Spring board

How's that? Tornadoes

Q. What region in the world has the most tornadoes?

A. The central plains of the United States — "Tornado Alley."

Calendar Closed

TODAY

• All city administrative offices will be closed today in observance of Memorial Day. There will be no trash collection. The landfill will be open the normal hours of operation, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. All emergency services will be available for the public.

• The Civilian Conservation Corps is conducting a Historical Exhibit of the first state parks in Texas at the Big Spring State Recreation Area on Scenic Mountain. The exhibit can be seen daily 8 a.m. to noon this month.

Items for the Spring board calendar must be community-wide events to be included and will be listed no more than one week in advance. Send such notices to: Spring board, Big Spring Herald, Box 1431, Big Spring. Club notices will be printed in the "Bulletin Board" section of the Sunday Herald.

Memorial Day observance planned May 30

A Memorial Day ceremony will be conducted at the Veterans Administration Medical Center Saturday, May 30, at 10 a.m. Director Conrad Alexander has announced. Lieutenant Robert West of Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene will be the keynote speaker. The Avenue of Flags will be displayed, and the Color Guard from Goodfellow Air Force Base, San Angelo, will perform. Local Texas residents are invited to participate.

Two burglaries, $7,000 in goods

A Big Spring resident reported more than $4,000 worth of property stolen from his home Sunday, while another resident reported nearly $3,000 worth of stolen goods.

Troy Gayle Gray, 805 E. 18th St., told police Sunday that someone entered his home between 9:30 a.m. Friday and 2:45 p.m. Sunday. Gray reported stolen $1,945 in television, radio and stereo equipment, $604 in jewelry, $530 in firearms, $943 in miscellaneous items, $25 in household goods, and $10 in currency.

In a separate incident, Stanley Williams, Big Spring Mobile Home Park Apt. 33, reported to the Howard County Sheriff's Office $2,977 in stolen goods from a van he had used for storing items.

The theft occurred between May 18 and May 24, according to sheriff records.

Among items stolen were a man's gold ring with diamond chips worth $1,200, two women's rings worth $800 and a $600 .22-caliber semi-automatic pistol.

Also stolen were a purse containing $107 worth of items, a $40 attache case, two lighters, two Seiko watches, one $50 Atari video game and a passport belonging to Williams.

Man's life changed in an instant

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

A single moment can change one's life forever.

For Garrett Burgess, 25, of Big Spring, and his family, that moment occurred Jan. 15, 1986 when a speeding car on the wrong side of the road crashed into his car.

For two months Burgess was in a coma, having sustained massive injuries and brain damage.

The result has been more than 14 months in hospitals and he likely will continue medical treatment the rest of his life, said his mother, Beatrice Spruce.

"You just don't give up," she said of coping with the hardship.

She believes her son may some day be able to return to work in some capacity, although he will never return to his job as a roughneck, she said.

Burgess visited friends in Big Spring over Memorial Day weekend, returning for the first time since the accident.

Among other injuries, his hip was dislocated and his shoulder and ribs broken, she said. While in the coma, he suffered seizures and his kneecap became detached.

He was not expected to live.

"My mother and I lived in the ICU waiting room (in Odessa) for two months," Spruce said. Her husband brought her clothes and things, which they hid behind a magazine rack.

Faced with the prospect of losing her job, she returned to work in Austin and Burgess' grandmother, Mrs. A.C. James of Silver Heels Addition, maintained the vigil.

Burgess had lived with James in Big Spring when the family moved to Austin, Spruce said. He is the second of four children.

It took about a month for her son to completely come out of the coma, she said, during which time he suffered severe muscle damage.

Arm and leg muscles are often drawn to the body during coma — and the longer the coma, the more severely the muscles deteriorate, she said.

Burgess probably will be in therapy the rest of his life because of the muscle damage, she said. It has taken 1½ years therapy and surgery to begin to straighten his arms and legs, she added.

In addition, he suffers speech difficulties because of damage to the muscles in his throat — and the problem is getting worse, she said.

However, the family discovered a doctor in Austin, one of only four in the U.S., who makes a device that could help Burgess speak more clearly, she said. It is possible that he might be able to speak one day without the prosthesis, she said.

The family faced difficulty when they attempted to get him into a rehabilitation center once Burgess came out of his coma, she said.

"No one would touch us because we had no insurance," she explained. "We pulled a lot of strings and called a lot of Congressmen," plus the Governor and the President.

She finally got results by contacting the Austin news media near election time.

"We started getting phone calls from people trying to help," Spruce said and Burgess was admitted to Breckenridge Hospital soon thereafter.

By then the family was plagued by financial troubles.

The bill for the two-month hospital stay in Odessa was $300,000 — a bill she will never be able to pay, she said.

The family had no medical insurance, and the insurance of the driver responsible for the accident covered only $15,000, she said.

The rehabilitation care in Austin would have cost $1,000 a day, had Burgess not been granted free care.

Spruce works full-time and her husband holds two jobs. Burgess draws $758 per month Social Security, but all but $20 of that goes to pay a sitter to stay with him while Spruce is at work, she said.

With Burgess confined to a wheelchair and in need of special medical equipment, the family

Memorial Day observance began in 1865

By LYNN HAYES
Herald staff

As Texans and other Americans enjoy a holiday that includes barbecue, swimming and relaxing with friends, many don't think about or know the why and when of Memorial Day's history.

The observance honors United States citizens who have died in war.

Originally commemorating soldiers killed in the American Civil War, the observance was later extended to all United States war dead, according to published reports.

A memorial was dedicated at the Howard County Courthouse more than 30 years ago, in honor of the 149 former residents of Howard County who lost their lives in service to the country. The inscription reads "Dedicated to God and to the memory of those who gave their lives in the defense of their country."

It all began on April 26, 1865, when Mrs. Sue Landon Vaughn led a pilgrimage to a cemetery in Vicksburg, Miss. A descendant of John Adams, second president of the U.S., she led several women to the Vicksburg cemetery, where they decorated the soldiers' graves.

In May 1865 ceremonies were also conducted in Winchester, Va., where the Stonewall Jackson Memorial was formed. On June 6 of the same year a ceremony was conducted at the Confederate Cemetery in Winchester, Va., where the graves were decorated with flowers.

Published sources indicate it was the first cemetery designed especially for the soldiers killed in the South.

The first established day of national celebration occurred in 1868, when General John A. Logan, Commander in Chief, of the Grand Army of the Republic issued a general order designating May 30 for the purpose of "strengthening with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades, who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion" and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village, hamlet, and churchyard in the land.

In 1873 the veterans in New York persuaded the legislature to pass an act designating May 30, Decoration Day.

Saragosa to benefit from local assistance

Local residents have pulled together to provide aid to Saragosa tornado victims, a Big Spring police officer said today.

Det. Ralph Howell said this morning he, Det. Bill King and Border Patrol Agent Art Jimenez planned to leave about 9 a.m. today to transport a busload of items to Saragosa for tornado victims.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service donated use of the bus to transport the items, Howell said.

"We've had a lot of luck," Howell said of collection efforts.

"We have a lot of food and a lot of drinking water donated," he said.

Police officers along with local residents donated blankets, clothing, food, and a mattress, Howell said.

Sheriff A.N. Standard said several members of the sheriff's department have donated items to the local relief effort.

Bishop Raymond Pena of El Paso greets a woman after a memorial Mass for the Saragosa tornado victims Sunday afternoon. The Mass was conducted at the site of the church — before the tornado touched down Friday evening killing 29 people and destroying much of the small West Texas community.

Saragosans facing pioneer challenge

SARAGOSA (AP) — The homeless survivors of a tornado that destroyed this community prepared to bury their 29 dead and seek help for themselves as they wondered how to return to a town that no longer exists.

"People who established this town were pioneers... the people of Saragosa are pioneers again," said Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, who was among the 500 people attending an outdoor Mass on Sunday in memory of those killed.

More than 120 people were injured, and six of those killed were children. About half the deaths occurred at a Head Start preschool graduation.

The first funeral for the victims was scheduled this morning, for a 25-year-old woman and her son, who would have been a year old on Sunday. Two mass funerals are planned for Tuesday.

Friday's tornado reduced this 76-year-old farming community, whose 350 residents were mostly poor Mexican-Americans, to rubble.

"I really don't expect it will be rebuilt. I don't think they can afford it," said the Rev. Ralph Barranger, who serves Christ the King Church.

At the site of what used to be Our Lady of Guadalupe Church, about some said they would move away.

"I don't like this place anymore. Too much has died," said Frank Ramirez, who escaped serious injury when the tornado leveled his house.

As front-end loaders and dump trucks hauled away splintered houses, crumpled cars and cracked adobe, volunteers in nearby Balmorhea were being trained to interview the survivors in preparation for today's opening of a disaster relief center.

"We'll be here as long as it takes to meet people's needs," said Dan Wagener, director of the American Red Cross effort in Balmorhea.

Most of the more than 120 injured had been treated and released from hospitals by Saturday afternoon.

Hispanics Immigrants, births portend Texas changes

EDITOR'S NOTE — Within 65 years, population projections say, the majority of Texans will be Hispanic. The change will have a profound effect on Texas' politics, education and culture. Today, in the first of a six-part series, The Associated Press examines the impact.

LOS EBANOS (AP) — A massive ebony tree stands at a historic ford in this town on the Rio Grande, marking a path followed by migrations across the river since ancient times.

Trees like this one, called "ebanos" in Spanish, have grown for centuries near this crossing once used by Indians, Spanish explorers, Mexican troops and American bootleggers.

Now the ebony tree, 60 feet tall and almost six feet in circumference, anchors a cable that guides a hand-powered ferry carrying more than 100 people a day between Los Ebanos and Mexico under the watchful eyes of the Border Patrol.

But up the Rio Grande toward El Paso and downstream toward Brownsville, more than 2,000 people a month cross illegally, disappearing into Texas, while another 2,000 or so a month cross legally, the first step toward U.S. citizenship.

That immigration — and a vigorous birthrate — are expected to create a Texas dominated by Hispanics.

Demographers estimate that people of Spanish surnames, mostly Mexican-Americans, will comprise more than 50 percent of the Texas population, by the year 2050, supplanting an Anglo majority for the first time in more than a century.

The change will affect the politics, the education, the culture and future of Texas. And the change, some believe, restores an appropriate balance over a land that was ruled by the Spanish and Mexicans for more than 300 years.

"It's only just," said Patricia Royal Sutton of El Paso. "After all, we were here first."

Much of Texas has shunned that fact for decades.

Margaret Gonzalez, the leader of a Hispanic political group, remembers from her San Antonio youth that signs at some restaurants warned, "No dogs or Mexicans allowed."

Even today, the remnants of discrimination linger and some say Texas never has perceived itself as an immigrant state, despite its heritage.

The dark-skinned race that sprang from a blending of the ancient Mayan and Aztec civilizations of Mexico and the Spanish conquerors of the 16th century was settling Texas long before the U.S. was born.

They built missions, irrigated the desert and brought art, music and religion to a wilderness before the first Anglo settlers arrived in the 1820s.

The Texas Revolution in 1836 and the Mexican-American war a decade later stripped Mexico of 1.2 million square miles, including Texas.

But Mexican-Americans cling to their heritage and fight to preserve its memory.

"You will find no one more loyal to this country than the Hispanics," said Ms. Sutton, head of a council of Mexican-American organizations in El Paso. But the Mexican heritage, she said, "is just HISPANICS page 6B

Veteran bugler notes passing of duty

EL PASO (AP) — After playing taps for 10,354 military funerals, Army Staff Sgt. Duane Finch is laying down his horn forever. The daily practice and the dedication, he says, "take so much out of you."

"I've quit playing completely," said the 39-year-old career bandsman and bugler. "I don't conceive of ever playing taps, or even the horn, again."

The saddest of all those thousands of funerals, Finch said, were the ones "when nobody (was) there. Just the coffin. I hate doing those."

Finch is on final leave from Fort Bliss while awaiting his July 1 retirement.

His parents gave him a trumpet for high school graduation and he used it during his entire 20-year Army career.

The trumpet has been his "bugle" for playing taps at all those funerals, conducted in all kinds of weather.

"You have to play it in any kind of temperature," he said. "I had to go up to Fairbanks, Alaska, once to play and it was 38 below, with a wind-chill factor of 75 below."

"I played from a staff car. Just rolled the window down and played from about 75 feet away," Finch said, recalling that he had no choice.

"I checked out my horn before the funeral and I found the spit valve froze up in seconds," he said.

His most unusual service, he said, was when he had to play for two funerals at once. That was at Fort Bliss, where he has been with the 62nd U.S. Army Band for most of the past 12 years.

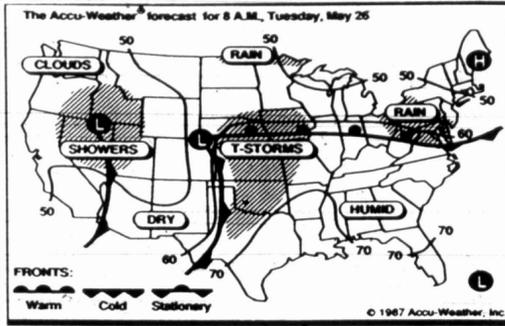

"At Fort Bliss National Cemetery, they schedule funerals 30 minutes apart," he said. "On that day, the one on the east side was 15 minutes late, the one on the west side 15 minutes early."

"They pulled the caskets out at the same time," said Finch, whose central location was between both services. "It was very quiet. There was no wind at all. I was watching both ways and saw the salutes go to both firing squads at about the same time."

"They fired ... pop, pop, pop, pop. And when both firing squads finished, I faced between them and started playing as loudly as I could," he said. "And when I was finished, the lieutenants in charge of both funerals came over and thanked me."

Finch, who is studying for a degree in business retail management at El Paso Community College, said his most memorable services were a memorial service in Korea for General of the Army Omar Bradley in 1981 and a funeral earlier this year at Fort Bliss for the next-to-the-last survivor of the Spanish-American War.

Veteran proposes barter with Viets

WELLSVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Mission Impossible: Persuade Vietnam to let U.S. veterans rebuild the country in return for American MIAs.

The idea, created by a man with a "Why me?" wonderment at surviving the Vietnam War and loyalty for fellow Americans who may be captive, has been embraced by a group of New York veterans.

The Allegany County Vietnam Veterans wrote to Vietnamese officials on March 26, and Kevin E. Collins' proposal is making rounds at Vietnam veterans' gatherings this Memorial Day.

A spokesman for Vietnam's ambassador at the United Nations, Bui Xuan Nhat, confirmed receipt of the proposal and said it was being considered by the government in Hanoi.

"We appreciate any sympathy of the American people toward the Vietnamese people," said press attache Bhan Dhanh. "We have many difficulties to be overcome. We should do these ourselves. But the Vietnamese people would like all American people to understand that we want to resolve all situations now between the two countries."

Michael Leaveck, a spokesman for the Vietnam Veterans of America, praised the project but said he does not expect it to go far.

Supporters say the proposal they call Project Recovery is simple and revolutionary. They are proposing a business deal to the Communist leaders of a country with which the United States does not have diplomatic relations: "You help us, we'll help you."

"What we really need is to get the support of the American people, so we can show the Vietnamese that we have that support, that we're not just a bunch of hillbillies from a county of 53,000 jousting at windmills," said project director Collins, 41, a former helicopter gunner.

The group will seek negotiations with Vietnamese representatives after a national petition drive concludes Sept. 30. The veterans say they will try to barter their skills and American raw materials to rebuild roads, bridges, schools and hospitals, in exchange for release of any living Americans in Southeast Asia, or remains or information about those listed as missing in action.

"If the Vietnamese even consent to sit down and discuss this proposal with the Allegany County Vietnam Veterans this will be a tacit admission that live Americans are in Vietnam," said retired U.S. Army Col. Earl Hopper, a former chairman of the board of the National League of POW Families.

Hopper, of Glendale, Ariz., visited Southeast Asia five times between 1981 and 1985 seeking information about his son, who was shot down in 1968.

"My trips over there have convinced me even more that there are live Americans over there," he said.

Collins said he believes 50 to 200 Americans remain captive.

"What if it had been us? What if we'd been left behind and used for the last 15 years as beasts of burden and fed only enough to work, but not to run away?" he asked.

The same haunting possibility caused the barter idea to occur to Michael Metcalf, a Marine veteran who returned home, 70 miles southeast of Buffalo, to a divorce, heavy drinking and employment difficulties.

"I had always had a feeling that we had left Americans behind, but I wondered what I could do," Metcalf said. "I was always awed by how political and powerful this issue was and I was just some hayseed in some backwater, upstate county."

Local man released on bond

A local man was released on bond Sunday after being arrested on four separate charges.

Christopher John Muzio, 22, 1608 S. Main St., was arrested at 1 a.m. Sunday in the 900 block of East 11th Place on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, unauthorized carrying of a weapon, criminal mischief and resisting arrest.

He was released on bonds totaling $2,200.

Pedro Rivera Aponte, 28, 1106 Johnson St., was released on a $500 bond after being transferred from the police department. He was arrested at 12:01 a.m. Sunday in the 500 block of East 16th Street on suspicion of driving while license suspended.

Ezekial Chavez, 23, San Angelo, was released Sunday on a $1,000 bond after being transferred from the police department. He was arrested Sunday on suspicion of driving while intoxicated.

Michael Santos Valenzuela, 28, 1102 East 19th St., was released

Sunday on bonds totaling $520 after being transferred from the police department. He was arrested by city police Sunday on traffic warrants.

John Roland Danko, 26, 504 1/2 Goliad St., was released from the county jail Sunday after serving six days on a Howard County profane warrant. Danko owed the county $121 on a previous charge of evading arrest.

Mario Escobedo, 17, San Angelo, was released Sunday on bonds totaling $1,400. He was arrested Saturday on U.S. Highway 87 approximately eight miles north of Big Spring on suspicion of unauthorized carrying of a weapon, minor in possession of alcohol, possession of marijuana and parking on a roadway.

house no longer suits their needs, Spruce said.

The house is two-story and a lift cannot be installed, so Burgess was moved into the downstairs bedroom.

The Spruces have been trying to sell their Austin house for a year, in hopes of moving into a more suitable home.

Burgess dreams of one day returning to school and eventually becoming a hospital attendant — such as those who helped him during his stay, Spruce said.

In addition, he may be able to get help at the Austin Independent Living Center, where people learn to adapt to their handicap — how to get in and out of the bathtub, dress themselves and reach high things.

Woman treated after assault

Irma G. Franco, 404 N.W. Sixth St., was treated and released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center for facial swelling after a Sunday evening assault, according to police records. Franco told police she was hit with fists at 505 N.W. Seventh St.

Roxy Tanner, 203 N.W. Third St., told police Sunday that $25 worth of damage was done to her carpet from a Sunday burglary that occurred between 2-10:15 p.m. Only $1 worth of pennies was stolen.

Carl Christopher Winton, 21, San Angelo, was released from the city jail Sunday after a paying a fine. He was arrested Saturday on traffic warrants.

Wayne Froman, 1400 E. 14th St., reported $105 damage to two tires that were cut with a sharp object. The vandalism occurred between 9 p.m. Saturday and 8:30 a.m. Sunday.

Nicholas Mindling, 23, 2500 Albrook St., and Richard Ybarra, 120 Airbase Road Apt. 16, were released on bond after being arrested for disorderly conduct at 11 p.m. Saturday. The two were arrested at the scene of a fight in the Highland Mall parking lot.

Three-car accident results in charges

An Odessa man was taken by ambulance to Scenic Mountain Medical Center after a three-car pileup Sunday night, and a Big Spring man was charged in connection with the accident.

Michael David Houston, 21, Odessa, was taken to the hospital after his car was struck in the rear in the 500 block of North Lamesa Highway about 9:15 p.m., according to police records.

The hospital Emergency Room had no record of treating Houston, however, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

A passenger in another car, Angela Colvin of Midland, suffered minor injuries.

Tony Martinez, 24, 106-A E. 15th St., was cited for following too closely, according to the accident report.

Martinez was following Christine Lynn Berry, 18, Midland, and Houston when both stopped to allow a car in front to make a left turn. Martinez reportedly struck Berry's car, forcing it into Houston's car.

Martinez said the two cars came to an immediate stop, which didn't allow him to stop in time to avoid colliding with the two cars, the report said.

Houston and Berry were both charged with failure to maintain financial responsibility.

Minister given year's leave

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Walker Railey, former pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Dallas, has been granted a one-year leave of absence by the North Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Railey admitted himself to a private psychiatric facility here after he was released from a hospital following what police said was a suicide attempt. The minister's wife remains in a coma in a Dallas hospital, where she has been treated since she was attacked in her home April 21.

Railey had been found unconscious from a drug overdose in his hospital room at Presbyterian Hospital May 1, he was granted a leave of absence by his church four days later.

Police said Railey had tried to kill himself after being informed that they wanted to question him regarding the attack on his wife.

A source told the Dallas Times Herald that the leave of absence granted to Railey means he will not return to the church until the next conference meeting.

Spurgeon Dunnam, editor of the United Methodist Reporter newspaper, stressed that Railey is the former pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Dallas and is on leave from the conference rather than the church. He said this means Railey can return to his pastorate only after reappointment from Bishop John Russell.

Ralph Shannon, lay spokesman for First Methodist, said the bishop will make appointments to churches Wednesday.

"My understanding is that either Walker Railey will be appointed pastor on leave of absence or it will be left vacant," Shannon said.

Hiring for murder alleged

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Texas woman faces a hearing before a U.S. Magistrate Tuesday after being arrested in connection with what authorities called an attempt to hire a someone to kill her husband, a spokesman for New Orleans FBI chief John J. O'Connor says.

Carolyn Sue Huebner, an employee of the District Attorney's office in Bexar County, Texas, was arrested by FBI agents near a New Orleans hotel late Saturday, spokesman Max Chastain said.

Huebner "used interstate commerce to call from San Antonio to New Orleans and then traveled from San Antonio to New Orleans with the intent to murder Larry Heubner in violation of state of Louisiana laws for considerations and agreement to pay."

Chastain said he was not at liberty to say what the considerations were or how much the alleged triggerman was to be paid.

Carolyn Huebner was held at the Community Detention Center in New Orleans.

Chastain would provide few other details other than to say that the FBI had "been aware of her attempts to set up this contract since May 13th," and that no other arrests were expected.

"She (Huebner) contacted someone other than who she thought she was contacting," Chastain said.

Postal challenge overcome

FORT WORTH (AP) — The card had only a nickname, an incomplete address, a trading stamp instead of a postage and a one-name return address.

But the U.S. Postal Service managed to deliver the card only one day after it was mailed last week.

The card was addressed to: "Nana, 1712 Watson." It contained no city, state or ZIP code. The return address was simply: Melissa.

"Nana," it turns out, is Vera Reeder, grandmother of 6-year-old Melissa Reeder.

"I did it all myself," Melissa told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "I wrote 'Nana' a get-well card 'cause she was sick."

"I was flabbergasted that it reached me," Mrs. Reeder said. "Can you imagine how many cities that have Watson streets?"

"The Democrats may not have a Hart," she said jokingly. "But the postal system sure does."

Postal Service officials were unable to track down the person who managed to get the letter to Mrs. Reeder.

But Irene Owens, a consumer affairs clerk, has an idea.

"When we get mail with no city or ZIP code that can't be processed through a machine, it goes to the uncoded city or quiz clerk," she said. "One of the clerks there is responsible for the letter getting to the right person, and we are delighted the letter got to 'Nana.'"

Mrs. Reeder said she first thought the letter had been brought to her by Carrie Reeder, Melissa's mother. But then she noticed the stamp had been canceled by the Postal Service.

"I was excited, I called Melissa's mother," she said.

The girl's mother said she remembered that Melissa had prepared the get-well card and asked her for a stamp. She said she told her daughter there were some stamps on a lamp stand.

"There were a lot of old S&H Green Stamps there, and she picked up one, put it on the letter and sealed the envelope," she said. "She then put the letter in the mail chute."

Storm relief center opens

BALMORHEA (AP) — This town's school has been converted to a disaster relief center for those who survived the tornado that killed 29 people in Saragosa, injured more than 120 and destroyed the town.

The American Red Cross planned to open the center this morning.

Dan Wagener, on-site director for the center in this town seven miles southwest of Saragosa, said volunteers, including about a dozen from Saragosa, were trained Sunday to aid the victims of Friday's tornado.

The Red Cross will have about 60 workers here, and will spend at least $200,000 to assist the community of about 350 residents, he said.

Those seeking short-term and long-term assistance will be interviewed at the center, which was set up at the school.

On Sunday, the school's gymnasium was filled with clothing, foodstuffs and household items for the tornado victims.

To make room for the center, the school year was ended a week early, Wagener said.

The center will be open for at least three weeks, but the Red Cross would have people here for as long as they are needed, he said.

No decision has not been made on state and federal emergency relief, and no estimate of damages has been issued.

Officials said Gov. Bill Clements' aides were studying the matter.

Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, who visited Saragosa on Sunday, said he has asked President Reagan to issue federal aid to the community.

Eleven Texans die on roads

By The Associated Press
At least 11 people have died on Texas highways during the Memorial Day holiday weekend, authorities say.

The Department of Public Safety is not keeping an official count of holiday traffic fatalities, but an unofficial tally by The Associated Press began at 6 p.m. Friday and runs through midnight Monday.

In the latest incidents, Lynne C. Gribbsy, 34, of Round Rock, and her daughter Brittany Gribbsy, 10 months, died in a vehicle accident Sunday. Also, Burley Gene Ingram, 56, of Moulton died in an accident.

Louis Evans Countess, 100, of Idalou died Saturday morning in a two-car collision at the intersection of Farm-to-Market 400 and FM 40 in Lubbock County, the DPS said.

Countess was driving a 1974 Chevrolet south on FM 400 when his car collided with a 1978 Chevrolet van and a boat trailer the van was towing. Countess' car then hit a utility pole, and he was pronounced dead at the scene.

The van driver was not injured.
In another holiday weekend accident, four people were killed when their car struck a truck parked along Interstate 10 near Beaumont.

DPS Trooper Barry Bridges said the four, in their late teens or early 20s, were involved in an accident around 5 a.m. Saturday. Their car ran into a parked semi tractor-trailer, Bridges said.

The trooper identified the dead as car driver Quentin Jurek, 20, of Bay City; Leslie Stamply, 19, of Nederland; Steven Follis, 21, of Beaumont; and Sybil Skaggs, 22, of Nederland.

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the state.

Demands accounting for attack

The Iraqi government has promised the American government a complete accounting of the tragic attack on the USS Stark in the Persian Gulf Sunday night that left 37 sailors dead, and for starters, that explanation had better be forthcoming quickly.

Despite the widening ferocity of the long Iran-Iraq war, the Persian Gulf is an international body of water and it is outrageous for any ship to be subject to such a murderous assault. The only thing that can mitigate some of the anger and heartache for America at this point is that the attack appears to be a mistake of some sort by Iraq. If the missiles had been fired by an Iranian plane, this country would be demanding a crushing retaliatory strike against the Ayatollah Khomeini and his fanatical henchmen.

Calls official language un-Texan

It is startling that more than seven out of 10 Texas residents favor legislation to make English the official language of the state, according to the latest Texas Poll. The results indicate the need for a strong effort to educate people about the issue, because the poll shows a widespread misunderstanding.

Mandating an official language would seem a terribly un-Texan thing for Texans, who relish their independence and frequently decry government interference in their lives.

Austin American-Statesman

Says Senate budget looks too late

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and his Senate cohorts are to be commended for proposing a budget compromise to forestall the need for a costly special session this summer. The offer to reduce the Senate's $39.9 billion figure by $900 million is a statesmanlike gesture. But it may be too late to do any good.

The new Senate budget would be $400 million less than the House's budget proposal, but both figures are still far beyond Gov. Clements' bottom line.

House Speaker Gib Lewis and other House leaders should make the most of the Senate's offer. But it would take a monumental effort and a lot of luck to make all the pieces fit in 12 days.

Thinking of those who aren't there

Another school year is coming to a close and naturally, the focus is on the hundreds of young men and women who will walk across the stage to receive the high school diploma they earned through hard work and dogged determination. Despite the general happiness of the occasion, there remains a lingering feeling of melancholy with the thought of those young people who aren't there getting a diploma, and probably never will be there. They represent our chronic inability to impress upon these young people that their education, or lack of it, will determine their lot in life. Somehow, somewhere along the line, we lost the inability to communicate this simple fact.

As we watch the graduation exercises this year, perhaps we should give a little thought to all those young people who aren't there.

TDC directorship is 'tough job'

The Texas Department of Corrections has its fifth director in four years, which speaks of how tough the job is. The new director is James Lynaugh, an accountant who has been with the TDC for three years and has been serving as interim director since the last director quit last January. Lynaugh said he was reluctant to take the job, but decided that running TDC with its $400 million budget is much like running a business.

The prison board said it was comfortable with the job Lynaugh has been doing. The chairman said, "He can stay as long as he can stand it."

There's nothing like a real challenge when taking on a new job.

Houston Chronicle

Athlete's death is sad drug lesson

The results of the autopsy of University of Texas at El Paso basketball star Hernel "Jeep" Jackson still are inconclusive. ... But there is one certainty. This talented, bright young man died too young. It has saddened his family, the university and this city. The autopsy did show some evidence of cocaine use. And that seems strange for a young man who seemed so clean and energetic. But sadly, it only makes evident how deeply drugs pervade the U.S. scene. Even fine young people can be affected.

... Jackson's death can teach his friends and other people who looked up to him that drugs are dangerous. If this tragedy causes even one young person to pause and think — and stop — it will have served a purpose.

The El Paso Times

Role of frigate needs evaluation

In the aftermath of the missile attack on the USS Stark it is obvious Congress and the Department of Defense must re-examine the shape of the American naval fleet and the role of the frigate in an era of long distance, electronic warfare.

The 51 frigates in the Stark's FFG7 class were designed for escort duty and anti-submarine warfare.

But the authoritative Jane's Fighting Ships says the $156 million frigates "lack the guns, electronics, 30-knot speeds, and in most cases the surface-to-air missiles considered necessary for modern anti-air and surface warfare operations."

... Their electronic detection systems lack the ability to counteract enemy electronic signals. And these devices depend on a working electrical system.

On paper, this design was adequate for a light ship under the protective umbrella of a naval battle group. In practice, however, its adequacy is questionable.

... Congress has allocated $2.35 billion this year for the first three of 18 planned Arleigh Burke destroyers.

But that may not be sufficient. Both Congress and the Defense Department should consider expanding the role and numbers of destroyers. Today's Navy must have the equipment to meet today's dangers.

THE ISLIP BARGE GETS NEW ORDERS:

'Demonstration projects' endanger motorists' lives

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA WASHINGTON — The most serious threat posed by the $1.6 billion worth of pork-barrel projects in the new highway law may not be to the pocketbooks of taxpayers, but to the lives of motorists who must use crumbling highway bridges while repairs are delayed for congressionally ordered "demonstration projects."

There are 170 of these pork-barrel projects in the new law, many of which could be put off indefinitely with little or no harm to the public. The same cannot be said about the Federal Highway Administration's top-priority bridge repair and replacement projects.

Agency officials told our reporter Karen Talley they need more than $4 billion for their bridge projects — but $140 million that might have gone to these urgently needed bridge repairs is being siphoned off for demonstration projects over the next five years.

Bridge repairs are just one of four "discretionary programs" set up to provide federal help to the states on big-budget road and bridge work. All told, Congress has plundered $534 million from the four discretionary funds to help pay for its cherished demonstration projects.

Congressional influence is also skewing the highway agency's priorities with the bridge funds that are left. According to a recent inspector general's report, more than 100 "highly deficient" bridges have little chance of being fixed or replaced anytime soon because most of the program's money is committed to "congressionally mandated projects."

The bridge projects ordered by Congress are not necessarily "the most needy" on the agency's priority list, the inspector general added.

The discretionary bridge fund will now suffer even more by diversion of money to the demonstration projects. Funding for bridge projects was supposed to have been $225 billion in each of the next five years. Instead, demonstration projects will eat up $40 million this year and $25 million in each of the next four years.

Among the high-priority projects that will be delayed because of demonstration project funding are these:

- The William R. King Bridge in Demopolis, Ala., for which $11 million is being sought toward a $17 million replacement.
- The 23rd Street Viaduct in Denver, Colo.: $8 million toward an $11.6 million replacement.
- Chicago's Dan Ryan Expressway, for which $18 million was sought as this year's contribution toward a $141 million replacement of the elevated highway.
- The Williamsburg Bridge in New York City, which was being considered for $40 million this year toward an eventual $290 million rehabilitation.
- On the other hand, five bridge projects the Federal Highway Administration would not have funded this year will be launched because they were reincarnated as demonstration projects by the House Public Works Committee. These lower-priority projects are:
  - The Talmadge Bridge in Savannah, Ga., which will get $66.5 million in the demonstration program.
  - The Bloomington Ferry Bridge in Minneapolis, Minn., $40 million.
  - The U.S. Route 30 Bridge over the Missouri River between Iowa and Nebraska, $5.4 million.
  - The Washington Baum Bridge in Manteo, N.C., $18 million.
  - The Chelyan Bridge in Chelyan, W. Va., $18 million.

billion will need an additional $6.8 billion to complete.

MAN BITES DOG: When a member of Congress promotes a federal program that benefits his home district, it's not news. But consider Rep. Wayne Owens, D-Utah. He is determinedly opposing the development of a new cargo plane, the C-17, even though it would mean 300 jobs for his constituents at a McDonnell-Douglas aircraft parts facility in Salt Lake City.

Owens is trying to delete $1.7 billion from Pentagon funding for research, development and procurement on the C-17 Airlifter. He says the plane, which is still on the drawing board, offers little new technology that the existing C-5, C-130 and C-171 don't have, and would cost upward of $10 billion more than sticking with the current cargo planes.

"There are too many weapons systems being built," Owens told our reporter Lisa Sylvester. "If we are to control spending, each of us is going to have to bite the bullet. Unfortunately, it hurts my district. But this is one of the most persuasive cases."

Owens has caught a bit of hell from the folks at home over his stand on principle. For what consolation it may give him, both the conservative Heritage Foundation and the liberal Institute for Foreign Policy Analysis support his position — but they don't vote in Utah.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Our British cousins are understandably miffed at Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., for calling Britain "a second-rate nation."

At the same time, the Brits have expressed a patronizing amusement at Americans' supposedly Victorian attitude toward sexual infidelity that led to Gary Hart's downfall.

Well, if it will make them feel any better, we'll be glad to acknowledge that Britain is solidly in first place when it comes to prostitutes and philanderers in top government circles. We colonial bluesoes will never be able to match the British in the salacious arts — unless, of course, we sink to the status of a second-rate nation.

Jack Anderson's investigative report from Washington is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Says ladies are welcome to the club

By LEWIS GRIZZARD Proponents of women's rights are celebrating the fact that the Supreme Court recently ruled women could no longer be excluded from previously all-male Rotary Clubs.

As a longtime champion of women's rights myself (I voted for Kathy Sue Loudermilk for president of the seventh grade — and not just because she was the only girl in class who could do justice to a tight sweater at the time), I also think the Supreme Court decision is to be applauded.

It is high time women have to join civic clubs also and be just as bored with those stuffy weekly meetings as men have had to do all these years.

I personally do not belong to the Rotary Club, but I used to go to Rotary Club meetings quite often as a speaker.

There are 17 zillion Rotary Clubs in this country and they all need a speaker for their weekly luncheon meetings.

The Rotary Clubs do not pay their speakers, however, and because they are always desperate to find somebody who will show up and talk for nothing, they'll let just about anybody get behind the podium and drone on about most any subject.

I started charging money to speak as a means of getting out of civic club luncheons after I'd done at least a thousand (and it worked), but a friend of mine who is still in the Rotary Club was telling me about the speaker for the group last week.

"He was some Korean guy," my friend said. "Nobody could understand what he was saying, but I think he was trying to sell us a set of Ginsu knives."

Not only are Rotary Club meetings dull, the food is usually terrible, too. Many Rotary Clubs meet in hotels and motels where it is a national tradition to serve the worst food in town.

We are talking tough, stringy roast beef or rubber chicken with English peas that look a great deal like chinaberries, mushy boiled potatoes, those awful stewed carrots a rabbit wouldn't eat and a slice from an elderly apple or peach pie.

Why should only men have to endure such pain alone in order to do their civic duty?

For years women of the community have been able to go any place they wanted for lunch and eat in peace while the men were stuck at the Rotary Club being put to sleep by the speaker while eating Holiday Inn swill.

There's something else strange they do at Rotary Clubs. They sing a song before lunch.

The late Pulitzer Prize-winning publisher of The Atlanta Constitution, Ralph McGill, refused to speak to Rotary Clubs for the following reason:

"I'm not going to get involved with a bunch of grown men who sing songs in the middle of the day while completely sober."

...And ladies of the club, welcome to you all.

Memories of Six Flags in the spring

Guest columnist

By RICK SMITH Sherman Democrat This spring, like every other spring since I was seven years old, Six Flags Over Texas is calling me. When I was younger, I couldn't resist the park's call.

But, as I grew older, the call grew fainter and fainter until, last spring, 12 years had passed since my last pilgrimage to the park. So I went back. I wish I hadn't.

Skull Island is gone. I searched everywhere. But the island (it had a giant skull in the center that you could slide through, remember?) was nowhere to be found.

Other classics were missing: the Indian canoes, Tom Sawyer's ferry, that silly little train that puffed through the Mexican section.

But the worst, the absolute worst news was yet to come.

No more French riverboat ride.

I can't remember exactly what the river boat ride was called. La Salle's Riverboat? La Salle's River Expedition?

But I'll never forget the ride. We, the Captain explained, were on a quest to find whatever happened to the La Salle expedition.

I could have cared less about La Salle when I was seven years old, but the idea of a quest was appealing. Especially one that involved attacks by robot Indians, grizzly bears, cannon-firing Spaniards, and ghosts.

Part of what made the ride special was the Captain.

A friend who worked at Six Flags in the '60s tells me that riverboat skeletons that guarded treasure chests.

The brave little boat sailed through the cave, naturally, while grown-ups grinned and children clung to their mothers.

The boat rounded a final bend in the river and there we were, always back at the starting point. Always too soon.

I've never forgotten one phrase that the Captain delivered.

After an ear-splitting cannon fusillade from the Spanish fort sent water splashing up all around (and on) us, the Captain would say: "They're such bad shots. They couldn't hit the broad side of a little French riverboat."

Robot Spanish cannons couldn't sink the riverboat, but a new "whitewater" raft ride finally did it in with a million-dollar broadside.

The tacky new ride is as dull as February.

Family dies in crash

RITZVILLE, Wash. — Two small planes carrying three generations of the same family collided Sunday, killing a father, mother and daughter after one of the aircraft crashed, authorities said.

The second plane, a Cherokee Archer, landed safely at the Ritzville Municipal Airport, said Adams County sheriff's Sgt. Mike Kline. Three other family members aboard that plane were unhurt.

That plane sustained a battered left wing and a broken window, witnesses said.

Kline identified the dead, aboard a Cessna 172, as Kenneth Lavern Sager, about 41, his wife, Gloria, about 40, and their daughter, Karla, about 15, of Ritzville.

The occupants of the second plane were Mrs. Sager's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Moritz of Ephrata, and their son, Kirk, about 19, said Kline.

Boy's ear swallowed

LA PUENTE, Calif. — Doctors reattached a 7-year-old boy's ear that had been bitten off by a dog, swallowed whole, and recovered nearly intact from the animal after it was humanely destroyed.

It was too soon to tell if Sunday's surgery was successful, said nursing supervisor Alyce Richardson at Queen of the Valley Medical Center, where the boy was taken.

The unidentified child was in stable condition after more than two hours of surgery, she said.

The boy was attacked Sunday afternoon in the driveway of a neighbor's home by a German shepherd and a mixed-breed Doberman pinscher, said Los Angeles County fire Capt. Jack Butler.

Butler said paramedics found the boy in his home. "The father had his son in his arms and a pad over (the boy's) head," Butler said.

The ear, swallowed whole, was found in Doberman's stomach mostly intact, Ms. Guerrero said.

Animal control officers packed the ear in ice and rushed it to the hospital, she said.

Bakkers may go back

FORT MILL, S.C. — Tammy Bakker says she and her husband, Jim, may "come home" to PTL if their followers want, while the ministry's new leader says he will purge it of preachers who promote a "prosperity theology."

Mrs. Bakker's comment was made in a letter dated May 2, one day after Bakker told reporters outside his Palm Springs, Calif., home that he and his wife would not fight to regain control of the television ministry he turned over to the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

"Maybe someday, if the people insist and want us, we will come back home," Mrs. Bakker said in a letter to Joanne Thompson, who operates a religious television station in Greenville.

Golden Gate Bridge turns 50

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than a million people attended the Golden Gate Bridge's 50th birthday bash, a party that started with a walk across the span and ended with the permanent lighting of its 65-story art deco towers.

The crowd at the all-day fete Sunday apparently was the largest in the history of this city of 744,600, according to officials.

After nightfall, temperatures dropped into the 50s and winds gusted over 40 mph, but the activities continued with a $400,000 fireworks show and singer Tony Bennett's crooning "I left my heart in San Francisco."

The huddled masses wore ski caps and heavy jackets as nearly 20,000 fireworks shells lighted the sky and the San Francisco Symphony provided musical accompaniment.

"This is our symbol," said Marion Patterson of Menlo Park, south of the city, who was four years old when the span opened. "It's a symbol of peace. It's a bridge built between people."

Mayor Dianne Feinstein introduced some engineers who built the bridge across the Golden Gate, the mile-wide strait between San Francisco Bay and the Pacific Ocean. The mayor also asked for a moment of silence for those who died building the structure, including 10 workers who fell to their deaths in one accident.

After the mayor's speech, the bridge was lighted with 48 400-watt high-pressure sodium bulbs positioned above and below the roadway.

San Francisco Police Lt. Tim Hatrick said the well-behaved crowd exceeded 1 million for the dawn-to-dark schedule of events. He said only one person had been arrested, for drunken driving, and there was "a fistfight or two, nothing major."

"We said, 'We're having a party, you all come.' People sure did," said Charlotte Mailliard, one of the organizers.

Before his appearance at the free concert, Bennett said the bridge party meant even more to him because it also marked the 25th anniversary of his recording "I Left My Heart in San Francisco."

Other entertainment during the festival included a 100-plane formation fly-over of classic and antique aircraft, a jazz concert, commemorative bridge songs and military demonstrations.

Fireworks exploding over San Francisco Bay silhouette the north tower of the Golden Gate Bridge during Sunday night's finale to the bridge's 50th anniversary celebration.

The festivities began at dawn when traffic was halted and a crowd of about 250,000 walked across the graceful span that has symbolized America's western shore for millions of immigrants and homecoming soldiers.

The crowd was so large that the California Highway Patrol estimated hundreds of thousands of people were turned away because the shoulder-to-shoulder throng was too thick along the 1.7-mile bridge.

The bridge walkers, and some in wheelchairs, on bicycles and skateboards, waved little American flags in the chilly morning breeze.

The saunter quickly turned into a giant party, with many people dressed in costumes, including a giant banana and two who shared a bridge hat. The opening ceremony was wiped out when crowds began moving onto the bridge 45 minutes early.

Party organizers were overwhelmed by the turnout and had to alter the schedule to make time to clear the throng. A parade of antique cars that marked the resumption of vehicle traffic began nearly two hours late.

Gorbachev takes trip

BUCHAREST, Romania — Romanian officials made sure the streets were swept and flowers planted in time for today's visit by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, but demonstrated coolness toward his domestic reforms by giving little publicity to the trip.

Soviet flags appeared on some main boulevards late Sunday afternoon, but there were none of the portraits and slogans that traditionally herald the arrival of a Soviet leader.

The Communist Party daily Scinteia waited until Sunday to print a portrait and short biography of Gorbachev.

President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania has openly attacked some of Gorbachev's economic changes and has shown no sign of adopting "glasnost," the policy of selected openness on some topics now evident in Soviet arts and media.

Gold found overseas

BEIJING — Extensive gold deposits have been found in four southwestern provinces and geologists are calling the area "Gold Valley," an official newspaper reported today.

After several years of study, geologists found seven large and medium-sized gold deposits in Guizhou, Guangxi, Yunnan and Sichuan provinces, the overseas edition of the People's Daily said. Several hundred smaller deposits also were found, it said.

The paper did not give estimates of the amount of gold in the deposits, but said one site measured over 2,160 square feet, it said. Most are surface or shallow deposits that are easy to mine, the paper said.

China does not release figures on its gold production, but is believed to have one of the world's largest reserves after South Africa, the Soviet Union and the United States.

Firms asked to import

TOKYO — The trade minister asked 10 major electronics companies today to buy more foreign-made semiconductors, an official at the ministry said.

International Trade and Industry Minister Hajime Tamura made the request in a meeting with executives from NEC Corp., Hitachi Ltd. and other leading electronics firms, said MITI's Tatsuo Sato.

Sato said the executives replied that they would try to comply with the request, which came several days before Japan was to resume talks with the United States to review an 8-month-old semiconductor trade agreement.

President Reagan imposed 100 percent tariffs on $300 million worth of Japanese electronics goods on April 17, saying Japan had violated the agreement by selling semiconductors, or computer chips, at unfairly low prices in third country markets.

Trial continues for sale of oil that killed several

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A disturbing picture of poor hygiene in smaller sectors of the Spanish food-processing industry has emerged during nine weeks of trial in connection with the sale of toxic industrial oil mistakenly consumed as cooking oil.

The trial of 38 defendants began March 30 and originally was expected to last five to six months, but already it is running badly behind schedule.

The proceedings have been marked by contradictory testimony, accounts of public health fraud and shouts of "liar" from the defendants, who sit behind a sheet of bullet-proof glass.

The prosecution is seeking a total of 106,000 years in jail for the 37 men and one woman charged with homicide, fraud and crimes against public health in connection with the deaths of 584 people.

The prosecution says the deaths were caused by consuming toxic rapeseed oil contaminated with aniline dye that was sold in 1981 as bargain olive oil in working-class neighborhoods around Madrid.

All defendants who so far have taken the stand either have refused to answer to order to avoid self-incrimination or have said they don't remember statements made to investigators shortly after the deaths began in May 1981.

Those obliged to participate in face-to-face encounters to clarify earlier statements have called each other liars.

The potato omelettes, croquettes, fried fish and salads consumed in Spanish homes are bathed in oil — virgin olive oil for those who can afford it or an unlabeled mixture of seed oils, melted pork fat and other greases for those who can't.

The prosecution maintains the rapeseed oil, which was intended for industrial purposes only, caused the deaths and permanently impaired nearly 25,000 other people. Medical researchers say toxic elements in the oil caused a breakdown in the victims' immune systems.

Reader defends wedding full of noisy family life

I think I can

Clifford Percy, an eight-year-old student at the Center Street School in El Segundo, Calif., strains as he attempts a pullup during the U.S.S.R. Youth Physical Performance Test at El Segundo High School last week. The test was part of National Fitness Month and gave the students a chance to match their physical fitness with that of their Soviet peers.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from "The Rev. Farrell" who objected to babies crying in church during the wedding ceremony.

Lighten up, padre! The "sacred ceremony" has a 50-50 chance of ending in divorce anyway. My husband and I have three small screamers of our own, and I recall that there were many little ones crying at our wedding — and some big ones, too, including the bride, who sobbed right along with them.

My point, Abby: Marriage is a family affair. Would the good reverend disallow wheelchairs, arthritics with canes, obese bridesmaids or pimply-face ushers if he thought the aesthetic perfection of the sacred ritual was in danger of being marred?

If this so-called man of God feels that crying babies are "an invasion of the sacred ceremony," he is denying those small family members (and their parents) the joy of sharing in this beautiful tradition as a family. Sign me...

ONE OF THE FLOCK
DEAR ONE: Ewe must be kidding. Wheelchairs, obese bridesmaids or pimply-face ushers would in no way detract from the aesthetic perfection of the marriage ceremony, but any shepherd with half a brain would carry the bleating lamb out the door after the first bleat.

Dear Abby

Hampsha is very disappointed in youwa reply to "Appalled in Sacramento" (her son's school teacha had written across his essay, "Is this original? What does this got to do with insects taking over?") "Appalled" wanted to correct the teacher's grammar and have her son return it to the teacher. You rejected that idea.

We's very concerned that ouwa kids learn correct grammah. Too many folks these days have a tough time communicatin' things right. We agree that the child should not hafta return the essay to the teacha, but it definitely ain't right for teachas of the English language to make such a big goof and let it go uncorrected.

Please reconsider your advice to skip it.

PRO-GRAMMAR, KEENE.

N.H.
P.S. Please excuse ouwa careless erras.

DEAR PRO: I gotcher message. You and about 300 other readers objected to my advice to "skip it."

Take Two: The student's mother should take it up with the teacher personally instead of asking her son to return the essay with her corrections of the teacher's grammar. And if she finds that the teacher's "error" was an accurate indication of her English grammar skills, it should be called to the attention of the school principal. Teachers cannot teach what they do not know.

CONFIDENTIAL TO B.G. IN CHICAGO: Sometimes a kind lie is better than a cruel truth.

UNDERWATER FUN

While most visitors to the Hawaiian Islands spend a lengthy part of their trip on Oahu, few know about Hanauma Bay. Located just outside of Honolulu, this easily-accessible cove is a swimmer's paradise. Forget the images of ten-foot waves and pounding surf for which Hawaii is known. Hanauma Bay offers a tranquil stretch of ocean that is a delight for children and first-time snorkelers. Gear can be rented inexpensively. Because Hanauma Bay is a fish preserve, snorkelers will be surrounded by delightfully colored schools of fish in these clear coral waters. Hanauma Bay is a must-see and must-do for the slightly adventurous traveler who is not yet quite ready to risk life and limb on a surfboard.

For the "must-see and must-do" vacations of a lifetime you "must come" to BIG SPRING SKIPPER TRAVEL, 608 Scurry. Tell us of your dreams and let us turn them into reality. From around the corner to around the world, we will create the travel plans you have only been dreaming about. But Unser's this one was his. "They don't. This one here is older you get, appreciate the gets, the more easy," said, rewarded by a check with the pro other two 500 season at Michigan and in next year.

Unser takes Indy after Andretti falters

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Al Unser is more than the oldest winner of the Indianapolis 500. He's more than only the second four-time winner of the Indianapolis 500. Al Unser is the luckiest winner of the Indianapolis 500.

And Mario Andretti is the unluckiest loser.

"Lady Luck has to run your way sometimes, and this was one of those times," said Unser, who won in 1970, 1971 and 1978 but was without a ride after his contract with the Penske Racing team expired last season.

Unser, who will be 48 on Friday, never thought he would be in Sunday's race, let alone win it. He got the ride, supposedly a one-shot deal, just three days before the second weekend of time trials when Danny Ongais suffered a concussion in practice, and promptly qualified 22nd, in the middle of the seventh row.

Then came the race, marred by the first spectator fatality since 1960. Unser barely avoided a first-lap crash by two other drivers, then found himself in the right place when Andretti and then Roberto Guerrero were unable to hold leads that surely seemed safe late in the race.

"It's hard to believe," said Unser, who matched A.J. Foyt's record four victories and surpassed his brother, Bobby, as the oldest winner by nine months. "It's something you dream about. But it seemed it wouldn't come true because of all the problems. I feel for Danny (Ongais), because it should have been his ride. ... Thank you, Danny."

But Unser was equally certain this one was his greatest victory.

"They don't all blend together. This one here is more special. The older you get, the more you learn to appreciate them. The harder it gets, the more you realize it's not easy," said Unser, who was rewarded by car owner Roger Penske with the promise of rides in the other two 500-mile races this season at Michigan and Pocono and in next year's Indianapolis 500.

It was the sixth victory for the Penske team.

"In no way was I thinking of not coming (to Indy)," he said. "But if Al Unser holds four fingers aloft in victory lane Sunday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway after winning his fourth 500 mile classic.

I didn't have a ride by a certain date, I was going to go home and come back for the race. I was tired of standing around. It gets boring."

It was Andretti, who set an unofficial lap record of more than 218 mph in practice and easily won the pole position for his 22nd Indy start, who was expected to run away with his second Indy victory.

And he nearly did, until his streak of bad luck continued with a broken fuel seal 23 laps from the finish.

"I couldn't touch him. There was nothing I could do with Mario at all. He ran off and left us all," Unser said.

Andretti grabbed the lead at the beginning and was almost unchallenged until disaster struck. He led 170 of the first 177 laps, the most dominant pace since 1930 and even in the end the fifth-most dominant race ever from the standpoint of laps led.

Unser, meanwhile, almost never survived the first trip around the track, barely avoiding a spin and crash by Josele Garza.

"Josele passed me low," Unser said. "He was on the paint and spun. I barely made it by. I tensed up because I thought he would get me in my left rear. It scared me."

Andretti lost the lead only briefly twice when he came in for routine pit stops. When he built a lead of more than one lap with a full third of the race to go, the question was not whether he would outrun the other cars, but whether he would outrun his perennial bad luck.

"There was no one who could challenge us today," he said. "I truly felt I was in control of the situation. ... We just got cheated. ... It was the best car I've ever had here. I've never driven an Indy car so perfect. It was the easiest race of my life. We couldn't be on top of the world. I've lost a lot of races like this. I never feel I have it made until the checkered flag."

He wouldn't make it to the checkered flag this year, finally quitting after 180 laps. Officially, Andretti finished ninth. Five times in his long career, he ended in crashes. Twice he was runnerup, including the most controversial Indy race in history in 1981, when he was teased with victory as Bobby Unser was penalized a lap the day after the race.

Four months later, a special U.S. Auto Club hearing panel restored Bobby's victory, dropping Andretti to second.

"The fuel system just pitched. The thing backfired, so we brought it in and fuel was pouring out," Andretti said. "It was a seal or some stupid thing like that."

When Andretti went out, the last driver between Unser and the checkered flag was Guerrero, who took the lead for five laps and seemed in control. But again Unser benefited from someone else's bad luck.

After the 182nd lap, Guerrero came in for a pit stop and couldn't get the car out of gear.

"The clutch was giving us problems. I tried to start it up, but the engine stalled on it," Guerrero said. "The car was working well, and we didn't need tires, so we just wanted to make a quick stop for fuel."

"Sometimes those quick stops don't turn out the way you hope."

Unser had more than a lap lead over Guerrero, but the Colombian driver unlapped himself and closed the gap behind Unser when the final yellow came out as Andretti stalled again.

When the green flag was waved with five laps to go, Unser held a four-second lead and Guerrero couldn't make up the difference. The unofficial margin of victory was 4.496 seconds — fifth-closest in history.

Unser's winning time was 3 hours, 4 minutes, 59.147 seconds, an average speed of 162.175 mph.

Guerrero finished second for the second time in his four years at Indy. He also has finished third and fourth, and the 200 laps he drove Sunday gave him the most completed laps — 798 of a possible 800 — of any driver over the past four years.

Rookie Fabrizio Barbazza of Italy was third, followed by Al Unser Jr., Gary Bettenhausen, Dick Simon, rookies Stan Fox and Jeff MacPherson and Andretti. Tony Bettenhausen was 10th, followed by Johnny Rutherford, Scott Brayton, Danny Sullivan and Tom Sneva, who crashed on the 143rd lap.

The race was marred by the death of a spectator, Lyle Kurtenbach, 41, of Rothschild, Wis., who was struck in the head by a tire which flew off the car of Tony Bettenhausen and into the grandstand between the third and fourth turns after it was hit by Guerrero's car. It was the 64th fatality since the Speedway opened in 1909, the 10th spectator overall and the first directly related to the race since 1938.

Guerrero, running about 12 seconds behind Andretti after 300 miles, lost a nose cone after hitting the tire on the 130th lap and pulled into the pits. The car was repaired, but by that time Andretti had built a huge lead in his quest for his second Indianapolis 500 victory.

Only 11 cars were running at the end. Drivers out of the race included defending champion Bobby Rahal and former winners Foyt, Sneva, Sullivan, Rick Mears and Gordon Johncock. The 50-year-old Johncock had come out of a two-year retirement and took over a car for injured Jim Crawford. The 52-year-old Foyt was making a record 30th consecutive start.

Andretti's 170 leading laps were the most by a driver since Parnelli Jones led 171 in a 1967 loss to Foyt.

Graf, Lendl among first day winners at French

PARIS (AP) — Defending champion Ivan Lendl struggled to win and streaking Steffi Graf won handily at the French Open today, while Johan Kriek, a semifinalist last year, was beaten.

Lendl, of Czechoslovakia, took 3½ hours to defeat Ronald Agenor of Haiti 7-5, 7-6, 6-6, 6-3 in a match marked by arguments over line calls.

Earlier on the red clay of Center Court, Graf, of West Germany, opened the tournament with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Csilla Cserepy.

Meanwhile, the 16th-seeded Kriek of the United States was ousted by Sweden's Joakim Nystrom 6-7, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1.

Also among the women's seeds, fifth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia beat Dinky Van Rensburg of South Africa 6-1, 6-1; 10th-seeded Kathy Rinaldi of the U.S. beat Vicki Nelson-Dunbar of the U.S. 6-2, 6-0, and 15th-seeded Sylvia Hanika of West Germany beat Neige Dias of Brazil 6-1, 6-1.

Other seeded players in action on a warm, sunny day included fourth-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden, No. 6 Yannick Noah of France and 14th-seeded Martin Jaitte of Argentina among the men, and No. 7 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina among the women.

While Kriek, who lost to Lendl in a semifinal here a year ago, was seeded and Nystrom was not, the loss hardly would be considered an upset. Nystrom is just one spot below Kriek in the world rankings and is a much better play-court player than his American foe.

The first-round elimination was bitter for Kriek, who called for rule changes to assure that two players in the top 20 never again face each other in the first round of a Grand Slam tournament.

"Why should only 16 guys be seeded?" the Naples, Fla., veteran asked. "Is 16 that much better than 17? Joakim and I are world-class players, and here we are having to play each other right at the start."

Kriek added, however, that Nystrom had beaten him "fair and square." Nystrom had two set points in the first set before Kriek took it, and soared ahead in the second set as Kriek lost concentration and momentum. A missed backhand volley by Kriek gave Nystrom the match.

Graf, the No. 2 women's seed who has won her last six tournaments, took less than an hour to beat Cserepy.

After suffering a minor ankle injury on Sunday in an charity match, second-seeded Boris Becker of West Germany opens play Tuesday.

Two-time Wimbledon champion Becker will meet Diego Perez of Uruguay on Tuesday. Becker got a scare Sunday in an exhibition match against Spain's Emilio Sanchez when he slipped on the center service line while coming in for a volley.

He went down hard, immediately grabbed his ankle, then went to the referee to retire as a precaution.

"This confirms I'm playing well," said Evert, who has won a Grand Slam event in each of the last 13 years.

Evert, however, is not top-seeded this year. Martina Navratilova, still seeking her first tournament victory of the year, is the No. 1 seed despite the fact that Navratilova lost to Evert in the finals at Houston and to Graf in the Lipton International Tournament semifinal earlier this 1987.

Gretzky, Oilers near third Cup

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wayne Gretzky was angry after the Edmonton Oilers blew a three-goal lead and lost Game 3 of the Stanley Cup finals. He took out his frustrations on the Philadelphia Flyers.

Gretzky set up three goals with picture-perfect passes Sunday night as the Oilers moved to within one win of their third Stanley Cup in four years with a 4-1 victory over the Flyers.

The Oilers, who won the Stanley Cup in 1984 and '85, lead the best-of-seven series 3-1 and can regain the NHL championship with a win at home Tuesday night.

Gretzky said he was displeased with his team's showing Friday night, when the Oilers blew a 3-0 lead and lost 5-3.

"We didn't play very well in the third game," he said. "We let them back into the game. It was discouraging. We were dejected. We kicked ourselves. We had a meeting, watched the films and got ourselves on a high note."

If there were any after-effects from Friday night's loss, they weren't apparent in the first period. Just as they did in Game 3, the Oilers jumped off to a 2-0 lead after the first 20 minutes.

Jari Kurri opened the scoring at 5:53, taking a perfect feed from Gretzky and beating Flyers goaltender Ron Hextall from the inside of the right circle.

Gretzky also set up the second goal. With the Oilers killing a penalty, Gretzky carried into the Flyers' zone, drew both defenders to him and slipped a pass to defenseman Kevin Lowe in the slot. Lowe beat Hextall with a backhander between the pads at 18:44.

The Flyers made it 2-1 at 8:17 of the second period on Brad McCrimmon's 50-foot slapshot during a power play. But, unlike Game 3, the Oilers kept their composure — and their lead.

Gretzky helped silence the roaring sellout crowd of 17,222 with his third assist, a perfect feed that set up defenseman Randy Gregg's power-play goal at 12:31 of the middle period. Gregg beat Hextall from 10 feet out after taking Gretzky's pass on a give-and-go.

Edmonton goaltender Grant Fuhr again outplayed Hextall, stopping 27 of 28 Flyer shots.

Barr's 23-under tally good enough for win

ATLANTA (AP) — Dave Barr's doubts were put to rest after the long-hitting Canadian's record-setting performance in the Atlanta Golf Classic.

"You always wonder if you're ever going to win again," Barr said Sunday after shooting a final-round 65 for a 23-under-par 265 total in capturing the $108,000 first prize over the 7,007-yard Atlanta Country Club course.

Barr, a 35-year-old from the Vancouver suburb of Richmond, has been on the PGA Tour for 10 years, winning once — the 1981 Quad Cities Open.

"The Quad cities in 1981 was a long time ago," he said. "But I've come close a couple of times and tying for second in the U.S. Open kept my fire going."

Barr's 72-hole total tied the 19-year-old tournament record set in 1979 by Andy Bean and increased his earnings for the year to $139,224 — his highest ever — in going over the $100,000 mark for the fourth straight year.

"All this week, I felt in control. I was not nervous at all. I had an inner control," said Barr, who won by four shots over Masters champion Larry Mize, who put on a charge with five consecutive birdies to tie Barr after 12 holes.

"I played a good solid round," said Mize, who earned $64,800 to move up to third on the money list at $348,096. "I was a little too far back and Dave was playing too good."

Mize, who matched Barr's final-round 65, began the day four shots behind Barr and five shots behind leader Bobby Wadkins.

"I was thinking if I could shoot a 64 or so, I would have a chance," Mize said. "I did what I wanted to do, but it wasn't enough."

Barr, who had nine birdies and two bogeys in his round, started out with birdies on his first two holes to take the lead, which he never surrendered.

His birdies ranged from 1 to 20 feet, but he suffered bogeys at No. 9 and 12 before going on a birdie binge of his own.

Pistons blast tired Celtics, again

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons have made the NBA Eastern Conference finals a best-of-three series. That means they still might have to win two games in Boston Garden.

Adrian Dantley scored 23 of his game-high 32 points in the second half and reserve guard Vinnie Johnson added 25 points Sunday to spark Detroit's 145-119 victory over the Celtics that evened the series at 2-2.

Game 5 is scheduled for Tuesday night in Boston with Game 6 Thursday night back in the Silverdome where the Pistons have now won 10 straight games.

Nobody has won two playoff games in Boston Garden since 1985 when the Los Angeles Lakers won the NBA championship in six games. The Pistons, however, haven't won a game of any kind on the famed parquet floor since 1982.

There is still more history going against the Pistons. Only four teams have ever overcome a 2-0 deficit in the playoffs and the Celtics have never lost a seven-game series after winning the first two games.

Sam Vincent, who led the tired and hurting Celtics with 18 points, said Boston could be in trouble if the offense doesn't catch fire.

"Detroit's very confident right now," Vincent said. "I'd be very confident, also, if we'd just won two games by 20 points."

The Pistons, who led 62-58 at halftime, got 11 points from Dantley in a blistering third quarter that saw them take a commanding 104-88 lead into the final period.

Detroit's Dennis Rodman runs past Boston's Larry Bird in the fourth quarter of the Pistons' 145-119 win over the Celtics in Sunday's game four of the Eastern Conference Final.

Isiah Thomas scored 22 points for Detroit and Laimbeer, who was ejected from Game 3 for fighting with Boston's Larry Bird, added 20 points and pulled down 13 rebounds.

Bird, who was held to 17 and 16 points in the two games at the Silverdome, hinted that the pressure might now be on the Celtics, despite the fact that they're going home.

Cards prove Scott's mortal

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

The St. Louis Cardinals are so hot they even caught Mike Scott on a bad day.

The Cardinals won their fifth straight game and 10th in 11 Sunday, beating the Astros 8-2 as just about everything went right — from Scott's wildness to Jack Clark's grand slam that was thought to be a foul ball by the Astros and most of the Astrodomo crowd.

Even Clark wasn't sure until third-base umpire Charlie Williams called the ball fair.

"I thought maybe it went foul but I couldn't tell," Clark said of his 12th homer. "I was doing what everyone else was, looking to the ump for the call. Then I ran fast around the bases before he changed his mind."

Clark's homer followed four straight walks and was one of just two hits surrendered by Scott, 5-3, in 1 1/3 innings. The other was Terry Pendleton's first-inning single that extended his major-league high hitting streak to 18 games.

Scott, last year's NL Cy Young Award winner, allowed six walks and was charged with seven runs, the most since he permitted since he was charged with six against Montreal on May 4, 1986.

As St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog put it: "We didn't see the real Mike Scott today."

The loss was the fifth straight and eighth in nine games for the defending NL West champions.

It was also an easy victory for Joe Magrane, his fourth straight since being called up to replace John Tudor, who suffered a broken leg in a dugout accident. He allowed seven hits and gave up both runs in the fourth inning on three hits and two walks.

"I was just going to relax and try to get the ball over the plate when we got the big lead," Magrane said. "I wasn't exactly throwing smoke today and didn't really have very good stuff, I guess I was aiming the ball and lost my control."

New York Mets second baseman Wally Backman begs to differ with second base umpire Dave Pallone after Pallone called the Los Angeles Dodgers' Mickey Hatcher safe after Hatcher stretched a single into a double in the sixth inning Sunday at Shea Stadium.

Cubs 3, Braves 2

The Cubs stayed within one game of the Cardinals in the East with their second straight extra-inning victory over Atlanta, whom they beat in 16 innings Saturday.

Andre Dawson singled home Bob Dernier from third to win it.

Dawson's game-winner came on a 2-0 pitch with two outs and first base open and the Braves were willing to pitch around him. But he stroked a high pitch into left.

Dodgers 8, Mets 6

Mike Scioscia drew a bases-loaded walk from Roger McDowell to break a seventh-inning tie and Orel Hershiser allowed six hits in seven innings to lead the Dodgers.

It left the defending world champions fifth in the East with a 19-22 record.

After Los Angeles took an 8-3 lead, the Mets rallied for three runs in the ninth and Matt Young had to come on to strike out Keith Hernandez with two men on. It was the second straight save and fourth of the season for Young, who started out 1-5 after coming over from Seattle in the off-season.

"I know his numbers don't show it, but he'll be an outstanding reliever in this league," Scioscia said of Young. "He throws as hard as anyone, and he has great breaking pitches, as Keith Hernandez saw."

Pirates 7, Reds 2

Converted reliever Brian Fisher hit a three-run homer for his first major-league hit and threw a fifth-hitter as the Pirates won their fifth straight and swept a series over the Reds, who won last year's season's series 10-2.

Bobby Bonilla added two solo homers as the Pirates won their 10th game in their last 13. Tom Browning, 4-6, allowed six runs in four innings as the Reds' losing

Giants 6, Phillies 3

Robby Thompson's three-run eighth-inning homer off Kent Tekulve broke a 3-3 tie and gave the Giants a three-game lead in the West.

Philadelphia's Darren Daulton, making his first appearance since injuring a knee last June 21, hit a three-run homer in the seventh off Mike LaCoss, 5-1, to erase a 3-0 Giants' lead.

Expos 2, Padres 1

Mitch Webster keyed a two-run sixth-inning rally with an RBI single and Floyd Youmans and Tim Burke combined on a four-hitter for the Expos.

With game scoreless, Youmans, 2-3, opened the sixth with a single off Eric Show, 1-6, and went to second on a sacrifice by Casey Candaele. An error by second baseman Joey Cora and two walks forced home the second run.

Yanks finally shake pesky Angels, 9-8

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Willie Randolph found "a hole," and it was enough to give New York its third straight victory over the California Angels.

California had rallied from 5-0 and 8-2 deficits to tie the game 8-8 and send it into extra innings Sunday. But in the top of the 10th, Wayne Tolleson walked and moved to second on a disputed play at first base.

With Tolleson on first, Rickey Henderson hit a checked-swing ground ball to first. He dove to first base, trying to elude Wally Joyner's tag, and was ruled safe by first-base umpire Nick Bremigan. After a discussion with home-plate umpire Dale Ford, Bremigan reversed his call.

"He (Bremigan) called Rickey safe and never asked for any help. The home-plate umpire just volunteered," Yankees Manager Lou Piniella said. "The first-base ump had a perfect angle. But it's forgotten now."

Randolph made it a forgotten play as he singled home Tolleson with the tie-breaking run.

"I just got my hands out. I was in there looking for a decent pitch to hit," Randolph said. "I found a hole. That's all I was looking for."

After Angels reliever Donnie Moore, 2-2, walked Don Mattingly intentionally, Gary Ward singled to left, scoring Randolph with the final run.

"We know the game isn't over until the last out," Henderson said. "We just kept battling to the end. I think that's what makes us a great ballclub."

Even with the loss, California Manager Gene Mauch was pleased with his team's refusal to quit.

"Coming back from 8-2 isn't easy," Mauch said. "We've done it a lot of times. It's a reflection of what we've been doing earlier and an indication of what we'll do again."

Mike Pagliarulo and Dan Pasqua each hit two-run homers and Joel Skinner added a solo shot for the Yankees. California got home runs from Dick Schofield with two men on, Jack Howell and Joyner.

Orioles 4, Athletics 3

Ray Knight scored on Ken Gerhart's sacrifice fly to boost Baltimore to its third straight victory over Oakland. Knight had reached base on a fielder's choice and moved to third on Terry Kennedy's single.

Gerhart's fly to deep left appeared to be going out of the park, but Jose Canseco leaped and caught the ball at the top of the wall. Kennedy failed to get back to first in time and was doubled up for the final out of the inning. But the run counted since Knight crossed the plate before Kennedy was out at first.

Knight hit his fifth homer of the year, a solo shot in the fourth, while the Athletics scored all of their runs on solo homers: Mark McGwire hit his 16th in the second, Mike Davis his 10th in the fifth and Carney Lansford his third in the sixth.

White Sox 4, Red Sox 1

Tim Lulett scored in the 10th inning when Ken Williams hit a double that was misjudged by left fielder Jim Rice, giving Chicago its victory and a sweep of the three-game series with Boston. Harold Baines added a two-run single in the inning.

The Red Sox scored first in the fourth when Wade Boggs walked and scored on singles by Mike Greenwell and Rice. Chicago tied it in the sixth on Daryl Boston's leadoff double and Harold Baines' single.

Tigers 7, Twins 2

Kirk Gibson's RBI single and John Grubb's two-run single were the only hits in Detroit's five-run seventh inning as the Tigers downed Minnesota for their ninth victory in 11 games.

Rookie Jeff Robinson, 3-2, allowed just an unearned run in the second inning and a solo home run to Kent Herbek in the eighth before Mike Henneman relieved in the ninth. Robinson gave up five hits, struck out nine and walked three.

Indians 5, Brewers 3

A two-out, ground-rule double by Julio Franco was the big blow in Cleveland's five-run fifth inning. Franco's hit, grabbed by a fan sitting in the first row along the right field line, scored two runs to snap a 1-1 tie.

Royals 5, Rangers 2

Danny Tartabull's seventh homer of the season, a two-run shot in the second inning, and Kevin Seitzer's two-run single boosted Kansas City over Texas. Jerry Don Gleaton got the victory, his first of the year, in relief of starter MarkBuzica.

Mariners 5, Blue Jays 2

Mark Langston pitched a three-hitter and struck out 14, a season-high, giving him the AL lead with 79. Langston, 5-4, won for the fifth time in his last seven decisions. It was the 16th time in Langston's career he has struck out 10 or more in a game.

Longhorns returning to second home — Omaha

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Longhorns are headed back to the College World Series after missing last year's series. Before last year's absence, the Longhorns had made the trip to Omaha five straight seasons.

The Longhorns, 58-9, earned their 25th trip to the College World Series Sunday with a 13-4 rout of Houston, aided by a two-hour, two-minute rain delay that came with them trailing the Cougars, 3-1.

"I remember Omaha a little bit," said Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson, who has his 14th CWS team in 20 seasons. "I remember they play it at Rosenblatt Stadium."

The Longhorns will see some familiar faces at the CWS as Arkansas earned the right to face Texas in the first round of the tournament with a regional victory and Texas A&M has a chance to make the trip to Nebraska.

Scott Coolbaugh and Elanis Westbrook each drove in three runs for Texas.

"The whole regional, I didn't really do anything," Coolbaugh said. "I got about five hits, but no one even noticed until today."

Coolbaugh was 3-5, including a two-run homer.

The Longhorns, 58-9, will face Arkansas, 50-14-1, in a first round game at 3:10 p.m. Saturday in Omaha, Neb.

The Razorbacks, who finished second to Texas in the Southwest Conference, won the South I Central championship Sunday in Huntsville, Ala., by defeating Clemson 4-2.

A third Southwest Conference team, Texas A&M, has a chance to make the trip to Omaha if they can beat Oklahoma State today at the Mideast Regional in Starkville, Miss.

The Aggies lost to Oklahoma State, 7-4, to set up today's championship game.

The Cougars, who finished the season at 40-24-1, took a 3-1 lead in the top of the fourth, roughing up Texas starter Curt Krippner for five hits and three runs.

The game was then delayed two hours and two minutes by a heavy downpour in the bottom of the inning with Texas batting.

Coolbaugh's 15th home run of the year tied the game in the bottom of the fifth. Brian Cisarik, who was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player, scored ahead of Coolbaugh.

The Longhorns then blew the contest wide open, batting around in both the sixth and eighth innings. The Longhorns scored six runs in the sixth and four more in the eighth.

Krippner went the distance for the Longhorns and won his 13th game of the year without a loss. The junior righthander gave up eight hits, five of those coming in the fourth, walked only one, and struck out six.

Jury selection begins today in Tribble-Bias-cocaine trial

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — The lawyer for the man accused of several drug violations in connection with the death of University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias has put a larger-than-usual premium on finding the proper panel to judge the case.

Jury selection in the trial of Brian Lee Tribble got under way today in Prince George's County Circuit Court, a task that the defense attorney for Brian Lee Tribble did not take lightly.

"The outcome of the case depends upon whether we can find a truly fair and impartial jury," said Thomas Morrow, who has frequently criticized the negative exposure his client received from the media in the 11 months since Bias' death.

Tribble, 24, is believed to be one of three men in the room with Bias in the early-morning hours of June 19 when the top draft pick of the NBA's Boston Celtics suffered a fatal seizure from cocaine intoxication. The other two, former Maryland basketball players David Gregg and Terry Long, are expected to testify against Tribble, who is charged with providing the cocaine for the early-morning party in Bias' dormitory room.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MAY 26, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's a very good day to quietly think in terms of whatever obligations of a practical nature you have. Get rid of them through a conscientious endeavor.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Although you like to get into creative affairs it is better to handle whatever is of a practical nature.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have several avenues to follow that will bring you greater popularity, but choose the wisest.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may feel hemmed in by the situation around you, but a little ingenuity can free you from this condition.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Don't ask favors of others today or you could get into troublesome arguments.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't feel put off by influential people. Realize that bigwigs have problems worse than your own.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are anxious to get into new projects, but this is not the right time to do so. Get your routines improved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't take any risks with your mate or you can lose much of the harmony that has been so carefully built up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Outside partners are not in the mood to do what you would like, so don't call them today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Although your work may seem boring, keep at it. Take any health treatments you may need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Instead of planning recreations, finish those practical tasks that have to be completed now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have to have more patience and consideration at home now, so don't lose your patience.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Much more care than usual has to be exercised in motion. Be careful of any errors in your reports.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be deliberate and take much time at doing everything, so it would be wise to teach this one to be faster in order to keep up with others. Your progeny could do well along business lines and should have the education slanted this way.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

as precious to us as the constitution of the United States."

In the Anglo society that arose in Texas following the Mexican-American war, Hispanics endured for decades a twilight existence as second-class citizens. Though relied upon as blue-collar and farm workers, Mexican-Americans endured blunt discrimination in regard to schools and better-paying jobs.

They also were encouraged to abandon their language and culture to succeed in an English-speaking society.

Yet, Mexicans continued to cross the Rio Grande in search of a life in Texas.

In this century, there have been three major waves of immigrants from Mexico: During the 1917 Mexican revolution, during World War II when there was an abundance of American jobs and, finally, now, with a Mexican economy gone sour.

Demographers estimate that about 55,000 people a year come to Texas from Mexico and that almost half that number are undocumented workers. An estimated 2 million to 4 million Hispanic illegal aliens already are here.

After failing for years to control what experts call one of the great migrations of history, Congress last year passed the Immigration Reform and Control Act. The controversial law offers amnesty to perhaps 4 million Mexican-Americans already in the United States, while slamming the door on millions of others.

But to cut off the jobs for those who don't qualify, the law threatens fines or imprisonment for employers who hire illegal aliens. It also requires job applicants to prove their citizenship status before they can be hired.

Many Hispanics view the law, which will be enforced by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, simply as a continuation of discrimination.

"This will turn every employer in the state into an agent for the INS," said Ms. Gonzalez, head of the Houston-area League of United Latin American Citizens.

The law also may hurt seriously some Texas industries, says Rep. Al Luna, chairman of the Mexican-American caucus in the Texas Legislature.

The legislator predicts the new immigration law will be an issue in future congressional races and could help spark a political awakening among the Hispanic community.

"A lot of Hispanic people now feel they don't have a stake in the political process," he said. "We need issues or candidates that will turn them on."

The Hispanic vote has been powerful in statewide Democratic primary races, composing up to 25 percent of the total vote, but it has carried less weight in general elections.

The hand-cranked ferry at Los Ebanos carries car and passenger across the Rio Grande from Mexico. More than 100 people a day use the crossing, once used by Indians, Mexican troops and Spanish explorers. The crossing is a starting point for many aliens who follow paths used by migrations across the river since ancient times. Experts now feel that the immigration from Mexico and a vigorous birth rate is expected to create a Texas dominated by Hispanics within 65 years.

The primary concern of Mexican-American organizations and legislators now is public education and the 40 percent to 45 percent high school dropout rate among Hispanics.

"For every 100 who start in the first grade, only 55 will graduate from high school," Luna said. "And of those 55, only seven will earn a college degree."

Some experts blame the poor performance on a bilingual education system that emphasizes teaching English to the Spanish-speaking pupils.

"We have failed because the concentration has been on learning English, not just on learning," says Angel Gonzalez, administrator of the bilingual program at Houston's public schools. "We are teaching English OK, but we are producing English-speaking illiterates."

"They get so far behind they get frustrated and drop out." Gonzalez and other educators favor teaching the basics in both Spanish and English to ensure Spanish-speaking youngsters keep pace with their English-speaking classmates in other subject areas.

Such proposals raise the ire of a growing anti-bilingual movement in Texas and the Southwest. An organization called English First, supported by some state legislators, has attacked the use of English-Spanish ballots and public-supported education in Spanish.

In a letter to voters, state Rep. Jack Horn warned that unless a constitutional amendment is passed making English the official U.S. language, "the fragmentation of American society along language lines will be complete."

A state amendment has been proposed, but is locked in a legislative committee.

LULAC and other organizations have called the proposal racist. "It's all part of the anti-immigrant hysteria that's sweeping the country," said Margaret Gonzalez. "These people want an America of their own design."

Professor Rodolfo O. de la Garza of the University of Texas said studies of Mexican immigrants show that, by the third generation, many Mexican-Americans cannot speak Spanish. Only those living along the border or in barrios where Spanish is used daily maintain the language skill, and most become bilingual, de la Garza said.

"One of the most phenomenal things is how rapidly they are losing Spanish after coming to this country," he said. "These people want to better themselves and the good jobs are not in the barrios. They want to learn English so they can compete and get the good jobs outside."

Still, the Spanish-speaking population in Texas is so large that many companies have found it good business to cater to the language.

Market researchers say the Hispanics are generally younger with larger families who develop a strong brand loyalty, which can translate into big dollars.

Sears, Roebuck and Co. now publishes a Spanish-language catalog. Many businesses advertise their ability to communicate in Spanish and most forms of transportation offer information in Spanish.

There are 37 Spanish-language radio stations in Texas, at least some Spanish-language television is carried by most cable TV companies, and many video stores offer Spanish versions of "Gone With the Wind" and other American movie classics.

Spanish-language newspapers are printed in Texas' major cities and along the border, and many bookstores carry other publications in Spanish.

Despite the heavy Hispanic influence on the culture and history in Texas, the state, many believe, continues to be a hard place for Mexican-Americans to live.

In 1971, Business Week reported, "Anti-Mexican prejudice is more overt in Texas than in any other Southwestern state." And to many Mexican-Americans, that still holds true.

Rafael Gonzalez, now an engineer at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, believes some of the best and brightest Mexican-Americans still must leave the state to find equal job opportunities. Engineers often are attracted to California and the Northeast because they feel discrimination in Texas, he said.

Luis Plascencia, a researcher at the University of Texas who lives in a neighborhood of professionals, said his wife still is sometimes stopped by police.

"They will ask her whose maid she is," he said.

Plascencia, who has lived in other states, said he believes such racial assumptions are much more pronounced in Texas.

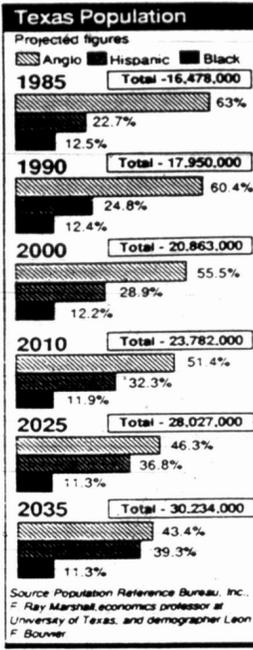

"Texas has never perceived itself as an immigrant state," he said.

Mrs. Sutton, the head of the council of Mexican-American organizations in El Paso, said some barrio schools still are routinely less well-equipped than schools in Anglo neighborhoods.

"There still are some school counselors who will tell Mexican-American students that their best future is in the military," she said. "They're not getting slapped in the mouth for speaking Spanish, as they once were, but this can be just as discouraging."

Times have changed, said LULAC's Margaret Gonzalez, but Texas still lacks the racial and ethnic maturity it will need as Hispanics slowly become the majority in the state.

"What makes the United States a great nation is its diversity," she said. "It's something we've got to remember here."

Pvt. 1st Class George W. Harwood Jr., son of George W. Harwood, 7902 Cherokee, and Brenda L. Harwood, 718 Birdwell, has completed the basic field artillery cannoneer course under the one station unit training (OSUT) program at Fort Sill, OKla.

During the course, students were taught the duties of a howitzer or gun section crewman. They also received instruction in communications, maintenance and the handling of ammunition and explosives.

OSUT is a program that combines basic training with advanced individual training.

His wife, Jeanni, is the daughter of Ramah Whiteside of Irving. Harwood is a 1981 graduate of DeVry Institute of Technology.

Marine Pfc. David R. Herrera, son of David and Mary E. Herrera, both of Big Spring, recently completed the Radio Fundamentals Course.

During the seven-week course conducted at the Marine Corps Communication-Electronics School, Twentynine Palms, Calif., Herrera received instruction on the electronic theory and servicing principles used in repairing Marine Corps radio communication systems.

He studied transmitters and receivers, transmission lines and antenna fundamentals, basic troubleshooting techniques and the isolation of malfunctions.

A 1985 graduate of Big Spring High School, he joined the Marine Corps in April 1986.
