Spring board

How's that? Welfare

Q. How many people are on welfare in Howard County, and how often are they screened?

A. The latest report shows 1,047 families receive food stamps and 405 families receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children. A verification check is conducted every six months to determine if there are any changes in income or number of family members. If changes occur before the verification check, they should be reported, said Pat Ayala, regional public information officer at the Texas Department of Human Services.

Juneteenth festival begins Friday

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

Lakeview School — the facility for Big Spring's black children before desegregation in 1961-62 — will be the scene of a celebration this weekend.

Juneteenth, celebrated June 19, is the name given the day Texas slaves learned of their freedom. A reunion of students, faculty and friends is the focus of two days of activities in honor of the anniversary.

Also in celebration of Juneteenth, the Webb-Spring Lions Club will conduct its annual barbecue at the Old Settlers Pavilion Friday from 11:30 a.m. to about 5 p.m., secretary/treasurer Tommy Domino said. Guests are welcome, he said.

The Lakeview School reunion begins with registration at 7 p.m. Friday and a 7:30 p.m. program at the former school location, 1000 N.W. Fourth St., now the Howard County Park building, said planning committee member Barbara Davis.

The reunion is dedicated to the oldest known graduate, Claude Dawson of Midland, class of 1941, she said.

The reunion continues with a 9 a.m. Saturday breakfast at the building, a 1 p.m. barbecue at the Comanche Trail Park Shadow Retreat Pavilion, and an 8 p.m. dance at the Howard County Park building, she said.

It is not known just when and where the school began, but it is believed to have been in someone's home before it was moved to a one-room schoolhouse, according to Davis.

The earliest written records are from 1929-30, she said, adding that the committee is gathering a history of the school.

It was called simply the Colored School at that time. Its name changed to Lakeview in 1931-32, she said.

In 1929, the school had 23 elementary students, six eighth-graders who were considered to be in high school, and one teacher-principal, Jessie Henderson, Davis said.

A later teacher-principal, Venora Williams, is to present a verbal history at the reunion.

Davis, who attended the school during the 1950s, described it as more intimate than current schools.

"It's better to be a big fish in a little pond," she said. "A lot of kids don't get the recognition they would get" in a smaller school, she said.

However, Lakeview School also was crowded, did not have much equipment, and used hand-me-down books, she said. Davis enjoyed attending the school, although she said it was far poorer than those she had attended in Florida and Alabama in those days.

Big Spring schools were somewhat desegregated even then, before the government mandated the change, she said. A few black children of Webb Air Force Base-stationed parents attended Big Spring High School instead of the Lakeview School, she said, although it is not known how many did so.

The present Lakeview School building was built in 1955, she said, and became an elementary school in 1961-62, upon desegregation of local schools.

Exchange students leave with teary eyes

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

When Anja Jorgensen put on the cap and gown and accepted her diploma with the rest of the Big Spring High graduating seniors, it was too much.

"Wooooo," said the Denmark native. "I cried. Many of the people you see there you'll never see again. You make so many friends at this school, and it's so sad to leave them."

Anja was one of three foreign students from the Rotary Club International exchange program who lived in Howard County this past year. The others were Frank Heideloff from West Germany, and Esther Vila, from Spain.

Frank and Anja attended Big Spring High, and Esther went to Forsan. All three attended as seniors, which is a Rotary Club policy designed to make the year more special.

Frank and Anja are returning home soon, and Esther has already done so. Both Frank and Anja have mixed feelings about leaving what they both called a "second home."

Esther, who was on stand-by for a flight home, got the call from the airlines that she could go last week just hours before her flight was to leave. According to Lee and Janet George, Esther's exchange parents during part of her stay, that call was traumatic.

The Georges and another of Esther's families took her to the airport, and everyone cried. As Lee remembered, Esther left through Frank Heideloff, from West Germany, and Anja Jorgensen, from Denmark, relax last week while talking about their experiences as exchange students this year in Big Spring. Esther Vila from Spain, the third Rotary student, is shown in the inset. The trio became close to their host families and friends at school and find it isn't so easy to leave. gate No. 2 in Midland, exactly where she arrived last August.

"The only problem with the exchange students is you get so goshdurned attached to them," Lee said. "But exchange students are kind of nice, because you go through in nine months what it takes 17 years to go through with your kids."

"They change that much," added Janet. "They come with preconceived ideas."

"And you accept them with preconceived ideas," Lee said.

All three have plans to return to Big Spring, and several members of the host families already are planning trips to Europe to see their new family members.

Anja has definite hopes of seeing her new friends and families once again.

"It has been just like having a Mom and Dad. At first I thought it wouldn't, but you get close to them, really. I'm going to miss all these friendly people and all these people I've lived with this year," said Anja, who speaks so fluently it's almost surprising to discover she's a foreigner.

Frank said it's essential to the program that the students have good families, and he was certainly pleased with his. He recently went to California on a short trip with his real father, who visited last week.

"When I got back to Midland, I thought, 'It's nice to be home.' I've accepted Big Spring as my second home."

"I made a lot of friends here and I had a great time, most probably the greatest year of my life, because it was so different and because I was forced to do everything by myself, basically."

"The only people I had to rely on were my host families, but basically EXCHANGE page 2A

Rural/Metro reviewing locations

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Rural/Metro's Northern Division Manager Chris Black was in Big Spring Wednesday looking for a location for Rural/Metro's ambulance service.

Black said today the company hasn't decided on any specific location, but he has looked at the Bidco building, formerly a tire facility, in the 1900 block of Gregg Street.

The company won't locate its service in Central Fire Station, from which Lee Ambulance operates its service, Black said from Borger.

"The city has expressed interest that we not locate in the station," he said.

Rural/Metro was selected by city and county officials to operate a Big Spring/Howard County ambulance service beginning July 16. Lee Ambulance owner Charles Ginn informed local officials in April he will discontinue service July 15 because of financial hardships.

City Manager Mack Wofford was in a budget meeting this morning and unavailable for comment on the city's position concerning operation of Rural/Metro's ambulance service from Central Fire Station.

"We're looking for a location that's central — so that we'll have good east-west, north-south access," Black said.

"We haven't decided whether to buy or lease — it depends which works out better financially."

Black said he didn't know how soon the company would make a decision on a location, but said "the sooner the better."

School officials face AIDS issue, draft policy

Herald staff and wire reports

Big Spring school district officials have submitted the first draft of an AIDS policy to the school board and are closely watching how their Midland counterparts deal with the revelation that a teacher there has contracted the deadly disease.

Midland school board members have called a press conference because an elementary teacher tested positively for AIDS, but board president Fred Newman said school trustees won't agree to some parents' demands that AIDS tests be given to all students, teachers and cafeteria workers.

The teacher, who has not been identified, voluntarily accepted disability leave after receiving positive confirmation Friday of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Big Spring school district superintendent Bill McQueary said that local schools should have an official policy dealing with students and teachers who contract AIDS by the beginning of the next school year in September.

He said that the tentative policy — based on a brief written by state education and health officials — deals primarily with students. McQueary added that the Board would research how to deal with teachers with the disease, and "... see how Midland handles it."

At the present time, there is no official policy concerning AIDS infection by either students or teacher, McQueary said. The district has a sickness policy for teachers, but it does not address AIDS specifically, he added.

Fred Newman said the Midland district cannot afford to test its 18,000 students, faculty and staff members.

"Why would my (tax) money set your child more at ease than your money? If you're worried, have it (the testing) done," he said.

Becky Ferguson, a school spokeswoman, said Wednesday the AIDS-afflicted teacher will not return to teaching next year and will continue on medical disability leave. She said AIDS testing probably would not be on the school board's agenda when it meets next week.

School board members called a news conference for Saturday on the AIDS controversy and mailed letters to all of the school's parents and staff members.

About 200 parents met Tuesday at the school where the infected teacher taught.

"I'm concerned simply because I don't think anyone has enough knowledge to make policies concerning it," said Jerry Norman, whose two children attended the school until January.

Festival gains $202 for Wall's visit

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Money raised at a Heart of the City festival ALSA booth produced $202 for the local Vietnam Wall committee, group treasurer Teri Quinones said today.

The Wall committee met Wednesday to discuss fund raising needs for the Wall replica's Big Spring visit.

The half-size replica of the national Vietnam Wall monument is scheduled to be displayed Sept. 30 - Oct. 6 at the base of Scenic Mountain on the grounds of the Southwest Collegiate Institute of the Deaf.

The original Wall, located in Washington, D.C., is inscribed with the names of more than 58,000 men and women who lost their lives in Vietnam.

The football field-sized replica is expected to draw thousands of visitors during the exclusive West Texas visit to Big Spring.

Quinones said several Wall committee members plan to speak about the visit at City Council's Tuesday meeting.

"We will make them aware that we will have full restaurants and hotels and ask them what we need to know as far as traffic control, sanitation and security," Quinones said.

Quinones said the Wall committee has raised a total of $1,332.39 — $1,867.61 short of its goal of $3,200.

The committee hopes to raise a portion of that by placing a donation box at the site during the Wall's visit, but has been told by replica creator John Devitt that all money must be raised prior to the Wall's arrival.

Devitt said he places a donation box at the site to help fund future Wall visits and a local box would conflict with that effort.

Committee members voted against asking singer Kris Kristofferson to help raise funds by singing at a benefit concert.

The committee would be responsible for paying the singer's expenses, and decided the venture would be too costly, Quinones said. A suggestion to have the concert at the site also was voted down because the event will be too emotional for music, she said.

visit to the the Veterans Hospital Volunteer Service July 14.

• Gold Star Mothers, a group of local mothers who have lost sons in wars, has offered to help with the opening ceremony and is gathering photos of area people who were killed in the Vietnam war, Quinones said.

Anyone with such a photograph should contact Quinones at P.O. Box 2854, the same number at which donations may be made.

• Carl McClung, state commander of Combat Vietnam Veterans of Texas, has expressed interest in speaking at the opening ceremonies of the Wall visit.

• Robb McKenzie presented the design and text of flyers about the Wall that will be distributed in Midland, Odessa and Big Spring bank statements.

• Clara Justice, Coahoma presented a poem her son had written about Vietnam that will be printed on the flyers. She said he had written it after visiting the original Wall memorial.

• Committee members discussed organizing an August bowling tournament to raise additional funds.

West German comments on U.S. mentality

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

Frank Heideloff loves to talk. Some such talkers present problems, but not Frank.

Frank, you see, is interesting, as are the things he has to say. He's not one to mince words or hold back opinions. He let's it fly.

Frank, from West Germany, is one of three exchange students that attended school in Howard County this past school year. The 18-year-old graduated with the rest of the senior class at Big Spring High this May, and he called the year "probably the greatest year of my life."

Frank offered his opinions on life in Big Spring, Texas and America, and comparisons with life in Germany. Big Spring residents may find one particular observation rather disturbing.

"The way drugs and alcohol is handled — it just shocked me."

When you smoke pot or do cocaine, you're super. The way people abuse alcohol here to show that they are cool or to prove how mature they are — that just doesn't go in my head," he said.

Frank said that alcohol and drugs is not nearly the problem in Germany as here, because "it's not a taboo."

"Even when you're a small kid, you have wine at dinner, so you grow up with an entirely different opinion of drinking alcoholic beverages."

"The problem, I think, is the taboo built up by society — it's like, the forbidden fruits are always the sweetest ones. Society keeps hammering on the kids — 'Don't drink, don't smoke,' and because it's forbidden, they do it," he said.

Heideloff added that marijuana is "nothing here," and cocaine is "around definitely." He said he drinks some in Germany, but hasn't done so here, because Rotary Club rules prohibit drinking by exchange students.

Anja Jorgensen, another of the exchange students, said alcohol "is a bigger deal here" than in her native Denmark.

"But of course, sometimes you go crazy too at home," she said.

Frank's other observations revolved around sports and the way of life in Big Spring. According to him, athletics in Europe isn't school related, and the concept of a school sponsored athletic teams was new to him.

"Soccer is bigger than even those three (baseball, football and basketball) put together over here, because it's the sport."

"I guess what I'm trying to say is there's a rivalry between football, baseball and basketball, because the seasons overlap. And over there, there is the one national sport, and that is soccer," he said.

"Despite the overwhelming popularity of soccer in his native Germany, Frank said the players are not as revered as the sports heroes in America."

"Europeans in general are very critical, and not as likely to idealize people in sports," he said.

Frank attributed this attitude to the deeper history of Europe.

"History is deeper, so the culture is deeper. You might see seven or 800 year old churches and castles. I really believe there is a lot more cultural depth in Europe."

"When I first got here, I had to get used to the special mentality here — kind of the earth-bound mentality, you know?"

"I guess you have to live here to love it. But the longer you live here, the more you love it," said the lively West German.

Exchange

ly being away from my home and my parents has given me the opportunity to develop independence and everything that comes with it, such as tolerance and understanding and so forth," Frank said.

Frank has enjoyed Big Spring so much that he's staying an extra week with a friend, even though his last host family, Victor and Carolyn Seding, are going on a vacation.

Before she came here, Anja's friends in Denmark told her to expect one thing — she would live on a ranch and ride horses to school. That, of course, didn't happen.

What did happen was that Anja, like Frank and Esther, became big football fans. She missed just two away games all season, and always sat with her host family, Drew and Glynda Mouton, who she said rooted as hard as the students.

"With the prom, graduation and football, it really makes you understand how different it is in other countries," she said.

In Europe the athletic teams aren't affiliated with the schools. This part really surprised Esther.

"She really liked this deal of the school getting into it — she couldn't believe people would travel 120 miles to a game and turn around and come back," Lee George said.

"And another thing she liked was that the hierarchy at the schools are just common, ordinary people. They'd speak to her and ask her how she was doing, and she liked that," he said, adding that in Spain the teachers didn't fraternize with the students as they often do here.

Janet said the language barrier made things difficult at first. Because the Georges wanted to know so much and ask questions, a Spanish-English dictionary became a regular tool.

"But when she left, she could speak every slang word there was," Lee said.

According to the Georges, the exchange students go through three phases — at first they're homesick and getting adjusted, then they get a little homesick because of Christmas, and finally, they try to jam in everything they've missed and worry about having to leave.

"You don't think about it, but it takes a lot of courage to do what those kids did," Lee George said.

And because of that courage, eight host families had a year they'll never forget.

Editor's note: For more information on the Rotary Club exchange program call Drew Mouton or Lee George. Also, there are eight families who are sure to recommend the program. They are: Anja's parents — Drew and Glynda Mouton, Millie and Jay Cunningham, and John and Donna Fish; Esther's parents — Lee and Janet George, Wayne and Joan Rock, and Travis and Jackey Brackeen; and Frank's parents — Daniel and Joy Cowan, and Victor and Carolyn Seding.

Leaders uncertain of oil price surge impact

Herald staff and wire reports

Crude oil futures prices broke the $20 barrier this week, but local and national leaders are uncertain of its impact on the industry.

In Tuesday trading at the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for July delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, gained as much as 17 cents a 42-gallon barrel before dropping back to $20.13. That still was above Monday's $20.06 settlement price.

Richard Pitts of Delta Commodities in Big Spring said that contracts for July delivery gained 26 cents a barrel Wednesday to close at $20.39.

The contracts had closed at $19.91 per barrel on Friday.

In two sessions since mid-May, the contract had touched prices of $20 or higher. But Monday's close marked the first time it stayed above that level since Jan. 28, 1986, when the contract settled at $20.17, said Mary Ann Matlock, a spokeswoman for the exchange.

One local businessman believes the price increases could signal the start of modest growth for the much-beleaguered oil industry.

Wade Choate of Choate Company saw significance in the $20 barrier being broken.

"It's a good psychological move for the industry," Choate said, adding that he had seen an increase in his business the last few days as a result of the increases.

He says that if prices continued at this rate, the oil business would experience a modest increase in activity in the coming months, but that investors would be "reluctant until they see prices stabilize."

Light trading makes it easier to move prices in either direction, national observers explained, since there are fewer checks and balances.

Even so, analysts said the move above $20 may not carry much long-term significance.

Thomas F. McKiernan of McKiernan & Co., which deals in oil futures contracts, noted that trading volume had been about half of normal levels, as the market remained in the doldrums awaiting the outcome of the June 25 meeting of oil ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Accordingly, he said he did not consider the surge past $20 as a very bullish sign.

McKiernan said traders "don't want to do anything until they see if OPEC will stay with the progress it has made (in restricting production to support prices), and not misbehave."

Attorney, law firms sued by FSLIC

Dallas Times Herald Bureau Federal savings and loan regulators filed a $100 million suit Wednesday against a former Dallas attorney, three law firms where he had been a partner — including Dallas-based Jenkens & Gilchrist — and other attorneys, several partners in those firms, claiming they violated their financial responsibilities to two failed West Texas savings and loans.

Named in the suit were Laurence B. Vineyard Jr., former partner at Jenkens & Gilchrist; Jenkens & Gilchrist and several of its former and current partners including senior managers; and two other law firms with whom Vineyard had been a partner and some of those firms' partners.

Jenkins & Gilchrist said in a prepared statement that the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. "has no valid complaint against Jenkens & Gilchrist or its personnel." Name partner Henry Gilchrist and managing partner Christie S. Flanagan are among the current partners who are defendants in the suit.

Mattox begins battle with airlines

Dallas Times Herald Bureau Attorney General Jim Mattox accused airlines of practicing so-called bait-and-switch advertising and called Wednesday for consumers to mail complaints about air carriers to his Dallas office or to the Transportation Department in Washington.

"We want as many complaints as can be gathered," Mattox said. His main allegation was that airlines are advertising deeply discounted fares but making an inadequate supply of low-cost tickets available, then "switching" potential customers to more expensive seats.

Under Texas' deceptive trade practice laws, businesses can be fined up to $10,000 for each instance of deceptive advertising.

Mattox said airlines are touting deeply discounted fares to lure fliers but are failing to make an adequate supply of low cost tickets available. When potential customers call to make reservations, the cheap fares in advertisements are rarely available and consumers are then encouraged to buy a more costly ticket, he said.

Rudd becomes sole budget writer

AUSTIN — Rep. James Rudd has become the Texas House's one-man budget writer — at least temporarily.

After two days of unproductive discussions, the House Appropriations Committee decided Wednesday to let Rudd, their chairman, draft a proposed 1988-89 state spending bill for the special session.

The committee then went home until the special session on Texas fiscal woes begins Monday.

"I am just going to write the bill by the instructions of the committee," said Rudd, D-Brownfield, after the unexpected development

Wednesday. "They don't have to necessarily agree but they have agreed in concept anyway."

The committee began meeting Monday to draw up a proposed House version of the state budget, and Rudd said earlier the group might meet this Saturday.

"I think most of them decided they wanted to do what I wanted to do so they decided to just let me do it," Rudd said.

Rudd repeated that any budget bill produced by the committee would be held until the House acts on a revenue bill that would cover any expenditures.

Child killed, four injured in twister

PERRYTON — A tornado roared out of a stormy sky over the Texas Panhandle, leaving a child dead and four other family members injured when it demolished a mobile, authorities said.

Ochiltree County Sheriff Joe Hataway said the tornado touched down at 6:20 p.m. CDT and "apparently hit right on top of a mobile home, exploding it into many thousands of small pieces and scattering it in a narrow trail."

"In town ... trees were broken, lumber from the local lumberyard was scattered everywhere," Hataway said.

Texas Department of Public Safety dispatcher Dwayne Collins identified the dead child as 18-month-old Elizabeth Vela.

The injured were identified as the mother, Christina Vela, 38; Raquel Vela, 10; Rafael Vela, 8; and Jose Vela, 12.

Raquel Vela underwent surgery late Wednesday in Northwest Baptist Hospital in Amarillo, where she was reported in critical condition. Jose Vela was listed in stable condition and Mrs. Vela in serious condition, said a nurse's supervisor at the hospital, who asked not to be identified. They suffered head injuries and broken bones, she said.

Safeway closing

Letters that used to spell Safeway were removed from the Clute store after it shut its doors this past week. A company spokesman said the Clute store was one of seven in the Houston area closed because they were not profitable. More than one hundred Texas and Oklahoma Safeway stores have closed during the past few months. In Big Spring, Furr's has already occupied one of the former Safeway stores and Don Newsom IGA is expected to open July 16, owner Don Newsom said.

Indians won't permit name to be used by new schools

STINNETT — A Comanche Indian tribal council has denied a request from a new Texas school system that it be allowed to call its athletic teams the Comanches.

Students at West Texas High School — part of a new consolidated school district north of Borger serving the Panhandle towns of Stinnett, Phillips and Plemons — wanted the nickname for their sports teams.

Superintendent Hayden Willhite said he sought approval from the tribe after learning the Comanches might have a problem with its use. "We didn't want to offend anybody," Willhite said. "We didn't want to step on anyone's rights and heritage."

The six-member Comanche council met last weekend in Lawton, Okla., and said in a letter to Willhite that the request was an honor it had to reject because of time constraints.

"There is so much law that goes into the naming ceremony to be performed and at this time we feel because of the obligation and the time permitted, we could not take part in such a ceremony," said Ronald Burgess, tribal chief of the Comanche Indians.

Opinion

Views of papers across the U.S.

Here is a sampling of editorials in the nation's newspapers to a Manhattan jury's acquittal of Bernhard Goetz on Tuesday on attempted murder charges in the subway shootings of four young men:

...hard Goetz on Tuesday on attempted murder charges in the subway shootings of four young men:

Trial should never have taken place

It was a trial that never should have taken place — based on an indictment that never should have been brought.

...stinctively what the Bernhard Goetz jury has now reaffirmed — the man in the defendant's box was the victim.

The New York Post

Goetz should serve prison time

Let the Goetz saga be put to rest — soon, it should be hoped, beyond memory. Or, at the very least, beyond the straining, painful, often vicious passions the miserable drama ignited from Day One.

...prison time — some significant part of the maximum seven years possible under the charge of possessing an unlicensed, loaded firearm.

The New York Daily News

'Larger jury' must find the balance

This case also puts broader questions to a larger jury, composed of everyone concerned about crime, anger and fear. Those questions endure.

...result from the belief that a gleam in the eye warrants deadly self-defense?

...A Manhattan trial jury did its job, finding an answer to the specific circumstances of Mr. Goetz's case. The continuing task of the larger jury, to balance self-defense and social order, is harder.

The New York Times

Says trial won't erase crime away

Yes, there is too much crime in New York's subways and yes, much more must be done to assure public safety.

...true long before Goetz came along — and the problems are, sadly, likely to remain with us long after his name fades from easy memory.

New York Newsday

Better off with the jury than youths

Not unexpectedly, the decision upholds an individual's right to protect his person or property against those who threaten either. It does not, however, condone indiscriminate taking of the law into one's own hands.

...Goetz's sentencing has been set for Sept. 4. Possession of a weapon carries a minimum penalty of probation and a maximum prison term of 7 years.

The Arizona Republic

Justice prevailed, but no precedent

In another city, in a different circumstance, Bernhard Goetz today might be behind bars, convicted and awaiting a jail sentence.

...Anywhere, he would have won freedom if one man brandishing a knife had threatened his life.

...Justice prevailed in New York, but no precedent was set.

The Bellevue (Wash.) Journal-American

Goetz case is not gauge for society

A jury has cleared Bernhard Goetz of blame in the actual shooting of those four youths in a New York City subway car, and convicted him for possession of the weapon with which he did it.

...circumstances, quite weird circumstances in fact. It is no more a microcosm of contemporary American attitudes than any other such case.

...For 2½ years some have been trying to convince the public that the Goetz affair is a watershed in attitudes toward street crime, that how it was handled and resolved would determine whether this will be a law-abiding or vigilante society.

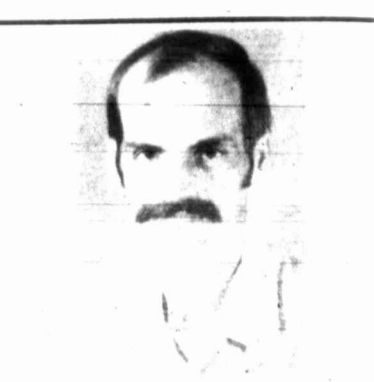

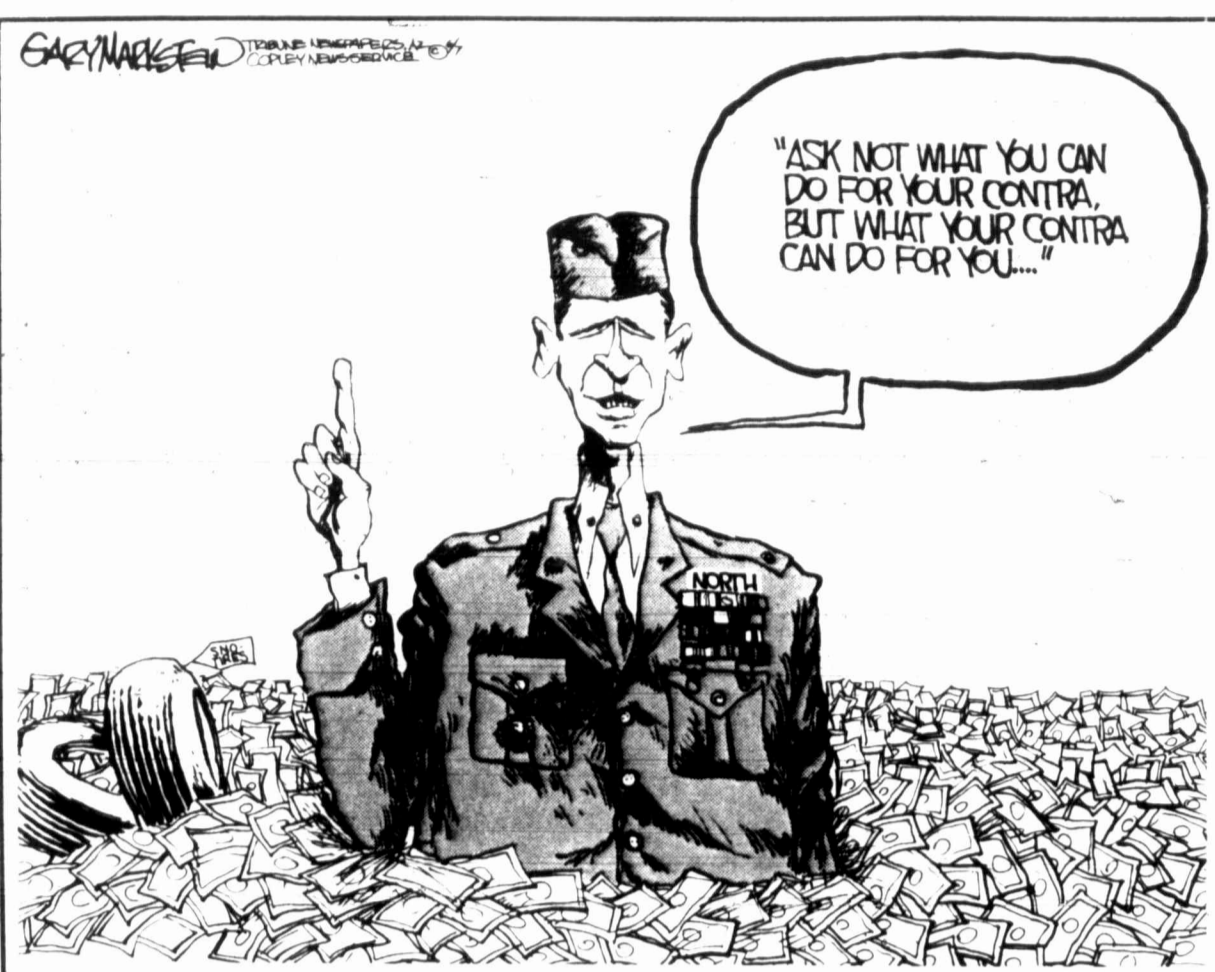

...That is nonsense. The best proof is that pre-Goetz and post-Goetz attitudes and actions of the public have remained the same.

Around the rim

Lessons to learn by South Africans

By STEVE REAGAN Staff Writer

Crunch time is drawing close for the South African government. Remember South Africa? It's the land journalist Hunter S. Thompson called "the last of the Nazi bush leagues."

As we speak, the white minority government is hanging on for dear life, repressing freedom of speech, press and movement for most of the non-white majority.

This has been a quiet summer — so far. The number of riots and shootings are down from a year ago. One might be inclined to consider the situation as peaceful.

Don't be fooled, however, this is simply the calm before the storm.

Because South African President P. W. Botha never appreciated the wisdom of Abraham Lincoln — not that he would know our 16th president if Abe slapped him in the face.

"O! Honest Abe, a simple country lawyer who rose to the U.S. presidency at our hour of greatest crisis," said "Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves."

My grandfather understood the concept well. He said, "You can hold a man down in the mud if you want, but all that means is that you're going to get muddy, too."

What these two Americans meant, in their respective ways — is the only way to be free is to bestow freedom's gifts on all people. If not, the only thing you accomplish is lowering yourself far below the level of the oppressed.

It is a lesson this country had to painfully learn — and in several aspects we are still learning. But at least we go to great pains to protect freedom for all our citizens.

Botha seems not to have quite gotten the point — yet. He is destined to learn. If he has any doubts, perhaps he should call his old soul-mate Ferdinand Marcos, currently cooling his heels in Hawaii.

I can imagine quite an interesting conversation.

Botha — "I just don't know if I'm doing the right thing, Fernie."

Marcos — "Don't worry, Pee-Wee, just hang in there. Those ungrateful blacks will soon behave. They'll get sick and tired of getting their heads bashed in, sooner or later."

B — "You really think so?"

M — "Sure. Have I ever steered you wrong?"

B — "Thanks, Fernie. By the way, heard from the homeland lately?"

M — "Naw, but those ingrates will come to their senses, sooner or later."

Maybe that wouldn't be such a great conversation after all.

The point of this round-about commentary is: Freedom shall not be denied.

You can keep a man in chains for just so long; you can treat him as a sub-human for a limited time. Then, he gets to the point where he realizes that a life in servitude is really no life at all.

When that time comes, one of two things is bound to happen:

● The oppressor grants freedom to the oppressed; or,

● They go up in smoke together.

Either way, things change. It's kind of like the old oil-filter commercial — You can pay now, or you can pay later. Either way, you're going to pay.

I wish Botha could meet Lincoln — or my grandfather, for that matter. Oh, the enlightenment that would surely occur.

If Abe's comments wouldn't impress him, maybe the words of Thomas Jefferson would serve to warn Botha of the perils of inhibiting freedom. "The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants."

Clear enough, Botha?

Policewoman accuses chief of VA center of harrasment

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — Another brutality complaint has surfaced involving Police Chief Daniel Wilson of the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Cincinnati. A policewoman has accused Wilson of roughing her up while he was a detective assigned to the VA medical center in Dallas three years ago.

We recently reported that two of Wilson's officers in Cincinnati alleged that Wilson beat up veterans and beggars who were caught panhandling in the hospital lobby. The two accusers in that case were fired; Wilson remains chief of the Cincinnati facility's police force.

Now our associate Stewart Harris has obtained an affidavit and a congressional memo describing the earlier episode in Dallas on Sept. 24, 1984.

"In that incident," says a staff memo to Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., "Chief Wilson jumped a female VA officer in the dark and held the officer at gunpoint (the officer was unaware that the gun was not real) and then 'roughed her up' when she struggled."

The affidavit was signed by Petrowski about a month after the incident. The memo to Schroeder is based on a recent meeting of her staff and officials of the Office of Special Counsel, which is investigating the firing of the two Cincinnati officers who accused Wilson of brutality.

Special Counsel officials at first told Schroeder's staff that the Dallas incident was merely part of a "training exercise." But they later conceded that the incident showed "poor judgment" on Wilson's part, according to the memo.

Wilson told us that the "roughing up" incident was reviewed by regional VA officials and found to be a proper training exercise. Petrowski had been hired just a few months earlier. The problem, Wilson said, arose from Petrowski's perception of the exercise.

Petrowski resigned three weeks later and moved away from Dallas. She could not be reached for comment.

Her affidavit describes in vivid detail how Wilson, disguised in a wig, pushed the barrel of a gun into the side of her head and said, "I'm going to kill you," as he dragged her down a flight of stairs. The episode ended when two other VA officers grabbed Wilson and his wig fell off.

Schroeder is chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee with oversight of the Special Counsel. She is convinced the office is not conducting a proper investigation, and told us that the two Cincinnati officers should have been given their jobs back during the investigation.

Wilson said he can't discuss the complaints against him until the Special Counsel's investigation is complete. "The real story is what

Diplomatic deals a private dream

By ART BUCHWALD

One of the things that makes the Irangate hearings interesting is that so many private citizens were involved in conducting American diplomacy for all of us.

Albert Hakim, business partner of Gen. Secord, and almost a father to Ollie North, testified that they went to Iran not only on arms business, but also to negotiate free-lance diplomatic deals. The trio promised that the U.S. would fight the Russians if they invaded Iran, get rid of the Iraqi president and arrange for the release of Moslem terrorists held by Kuwait.

There isn't a man or woman in this country who doesn't have a fantasy of being put in charge of our foreign policy.

This is my dream. I fly to Libya with my business partner, Albert Aagh Keem, and White House buddy Rolly West. We are escorted to Kadafi's tent, where we present him with a chocolate cake and a Bible signed by Ronald Reagan.

"Your Royal Terrorist," I tell him in my dream, "we come to sign a peace treaty between your country and ours."

Kadafi, ripping into the cake, says, "Do you have any Sara Lee flavors besides chocolate?"

"We have strawberry cheesecake, but we must have something in return. We want you to stop exporting terrorism in the Middle East."

"Everyone asks me that. What

Art Buchwald

do I get in exchange?"

"We will sell you 1,000 TOW missiles at our usual outrageously inflated prices."

"That doesn't seem very generous," Kadafi says.

I take a deep breath. "We will set up a life insurance policy for you, and if we die first you can have all our money."

"You could do that for me?"

"Do you see this man?" I say, pointing at West. "This Marine colonel works for the President of the United States. He would not be here if he didn't have the right to give away the store."

"And who is this other joker?"

"That is Albert Aagh Keem. He's a poor, honest arms salesman who also translates for us on the side. Your Majesty, this is one opportunity in a million. If you sign a deal today we will assassinate all your enemies in Chad."

"I would like that very much."

"As private citizens of the U.S. our job is to make you happy, which the State Department cannot officially do."

Rolly West whispers in my ear. Then I say, "Mr. Kadafi, I have something to suggest that as a head of state will blow your mind. If you sign this deal with us we will give you a midnight tour of the White House."

"I don't believe you have the authority to do that."

"Trust us. We'll show you the situation room, the Oval Office and Nancy Reagan's closet."

"I would love a tour of the White House. What do I do to get it?"

"Just sign the Bible and we'll give you all the spare parts you need."

"Are you certain your President supports this mission?"

"Do you think I would offer to show you the White House unless I had Mr. Reagan's permission?"

Rolly whispers in my ear again.

"If you would like to see where the dog sleeps at Camp David, that can be arranged too."

"And what is the price of the tours?"

"All we ask in exchange is that you give us $10 million to support moderate terrorism in Nicaragua."

Lawmakers blast bill

WASHINGTON — An oil provision in the Senate's trade bill represents special interest legislation that would give the president too much power and deal a major blow to the economy, lawmakers say.

Inserted just before the bill cleared the Senate Finance Committee, the provision would empower the president to take any corrective action he deemed necessary if estimates suggested imports would top 50 percent of U.S. oil consumption within three years.

Sen. Robert Packwood of Oregon, the top Republican on the Finance Committee, called the provision "one of the most extraordinary grants of power to a president that I've ever seen."

Falwell denies report

TEGA CAY, S.C. — Tammy Bakker's tearful charges that PTL officials searched her home and sent her dogs to the pound are "embarrassing and ludicrous" and detract from the ministry's fight for survival, the Rev. Jerry Falwell said today.

Falwell, PTL's new chairman, said on Cable News Network that the charges "hardly are worthy of responding to, except that unless they are responded to, someone might think they're so."

He also said that if the Bakkers are out of money, they could go out and get jobs.

Koops talks on AIDS

WASHINGTON — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop said today he would know in six to eight months whether there will be an AIDS explosion in the heterosexual community.

"We're on the verge of knowing more," Koop told the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families. "We may be on the verge of an explosion (among heterosexuals). I hope not."

"We will know in six to eight months," Koop said.

Koop told the committee he believes young children should be taught to abstain from sex until they are ready for marriage. He said adolescents — the focus of today's hearing — must be approached in a different way.

Crime figures arrested

WASHINGTON — Reputed Philadelphia Mafia boss Nicodemo Scarfo and 27 other organized crime figures were indicted for allegedly running a drug ring involved in the distribution of methamphetamines, the Justice Department said today.

Among those charged in a 46-count federal grand jury indictment unsealed in Philadelphia were Scarfo's reputed underboss, Philip Leonetti, and Salvatore Merlino, identified as another top figure in the Mafia in the city.

Woman confesses on deathbed

DOVER, Del. (AP) — A man freed after 12 years in prison by a woman's deathbed recantation of rape charges says he doesn't "hold any hatred" and wants only to get out of Delaware and back to his family.

"I felt like I weighed about half a pound," Wayman E. Cammille, 50, said from his mother's home in Townsend shortly after his release Wednesday from the Sussex Correctional Institution near Georgetown.

"I really feel great. I don't hold no grudges. I don't hold any hatred... If I had been bitter all these years, I would have torn my own life up. God kept saying to me to keep on. He wanted me to make it," he said.

Cammille was charged with first-degree rape after he was arrested in a drunken stupor in the bed of 64-year-old Alice Mock on May 17, 1975. The charge carried a maximum sentence of 45 years in prison. He pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of sexual assault and second-degree burglary and was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Cammille maintained his innocence all along, but said he could not remember the events of the day of his arrest because he had been drunk.

Ms. Mock, partially clad, had run to a store near her apartment that day and reported being attacked by a man who had forced his way into her house after she answered a knock at the door.

But on Nov. 28, 1986, a postal worker known for her compassion to the sick and elderly was summoned to Ms. Mock's home across from the post office. The postal worker, Evelyn Burns, found the 76-year-old woman near death.

"She told me, 'I have something I have to confess before I die. I put a man in jail. I said he raped me, but he never touched me. I let him go in my bed because he was so drunk,'" Ms. Burns said in a recent interview.

Journalist missing

BEIRUT, Lebanon — American journalist Charles Glass is missing and feared kidnapped in a Syrian-policed suburb of Moslem west Beirut, security sources said today.

The sources said Glass, 36, disappeared before noon Wednesday as he was traveling back to Beirut from Sidon, provincial capital of south Lebanon.

If confirmed, Glass would be the ninth American held hostage in Lebanon and the first Westerner kidnapped in the country since Syria sent 7,500 troops to west Beirut on Feb. 22 to quell factional fighting.

Glass, of Los Angeles, was a correspondent for ABC TV from March 1983 until last March, when he left the network to work on a book about the Middle East. Glass has continued to do free-lance work for ABC, a network spokeswoman said.

Vietnam picks leaders

BANGKOK, Thailand — Vietnam today named a new prime minister and a new president, replacing the revolutionaries who helped found the Indochinese Communist Party and led it to victory over the Japanese, French and Americans, Voice of Vietnam radio said.

Pham Hung, the second-ranking Communist Party official, was named prime minister to succeed Pham Van Dong, 79, the prime minister since 1955, the radio, monitored in Bangkok, said.

Vo Chi Cong was appointed president, a largely ceremonial post, the radio said. He succeeds Truong Chinh, president since 1981 and a leading political figure for decades.

Britain cuts Iran ties

LONDON — Britain today cut its diplomatic ties with Tehran on a caretaker basis and ordered all but one of Iran's diplomats in London to leave by the end of June.

A Foreign Office statement cited "unacceptable Iranian behavior" but said, "This decision does not constitute a breach of diplomatic relations."

Four British diplomats returned home today, leaving two in Iran. Britain's top-ranking diplomat in Tehran, Christopher MacRae, will return to London by the end of this month, the Foreign Office said.

U.S. to accept refugees

SINGAPORE — Secretary of State George Shultz today urged several Southeast Asian nations to keep their doors open to people fleeing Indochina, and he promised the United States would accept many refugees.

"It's become clear to all of us that the refugee problem in this part of the world is an enduring one, and we must realize that solving it will be a long-term process," Shultz told a meeting of foreign ministers of the six-nation Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

Wrong size of breeding band puts the squeeze on pet birds

DEAR ABBY: I was saddened by the letter from your reader whose canary lost its feet due to tight leg bands. The saddest part is that this need not have occurred.

Leg bands on canaries (usually one on the right leg of the males and the left leg for females) are a means of identifying the year the bird was hatched as well as the identity of the breeder. It also is proof that the bird is free from disease and is in this country legally. Bands are specifically sized for different species of birds since there is a wide variety in the size of their legs. Articles on banding always caution that in the event of any swelling under a leg band, the band must be removed immediately. The canary whose owner wrote to you lost its feet because gangrene set in when blood circulation was cut off.

We will be happy to provide a free leaflet on proper leg-banding techniques to any of your readers who write to us requesting one.

ARTHUR FREUD, AMERICAN CAGE-BIRD MAGAZINE, ONE GLAMORE COURT, SMITHTOWN, N.Y. 11787

DEAR MR. FREUD: (Any relation to the late Sigmund?) People who are in the business of selling birds and, therefore, must "band" them routinely, should know how to band them humanely. I hope you get a flock of requests in response to your offer.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the canary who lost its feet because of too-tight leg bands brought back painful memories. In your answer you wisely suggested that a vet should have been consulted, but in our case it didn't help.

Dear Abby

Some years ago, I had a beautiful talking budgie — a clever, loving pet who had a vocabulary of more than 100 words and phrases. My husband and I adored him.

One day, when he had just turned 3 years old, I noticed the banded leg had swollen just above the band. I took him to the vet who had to anesthetize him in order to remove the band. The doctor said, "I wish these breeders would either use plastic bands, which are easier to remove, or use a band large enough to allow for the growth of the legs."

My poor baby recovered from the anesthetic and I took him home, but later that night he became very sick and finally died lying in my husband's hand. Apparently, a blood clot had formed due to the restriction of the band, and when the band was removed, the clot moved and killed him. We were heartbroken. It's the only time I ever saw my husband cry.

Abby, until people who attach these bands realize the problem and try to improve the situation, I would respectfully suggest to anyone purchasing a young bird to have the band removed immediately while it is still loose on the leg.

STILL MISS HIM IN VANCOUVER, B.C.

DEAR ABBY: I am a college tennis coach. Last month our state championship fell on the same Saturday as my girlfriend's brother's wedding. The wedding was scheduled for 4 p.m. at a small church, which was about a 30-minute drive from where the tournament was to take place.

The tournament finally ended at 3:30 so I decided to drive directly to the wedding in my tennis clothes.

I arrived at the church door and asked the mother of the groom (my girlfriend's mother) if it would be OK if I went into the church and sat in the back. I apologized for my appearance and explained that I had rushed over directly from the tennis tournament. She didn't say a word — she just looked at me in amazement. (I guess you could say I was snubbed.)

Abby, I know I wasn't appropriately dressed for the occasion, but if I had showered and changed clothes, I would have missed the ceremony. Was I wrong?

IN THE DOGHOUSE DEAR IN: Your intentions were good, but your judgment was poor.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (33 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 147, Mount Morris, Ill. 61051.

Fear of contracting AIDS clarified

By NYU MEDICAL CENTER
Despite the increasing numbers of people with AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome), there is no evidence the disease is spread through casual contact, say physicians at New York University Medical Center.

"Scientists have been studying AIDS transmission for seven years, and they have not discovered any instances in which the disease was spread through casual contact at work, at school, or by living in the same house," said Dr. Roger Wetherbee, clinical assistant professor of medicine, and director of the infection surveillance program at University Hospital. "Fears about contracting AIDS through casual contact are unwarranted."

The virus which causes AIDS is called HIV (human immune deficiency virus). It affects the body's immune system and leaves a person susceptible to a variety of life-threatening, opportunistic infections and certain cancers. HIV is present in blood, semen, and certain body fluids, such as saliva, tears and vaginal secretions.

While the disease it causes can be devastating, the virus itself is quite fragile.

"HIV does not survive long outside living tissue and is destroyed by any number of commonly used, readily available processes," said the NYU infection-control officer. Among these: exposure to hot water (135 degrees Fahrenheit) for 10 minutes (for example, in a dishwasher or clothes washer); to the steam and chemicals used in dry cleaning; to chemicals used to sterilize dental and medical equipment; to household disinfectant solutions, such as hydrogen peroxide, rubbing alcohol, Lysol or household bleach; and to germicidal skin cleansers used in hand-washing.

"Some people have far-fetched ideas about how AIDS is spread," said Wetherbee.

"You do not get AIDS from dishes, doorknobs, or toilet seats," emphasized Wetherbee. "The disease is not transmitted through the air or by inanimate objects — as are some forms of the common cold and influenza." He explained that HIV also is not spread through the bites of, or contact with, insects or animals; or through food or water.

Beach party movies popular again

What do sand, sea, bathing suits and videorecorders have in common?

Beach party movies, which were the rage in the late '50s and '60s, are making a big comeback today via the magic of videotape. The movies, which combine a therle of young love with idyllic seaside scenery, surfing and "daring" beach attire that today seems very tame, are undergoing a renaissance.

According to Video Magazine, the beach movies now available on videotape include:

"Gidget," 1959, RCA-Columbia; "Where the Boys Are," 1960, MGM-UA; "Gidget Goes Hawaiian," 1961, RCA-Columbia; "Gidget Goes To Rome," 1963, RCA-Columbia; "Beach Party," 1963, Warner; "Muscle Beach Party," 1964 and "Bikini Beach," 1964, Embassy; "Beach Blanket Bingo," 1965, HBO-Cannon; "How To Stuff A Wild Bikini," 1965, Warner. There is even a beach thriller: "The Horror of Party Beach," 1963, Prism.

The older beach movies are becoming so popular that a new sand and surf epic called "Back to the Beach" is about to be released. It features Annette Funicello and Frankie Avalon, who starred together in a number of beach movies during the 1960s. A quarter-century later, Funicello and Avalon are returning to the shore and the screen as the parents of Lori Loughlin, a latter-day beach bunny.

What has made the beach movies so popular again? One fan in his 40s comments: "You have nice young people running around and doing nice things. What's not to like?"

Food from America, like blue jeans and rock music, is in PARIS (AP) — American cuisine is hot in this land of fabled food snobs. Some French people are even giving up chocolate eclairs for fudge brownies and boeuf bourguignon for beef enchiladas.

Restaurants featuring chili, barbecued ribs and apple brown Betty are springing up faster than they can be counted, while industrial bakers compete to produce the most authentic chocolate chip cookie.

Food from America — like blue jeans and rock music — is in.

"American food is an alternative to the typical French eating experience," said Marshal Backlar, the owner of a California-style American restaurant near the Champs Elysees. "We take the best from different ethnic cuisines and blend them."

Backlar, a Los Angeles native who once produced movies, said his clientele was 90 percent French.

"Though they still eat ribs with a knife and fork, they enjoy the freedom of being able to order what they want, and not necessarily the three- or four-course meal," he said.

The most popular items on his menu? T-bone steaks, cheeseburgers and brownies.

The growing popularity of American foods has not escaped French food manufacturers.

Cookie companies compete to make the "most authentic" chocolate chip cookie, which they advertise on prime-time television in a typical New England setting.

Ice-cream producers have introduced new flavors and textures which they call "American-style." Even the fancy French caterer Le Notre has launched its own version of the chocolate chip cookie, presented in red, white and blue shop windows against drawings of the Statue of Liberty.

And thanks to a recent spate of cookbooks showing how to prepare typical American dishes using ingredients available here, French cooks will be able to make their own clam chowder and pecan pie.

Two new cookbooks appeared recently: "La Cuisine Americaine," by Julee Rosso and Sheila Lukins, owners of "The Silver Palate," a New York gourmet caterer, and "Le Grand Livre de la Cuisine Americaine" by the Paris-based Americans Constance Borde and Sheila Malovany-Chevalier. Both are selling well, the publishers report.

French cooks, who once had to scour Paris for corn chips and chili powder, find everything they need at "The General Store," the first American specialty foods boutique in Paris.

It has been open for only a year, and owners Elaine and Jean-Pierre Bourbeillon say they have trouble keeping up with the rising demand for buckwheat pancake mix, cranberry juice and Tex-Mex fixings.

Activities planned for contestants

Summer activities for contestants for the Howard County Fair Queen pageant will include a coke party, luncheon, swimming party, a seminar on poise, grooming, fashion and color coordination.

High school or college girls attending school in Howard County, or an adjoining county, are eligible to enter the pageant.

The contestant who sells the most memberships for the Friends of the Fair organization will be awarded a cash prize of $100. The contest is not a prerequisite for competing in the pageant. All contestants will be guests at the Friends of the Fair fish fry.

Entry forms may be obtained at the Chamber of Commerce, Cowtown or Joy's Hallmark.

Ann Weaver is general chairman of the pageant and LaVerne Gaskins is coordinator of summer activities.

Teri Quinones discusses the Wall

The Chapter of American Gold Star Mothers met Thursday morning at the home of Odell Turner, president.

Teri Quinones, secretary/treasurer for the Wall Committee, presented the latest information for the presentation of the Vietnam Veterans replica of the Wall, which will be displayed in Big Spring Sept. 30 through Oct. 6.

Quinones said that donations are still being accepted and are needed. They may be sent to The Wall, P. O. Box 2854, Big Spring, Texas 79721. The September 17 meeting will be at the home of Edna Peacock, 3623 Dixon.

Lauderdale family hosts reunion

The family of Mrs. Elizabeth Lauderdale met for their annual reunion at the home of Mrs. Bea Hodges in Big Spring on June 6 and 7.

Ten of Mrs. Lauderdale's 13 children were present along with 18 grandchildren, 30 great-grandchildren, 14 great-great grandchildren and other relatives and friends — 110 registered during the two days.

Those attending were: Mrs. Lauderdale, Bead Hodges, Sharon Aguirre, Jerry Don and John David, Jerry and Evelyn Bilbery, Dick and Dot Lauderdale, Janice Wagner, Doug and Malley Wagner and Lindsay, Ron and Sherry Robey, Scott, Mandy and Zack, all of Big Spring.

Blood drive scheduled June 20

A blood drive, sponsored by the United Blood Service of San Angelo, will be conducted at the Big Spring Mall June 20 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

United Blood Service is a non-profit organization which serves the blood needs of 35 West Texas hospitals, including Scenic Mountain Medical Center, Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital and the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

To meet the patients' needs, United Blood Service must collect 1500 pints of blood a month.

Blood drives are conducted every second Monday from 12-5 p.m. at the Dora Roberts Health Center.

Lioness Club installs new members

Shirley Shroyer and Mary Grinnan were installed as new members of the Lioness Club of Howard County on June 15, conducted at the First Methodist Church.

Melinda Hernandez presented "West Side Community Day Care Center — How it operates."

Members also decided that the money raised from ice cream sales at the Spring Fest will go into a charity fund for local organizations during the year.

Next meeting will be July 20.

Coahoma class of '67 to reunite

The Coahoma High School Class of 1967 will host its 20-year reunion on June 20.

Teachers, family and friends of the class are invited to a reception at the Coahoma Elementary Cafeteria from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Father shot

Donations, cards pour in for Polish shooting victim

WITOLD WROBLEWSKI
... working for son

STONY BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — A Pole who came to America to earn money for his son's medical expenses and was shot in the face while working a 20-hour day says he's overwhelmed by the support he's received from across the nation.

"Because of America's generosity and help and warm wishes, I feel I'm going to forget these bad men who shot me," Witold Wroblewski said Wednesday through an interpreter.

Wroblewski, 38, with a plastic brace jutting out from his face, four metal screws holding his jaw together and a patch over an eye, described how he came to the United States seven months ago to earn enough money for an operation so his 7-year-old son, Wojtek, can walk.

"I am so proud of my son. I always believed I could help him and I wanted to help him so bad," he said.

On June 4, Wroblewski was shot as he worked in a gas station in rural Riverhead, about 73 miles east of New York City.

A fund started after the shooting has raised more than $40,000 to help Wojtek get an operation, said Bruce Sanford, manager of the Riverhead Savings Bank, which started the fund along with WLIG-TV Channel 55.

Donations ranged from $1 to $1,000. People also sent cards and letters of encouragement, Sanford said.

A Philadelphia hospital has offered to perform surgery that Wroblewski's son might require, police said.

Recalling the attack, Wroblewski said a gunman approached him as he stood behind an all-glass door that was kept shut at night with a security chain.

"I opened the door and the guy just started shooting," he said. "He was not asking for money."

About 50 shotgun pellets struck Wroblewski's face, head, neck and chest, said Dr. David J. Kreis Jr. of University Hospital at Stony Brook, where Wroblewski remains in stable condition.

Reagan tape used despite objections

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The radio station that got President Reagan to record a promotional endorsement for "the 50,000-watt blowtorch of the South" says it will continue broadcasting the plug despite White House objections.

Other stations in Nashville say they'd have ethical problems with such a ploy, but the news director at WSM-AM, a country music station famous for its 62-year broadcast of the Grand Ole Opry, says it's all in good fun.

WSM newswoman Liz White obtained the recording during a May 15 White House news conference for regional reporters.

Ms. White handed Reagan a slip of paper and pleaded with him to read it, saying her boss wouldn't let her return to Nashville without the endorsement.

As other reporters groaned, Reagan chuckled, paused, then read: "I'm Ronald Reagan. Whenever I'm in Nashville, I listen to radio 650, WSM, the 50,000-watt blowtorch of the South."

He read the promotion a second time when Ms. White said she hadn't captured it all on tape.

"A lot of people called up and liked the fact that somebody actually asked him to do it," news director Jerry Dahmen said Wednesday.

The day after the news conference, White House Deputy Press Secretary Albert R. Brashear called Dahmen and asked him not to use the material except as a news item.

Dahmen went ahead anyway. "He (Reagan) had every right to say no" to the request, he said. "I think a little humor and good-naturedness ... with Reagan and reporters ... lightens up his day."

While Dahmen defended the station's use of the promotion and the way it was obtained, officials at other Nashville stations said they would not have done the same thing.

"I felt like it was a bush-league job," said Eric Marshall, program manager at country music station WSIX. "It was not professional at all and I felt like the reporter seized the opportunity to sensationalize something that was really not a sensation to begin with."

"We would not use something like that here. I think it shed a negative light on Nashville," Marshall said.

Judy McNutt, program director for rock music station WKDF, said she thought reporters ought to avoid doing promotional work.

"I just think certain kinds of behavior are expected and when you're in a press conference kind of situation you're not expected to have a promotional hat on. If you're a reporter, that's what you're supposed to be doing," she said.

Thursday Notes

Only for the quick wristed

Attention video athletes.

What, you ask, is a video athlete? I'm not sure I can answer that either. I assume it's a guy (or gal) who's quick with his wrists and free with his quarters, who probably glows a little from all that close-up, soaked-up radioactivity.

But this note is for video athletes, and hopefully they know who they are.

Attention video athletes. On the weekend of June 26-28 (also known as rodeo weekend), video athletes at over 300 Bally's Aladdin's Castles nationwide will vie for a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records. Big Spring video athletes can take a shot at immortality at the Aladdin's Castle at Big Spring Mall.

The tournament is open to all players and features competition in over 100 of the best games of all time, including classics such as Pac-Man and the latest, technologically advanced titles. The top scores will be submitted for publication in the Guinness Book of World Records, within pages of the fattest man who ever lived.

Another possible prize — high scorers may be asked to join the U.S. National Video Game Team and represent the U.S. in international play.

Half of every player's entry fee will be donated to the March of Dimes. Interested competitors can register at Aladdin's Castle in Big Spring Mall.

We're happy to report that Stanton football player Derek Sorley signed a letter of intent to attend Bethany College in Lindsborg, Kansas, and play football.

The 6-2, 175-pound Sorley will also participate in track, and plans to major in business administration and management at Bethany. Sorley was on the track and football teams at Stanton for four years. In his senior year he was named All-District in football and basketball, and set a new school record in the high jump with a 6-6 leap.

Bethany head football coach Ted Kessinger said that "Derek has indicated an attitude which encourages our football staff. We are looking to him as a positive addition to our football program."

Last season, Bethany College won the sixth Kansas Conference football championship they've won in Kessinger's 12 years there.

Derek is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Sorley.

Three Big Spring High baseball players, two of whom graduated this year, recently completed a two-week course of intensive baseball training at the Mickey Owen Baseball School in Miller, Missouri.

Seniors Chad Wash and Matt Garrett and present Steer Danny Ward received specialized training in all phases of the game. One of the coaches at the camp was Steers assistant baseball coach Bobby Doe, who attended the camp as a youngster.

A barbecue dinner and dance to benefit the Coahoma United Girls Softball Association will be next Monday starting at 7:30 p.m.

The dinner and dance will be at Pardner Well Service, on the north service road in Sand Springs, east of Mt. View Trailer Park.

The dancing is scheduled to start at 8:30 p.m., with the Skyways Band playing the music. There will be a hayride leaving the Coahoma ball park after closing ceremonies for the softball league.

The price is $5 for adults and $3 for children under 12. Tickets can be purchased from softball girls or at the door. The Comanche Trail Muzzle Loaders Association will have arts and crafts on display and for sale.

Big Spring Bowl-A-Rama will host a Fathers Day No-Tap Doubles Tournament this Saturday and Sunday. Fathers bowl free, and will just pay for the prize fund.

Squad times will be at 3, 5, and 7 p.m. on Saturday, and 1 and 3 p.m. on Sunday. Semi-finals begin at 5 p.m. For more information, call Bowl-A-Rama at 267-7484.

The First Annual Chicano Invitational Bowling Tournament will be at Big Spring Bowl-A-Rama July 18-19.

Entry forms may be obtained at the Bowl-A-Rama. Entry deadline is July 5. The tournament is open to all ABC members.

The team of Natalie Peurifoy, Doris Stevenson and Georgie Newsom shot a one-under-par 36 to capture the Comanche Trail Ladies Golf Association's weekly nine-hole golf play Monday.

The team of Harriett Richardson, Jayne Ortega and Betty Ray Coffee finished second, and the quartet of Ruby Honea, Margaret Burdett, Patsy Sharpnack and Janie Ringener finished third.

In the Big Lake Couples Tournament last weekend, local couple Don and Roxie Belew finished third in the third flight, one stroke behind two teams tied for first.

The annual Concho Yacht Club Summer Regatta will be June 27-28 at the Twin Buttes Reservoir in San Angelo.

The regatta consists of three races, two on Saturday and one on Sunday. All classes of sailboats are invited. Three boats will make a class, and handicap classes will be sailed under Portsmouth ratings.

There will be a barbecue dinner after Saturday's last race. For more information, call Scott Cavness at 949-5028; Larry Jackson at 655-1655; or David Madden at 653-6885.

Cooper state champions

AUSTIN (AP) — Behind an offensive barrage led by Chris Feris and Robert McAdams, Abilene Cooper overcame a 2-1 deficit and exploded for a 13-3 victory Wednesday over San Antonio MacArthur for the Class 5A state high school baseball championship.

Cooper, 33-3, used back-to-back 3-run innings and a 6-run sixth inning to end the game prematurely by way of the 10-run rule. MacArthur ended the season with a 28-6 record.

Philip Carpenter's single in the bottom of the sixth brought home Jay Estes and Chris Feris with the final two runs.

Cooper, making its first state trip since 1967, batted around in the sixth inning and worked two MacArthur pitchers for two doubles, a single and three walks.

The Cougars took the lead with three runs in the third, then added three more runs in the fourth on hits by McAdams and Danny Whitford.

Feris led the Cougars, going 3-for-3 with two doubles and two runs batted in. McAdams also doubled twice.

Curt Putsche doubled twice for MacArthur.

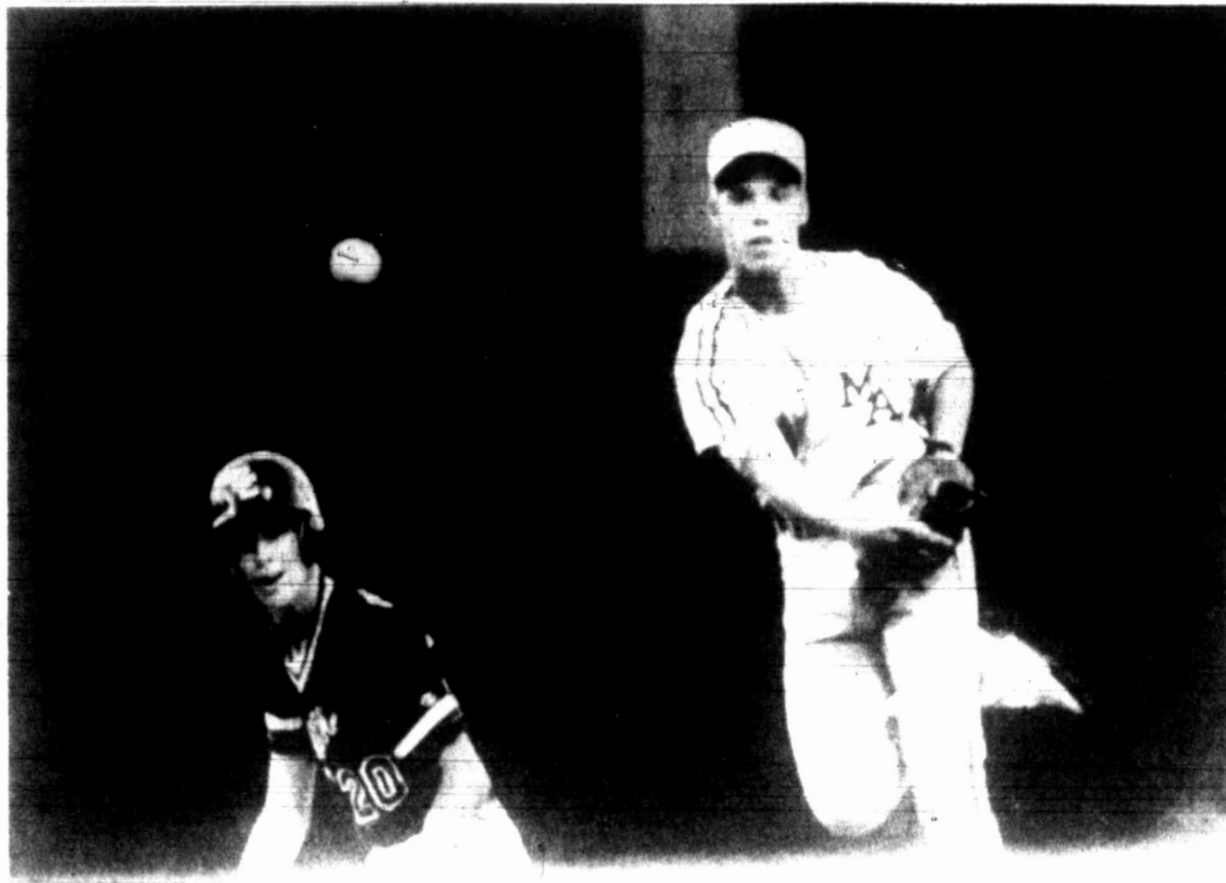

Burton 7, High Island 4
Darvis Watson pitched six innings of near-perfect baseball in leading the Burton Panthers to the Class A state championship with a 7-4 win over High Island Wednesday morning at the University Interscholastic League State Baseball Tournament.

Watson, a sophomore lefthander, flirted with a no-hitter for six innings until Todd Kahla tripled to right to lead off the bottom of the seventh. Until then, Watson (10-2) had allowed only two base runners to reach on two walks.

In the Panthers' 11-1 semi-final win over LeFors, Dwayne Mathis pitched only the second no-hitter in Class A tournament history. Mathis came in to get the final two outs for Burton (26-2) after Watson gave up a triple and two bases on balls.

San Augustine 6, Hooks 5
Michael Moore's run-scoring single in the fourth inning gave the San Augustine Wolves a 6-5 win over Hooks Wednesday in the Class 3A championship game of the University Interscholastic League State Baseball Tournament.

and committing seven errors. Both teams combined for 11 errors over the course of the game.

Hooks jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning after Phil Thomas led off the game with a single and was followed by Shane Halter's double and another single by Mike Smith.

The Wolves scored two in the bottom of the inning without benefit of a hit and thanks mainly to three Hooks errors.

San Augustine manufactured its own runs in the second to grab a 4-3 lead on Steve Hughes' double that scored Scott Wilburn and Michael Canton.

Brenham 12, Fort Worth Brewer 3
Brenham exploded for two 5-run innings and crushed Fort Worth Brewer 12-3 Wednesday to capture the Class 4A state high school baseball championship for the second straight year.

Brewer pitcher Ronnie Powers, whose victory in the semifinals gave him a state-record 22 victories in one season, lasted only three innings.

Six Brenham players had two hits apiece, as the Cubs struck for a tournament-high 13 hits against Powers and two other Brewer pitchers.

Brenham finished the season

28-2, and Brewer ended 25-13.

Trailing 2-0, Brenham tied the score in the third. Michael Watts led off with a triple and scored on John Finke's triple. Matt Fisher followed with an RBI double, and Powers was through. He returned in the sixth after the Cubs had posted their second straight five-run inning.

Michael Watts and Jon Peters combined for the win. Watts (9-1) started and allowed two hits in four innings before giving way to Peters, who was the complete-game winner in the Cubs' 5-2 over Robstown in the semifinals.

Golfer thinks at least 12 have shot at Open crown

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Payne Stewart believes that a select dozen players have a legitimate chance to win the 87th U.S. Open Golf Championship. For diplomatic reasons, he won't name the other 11.

But a total of 156 players — 154 pros and two amateurs — tee off today on the Olympic Club's par-70 Lake course. All have their dreams, if not realistic hopes, of claiming the title.

In 1955, on the same course, a club pro from Iowa, Jack Fleck, beat four-time champion Ben Hogan in a playoff to pull off one of the greatest upsets in Open history.

The list of those considering themselves contenders with good reason this year runs from A to Z — from Paul Azinger, leading money winner on the PGA tour this year, to 1984 Open champ Fuzzy Zoeller.

"We're all keyed up when it's U.S. Open time," said defending champion Ray Floyd, confident that he's regained the putting touch which he seemed to have lost early this year.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Greg

Norman of Australia, and Americans Stewart, Lanny Wadkins, Tom Kite, Ben Crenshaw, Hal Sutton, Bob Tway and Larry Mize are the players whose names have come up most often in this week's talk of Open favorites.

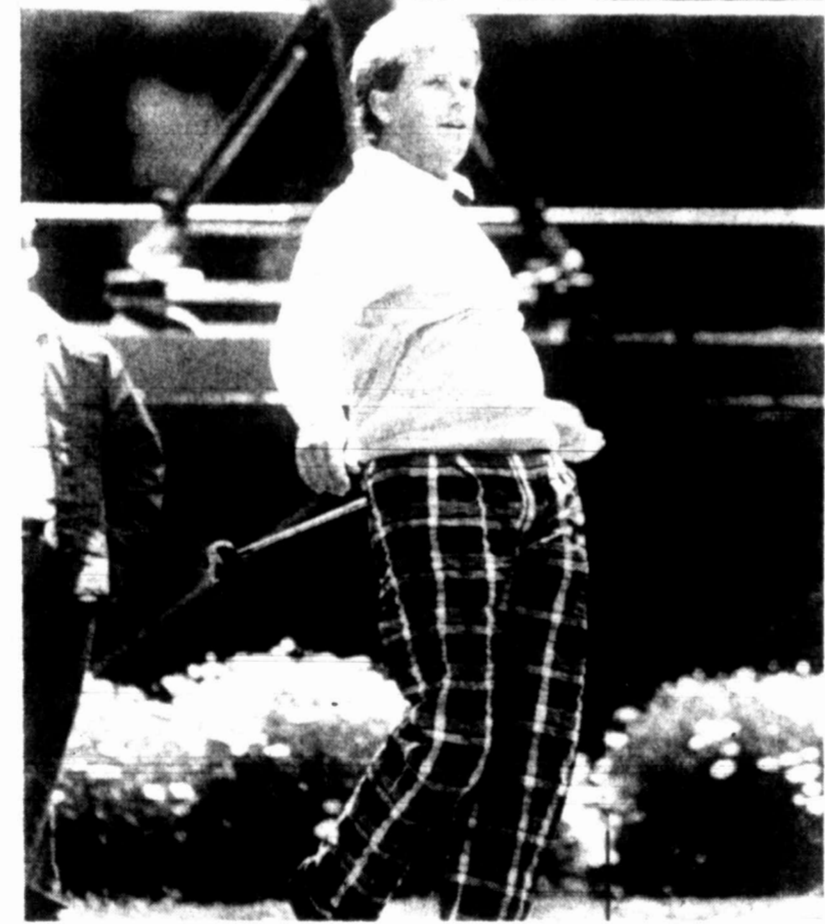

Those players all are seeking their first title in the event. Floyd and the other former champions in the field — including four-time winner Jack Nicklaus, 1982 winner Tom Watson and Zoeller — all have had disappointing 1987 seasons so far.

"I don't know why. If I knew, I wouldn't be doing it," Nicklaus said of his struggling play.

"Stewart is a wonderfully well-rounded player. He's going to be a favorite every time he plays for a couple of years," Floyd said of the 30-year-old from Missouri who won the Bay Hill Classic in March and has finished in the top 10 of five other 1987 events.

"I think I should be in contention come Sunday," Stewart said Wednesday after his final practice round for the Open. "I think the

Ex Royals manager dead at 51

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Knowing Dick Howser was near death did little to ease the grief of his friends.

"No matter how you prepare for this day, when it actually happens, it's a shock," George Brett said. "You just hate to see him go."

Wednesday afternoon, 11 months after doctors partially removed a malignant tumor from the left side of his brain, the former Kansas City Royals manager died at age 51.

Howser's condition had deteriorated rapidly this spring after a short-lived effort to return as manager of the team he led to victory in the 1985 World Series.

Although obviously weakened by three operations, Howser was there to greet the Royals when camp opened. He resigned three days later.

"I just couldn't get it done," he said. "It wouldn't be fair to the team."

A public memorial service was scheduled today in Kansas City. A funeral will be held Saturday in Tallahassee, Fla., at the Fellowship Baptist Church. Burial will be in the Tallahassee Memory Garden.

Howser is survived by his wife, Nancy, and twin daughters, Jill and Jana.

"This is a sad day for baseball. Dick Howser was one of the great men of our game," Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said.

Howser's long fight against cancer was closely followed by baseball fans throughout the world. The tumor was discovered just one week after Howser, suffering persistent headaches and lapses in memory, managed the American League to victory in the 1986 All-Star Game.

Doctors performed three operations in a vain attempt to halt the disease.

"It's a sad day. We all have heavy hearts," Royals General Manager John Schuerholz said. "Even though we've known this was coming, everyone still feels sad. His attitude always was 'Let's get it done.' That is the attitude he has left with the team; that's the attitude he has left with the players."

Howser's mother, Marjorie Howser, of Palm Springs, Fla., urged her son's friends to put aside their grief.

"It's going to be a great loss to us, but I don't think he would want us to be sad or grieve a long time," she said. "He enjoyed life. He got the fullest out of every day."

An undersized shortstop in the 1960s, Howser was known as a scrappy battler throughout his careers as player and manager.

After 10 years as a New York Yankees coach, he became head baseball coach at Florida State University, where he had been an All-American player.

In 1980, the Yankees made him their manager, and he guided the team to 103 victories and the American League East title. He won the AL West title with the Royals in 1984 and reached the pinnacle of his career when Kansas City came back from a 3-1 deficit to win the 1985 World Series over the St. Louis Cardinals in seven games.

"I'm going to try to remember him standing on that podium (after winning the 1985 series)," said Brett, the Royals' all-star third baseman. "That was probably the happiest I had ever seen Dick. Or maybe I'll remember him the day we won our first playoff game."

Howser's major league managerial record was 507-425, and he was proud of his .544 winning percentage.

"A manager's value to a team is underrated," he said in an interview in 1985. "I'm never going to be one of those who sits tongue-in-cheek and says anybody can manage a big league ballclub."

Catcher does old team in

By The Associated Press
Mike Fitzgerald just kept on doing what he does so well against the New York Mets. Bryn Smith simply did something he thought he might never do again.

Fitzgerald and Smith were key figures as the Montreal Expos routed the Mets 9-1 Wednesday night. The Expos are 4-2 against the Mets this year.

"I'm tired of beating up on the Mets," said Fitzgerald, who was New York's regular catcher in 1984 before being included in the trade which sent Gary Carter to the Mets. "I wish I could do some of that against some of the other clubs."

What Fitzgerald did Wednesday was hit a grand slam and up his average against his former team to .295 with three home runs and 25 runs batted in. Against the rest of the NL, he is hitting .220 with 14 homers and 95 RBI.

Padres 8, Dodgers 7
San Diego, which had won only 15 games a week ago, now has won 20. The Padres' fifth consecutive victory also was the Dodgers' third straight loss.

Braves 6, Giants 1
Slumping San Francisco lost its fifth game in a row — did anybody say June Swoon? — as Rick Mahler retired 18 of the 19 batters he faced and Dale Murphy homered for Atlanta.

In the seventh inning, Giants Manager Roger Craig brought in right-hander Randy Bockus to face Murphy and sent left-handed reliever Keith Comstock from the mound to right field. Murphy hit the first pitch over the right field fence and Craig then removed Bockus and brought Comstock back to pitch.

Sister Joseph Maynard of Joliet, Ill., sits in the stands with a Cubs visor on top of her habit during Wednesday's game between the Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies.

Willie McGee tripled, Terry Pendleton was hit by a pitch and Curt Ford grounded into a fielder's choice for the only St. Louis run.

Catcher Mike LaValiere, a former Cardinal, had two RBI with a sacrifice fly and a single.

Reds 9, Astros 1

Kal Daniels had four hits and Tracy Jones hit a three-run homer in a 19-hit attack for Cincinnati, which held on to first place in the West. The Astros, who had beaten the visitors the previous two nights, could have taken over the top spot with a victory.

But the Reds got strong pitching from Ron Robinson, in his first start of the season, and Bill Landrum, who earned his first major league save. And the Cincinnati bats were red hot as every starter had at least one hit. It was the Reds' second 19-hit game this season in the Astrodome.

"You don't ever expect to come here and get 19 hits," Manager Pete Rose said. "But all those hits were ropes, we hit the ball hard."

Cubs 5, Phillies 3

Jamie Moyer, 7-4, won for the fifth time in his last six decisions and, in that same stretch, he has not walked a batter in five games. Moyer allowed six hits in eighth innings and struck out seven before Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his major league-leading 17th save.

"I know my changeup was working because the hitters were always trying to guess when I'd throw the fastball," Moyer said. "But my problem has been and still is to get the change over without walking a lot of batters."

Keith Moreland drove in three runs and Andre Dawson had three straight singles for host Chicago.

Pirates 4, Cardinals 1
Rick Reuschel pitched an eight-hitter for his first win in St. Louis since 1980. Reuschel, 5-3, struck out one and walked one. He carried a shutout into the ninth inning, but

Kansas City blasts Oakland, 10-5

By The Associated Press
In their time of despair, the Kansas City Royals tried to overcome their sadness by doing what came most naturally — playing baseball. Five hours after hearing that former Manager Dick Howser had died following a year-long fight with brain cancer, the Royals beat the Oakland Athletics 10-5 Wednesday night.

"Once the game starts, you have to be able to put aside everything else," said George Brett, one of Howser's closest friends on the team. "I thought about it occasionally. I think we had to go out and put Dick out of our mind."

Brett, Bo Jackson and Frank White hit home runs, helping Bret Saberhagen become the first 12-game winner in the major leagues.

"Before the game, I was going out there thinking, 'Maybe this one is for him?'" Saberhagen said. "I don't know if other guys in here were thinking that or not. We just went out to play a good game tonight."

The crowd of 26,780 at Royals Stadium observed a minute of silence in memory of Howser, who began spring training as Kansas City's manager. The Royals will wear armbands in tribute to Howser starting July 3, the day the team had previously planned to retire his uniform No. 10.

"In the moments that you're not busy, you think about what's going on," White said. "But I don't think we went into the game with that idea (winning for Howser)."

Saberhagen and Brett, who helped carry Howser and the Royals to the World Series championship in 1985, again led the Royals.

Saberhagen, 12-1, gave up seven hits in his eighth complete game. He struck out seven and walked two.

Brett, who had three hits and scored three runs, put Kansas City ahead 6-5 in the fifth inning with his second homer of the season.

Red Sox 4, Indians 0

Roger Clemens pitched a four-hitter and struck out a season-high 12 for his first victory in three weeks as Boston won in Cleveland.

Clemens, 5-6, pitched his third shutout and sixth complete game of the season. He raised his career record against the Indians to 5-0. Clemens had gone 0-2 in three starts since beating Cleveland 4-0 on May 27.

Brewers 8, Twins 5

Robin Yount hit a two-run homer and Milwaukee ended a 10-game losing streak against Minnesota in a brawl-interrupted afternoon.

After Gene Larkin's home run gave the visiting Twins a 5-4 lead in the top of the sixth inning, reliever Mark Clear hit Steve Lombardozzi with the next pitch. Lombardozzi tried to charge Clear, but was restrained by home plate umpire

Ken Kaiser.

Tigers 3, Blue Jays 2

Lou Whitaker homered on the first pitch of the game and Matt Nokes also hit a solo home run, leading Detroit past Toronto before a crowd of 46,227, the second-largest at Exhibition Stadium.

Yankees 4, Orioles 3

Gary Ward hit a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the seventh inning and Dave Winfield followed with an RBI single, leading New York over visiting Baltimore.

Angels 6, Rangers 1

Mike Witt pitched four-hit ball for eight innings and California parlayed four Texas errors into four unearned runs.

Witt, 8-5, won for the third time in four decisions. Greg Minton pitched a hitless ninth.

Mariners 2, White Sox 0

Scott Bankhead pitched four-hit ball for 8 2/3 innings and Seattle sent visiting Chicago to its fourth straight loss and 15th defeat in 18 games.

Texas football put on two years probation

AUSTIN (AP)—The NCAA's announcing its first-time penalties against the University of Texas football program was almost therapeutic for a team that had worried for months about its fate. Coach David McWilliams says.

The waiting ended Wednesday when the NCAA put the school on two years probation, stripped it of five scholarships for 1988-89 and reduced the number of official visits prospective recruits may make to the UT campus.

UT officials and coaches throughout the Southwest Conference labeled the penalties — as well as UT's violations — mild. The penalties were the first levied by the NCAA against the Longhorn football program, although the school was placed on probation without sanctions in 1964 and 1982.

Violations noted by the NCAA included excessive entertainment by a school booster and other improper recruiting contacts, the sale of complimentary football tickets by 10 players, comments to prospective recruits that they could expect special benefits, and loans and cash for athletes' personal use, including a car repair loan made by a former recruiting coordinator. The penalties would reduce the number of football scholarships that may be awarded in 1988-89 from 25 to 20 and the number of recruiting visits in the coming academic year from 95 to 75. Possible television appearances or bowl games won't be affected.

A report by the NCAA Committee on Infractions said the probation period could be reduced to one year if the university implements 13 changes it proposed at a June 3 meeting before the committee in Kansas City.

The penalties, which also include a public reprimand and censure, were announced two weeks after the Kansas City hearing, at which the university responded to 51 alleged rules violations cited by the NCAA after its 18-month investigation of the football program. The probe covered the years 1980 through 1986.

The NCAA said a significant number of rules violations were found but that, with a single exception, "none of the serious violations involved the recruitment of prospective student-athletes, and it does not appear that the violations resulted in a significant competitive advantage for the University of Texas." The NCAA's report said one finding involved a serious violation of recruiting rules and the gift of "very substantial, improper extra benefits to a very talented enrolled student-athlete."

The organization said other violations, although less serious, were sufficient in number "to raise questions about the adequacy of athletics department administrative policies and practices."

McWilliams, an assistant under Coach Fred Akers, was mentioned as having arranged for or provided small amounts of cash for players' personal use, as well as the loan of game money for a player to go home. McWilliams was hired in December when Akers was fired after 10 years as the Longhorn coach.

McWilliams said that he, the coaching staff and players "have all dedicated ourselves to be sure we do not make these or other mistakes in the future."

Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said he thought the NCAA's action was fair.

winner will be a so-called veteran, someone who's been there before."

Stewart, second to Zazinger in Tour money winnings this year, has been "there" before. He held a two-stroke lead with seven holes to play in last year's Open, but Floyd won the title with the help of two late birdies while Stewart finished sixth at New York's Shinnecock

Hills course. "I think that experience helped me learn how not to beat myself," Stewart said. "I think I beat myself in the Open last year. I missed a putt I'd been making all week."

Sutton, who tied Lee Trevino for fourth last year, was in the nine-way tie for the lead which existed at one point on the final day. "I pushed two drives to the right, which isn't like me," Sutton recalled. "I could say I should have won it, but there are eight other guys who can say that, so I won't. I'll just think it."

The two-man amateur contingent in this year's Open is the smallest since 1895, when 10 pros and one amateur played in the very first championship. Buddy Alexander, as the United States Amateur champion, is in the Open by invitation, while University of North Carolina golfer Greg Parker made the field through qualifying play.

Alexander and Parker obviously are not on Payne Stewart's 12-man list of Open favorites. The last amateur to win the Open was John Goodman in 1933.

China Spring 6, Three Rivers 0
Johnny Jackson hurled a one-hitter to give China Spring a 6-0 win over Three Rivers and the Class 2A state championship Wednesday at the University Interscholastic League State Baseball Tournament.

Jackson, a sophomore righthander, raised his record to 10-1 on the year and had a perfect game on line going into the seventh inning. His pitching opponent, Michael Zamzow spoiled the bid with a single.

Jackson did not walk a batter through seven innings and struck out only two. The win was the 24th straight for China Spring (24-2) after they dropped their first two games of the season.

Gary Henry, Dino Mazzola and David Stone had two hits apiece for China Spring, which was making its first appearance in the state tournament.

Henry, the Cougars' leading hitter with a .522 average, had run scoring singles in the first and fifth innings.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 19, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Problems confronting you can be handled easily and with a smile. Dealing with your home life is the first priority, studying and pursuing ambitions come second.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure your basic securities are strong before entering into new interests. Always check the facts first.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Give serious consideration to a plan your mate has for achieving goals. Consider whether or not new projects have merit.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put financial affairs on the back burner for awhile. Concentrate on socializing, but spend money carefully.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Avoid entanglements in public affairs. Try to be efficient, and don't procrastinate.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't lose your temper over things you can't control. Enjoy a familiar amusement, but watch your budget.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find a new and different way to endear yourself to your loved one. Home conditions will improve considerably.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Avoid arguments concerning business affairs. An opportunity to achieve a goal arises, so don't miss it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Keep busy with planned activities, and don't change methods which have always worked well in the past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure you can afford the recreations you desire, but gain the approval of those who really count.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't get involved in an altercation between an outsider and a family member. Ignore demands made of you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You may miss out on something important if you don't stay near the phone. Confirm your alliances.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Schedule your time wisely, leaving space for recreation. Don't burn any bridges today, there may be a flood tomorrow.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will find it difficult to know whether to follow the head or the heart. A good education will help your child strike an equitable balance. This child should get much encouragement in all endeavors. Business success and a happy home life are just down the road.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Student accepts single fatherhood challenge

Editor's note: Sunday will be celebrated as Father's Day across the United States. The Herald is taking a look at two examples of fathers in atypical lifestyles. Another father's situation will be examined Friday.

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Being a father is a sometime under-appreciated responsibility — and being a single dad can be doubly difficult.

But for a single father with two young children working toward a nursing degree, the challenge is increased and time is a commodity that must be guarded carefully.

G. O. Gomez of Coahoma is in such a situation.

Presently pursuing an Associate Degree in Nursing at Howard College, he must juggle his classes with what he calls his "highest priorities" — his son G. O. III, 2, and his daughter Deborah, 1.

Parceling his time is his biggest difficulty.

"I like to spend time with them, but it's sometimes difficult to study with them jumping around all the time," he said. As a result, he sometimes rises at 4:30 a. m. in pursuit of quiet study time.

His unemployment compounds his challenges. He says that his parents help by allowing him and the children to live with them.

"They've been great," he said, adding "It's great that kids have Grandma around."

His burdens are assumed cheerfully, however.

"To be honest with you, I'm happy," he said. "I don't have to worry about the other person anymore. I can concentrate on the kids."

And the juggling act hasn't affected his schoolwork, either.

Gomez recently completed the Nurse's Assistant Program at the college — one of four honor graduates — project coordinator Carol Girvan said. She said the honor grads were chosen on their grades, attitude, clinical work, attendance, and punctuality.

Gomez is recently divorced; the decree was finalized this month. He is direct about the separation, saying, "She didn't want the responsibility. She said she wanted to go back to her old way of life."

Although his children are too young to understand the concept of divorce, Gomez says his son knows something is wrong. "Every once in a while, he'll look at me and say 'Where's Momma?'" he says. "All I can tell him is 'She's just gone, son,' and hope they understand when the time comes."

Still, with all the difficulties of single parenthood, Gomez thinks they — and he — are adjusting well.

He considers them fairly normal. "They're always on the go. It's difficult to slow them down," Gomez said. "They're as different as night and day. She's real happy-go-lucky, and he's the reflective one."

A typical day begins with 4:30 a. m. studying, before the children rise at 6:15. From there, it's on to the West-Side Day Care Center, which cares for the children while he is at classes that sometimes last until 5 p. m.

Most days, though, he picks the children up at around 3:30. Almost every evening, they have what he calls "our ritual," consisting of TV, dinner, and then a trip down to the store for an ice cream cone.

The important thing to Gomez is that he tries to "... reserve some time every day for the children."

But, like any parent, he needs some time to himself, and his mother helps in that regard.

"She'll keep them for a couple of hours every once in a while," he said. "It's nice to have a couple of hours to myself, so I can think things through." Still, the children remain his motivation.

"Once I get through with this (school), I ought to have the stability to take care of my children," he said.

Goetz

Symbol of victim's rights, or vigilante?

Judge criticized

NEW YORK (AP) — Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward criticized the judge who presided at subway gunman Bernhard Goetz's trial for changing his instructions to the jury after deliberations had begun.

The changes made in the jury "charge," or instructions on the law, by acting Supreme Court Justice Stephen Crane were widely seen as favorable to the defense, and the prosecution had objected vehemently to some of them.

"I have never, in all of my legal history, heard of a judge changing his charge to the jury three times in one case. He didn't go to my law school," Ward, a 1965 graduate of Brooklyn Law School, said Wednesday.

The changes had to do with the role of stress in the situation, the limits of self-defense, and inferences the jury could draw about the number of shots fired at one of the victims.

Ward, who had said earlier he didn't think Goetz's actions met the legal definition of self-defense, declined to criticize the verdict, saying, "The jury has spoken."

The public, meanwhile, continued to debate the significance of Tuesday's verdict, with some proclaiming it as a victory for the forces of law and order and others calling it an example of racism.

Goetz, a 39-year-old white electronics specialist, was acquitted of attempted murder and assault in the shooting of four black youths he said had intended to rob him on a subway train 2½ years ago. He was convicted of one weapons charge, for which he could avoid imprisonment or be sentenced to up seven years.

Legal experts said the verdict didn't expand the right to self-defense, sanction vigilantism or endorse a right to carry handguns.

"New York law is no different today than it was the day before the verdict," said Thomas Reppetto, director of the Citizens' Crime Commission.

"All a verdict of 'not guilty' means is that, in the opinion of 12 jurors, the prosecution failed to meet its evidentiary burden," said Joseph Jaffe, chairman of the state Bar Association's criminal justice committee. "It doesn't make law or break law, or set any precedent."

Public opinion was something else. All four young men shot by Goetz had a criminal record; Goetz's defenders claimed the verdict sent criminals a message, but some insisted that message was really a threat against blacks.

Officials react

NEW YORK (AP) — The acquittal of subway gunman Bernhard Goetz on attempted murder and assault charges does not mean the city will tolerate people who take the law into their own hands, the mayor said.

A lawyer for one of the four young men Goetz shot called the verdict "indescribably tragic" and good news for bigots, but the district attorney accepted the jury's decision and said it was not racist.

"Some may be apprehensive that the verdict is a signal that vigilantism will be condoned. They are wrong," Mayor Edward I. Koch said in Nashville, Tenn., where he was at a meeting of mayors.

"Vigilantism must be condemned and those who have engaged in such acts must be punished to the fullest extent of the law," he said after Tuesday's verdict.

Manhattan Borough President David Dinkins said he was dismayed by the verdict.

"I worry that it could have a profound effect on this city because it seems to be a clear and open invitation to vigilantism," he said.

Goetz shot four young men during an alleged robbery attempt aboard a subway train on Dec. 22, 1984. The youths said they were panhandling money to play video games they intended to burglarize.

"I feel very good because the jury did what was proper and appropriate," said defense attorney Barry Slotnick.

After the verdict, Goetz drove off in a limousine without speaking to reporters and returned to his Manhattan apartment. Messages left on an answering machine there were not returned.

Ronald Kuby, a lawyer for Darrell Cabey, the man most seriously wounded by Goetz's gunfire, said, "It's indescribably tragic that a white man can be acquitted of the shooting of these four black youths."

The verdict, he said, "gives aid and comfort to bigots everywhere."

"It's clear the jury succumbed to the passion and the prejudice which characterized this case from the first day," Kuby said.

The Manhattan district attorney, Robert Morgenthau, said the trial was fair, and he did not believe it was decided on racial grounds.

Morgenthau, whose office has pursued the Goetz prosecution for 2½ years and presented evidence against the subway gunman to two grand juries, expressed no regrets about the verdict.

Can a legend fade away?

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz walked out of a Manhattan courthouse convicted only of a weapons charge. Whatever sentence a judge imposes, Goetz is already in a different kind of prison: his own celebrity.

Scores of reporters, photographers and TV camera crews, joined by onlookers, were caught up in a near-riot when Goetz appeared outside the court and, aided by court officers, took off in a waiting limousine. There was screaming, there were minor injuries, there was a tumult.

And there was Goetz — eager, according to his lawyer Barry Slotnick, to "fade into the woodwork" and return to his work as an electrical technician.

Bernhard Goetz may want to resume his anonymous life amid Manhattan's millions, but that is an unlikely prospect for a man whose world will forever be tied to five gunshots in a subway train.

On Dec. 31, 1984, nine days after the shootings, Goetz told police that he wanted "more than anything, and I know the possibility is slim ... to be left alone and I'd, I'd like to live a normal life."

But that was before he became a symbol of urban crime, and a rallying point for those who believed that it was time for victims to take a stand.

Goetz, 39, was acquitted of attempted murder Tuesday, but a jury convicted him of a felony for having the unlicensed revolver he used to gun the youths down. He faces a minimum of no jail time at all to seven years in prison.

The legal system may have had its doubts about Goetz's shootings of four 19-year-old men he said were about to rob him, but the great majority of New Yorkers and Americans did not share the prosecutors' skepticism.

When "A Current Affair," a program on WNYW-TV, asked its viewers last week to register their opinions on the Goetz case, 3,349 said he was guilty — and 32,016 said he was innocent, and should go free.

There was worldwide interest in Goetz's fate from the first reports of the shootings through the last days of his trial. At the courthouse, more than 200 reporters, photographers and technicians awaited the verdict.

Nearby, street-wise entrepreneurs peddled T-shirts bearing the slogan, "He who takes, Goetz it." The price: $7.

In the end, even a jury that acquitted him of attempted murder, assault, reckless endangerment and three of four weapons counts asked for his autograph.

Throughout the trial, Goetz said nothing. After the verdict, he wanted to make a brief statement to the media, but the crush made it impossible.

Slotnick said Goetz wanted to thank his supporters, including those who contributed more than $30,000 to his defense fund, mostly in $5 and $10 chunks. He also wanted to tell reporters "to leave him alone."

"All he wants right now is to fade into the woodwork," Slotnick said.

It was suggested that Goetz might move, perhaps to Florida. He spoke bitterly of life in New York to police after his surrender, and prosecutor Gregory Waples had said during his summation that Goetz should have packed his bags if he could not stand the rigors of urban life.

Slotnick said he believed the jury was "offended" by Waples' suggestion, and added that Goetz had no plans to move away, and in fact had no plans "except to go back to work, something he has been unable to do for 2½ years."

"I'm glad it's over. The last two years have been hell," Goetz told the driver of the limousine that whisked him away from the courthouse chaos.

But there are many years to come, and legends die hard.

What is God like? What do you, in your deepest, most private thoughts conceive God to be like? What comes to your mind when you think about God? In one sense God is incomprehensible because He is infinite and we are finite. In another sense the Bible gives us much about what He is like for it is the revelation of GOD from GOD. Perfect love is when all the intent of the mind, all the secret working of the heart is lifted up into the love of God from a correct knowledge of God. The attributes, nature of God can be seen in these: God is self-existent (the word "origin" has to do with created things, not the creator), self-sufficient (nothing is necessary to Himself outside Himself), eternal (He "was and is, and shall always be"), infinite (He knows no bounds, He is measureless), immutable (He never differs from Himself), omniscience (possesses all knowledge, perfect knowledge, has no need to learn), omnipotent (almighty, possesses unlimited power, potency that is absolute), omnipresent (present every place, unlimited as to where He may be) and is infinite in His wisdom and understanding (the ability to devise perfect ends by the perfect means.)
