaycees, and local Rotarians are preparing to admit their first female member.

Catherine Triska of El Campo was the only candidate for president of the Texas Jaycees in their meeting here this weekend, and no challengers were expected to surface in Saturday's election.

Florida and Colorado already have women as state Jaycees president.

The first local female Rotarian is expected to be Joni Becker of Corpus Christi, who owns a local diet center and is a wife and mother of two. The Corpus Christi Sunrise Rotary Club is expected to admit her June 1.

In 1984, the U.S. Supreme Court began striking down discrimination against women in male service club organizations. The high court intervened on behalf of a woman in Minnesota who wanted to join the Jaycees.

Early this month, the Supreme Court acted again on behalf of women to allow them to become Rotarians. The high court upheld, by a 7-to-0 ruling, a California law that bars Rotary International from ousting local chapters that admit women as members.

Veterans march in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Cheering crowds greeted thousands of Vietnam veterans, many dressed in the camouflage outfits of battle, as they paraded Saturday through downtown Houston as part of a day of music, marching and remembrance.

"In a winning war, everybody is supposed to remember, but this was a losing war, and it was forgot about," said Celestino Garza, 36, of Houston, who fought for a year in Vietnam. "This is something we've wanted for a long time."

Retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland, who commanded U.S. forces in Vietnam, led the parade behind a flag-carrying military honor guard. Veterans organizations, as well as members of various Vietnam military units joined the massive procession.

A crowd of about 100,000 was on hand as the parade began, said Houston Police Lt. K.W. Ginn, who led a police escort. Organizers estimated the turnout for the daylong event could top 200,000.

The parade ended in Houston's Hermann Park, where a replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C., was erected.

Higher education prompts debates

AUSTIN (AP) — House members of a joint budget conference committee rebuffed a $230 million compromise offered by Senate conferees Saturday, nearly snuffing the delicate negotiations.

Senate conferees offered to drop to higher education spending proposed by the House and even slice an additional $30 million from that figure.

But House conferees said the offer wasn't good enough because they already had reduced their proposed higher education spending to $386 million over current levels.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said the offer was snubbed because Senate-proposed spending still would require an unacceptable tax bill.

"We are not going to pass, over in the House, a $3.5 billion tax bill. Let's either negotiate down to a tax bill that we can pass, or let's just forget it (the negotiations)," said Rudd, committee co-chairman.

The budget passed by the House includes higher-education spending that is $636 million over 1986-87 levels.

The House now is proposing to spend $4.45 billion on higher education, while the Senate wants to spend $4.67 billion, a $224 million difference.

"It seems to me that if we're going to look beyond this budget cycle and on into the next decade and the next century to build a new economy... that we've got to re-establish our commitment to higher education," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan. "I contend that you don't do that through further retreat. You do that by making a strong statement."

The conferees are trying to reach a compromise on the House-approved $39.4 billion spending plan and the Senate-endorsed $40 billion budget proposal. At the same time, both groups are trying to balance the budget at a level acceptable to Gov. Bill Clements.

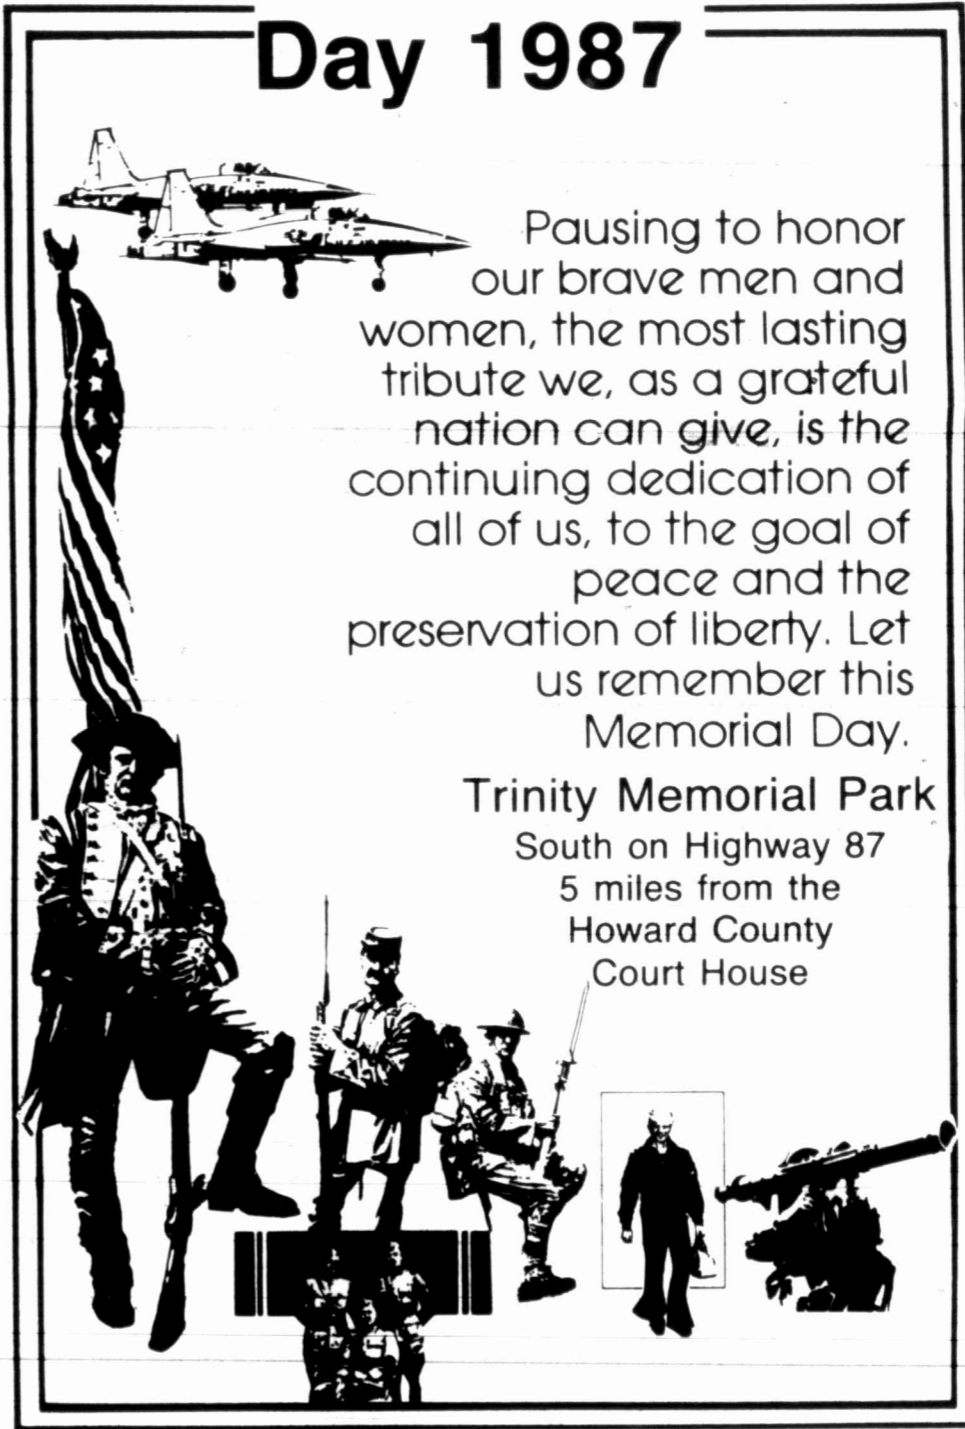

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby reacts to debate over the Texas budget. Legislators attempted to reach a compromise on the issue of higher education spending Saturday and will continue their debate today at noon.

Three employees shot

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Three employees of a usually busy fast-food restaurant were shot to death before the store's morning opening hour and were not found until another employee arrived Saturday afternoon, police said.

The three apparently had started work at 7 a.m., preparing the restaurant for opening, and were interrupted by whoever killed them, said police spokesman Ott Cefkin. Utensils and salad material were scattered around, Cefkin said.

They were killed sometime before the restaurant's scheduled 10:30 a.m. opening, but police received no word until about 20 minutes after noon, Cefkin said.

Meese plans testimony

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Edwin Meese III will be a witness in an independent counsel's investigation of former White House aide Lyn Nofziger for his alleged ties to a Virginia defense contractor, law enforcement sources say.

Special prosecutor James McKay, who already is delving into Nofziger's lobbying activities on behalf of Westech Corp., has widened the criminal investigation to include Nofziger's efforts on behalf of Fairchild Industries Inc. of nearby Chantilly, Va., said company spokeswoman Deborah Tucker.

The probe involves Fairchild's success in obtaining extensions of contracts for the A-10 ground attack plane, a campaign in which Nofziger was involved shortly after leaving the job of White House political director in 1982, said sources close to the investigation.

Meese was contacted about the Fairchild matter while working at the White House, presumably by Nofziger, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

PTL doghouse: $4,500

FORT MILL, S.C. — Helped by the faithful, the financially troubled PTL ministry raised more than $150,000 Saturday by auctioning thousands of items. An antique car sold for $27,000 and an air-conditioned dog house fetched $4,500.

"I think it's worth about $800," said Jerry Crawford, a Salinas, Calif., building contractor who bought the dog house and promptly donated it back for resale.

"I didn't buy it to keep," said Crawford, a regular PTL contributor. "I did it because I believe in PTL."

Some of the items came from the executive offices and penthouse suite used by Jim Bakker, who resigned as PTL chairman March 19 after admitting to a 1980 sexual tryst with a church secretary and turned the ministry over to the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

The dog house came from the Bakker home but was hardly used by the family's pet because the air conditioning made the building rumble, PTL officials said.

Evacuees rest along a river with their possessions after being removed from their homes near the China Daxinganling Forest last week due to the worst forest fire ever in the country. Firefighters have attempted to halt the 17-day-old fire on its northwest front by digging 70 miles of firebreaks.

China fire consumes lives, forest

BEIJING (AP) — The fire that broke out in the great Daxinganling forest in China's far northeast May 6 has become a major disaster. Flames have raged over nearly 1.5 million acres, the death toll has passed 200 and 51,000 people are homeless.

The fire may have been started by a bolt of lightning or perhaps by oil leaking from a machine used in timber cutting in the remote and sparsely populated area of Heilongjiang province.

There have been more than 800 fires in China's largest natural forest over the past 20 years, mostly in the spring when the rain stops and the wind sweeps down from Siberia.

This fire first hit Xilinji village, nearly 1,000 miles northeast of Beijing. One Chinese report said only 12 of the town's 700 homes were left standing after the conflagration passed through.

On May 7, great fire balls, fueled by 60 mph winds, hit Tuqiang just to the east. In 15 minutes the town was destroyed, at least 100 people were killed and 18,000 were left homeless. Other villages and railway stations were swallowed up by the firestorm.

By the next day the flames had traveled rapidly eastward, threatening to consume Tahe, a railroad junction with a population of 100,000. Thousands were mobilized to build firebreaks around the town.

On May 9 the rest of China and the world learned of the inferno and was told it had already claimed 100 lives.

Foreign journalists have not been allowed on the scene, which is in a restricted area near the Soviet border.

The official death count had risen to 142 by May 12, but Tahe was, for the moment, out of danger. Vice Premier Li Peng flew to the scene and said the fire was the worst ever since the People's Republic was founded in 1949.

By May 12, the fire was actually many fires that were burning out and then being rekindled by dry winds. On May 14 it was reported that the two main eastern and western sections of the fire were only 11 miles apart, and getting closer.

Two days later, however, the official Xinhua News Agency was reporting that the blaze was being brought under control, and would soon be extinguished. That proved overly optimistic.

That same day, May 16, strong winds and high temperatures again fanned the flames and Tahe was once more in danger of being enveloped by fire. On the western side, meanwhile, a 19-mile fire line was moving swiftly northward, toward the Heilongjiang River dividing China and the Soviet Union. The number of confirmed dead was up to 191.

By May 19, the firefighters — about 44,000 soldiers, forest rangers and local people — had completed 118 miles of firebreaks to the east, sealing off Tahe and containing the blaze in the eastern section.

But the good news ended there. Farther north, two sections of the fire merged and moved toward the river. The river town of Mohe, China's northernmost community, frantically worked to build firebreaks as more than 3,000 homes in the outskirts burned to the ground.

Mohe so far has kept the flames at bay, but the fire has taken another ominous turn, heading westward toward Inner Mongolia and a huge tract of forestland called China's "green treasure house."

Favorable winds had provided some relief by Thursday, but the blaze continued to rage along the southern front, the Forestry Ministry said.

Superpowers blamed

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iranian officials on Saturday accused Iraq of deliberately attacking the USS Stark and warned of additional "problems" if America maintains its military presence in the Persian Gulf.

Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati told U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar that the May 17 raid on the American frigate was "premeditated and designed to pave the way for the superpowers to directly intervene in the region," Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said.

The IRNA report, monitored in Nicosia, said Velayati's allegation was contained in a message sent Saturday to the secretary-general.

182 vehicles in disaster

MUNICH, West Germany — A 182-vehicle pileup on the rain-slick expressway between Nuremberg and Munich Saturday killed two people and injured 68, police reported.

"It looked like a battlefield on the expressway," one witness said.

State police in Munich said the accident near the town of Allershausen, 18 miles north of Munich, was caused by people who were driving too fast for conditions.

"To our knowledge, inappropriate speed on the wet highway and too little distance between cars caused the crashes," a police spokesman said.

The dead were not identified.

Police said the chain-reaction series of accidents began about 9 a.m. when the expressway was busy with weekend traffic.

Fire prompts session

KUWAIT — A fire broke out at a gas tank in the Ahmadi port area, Kuwait's key oil export terminal, and the government held an emergency session Saturday to discuss the situation.

The Kuwait News Agency (KUNA) quoted an Information Ministry source as saying the blaze had been "brought under total control" and there were no casualties, but other sources said the fire was still raging Saturday night.

Officials would not speculate on what started the fire — the latest in a series of explosions and fires at oil installations in Ahmadi and other targets in downtown Kuwait in the past year.

Escape attempt foiled

BERLIN — Communist East German border guards carried away a body early Saturday from what looked like a failed escape attempt at the Berlin Wall, West Berlin police said.

Two officers saw the guards pick up the body from the ground before dawn and put it in a truck that drove away, said a police spokesman who insisted on anonymity.

A new ornament was added to M.K. Carson's van Saturday, when Friday's storm uprooted a tree in front of 800 South Lancaster in the photo above; no estimate of damage was available. Heavy rains Friday night and Saturday morning produced runoff that unsettled asphalt on North Goliad between 10th and 11th Streets at right. The photo below illustrates a swollen Big Spring Creek turning this house at 1310 Baylor Blvd. into beachfront property — and stopped traffic in the area.

Reynolds admonishes Court for perpetuating racial inequality

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds on Saturday said the Supreme Court was as much to blame for perpetuating slavery and racial inequality as were the authors of the Constitution. Reynolds' remarks, delivered during a Vanderbilt University luncheon in Nashville, came in response to criticism of the founding fathers by Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall. Reynolds said that Marshall is correct to point out the importance of the 14th Amendment, passed after the Civil War, guaranteeing equal protection of the laws for both blacks and whites. But, he said, "we ought to respectfully decline" what he characterized as Marshall's invitation to consign the original Constitution "to the dustbin of history." Reynolds added: "It is one thing to be reminded of the compromise on slavery during the making of the Constitution. It is quite another, however, to encourage the view that there are two Constitutions, the one of 1787, the other consisting of the Bill of Rights and the 14th Amendment; that the old one is so thoroughly defective that it did not survive the Civil War and that the new one alone is worthy of celebration." In a speech in Hawaii on May 6, Marshall noted that the original Constitution condoned slavery and denied women the right to vote. "I do not believe that the meaning of the Constitution was forever fixed at the Philadelphia Convention (of 1787)," Marshall said. "Nor do I find the wisdom, foresight and sense of justice exhibited by the farmers particularly profound." He added: "To the contrary, the government they devised was defective from the start — requiring several amendments, a civil war and momentous social transformation to attain... its respect for the individual freedoms and human rights we hold as fundamental today." Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division for the past six years, said there is no excuse for the original Constitution's failure to repudiate slavery.

Cpl. Bracy hearing recessed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pre-trial military hearing into the espionage case of Cpl. Arnold Bracy is in recess until next week. Lt. Col. John Shotwell, a Marine Corps spokesman, said the fourth day of closed-door hearings at the Quantico, Va., Marine base lasted more than five hours with testimony from two agents of the Naval Investigative Service. Bracy has recanted a statement he gave the NIS that allegedly implicated both himself and a colleague, Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree, in espionage while they were assigned to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow. Maj. Geoffrey P. Lyon, the hearing officer, recessed the proceedings until next Tuesday. Shotwell said the hearings might be completed next week. Prosecutors are expected to summarize their case with a goal of convincing the hearing officer their evidence is sufficient to justify a court-martial. Once the hearing is completed, the hearing officer forwards a recommendation to the commanding general at Quantico, Lt. Gen. Frank E. Petersen Jr., who makes the final decision. Bracy and Lonetree have been accused of espionage while working as guards at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow in 1965 and 1966.

Grads urged to consider public service

By The Associated Press
 Graduating college seniors got advice Saturday from Vice President George Bush, first lady Nancy Reagan and Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, who urged her audience to consider a career in public service.

Other speakers included Robert C. Stempel, president-elect of General Motors Corp.

"We need inventive thinkers to guide our economy, protect our environment, secure our rights and establish our place in the world," Mrs. Dole said at commencement at Wheaton College in Norton, Mass.

Her speech was interrupted by a protest over a vote scheduled for Sunday that could open the doors of the all-women's school to men. College trustees already have voted in principle to go coed.

During the secretary's speech, a small plane flew over a crowd of about 1,000 people, bearing a banner reading: "Trustees Vote No."

Bush told University of New Hampshire graduates at Durham, N.H., that the United States and Soviet Union are close to reaching an agreement on reducing or eliminating medium-range missiles in Europe.

"Just how much we can achieve remains to be seen," Bush said, declining to offer specifics on negotiations in Geneva, Switzerland.

"The United States will certainly meet halfway on any treaty that calls for equitable, verifiable and stabilizing reductions," he said.

Mrs. Reagan called on Georgetown University's graduating physicians to be alert for signs of drug problems among patients as well as colleagues.

"You have a higher obligation because you are the best and the brightest," she said. "You are held more accountable because of the profession you've chosen. To put it plainly, doctors should know better and their patients deserve better."

The first lady was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters for her work in promoting health and battling disease through her anti-drug abuse campaign.

Stempel told graduates at Worcester Polytechnic Institute in Worcester, Mass., that they must be prepared to deal with the "new industrial revolution."

"It's a revolution that is dramatically changing not only U.S. industry, but all of America and its business and economic relations with the rest of the world," said Stempel, named Friday to succeed James McDonald as president of the world's largest automaker on Sept. 1.

U.S. industry must develop new strategies, overhaul old systems and disregard outdated concepts to remain competitive on a global scale, he said.

At Bowdoin College, in Brunswick, Maine, five graduating seniors spoke, following a 181-year-old tradition that has produced addresses by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Alfred C. Kinsey, who later directed a study of American sexual behavior that made him a household name.

"Parents and alumni enjoy hearing what's on the minds of students today," said Bowdoin President A. LeRoy Gleason.

"Parents can listen to celebrities on television," but seldom hear their children or their classmates talk about issues that are important to them, Gleason said.

Students protesting board action receive suspension

MELISSA (AP) — Almost three dozen students angered by the school board's failure to renew their coach's contract have been suspended after staging a sit-in on the football field, school officials said.

"We were mad, but that (the sit-in) was what we thought was right," said 15-year-old Tony Keenan, an eighth-grader at Melissa Elementary School. "We would do anything for the coach."

The school board voted Wednesday not to renew a contract for Coach Bill Morris because trustees were not happy with his performance, said school attorney David Ryan. Morris was also a physical education teacher at the school, which has 115 students in grades five through eight, for the past three years.

The community of 405 is located near McKinney in northeast Texas. School Superintendent James Masters said Collin County sheriff's deputies were summoned to the school grounds during the sit-in Thursday as a precautionary measure because some of the students broke a window and threw food on building walls.

He said 32 students were suspended for three days but would be allowed to make up class work.

Camp RYLA changes lives

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH
Every day, Camp RYLA begins with a flag-raising ceremony. Then campers recite the pledge of allegiance.

Tumbleweed Smith

RYLA stands for Rotary Youth Leadership Awards — a prestigious honor given to high school juniors. The recipients receive a week at a camp in the mountains near Taos, N.M. — courtesy of the Rotary club.

It is a week the youngsters never forget. Lives are changed there.

The camp offers such usual diversions as ballgames, fishing, computer workshops, mountain climbing and late-night bull sessions in the cabins. But the main focus at RYLA is on the guest speakers.

The campers hear three speakers a day. An ex-POW tells how his faith kept him sane while he was in solitary confinement for years.

A rich man tells how he made money and avoided failures. A manufacturer talks about the assembly line.

A successful oilman describes mergers and take-overs. An artist, a pro football player and a blind boy discuss courage and determination.

For five days, speaker after speaker inspires the teen-agers by telling about personal experiences with patriotism and free enterprise. It is a heavy dose for the campers, whose eyes get wider, and whose vision gets clearer every day.

They are given some high-powered tools to work their way toward doing something constructive with their lives. They learn about the principles that made this country great.

They are taught leadership skills and how to recognize opportunities that are available — and the camp is a builder of self-confidence.

The young RYLA campers are taught some surprising and valuable lessons — such as when you start a business. They are told there is no retirement plan, no insurance, no salary and no guarantee that the business will succeed.

Camp RYLA is sponsored by Rotary District 573, which includes the Texas panhandle. The RYLA camp for boys is in its 11th year. The girls' camp was started three years ago.

Each of the approximately 50 clubs in the district annually select two boys and one girl to attend Camp RYLA.

To be selected, the boys and girls must have a genuine interest in life and a curiosity about it. They must be intelligent and need to be involved in school activities.

They don't have to be a class officer, football player or cheerleader, but they should be able to meet people well and have a desire to attend the camp.

In other words, it takes someone who enjoys life, is well adjusted and who has shown a spark of greatness which could be kindled.

A film was made about Camp RYLA to show to prospective campers. For that work, Rotary District 573 received an award from the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa. — an organization that each year recognizes constructive works that contribute to responsible citizenship and inspire love of country.

The Freedoms Foundation emphasizes that every citizen personally should understand and maintain the American way of life, honor it by exemplary conduct, and pass it intact to succeeding generations.

It is indeed rare to be recognized by such a group as the Freedoms Foundation. What makes this award even more special is the fact that the foundation has its own camp for outstanding young people. For that esteemed group to say that these West Texas Rotarians are doing something meaningful truly is significant and should be taken as a sign of encouragement to continue.

Free enterprise and the right to be an individual are too infrequently taught and applauded. These basic freedoms are so much a part of our lives they are taken for granted. It is good to have a reason to examine them once again.

The award was presented at the Rotary District Conference in Ruidoso's Inn of the Mountain Gods on Saturday, May 9. It will be presented again at a Freedoms Foundation Program in El Paso on May 30.

Congratulations, Rotarians!

'Non-profit charity' into drug sales

HOUSTON (AP) — A fraternal organization that allegedly operated two buildings where drugs were sold is designated a non-profit charity by the state, and had pledged to use profits from bingo games to help in crime prevention, the Houston Post reported Saturday.

Two buildings leased by the Grand Lodge of the Noble and Benevolent Order of the Bears were seized by the federal marshal's office in March and April after being raided by a special Crack Task Force, authorities said.

Crack, a powerful cocaine derivate, is known for its intense but short-lived euphoric effect on users.

Bears Lodge No. 468 was raided March 30 after police used a tow truck to rip open its reinforced steel door. Six suspects were taken into custody and 34 specimens of crack were seized, police said.

Prospect of skating at 200 mph has some scared

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Welcome to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, the most dangerous skating rink in the world.

On the day he won the pole position for Sunday's 71st Indianapolis 500, Mario Andretti called the 2½-mile oval "skate city."

Skating, though, wasn't meant to be done in cars that can't handle the lightest rain, especially not at better than 200 mph, certainly not when one slip can spell disaster.

But the prospect has created more than the usual tension this year, raising fears of the most dangerous Indy ever, though for the first time since 1980 the field is not the fastest.

"I'm sorry to say this, but it could be one of those type of races to go down in the history books," said Kevin Cogan, runnerup to Bobby Rahal last year. "The possibility is there. We'll just have to wait and see."

Unseasonable heat through most of the month made the track slick and treacherous. Problems tuning new radial tires to some of the highly sensitive hybrid racing chassis added another element of danger.

The result was 23 crashes and four drivers injured during practice and time trials.

"All of a sudden you feel that the tires are not sticking. You're losing too much time going sideways instead of forward," Andretti said. "None of that is visible until you're about to lose it and hit the wall, but from the seat of the car you know what it is."

Thus, the electricity for the world's biggest and, at more than $4 million, richest auto race may crackle a bit more when the 33 drivers squeeze into their brightly painted open-wheel missiles for the 11 a.m. EST start before an expected 400,000 spectators and a worldwide television audience.

Somewhat cooler weather — highs in the mid and upper 70s are forecast — should help the situation, giving the cars better traction and helping the turbocharged engines to breathe and produce their full, 750-horsepower.

"In a situation like this, everybody becomes more aware of all the possibilities," Rahal said. "We're all professional drivers here, and everybody is going to have to keep his head. I think all of us will approach this in the right way."

Rahal will start in the middle of the first of 11 three-car rows, between Andretti and Rick Mears. They are among a record nine former winners accounting for 18 Indy victories.

The others are A.J. Foyt, Johnny Rutherford, Danny Sullivan, Al Unser, Tom Sneva and Gordon Johncock, who is coming back from a two-year retirement at the age of 50.

"That's a lot of experience seeded through the field," Rutherford, a three-time winner, said. "That's going to help a lot, I think, because those guys have all been through it before. They'll keep their heads and maybe help other people do the same."

Also mixed into the lineup are six Indianapolis rookies.

The fastest qualifier among them, Davy Jones, the youngest driver in the field at 22, said, "I'm not going to do anything crazy. The main thing is to keep out of trouble at the start and just let the pace of the race get set."

The field average of 207.194 mph was down from the record of 210.358 a year ago, but Rahal's race record of 170.722 mph could be in jeopardy if the dire predictions are wrong and the caution periods are minimal.

Foyt, stretching his mark to 30 consecutive starts here, will be trying to add to another personal record, four Indy victories. The 52-year-old Texan liked the omens, particularly the fact that the only other times he has started fourth — 1967 and 1977 — he has won.

But he suffered a setback Thursday when he crashed during the final practice before the race. Foyt was unhurt, but his crew had to scramble to get the wrecked Lola back in shape.

Emerson Fittipaldi, a two-time Formula One champion and one of eight foreign drivers in the field, was not as fortunate. He, too, walked away from a crash on Thursday, but his primary car, which had been qualified on the inside of the fourth row, had to be withdrawn. Fittipaldi will start 33rd in a backup March.

tournament of his life — the Olympic trials. He thinks he can win that, and then the Gold.

"That's what I'm shooting for; the Olympics is my dream. A lot of people ask me about turning pro, but I tell them to talk to me after the Olympics. The Olympic medal — that's not too much to ask for," he says.

But he wants more.

"My father's one of my big motivations. Besides winning the Olympic gold medal, my goal is to retire both my parents. I want to make it easy for them, because they've worked for us for such a long time," he says.

Another of Juan's biggest motivations is to make Ed Garza proud. Garza's been coaching the Baldwins since "they were all a bunch of snotty nosed young'uns."

"I think Juan is good enough to compete in next year's Olympics," Garza says. "As a matter of fact, he's the only one who I feel has a chance from West Texas."

"He has a lot of polish — he's a thinking boxer. He's not a brawler, he's a boxer. He has charisma, that is also part of it. He's a real sharp boy, and the reason he's achieved this status is because of how bad he wanted it," Garza says.

As Garza pointed out, Juan thinks in the ring. He gets a feel for his opponent, and then decides what to do.

"I can adapt — that's my advantage. I can fight three or four styles. If I need to slug, I'll slug. If I need to box and move, that's what I'll do. And if I need to counter, I can do that too."

"I like to box, to move and pick my shots — to think in the ring," he says.

By picking his shots, Juan has won 225 fights and lost just 24. He plans to continue winning, not for personal glory, but for the glory of his family and friends.

"You do something great, and somebody notices — it makes you feel great when you make everybody else feel proud of what you're doing," he says.

"There's nobody better than anybody here. We're all brothers and we're all tough. We can handle the pressure; we've been at it a long time.

"You should see my little brother Martin fight. Last year, he was so weak, and now he can hang with both me and my brother. He's really come on a lot," Juan says, glowing with pride at his little brother's improvement.

With the sun coming down, it's time for the Baldwins to get in the van and ride home to dinner. Littlest brother Joey, who's five, toddles along, making his brothers laugh. Joey, a stocky, miniature version of his brothers, is also tired from the workout.

The youngest Baldwin did the calisthenics with his brothers, and also worked on his punches with his father. He looks like he'll be a terror when he's older, if he's not one already.

"Really, I'd prefer he didn't box," says Juan, "because I plan on making it easy for him when he grows up."

"But he's a tough guy," says Juan, patting little brother on the head and heading for the house.

Jaime Baldwin's got the 'Eye of the Tiger'

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

Though Jaime Baldwin Jr., has lost just 29 out of almost 300 fights, three of those losses have come this year, and the oldest Baldwin brother is not happy.

"I've lost three fights, and it's not because I got beat, it's because I wasn't hungry."

"I'm hungry now — I've got the instinct to kill. I've got to have it," he says.

When Jaime smashes his fists into the heavy bag, he certainly appears to have the killing instinct. If you watch the fierce blows, and try to imagine what they would do to say, a soft belly or a side of ribs, you might find yourself bending over ever so slightly.

Jaime hits like he means it. "He's a crowd pleaser," says his father, Jaime Sr. "There's always going to be blood or a knock-out when he fights. You can tell by the power in his punches. When he hits somebody, they usually go down."

After a little time with the Baldwins, it's easy to see that Jaime is the quietest, the more brooding of the three. His intensity shows.

"He's more to himself," says Jaime Sr. "He's always been like that, but he's the one with the real quick temper. I guess you could say that when he goes into the ring, he goes into fight, and that's it."

"He's a Mancini type, working all the time and then the right hand and usually the guy goes down," father Baldwin says.

Jaime Jr. agrees that he doesn't like to "play pretty."

"That's just the way I fight. I'm in there trying to hit and I get hit. I don't get hurt, but you have to take punches to get punches. It makes me feel better when I get hit," says the intense 132-pounder.

"You're there to box and punch, not look pretty. I'd rather do that than let the judges score the fight, because the judges aren't too smart around here."

"I just like to punch, that's my style, to go in there and brawl. My other brothers like to box — I don't have much in common with them," he says, comparing their styles.

The oldest Baldwin will fight in a tournament in Colorado Springs, Colo., on June 7 that will go a long way in determining his future. If he doesn't win there, he says he may go pro.

But he's not going all the way to Colorado to lose.

"I'm not gonna' come back unless I come back with a first place trophy."

"It's like Stallone says — 'the eye of the tiger'. And I'm starting to go hungry," says Jaime Baldwin Jr.

Cade said guilty of raping Houston woman

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — A Brown County jury found Green Bay Packers defensive back Mossy Cade guilty Saturday of two charges that he sexually assaulted a 44-year-old woman relative by marriage.

Cade, 25, was charged with three counts of second-degree sexual assault, but was acquitted on the other.

The woman, from Houston, had accused the Cade of assaulting her at his De Pere, Wis., home on Nov. 4, 1985.

The verdict came the same day Cade testified in his own defense, saying he wasn't even home during the hours the woman said she had been assaulted.

It also came a day after another circuit court jury acquitted former Packer James Lofton, recently traded to the Los Angeles Raiders, of an unrelated sexual-assault charge.

Cade testified that after playing in a game against the Chicago Bears that Sunday, he returned to his home with the woman, who was a guest. He said he left later in the evening, went to a tavern and then to a restaurant in Ashwabeno.

Cade contradicted other parts of the woman's testimony under questioning from defense attorney Donald Zuidmulder.

"Did you sexually assault that woman?" Zuidmulder asked Cade.

"No I didn't," he said.

But Special Prosecutor Royce Finne angrily asked Cade on cross examination if he thought the woman went into the middle of De Pere and somehow found a sperm donor with the same blood type as Cade's.

Lab analysts testified earlier that Cade could not be ruled out as the source of the sperm taken from the woman during an examination later that day.

But a defense witness later testified that almost no male could be ruled out as the source.

"You want this jury to believe that your (relative) framed you for rape," said Finne in a loud voice.

"Can you give this jury a single reason why (she would make this up)?" he said. Cade said he couldn't.

But Zuidmulder argued in his closing statement that Cade was a victim of the woman's hatred for Cade's relative, whom she is divorcing.

Zuidmulder said the woman was trying to "manipulate the system" and bring the Cade family down. He said her testimony, her actions and the physical evidence in the case were full of inconsistencies.

In his rebuttal, Finne called the defense a "distortion" of the facts and said the case was not about a family feud or the competency of police departments.

"The defense would have you believe that she didn't act raped," Finne said.

"How do you act when you've been raped?" he asked the seven-woman, five-man jury.

He said the presence of bruises on the woman's body and the testimony of one lab expert that the sperm taken from her likely was less than 24 hours old were indisputable.

You can paint, he promises

Artist Robert Garden believed I could do it and so did I.

However, when he handed me a brush and said — "What do you want to paint?" a knot instantly developed in the pit of my stomach. The moment of truth had arrived — could I or couldn't I?

He says everyone can learn to paint — "it's 10 percent talent and 90 percent desire."

Based on that formula, my confidence was boosted, since learning to paint always has been one of my goals.

He added that of approximately 10,000 people he has taught to paint, he hasn't failed yet.

The thought quickly occurred: "I hope I'm not the first."

The native West Virginian has been painting for 40 years and been teaching his quick-draw style of oil painting since 1968.

"I developed quick-draw because I was thoroughly disgusted with my instruction in college. I saw a need a long time ago to have a good, firm way of teaching a class. I wanted to take the mystery out of painting."

We decided a seascape at sunset would be appropriate for this lesson. If successful at all, perhaps I would have a masterpiece on the wall at home, reminiscent of the beautiful California sunsets I enjoyed living on the West Coast.

With a pair of canvases — one for him and one for me — we began the process.

The first step was to dip my brush into a bit of white and a bit of gray — two of the 13 colors blobbed on a palette.

With direction from Garden, I swooped the light gray on the canvas to give the illusion of a horizon and a sand dune. From there we worked on the sky and clouds and added more detail. Never did we clean our brush.

With a couple of swift strokes he'd outline the clouds and the bushes.

"Now you do it," he'd say. His years of experience was evident. What was swift and easy for him was a little awkward and unnatural for me.

As I mimicked his painting efforts, he'd praise me. My confidence level stayed high because of his constant reassurance that my painting was going to turn out well.

For about 30 minutes I copied his every stroke and maneuver.

It astonished me when he told me to sign it, before I realized that we were reaching the conclusion of our effort. With his guidance I added a few finishing touches that helped bring the painting alive — and then we signed our works of art.

Garden was eight years old when he began painting.

"I lived in the country on a farm. One day I saw a tigerlily and thought it was so pretty that I picked it and took it home. When I got home it was wilted. I told myself that next time I'd paint it so it would last forever."

As a child, he often hid his paintings.

"I didn't want to get into trouble for not doing my chores," he said, with a chuckle.

At 8, his artwork was discovered by his mother. "She was so impressed that she bought my first set of paints."

Until then, since he didn't have brushes, he used dog and cat hair to make his own brushes. For paints, he used his mother's cosmetics.

The first painting he sold — at the age of eight — brought $80.

"It was then that I knew what I wanted to do with the rest of my life," he said with a smile.

At 17 he started earning his livelihood as a commercial artist and discovered he also enjoyed teaching his craft.

"I came to a crossroads in my life where I had to choose between doing paintings for galleries or teaching. It's impossible to do both."

He chose teaching because of his desire to help others, he said. The 49-year-old travels internationally and teaches his art work. He also has 75 employees, including his wife, teaching his quick-draw method.

Garden is in the process of making a TV series "You Can Paint" which will air on PBS and costs 1½ million dollars to produce. He said he's going to go on location and teach painting for the show.

He has appeared on such shows as "Good Morning America" and "P.M. Magazine" and has written two books, "Anyone Can Paint, I Promise" and "You Can Paint, I Promise."

Garden will conduct two free demonstrations — at 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. — at the Park Inn International, 300 Tulane Ave., on May 27.

Painting classes are also offered June 10 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. and June 11 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuition is $35 for one day and $60 for two days. The night class is $25. For more information or registration, call 263-0562.

Artist Robert Garden explains to Carleen Everett, top photo, the art of painting a cloud. We're using white paint and blobbing it on our canvases in a circular motion to make the clouds appear billowy.

Grass and high weeds were the final touches we drew on our works of art. We used a combination of colors and painting techniques to create the image of depth.

Brushing lightly over the clouds gave a softer look and made them appear to be far away.

Angry wife eager to be the bearer of bad news

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my husband had an affair with a young co-worker I'll call Debbie. Debbie was married and had a small child. When I learned of this affair, I was ready to throw my husband out. Well, since then, my husband has done a complete turnabout and has never been so attentive and loving in all the 27 years of our marriage. Debbie was "let go" from her job, her husband has divorced her - keeping the child, the house, etc. Debbie has recently married a man about five years her junior. He is the son of a very good friend of mine. She's a kind, gentle and a highly principled woman. My question: Should I tell my friend what kind of no-good tramp her son married? My blood boils when I recall how that little slut came into my home, pretending to be my friend when all the while she was playing house with my husband.

CAN'T FORGET

DEAR CAN'T: Now, why on earth would you want to hurt your good friend by telling her that her son had a married a "no-good tramp"? She'd be devastated to hear such shocking news about her new daughter-in-law. Let go of your anger, and don't try to punish Debbie further. She's already paid dearly for the affair.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this: An Open Letter to Wedding Guests:

After eight months of planning, and several thousand dollars, my daughter's wedding was beautiful. Thank you all for coming. Unfortunately, some of you will not receive a thank-you note for your lovely presents. The reason should be obvious: the practice of bringing a gift to the reception is becoming the norm rather than the exception. Very late in the evening, after the newlyweds had departed, the caterer had been paid and the reception was over, the family was faced with loading hundreds of presents into the too few remaining cars. Naturally, when the gifts were unloaded, some had cards attached, some did not. And don't forget the loose cards found on the floor, on tables, etc.

So, if you receive a note thanking you for the "lovely present," don't blame my daughter for not specifically mentioning your gift. She has no idea who gave her that place setting of sterling silver. We have loose gift cards. How can she possibly thank each of you?

Incidentally, the guests who (properly) sent their presents to our home before the wedding received a thank-you note by return mail!

MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: Your open letter appears to have been written by a woman with a closed mind.

There is no excuse for the cards to be "loose," lost or dropped on the floor: the thoughtful bride asks a member of the family or a close personal friend to see that the cards and gifts are kept together in an orderly fashion. And by the way, it is not considered "improper" to bring a wedding gift to the reception.

Names in the news

By the Associated Press
NEW YORK — Violinist Isaac Stern has been honored by the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters for his efforts to save and restore Carnegie Hall.

Stern on Wednesday received the Award for Distinguished Service to the Arts. More than 30 other awards and prizes were conferred, including the Gold Medal for Belles Lettres to writer Jacques Barzun, and the Gold Medal for Painting to Isabel Bishop.

The membership of the academy and institute includes the nation's leading painters, sculptors, architects, composers and writers. New members inducted Wednesday included painter James Rosenquist, architect Frank Gehry and writers Robert Coover and Renata Adler.

PARIS — Former President Richard Nixon was given a standing ovation at his induction into France's Academie des Beaux Arts, filling the vacancy left by the 1982 death of pianist Artur Schnabel.

Hundreds of academy members, well-wishers, French officials and foreign political leaders cheered Wednesday at Nixon's acceptance speech.

Academy president Arnaud Hauertives praised Nixon for authorizing American citizens to make tax-deductible contributions to French museums and historical monuments. The money helped restore Versailles and Claude Monet's country home in Giverny.

Williams Jr. will be hosts of the 21st-annual Music City News Country Awards at the Grand Ole Opry House, officials announced.

Winners in 13 categories will be recognized in the two-hour syndicated television special to be broadcast live on June 8. Winners are chosen by subscribers to the Music City News.

Miss Osmond's stint at the awards ceremony will come on the heels of an appearance May 30-31 at the fifth-annual Children's Miracle Network Telethon, a fundraiser at Disneyland for children's health care.

DALLAS — Country singer Ray Wiley Hubbard has recovered his $2,000 guitar that had been stolen and pawned for $30, police said.

"It's a fine guitar, and I've written a lot of songs on it," Hubbard said Tuesday, noting that he has owned the 1964 Martin acoustic guitar for nearly 10 years.

Hubbard said the owner of the pawn shop let him take the guitar on credit because he did not have $30 with him.

A Dallas man was charged late Monday with burglary and auto theft after police found him sitting in a stolen car. On the back seat was a guitar case with Hubbard's name.

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — "Little Steven" Van Zandt, the scarf-topped former guitarist for Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band, says there is a wide audience for the politically-charged music he has produced in his solo career. Van Zandt's new album,

"Freedom — No Compromise," deals with apartheid and U.S. involvement in Central America. Two years ago, Van Zandt wrote and produced the anti-apartheid rap single, "Sun City."

"I think that a lot of companies felt there was a limited audience for what I was doing, which I disagreed with completely," Van Zandt said recently.

"I'm not doing what I do for a cult audience. I believe that this is the kind of thing a lot of people are talking about," he said.

Van Zandt, 36, said he believes the pendulum for social comment in pop music had swung so far away "that it hit a wall."

"A lot of things have happened to make people aware there are problems in this world that need addressing," he said.

Bride-elect honored with showers

Anita Butler, bride-elect of Joe Kelly Johnson III, was honored with a bridal shower on May 1 at the home of Robbie Froman, 2301 Morrison. Hostesses for the shower were Robbie Froman, Syble Pope, Leslie Newton, Margaret Ray, Sonya Metcalf, Gayle Worthan and Louise Newberry.

She was presented with an oak and glass canister set and a quilt made by Syble Pope.

Special guests were Noven Butler, mother of the bride-elect, and Cindy Yater, Debbie Davidson and Robin Butler, sisters of the bride-elect.

The bride-elect and her mother were presented with potpourri corsages, made by the hostesses.

Guests were served refreshments from a table draped with a lace cloth and a peach and blue centerpiece.

In April, the bride-elect was honored with two showers in Midland. She received a towel set and a china coffee server from the hostesses.

The couple will wed June 13 at the Chapel of the First Baptist Church.

Spray pecan trees June 2-3

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent
When do I need to spray my pecan trees for casebearer control?

Insecticide applications must be concisely timed within a two to three day period after small larvae emerges from eggs which are located on the tips of the small nutlets.

Our Extension Ecomologists have monitoring the activity of this moth the past several weeks to assist us in predicting the optimum time to spray for the first generation of the Pecan Nut Casebearer. This date has been predicted for June 2-3.

Second generation casebearers can be expected 42 days after the first generation which in this case, would be around July 16-17 in Howard County. For homeowners, the product Zoolone is very effective. Commercial producers, with private pesticide certification, can use Lorsban or Pydrin with success as with any pesticide. Be sure to read and follow instructions as exactly written on the label. Don't forget to incorporate either Zinc

Ask the agent

Sulfate or NZN in your insecticide to combat Zinc Rosetter in your pecans at the same time you spray for casebearer control. Pecans cannot be grown successfully in West Texas without foliar zinc sprays. Soil tests will show adequate levels of zinc present however, the tree will not absorb it from the soil.

Zinc Rosetter appears as short stunted shoot growth. The shoots tend to grow in bunches. Older trees will have dead shoots throughout the top of the tree. Young trees should be sprayed every 2 weeks from April to August for growth to continue throughout the season. Two zinc products are effective, Zinc Sulfate or NZN. Zinc chelates are not effective.

Should I fertilize my pecan trees now?

Do not fertilize pecan trees the first year. The second year, fertilize the trees with 1/2 pound of Anmouim, Sulfate in April, May and June. Apply one pound the third year and two pounds the fourth year, apply a pound for each inch or trunk diameter. Commercial producers should apply 600 pounds per acre.

Complete fertilizer such as 12-12-12 are not needed undermost conditions. The fertilizer should be spread around the drip line of the tree and watered in. If the tree is growing in lawn grass, you may want to drill or punch small holes six inches around the drip line and place the fertilizer in these holes to prevent burning the grass. No fertilizer should after the month of June on large or small trees.
