Spring board

How's that? MADD

Q. Is there a MADD chapter in Big Spring. If not how can one be started?

A. There is not a MADD chapter in Big Spring. To obtain information on how to begin a chapter, write to: MADD, 669 Airport Freeway, Suite 310, Hearst, Texas, 76053, or call 817-268-6233.

Calendar Cleanup

TODAY

• Cleanup Day is scheduled for Area 4 of the city, the northwest side. Garbage should be placed on the curb.

TUESDAY

• Sands High School will conduct its commencement exercises at 8 p.m.

• Water will be off 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on 11th Place from Nolan to Austin Streets, on Nolan Street from 11th Place to 10th Street, and on Goliad Street from 11th Place to Eighth Street, to tie in new lines.

Items for the Spring board calendar must be community-wide events to be included and will be listed no more than one week in advance. Send such notices to: Spring board, Big Spring Herald, Box 1431, Big Spring. Club notices will be printed in the "Bulletin Board" section of the Sunday Herald.

For the record

A clarification is needed on the last paragraph of the Saragosa Relief Fund story in Sunday's edition of the Big Spring Herald.

The wording that "all contributions will be published in the Herald" can be interpreted to mean that individual contributors and the amounts they give will be published. That won't be the case.

The sentence should have stated that total contributions will be published periodically throughout the campaign, scheduled to end July 31.

Governor surprises lawmakers

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements threatened to veto a 5-cent hike in the gasoline tax, stunning some lawmakers who gathered today for the final day of the Legislature's regular session.

Clements' veto threat Sunday came the day after he had said he would sign an extension of the temporary gasoline tax hike, which is scheduled to end Sept. 1. The governor said he would veto the extension if lawmakers won't pass the remainder of the $2.9 billion tax plan that he wants.

"We're going to veto the highway (fuel) tax if they don't do the other tax," Clements said.

He visited the House chamber Sunday to discuss the special legislative session he has scheduled for June 22.

The session was called so lawmakers can finish work on the 1988-89 budget they failed to pass during their 140-day regular session that ends today.

In the budget deadlock, Clements has insisted that lawmakers approve no more than $2.9 billion in new taxes — by keeping the sales tax rate at 5½ percent and leaving the motor fuel levy at 15 cents per gallon.

Both taxes were raised last year, but lawmakers scheduled them to revert to their old rates — 4 percent and 10 cents per gallon — on Sept. 1.

Besides being unable to agree on a spending plan, the House and Senate also failed to agree on the sales tax increase. But the two chambers did approve making the 15-cent fuel tax permanent.

Although Clements said Saturday night he saw no reason not to approve the gas tax increase that would raise $888 million over two years, Sunday he insisted that the sales tax changes must be made, too.

Officials near ambulance decision

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

City and County officials considering ambulance service bids will negotiate with Rural Metro and Texas EMS ambulance companies before making a final decision, it was decided at a joint meeting this morning.

City Councilmen Johnny Rutherford and Russ McEwen and County Commissioners Bill Crooker and Louis Brown were appointed to a committee for that purpose. No date was set for a committee report.

The committee met this morning and will meet again at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Commissioners' Courtroom.

Issues of service and cost are to be considered in the negotiations.

Ambulance Advisory Committee members reported they favored Rural Metro and included Texas EMS as a second choice, pending further discussion with Rural Metro officials. Six bids in all were considered.

Louis Brown said he likes Rural Metro because the company is professional and was recommended by City Manager Mack Wofford, who has worked with it before.

Brown said he believes the company has a good solution to the fee collections problem.

Rutherford expressed concern about Rural Metro's proposal calling for one ambulance available 24 hours with a second on call 10 hours daily, five days a week.

He noted the specifications called for two ambulances available 24 hours. Rural Metro's proposal doesn't state what the subsidy would be under that condition, he said.

McEwen agreed with the concern. He said there is not enough time to re-bid and that the officials should come to an agreement with the company on that matter.

In response to a question about an out-of-state firm, Tracy Skeen, vice president of health care for Rural Metro, said the company has placed priority on hiring local ambulance personnel and, therefore, much of the money would stay in the community.

A citizen said people can't afford the high prices charged by Rural Metro. The company would charge a base rate of $175, plus mileage and supplies, according to its proposal.

Skeen mentioned the company's membership plan, in which those who pay an annual fee aren't charged for ambulance service. He said much of the company's collections come from insurance coverage and Medicare and Medicaid.

Council member Pat DeAnda was the only official present who voted against negotiating with Rural Metro and Texas EMS.

She said she favors the fire department providing the service. "The ambulance service today doesn't have to be accountable to anybody" as far as response time

San Angelo man lost in state floods

By the Associated Press

Heavy rain continued to drench southern and western portions of Texas, causing flooding across a vast area and claiming the life of a San Angelo man.

A flash flood watch was in effect for the Texas Hill Country and nearby areas, including San Antonio.

The body of Clarence Martin, 57, who drowned in floodwaters was discovered at daylight Sunday, police Sgt. Dave Caudle said.

"Apparently he and his wife were returning home in separate cars (late last night). She drove into the water and, of course, was washed out of the car and he drove in and apparently tried to assist her and drowned," Caudle said.

Water stood about 3 feet deep on the road, which was not far from where the couple lived.

"He was washed up nearly in front of his house," Caudle said.

He said the wife was unharmed. Caudle said police assisted several motorists from their cars Saturday evening.

"We still have a few cars buried in the river but we don't expect to find any bodies in them," he said.

Authorities had been searching for an 8-year-old boy late last night, but he was found at about midnight, Caudle said. The child was found at a friend's apartment.

Between eight and nine people, including a police officer, were rescued from the Red Arroyo, which was running between 12- and 14-foot deep.

Officer Elaine Walton was rescued by firefighter Charles Goode after she tried to save a man whose car was swept into the river.

Goode was tied to a rope, but when the rope ran out, he swam to Walton and pulled her to safety. The man she had been trying to rescue was later pulled to safety.

Sunday, the rain continued, although it was not as severe as Saturday night's deluge, authorities said.

In Ozona, a Farm-to-Market road was under six feet of water Sunday, DPS dispatcher Nancy Gillit said. She said up to 3 inches of rain had fallen, causing flooding in Jose Lopez, left, hands his son, Jesus, to bystander Manuel DeLaRosa, 16, seconds before he is swept off his feet by the current. Lopez and four other men tried to drive their truck through the low-water crossing on the Northeast side of San Antonio, Sunday. Lopez and the other men were rescued about 40 minutes later. Three days of rain in San Antonio produced almost record levels for May.

Bridge out Storms cause local damage

From staff reports

Flood waters apparently were responsible for the collapse of a bridge near Knott, area resident Larry Shaw reported this morning.

The traffic bridge over a low portion of Highway 846 collapsed Saturday afternoon after floods reached about four feet under it, Shaw said.

"I guess the ground was so soaked up the (bridge's) base wasn't very good," he said.

Water was about six inches deep over the highway Saturday, he said.

No one was reported injured. Shaw said his brother-in-law had been photographing his children on the bridge hours before it gave way.

Traffic on the highway was blocked, he said. The bridge is about eight miles west of Knott.

The waters were from a Knott lake that spilled over for the first time in memory, he said.

Shaw said he received 0.93 inches of rain by Sunday morning, bringing the total for May to a little over seven inches.

Elton S. Hartin, 203 N. Nolan St., reported 0.2 inches Saturday and 0.7 inches Sunday. Tommy Hart, 1750 Purdue St., measured 0.86 inches for the weekend.

Helen Shive of Coahoma reported 0.6 inches Saturday and said Sunday rains were too little to measure.

Eleven roads in north Dawson county have been closed due to high water, including US 87 from Lamesa to O'Donnell, Randall Dillard of the Highway Department in Lubbock said.

He added that people should avoid traveling through north Dawson County if at all possible for the next several days.

Insurance packages provide ambulance coverage variety

The Herald has scheduled a number of stories that examine the issues involved with ambulance service in Big Spring. This is another in that series.

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Group insurance coverage for ambulance service generally takes one of four shapes, according to agents, while Medicare and Medicaid provides coverage in emergency and selected non-emergency situations.

The private insurance coverages range from a flat fee as low as $50 to a policy that pays for all ambulance services.

One policy offered by US Life Insurance pays a flat fee of $100 and also covers supplies used by emergency personnel, said claims examiner Natalie Williams, from the firm's Dallas headquarters.

She noted that mileage fees are not included in the policy. Bobbye Deel of the Russ McEwen insurance agency in Big Spring provided three other typical policies offered locally.

The first, from Combined Insurance, covers expenses charged by local ambulance service only, excluding mileage fees.

Time Insurance Company offers a policy that pays all expenses to the nearest hospital, and a third policy from Association Life pays a $250 maximum, regardless of destination, Deel said.

Persons on Medicare or Medicaid are covered in emergency — and in some non-emergency — situations, according to information released by the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Medicare pays for local ambulance service in four situations. It covers service from a patient's home to the nearest hospital, and if the hospital is not equipped to handle the situation, transportation to another hospital is covered.

The Medicare coverage also pays for service from the hospital back to the patient's home, if both are in the same locality. It also covers service from the home to a treatment center, such as a nursing home or radiation center, Human Resources information indicates.

Medicaid covers local emergency service to the nearest hospital. If that facility can't handle the emergency, payment will be made for transportation to the nearest facility only, according to the documents.

For non-emergency situations, prior approval must be obtained for all out-of-town and air ambulance claims.

Non-emergency service is paid for severely disabled persons if it is physician-directed. For persons who aren't severely disabled persons, transportation will be provided by the Department of Human Resources Transportation

Natural Dam's level prompts water release

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Natural Dam Lake — at its highest level since September 1986 — prompted officials to release greater amounts of water Sunday and alert citizens in the Jones Valley area that "a significant increase" in water levels is expected soon.

It was last September when water came within 27 feet from the top of the dam, a Water District official said today.

Measurements taken this morning indicate Natural Dam Lake is 4.42 feet from the top of the dam. Colorado River Municipal Water District General Manager Owen Ivie said.

Big Spring city officials were warned about 2 p.m. Sunday that "flows from Natural Dam were to be increased a significant amount," said Tom Decell, director of public works.

That warning prompted city officials to distribute notices throughout neighborhoods in Jones Valley beginning about 3 p.m. that water levels were expected to rise within 12 to 32 hours, he said.

Water District officials increased Saturday the amount of water being released to approximately 700 cubic feet per second, the maximum rate that water can be safely released, Ivie said.

Until Saturday, water had been released at approximately 250 cubic feet per second, he said. But, after measuring inflows Saturday at 2,000 cfs, the amount was increased, he said.

That rate of inflow would cover 4,000 acre feet within 24 hours, he said.

Measurements taken today indicate inflows had dropped to 1,500 cfs, Ivie said.

Decell explained that inspection today showed "about what we expected this morning... significant stacking in lakes west of town at 7 a.m. — observation didn't indicate a change in Beals Creek."

Decell said that notices were given to all property owners and placed in doors from Lancaster to Jones Streets, the Cottonwood area and north of Third Street. He said that business owners were called.

"We don't anticipate levels will be as high last last September, but could get close to that," he said this morning.

Ivie attributed the increased inflows to heavy rains in Lamesa Friday night that didn't reach Natural Dam Lake until Saturday.

"Then we had about 2½ inches of rain in the vicinity of Natural Dam Lake Saturday night," Ivie said, explaining that the additional rain compounded the problem.

"CRMWD is doing everything it can do to inconvenience everyone as little as possible considering the gravity of the problem," he said.

The problems, Decell said, have been precipitated by the "horrendous amount of rainfall experienced north and northwest of the city — there's absolutely

State SSC site incentive ban doubtful

WASHINGTON (AP) — A ban on considering incentives for Illinois, Texas and other states in site selection for a $4.4 billion nuclear particle accelerator has little chance of House approval, lawmakers opposed to the proposal say.

Similar legislation sponsored by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., was approved in the Senate recently as an amendment to the appropriations bill for the Department of Energy.

It would prohibit the DOE from using cost-sharing inducements from states as a criterion in deciding where to house the Superconducting Supercollider, a giant atom smasher intended to help scientists discover more about the nature of matter.

"Obviously, Domenici is trying to say that states that have the resources to bring in the SSC ought not to be able to use those resources," said Rep. Terry Bruce, D-Ill. "I think that's a poor way to run the shop around here."

Bruce called the proposal grossly unfair to states which have spent lots of money on schools, hospitals, roads and facilities to make sites more desirable for the project.

"We've done that, and, as state taxpayers, we've paid heavily for it," he said. "So we ought to be able to put that in our proposal."

Bruce is a member of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee, which may take up its version of the DOE bill within the next few days.

"I don't see that there are enough votes in the House to do what Domenici has done," Bruce added. "But I could be wrong, and we're spending a lot of time making sure that doesn't happen."

Joining the fight against a ban on incentives is Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, who claimed allies from New York, California and other large states.

"We're putting a little coalition together, and I think we can beat it," said Barton.

Rep. Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., contended such an amendment threatens the entire future of the accelerator project.

The proposal also drew criticism from Energy Secretary John Herrington.

and other factors," she said.

She added that "to go out of Big Spring to provide the service when we have the personnel at home shows poor faith to our employees."

Assistant Fire Chief Burr Lea Settles said the department has one certified paramedic and would need six months to a year to train the others necessary. Lea Ambulance's contract for city and county emergency services expires July 15.

Paul Brown of the Firefighters Association said firefighters could provide the service cheaper than a private company, which must make a profit.

"People in Big Spring need the jobs and the money," he said, asking to be allowed to present a proposal. He said cities such as San Angelo and Hobbs provide the service in their communities.

Former Fire Chief Burr Crocker agreed the fire department should be allowed to provide the service.

Rutherford disagreed that the fire department could provide the service cheaper. He said the city would have a capital outlay for expenses and employee training. The quality would be equal to that of a private company, he said.

McEwen also disagreed that the service would be less expensive with the fire department. He noted the city has received a proposal from the department, which calls for more than $400,000 a year in payments — more than four times that of the lowest bidder.

He said fee collections are significantly lower when a service is owned by the local government, and added concern about the time factor.

Councilman Gary Don Carey said officials should negotiate with the two companies, but look into working with the fire department to provide backup service.

Knife-wielding robber forces employees into food vault

A man with a large hunting knife robbed the Coronado Plaza Dairy Queen, 2600 S. Gregg St., early Sunday morning, stealing $142 cash, police Lt. Jerry Edwards said.

The man — white, wearing a ski mask — forced the employees into the food vault before he took the money, damaging the cash register, Edwards said.

The Dairy Queen had just opened when the robbery occurred at 7:20 a.m., he said, adding that two or three employees, but no customers, were present.

The robber rode a red bicycle to the restaurant, and police believe he also left on the bike, because it was not found near the scene, he said.

Police have no suspects, nor any reason to link the incident with other crimes, he said.

No one was reported injured.

- Someone broke into the Westside Community Center, 1311 W. Fourth St., between 5 p.m. Friday and 5 p.m. Sunday, stole a basketball goal and damaged the wooden door frame.

- Two thieves stole an unknown number of nine-inch conveyors from Planter's Gin, 105 N.E. Second St., at 8:30 a.m. Sunday, and left in a pickup, according to police reports.
- Marilyn Turner, 2511 Allendale St., told police a person she did not see threw a rock at her car, shattering the passenger side window. The incident occurred at 10:35 p.m. Saturday as she drove in the 1900 block of Gregg Street. Damage was listed at $201.
- A purse and wallet containing $11 cash and credit cards, owned by teacher Pat Young, was stolen from the Moss Elementary School cafeteria office between 1:30 and 2:45 p.m. Saturday.
- Miles Elmer Moore Jr., 64, 1303 College Drive, was arrested at Third and Owens Streets early this morning on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

- Paul Bryan Walker, 18, 3443 Airport Road, was arrested at 200 W. 10th St. early Sunday morning on charges of DWI and a minor in possession of an alcoholic beverage. He was transferred to the county jail and released on $1,000 bond.
- Albert Preston Daylong, 31, 2406 S. Monticello St., was arrested Sunday afternoon on capias warrants for failure to drive in a single lane.
- Judy Purser Mauldin, 35, of Odessa was arrested in the 500 block of Eighth Street Sunday morning on a warrant for issuing a bad check, local traffic warrants, and Department of Public Safety warrants from Midland and Mineral Wells. She was transferred to the county jail and released on $200 bond.
- Gary Michael Boyd, 18, 1804 Wallace St., was arrested at 1900 Pennsylvania St. Saturday evening on capias warrants.

nothing we can do about that."

He explained that drainage from 1,039 square miles feed Beals Creek.

In addition to high water levels at Natural Dam Lake, the elevation in Lake Thomas is the highest it's been since May 1, 1968, and Lake Spence would be nearly full if water had not been released last fall, Ivie said.

Lake Thomas elevation is 2240.2 feet or 94,000 acre feet, he said, adding that the lake is at 50 percent capacity.

Lake Spence is at 71 percent capacity, Ivie said. "We're still getting a good inflow into Lake Spence ... we would be nearly full in Lake Spence if we had not released 80,000 acre feet last fall for quality control purposes," he said.

The Water District has been releasing water since May 29 from Lake Spence into the Colorado River at a rate of 1,500 acre feet per day, Ivie said.

Inflow at Lake Thomas, however, appears to be equaling the amount of water that is pumped out or that evaporates. The level, as of today, appears stable, with no gains or losses, Ivie said.

Program.

The Department points out that a Medicare or Medicaid claim — emergency or not — may be denied on grounds that it was an unreasonable expense.

The ambulance services themselves carry liability and malpractice insurance and officials say that the cost is sometimes passed on to the customer.

Charles Ginn of Lee Ambulance estimates that he pays between $1,700 and $2,000 a month for all insurance costs to his company.

When asked if the insurance costs were passed on to the customer, he replied that "With the cost of business, I try to set my rates accordingly."

Rural/Metro Corporation, the low bidder for ambulance service here, predicts that it will spend $26,000 the first year on insurance costs. Of that figure, $24,000 will be to insure the vehicles, and the balance will be malpractice and workman's compensation for the personnel, according to Clint Vardeman, emergency medical service director with Rural/Metro.

Passing insurance costs on to the customer is usually a part of business, Vardeman said.

low-lying areas, but no reports of serious damage.

A tornado warning was issued for the Port Arthur area Sunday morning, but authorities reported no damage.

A Port Arthur police dispatcher, who declined to give her name, said there were no reports of damage in the area.

A dispatcher for the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department said some tornados were sighted but "none have touched down."

"We had reports of sightings, but they were still in the clouds and none touched down. There hasn't been any type of problems because of it," said the dispatcher, who declined to give her name said.

In Brewster County, the weather service reported a possible tornado, but George Karvonen of the Brewster County Sheriff's Office said there were no reports of damage or injuries.

Thunderstorms dumped as much as 3 inches of rain on parts of Travis, Hays and Caldwell counties Sunday, closing several state and county roads, causing flash flooding and forcing the evacuation of campers from area parks.

Hayes County authorities said four teen-age canoeists were feared in danger when the Blanco River near Wimberley rose suddenly, but they managed to paddle to shore.

Some of the heaviest rains in Central Texas were reported in the Wimberley and Dripping Springs areas of Hays County, and in western Travis County, where 3 inches had fallen by late Sunday and more was coming down.

Authorities said San Marcos received about 3 inches of rain, including 1.28 inches recorded in an hour. Other rainfall totals included Luling, 2.7 inches; Lockhart, 1.32 inches; and Rockdale, 1.78 inches.

Other rainfall amounts around the state for the 24-hour period ending at 7 p.m. Sunday included 1.11 inches at Midland-Odessa, 1.69 inches at Alice and 1.35 inches at Hondo.

Water-filled streets, draws and low-water crossings trapped many motorists, washed several cars into waterways, swept away whole surfaces of some streets and caused steady increases in San Angelo's three reservoirs, with a total gain of 10,000 acre-feet expected over Friday's readings.

About 200 homes in San Antonio lost electricity Sunday night because of rain and high winds.

Texans along the coast are preparing for Arlene

By the Associated Press

Today marks the start of the six-month, hurricane season for the Atlantic Ocean, Caribbean Sea and Gulf of Mexico, with the name Arlene reserved for the first storm.

Texans who live along the coast know that the first storm of the season can be as dangerous as those later in the year.

Alicia assaulted the Houston-Galveston area in 1983, while Allen struck the lower coast in 1980. Both were August storms but were the first of their season.

Alicia left 21 dead and caused $1.2 billion damage. Allen claimed two lives and caused $155 million damage.

Hurricanes with "B" names have been equally deadly — including Beulah in September 1967. The storm left 13 dead and caused $150 million damage in the Brownsville area.

Texas has been hit by more than 100 hurricanes since 1766. The worst of those hit Galveston Island in September 1900, killing at least 6,000.

June hurricanes are unusual for Texas — but not unheard of. Last year's Hurricane Bonnie, a minimal storm with winds of 85 mph, crossed the upper Texas coast south on June 26, causing three deaths and $1.7 million in damage to the Beaumont area.

Deaths

Joe B. Nixon

Joe B. Nixon, 77, 4104 Bilger, died Sunday, May 31, 1987 at Scenic Mountain Medical Center after a sudden illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday, at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel, with Dr. Kenneth Patrick, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be at Trinity Memorial Park.

Abortion bill draws pledge

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he will sign into law a bill that would restrict abortions in Texas for the first time in 14 years.

"I will. You bet," Clements said when asked about the legislation Sunday.

Texas hasn't had an abortion restriction law on the books since 1973, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional the law which had prohibited abortions except when needed to save the life of the mother.

The bill now headed to Clements' desk would prohibit a person from performing an abortion on a woman pregnant with a viable fetus during the third trimester of pregnancy.

Exceptions would be allowed to prevent the death or serious impairment of the woman's physical or mental health, or in the case of a "severe and irreversible abnormality" of the fetus.

Under the measure, violations would be prosecuted in civil action before the Texas Board of Medical Examiners, which could revoke, cancel or suspend a physician's license for violating the law.

Bond lid subject of study

AUSTIN (AP) — A special committee would study the issue of whether a lid should be placed on bonds required for appealing civil cases under a resolution given final legislative approval Sunday.

The Senate OK'd the resolution that was an outgrowth of the $11 billion Texaco-Pennzoil legal battle.

The resolution, which passed the House on Saturday, was approved after Texaco abandoned a high-dollar lobbying effort on behalf of a bill that would have placed a $1 billion limit on appeal bonds.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, sponsor of both the unsuccessful bill and the successful resolution, said the study is needed because "the current (appeals bond) law is unclear and subject to potential constitutional challenge."

The current law, Parker said, "has led to a large solvent company, Texaco Inc., being forced into Chapter 11 (bankruptcy) filing in order to continue its appeal."

Parker's senatorial district includes a Texaco plant and 3,300 Texaco employees.

The study would be done by the Senate Jurisprudence and House Judiciary committees.

"It is unfortunate that the example of a company like Texaco being forced into bankruptcy was necessary to demonstrate the need for reform," Texaco said in a news release praising the resolution.

Victim recounts shooting

EL PASO (AP) — A teen-ager wounded during a sniper's hotel shooting spree Thursday said she heard a bullet hit the sand inches away, turned to see a man aiming at her and frantically scrambled to get under cover.

"He didn't say anything. He just shot. I told my friend to run and we both took off. He kept shooting at me after he hit me," Monica Medina, 16, said from her hospital bed this weekend, where she was treated for a bullet wound in her heel.

Miss Medina had just finished a poolside volleyball game and sat down in the sand — about 15 feet from the sniper's patio — to visit with a girlfriend when she heard the first shot ring out.

"We both looked up and saw him aiming at us," she said.

Legislative notes

State Rep. Renato Cuella, D-Westlaco, plays his harmonica during a break in the action during Saturday's session of the Texas House. Cuella brought out his harmonica for the first time at midnight Friday to play taps when hundreds of bills died due to lack of action.

No one else was wounded in the gunfire. Miss Medina said two of the 150 or so other people around the pool area managed to pull her to cover while more shots were fired.

The incident ended with the arrest of Hidalgo County Sheriff's deputy Keith Allen Faires, who was at the Marriott Hotel for a convention of homicide detectives.

Faires has been charged with attempted murder in the shooting, and has been suspended without pay from his criminal investigator position with the South Texas sheriff's department.

Four slain gangland-style

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — More than 150 shell casings were found near the bodies of four men machine-gunned to death were discovered following a gangland-style execution, authorities said.

The gunmen placed muzzles of automatic weapons in the mouths of their victims before pulling the triggers, as well as spraying bullets across the bodies before running them over with vehicles, authorities told the Laredo (Texas) Morning Times on Sunday.

The shell casings included several types of ammunition believed used by organized crime gangs in Mexico, including .22-caliber, 7.62 mm NATO ammunition and .32-caliber casings, judicial police said, noting that the bodies were strewn about an area of about two to three city blocks on a ranch about 11 miles west of this Mexican border town.

The severe maiming of the bodies indicated that the killers were not professionals, Ernesto Danache Cantu, state judicial police commandant, told the Times.

Parolee held in bus slaying

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Fort Worth man who had been on parole for about two weeks has been arrested in connection with last week's hijacking of a city bus and the stabbing death of a passenger, police say.

The 22-year-old was ordered held in the Tarrant County Jail in lieu of $750,000 bond following an appearance before Municipal Court Judge Molly Jones.

A passenger armed with a knife commandeered the bus late Wednesday, forcing the driver to drive around town for a time, and then ordering him to drive to Trinity Park, near downtown Fort Worth.

After arriving at the park, officers said, the man ordered the bus driver out of the bus and sexually assaulted Johnnie Gray, 34, the only remaining passenger on the bus. The woman later died of stab wounds.

Charges of capital murder and attempted capital murder were expected to be filed against the man, Brannan said.

Homicide Detective Carl Brannan said the man had lived with his mother since his parole on aggravated robbery conviction.

Officers arrested the man Sunday night after interviewing at least a dozen witnesses, including several who had been passengers on the bus before the hijacking, police said. Brannan said officers also received some tips from several other people.

A description of a car driven by the hijacker also led to the arrest, Brannan said.

"I cannot go into details of our investigation," Brannan said. "It was a complex, intensive and exhaustive investigation."

Officers said the man will participate in a lineup today in which David Jeanfreaux, 22, the bus driver, will be asked if he can identify the hijacker.

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the state.

Budget issue raises 'a lot of gall'

FlexiBill Clements is in a quandary. The Texas Legislature is making minuscule headway in its battle of the budget, and the state's little general doesn't know what to do. He has said he wouldn't be for raising taxes of any kind, then penned approval to continuation of a "temporary" sales tax increase, then reiterated that he was anti-tax, then said he would be in favor of an increase in sales tax if it included services, then said he was against any tax increase. Now the Legislature is more confused than normal and time is running out in its attempt at balancing an unbalanceable budget. Raise taxes. That was the battle cry when they went down to Austin, and that will be the end result. That doesn't take any creative juices, just a lot of gall. Marshall News Messenger

Says higher taxes are inevitable

The possibility of new state taxes is looking stronger by the day, as Gov. Bill Clements and legislative leaders continue their budget standoff. It's unfortunate, but almost certain...

Despite the big push for balancing the state budget, there is one stark reality — we'll all be paying more taxes. We might as well get ready for it. Bryan-College Station Eagle

Rights of children crux of matter

Two statements ... one in Texas, one in Washington, upheld the essential role of a state in regulating youth homes, even when the homes are run by churches. The U.S. Supreme Court upheld that doctrine when it ruled that Michigan could shut down church schools that, for religious reasons, refused to hire only state-licensed teachers. In Texas, the House of Representatives defeated a bill that would have created a special status for particular youth homes and in effect would undermine state licensing procedures. Opponents of the measure called it the "Rolloff bill" after the late Lester Rolloff, founder of several Corpus Christi area church-run homes that closed in a dispute over licensing. Certainly church groups have a rightful concern about the principle of religious liberty. The Supreme Court and Texas Legislature have an overriding principle in mind: the rights of the children. Waco Tribune Herald

Child support reform 'improving'

Any man who has fathered a child, whether in or out of wedlock, has a duty to do his best to provide for that child. Although most Americans would agree with that principle, far too little has been done to enforce it. Fortunately, the situation seems to be improving as state and local governments move to enforce child support more aggressively. The push for reform has a long way to go, but it already has started producing results. In 1983, absent parents paid a nationwide total of $2 billion in child support. The 1986 figure was $3.2 billion — a 60 percent increase in three years. Such improvements save tax dollars that otherwise would go to welfare. Far more important, they help change the distorted incentives of the welfare underclass — such as the belief that men can enjoy unlimited sexual indulgence but escape responsibility for the results. San Antonio Express-News

Lynaugh may be answer for TDC

The board of directors of the Texas Department of Corrections broke new ground recently when it selected an accountant with only three years experience in the prison system to be the TDC's fifth director in four years. But despite his relative lack of experience, many observers are praising Jim Lynaugh as the right man for a tough job. Given the TDC's sorry history in recent years and the daunting challenges facing it in the future, Texas might as well take a chance with a new breed of director. The fortunes of the TDC have virtually nowhere to go but up. Port Arthur News

Discrepancies are 'rationalizations'

One of the most wounding elements of the Iran-Contra controversy ... is the continuing discrepancy between the administration's articulated policies and its actions. Most recently, President Reagan was questioned about an unsuccessful "bribe and ransom plan" to free American hostages in Lebanon. He said he never thought of it as a ransom ...

This discrepancy closely parallels others. For instance, the president said repeatedly U.S. arms shipments to Iran were not in exchange for hostages held by Iranian-sponsored terrorists in Lebanon. Only when he accepted the Tower commission report did Reagan acknowledge that this was indeed the case. There is a word for this kind of discrepancy and the tortuous explanation that follows: rationalization. The president's rationalizations are particularly transparent and damage his credibility. Houston Chronicle

Arias plan strikes chord of hope

The fuss about the leadership disputes among the Contra groups often obscures the fact that a highly varied opposition continues to be surprisingly active inside Nicaragua. It was all the more remarkable when in early February, seven parties of the country's parliamentary and extra-parliamentary opposition handed the Sandinistas a joint "proposal for a national compromise on peace, democracy and Nicaragua's independent development."

The document bears considerable similarity to the Costa Rican plan ... due to be discussed at a regional meeting of presidents in Guatemala in mid-June. While the Arias plan, which is named after the Costa Rican president, has not received much publicity, it is a hopeful sign. Americans, and especially people in South Texas, have a vital stake in the eventual complexion of Nicaragua. (Harlingen) Valley Morning Star

Lewis Grizzard

Bow ties have him in a knot

By LEWIS GRIZZARD I have no idea who is going to win the Democratic nomination for president in 1988 at the convention in Atlanta, but I know for sure who isn't. Gary Hart, for obvious reasons, and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, for this reason: Senator Simon wears a bow tie, and I simply don't think America is ready for a presidential candidate, much less a president, who wears bow ties — especially in the 1980s. I think of bow ties and I think of Jimmy Olson, cub reporter for the Daily Planet in the old Superman TV series. And didn't Mr. Peepers wear bow ties? If not, he should have.

Bow ties have come back into fashion over the past several years and a number of my friends are wearing them, but, although they are good friends, I don't think any of them could win the nomination for president, either. Bow ties, for one thing, make men who wear them look like they have square heads. Next time you see Sen. Simon on television notice how square his head looks. Do you think the Russians could have respect for a man with a square head? Could Congress? You see a man wearing a bow tie whose head looks square, and you immediately think, "What sort of vacuum cleaners does this man sell?" Also, it's a real pain to tie a bow tie, and I assume Paul Simon's bow ties aren't the clip-on type. If they are then that's another reason he's not going anywhere in the presidential race. A man who wears a clip-on bow tie probably rolls his socks down to his ankles, too, like your grandfather did. A man that has to get up every morning of his life and wrestle with tying a bow tie probably is completely worn out by the time he is finished dressing and won't be worth a dime the rest of the day. I'm not certain you can completely trust a man who wears a bows tie either. What are his motives for doing such a thing? Is he trying to make a fashion statement? Or is he trying to make you think he's some sort of harmless dufus so that you'll think you're getting a swell deal on the used Plymouth he's selling you.

Neckwear says a lot about a man. You know not to get involved in anything with a man who wears even a single gold chain around his neck. This sort of man will try to talk you into going to work for him selling encyclopedias door to door. A man with more than one gold chain around his neck probably is named Vito, smokes methol cigarettes and is in the import business in Miami. Also, beware of men in turtle-neck sweaters (they could be terrorists, or, worse, dentists), Nehru jackets (unless they're riding elephants), or beads. (This ain't Club Med, Jack.) I hope Sen. Simon gets this message and either drops out of the race before he wastes a lot of time and money or gets himself a regular tie like the other candidates, who are a bunch of squareheads, too, but have learned to hide it.

Now that the trials are over, maybe Green Bay will cease to make national headlines. But it seems my hometown can't seem to get enough national media attention. Rumors flew when Diane Sawyer, a reporter for CBS Television's 60 Minutes visited the Bay city earlier this month. Sawyer told a New York columnist she was doing interviews for a story about Green Bay priests who have mistresses. "Gary Hart isn't the only guy with problems," Liz Smith of the New York Daily News wrote. "Some priests up in Green Bay, Wis. were discovered to have mistresses and CBS sent Diane Sawyer there."

That's one episode I definitely plan to watch. And I always thought I had grown up in small conservative Midwestern town.

Army runway sealer tests have several irregularities

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA WASHINGTON — When the Army tested asphalt sealers to determine which one gave airport runways the best protection from jet fuel spills, the testing methods raised almost as many questions as they answered. Jet fuel can melt asphalt like butter. A sealer that would be impervious to spilled fuel would save the Army millions of dollars a year in repair costs. But admitted irregularities in the field test conducted by the Army at the Davison Airfield refueling apron in Fort Belvoir, Va., made one manufacturer hopping mad. Carl Leverenz, of International Bitumen Consultants in Atlanta, challenged the test that flunked his sealer, Product 21. Five brands of asphalt sealer were applied in 1984 at different refueling points, and examined six times during the test period, which ended in May 1986. The Army stands by the results of its test. But a lengthy investigation by our associate Stewart Harris turned up these irregularities in the testing process:

Jack Anderson

- The test results were changed significantly between the draft and the final report. In the draft report, for example, one product was rated "excellent" in April 1985, but this description became only "fair" in the final report. Other products were upgraded.
- The sealer test was completed only at Davison Airfield. The Army customarily conducts tests simultaneously at several locations.
- Manufacturers were not invited, as they usually are, to be present at the periodic examinations of their products.
- William Taylor, who retired last year after 30 years as an Army highway engineer, told us the sealer test wasn't objective. He theorized that those in charge got defensive when Leverenz complained to his congressman about the test.
- "I think Leverenz is trying to force the issue and they just got their back up against the wall," Taylor said, adding: "I'm not saying Product 21 is the best material on the market, but it is one of the best."
- Product 21 is used at Luton airbase in Britain, and the airport manager there told us the sealer works "fine" three years after it was applied to the asphalt. The engineer who signed the Army's test report, Carl Williams of Fort Monroe, Va., agreed that the test differed from others conducted by the Army, and conceded that the procedures probably could have been more disciplined. But he said the test was conducted under real-life conditions; if a sealer must be applied under laboratory conditions, he said, it probably won't perform in the field. As for the changed test results, Williams explained that the five products were graded subjectively, and the grades might have been changed after he looked at photographs of the test patches as the test progressed. Product 21 failed because it cracked, exposing the asphalt to spilled jet fuel, according to the final report. Williams said the cracks formed because Product 21 and asphalt expand and contract at different speeds. On a visit to the airfield, Leverenz showed us the patch where he said his material had been applied. It was different from the spot shown in the Army test report. Leverenz signed an affidavit that the Army had confused his product with another.

A fan — though disenchanting

By KERRY HAGLUND Staff Writer I will live and die a Green Bay Packer football fan. Such a statement may be shocking, if not humorous to Texans — especially when one looks at the Packer's nearly non-existent win column. But Texans, I think, would accept such a comment from a Yankee — especially one who has lived nearly all her life in a Midwestern town. I'm a Green Bay, Wis. native, and the hometown folks stand behind their team — at least they did until the organization was rocked by sexual assault scandals. Now, some, like myself, will never idolize the Packers the way they once did. The scars left from the scandal run deep, and the negative media coverage about the hometown team has left me feeling disheartened. Last week Packer Mossy Cade was found guilty on two counts of sexual assault while his former teammate, James Lofton was acquitted in a separate sexual assault case. Texans may remember Cade, who was a former All-American defensive back at the University of Texas. He was arrested on the assault charge in November 1985, just two months after the Packers obtained him. My disenchantment with the club started long before the recently tried charges came to light, however. It began with 1984 reports that Packers Eddie Lee Ivery and James Lofton sexually assaulted an exotic dancer in the basement of a Milwaukee nightclub. Although neither was charged, the publicity was devastating. Then Cade was arrested a year later — and convicted last week — for assaulting a 44-year-old Houston woman in his De Pere, Wis. home. The woman, Cade's aunt by marriage, had been staying at Cade's home during a visit to see him play. And, in December 1986, Lofton was arrested on a charge of sexual assault at a nightclub I frequented. Despite Lofton's recent bad publicity, I was saddened when the Pack traded him. Although I had never met the man, my mother — a reporter — wrote a story once about the Loftons and the remarkable interior design of their Green Bay home. Mom described him as a polite, but aloof, man. Lofton and his wife Beverly were well-known in the community for their work with Special Olympics, United Way and the March of Dimes. Lofton even used to appear at my high school pep rallies to cheer my school's team. We were thrilled, of course, by his attention and caring attitude. The recent publicity made me remember a time when a girlfriend and I met former Packers Greg Koch and Paul Coffman at a local nightclub. We went out to eat with the two after the club closed, and talked about it for weeks — even though we agreed they were arrogant bastards. There is something about meeting a celebrity that makes one a bit crazed. Now, I wonder how I would react if approached by a Packer. Sport scandals haven't been limited to the Packers, of course. Recent arrests for a multi-million dollar steroid racket and Southern Methodist University's play for pay scandal are just two examples. Professional and college sports seem to have become a hotbed for illegal activity. I, for one, will be glad when the spotlight switches from the courtroom to the playing field. Now that the trials are over, maybe Green Bay will cease to make national headlines. But it seems my hometown can't seem to get enough national media attention. Rumors flew when Diane Sawyer, a reporter for CBS Television's 60 Minutes visited the Bay city earlier this month. Sawyer told a New York columnist she was doing interviews for a story about Green Bay priests who have mistresses. Drivers face changes

Around the rim

WASHINGTON — The government is taking a first step today to crack down on commercial bus and truck operators who hide poor driving records by holding two, three or in some cases a dozen or more driver's licenses.

The Transportation Department is publishing new regulations which for the first time make it illegal for truck and bus drivers to hold more than one commercial driver's license.

Penalties of as much as $5,000 can be assessed against both the driver and employer, and the driver could face as long as 90 days in jail sentence under some circumstances if found to be using more than one commercial license after July 1.

According to the government and the trucking industry, as many as one-third of the country's long-distance truck and bus drivers may be holding more than one commercial driver's license.

AIDS talks draw jeers

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush was jeered today as he repeated President Reagan's call for wider testing for AIDS, but researchers applauded Bush when he said testing must be accompanied by guarantees of confidentiality and fair treatment.

Those guarantees were not included in the president's speech at a fund-raising dinner Sunday on the eve of the opening of the Third International Conference on AIDS.

"This issue raises some difficult and troublesome questions for me," Bush said. "It puts in conflict the need for more information and knowledge to benefit the majority versus our constitutional right to privacy."

"As the president said last night, the federal government will soon require testing for prisoners, immigrants and aliens seeking permanent residence," Bush said amid boos and shouts of "No."

Bakkers now 'broke'

NEW YORK — Evangelist Jim Bakker says he's so broke he may have to borrow money from his daughter, and is calling for a ceasefire in the battle with the new leaders of the PTL ministry.

"I have about $50,000 cash to my name, and my daughter has $50,000 saved from her music work, which she'll probably loan me if I need it," Bakker said in an interview published in the June 8 edition of Time magazine.

Bakker estimated his 1986 salary at $1.1 million, while PTL officials say he received $1.6 million last year and his wife, Tammy Faye, received $300,000, not including perks.

Bakker also said he regretted making public comments about the controversy.

Not enough lifeguards

Lifeguards are in short supply this season at beaches, summer camps and swimming pools in the Northeast and Florida, and some officials are worried swimmers may be risking their lives when they go in the water.

Reasons cited for the shortage include low pay in an otherwise boom economy and a new awareness that the job is a serious responsibility that involves more than catching the rays.

At a recent meeting of parks and recreation directors from 11 Northeastern states, all the directors complained about lifeguard recruiting, said William J. Hawkins, chief of Rhode Island's Division of Parks and Recreation.

An unidentified volunteer firefighter hides behind a fire truck as flames consume one of the first homes to burn in the Pebble Beach forest fire.

Forest fire Hundreds flee as homes burn

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A wind-whipped fire jumped from roof to roof as it swept through exclusive Pebble Beach, destroying 36 expensive homes and burning 100 acres by early today, and forcing 200 people to flee.

The all-night fire was 80 percent contained this morning, and "we expect to have full containment later today," said Capt. Jackie Scoggin of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Prevention. She said the 20 percent of the fire yet to be contained was limited to brush.

Scoggin placed the value of the homes destroyed at $250,000 to $500,000. John Feehan, a mortgage broker who lives in the area, said the homes ranged from $400,000 to $600,000.

Three firefighters suffered minor injuries while battling the blaze, which closed Highway 68 between Highway 1 and Pacific Grove and spread heavy smoke and ash throughout the area.

In Southern California, meanwhile, firefighters used helicopters, air tankers and bulldozers to battle brush fires Sunday night, but no injuries were reported and no structures were damaged by those blazes.

At Pebble Beach, about 90 miles south of San Francisco, many of the evacuated people took refuge at a Red Cross emergency center in a college gymnasium, said Art McDole, Monterey County's emergency communications director.

Motels lodged others without charge, and some who fled stayed with friends and relatives.

"They've lost everything," said Robyn Noe, manager of the Park Crest Motel in Monterey, who allowed four elderly residents to stay free for the night. "Some got out with a few clothes, some got out with nothing."

PRIME MINISTER KARAMI ... dies in helicopter

Bomb kills prime minister

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Rashid Karami was assassinated today when a bomb exploded in an attaché case under his seat on a military helicopter.

Injured in the explosion was Interior Minister Abdulla Rassi and three of the other 12 aides and crewmen on the aircraft. Military sources initially said Rassi was critically wounded, but doctors said later he was treated for superficial cuts.

Sources at the army command said the blast was a "premeditated assassination by a time bomb." The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

A man identifying himself only as Capt. Hammoud claimed responsibility for Karami's assassination on behalf of the previously unknown Lebanese Secret Army. The caller, who spoke in Arabic, made the claim in a call to a Western news agency in Beirut. There was no way to authenticate the claim.

The 65-year-old Sunni Moslem had been Lebanon's longest-serving prime minister, holding office 10 times in 32 years. He was backed by Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon.

Karami was the most prominent Lebanese official assassinated since a 1982 bombing killed President-elect Bashir Gemayel, the brother of President Amin Gemayel.

Sanctions begin today for employers of aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every employer in America, beginning today, must check the legal status of all employees hired after Nov. 6, 1986, or face the threat of criminal penalties.

These sanctions, the second phase of landmark immigration reforms passed by Congress last fall, are harsh: as much as $10,000 in fines and six months in prison for each illegal alien hired.

Most American employers probably are aware that it now is unlawful for them to hire illegal immigrants, but it's unclear how well they understand the finer points of the new law.

Examples of confusion in the work place are numerous: a Utah company that required documentation from only Hispanic workers, a large East Coast poultry firm that sought documents from only Asian, Hispanic or Indian employees.

Even Sears, Roebuck and Co., with its legions of legal advisers, made a mistake: It wrongly fired three Mexican women because they did not have the proper papers although they were eligible for legalization and planned to apply. The retail giant backed down.

Civil rights groups complain that fear and confusion have prompted wholesale firings of workers who look or sound foreign, especially in the southern border states where most immigrants live.

The INS estimates 3 million illegal aliens work in the United States.

"The point is that it's not really employer malevolence that we're concerned with; it's employer confusion," said Eric Kamasaki, an analyst with the National Council of La Raza, said last week. "The result of employer confusion is to put employees in jeopardy."

"We already know that some of our worst fears are being realized," said Eric Serna, past chairman of the Mexican American Legal Defense Fund.

"It's going to be a burden," said Shelton Padgett, a San Antonio labor management lawyer.

Would-be mother knows biological clock is ticking

DEAR ABBY: I am 37. Mark (not his real name) is 42. He's divorced with two children. I am a successful career woman. I have never been married, having devoted my time and energy to my work. Mark is not the first man in my life, but he's the first man I've ever wanted to marry. We've been practically living together for three years and I want to get married now because my biological clock is running out and I want at least one child.

Mark is a wonderful man, we're compatible in every way, and I know he loves me. The problem? Mark doesn't want to get married again. He has two sons in college, and he doesn't want another family. He made that clear from the very start of our relationship, but I was sure I could change his mind.

What should I do? I can't turn my love off like a faucet, and I don't know another man who could compare to Mark. Yet I want to be a mother, and if I don't get married and get to work on it soon, it will be too late. Please help me.

DILEMMA IN DENVER
DEAR DILEMMA: Since Mark made it clear from the beginning of your relationship that he did not intend to marry again, and you are unable to change his mind, you may have to change yours. Either set the wheels in motion to become a single adoptive parent, or try to find a man who's marriageable.

In any case, to marry because you want to be a mother is a poor reason for marriage.

DEAR ABBY: Not long ago you stated that men wear beards for one of the following reasons: They dislike shaving, have a weak chin, a skin problem, or they wish to look more distinguished. You are mistaken, Abby.

I am a middle-aged clergyman who has worn a beard for many years. I never disliked shaving, do not have a weak chin or a skin problem, nor do I wish to look more distinguished. My wife and family like my beard — in fact, they have never seen me without it.

HAPPILY BEARDED IN SIDNEY, OHIO

DEAR BEARDED: You are off by more than a whisker! Never would I have made that statement concerning the reasons men wear beards. My own handsome husband of 17 years has been a member of the bearded brigade for two decades — and for none of the above reasons.

DEAR ABBY: You recently suggested that a snake would make an ideal pet because nobody would steal it.

Wrong! We had a real live rattlesnake stolen from us in 1971. It was not exactly a pet — it was one of several we kept as a roadside attraction. Someone cut a hole in the cage and took our snake. The deputy sheriff was able to track it down, and three juveniles were charged with theft. The snake was soon returned to us.

DORIS WHITHORN, LIVINGSTON, MONT.

DEAR DORIS: Fangs a lot. Now I've heard everything.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I bought a home together. We both work. There are two people in her life who dislike me intensely — her father and her best friend. I dislike them both because they have continually bad-mouthed me to my wife.

I feel that when a husband and wife own a home in partnership as we do, both parties should have approval concerning who should set foot on their property.

More explicitly, I feel that I have the right to bar a person from our property whether I am home or not. (I would honor that request without question if my wife asked me to.) My wife insists that it is her right to invite anyone she wants to our home as long as I am not there.

There can be no compromise here. Either one of us has the right to keep someone off our property, or we don't.

What is your opinion?
STANDING FIRM

DEAR STANDING: Loosen up. A marriage without compromise is tenuous at best. If your wife has agreed to entertain people you dislike only when you are not home, that seems reasonable enough to me. But for you to "bar them from the property" whether you're at home or not seems petty and unreasonable.

DEAR READERS: I need your cooperation for an important survey.

Question: Have you ever cheated on your mate? How long have you been together?

You need not sign your name, but please state your age and indicate whether you are male or female.

Please send your letter or postcard to: Abby's Survey, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped, 39-cent, self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Blooming bulb

John Sledge, 401 E. 17th St., found a flower bulb in the dumpster by his home last year. He decided to plant it and see what would happen, his wife, Estel Sledge said. The 83-year-old planted the bulb in a pot and put it out in the yard. It grew three feet tall and eight deep red flowers that are 7-inches wide bloomed. The couple isn't sure what kind of flower it is, but they've enjoyed watching it grow. Now the flower is ruined, because of "all the rain and wind," Estel said, adding that they're anxious to see what happens next year.

Names in the news

DONNA RICE

By the Associated Press
BURBANK, Calif. — NBC will rebroadcast on June 12 a "Miami Vice" episode in which Donna Rice, the Miami actress and model linked to former Sen. Gary Hart, has a bit part.

Ms. Rice appears in the teaser, the portion before the show's opening credits, and plays the wife of a police officer, said NBC spokesman Brian Robinette.

Ms. Rice "speaks a couple of lines and screams when she witnesses the slaying of her husband."

"Tune in early," Robinette said. Ms. Rice came to national attention earlier this month when The Miami Herald reported she spent part of a weekend in Washington with Hart while his wife was away. Hart subsequently withdrew from the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

NEW YORK — Actor and former bodybuilder Arnold Schwarzenegger says an agent once advised him to stick with weightlifting because he had an accent "too overdeveloped" and had a strange name that no one could pronounce.

The Austrian-born Schwarzenegger, who emigrated to the United States in 1968, said in an interview in Sunday's Parade magazine he was confident that "eventually some people would learn to spell my name and even pronounce it."

"And I told myself, if they do, they'll never forget it. ... Do you forget Gina Lollobrigida?" he asked. "And Garbo had an accent. It didn't stop her."

The beefy star of "Commando" and "The Terminator" said studios treated him as little more than a muscle man in his early acting career. He played a semi-clad caveman warrior in his early movies "Conan the Barbarian"

ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER

and "Conan the Destroyer."

LOS ANGELES — The estranged husband of "Dynasty" star Joan Collins lost a bid for $150,000 in advance of a divorce settlement.

Superior Court Judge Kenneth A. Black denied without comment Thursday the request from Peter Holm, a 39-year-old former Swedish rock star.

Holm had said he needed the money to tide him over until a July 20 hearing on his request for $80,000 a month in alimony.

"I expect that during the court proceedings, she should maintain me in the same lifestyle," said Holm. "She chose the divorce."

Miss Collins, 53, who plays the conniving Alexis Carrington Colby Dexter on the ABC series, did not attend the hearing.

The couple wed in November 1985, and Miss Collins filed for divorce in December 1986. It was her fourth marriage and the first for Holm.

LOS ANGELES — Bob Hope, who celebrated his 84th birthday Friday received greetings in the form of a limerick from Henry Kissinger, who called the comedian "as beloved as the pope" and "more active than Oliver North."

"Mr. Hope gets a lot of greetings on his birthday, but this one tickled him the most," said Hope publicist Ward Grant.

The telegram from the former secretary of state read: "On the day of his grand 84th."

"May all our good wishes pour forth.

"To a young man named Hope

"As beloved as the pope

"And more active than Oliver North."

The telegram ended with "Many happy returns from one of your greatest fans," said Grant.

Preteens using makeup to parent's dismay

DALLAS (AP) — Carla Gonzales is like many Dallas 11-year-olds. She giggles with her friends about the boys in her class, worries about how she will finish her math homework, and collects stuffed animals.

"I just like them, I guess," Carla says of the furry bears and monkeys that line her dresser.

And what of the aerosol can of hair spray that sits next to those animals? Or the compact of mauve and purple eye shadows that rests in the lap of one of the bears? Well, whether adults like it or not, that's typical, too.

"If you want to stand out, you have to wear something," Carla explains. "Everybody wears something."

To the delight of cosmetics companies and the dismay of many parents, younger and younger girls are buying and wearing beauty products. The average age now for starting to wear what the girls call "serious makeup" is about 8 or 9, but even 4-year-olds are getting in on the act with Care Bears and Cabbage Patch Kids lip gloss.

"By third or fourth grade, almost every girl is at least wearing eyeliner," says Carla, who is a fifth-grader at Maple Lawn Elementary School in Oak Lawn.

Marketing experts in the cosmetics industry estimate that girls Carla's age are among the highest users of fragrance in the country, and by their mid-teens they will be purchasing more blush, eyeliner and lipstick than the adults they are trying to emulate.

"There is a significant trend going on in the industry," says Val Formica, vice president for marketing for DuCair Bioessence.

About six years ago, Formica's company began making non-toxic, water-soluble cosmetics specifically for children and marketing them under such names as Care Bears, Barbie and Popples. (Yes, the same Care Bears, Barbies and Popples that are found in toy stores or on Saturday morning cartoons.)

While Formica won't reveal sales figures, he will say that they are on the rise.

"You have a lot of baby boomer families having children right now so there's a rising population of 3- to 10-year-olds," Formica says. "Because of the way their parents are bringing them up, these kids are more sophisticated about what they want, and mom and dad are letting them make more of their own purchase decisions."

But while such products appeal to younger girls, older preteens seem to prefer such inexpensive adult brands such as Maybelline, Cover Girl and Maxi by Max Factor, and by borrowing from mothers and older sisters, some are fast becoming loyal fans of more expensive brands such as Clinique.

"When my mom's running out, she gives me her leftovers, and whenever she gets a Clinique bonus she gives it to me," says Tate Henderson, 10, whose mother won't let her wear the makeup to school until next year.

"I used to use the Holly Hobby stuff when I was little, but I haven't had any in a long time," says Tate, a fifth-grader at Lakewood Elementary School. "I spilled the Holly Hobby bath oil on my sister's bed once and the stain is still there. Now I like Clinique the best."

The more expensive department-store cosmetic lines such as Clinique don't target preteen girls directly, but more and more, the lines found in drugstores and supermarkets do.

"We usually say our market is 15- to 25-year-olds, but our research does say that younger girls are purchasing our products as well," says Amy Manasevit, publicist for Max Factor. "Basically, if your prices are under $2 or $3, that's a market you're going to attract."

Whether or not preteens are stated as the target audience, it would be hard to imagine some products being used by anyone over the age of 15. Maxi's Swirl Stick, for example, is a marbled lip gloss that comes in colors such as brown and gray and is flavored and scented like chocolate or licorice.

"That sort of thing — flavors especially — seems to go over well with younger girls."

Swirl Sticks and other lip glosses, are, in fact, often cited as favorites among Dallas preteens. "I like the ones that are just clear, and when you put them on, your lips get shiny," says Nicole McIntosh, 12, a sixth-grader at Lakewood. "Nobody can really tell you have it on."

"The first one I had, I used to eat and my mother said I couldn't have another," says Lilly Alvidrez, 12, a sixth-grader at Lakewood. "Now she only lets me wear makeup on special occasions."

However, if recent sales research is any indication, parents tend to be more lenient about fragrance. According to Ms. Manasevit, cosmetic industry research shows that among girls 12 to 18 years old, 99 percent wear perfume, 80 percent started wearing it before they were 14, and 60 percent wore it before they were 13.

As in the case of makeup, 10-, 11- and 12-year-olds seem to prefer "adult" scents such as Le Jardin and Charlie, over the strawberry- and green apple-scented colognes directed at children.

Last year, Max Factor went directly after the children's market with a line of Michael Jackson signature fragrances and accessories called Magic Beat. Unlike most other children's fragrances, Magic Beat has the scent of an adult-type cologne. Unfortunately for Max Factor, however, the new Jackson album and video that were to be released when the fragrance made its debut is still nowhere to be seen. As a result, Ms. Manasevit admits, the line "has not been very successful."

Overall, however, the industry is thriving. "We have been in the kids' cosmetics business for probably 15 years and I don't think we've seen business so strong," says David Mamberg, vice president for marketing for Cosrich, Inc., the maker of the Cabbage Patch Kids and Jem cosmetics lines.

"Little girls do like to use makeup," Mamberg says, "and when they buy products like this, at least their mothers know that they're water soluble so they can be washed off children's hands, and God forbid, the rug, and that they're non-toxic so if children decide to drink them, it won't cause any serious harm."

Hair-care products are other big sellers in the preteen market, probably in part because parents object less to mousses and shampoos than they do to other cosmetic items.

"My mom thinks that if it's for your hair, it's not really makeup so it's OK," says Nicole, who uses mousse and hair spray to keep her bangs in place and to hold the rest of her brown hair behind a bow on each side of her head.

Temporary hair-coloring products also are quite popular among preteens because they allow them to express their individuality without incurring the wrath of their parents or the ridicule of their friends.

Many of the products come in such untraditional hair colors as purple and green. Some resemble bright-colored crayons, allowing girls to streak or highlight their hair.

"I like the gold and copper colors," says Marcia "Pebbles" Perez, 11, a brunette fifth-grader at Maple Lawn. "It makes my hair look different and bright."

Although many Dallas parents apparently do try to set limits on their daughters' cosmetic adventures, it seems to be a losing battle.

Oilers win Stanley Cup again

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — It took some embarrassing moments and some soul-searching, but the Edmonton Oilers finally learned that an NHL game lasts 60 minutes.

And because they played hard for all 60 minutes Sunday night, they were able to keep the Philadelphia Flyers at bay in the third period and taste champagne from the Stanley Cup for the third time in four years.

"We read the newspapers and we watched the TV and there was criticism and rightfully so," said Randy Gregg, part of the Edmonton defense that held Philadelphia to two shots in the final 20 minutes as the Oilers posted a 3-1 victory in the seventh and deciding game of the championship round.

In their three losses in the finals, the Oilers had blown a 3-0 lead in Game 3, 2-0 and 3-1 advantages in Game 5 and a 2-0 edge in Game 6.

Indeed, when the Flyers stayed within 2-1 entering the final period, they thought they had the Oilers right where they wanted them.

This time, though, Edmonton's defense stifled any Philadelphia advances. Meanwhile, the Oilers poured 12 third-period shots on Flyers goaltender Ron Hextall — and hit the post four more times in the final 20 minutes.

Hextall made 40 saves in the game and won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the outstanding playoff performer. He became only the fourth player from a losing team and the third rookie so honored.

Oilers goalie Grant Fuhr faced 20 shots and wasn't tested as often throughout the series.

For the first time in the series, the Flyers scored first. Murray Craven beat Fuhr just 1:41 into the game, as Oilers Mark Messier and Paul Coffey were both serving penalties.

Messier quickly made amends for his penalty, scoring at the end of a beautiful feed from Kent Nilsson and beating Hextall at 7:45. Nilsson had taken a brilliant pass from Glenn Anderson, who beat Lindsay Carson at center ice to set up the play.

Edmonton took the lead for good when Esa Tikkanen's check of Doug Crossman in the corner enabled Wayne Gretzky to get the puck over to Kurri, who snapped a low shot past Hextall from the faceoff circle.

Anderson clinched the cup with 2:24 left in the contest when his 30-foot slapshot hit the inside of Hextall's left pad and went in.

Not only did the Oilers have to work harder than ever before, but they felt like they had been part of history. Players on both teams called the series — the first final round to go seven games since Montreal defeated Chicago in 1971 — one of the greatest of all time.

"It's the best thing that has ever happened to me," Kurri said.

Series featured two great goalies

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Having rewritten the NHL's record books for offensive achievements, Edmonton Oilers center Wayne Gretzky knows a great goaltender from a great pretender.

And it is the opinion of The Great One that Edmonton's Grant Fuhr and Philadelphia's Ron Hextall — the opposing netminders in the Stanley Cup finals — are two of the greatest ever.

"Hextall is the greatest goalie I've ever played against," Gretzky said Sunday, after the Oilers' 3-1 victory in the seventh game gave them the Stanley Cup. "But I've never played against Grant Fuhr. (Coming into the game,) we just said Grant is going to outplay him for us."

With Edmonton dominating offensively, Fuhr made only 19 saves to Hextall's 40. But 11 of Fuhr's came in the first period, when Philadelphia had taken a 1-0 lead and threatened to widen the margin.

"I think that Grant may have made a lot of key saves in the first period that people have forgotten about," Edmonton Coach Glen Sather said.

"You have to give credit to the forwards for coming back. And the defense," Oilers defenseman Randy Gregg said. "And, of course, Grant. How can you say enough about him?"

It's tough to say enough about Hextall, too. The 23-year-old became only the fourth player from the losing team, and only the third rookie, to win the Conn Smythe Trophy as the outstanding playoff performer.

"Ronnie played great, there's no doubt about it," Fuhr said. "He deserved the Conn Smythe. If it hadn't been for Ronnie, we could have been winning 7-1 or 8-1."

Hextall, who allowed the NHL's highest-scoring team only 22 goals in the series, said he was exhausted after playing in his 93rd game this season — including all 26 playoff contests.

"I'm tired," he said. "The fact that we lost me a lot more tired. It takes a lot out of you. If we won, I wouldn't be tired."

Hextall, who tied a league record with 15 postseason victories, called it "a great honor to win the Conn Smythe Trophy," but said he "would have gladly traded it for the Stanley Cup."

As reporters interviewed Hextall in the somber Philadelphia dressing room, he stared blankly. Between interviews, he sighed and let his head fall back against the wall. Yet, like the rest of the Flyers, who had battled back from a 3-1 deficit in games to force Game 7, Hextall allowed himself to think about the future.

"We showed a lot of guts," he said. "It's pretty tough to explain how heartbreaking it is, how disappointing it is to come so far and not win the Stanley Cup. But we gained a lot of experience for next year and future years. We'll be back."

Philadelphia Flyers goaltender Ron Hextall accepts the Conn Smythe trophy for the most valuable player of the Stanley Cup series.

Final round surge helps Pooley win

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — It had been seven long years since Don Pooley had won a professional golf tournament.

He had made a comfortable living and become a respected member of the PGA Tour, but when they finished every Sunday his name was never at the top of the list.

"It was frustrating at times," Pooley said. "Any time that you go that long without winning, you have thoughts. There were a lot of tournaments that I should have won and didn't. You just start wondering if it's ever going to happen."

Then came Sunday, the culmination of a month of Sundays for Don Pooley, and the final round of the Memorial Tournament at the Muirfield Village Golf Club.

Pooley had a final-round 2-under-par 70 for a 72-hole total of 16-under-par 272 to come back from a four-stroke disadvantage at the start of the day.

Pooley caught third-round leader Scott Hoch on the front side, hung at or near the lead through the middle of his round, and then birdied the last two holes to win by three shots over Curt Byrum.

The victory was worth $140,000 to Pooley, who was winless since the 1980 B.C. Open. He did it with rounds of 70, 67, 65 and 70 over the 7,104-yard, par-72 Jack Nicklaus-designed layout.

He took the lead for good when Byrum, the first-round leader with a record-tying 64, bogeyed the 15th hole. Then Pooley put the championship out of reach by hitting a 15-foot putt from the back fringe at 17 for a two-shot lead. An 8-foot birdie putt on the closing hole was icing on the cake for the 35-year-old Arizonian.

Byrum finished at 13-under 275 and earned $84,000, double his previous best paycheck on the tour.

What was a dream for Pooley became a continuing nightmare for Hoch.

Hoch piled up the gaudiest numbers ever at a Memorial through three rounds. After an opening 67, he also shot a 64 for a record 36-hole total of 13-under 131. A third-round 67 left him with a 54-hole record of 18-under 198 and a four-shot bulge over Pooley.

After going a tournament-record 55 holes without a bogey, Hoch made up for lost time.

Four holes into the final round, Hoch and Pooley were even. Hoch eventually struggled home with a 6-over 78 to tie with Chip Beck and Denis Watson for third place at 12-under 276.

Tied for fourth, at 11-under 277, were David Frost, Larry Nelson and Sandy Lyle.

Don Pooley reacts to his birdie putt on the 18th green to give him a victory Sunday in the Memorial tournament in Dublin, Ohio with a 16-under-par total.

Wilander survives rocky start against Frenchman

PARIS (AP) — Mats Wilander of Sweden steadied after a rocky start and defeated Tarkik Benhabiles of France 5-7, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 today to move into the quarterfinals of the French Open tennis championships.

The Grand Slam tournament started its second week in warm, sunny weather, with Steffi Graf playing 15-year-old Arantxa Sanchez and Gabriela Sabatini facing Manuella Maleeva in the first quarterfinals on the women's side.

The schedule also included the conclusion of a match suspended Sunday by darkness, with defending champion Ivan Lendl against Joakim Nystrom of Sweden.

Nystrom won the first set 6-2, with Lendl taking the second 6-1 and serving for the third at 5-3.

The suspension of the Lendl-Nystrom match ended a long day in which defending women's champion Chris Evert and top-seeded Martina Navratilova easily advanced to the women's quarterfinals and two more seeded players were upset.

Evert, seeded third and bidding for a third consecutive French Open championship and eighth overall, beat 12th-seeded Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-3, 6-1.

Like Evert, Navratilova put together a second consecutive overpowering performance, ousting West Germany's 15th-seeded Sylvia Hanika 6-0, 6-2.

Evert next plays Raffaella Reggi of Italy, the 14th seed, who beat fifth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

Navratilova's quarterfinal foe will be another West German, eighth-seeded Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, who eliminated unseeded Nathalie Tauziat of France, 6-1, 3-6, 6-0.

In men's matches Sunday, Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia ousted 10th-seeded Martin Jaitte of Argentina, 7-6, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3.

In the quarterfinals, Novacek runs into an old friend, Czechoslovak Miloslav Mecir, the fifth seed and the winner of every set he has played in the tournament.

The winner of the Lendl-Nystrom match faces 10th seeded-Andres Gomez of Ecuador, who ended a family dream double by coming back from two sets down and match point to beat Emilio Sanchez, Arantxa's brother, 5-7, 1-6, 7-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Nystrom is unseeded in the tournament but only because players are not graded by court surface. On clay, he is among the best in the world, as he showed in beating Lendl in Rome and underscoring in the first set Sunday.

Should they both win their quarterfinal matches, Evert and Navratilova will meet in the semifinals for the 72nd time in their careers. Navratilova leads the series 37-34.

Tauziat had beaten 10th-seeded American Kathy Rinaldi in the fourth round. Her loss to Kohde-Kilsch eliminated the last French hope for the women's title.

Novacek dropped as many sets against Jaitte as he had in his three previous matches combined. In Mecir, he faces a four-tournament winner this year and an old companion. Mecir said they have known each other since their early teens.

Gomez, who took five sets to beat American Jay Berger in Round 3, faced match point in the third set, but Sanchez hit a wild service return and the Ecuadoran capitalized by winning the tiebreaker and the next two sets.

Had Sanchez won, he and his sister would have become the first brother-sister singles quarterfinalists at the French Open since Czechoslovakia's Jan Kodeš and Vlasta Vopickova in 1970.

Tyson takes care of Thomas in sixth

Then Thomas got the message in the form of a barrage of power punches in the sixth round of his bid to wrest the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association heavyweight titles from Tyson Saturday night.

"I knew from watching his previous fights, that he tended to get tired around the seventh round," the 20-year-old Tyson said. "I had seen him gasping for air."

Tyson sensed after five rounds that the 29-year-old Thomas was fading, and while he waited for the sixth round to begin, he told trainer Kevin Rooney, "One more round. One more round."

After five rounds, two judges each had Tyson ahead 4-1 in rounds, while the third had him leading 5-0.

Tyson had to wait an extra 1:38 to get at Thomas in the sixth round because the attached thumb on the former WBC champion's left glove came loose and the glove had to be replaced.

Midway through the sixth round of the scheduled 12-round fight, Tyson hurt Thomas with a right uppercut to the jaw. He then smashed a right to the body, then lifted Thomas off the floor with a left hook to the head.

Thomas reeled. Tyson pounced to the attack with a fusillade of punches to the head that was climaxed by a left hook that dropped Thomas on his back.

Just before referee Carlos Padilla reached the count of 10, he noticed Thomas' trainer, Angelo Dundee, in the ring and he stopped the fight with one minute left in the round.

Porkers stay alive on ninth inning base hit

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Georgia may have become the first team since Seton Hall in 1974 to be eliminated from the College World Series in a single day, according to NCAA officials.

While records are not kept on such a statistic, CWS officials said it was the first time in the memory of the national baseball tournament veterans that such an elimination has occurred since the Seton Hall team.

The eight-ranked Bulldogs lost a rain-delayed game 3-2 to second-ranked Stanford Sunday afternoon, then came back to lose a 5-4 contest with fourth-ranked Arkansas in Sunday night's double-header nightcap.

Arizona State, ranked sixth, was eliminated 3-0 by No. 5 Florida State in Sunday's other game. It also marked the first time in 15 trips to the CWS that Arizona State had been eliminated in two games. The Sun Devils lost to Oklahoma State 8-3 Friday night.

Georgia had Arkansas down 3-1 early in the Sunday nightcap before Randy Bobb blasted a three-run homer in the sixth and Jim Kremers' RBI bloop single with one out in the bottom of the ninth kept the 51-15-1 Razorbacks in the double-elimination tournament.

Bobb, who injured a wrist in the Southwest Conference tournament, played Sunday night in his first game since cracking a bone in his wrist in mid-May. After Bobb's homer, Georgia brought in relief ace Kris Carpenter, who worked his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the eighth before Rod Moore reached first on a bunt single, went to third on Kelly Zane's bloop single and scored on Kremers' bloop single in the ninth.

Carpenter fell to 9-4 with the loss, while Kevin Helton, 2-1, picked up the win in relief for Arkansas. The Razorbacks advance to Wednesday's elimination game against the loser of Monday's Oklahoma State-Louisiana State game. OSU is third-ranked and LSU ranked seventh.

Florida State, which blanked Arizona State 3-0 on Chris Pollack's six-hitter, takes its 55-17 record into the other Wednesday elimination game against the loser of Tuesday's Texas-Stanford contest.

Pollack's pitching and Ed Fulton's two-run homer sent Arizona State home with a 40-27 record.

Pollack, 10-4, battled through a rough start as the Seminoles committed four errors in the first five innings. Double plays helped Florida State out of trouble in the first and fifth innings, and Arizona State stranded two base runners in the second and third innings.

Martin joked that his infield spread its errors around with each of four players picking up one.

"I think the defense took a nap today," Martin said.

But he noted a running catch by center fielder Ronald Lewis to end the seventh inning provided a big lift for his team.

"The ball was hit in the gap. I was on it all the way," said Lewis, who mishandled a ball that cost Florida State the CWS loss against Louisiana State in Friday's first round.

"I didn't like the heat Lewis got the first game," Fulton said. "Lewis' catch this game really picked up the team. Remember his catches during the year got us here to Omaha."

Florida State broke up Mike Schwabe's shutout attempt for Arizona State when Barry Blackwell was safe on an error in the seventh, went to third on a single by Marc Giordano and scored on Don Erickson's bunt single.

Fulton added two insurance Schws with his 18th home run of the season in the eighth.

Arkansas' Jim Kremers is hugged by teammate Randy Bobb after Kremers knocked in the winning run as the Razorbacks eliminated Georgia from the College World Series.

Brewers win second straight

By The Associated Press

The two sides of Juan Nieves are frustrating to Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn. When he's good, Nieves is very, very good. Then there's the other side.

On Sunday, Nieves was good. "He's young, and if you think about what he's going to do next, you'll go nuts," Trebelhorn said of Nieves. "Every time you think he's got it going, like three good starts in a row, you think he's OK, and then, oops."

There was no "oops" Sunday as Nieves held Cleveland to a run on six hits in 8 1-3 innings in Milwaukee's 7-1 victory over the Indians.

The 22-year-old Nieves came

within two outs of recording his first complete game since he tossed a no-hitter against the Baltimore Orioles on April 15. But he walked two straight batters in the ninth and Chris Bosio came on to retire the final two batters.

He increased his record to 4-2 as he struck out five and walked five. Milwaukee also found the hitting to back the pitching. Dale Sveum and Robin Yount hit solo home runs in the fifth inning and Greg Brock added a three-run homer in the ninth.

The victory was the Brewers' second straight, but only their fourth in 22 games. Cleveland has lost six of seven.

Yankees 9, Athletics 5

Henry Cotto, subbing for Rickey Henderson, led off the bottom of the first inning with a home run, added a double and drove in three runs in New York's victory over Oakland.

Willie Randolph also homered, doubled and had three RBI before a crowd of 55,034.

Blue Jays 7, Angels 2

George Bell tripled and homered, driving in three runs and scoring twice to back the four-hit pitching of John Cerutti, 2-2, as Toronto handed California its ninth straight loss.

Bell hit a two-run homer in the fifth, his 16th of the season, off Angels left-hander John Candelaria, 4-2. It was his 11th homer in May, setting a club record for home runs in a month.

Mariners 8, Orioles 5

John Moses had four hits and Jim Presley homered to lead Seattle over Baltimore. Rookie Lee Guetterman, making his first start of the season, ran his record to 2-0 since being called up from Calgary on May 21. Guetterman pitched 7 1-3 innings, giving up nine hits and four runs.

Moses, who has hit in five straight games and has 10 hits in his last 22 at-bats, had a triple and a double in his first two appearances, then added two singles. He also stole two bases.

Larry Sheets homered for Baltimore.

Rangers 3, Royals 2

Scott Fletcher doubled home Steve Buechele, who had doubled, with two out in the 10th inning as Texas edged Kansas City. Fletcher doubled off relief ace Dan Quisenberry, making a winner of Rangers reliever Dale Mohorcic, 4-2.

Pete Incaviglia tripled home the Rangers' first two runs in the third, but was injured and sent to the hospital for X-rays when he was thrown out at the plate attempting to stretch the hit into an inside-the-park home run. A team spokesman said there was no break, but that two fingers on Incaviglia's left hand were put in a splint.

Red Sox 10, White Sox 9

A two-run, pinch-hit double by Mike Greenwell in the ninth inning gave Boston a come-from-behind victory over the Chicago White Sox. The winning rally started with two out in the ninth.

Ivan Calderon came off the disabled list and had four hits, including two three-run homers, for Chicago. Bill Buckner had a two-run homer for Boston.

Twins 9, Tigers 5

Two home runs by Tim Lardner in the second game sparked Minnesota over Detroit and gave the Twins a sweep. The Twins won the first game by taking advantage of an eighth-inning error by Detroit's Tom Brookens.

It was the first two-homer game of Lardner's career.

Tom Brunansky homered for the Twins, who finished with 20 hits in the nightcap. Chet Lemon had a two-run homer for Detroit.

Phils finally get out of cellar

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Phillies, expected to challenge for the National League East title, are finally out of the cellar.

Rick Schu, filling in for Mike Schmidt, who is on the disabled list with a pulled muscle in his rib cage, had a homer and sacrifice fly to back up the pitching of Shane Rawley and Steve Bedrosian as the Phillies beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1 Sunday to get out of last place for the first time this season.

Rawley went seven innings, allowing five hits, striking out five and walking one. Then he gave way to Bedrosian, who pitched the final two innings and now has 10 saves and a victory in his last 11 appearances.

Schu's homer off Rick Honeycutt, 2-4, tied it in the third; Milt Thompson drove in the go-ahead run on a force play in the fourth, and Schu added a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Astros 8, Cardinals 7

Houston finally beat St. Louis for the first time in six games this year, jumping off to a 7-2 lead, then hanging on as Dave Smith came on to get the last four outs on strikeouts. That evened the record of last year's NL West champions at 24-24.

Including 10 innings in spring training, Smith has 28 straight scoreless innings and has allowed only nine hits and four walks to go with 31 strikeouts. He now has eight saves for the season.

"We haven't been able to use him as much as we'd like because we haven't had very many leads in the ninth inning," Manager Hal Lanier said.

Billy Hatcher and Phil Garner each had two RBI in Houston's 15th hit attack.

Jim Deshaies, 4-2, got the victory with 5 1-3 strong innings, but Ozzie Smith had a career-high four RBI and four other Astros pitchers failed before Smith came on.

Braves 2, Cubs 1

Gerald Perry dumped a single to short center following Ken Oberkell's two-out double to give Atlanta the victory in the fourth extra-inning game the teams played in their last six outings.

Reds 5, Pirates 2

Dave Parker's homer broke a 2-2 tie in a three-run sixth as the Reds completed a three-game sweep. That atoned for a sweep by the Pirates in Cincinnati last weekend and ran Pittsburgh's losing streak to six straight.

Ted Power, 4-2, was the winner, allowing seven hits over eight innings, striking out four and walking one. John Franco pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

Parker, who played 10 years in Pittsburgh before signing with the Reds as a free agent in 1984, led off the sixth by hitting a pitch from Doug Drabek, 1-3, deep into the right field stands. Then he took a slow trot around the bases and tipped his cap to the fans who had been on him all weekend.

"I wanted to savor it," Parker said. "The fans got their licks for a couple of days and that was mine. I wasn't trying to show up the Pirates or the pitcher. I just wanted to enjoy my moment in the sunlight so to speak."

Padres 1, Mets 0

Ed Whitson allowed four hits over 7 2-3 innings, then gave way to Goose Gossage, who got the final four outs as the Padres ended a seven-game losing streak and broke the Mets' five-game winning string. Whitson, 5-6, now has almost half of San Diego's 12 victories this year.

Rookie John Mitchell allowed just six hits and the only run, which came on Garry Templeton's two-out fifth-inning single that scored John Kruk. The only Met to reach third was Lee Mazzilli, who tripled with two out in the first but was left stranded when Kevin McReynolds grounded to short.

"New York is in the past," said Whitson, who had his problems pitching in New York with the Yankees. "I have to get on with my life and career. To beat them is like to beat anyone else."

Giants 8, Expos 0

Kelly Downs threw a five-hitter and was supported by 17 hits, including home runs by Robby Thompson and Jeffery Leonard as the Giants snapped an eight-game home losing streak and five-game losing streak overall.

One Andretti crashes; the other wins

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Disappointment continued to overtake Mario Andretti and Roberto Guerrero, who for the second straight week were steered clear of victory by late-race circumstances beyond their control.

Andretti's car lost its rear wing with 50 laps left and crashed into a concrete wall. Guerrero blew an engine on lap 178, creating an opening for Michael Andretti, Mario's son, to win Sunday's Miller American 200.

"It was one of the toughest races of my career," the younger Andretti said after his fourth career victory and second straight at Milwaukee's one-mile oval.

"The competition was great with Bobby (Rahal), Roberto and Dad, and then I saw Dad on the side of the road," he said.

"When I went by the accident, he looked OK, but when I went back around, it was taking a long time to get him out of the car and I got worried. There was not a whole lot I could do. Seeing him being put on the stretcher was one of the worst moments of my career."

"That's when I said, 'This one is for him.'"

Mario Andretti was checked at a Milwaukee hospital Sunday. X-rays revealed what a doctor called a "non-displaced fracture of the tip of the spinous process" or a small crack in one of his cervical vertebrae. In common terms, Andretti has a sore neck.

Doctors said he should be ready to drive in two weeks at the next event on the CART series in Portland, and might be ready for an IROC race at the end of this week in Ohio. The prescribed treatment was rest and heat.

"It's the hardest hit I've ever taken," the elder Andretti, 47, said. "I'm sore."

The car spun on the main straightaway of the Wisconsin State Fair Park Speedway oval and slammed hard, rear-end first, into the concrete wall, skidded back across the track and backed into the inside wall.

Just a week earlier in the Indianapolis 500, the elder Andretti led 170 of the first 177 laps before a mechanical problem knocked him out of action. Guerrero wound up second to Al Unser at Indy, but only after a fault-ty clutch led to his stalling on a late pit stop, costing him a shot at the victory.

Michael Andretti asks a crew member about the condition of his father, Mario, after Michael won the Miller American 200.

Rookie gets second NASCAR victory

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Davey Allison may be a rookie, but he's making his mark on the NASCAR circuit this year.

Allison registered his second victory of the season Sunday, winning the Budweiser 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway.

The victory also marked Allison's second in the Winston Cup, but the 26-year-old from Hueytown, Ala. said his first victory at Talladega in the Winston 500 will be the most special.

Allison, who started in the second position, had a 6.87 second victory on the "Monster Mile" oval over second-place Bill Elliott, who started on the pole.

Before a record crowd of 56,000, Allison, who had an average speed of 112.952 mph, and Elliott were the only drivers on the lead lap at the end.

Terry Labonte was one lap down in third, and Dale Earnhardt and Benny Parsons, both two laps down, came in fourth and fifth, respectively.

Allison and his father, Bobby, dominated the field in first and second until Bobby Allison overheated and called it quits after 362 laps.

"I was really happy with the car today, but I think a piece of paper or something got on the grill and before I could get (the car) in, it overheated and cracked the block. I feel fine, just disappointed," Bobby Allison said. "I hated seeing him have problems ... I was hoping he'd come in second," the younger Allison said of his father.

With temperatures in the 90s and high humidity, the heat was expected to be a factor in the race, but Allison said it didn't bother him.

"I wore a cool suit and it worked all day long. We never had to change the ice in it," he said, adding the heat also wasn't a problem for his tires.

Other drivers had plenty of problems with tires. Morgan Shepherd blew his right front tire on the 135th lap, and set off the worst accident of the race, bringing out the fifth of nine cautions during the race.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JUNE 2, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Think in terms of what your most comprehensive long-range plans are and then you will be able to see the best means by which you can implement these desires.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You may find it difficult to gain your wishes today, but lagging energies are revived later.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Although the situation is rather tense at home, it soon becomes more pleasant. Much happiness is possible.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be rather cautious in your communications during the daytime, but the evening is just fine for such.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Monetary affairs may seem difficult to handle, but by careful thought you can solve them nicely.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You think you cannot gain a cherished wish, but trust your magnetic personality and all should go well.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get rid of annoying situations during the day and then have a wonderful time with the one you love.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study whatever needs revision so that you gain your personal aims more easily. Plan to see your good friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan how to get support for a fine enterprise today. Improve your surroundings so you can operate efficiently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) It may seem like things aren't working, but stick with them and soon all goes smoothly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study the promises you have recently made and keep them. If you are more affectionate, others will respond.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be with persons who are conservative and gain their backing for worthwhile affairs.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may feel dissatisfied with your environment, but you can easily bring harmony there.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY — he, or she, will be able to hold down an executive position and be able to direct others upon reaching maturity. This one will need praise and encouragement in order to achieve the success desired. A fine education is the necessary backbone here.

Latin immigrants melt into American culture

EDITOR'S NOTE — Mexican immigrants are influencing the clothes Texans wear, the food they eat, the buildings they live in and other aspects of their cultural lives. In the last installment of a six-part series, The Associated Press examines the price paid for this assimilation by the Hispanic in Texas.

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — The children and grandchildren of Mexican immigrants exert a pervasive cultural influence on American life, particularly in Texas, where Mexican tastes are evident in areas ranging from food to architecture to music.

But while Mexican-Americans are adapting to American language and customs, they remain on the lower rung of the economic ladder, compared to other immigrant groups.

Some believe the answer is that Mexican-Americans resist assimilation into the U.S. mainstream, but studies show Mexican immigrant families quickly pick up the English language and, often by the third generation, lose their Spanish-speaking ability.

Poor education achievement continues to haunt the assimilation and upward mobility of the Hispanic in Texas. Up to 45 percent of Hispanic students drop out before getting a high school diploma, and only 7 percent of the Hispanic students who start in Texas public schools go on to receive college degrees.

Some educators blame a bilingual system that concentrates on learning English at the expense of general education.

"We are turning out English-speaking illiterates," said El Paso educator Enrique Perez.

Mexican immigrant families that do emphasize education, however, show an economic and cultural assimilation almost identical to any other immigrant group. Rafael Gonzalez, who entered the first grade speaking only Spanish in San Antonio, later earned an engineering degree from Texas A&M and now is a NASA engineer.

He and his family blended into a Houston suburb and sent their children to school and college. A son recently graduated from Harvard Law School and, Gonzalez said with a smile, "He doesn't speak a word of Spanish."

Such stories are common in Texas, but Hispanics still are underrepresented in the upper levels of corporations and in banking, finance and insurance.

True barrios remain common in Texas, particularly along the border where some neighborhoods, constantly renewed by immigrants, resemble Mexican villages. But even there, English is spoken and most barrio residents are seeking a better life.

"They know the better jobs are outside of the barrios," said University of Texas professor Rodolfo de la Garza.

A study in San Antonio showed most of the barrio residents are first- or second-generation Mexican immigrants, and that later generations usually move out and into the American mainstream.

The barrios remain as new immigrants move in from Mexico, said de la Garza.

With the Civil Rights fervor of the 1960s came a powerful surge of Mexican-American pride. La Raza Unida, a Hispanic political party, gained strength, and the militant Brown Berets was formed.

The movement eventually resulted in bilingual ballots and education and legislated opportunities for Mexican-Americans.

The Brown Berets seldom are seen now, but there remains a strong pride among many Hispanics. Successful Mexican-Americans now are less likely to evade the fact of their historic heritage.

Cinco de Mayo and Diez y Seis, Mexican holidays celebrating military victories, now are observed widely in many Texas cities.

"Those holidays are celebrations of heritage now, not a patriotic expression," said Cavazos. "On Cinco de Mayo in San Antonio, everybody is a Mexican. We also have a celebration on St. Patrick's Day."

Food, fashion, architecture, language and music in Texas are touched by the Hispanic tradition, with Mexican restaurants almost as common as American hamburger stands in most major Texas cities.

Television ads tout the genuine Mexican flavors of some products and poke fun at imitators made in such "foreign" places as New York.

The blending of cultures has created a new language, called "Spanglish" or "Tex-Mex," that springs from an economical mix of English and Spanish phrases.

Distinctive accent pieces, such as ladderback chairs, colorful blankets and Mexican sculpture, are part of the decor now in many Texas homes.

Some Anglo neighborhoods use Mexican lanterns for holiday lights in the Christmas season, and pinatas are the highlight of many children's birthday parties.

With an estimated 55,000 Mexican residents moving into Texas annually, the Anglo and Hispanics are like two rivers, joining to create a larger whole.

"It's all a part of a unification and mixing of the cultures under way," observed Cavazos. "And it's sure to continue."

Texas, firms benefiting from subsidies — critics

WASHINGTON (AP) — State prison farms in Texas and some major oil companies have been benefiting from farm loan and subsidy programs that should be limited to private farmers, critics say.

"They should be limited to $50,000," U.S. Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., said about the more than $191,692 in deficiency payments received by the Texas Department of Corrections last year for its cotton harvests. "In fact, you can make the argument, why should they get anything at all?"

Glickman, interviewed last week, chairs the wheat, feed grains and soybeans subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee.

Most farmers are limited to a maximum of $50,000 a year in deficiency payments, a subsidy designed to supplement income with the difference between support prices and congressionally set target prices. The restriction does not apply to government agencies.

The Texas Department of Corrections received more than $700,000 last year in various subsidies for cotton harvested by convict machinery operators.

"This is a business just like any other business," said James Anderson, head of the Corrections Department's agricultural operations.

Major oil companies have been receiving marketing loans and deficiency payments for cotton, rice and other crops, according to the General Accounting Office, which says the farm program will cost millions of dollars more unless the eligibility question is addressed.

Amoco, for example, appears certain to receive more than $85,000 in payments and loans for its rice operations in Louisiana and Texas, the report says.

The Reagan administration has sent Congress a plan to tighten payment limitations. Glickman said last week his panel will draft some kind of blueprint to make the requirements stricter.

"As generations become assimilated, they adopt the culture of the Anglos," said Ramiro Cavazos, the director of the Mexican-American Chamber of Commerce in San Antonio.

"They often lose their Mexican cultural heritage. Part of that is an attempt to fit into the Anglo world, and they see their heritage as a disadvantage and want to lose it," Cavazos said.

Census figures from 1970 and 1980 show Mexican immigrants generally earn 22 percent to 27 percent less than European foreign-born immigrants, even after 20 years in this country.

Even after three generations, their earning pattern is 15 percent to 20 percent lower than the general population, according to a study by University of Illinois economist Barry R. Chiswick.

For other groups, the children of immigrants typically earn 5 percent to 10 percent more than the native-born, when corrections are made for the effects of language and education, Chiswick said.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys said they would be able to pick a jury by Wednesday. The potential jurors were asked about their knowledge of the case and whether they had formed an opinion.

Farrell Tucker is charged in the slaying of his best friend and former partner Stephen R. Smith, a suspected vigilante who allegedly planned to kill three top law enforcement officials he blamed for ruining his career.

"Because of the nature of all of the publicity, we feel it's better for both the state and the defense that those questions be answered in private, in writing," Tucker's attorney, Terry McDonald said today.

"I think we'll get more candid responses. It will also save a great deal of time in the jury selection process," McDonald said. Special prosecutor Sid Harle said the state was prepared for the case.

"I'm ready to get it over with," he said. Tucker, 35, maintains he shot Smith, 31, in self-defense last Aug. 18.

Jury selection begins in officer shooting

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — About 60 people began filling out questionnaires today as they prepared to be interviewed as potential jurors in the murder trial of a policeman accused of killing a suspected vigilante patrolman.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys said they would be able to pick a jury by Wednesday. The potential jurors were asked about their knowledge of the case and whether they had formed an opinion.
