Pillpushers roll to 'Fest victory stand

Herald staff report

The Pillpushers of Professional Pharmacy won the fourth annual Summerfest games at Comanche Trail Park Saturday, edging their nearest competition by 5½ points, participants reported.

The Pillpushers amassed 97 points to secure the victory, followed by Freecom's Dynamic Ceramics team with 91½ points.

The Jailbirds of Danny's Bail Bonds — the winner of the event the past two years — placed third with 85 points. The Super Stars were fourth with 66 points, and Howard College Number 1 was fifth with 59 points.

The top three teams received trophies for their efforts, and trophies were also awarded to Coors' Jet Sweat — named Best Dressed — and Barber Glass & Mirror's Superstars, who won the Sportsmanship Award.

The other participating teams, in order of their finish, were: Barn Burners, Muscle Heads, VA Hospital, Athletes, Jet Sweat, Care West, and State National.

Also: KBST's Air Force, 4 X 4s, Herald Bugle Boys and Girls, Boneheads, Hurricanes, "B" Team, Texas Surgery and Howard College Number 2.

Jobs offers are strange

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (AP) — Tommy Williams has been getting some strange job offers since he placed a newspaper classified ad saying he'd do "anything legal" in exchange for a new car.

"One guy wanted me to make X-rated movies," Williams said Friday. "Another guy just called and asked me to run his car off a cliff so he could collect the insurance on it."

Williams, 35, said he's been out of work for a few months and he, his 5-year-old son and his wife have been scraping by on her nurse's salary. He's hoping for a $29,000 Lincoln Continental town car.

Williams got the idea for the ad from a television show in which people were paid to do outlandish things in public.

"The response has been great, but some of the requests have been bizarre. I mean really off the wall," he said.

Some of the hundreds of callers were just curious, and others hung up when a man answered.

Texans observe Fourth

By The Associated Press
About 25,000 people jammed tiny Carl's Corner Saturday to hear country singer Willie Nelson and his friends while the Beach Boys were scheduled in Austin as Texans celebrated Independence Day.

Mayor Carl Cornelius hoped the picnic, the 12th, would help boost the truck-stop town he helped create about 56 miles south of Dallas.

By mid-afternoon, temperatures in the 90s had affected some concert-goers.

About 100 people had been treated for heat-related ailments, said Dr. Ed Rappaport, a volunteer from Scott-White Hospital in Temple.

"(I came) to see Willie, and the bands and have a good time, and party at the picnic," said Kat Tudor of Dallas.

Elsewhere, the Heritage Society and the Houston Parks Department were hosting their annual bash at Sam Houston Park, with a 22-minute fireworks display planned.

Gilley's Club in Pasadena was sponsoring a chili cook-off while the League of United Latin American Citizens was conducting a state championship fajita cook-off at the El Mercado del Sol shopping center near downtown Houston.

In Austin, several thousand people were expected to listen to the Beach Boys and four local bands. Others, with a more classical taste, could opt for the Austin Symphony on the banks of the Colorado River.

A bevy of fireworks displays were scheduled in towns and cities all across Texas.

In San Antonio, the feature attraction was a giant fireworks display at Alamo Plaza at 10 p.m.

Two bands were booked to play from 2 p.m. until midnight.

Breckenridge Park, the largest public park in San Antonio, attracts numerous picnickers each Independence Day. Dominic LaPenotiere, a foot-long hot dog chef, said he didn't relish that thought.

For him, the holiday brought little independence. He said he spent all day Friday at a concession stand preparing about 800 hot dogs for the expected visitors.

Activities around the state were varied, ranging from jet-ski races in Sweetwater to tobacco and watermelon seed-spitting contests in Clyde.

Abilene had its annual Boomtown festivities, beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday. Officials advertised free hot air balloon rides beginning at 6 p.m., leading up to a 9:30 p.m. fireworks display at the Taylor County Fairgrounds.

In the West Texas town of Gorman, a tug-of-war, balloon races, and frog and turtle races were available, along with volleyball and dominoes. An afternoon of music involving 16 musical groups preceded a fireworks display at dark.

City Council faces budget review again

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

The City Council will take its second look at the 1987-88 budget Monday night, and council members could be excused for not looking forward to it.

Big Spring City Council met for five hours at its first budget work session this past Monday, and City Manager Mack Wofford sees no reason why this Monday's session will be any shorter.

The session is to begin at 4 p.m. at City Hall, and is open to the public, he said.

According to Wofford, the Council must cut approximately $300,000 from the budget, unless Council members settle on doing what he says they don't want to do — raise taxes.

Wofford explained that the $300,000 will be cut from the general fund, which is money generated from taxes, and which pays for city services such as the police and fire departments and recreation.

Utility services are not included in the general fund, he said.

"The first question we get (on cuts) is about people. 'Will you cut people?' There will be some reductions, but we certainly wouldn't want to try to get the entire $300,000 in that manner," Wofford said.

He explained that some recreational positions might be eliminated or made part-time, and that a hiring freeze and a cut in over-time will be considered.

"It will be pretty broad; it will include lots of things," he said.

The city manager made it clear that any figures on the budget and budget cutting are very tentative at this point. He said the Council has not acted on any budget items yet, but simply is studying the data he has provided them.

The budget doesn't become effective Oct. 1, and Wofford said the Council has a long way to go.

"We're not anywhere near through with it yet. It will probably be at least late into August, minimum, until they finalize it, and maybe even later," he said.

Wofford explained that it's his job to provide the Council with all the budget information, and the Council's job to decide what goes and what stays.

He said every city department head received a "budget pack," which included an extensive number of forms and paperwork. The department heads were required to list all their needs and, judging from the tentative budget, the word "all" deserves to be there, he added.

The 154-page budget Wofford had in his hands included categories for the various degrees of necessity of items.

One section included "programs considered to be BUDGET page 2A

Victim's trauma can last for years

By BERNARD GAVZER
For The Associated Press

The trauma and emotional disorder that comes with being a victim can last for years.

Of course, there are degrees. You may be angry about having your purse snatched, but a beating or rape could leave you a nightmare of rage.

Not all people react in the same way to the same kind of crime, whether it's robbery, wife-beating or other family violence, rape, purse-snatching, burglary or a con game.

"Being a crime victim is a life-changing, life-shattering piece of evil," says Dr. Shelley Neiderbach, a psychologist and director of the Crime Victims' Counseling Service, Inc., in Brooklyn, N.Y.

She speaks from personal experience. In 1975, she'd been pistol-whipped by two gunmen who commandeered her car. She escaped by pushing her way out of the moving automobile. She still has scalp scars from the pistol beating. And five years after that, she was mugged at knifepoint.

She went through the anger and rage and self-recrimination. And because of her experience, she began studying victimization and finding some way to help victims. That's how the Crime Victims' Counseling Service was created.

She says that regardless of the kind of crime involved, victims have almost identical symptoms:

"You are going to be frightened that this will recur, or that it will happen to someone you know and love.

"You'll be furious that this happened to you at all, and that fury will sometimes take the form of depression. You might say you are depressed rather than saying you're angry because you find it very hard to let your anger boil up to the appropriate level.

"You will feel guilty or shame that somehow this shouldn't have happened to you, that you were incautious or did something dumb.

"And, mostly, you will feel out of control; you feel that during the incident you felt something like a child, like an infant. Now that you're scared you feel like a child again, and can't seem to think straight anymore. That's a very common symptom of depression. You'll be depressed, experience a lack of concentration and have a change of a lot of habits — eating, other oral things like smoking, drinking. There may be a change in sexual habits, the amount of sleep you get and nightmares. If the crime occurred on a subway, or in a park, or in your apartment or home, you may develop a fear of VICTIMS page 2A

Caseys treated; injured in plane crash in El Paso

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

EL PASO — Two Big Spring residents are in an El Paso hospital after the plane they were piloting crashed at El Paso International Airport Saturday afternoon.

Monroe and Renee Casey, 1602 Wasson Rd., are in guarded condition at R. E. Thomason Hospital. Casey's step-daughter, Trina Sneed — a passenger in the plane — was treated and released, according to a hospital spokesman.

The Caseys took off from El Paso International shortly before noon, according to Dorsey Gruver, Airport Operations Officer said.

Gruver said Casey contacted the control tower almost immediately after takeoff and reported smoke in the cockpit. He requested an emergency landing from controllers and, after permission was granted, began returning to the airport.

Casey was unable to make a safe landing, crashing beside the runway, Gruver said. He added that the cause of the crash has not yet been determined. Airport rescue units were at the crash site within minutes, Gruver said, and the Caseys were rushed to the hospital soon afterward.

Roland Garcia held for death

Herald staff report

A Big Spring man has been charged with murder in the Friday night shooting death of Isreal Pacheco, 24, 707 N. Douglas St.

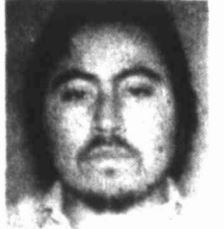

Roland Yanez Garcia, 21, 401 N.E. Tenth St., is being held in lieu of $30,000, said Justice of the Peace China Long.

The shooting incident took place at 11:20 Friday night on the parking lot of Town & Country Food Store, 1101 N. Lamesa Hwy. According to police reports, Pacheco and Garcia began arguing and fighting at the parking lot. Garcia then allegedly shot Pacheco with a gun of undisclosed caliber.

Pacheco was taken by private vehicle to Hall-Bennett Hospital where he was declared dead on arrival at 11:40 p.m. by Dr. Louise Worthy, Long said.

Garcia was arrested at his home at approximately the same time, according to reports.

Pacheco was born December 14, 1962 in Big Spring, and attended school here. He was employed at Cameo Energy Homes. He is survived by a wife and two daughters. A full obituary appears on page 2A.

JULY 5 1987

Odessan among holiday fatalities

Seven pedestrians were among 20 traffic-related deaths in Texas over the long July Fourth weekend, including a woman killed Saturday when struck by a Texas Department of Public Safety unit.

DPS spokesman David Wells said Carolyn M. Gooch, 31, of Odessa had been warned by other state troopers to stay off the road, but she was back again when trooper Vince Ford, 26, drove by at 1:56 a.m.

Ford was eastbound on an unlit six-lane road, just outside the Odessa city limits, when he clocked a speeding driver coming from the opposite direction, Wells said.

He turned on his emergency lights, made a U-turn and tried to stop the other vehicle. The woman was almost in the middle of the street when she was struck, Wells said.

The DPS has estimated that 40 people will die on Texas roads over the holiday weekend. The death count began Thursday at 6 p.m. and continues through midnight Sunday.

"If we see a continuation of the trend that's now being observed, we're going to have a very high potential of exceeding the 40 estimated (deaths)," Wells said. "I don't have any reason to expect any lessening of fatalities because of two primary causes of accidents, speed and alcohol."

He noted, however, that no one had been killed on Texas interstates in the holiday period.

Other accidents Saturday included a Jeep roll-over that killed two men, Jessie Lozano, 18, of Paducah and John Moses Cruz, 20, of Kyle. The vehicle overturned about 15 miles north of Paducah, on U.S. 62 in Cottle County, said Wells.

A Perryton man was killed at about 1:30 a.m. Saturday in a motorcycle crash. Weldon Steve Goff, 33, died in the accident about 4 miles south of Perryton, on U.S. 83.

Linda Ann Tortolini, 39, of Conroe was struck by a vehicle while trying to cross a Conroe street at 2:17 a.m. Saturday. The vehicle left the scene, Wells said.

Two pedestrians died early Saturday in Newton County when a car carrying two teenagers veered off the road and struck several people. Ernest Thompson Jr., 25, and Wesley Hopkins Jr., 35, both of Bon Wier, were killed in the accident about 3 miles south of Kirbyville, on FM 1004.

The DPS said alcohol and speed contributed to the 1 a.m. crash.

Michael Alan Richards, 34, of El Paso was the victim of a hit-and-run accident. The pedestrian was killed at about 2:40 a.m. Saturday in El Paso, Wells said.

A San Antonio man, Elias P. Fonseca, 36, was killed when the car he was a passenger in struck a utility pole about 1:10 a.m. Fonseca was not wearing a seat belt.

A two-vehicle head-on collision Saturday morning 8 miles south of Athens killed one driver and a 3-year-old girl riding in the other car.

Names of the woman and the child were not released, pending notification of relatives, said Wells.

Weather

Forecast

The West Texas forecast calls for cooler, mostly seasonal temperatures. There is a chance for afternoon and evening thunderstorms, most numerous in the north. Expected temperatures included: Panhandle, highs upper 90s and lows mid 60s; South Plains, highs near 90 and lows near 70; Permian Basin and Concho Valley, highs lower to mid 90s, lows near 70 to lower 70s; Far West, highs mid to upper 90s and lows upper 60s to lower 70s; Big Bend, highs from lower 90s mountains to near 105 along the Rio Grande, Lows from lower 60s mountains to mid 70s along the river.

State

Fair to partly cloudy skies, broiling temperatures and high humidities shoved heat indexes over the century mark for much of Texas on the Fourth of July holiday.

Victims

being in those places because wherever the incident occurred becomes a place of danger."

After a crime, the victims often become forgotten people, except for their role as witnesses. The criminal justice system focuses on the perpetrator and it becomes a drama involving police, prosecutors, defense lawyers, judges, jailers, bondsmen and the accused.

For the victim — who will be called to testify and give evidence — there are new questions and new fear. If the criminal is on the street, will he come to silence me? Am I going to be hurt again? Who will protect me?

Today, there are a number of activist groups to help victims, as well as state agencies with specific aid for victims.

The New York State Crime Victims Compensation Board, for example, was set up in 1967 and now pays out about $9 million a year in compensation to victims. The money may go to pay medical bills, or provide support because the victim is unable to work, or to pay funeral expenses. Considering the hundreds of millions of dollars lost by crime victims in New York, the compensation seems meager.

The various victim advocate groups insist that one way to fight crime effectively is to bring changes that will be of genuine help to victims.

Some major goals on their agenda:

- Create a victim "mediator" to concern himself solely with the victim in any crime. There should be a mediator on an around-the-clock basis in every police precinct and hospital emergency room.

- When the victim appears in court, the victim mediator should be there to ensure that there's some input from the victim when plea bargains are made.

- Protect the rights of victims against the potential for further harm from the perpetrator. For example, in some jurisdictions when a convicted criminal is paroled, the law requires that the victim be notified of the release. Victim advocates say there is a consistent failure to do so and that the law needs to be strengthened.

- There ought to be a national network of victim centers, places where victims can get information and guidance, whether it is about emotional trauma, economic distress, physical or medical needs.

'Super' day debates set

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two sets of political debates in advance of the March 8 "Super Tuesday" primary have been announced by a coalition of public broadcasting stations in the South.

The Southern Educational Communications Association plans one set of debates on Jan. 23 and 24. Democrats will debate one day, with Republicans meeting the other. Another set of debates is planned for Feb. 20 and 21, the group said.

March 8 has become known as Super Tuesday because 20 states, including Texas, will hold primaries or caucuses that day.

"With our January debates, we will bring the candidates before southern voters prior to balloting in Iowa and New Hampshire," said Virginia Fox, SECA president.

"Our February debates, coming on the heels of the Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primaries, will act as a threshold to the large number of southern voters for candidates whose attentions will be shifting from the narrow focus of Iowa and New Hampshire.

Former Govs. Charles Robb of Virginia and Lamar Alexander of Tennessee are serving as co-chairmen of pre-primary events.

25,000 jam truck stop to hear Willie jammin'

CARL'S CORNER (AP) — As more than 25,000 people jammed his 12th annual Fourth of July picnic, country singer Willie Nelson announced that his next project would be a third benefit concert for the nation's farmers in Lincoln, Neb., on September 19.

Thousands packed the tiny truck stop town Saturday to hear Nelson and his friends at the picnic, which Nelson dedicated to the country's truck drivers. He said he believes rural America is threatened because farmers and truck drivers are threatened.

"I think everybody ought to be aware that when the farmer goes and the trucker goes, then pretty soon you'll see the schools and the hospitals going and all these little towns will start disappearing, and we don't want that," Nelson said.

The town's mayor, judge and namesake, Carl Cornelius, said he hoped the picnic would help boost the town he helped create about 56 miles south of Dallas.

Temperatures were in the 90s and by mid-afternoon, several were feeling the heat. About 100 people had been treated for heat-related ailments, said Dr. Ed Rappaport, of Scott-White Hospital in Temple, who had volunteered to help with first aid.

Organizers set up 150 water fountains in the area and Gatorade was being given away. "It's hot. I'd rather be at home with the air conditioner on, but my husband got tickets," said Jeanne Dehan of Palestine, who was at the concert with her husband, William.

But others didn't seem to mind the warm temperatures.

"It's pretty nice over here. There are no rowdy people," said Glenn Heyn, 27, of Elgin, Minn., who had driven his truck from Minnesota.

Those at the picnic said they were drawn by Nelson's music.

"If he was running for president, I'd vote for him rather than some of the guys, ... because he's honest," said Elgin Amaroso Jr. of Gainesville.

"Everybody in Texas loves Willie Nelson. He stands for Texas, most of it," said Fourth of July reveler Paula Wilson of Brownwood.

The event woke the usually quiet part of north Central Texas, said Bill Perry of nearby Hillsboro.

"It's kind of hard to believe for around here," he said.

Fourth a smelly holiday for some

WACO — Some Lake Waco visitors this Fourth of July holiday weekend are raising a fuss about having to share the beaches with thousands of smelly, dead fish.

Between 10,000 and 20,000 dead shad have washed onto the shores of Lake Waco after recent weather conditions depleted the lake of oxygen, authorities said.

Rangers at Airport Park along the lake were taking the mess in stride, saying no cleaning would be done until after the holiday weekend.

"We don't have any maintenance people here on the weekend," said Ranger Charles Burger. "It would be more of an inconvenience without the wind, because with the wind blowing, the decomposition will be pretty quick."

But visitors to the park think something should be done about the shad, which measure between two to three feet long and weigh about three pounds.

"It's a real big deal," said Teresa Spivey of Waco. "You come out to the outdoors and you can't even get fresh air. We expected at least a clean beach area — not something where they're going to have to gag to play water sports."

For adult campers and picnickers in Airport Park, the shad were particularly unwelcome, but the younger generation found them fascinating.

"What's really sad is when you see the little kids pick them up and throw them around," Jackie Slavik told the Waco Herald-Tribune.

Routine stop leads to police death

SUGAR LAND — A Sugar Land police officer was shot and killed early Saturday following a routine traffic stop, making him the first officer within the department killed in the line of duty, a police spokeswoman said.

Sgt. Ronald D. Slockett, 31, an eight-year department veteran, was shot about 3:38 a.m., department spokeswoman Susan Slot said. She said the officer had stopped a late-model white compact car, possibly a Toyota, on Alternate Highway 90 and was shot four to five times in the chest area.

Slockett was pronounced dead at the scene, Ms. Slot said. Assistant Chief Ernest Taylor said details of the shooting were sketchy.

"Sgt. Slockett checked what we would normally consider a routine traffic stop," Taylor said. "Just a few minutes later, a citizen stopped another officer and said we had an officer down and told him where."

"When the second officer arrived, he found Sgt. Slockett lying in front of his car. He had been shot numerous times," said Taylor, adding that a large-caliber weapon had been used.

There were no witnesses to the shooting, Taylor said, but witnesses saw Slockett pull the car over and have provided Sugar Land police with leads and a partial license number, he said.

The Sugar Land Police Department has 29 officers and 11 other employees, according to Taylor.

Texan survives grizzly bear mauling

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, Mont. — A 26-year-old Texas man survived a mauling by a grizzly bear in Glacier National Park on Thursday, escaping with relatively minor injuries, park officials said.

Gregg Erickson, a graduate student at Texas A&M University, was doing research work in the park Thursday afternoon when he was attacked and bitten twice by a grizzly sow, said Dallas Koehn, a park ranger.

Koehn said Erickson had hiked about two miles northwest from Marias Pass when the incident occurred about 3 p.m. Erickson was not hiking on established trails when the incident occurred, Koehn said.

"He was at the 7,000 foot level when he spotted the bear with two cubs about 100 yards below him," Koehn said. "He made some noise and the bear attacked immediately."

ly, biting him on the right calf and knocking him down."

Koehn said Erickson slid a short distance down a slope and played dead but the bear came down to the victim and bit him once on the back before leaving.

Erickson hiked back to his car and drove to East Glacier, where he met a park naturalist who took him to a hospital in Browning.

Erickson was treated at the hospital and released a short time later, Koehn said.

The ranger said no action would be taken against the grizzly.

"It's considered a natural, protective action of the bear in this situation, with its cubs," Koehn told The Associated Press.

He said a park trail in the area near the attack would be closed to the public until authorities are satisfied the bear is no longer in the area.

A&I frat fight leads to death, injury

KINGSVILLE — A Texas A&I University student was stabbed to death and another injured early Friday after a fight near a fraternity house, police said.

Raymond Lloyd Johnson, 21, a senior political science major and member of the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, died of multiple stab wounds at 3:49 a.m. at Spohn Kleberg Memorial Hospital in Kingsville.

Another fraternity member, Alejandro "Ponch" Cantu, 24, underwent surgery for multiple stab wounds, hospital officials said.

Cantu is a graduate biology student from Laredo. Police said Johnson had a San Antonio driver's license, but that his parents are from Biloxi, Miss.

According to police, a fight broke out about 3 a.m. in front of the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house, which is about a block from main campus.

No arrests have been made, police said, and an investigation into the stabbings is continuing.

Both fraternity brothers had been attending an informal get-together at the Lambda Chi house before the fight began, Lambda Chi members said Friday.

Police on Friday could not say what the fight was about or if any suspects were being sought in connection with the stabbings.

Leave political ads to voters

It's probably true, as some members of the U.S. Senate and some political scientists assert, that the use of negative televised political advertising, so prominent in recent campaigns around the country, has contributed to public cynicism about politicians and government.

If all the voters ever hear are negative messages about candidates for office, it's easy to conclude that all candidates are equally untrustworthy. As a consequence, the Senate is considering a crackdown on what its members see as an epidemic of negative campaign advertising.

But more than concern for the public interest moves the senators. As incumbents, they are most frequently the target of negative election campaigns.

It's a relatively simple matter for a challenger to pick out a controversial vote by an incumbent, often distorting its context, and highlight it in a negative TV commercial.

Restrictions on "negative" ads, however, would tend to favor incumbents, who already are blessed with many political advantages. For senators to write rules that give them another advantage in campaigns is scarcely the best way to make voters less cynical about the political process.

More important, it's a serious danger to free speech. The First Amendment prohibits government from telling citizens what they may say or hear about public matters.

The reform bill's legal requirement that senatorial candidates appear on the air in at least 50 percent of any TV commercial and personally deliver any attack on an opponent is not likely to withstand court challenge.

Who's to say what's an attack and what's merely a declaration of one's own virtues?

What agency will be empowered to review these messages for acceptable content?

If senators can make it difficult for rival candidates to attack their record in campaign advertisements, what is to keep them from putting similar restraints on political interest groups, the press and individual citizens?

Controlling how candidates raise and spend money is a vital element of campaign reform; restricting what candidates may say or how they say it is a self-interested excursion into constitutionally dangerous waters.

The Constitution always has trusted the electorate to make proper judgments about improper political attacks and to register them at the polls. It's still hard to imagine a better way.

Teen pregnancy has no painless solution

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I never thought this would happen to me. I'm 17 and my girlfriend just told me she is pregnant. Now she is pressuring me to run away and marry her, but I know I don't love her and, anyway, I can't support a family.

I told her to get an abortion but she won't and says she is going to tell my parents if I don't marry her. I feel all alone and don't know what to do. Please help me make the right decision. — K.T.D.

DEAR K.T.D.: There is no painless or easy way out of your problem. Often today we lose sight of the fact that when we do something wrong — as you've done — we eventually will pay the consequences for our action.

As the Bible warns, "Do not be deceived: God cannot be mocked. A man reaps what he sows" (Galatians 6:7).

Don't compound your problems, therefore, by doing something that may seem to be the easier way out — but would be wrong. Instead, the best thing for you (and all the others who are involved in this — including the unborn child) is to do what's right in God's eyes.

It would be wrong for you to urge your girlfriend to get an abortion. From what you say it also probably would be unwise for you to rush into marriage; it would not have a stable and lasting foundation. Instead, I urge you both to consider making the child available for adoption. Many, many couples who cannot have children are yearning to give a happy and stable home to a baby.

Whatever you do, however, you are going to have to face up to what you've done and inform your parents. You may find them much more sympathetic and concerned than you expect.

Above all, turn your life over to Christ. Perhaps for the first time in your life you are realizing you need God, and His way always is best. Christ wants to forgive you and guide you in the future. Don't turn your back on Him.

Uncle Sam's quandering adds to debt

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — Many Americans are dangerously in debt, lured toward the rocks of bankruptcy by the siren song of easy credit. But they're pickers compared to the federal government, which has the easiest credit of all: An endless supply of blank checks backed by the taxpayers.

The national debt stood at $2.27 trillion on May 1, and this year's budget deficit is headed toward $200 billion. If something isn't done, the national debt by 1990 will be only a couple of billion dollars shy of $3 trillion — a literally unimaginable sum.

Yet, like individuals who are compulsive spendthrifts, the federal government can't seem to curb its extravagant habits.

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., has denounced congressional budgets, including the Senate's first budget resolution for fiscal 1988 as "bookkeeping gimmicks and legislative gimcrackery." Here are just a few of the items that raised Armstrong's hackles:

- The Interior Department has failed to collect $3 billion in oil and gas royalties owed for leases of government land since 1979.
- The State Department is building 10 new residences for American diplomats in Australia. Cost: $650,000 each.
- A new $33 million embassy is under construction in Belize, a tiny Caribbean country whose gross national product is only $143 million.
- The State Department spends $11,000 a month rent for its U.N. ambassador's apartment in New York City.

Federal agencies spent more than $336 million on public relations in 1985. An additional $99 million was spent on "congressional relations" — even though government agencies are forbidden by law to lobby members of Congress.

One-third of all the trips made in chauffeur-driven government cars in 1984 were made by Environmental Protection Agency poobahs going to and from lunch.

The average ride cost the taxpayers $45; EPA officials rejected a suggestion that they take taxis (which would have averaged $5 a trip).

The National Institutes of Health awarded grants to study such trivia as food-foraging habits of a Paraguayan Indian tribe, late marriage in a Spanish village, children's reaction to tonsillectomies and the political attitudes of a small private college's women graduates.

Most Americans have only a foggy notion of the way Congress and the Reagan administration have reordered the government's spending priorities in the last few years. A House Appropriations Committee document shows the direction of public spending since 1980. For example:

- Military spending will have increased by two-thirds in the 12 years ending in 1992.
 - Payments to individuals, like Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid, will have increased one-third in the same period.
 - All other domestic spending by the federal government will have decreased by 39.3 percent.
 - Interest on the national debt will have grown by 41.9 percent between 1980 and 1992.
- Footnote: Unlike individuals or corporations drowning in debt, Uncle Sam can't take the easy way out and declare bankruptcy. A Treasury official said it would be "unthinkable and irresponsible" for the U.S. government to default on its bonds — which suggests that someone has at least been thinking the unthinkable.

SINCERE FLATTERY: The Japanese are famous — or infamous — for imitating American industrial techniques and producing cheaper goods of equal or better quality.

Now the White House is seriously considering imitating Japan's unique industrial development technique in hopes of overcoming the Japanese lead in superconductors.

Occasional vacation trips important to entire family

By DARRELL BERKHEIMER

I often wonder if parents realize how important vacations are — for themselves as well as their children.

Vacation time each year takes me back to my childhood. It reminds me of returning to school in the fall and hearing classmates talk about vacation trips.

It was inevitable that each of us would be asked how we spent the summer — by classmates or teachers. And at least one teacher would ask us to write something on the topic.

I dreaded being asked about my vacation time, because almost every summer my parents indicated they couldn't afford to take an extended trip of a week or more.

It wasn't that we didn't take any trips; it was just that seldom were they longer than a three- or four-day weekend to a New Jersey or Chesapeake Bay shore resort, because we lived in southeast Pennsylvania.

I must admit that we'd take two or three such trips each summer. But I hated it each fall when I had to give that same answer: "We went to the shore."

Although both my parents were working then, they were quite frugal — and have remained so. I think they became that way for two reasons: They were raised in conservative, thrift-conscious Pennsylvania Dutch country, and they obviously were affected very much by the Great Depression.

They considered it more important to save money so my brother and I — the only children — were assured of a college education, which later was provided.

But it was disheartening when many classmates would talk about visiting Florida, Canada, California, the Grand Canyon, the Smoky Mountains, or even grandparents a couple states away.

Their talk would set me to dreaming about how I'd go on "real" vacation trips when I was older and on my own. And I kept wishing that my family would take a long trip at least occasionally.

My parents, instead, felt they were using their time and money more wisely by buying something for the house, painting the house, putting a new roof on the garage, making a family room in the basement or just plain saving for our education.

It's noteworthy, of course, that we probably were only about the third family in our block to have a family recreation room. And my brother and I will benefit the rest of our lives as a result of the sacrifices made for us by our parents.

Still, it's hard for an elementary school or junior high youngster to understand why Mom and Dad can't take you on a long vacation trip "when all the other kids get to go."

Naturally, we don't remember or mention anything about the ones whose parents were too poor to even go on a long weekend at the shore.

Retelling this situation helps me understand why I remember so well the one big trip my parents did take me on. I was 11 years old, and we were gone for two glorious weeks to Florida.

We visited St. Augustine, the Alligator Farm, Daytona Beach, Miami and Miami Beach, Parrot Jungle, Monkey Jungle, the Everglades and some lesser attractions for "kids of all ages." Disney World didn't exist then.

I remembered that vacation so well the memory prompted me to take my wife and two children on a similar vacation nearly 20 years later. My wife, coming from a poorer, one-parent family, got to see even less when she was a young girl. So I guess it's no wonder, then, that we resolved shortly after marriage to take some sort of family vacation trip each year.

After a year of work, be it on the job or in the house, we think we deserve a vacation trip. And after nine months in school, we believe our children do, too.

None of our vacation trips have been very expensive ones — mostly because we went camping along the way. So nearly all of them required less than the vacation pay that I had coming.

On some years, they simply were in-state trips, particularly when finances were low. But we've always managed to go somewhere or see something that we hadn't experienced before.

Our trips have been the source of immeasurable family togetherness and enjoyment, partly because we get away from the house, the telephone, and various distractions that pull family members in different directions.

I'm sure we could have put that money to good use in projects around the house, or by socking it away for educations. But there's much to be said about the historical and educational aspects of the many trips we've taken.

It's also hard to put a pricetag on the weeks of reading and planning before going, and the time we've spent talking about the things we've done — together — for years afterward.

It's particularly rewarding, years later, to have one of your children, then a college freshman, thank you for having broadened her mind by taking her so many places when she was younger.

Maybe my wife and I would think differently had we lived through a depression. But after having experienced both sides of the situation, I think family vacation trips to some new experiences are a necessity rather than a luxury.

New brochures available

By Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce

Congratulations to all who were involved with the Summerfest activities. The day-long celebration was a big success and everyone seemed to enjoy the good time.

The fireworks also were a beautiful sight. The Ambassadors still need about $2,000 to pay for this year's fireworks. If you enjoyed the show you may want to help by donating to cover the cost. Contact the chamber office or send your donations to P.O. Box 1391, Big Spring, 79721.

The Summer Calendar of Events is available and copies can be obtained in the chamber office. It includes the July, August and September events.

A highlight of this quarter's calendar is the Howard County Fair, scheduled Sept. 21-26. Each day's events are listed in this calendar.

A new brochure lists all the birds known to Howard County and provides space for birders to check each as it is sighted. The brochure, titled the Birds of Howard County Field Checklist, is available in the business in the downtown area. They're also available in the chamber office.

The 1987 Membership Directories are scheduled to go to the printer soon. Only those members who are current in their dues by July 15 will be listed. Anyone interested in buying advertising space in this directory may contact any Blue Blazer or the chamber office.

Summer is the heavy recruiting time for the next Leadership Big Spring program. Applications are available at the chamber office.

The program begins in September and continues through May, taking one full day each month except October, which includes two full-day events. The tuition is $250.

The Convention & Visitors Bureau is working with the State Parks system to develop and print a brochure for the Big Spring State Park to identify plants on the mountain. The work should be completed, along with the brochures, in the next few months.

Lawyer seeks dismissal

ST. PAUL, Minn. — An attorney for a Marine accused of spying for the Soviets while assigned to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow is asking the Marine Corps to dismiss charges against his client.

Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, 25, of St. Paul, is accused of providing Soviet agents with classified embassy documents, including floor plans and office assignments for the embassies in Moscow and Vienna; identifying American intelligence officers assigned to the Moscow embassy, and fraternizing with a Soviet woman.

"The motion for dismissal is based on the ground that the NIS (Naval Investigative Service) engaged in unlawful and unconstitutional conduct in order to get other young Marines to implicate Lonetree in espionage," New York lawyer William Kunstler told the St. Paul Pioneer Press Dispatch on Friday.

The most serious charges against Lonetree, that he allowed agents inside the Moscow embassy, were dropped May 15 after Cpl. Arnold Bracy, another former embassy guard, recanted his statement implicating Lonetree.

Lonetree's court-martial is scheduled for July 22 at the Quantico Marine Base in Virginia.

Manson offer snubbed

OWENSBORO, Ky. — Convicted murderer Charles Manson is miffed because items he donated for a theater's fund-raising auction were withheld from sale.

"I will not send anything to anyone like this again. Your a good teacher — I learnt well — any kindness shown is a place of weakness," wrote Manson, who is in San Quentin prison in California.

The Muhlenberg Community Theater had requested donations from more than 1,000 people, including comics Pee Wee Herman and Whoopi Goldberg, author Stephen King and former President Gerald Ford, for its June 20 sale to raise money for a new arts center.

News that Manson had contributed a package of letters and pictures, plus a macramé doll, sparked threats of protests at the auction in Central City and boycotts of the theater group's productions, so the Manson donations were put in storage.

Outcry prompts arrests

BALTIMORE — Thirteen people, including the Rev. Phillip Berrigan, were arrested Saturday as they protested the departure of 70 members of the Maryland National Guard for training exercises in Central and South America.

Four people who entered the Warfield Maryland National Guard Air Base in Essex and sat on the runway were charged with trespassing, said Baltimore County police Lt. John Schramm. The other nine, including Berrigan, sat in front of the base's main gates and were charged with failure to obey a lawful order.

A large American flag is unfurled, revealing the likeness of President Abe Lincoln during ceremonies at Mt. Rushmore Saturday. It marked the 50th anniversary of the completion of the Lincoln figure on Mt. Rushmore. The 45-foot by 85-foot flag was assembled at the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston.

July Fourth

Holiday inspires U.S. citizens

By The Associated Press

The Fourth of July inspired parades, picnics, clanging bells and summer festivals across the land, starting with fireworks by dawn's early light on the Pacific Coast.

It was a day for watching the USS Constitution, "Old Ironsides," take its annual tour around Boston Harbor, to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Abraham Lincoln face at Mount Rushmore, to race turtles in Neligh, Neb., or bag a rattlesnake in Warden, Wash.

Big events included the Boston Pops concert and fireworks show along the Charles River, a triathlon from the Statue of Liberty in New York to the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia, a "welcome home" concert for Vietnam veterans near the nation's capital, and lavish displays of fireworks in dozens of cities.

At country singer Willie Nelson's Texas picnic in Carl's Corner, about 100 people had to be treated for heat-related illnesses as temperatures rose into the 90s.

For those who couldn't get out, the HBO channel on cable television planned to carry the "welcome home" concert from Largo, Md., starring James Brown, Neil Diamond, Linda Ronstadt and Kris Kristofferson. Public television offered the Boston Pops concert, featuring Johnny Cash reading the Gettysburg Address.

For some, the day was clouded by reminders of violence and prejudice.

In Murfreesboro, Tenn., Ku Klux Klansmen gathered for a rally to celebrate the original U.S. Constitution, which did not permit blacks to vote.

In Santa Monica, Calif., 20,000 people were up at dawn to watch fireworks in a plan intended to discourage the rowdiness which marred the Fourth of July celebration there a year ago and resulted in one death.

And around the Los Angeles area, police were giving priority to stopping those who celebrate the holiday by firing guns into the air.

At the Shelter Isle Mobile Home Estates in Pacoima, 20 miles north of downtown Los Angeles, residents planned to end their Independence Day barbecue early so they can be indoors before dark, when the shooting starts.

"This is the only way we old people can get together," said Laurette Bineau, 65, a resident of the park. "Then at 9 p.m. we have to come home and we have to stay inside. What else can we do?"

There are bullet holes in the awnings, doors and walls of nearly every trailer from past holidays.

One death was reported in connection with the festivities. A 20-year-old woman who was watching fireworks in Springdale, Pa., was struck by a train and died Friday night.

Iran missiles situated

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iran has begun to place its Chinese-made anti-ship missiles on launchers at the strategic Strait of Hormuz, the southern entrance to the Persian Gulf, marine salvage executives said Saturday.

The missiles reportedly were test-fired in the area in February, but the gulf-based salvage executives said some were installed on launchers Friday, making them fully operational.

The executives, who insisted on anonymity, said the launchers were at the port of Bandar Abbas overlooking the strait and possibly on Iran's nearby Qeshm Island. A U.S. official in Washington expressed doubt about the report.

They said they were told of the deployment by their radio monitors, who listen for developments in gulf waters and have tugboats on standby for salvage operations if ships are hit by Iranian or Iraqi warplanes or warships.

Iran and Iraq have been engaged in a border war since September 1980, and began the "tanker war" against gulf shipping 1984.

There have been numerous previous reports, all unconfirmed, that Iran had deployed the Chinese-designed Silkwork missiles, which have a range of about 50 miles and are capable of striking all shipping in the Strait of Hormuz.

Loud Panama outcry

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Thousands of women dressed in white on Saturday staged Panama's largest anti-government demonstration in years, marching through city streets with supporters honking their car horns.

The march began in a northern suburb and proceeded through middle- and upper-class neighborhoods, growing in size block by block en route to the city's center.

The opposition is demanding that the military stop running the government.

By the time the march reached Via Espana in the heart of the banking district, the demonstrators filled the four-lane street for about a mile. Government security forces stationed on nearby streets made no attempt to interfere.

U.S. music for Soviets

MOSCOW — James Taylor, Bonnie Raitt, Carlos Santana and the Doobie Brothers sang for 25,000 Muscovites Saturday in a Fourth of July concert billed as the first free public performance by American musicians in Moscow.

Also on America's Independence Day, bombs were thrown at U.S.-related buildings and leftists demonstrated against U.S. bases in the Philippines, where July 4 was not celebrated as a holiday for the first time in decades; hundreds of Americans ate airlifted fast food at the U.S. Embassy in Beijing, China, and a top opposition leader shook hands with the chairman of the governing party at an American celebration in South Korea.

Bork foes planning fight fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — Groups opposing Robert H. Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court plan to spend well over $1 million, commit thousands of workers, and start a new computer bank to defeat his confirmation.

Spokesmen for civil rights, civil liberties and women's groups said in interviews the stakes are much higher than in last summer's unsuccessful attempt to defeat Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist.

Unlike Rehnquist, Bork would tip the balance of the court against affirmative action, abortion, and individual freedoms, they said.

In his Saturday radio address, President Reagan called for timely hearings on the Bork nomination so the court could operate with all nine justices. "To maintain the independence of the judiciary, I hope we can keep politics out of the confirmation process and promptly schedule hearings," Reagan said.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said the court likely will begin its new term in October with one vacancy because Senate action on confirmation of a new justice is not expected before then. "I think he could either be confirmed or rejected if it goes to the full Senate by, perhaps, maybe Nov. 1, or maybe even Thanksgiving," Heflin said on Cable News Network's "Newsmaker Saturday" program.

"I have in hand $300,000 to $400,000 now, and I think I can raise at least $1 million," said Arthur Kropp, executive director of a 270,000-member liberal lobbying group, People for the American Way.

That group plans to buy newspaper ads, radio announcements and send out a barrage of letters to "get a response out of the American people."

The 150,000-member National Organization for Women will use its new computer bank for the first time in the confirmation fight.

"We will be spending thousands," said NOW President Eleanor C. Smeal. "The stakes are so high, we're prepared to spend" — but she would not say how much.

Dozens cross border, seek identification

EL PASO (AP) — Dozens of Mexicans were allowed to cross the border Saturday to see if their relatives were among the 18 illegal aliens who died in a sealed boxcar, but mortuary workers said there were few solid leads.

Many anxious families were from towns nowhere near those of the victims, said Jim Weatherly, director of the El Paso Mortuary where the bodies were being held pending identification and release to Mexico.

"After initial discussions, there are just a couple of people who hold a real strong maybe," Weatherly said.

He said dozens of people had been allowed to cross the border to go to the mortuary even if they did not have papers, and the mortuary had received dozens of calls from others.

The Border Patrol planned to show pictures of the dead to those who inquired at the mortuary, and would take the photographs to the border bridges between El Paso and Ciudad Juarez upon request, said William G. Harrington, assistant chief of the El Paso sector of the Border Patrol.

The victims had stripped off much of their clothing in the heat of the sealed boxcar, meaning identification papers were not with the bodies.

Officials tentatively identified six victims Friday. On Saturday, agents confirmed three of the six, and said they were almost certain of the identities of two others, said Harrington.

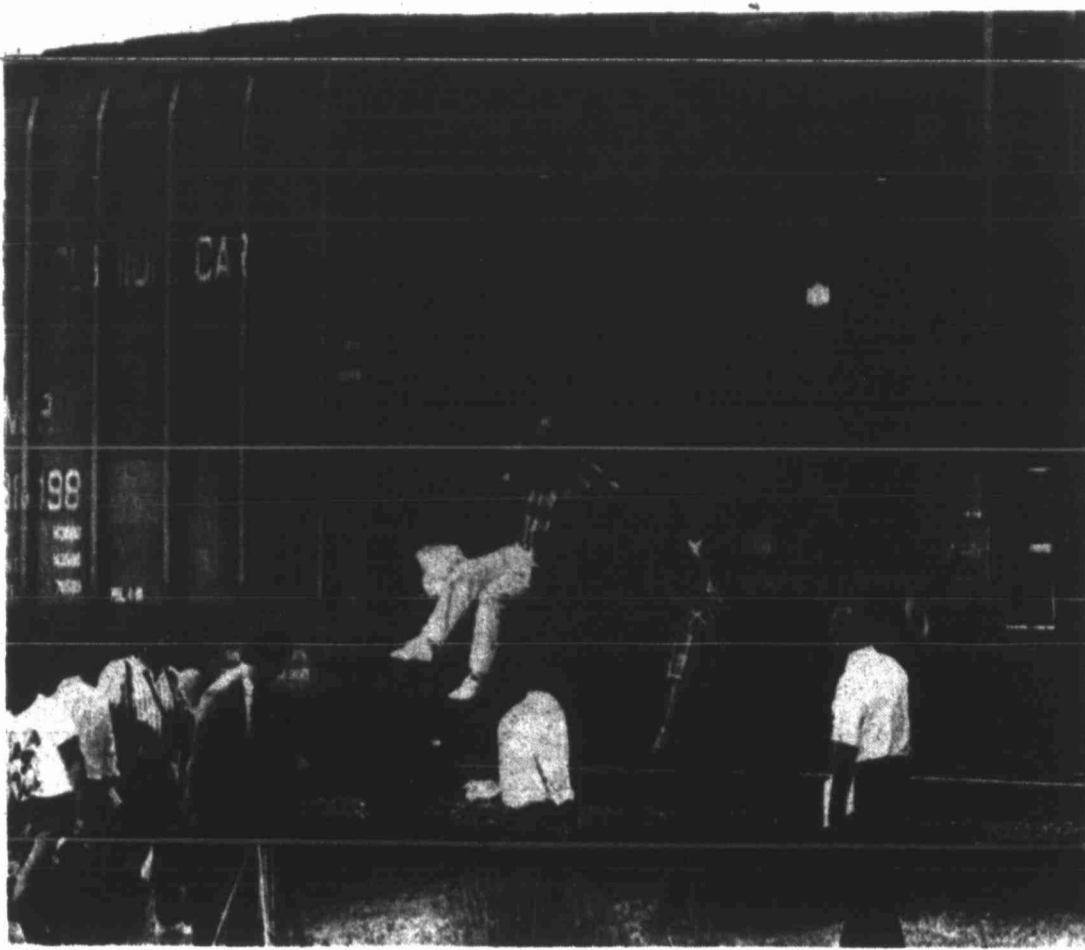

Six of the victims were from the same town in the central Mexican state of Aguascalientes, while authorities believe another group of men in the boxcar was from the state of Zacatecas.

The only man who survived said two of the victims were alien smugglers, one of whom recruited him and his group of friends from their home in Pabellon de Arteaga in Aguascalientes.

The men crawled into the boxcar Wednesday night at an El Paso freight yard and were locked in by a third smuggler, who tossed them two railroad spikes to break through the floor when the train arrived in Dallas.

They were locked inside the foam-insulated, virtually airtight car, designed to carry beer, for 14 hours while the temperature inside soared to 130 degrees.

Authorities have identified the smuggler who locked the boxcar only by his nickname, "el

Cameraman look over the boxcar in Sierra Blanca, about 90 miles southeast of El Paso, where the bodies of 18 male Mexican were found early Thursday morning after they apparently died of asphyxiation in the airtight car.

Chapulín" or "the Grasshopper," Harrington said.

With the publication of that name Saturday, "they've probably got him run all the way into Guatemala by now," Harrington said. "If he was still in Juarez (before Saturday), you can bet your boots he's not right now."

Harrington said the deaths did not affect aliens' use of boxcars for the clandestine trip into the interior of the United States. Fourteen percent of all aliens apprehended in the El Paso sector are aboard trains.

"It won't change, I don't know why it should. Until there is a better reason than a few fellows getting locked in, I don't see it slowing down," he said. "Smuggling may be down in El Paso because they know the heat's on, but it's only a temporary thing."

The smugglers may have thought locking the door from the outside and providing spikes to gouge through the floor later may have helped their chances of escaping detection, officials said.

But the men in the boxcar had been fearful they would be caught if they made noise, and put off chipping a hole for air until after the train left the rail yard, authorities said.

They didn't begin the work until four hours after being locked in, and the survivor, Miguel Tostado Rodriguez, said the lack of oxygen and water had already begun affecting them by then.

The two smugglers were the first to die during the sweltering night. Some of the men scuffled while they tried desperately to pick a hole in the car for air. Tostado was the only one able to break through the wooden floor.

A Border Patrol agent on a routine patrol in Sierra Blanca, 90 miles east of El Paso, opened the boxcar Thursday morning and found the men.

Families hoping to discover relatives not among victims

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Five men sat quietly in a row Saturday, their hands knotted over white forms bearing pictures of the relatives they hoped not to find in the 18 black body bags.

Rogelio Herrera Negrete was one of the men who came by bus from the central Mexican town of Pabellon de Arteaga to see if his son was among the 18 men who died in the stifling 130-degree heat of a railroad boxcar.

His 17-year-old son, Jose Luis Herrera Jimenez, left in the last week without saying where he was headed. Herrera said he was told that about seven of the victims came from his hometown.

"He said he was going with his friends. No more," said Herrera. "We don't know anything yet," added an anxious companion who declined to identify himself. "The police are going to come here and talk to us."

The five were among several families who trekked north to this border city to see if their relatives were among those who died in the locked Dallas-bound boxcar Thursday.

J.A. Lobato, supervisory inspector for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service at the Paso del Norte Bridge, said two other groups went away earlier, relieved to find their relatives were not on the train.

He said U.S. Border Patrol officers were allowing the Mexican families to cross the border from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, to view bodies in an El Paso mortuary.

Survivor a veteran of slipping into U.S.

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO (AP) — A Mexican restaurant worker making his seventh illegal trip into United States was used to slipping north by railroad, but not to fighting for his life inside a locked, airtight boxcar.

The lone survivor among 19 aliens trying to sneak into the country, 21-year-old Miguel Tostado Rodriguez, said Friday he conserves his strength by breathing air from a crack in a corner of the boxcar for much of a horrible night in the Texas desert.

He listened in the dark as other aliens desperate for oxygen and water tried to chip a hole in the boxcar's thick wooden floor and flailed at each other in their fight to survive.

Tostado says the first of the 18 men to die were two smugglers' confederates who recruited the others on the journey north from Central Mexico to the freight yards of El Paso and then on to a Dallas-Fort Worth-bound train.

"An illegal alien like the rest of us" tossed two railroad spikes into the boxcar Wednesday night before locking the steel-walled compartment shut, Tostado said.

The fools were to have been used to break a hole through the boxcar floor when the train arrived in Fort Worth the next night.

But the aliens, not anticipating an airtight compartment, began using the tools about four hours into the slow journey east from El Paso, as the oxygen thinned, the water ran out and the train developed problems and had to spend the night on a siding near McNary.

"It was a very horrible experience. Every person died. A very bad experience," said Tostado, who was accompanied on the trip from his home of Pabellon de Arteaga in the state of Aguascalientes by a smuggler, five friends and a man he considered as close as a brother.

Another smuggler is believed to have recruited another group of men aboard the train from the Mexican state of Zacatecas, said Mike Williams, chief of the El Paso sector of the Border Patrol.

"The two smugglers attempted to make a hole in the boxcar. ... They ran out of strength and they were the first to die," he said. "I had an opportunity to obtain air through a crack in the rear. I didn't help at first."

Tostado, describing his night before dozens of reporters from both sides of the border, said he remained in his corner of the boxcar until only a few other men survived.

They were too spent to gouge the hole, he said, and he could hear their groans as he tried to enlarge the opening, hoping it would aid enough air to revive the others.

"I never thought this would happen, that they would shut the door ... I didn't expect them to close the door on us," he said.

Tostado said he began calling for help Thursday when he could see shafts of morning light filter into the boxcar.

A Border Patrol agent on a routine inspection at a trail check point east of Sierra Blanca heard Tostado's pleas for help and opened the car to find the 18 bodies and Tostado, uninjured, wet and dressed only in his shorts.

Tostado said he had worked in the United States off and on for four years, before spending a year at home and then deciding to return to Dallas.

He said his last job had been with a company that owned several Dallas area restaurants and he planned to seek work with the business again.

Tostado said he never thought about the new immigration bill that makes it illegal for employers to hire illegal aliens when he decided to come north.

Lack of speed man's salvation

EL PASO (AP) — Jose Martinez Pena, 40, wanted to go with other illegal aliens to the Dallas-Fort Worth area in a boxcar, but he was too slow, he said.

Not being able to run fast enough to keep up with others who piled into a boxcar Wednesday afternoon probably saved his life, Martinez said Friday.

Because he was left behind, Martinez, of Ojo Caliente, Zacatecas, Mexico, was spared a horrifying death.

Friday, at an El Paso funeral home, Martinez identified photos of three friends who were among the 18 men found dead Thursday morning, apparently of suffocation and dehydration after they were locked in the boxcar.

Authorities believe the men may have been in the boxcar at least 12 hours, in 120-degree heat, before someone heard the groans of the only survivor and opened the boxcar doors near Sierra Blanca, 86 miles east of El Paso.

Miguel Tostado Rodriguez, 21, was rescued Thursday by a Border Patrol agent during a routine check of the 76-car train. Tostado told officials he survived by breathing through a hole he and others bored in the bottom of the steel-walled boxcar, he told officials.

Martinez said he and the others made their way to the El Paso-Juarez border from the interior of Mexico. In El Paso, they met with six or seven men from Pabellon de Arteaga in the Mexican state of Aguascalientes.

They stood outside a train yard in El Paso and made a run for it. But he got separated from the others, he said.

One of three "coyotes" — smugglers of aliens — a man he knew only as "Chapulín," was standing by the tracks as the train pulled away.

"I ran up to him and asked him why they had left me behind. He said, 'You were late and they had to leave.'"

Martinez said he would recognize the man if he saw him again.

Ed Jennings has married lots of people. "Let's see ... today's gonna be the 1,790th couple ... that's dang near 36 hundred people. That's a small town that I've married. And what I'm so proud of ... where people get married around here," says Ed. "Under the big tree is the most popular place. My old barn out there is another ... they just love to get married in that old barn. I've had weddings in all kinds of places: cars, horse and buggy, stage coach. Two years ago I took a trip to Vegas and had a marriage on the plane. And I'm scared to death of planes. So I did the smart thing. I got higher than the plane. Didn't miss a word. Had a heck of a ball out there."

What makes Ed's weddings special?
"I think the most important thing about my weddings and one reason I'm so popular is the length. I tell my couples, "My weddings are so short that by the time you say you do, you have. I don't like long, drawn out weddings. I tell them if they want a long ceremony, go to the church. But if they want a quick one, come see me. My weddings hardly ever take more than two and a half minutes."

There used to be an old saying that the groom paid the minister or the judge performing the ceremony a fee based on what he thought the bride was worth. Not so with Ed Jennings. "No, because I wouldn't make any money," he chuckles. "No, I generally have a set fee of about $35. And I keep two Polaroid cameras here. So many of them come out and they don't have a camera. I like for them to have three or four pictures before they ever leave this place."

Ed Jennings married one man three times. He said as long as the good Lord will produce them, he'll marry them.

Ed carries a long cigar which is sort of his trademark. "I enjoy good cigars ... Good tobacco. Good whiskey. Beautiful women. That's the big three right there." Ed is 72 years old. "I'm goin' to a big dance tonight," says Ed. "My biggest desire in life is to live to be 92 and be shot by a jealous husband."

He had 138 motorcycles attend one of his weddings. Over the years as Bandera County JP, Ed has had three brides to faint. One groom wet his pants.

Ed likes being JP.
"Pays better than show business," he says. A wedding ceremony by Ed Jennings is more like a performance. He cracks jokes and gives reassuring words of comfort to nervous couples. After the ceremony, Ed just might break out the wine and have a party. Ed has breast cancer, but it's in remission and doesn't slow him down. He says about one man in 1,000 gets breast cancer.

"My doctor allows me to continue smoking, drinking and dancing," says Ed. "He claims those activities chase the disease away."

Ed constantly runs into couples he has married. His walls are filled with mementos of his years as the champion of shade tree marriages.

His business card reads: E.S. Jennings, Justice of the Peace, Dog Catcher, Mayor, Porter, Anything to Make a Buck. Pipe Creek, Texas 78063. A town so small the city limit signs are on the same post.

Problems mounting for Meese

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III again is in trouble over the ethics of his financial dealings, despite his pledge to Congress 2½ years ago that he would live within the rules.

At the time of the hearings on his nomination as attorney general, Meese promised he would faithfully fill out his financial disclosure forms and that inadvertent omissions "would not happen in the future."

During his confirmation hearings, Meese was forced to recount several instances in which he helped secure government jobs for people who were involved in arranging personal loans for him.

An independent counsel cleared him of criminal wrongdoing on those and other allegations.

Meese also told Congress that he would avoid conduct which "anyone ... for whatever subjective reason" would regard as unethical.

In accordance with his vows, Meese faithfully — though tardily — filled out his financial disclosure forms. He also entered a recusal agreement in which he declared that he would disqualify himself "from any matter in which I have a financial interest."

Despite those steps, Meese is now involved in similar trouble. There are questions over his failure to inform Justice Department subordinates about an investment partnership with a businessman now involved in the Wedtech scandal. In addition, he neglected to have that partnership approved by the Office of Government Ethics.

Meese's involvement with Wedtech, a company on whose behalf he has acknowledged interceding as White House counselor in 1982, is under criminal investigation by an independent counsel.

Meese's failure to inform his department colleagues of the financial arrangements will be the focus of a hearing Thursday by the Senate Subcommittee.

Victim's father awaits execution

SAN DIEGO (AP) — If murderer Robert Alton Harris is ever executed in the San Quentin gas chamber, a seat will be waiting in the witness area for Police Detective Steve Baker.

"I can't wait until I see him die," says Baker of the man who shot to death his only son and his son's friend nine years ago.

No execution date has been set, though Harris tops the state's list of more than 200 death row inmates because of the advanced state of his appeals. California has not executed a prisoner in more than 20 years.

If the day comes, "the governor and the warden have afforded (Baker) the opportunity to attend if he wishes," San Quentin spokesman John Reid said.

"Part of it is revenge," Baker said. "This has been going on for nine years. It's an open sore. Justice is supposed to be swift. Let me tell you — I'm in the justice system and it's not swift.

"I'm not going to be able to feel that it's over with until after the execution. When he is executed, then the sores can heal. I can put it out of my mind completely then, I hope."

On the same day as the killings, Harris and his brother were involved in a robbery. The elder Baker, then a patrol officer, helped arrest them. At the time Baker did know that his son was dead or that Harris had killed him.

"It was the end of the shift," Baker said of the Harris' arrest. "I went back to the station to change my clothes and went home. About a half-hour later, a sergeant was knocking on my door and explained to me my son had been murdered by the same people we had just arrested a few minutes ago."

Baker's son, Michael, and John Mayeski, both 16, were kidnapped July 5, 1978, from a Mira Mesa hamburger stand where they had stopped while on a fishing trip. They were killed in a remote area of Lake Miramar.

The murder was followed six years later by another tragedy for Baker: his eldest daughter, Tammy, died in a traffic accident, leaving only his youngest child, Linda, now 24.

A key witness against Harris in his 1979 trial was his brother Daniel, who was allowed to plead guilty to kidnapping and was sentenced to six years in prison in exchange for his testimony.

The last time the gas chamber was used in California was in April 1967.

Marchers seek greater PTL role

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — About 500 PTL contributors marched, chanted and prayed Saturday for a greater role in the troubled ministry's affairs, many of them calling for the ouster of the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

"Today we want a revolution at PTL," George Trakas, treasurer of the Association of PTL Partners, told the cheering crowd before the mile-long march through the Heritage USA Christian theme park began.

The group of partners, as PTL's regular contributors are called, does not support any particular leader officially. But a majority of the people marching Saturday seemed to favor the Falwell's ouster, and some chanted "Farewell, Falwell."

"Falwell go home," one of their signs read. "Jesus

First," and "Let the partners vote," were others. Defrocked evangelist Jim Bakker turned the PTL ministry over to Falwell and a new board of directors in March after admitting to a sexual liaison with a church secretary in 1980. But Bakker and his wife, Tammy, now accuse Falwell of wrongfully taking over the organization.

Trakas said the group's first priority is representation on the board of directors, and the association is ready to take the battle to court.

"It's a shame we have to fight legally ... but we have no other recourse," he told the crowd.

"We must withhold contributions to PTL so that we will have some force behind us," Trakas said to shouts of "Amen!" "Praise the Lord!" and "Hallelujah!"

Big Spring celebrates 211 years of America

The birth of the United States was celebrated across the nation in style Saturday — and residents of Big Spring were no exception.

The festive day began with the annual Highland South parade.

Dozens of people, ranging from infants to senior citizens, paraded west on Highland Drive for the seventeenth year.

Although the most common mode of getting from one end to the other was one's own feet, many made the trek in red, white and blue papered bikes, trikes and baby carriages. The marchers were accompanied by a kazoo band that played patriotic songs along the route.

Summerfest at Comanche Trail Park was underway at the same time.

Twenty teams competed for the coveted first place, in such imaginative events as the greased balloon race, the obstacle course and the tug-of-war.

When the dust settled on the battle field, the Pill Pushers, representing Professional Pharmacy, were victorious. For the rest, once again it's that familiar refrain: "Wait'll next year."

For those not participating in the events, food was available for consumption. Beer and soft drinks were sold to quench the thirsts of those braving the West Texas sun and warm winds.

The day ended with the fireworks display lighting the sky above South Mountain. The "ooohs" and "aaahs" of the crowds mixed with the crack of the exploding shells.

A fine tribute — to the country we call home.

Hawks, recruits in a predicament

By Eddie Curran

The Howard College basketball program is in a touchy situation — and an unfortunately unavoidable one at that.

The problem: When Hawks' coach Larry Brown left the school April 30 to become assistant coach at South Alabama, he did so in the latter half of the recruiting season.

Brown and Horstman are now gone, and at least three of the players they signed want out of their commitment to Howard.

Clay's father demanded his son's release, and it was given. Soon thereafter, Kassin arrived, and asked Howard College President Bob Riley not to release any more players.

Releasing players would set bad precedent

Riley said he found a consensus in his poll: Don't release players, regardless of the reason.

The recruiting circus would never end. The way it is now, at least that circus ends when the player signs.

There's another reason not to release the players, and it's the bottom line you'll find most everywhere — cost.

Last Christmas, both Brown and Horstman left Big Spring to go on the road. They were gone for the better part of three weeks.

In one stretch after the season, Horstman was in Big Spring approximately three days out of 30.

Howard College pays for all the recruiting expenses, and they pay for all the (literally) hundreds of long distance recruiting calls made throughout the year.

To release those players is also to release the money it took to recruit them — and to spend more money to recruit their replacements.

At the same time, it doesn't seem very admirable.

Talking with Horstman, Kassin and Riley, I heard three strikingly similar statements. They were: Horstman — "They didn't sign with Scott Horstman, they signed with Howard College."

Do you sign with a coach or a school?

The first time I heard that sentiment I knew it was a convenient catchphrase.

Andrews' guard Bernard Williams, one of the recruits who wants his release, came closer to the truth: "I was going to Howard College because of Coach Brown.

I can't say for sure, since I've never been in the living room with a coach, a recruit and the recruit's family, but I have a pretty good idea that a coach sells himself as much as he sells the school.

Brown told me, when reporting that he'd signed Clay and Williams, that before they graduated from Howard he expected Clay to lead the conference in assists and Williams to lead in scoring.

Horstman used to tell me of occasions when he spent time in living rooms with parents and grandparents, assuring them he would take care of their sons.

Although an athlete signs with a school, he doesn't sign with a particular school unless he knows and likes the coach.

When those commitments were made, it was Brown's or Horstman's hand that did the shaking.

Suppose Brown had said, "Look, neither I nor Scott will be here next year, but you can get a good education at Howard and I'm sure the Board of Directors there will hire an excellent coach."

Can Howard really fulfill its obligation?

Riley said: "It's an obligation on both parties, and we're going to fulfill our obligation and we feel they should fulfill their obligation.

I have little doubt that the players would enjoy Howard College, get a good education, enjoy playing for Coach Kassin, and be fine. But that's not the point.

You can't really blame Brown and Horstman. They both were offered significant increases in salary, and both are now closer to their dream — to be a Division I head coach.

As for Jerry Joyce, one of the three recruits, he now wants to attend Western Texas. His high school coach got the job there after he'd already signed with Howard.

"You'd be a damned fool to send an impact player to another school," Kassin said.

The answer to that is simple: In this case, it's the right thing to do.

Six in a row for Martina

Navratilova captures first '87 title, eighth Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — It was perfect theater — a two-character drama with sub plots worthy of Shakespeare.

There was Martina Navratilova, still without a tournament victory in 1987, seeking a special place in the record books.

Lendl vs. Cash 8 a.m. today

A victory would make Graf No. 1 in the world, an honor Navratilova had held since the autumn of 1985.

The setting was Wimbledon, the grass-courts championship Navratilova has ruled since 1982.

"If it's time to win a tournament, this is the one to win. The place has always been very special," said Navratilova.

She defeated Graf 7-5, 6-3 to capture a record sixth straight and a record-tying eighth overall Wimbledon singles title.

The victory also quieted talk that Graf's success had gotten to Navratilova, and that the iron woman of tennis was not as strong-willed as she used to be.

"I had beaten myself a couple of times (this year) and that was just not going to happen here," Navratilova said.

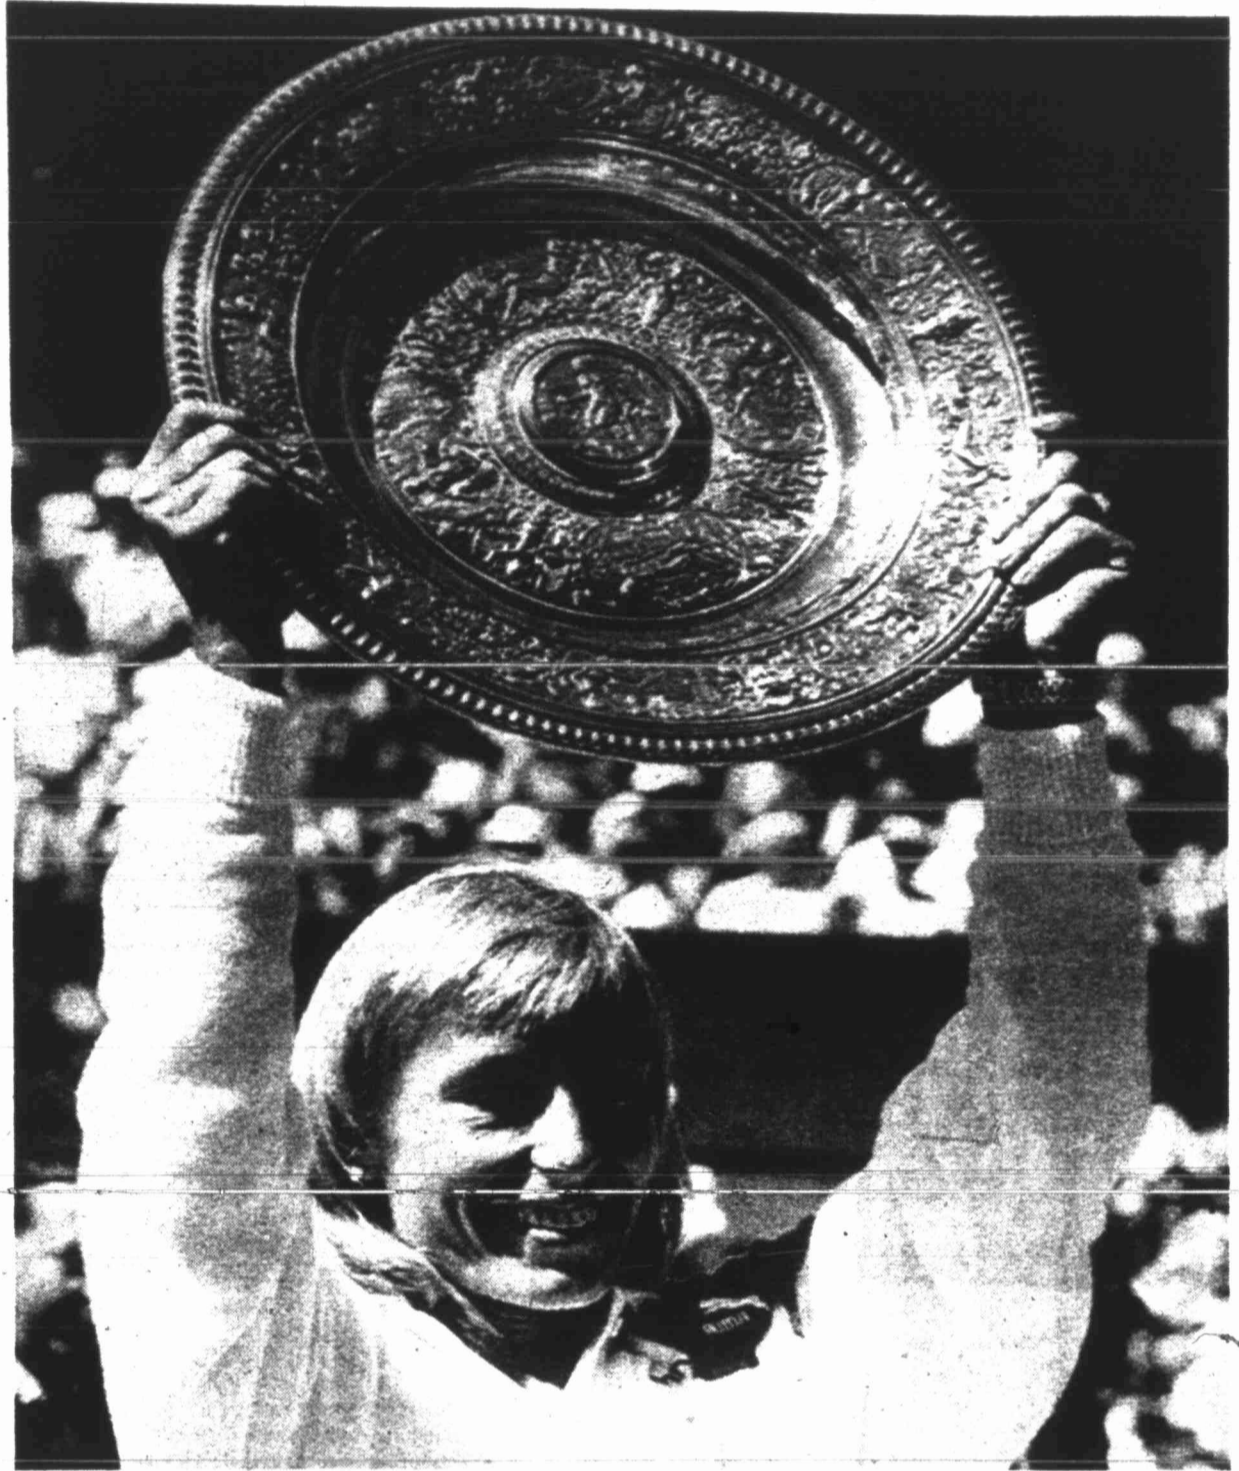

At the French Open last month, Navratilova held match point when she double-faulted twice, and Graf eventually broke. A third double-fault, in the third set, gave Graf the victory.

On Saturday, she broke Graf in the eighth game of the second set and found herself serving for the match.

"When I broke, it happened so quickly and winning was within reach," Navratilova said.

But this was the grass-courts of Wimbledon, not the clay of Paris.

"Martina on grass is a different player from other surfaces," Graf said. "She was playing a great match, she was serving really well and she didn't miss any volleys at all.

Martina Navratilova holds up her eighth Wimbledon singles trophy after she defeated Steffi Graf 7-5, 6-4 to win the championship.

really played well." By winning for the sixth consecutive year, Navratilova broke the record she shared with Suzanne Lenglen of France and Sweden's Bjorn Borg.

"I haven't forgotten how to win," Navratilova said. "I haven't forgotten how to win Wimbledon. I'd rather win this and nothing else than the other way around."

Navratilova neutralized Graf's booming serve and rocket forehand by taking the pace off the ball, both on her serve and her groundstrokes.

And she rushed to the net at every opportunity, the classic grass-court strategy. In all, Navratilova went to net 61 times, winning 34 points.

Americans Ken Flach and Robert Seguso celebrated the Fourth of July by coming from two sets down to capture the men's doubles title, 3-6, 6-7, 7-6, 6-1, 6-4 over the Spanish pair of Sergio Casal and Emilio Sanchez.

Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany and Czechoslovakia's Helena Sukova won the women's doubles crown, downing American Betsy Nagelsen and Australia's Elizabeth Smylie 7-5, 7-5.

The men's final pits the tournament's No. 2 and No. 11 seeds.

Lendl, trying to add a first Wimbledon victory to three French Open and two U.S. Open championships, made it to his second consecutive final here with a 3-6, 6-4, 7-6, 6-4 victory Friday over fourth-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden.

Cash, the first Australian finalist since Ken Rosewall in 1974, gained his first Wimbledon championship appearance with a 6-4, 6-4, 6-1 victory over Jimmy Connors, ending the 34-year-old American's dream of a third Wimbledon championship.

Country Club pro knows his business

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Editor

Chuck Palmer belongs in the golf business. Even in his early youth, Palmer knew he wanted golf to be his profession.

Palmer had all the early symptoms of being a golf fanatic.

He went from starting the game at age 11, to hitting balls off the Coast Guard ship, getting a college scholarship, and finally joining the Professional Golf Association and going on tour.

Now he's taken a liking to his new job at the Country Club.

Palmer comes to Big Spring from Pinewood Country Club in Beaumont. He took over the job vacated by Gary Hammer in October.

Palmer says he has enjoyed the move thoroughly.

"This is definitely a change of climate from the Houston area. It's good to get-out of that hot, humid weather. And the economy is worse there than it is here.

"The Beaumont-Houston area is oil-oriented. We might think it's bad in Big Spring. Beaumont and Houston really had the slats kicked out from under them," he said.

Palmer found out about the job opening from a friend in San Angelo. He and his wife Nikola have been enjoying themselves in the Spring City. The Palmers have a son, Kyle, 21 and a daughter, Kelly, 18, still living in Beaumont.

"It doesn't take 10 minutes to get where you're going in Big Spring. In the city it takes an hour to get from one side to the other," he said.

"It seems like all the people here know each other. You don't have those kinds of relationships in the city.

"The people in West Texas seem like they're friendlier than the ones in the metropolitan area. Here people care about each other. In the city it's push, push, push!

Country Club golf pro Chuck Palmer takes a break in the shade at the Country Club golf course.

"You bet I'm glad to get out of the city. I have no problems adjusting to the lifestyle here. This just seems like a place you ought to be."

Palmer says he took it upon himself to learn the game at age 11 while growing up in the East Texas town of Palestine.

He was drafted and went into the Coast Guard during the Korean War era. "I decided I didn't want to spend my time lying in a trench so I joined the Coast Guard," he explains.

biggest thrills was stealing a watermelon at night," he remembers, laughing.

Palmer soon became a top notch high school golfer and had plans to play in college. But his country's call to duty interrupted those plans.

It was a smart move as far as his golfing career was concerned. It just happened that the captain of his ship was an avid golfer, so he and Palmer spent what free time they had brushing up on their games.

"We always had a bag of balls and we drove a lot of balls off the back of the ship. We would pull in posts and I got to play on courses in Bermuda, Jamaica and the Bahamas."

After serving his four year stint in the Coast Guard, Palmer resumed his golfing career, receiving a scholarship to the University of Houston. After one year at Houston he transferred to Lamar University on a golf scholarship. He graduated from there three years later.

At Lamar he learned a lot about this area because several West Texans played on the golf team, including Jerry Scott and Bobby Bloom of Big Spring. Other West Texans included Jerry Cosbie of Midland and Danny Swain of Odessa.

Upon graduation, Palmer soon qualified for the PGA tour. There he spent a rough two years on the circuit.

"I spent more money than I made. Back then the purses weren't as big as they are now. A guy can finish in the top 25 and make a good living. Up to the top 80 he can make a decent living," he said of his rigors on the PGA.

Fulfilling his dream of staying in the profession, he got his first job as golf pro at the Willow Wisp Country Club in Houston. Twenty-five years and five country clubs later, he's still in the business.

Still a zero-handicap golfer, the Big Spring Country Club golf pro doesn't get much time to brush up on his game. "When the weather is good and on holidays, that's when I put in the 15 hour workdays. I'm a better winter and bad weather

Hayes' homers doom Astros

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Von Hayes drove in four runs with two homers and a double and Ron Roenicke highlighted a four-run fifth inning with a two-run double as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated Houston for their seventh victory in eight games.

Hayes hit his 10th homer in the seventh inning and added a two-run shot in the eighth after doubling in a run in the first.

Tom Hume, 1-0, appearing in his 26th game but starting for only the second time, gave up eight hits and three earned runs in six innings. Mike Jackson pitched the final three innings for his first major-league save.

Jim Deshaies, 8-3, was the loser, snapping a streak of six straight victories.

Cardinals 3, Braves 0

ATLANTA (AP) — St. Louis pitcher Danny Cox had seven walks in six innings Saturday, but he survived his wildness without allowing any runs because he had Graig Nettles' number.

"Getting Nettles three times with the bases loaded isn't going to happen too often," Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said after St. Louis' 3-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves. "It wasn't going to happen a fourth time today."

Speedster Vince Coleman had a pair of singles, scored twice and knocked in another run for the Cardinals.

Coleman singled in the first inning off loser Zane Smith, stole his 52nd base and scored from second on Tommy Herr's infield hit. In the fifth, Cox tripped and scored on a single by Coleman, who then came home on Ozzie Smith's double.

Pirates 4, Dodgers 2

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bob Kipper limited Los Angeles to a run and four hits over 6 1/3 innings, and Andy Van Slyke had three extra-base hits as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Dodgers.

Van Slyke had a triple and two doubles and scored twice. He has four extra-base hits in his last two games.

The Dodgers ended a streak of 21 scoreless innings on Phil Garner's second-inning sacrifice fly, and Pedro Guerrero drove in a run with a single in the ninth.

Cubs 5, Giants 3 CHICAGO (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe became the first NL pitcher with 11 wins and Bob Dernier went 3-for-4, including a homer, as the Chicago Cubs beat the San Francisco Giants.

Sutcliffe, 11-4, gave up eight hits, including a two-run homer by Chris Brown and a solo shot by Chili Davis as 20 mph winds at Wrigley Field were blowing from center to left field.

Sutcliffe struck out a season-high 10 and walked two in eight innings. After a leadoff single by Davis in the ninth, Lee Smith relieved Sutcliffe and got the last three outs for his 21st save.

Manny Trillo had three hits and two RBI for the Cubs.

Reds 7, Mets 3

CINCINNATI (AP) — A throwing error by New York third baseman Howard Johnson let in two fourth-inning runs that gave Cincinnati the lead and Kal Daniels capped a six-run inning with a two-run homer as the Reds rallied to beat the Mets.

Bill Gullickson, 8-5, snapped a personal three-game losing streak with his first victory since May 30, a span of six unsuccessful starts, and his third complete game in 18 starts.

Eric Davis hit his 24th homer for the Reds.

Expos 4, Padres 3

MONTREAL (AP) — Hubie Brooks hit his sixth home run of the season with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning, lifting Montreal over San Diego.

Brooks hit a 3-1 pitch from San Diego reliever Rich Gossage, 0-1, as the Expos won their seventh straight game against the Padres after dropping the first meeting of the season. Montreal also moved past the New York Mets into second and trails first-place St. Louis by 6 1/2 games in the NL East.

Tim Burke, 1-0, the second Montreal pitcher, pitched two scoreless innings for the victory.

Texas Tech Day set for Tuesday

Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones, head football coach Spike Dykes and a group of his assistants will be in Big Spring Tuesday for Texas Tech Day at the Big Spring Country Club.

The schedule of events begins at 2 p.m. with a shotgun start, scramble format golf tournament. A hamburger buffet will follow at 6 p.m. The fee for the golf is $25, and there's a $10 charge for the meal. Participants need not be Tech alumnus.

For more information, call Arrick at 267-2531; or Steve Fraser at 263-7613. Fraser said to call him on Arrick by Sunday to reserve a spot for the meal.

64 captures Watermelon Open

The foursome of Ron and Vicki Broadrick and Sammy and Vonclie Sims won the Big Spring Country Club Watermelon Open Saturday with an 18-hole score of 64.

The foursome of Mike Scarborough and Tammy Newsome and J.D. and Mary Ruth Robertson beat the foursome of Savoy and Donna Kay and Lefty and Lane Reynolds in a scorecard playoff for second. Both teams turned in 65's.

Also in a scorecard playoff, the team of Dean and Jackie Swinney and Ruth and Gloria Palmer defeated Hooper Sanders and Lea Corson and R.H. Weaver and Cheryl Stevens. Both teams shot 66.

Last day for bowling sign-up

The First Chicano Invitational Bowling Tournament will be July 18-19 at the Big Spring Bowl-A-Rama.

The entry deadline for the tourney is today.

Police, fireman play ball Sunday

The Big Spring Police and Fire Departments will collide in the "Duel on the Diamond," a softball game next Sunday to raise money for the Saragosa disaster victims.

The game will start at 6 p.m. at the Comanche Trail softball complex. There will be no admission charge, but a collection bucket will be passed around.

National League names all-stars

The National Little League has voted on its all-star team, which will play in the all-star tournament. That tournament, which will include four teams from Big Spring and teams from Midland, Coahoma and Lamesa, begins Monday, July 13.

Players selected to the National League team were Chris Alexander, Oscar Cervantes, Michael Elliot, Ricky Hamby, Wes Hughes, Clint Kemper, Brian Martinez, David Park, Dennis Poulette, Ross Roberts, Felix Rodriguez, Brian Sledge, Tony Taylor and Danny Wilson.

The manager will be Rick Hughes, the coach will be Gilbert Cobos, and Don Taylor will be the business manager.

Slumping Thon leaves Astros

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Houston shortstop Dickie Thon, frustrated by his slow comeback from a beaming three years ago, left the Astros Friday night and said he would not play for the remainder of the season.

"I am through this year," Thon said. "I just don't want to play this year because I think it's dangerous."

Asked if he would retire, Thon said, "... I don't want to use that word. I don't know what will happen later."

Thon has never been able to recapture the form that made him an All-Star in 1983 after he was hit above the left eye by a pitch from Mike Torrez of the New York Mets on April 8, 1984.

Thon's vision, which had been better than 20-20 in his left eye, was reduced to 20-300 after the incident. It has since improved to about 20-40.

Canadian among leaders at Canadian

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Mike McCullough, two shots ahead of the field, double bogeyed his final hole and dropped back into a three-way tie for the lead Saturday after three rounds of the $600,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

McCullough's disaster enabled Curtis Strange and Canadian Dick Zokol to move into a share of the top spot at 207 going into Sunday's final round.

"I'd really like to have that 2-shot lead going into tomorrow,"

McCullough said after he finished a 4-under-par 68 with a shot into the water.

"I'd like to have two more shots to play around with. That's two that you wouldn't have to make up," said McCullough, 42, who has yet to score an official victory in a 16-year PGA Tour career.

"I know it's going to be a very special feeling when I do win. I just hope it happens tomorrow," he said.

Zokol, attempting to become the first Canadian to win this national championship in 33 years, had a 3-under-par 69 in the third round.

He was among the 78 players who were forced to return to the Glen Abbey Golf Club at 7 a.m. after a series of thunderstorms washed out play Friday afternoon.

Zokol put on a birdie-birdie-eagle finish for a 68 in his second round, took a share of the lead at that point, then regained a tie for the top when McCullough's second shot found the lake on his 18th hole.

"A long day," he said. "I'm just trying to keep the anxiety down, remain calm, keep it simple."

"A tournament is a tournament. But this is the national championship, and it's important to me."

"Even if it's not me, I think it'd be super for a Canadian to win this tournament," he said.

Strange, a former winner of this national title, birdied his last hole to complete a 66, the best round of the day.

Sports Illustrated jinxed the Tribe

CLEVELAND (AP) — On April 6, the cover of Sports Illustrated proclaimed the Cleveland Indians the "Best Team in the American League." That same month, the cover of Sport Magazine said of the Indians, "The Last Shall Be First."

Center fielder Brett Butler wants to make sure people realize it was writers, not players, who awarded the 1987 AL East title to Cleveland before the season ever began.

"I was surprised everybody picked us first, basically because we didn't do much with our pitching staff during the off-season," Butler said. "I don't feel like we put any of those expectations on ourselves."

Yet no one, Butler included, expected the Indians to have the worst record in baseball three months into the season.

"We felt that we had a good ballclub," Butler said. "We started out slow, but we've done that before. We had that winning streak (10 games) in May last year, and then we had another one (seven games) in July where we picked it up, too. We haven't been able to do that this year."

Realistically, Cleveland's hopes died in the first two weeks of the season, when the Indians lost 10 of their first 11 games and found themselves 10 1/2 games behind the then-unbeaten Milwaukee Brewers.

"You start juggling your pitching staff, juggling your batting order," Butler said. "And we started thinking as individuals."

"I don't mean that in a negative way, but I started feeling like I needed to get on base more to pick us up. Cory Snyder starts thinking he needs to drive in more runs. Joe Carter starts thinking he's got to hit more home runs. We were all doing things individually, instead of as a team."

Even the Indians' hitting, which was supposed to overcome mediocre pitching, was bad. Only Julio Franco and Pat Tabler are hitting over .300 and the team is hitting in the .240s.

Carter, who hit .302 with 29 homers and 121 RBI last year, had 16 homers and 48 RBI in the first three months of this year but was hitting only .243. Snyder has hit 13 homers with 31 RBI but has also struck out an alarming 82 times. Tony Bernazard, a .301 hitter last year, has been bothered by a sore wrist and was hitting .229 entering July.

And the pitching has been as bad as ever.

Left-hander Greg Swindell, who showed great promise last season when he went 5-2 after being called up last August, has had arm troubles and is 3-8 record. Tom Candiotti, whose newfound knuckleball produced a 16-12 record last season, won just two of his first 11 decisions this year.

Reliever Ernie Camacho, tabbed to be the late-inning stopper, was so bad he was sent to Buffalo. Ken Schrom, an All-Star a year ago, has an ERA over 6.00. Cleveland's only decent starters in June were 42-year-old Steve Carlton and 48-year-old Phil Niekro, who combined for a 6-3 record.

With their team ERA well above 5.00, the Indians decided last week to reassign pitching coach Jack Aker to scouting duties.

player than anything, because that's when I get to play."

Palmer and his assistants, Mark Couch, Jeff Rhodes and Robert Stone, have worked hard to get the Country Club course in tip top shape. The abundance of rain hasn't hurt matters either.

"For West Texas, some of the best golf greens can be found here. With all the rain we've got, it's probably as green as it will ever be. This ground is so fertile that anything will grow with water."

Then he took the time to praise his young assistants.

"All of them (assistants) are good golfers from Big Spring. They are lots of help because they really love the game and they get after it. They put in their hours and they get along well with the members."

These are the type of youngsters who are dedicated, and someday make golf professionals.

"We work what you call 'B Class Hours'. We'll be there when it opens and we'll be there when it closes," he chuckled.

After all, Chuck Palmer wouldn't have it any other way.

If the poem's right, Howser's with Casey

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dick Howser lay in a hospital bed near death and John Schuerholz, threading his way through morning traffic, wished he knew why.

The field manager of the Kansas City Royals and the team's general manager had become close friends over what had been just about the most tumultuous six years of their lives. They agonized together and charted a comeback when a drug scandal rocked the team in 1983.

Just two years later, Howser and his boss rolled through downtown Kansas City together in a laughter-filled World Series parade.

But fate allotted only nine months to savor their triumph before doctors found a malignant tumor growing in Howser's brain. For almost a year, Schuerholz had watched Howser fight the disease with a courage that won the admiration of not only this city, but the nation.

As he worked his way through rush hour traffic that melancholy morning last month, Schuerholz began composing a poem. By the time he arrived at work, every verse was etched in his mind, and he quickly transferred the words to paper.

Howser would die a few days later, on June 17. And Schuerholz, his voice cracking, would read that poem — exactly as it had come to him that morning — during memorial services in Kansas City and Tallahassee, Fla.

"The words just came to me, the way they have at other times of emotional intensity in my life," said Schuerholz, who studied poetry and literature and taught school before deciding his destiny lay in baseball.

But what began as a personal expression for Howser's wife, Nancy, is becoming part of the public legacy of the popular Howser. Dozens of people who heard Schuerholz at the memorial services have requested copies of the 17-line tribute.

It was also suggested that Schuerholz read it a third time, Friday night when the Royals retire Howser's No. 10 and induct him into their Hall of Fame.

The entire composition took only five minutes, he says. "Dick's passing was imminent. The words just came to me as I was driving to work," Schuerholz said. "They just came to me."

Poetry might seem an unusual hobby for somebody voted major-league executive of the year in 1985. But Schuerholz always had a love for literature and poetry.

"I attended the Baltimore Institute of Art during several summers in high school," he said. "I've always enjoyed artistic material and reading. I love the sound, and feel of poetry. It's sort of an avocation, if you will."

Schuerholz first presented Nancy Howser with a copy of his poem and then asked for permission to read it. He is preparing to make her another copy.

It has also been suggested that the poem be included in Howser's Hall of Fame display in Royals Stadium.

The poem reads: "Connie Mack and Casey Stengel and Walter Alston wait to greet their newest brother outside the pearly gate ... They'll pull another chair up to the heavenly hot-stove table because they know their newest brother is among the very able ..."

Casey stood and gave a wink and pulled him close aside. "You've taught us all something more about this word called pride."

Quietly now Alston rose and shook his hand so tight. "Young man, you showed us all just how to wage a valiant fight."

The three of them then wrapped their arms around their newest member and led him to another one whose embrace is the most tender.

All three spoke in unison and said, "We've struck it rich right now, sir. Here's our newest shining star — the classy one — Dick Howser."

So from now on I have a thought that ought to help us all. Let's think of Dick and all he meant whenever we hear, "Play ball!"

Yanks edge Rangers; McGwire hits 29th

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Ward's pinch-hit single drove in the tie-breaking run in the fifth inning, lifting the New York Yankees to a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers.

With Texas leading 2-1, Dave Winfield's sacrifice fly tied the score, and Claudell Washington singled to knock Rangers starter Greg Harris, 2-8, out of the game before Ward greeted reliever Paul Kilgus with a line-drive single to left.

Dennis Rasmussen, 7-4, the first of four Yankee pitchers, allowed three hits in the first five innings for the victory. Dave Righetti gave up an RBI single to Scott Fletcher, but earned his 17th save by pitching the ninth.

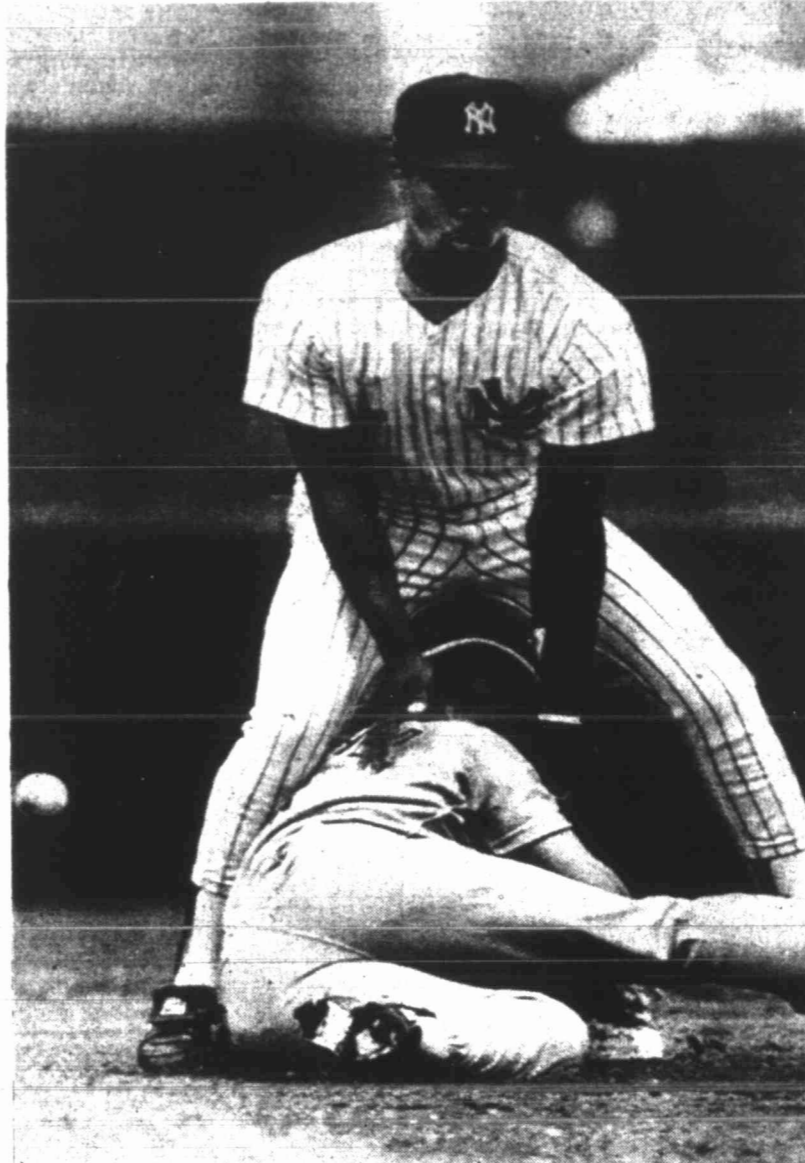

Righetti's thoughts may have been elsewhere since the date marked the fourth anniversary of his no-hitter against the Boston Red Sox before he became one of the American League's best relievers.

"There's no way I could get around it," Righetti said when asked about the anniversary of the Yankees' only regular season no-hitter since 1951.

"I get a lot of ticket stubs and paper clippings from around the world," Righetti said, "and I guess if people forgot about it, it would be disappointing."

NEW YORK (AP) — Bud Black pitched five-hit ball over six innings in his first appearance since knee surgery and George Brett drove in three runs as Kansas City beat Toronto, handing the Blue Jays their seventh straight loss.

The Blue Jays, first in the American League East for three weeks in June, had not lost more than six in a row since a club record 12-game skid in 1981. Toronto now trails the first-place New York Yankees by five games.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jerry Hairston snapped a scoreless tie with a two-run double in the seventh inning and Rich Dotson allowed five hits in 2 2/3 innings as the Chicago White Sox survived a ninth-inning rally to defeat Cleveland.

Oakland, Calif. (AP) — Jose Canseco drove in four runs and rookie Mark McGwire hit his major league-leading 29th homer as Oakland held on to beat Boston.

Oakland starter Jose Rijo gained his first victory after four losses. Rijo allowed 11 hits and five runs over 7 1/3 innings and Dennis Eckersley finished for his fourth save.

Oakland loaded bases in the first against Bruce Hurst and Canseco doubled to drive in three runs. McGwire and Canseco hit back-to-back homers in the fifth to give the A's a 7-1 lead.

Twins 4, Orioles 1
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Kent Hrbek hit a two-run homer and rookie Les Straker pitched four-hit ball over seven innings as Minnesota defeated Baltimore, the Orioles' sixth straight loss.

Minnesota won for the 12th time in its last 13 home games and improved to 28-13 at the Metrodome this season. The Orioles have lost 29 of their last 34 games.

With the score tied 1-1, Kirby Puckett led off the third with a single off Eric Bell, 6-6. One out later, Hrbek hit his 21st homer of the season, just clearing the 23-foot right-field curtain.

Campanis regrets remarks, hopes for improvement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Al Campanis, whose 46-year career with the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers ended in a furor over remarks concerning the fitness of blacks to hold baseball management jobs, says the turmoil will be worthwhile if "betterment of blacks" is the result.

After he said in an ABC-TV "Nightline" interview in April that blacks "lacked some of the necessities" to become managers or general managers, the clamor over Campanis' statements forced his resignation as player personnel chief of the Dodgers. He has maintained throughout that he isn't a racist.

During a telephone interview Friday, Campanis said that he used the wrong words under pressure of the TV interview, and they did not reflect what he believes or what he practiced in his years as a player, minor league manager and Dodger executive.

In the 2 1/2 months since his remarks put a cloud over baseball, Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and other officials have pledged to improve job opportunities for minorities.

"If this thing turns out for the betterment of blacks, then what happened to me was worthwhile," Campanis said.

"When I said blacks lacked the 'necessities' to be baseball managers or general managers, what I meant was the lack of necessary experience, not things like inherent intelligence or ability."

Concerning the TV interview, to mark the 40th anniversary of Jackie Robinson's breaking of baseball's color barrier, the 70-year-old Campanis said, "I was dead tired after traveling when I went on the 'Nightline' show. I got confused. It was like a telegram. You try to say it in a few words, and it's implied differently."

"I didn't want to go on. I was sitting in a seat in the empty Houston stadium, with a thing in my ear to hear the questions. I just wasn't myself. I got burned. I said things I didn't mean, explaining things I couldn't."

"I don't blame Peter for what he did. He had to do it," Campanis said of the pressure brought on Dodgers President Peter O'Malley to force Campanis to resign.

Campanis said he feels there is no prejudice in baseball and that an owner will hire a man who will bring him a pennant or a championship, regardless of color or religion.

"Things are getting better for me. I've had a lot of support," said Campanis, who is working on a book about his career with the Dodgers. Of the 11 chapters he has written, one deals with his instructional work with Robinson while with the Dodgers minor league team in Montreal. That was shortly before Robinson joined the Dodgers in Brooklyn as the first black to play major league baseball.

"Jackie would have made a great manager or general manager," Campanis said. "Other black players who would have made great managers included Roy Campanella — but he was injured — and Jim Gilliam." Both starred with the Dodgers, and Gilliam was later a coach when the team moved to Los Angeles.

Among black baseball stars of recent years who have the capability of managing is Joe Morgan, Campanis said.

"Joe was a catalyst with Cincinnati, and with Houston and with the Giants. Others I've said would make good managers include Wilbur Stargell, and Frank Robinson and Maury Wills have been managers in recent years."

Campanis said he taught school between baseball seasons before Dodger General Manager Branch Rickey hired him fulltime in the late 1940s. "A lot of what I have done in baseball is teaching," Campanis said.

"I've said I'd like to teach a seminar, say once a week, free of charge, to talk to blacks and whites about all aspects of baseball management — such things as free agents, the intricacies of contracts, the option rule. There's a myriad of things you have to learn."

Forsan's fluid frolicking

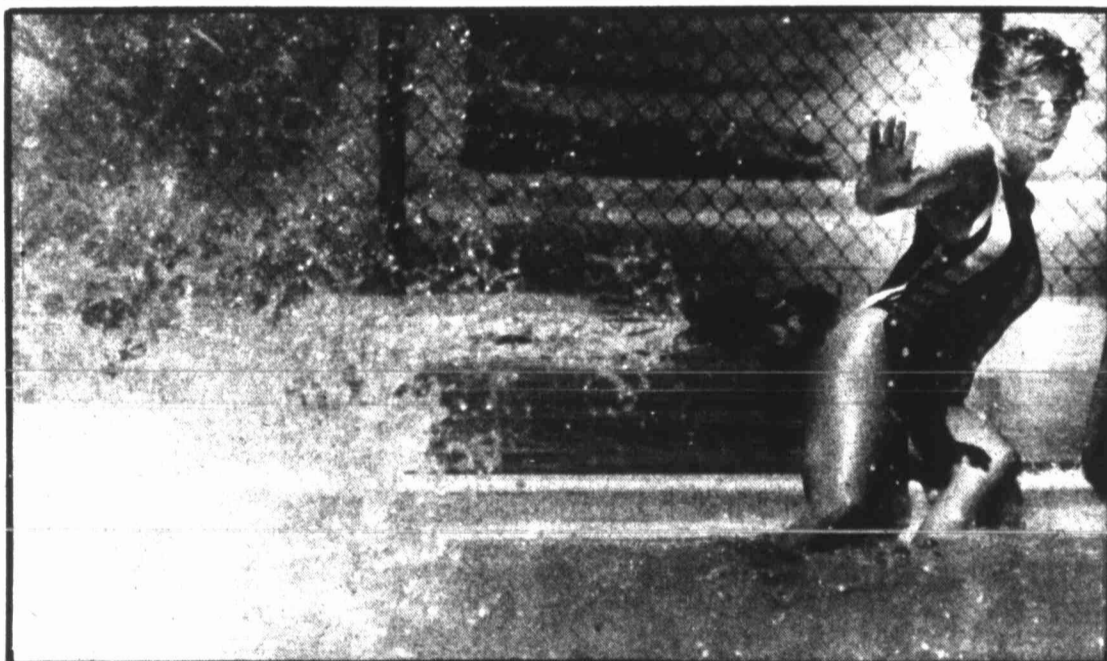

Rusty Newcomb, 18, goes for one of his patented kamikaze leap from the diving board. Rusty is the son of Charlie and Sherri Newcomb.

Reflections on a summer afternoon at poolside; or A Forsan Treat to Beat the Heat. Visiting the swimming pool at Forsan, one comes away with the following impressions:

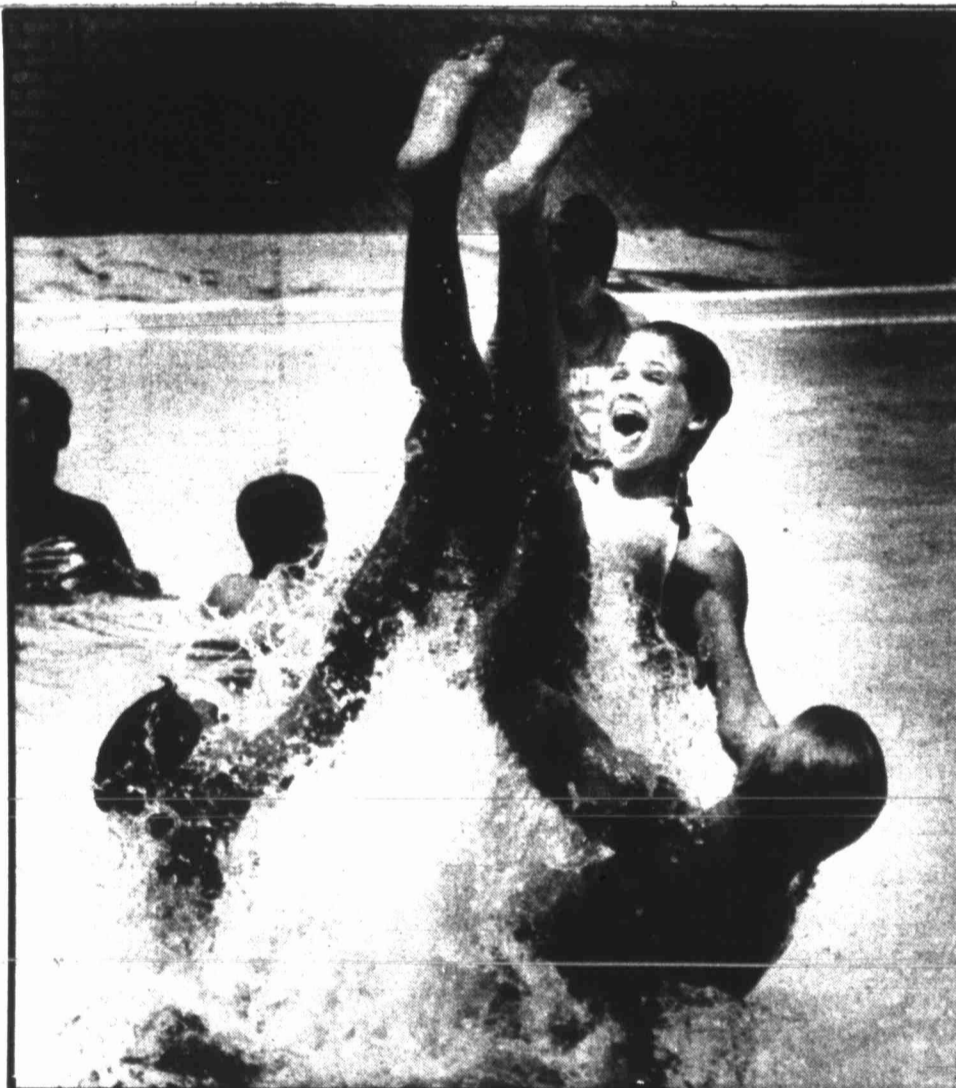

- ★ If there's anything as universal as death and taxes, it's hot-doggers on the diving board. With such dives as the cannonball, the swan and the jack-knife, would-be Greg Louganis' vie for attention and try to drench everyone in the vicinity.
- ★ The edge of the pool can be a treacherous place to stand. Innocent people, whose only crime was wandering too close to the pool, have been tossed in — without explanation or apology.
- ★ Poolside games can be downright inventive.

Jeannie Crowder, 11, described one such diversion known as Dibble-Dabble. First, a person tosses a small object — a golf tee, nickel or pebble will do — into the deep end of the pool. A mad scramble for the tee ensues, and the first person back to the surface with the prize is the winner.

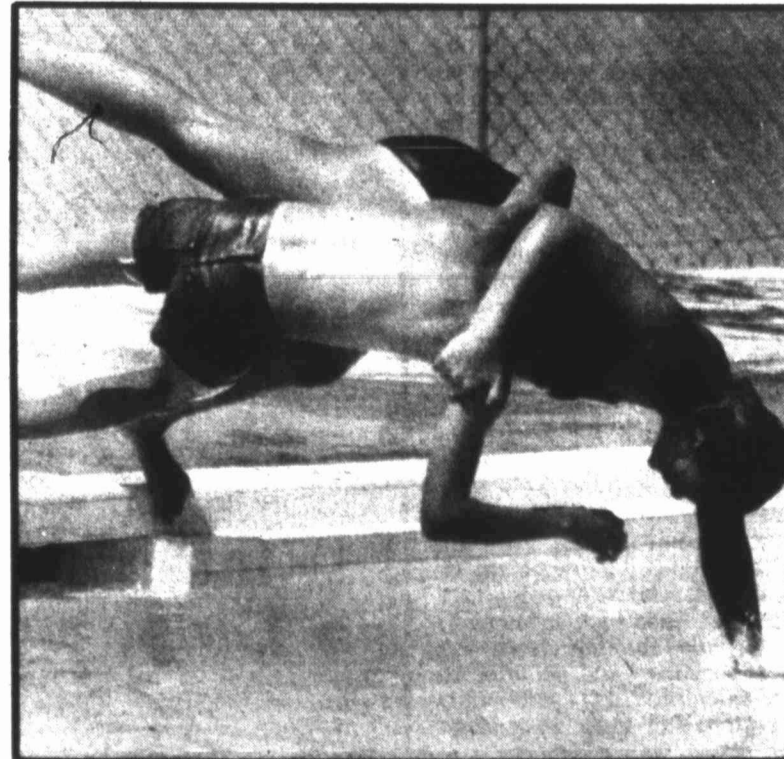

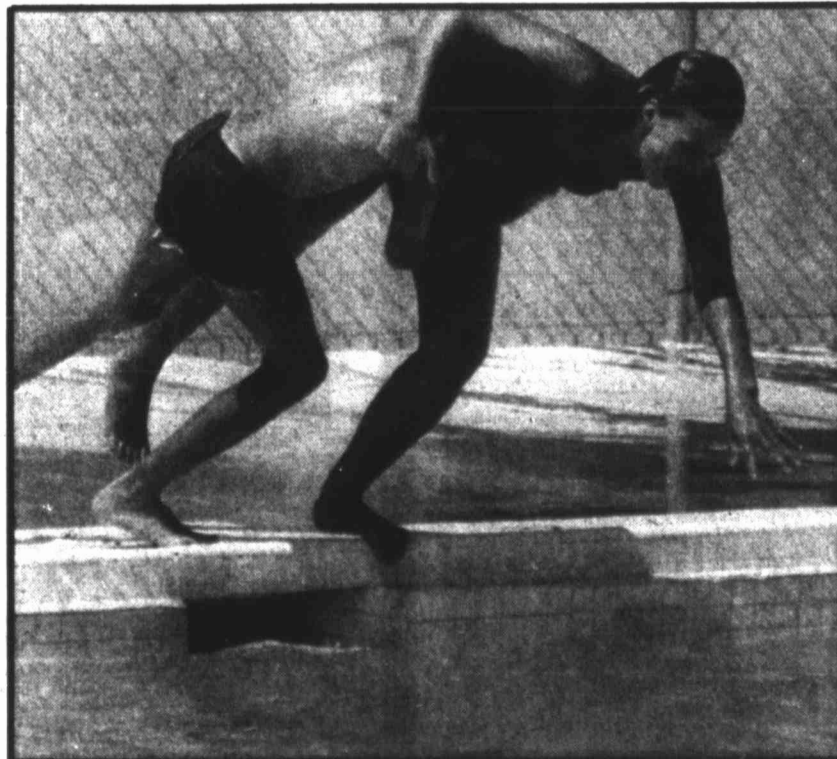

- ★ Lifeguards always seem to be bored, but never blink when a small child is near the pool.
- ★ The pool is a good place to hang out and meet your friends. Melissa Nichols and Cheryl Hill, both 11, say that's the major reason they swim. "This place is better than Water Wonderland — sometimes," Melissa said.
- ★ Bikinis are an endangered species — at least in Forsan.

Angel Cannon, 17, daughter of Charles and Deanie Burdette, attempts to shield herself from the splashing water of a diver as she sits at poolside at the deep end.

Casey Cook, 12, daughter of Don and Kay Cook, gets lifted out of the water, so that she can get tossed in again upside down.

Brandon Riffe, 14, son of Archie and Debbie Riffe, grabs Terri Newcomb, 14, daughter of Charlie and Sherri Newcomb, as she walked past the pool. Making a determined effort, Brandon pushed her closer and closer — until they both took an impromptu dive.

Gardener shares planting tips

Beautiful and versatile, shrubs planted along your house foundation not only beautify your home and enhance its value, they provide privacy, hide unsightly views and help insulate against heat and cold, said Howard Trivelpiece, world champion gardener.

When you plant your shrubs, take their ultimate size into consideration so they don't block windows when they're fully grown.

"I've always felt that evergreen shrubs create the most beautiful setting for a home," said Trivelpiece. But evergreens have needs that are different from other plants. They usually require acid soil and they may suffer from the winter's wind and cold.

In the spring it's important to give them special attention with a special plant food such as Miracid. This formula not only feeds the shrub, it ironizes and acidifies to create a favorable soil condition. It can restore full vigor in a short time.

"In the yard and especially on property borders for privacy, I like forsythia and lilac," Trivelpiece said. Both are hardy and adaptable and provide a breathtaking floral show in the spring.

Homeowners have rights too Newcomers

DEAR ABBY: I am a businesswoman as well as a housewife and homeowner. In the last 10 days I have had to cope with the gas company, the telephone company, drapery cleaners, upholsterers and an appliance repairman.

In each case I could not get them to tell me whether they would come before noon or after noon. Today was the last straw when the drapery cleaners told me that they would pick up my draperies "sometime Thursday or Friday."

I am a working woman and cannot stay home all day Thursday and Friday waiting for something to be picked up. I told them that if they could not tell me within one and a half hours when they will arrive, I would find someone who could.

Abby, if more consumers stand up for their rights, another field of consumer exploitation will fall. Homeowners need to remember that their time has value also. Such a battle cannot be won alone, so I hope you will share this with your readers, and a new grass roots movement will get started.

HARRIET IN PHOENIX
DEAR HARRIET: Count me in as a charter member. Readers, how many times have you lost time from work to stay at home waiting for a repair person who came three or four hours late — or not at all? The next time that happens, do not reschedule an appointment with that company. If you have a choice, give a competitor a chance.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married four months ago. We are both 20. It's that time of year when the grass has to be mowed. "Ron" and I both mow it.

When Ron mows, if he gets hot, he takes off his shirt. If I get hot while mowing, I take off mine. Ron says I could be arrested for indecent exposure.

Why is it acceptable for a man to take off his shirt in public, but not for a woman? None of our neighbors are at home during the daytime, and besides I don't have anything much to see anyway.

HOT WHILE MOWING

DEAR NOT: Whether you have "anything much" to see or not is not the point. A bare-breasted woman is considered to be "indecently exposed" in public — so better cover up with an itty-bitty

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: When that 16-year-old, fairly attractive female asked what to say to people who say, "Did you know you have a mustache?" you advised her to look them squarely in the eye and say, "Yes. And thank you for reminding me."

I think these dumbbells deserve something like this: Look them squarely in the eye and say, "Yes, and did you know you have a big nose?" ("a flat chest?" "a big behind?")

FIGHT FIRE WITH FIRE
DEAR FIGHT: One who fights fire with fire risks making an ash of himself. Why go down to their level to get even?

DEAR ABBY: I am so angry and disappointed! Earlier today a good friend of my deceased husband's grabbed me in a sexual way. I was shocked, and told him off in no uncertain terms. If I were interested in a man, it would be for marriage — not a casual romp in the hay.

His wife and I are such good friends, and when my husband was alive, we were a constant foursome. Is there no loyalty, no respect for old friendships? His wife would be devastated if she knew, and my late husband would turn over in his grave if he knew his good friend was such a rat. Abby, this man has destroyed a friendship. Now I am going to be forever uncomfortable when I see him or his wife. Any advice on how to handle this from now on?

INSULTED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR INSULTED: Since you have already put him in his place, chalk it up as an unfortunate lapse in judgment and try to put it behind you. Don't sacrifice your friendship with his wife? A woman whose husband tried to put the make on her friends needs all the friends she can keep. And as unbelievable as it may seem, the poor boob probably thought he was doing you a favor.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 35-year-old woman who has worked at the same desk for 12 years. I am not even what you would call a secretary; I control billing and inventory for a company.

I dread the month of April, and it's not because of National Secretaries Week.

The owner of this company thinks he's God's gift to women. Because I am divorced, he assumes that I am man hungry. (I'm not.) I once needed a day off to take care of some personal business, so he let me off. The following week he told me I could "repay" him for the day off by meeting him at his beach house while his wife was out of town. Frankly, I wouldn't touch this man with a 10-foot pole, so I just told him I would have to ask my "boyfriend." Well, that blew out his candle in a hurry.

I love my job. The money is great, but this boss is the bad part of the job. Thank God for my imaginary boyfriend.

NO NAME IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR NO NAME: Should you ever misplace your 10-foot pole, be aware that your boss is guilty of sexual harassment.

DEAR ABBY: I think you were in error when you stated that when introducing a stepmother, one should say, "This is my dad's wife." To me, that seems cold and distant.

For 10 years my stepson introduced me as "my dad's wife." I felt like an outsider and not a part of the family. About a year ago he apologized, and started referring to me as his stepmother. I was elated and felt he had finally accepted me. Then out comes your column with that statement, and now he's back to calling me his dad's wife... Sign me...

OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

DEAR OUTSIDE: Thanks to the Cinderella fairy tale, "stepmother" has taken on a less-than-lovely connotation. You are entitled to your opinion, but I personally think "my dad's wife" would be preferred by most over "stepmother."

Study shows bananas reduce the risk of stroke

A recently revealed medical study may change the expression "An apple a day keeps the doctor away" to "A banana a day!" Based on 12-years of research, the study hails the banana as an important preventative measure in reducing the risk of death from stroke.

It was shown that the potassium provided by eating one banana a day cut the risk by 40 percent.

The study was done by Dr. Elizabeth Barrett-Connor and her colleagues at the University of California at La Jolla.

Researchers found the preventative value of potassium was independent of other cardiovascular risk factors such as age and blood cholesterol levels.

Potassium was the only nutrient which consistently related to a reduction of deaths due to stroke.

They found the addition of a single serving of potassium-rich fruit per day was enough to make a difference.

Bananas are a good choice for a daily supply of potassium — a medium banana has about 327 mgs.

For a free booklet with information on the healthful banana, write: International Banana Association, 1101 Vermont Ave., NW Suite 306, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Pop singer Madonna's first New York concert on her national "Who's That Girl?" tour will benefit AIDS research.

The American Foundation for AIDS Research will be the beneficiary of the July 13 concert at Madison Square Garden, it was announced Tuesday.

"This concert comes at a most fortuitous time," said Dr. Mathilde Krim of the foundation. "The money raised will be put to work in the laboratory by the end of July. But the gift of Madonna's talent ... will also educate our nation's youth, who are very vulnerable to this deadly virus."

MIAMI (AP) — Singer Lionel Richie has given a four-year college scholarship to a 17-year-old high school graduate who almost dropped out.

Sonja Braddy, who received the award Tuesday at a ceremony at Miami Jackson Senior High School attended by 650 people, said she had chosen Tuskegee University in Alabama, Richie's alma mater.

Miss Braddy, whose father died last year and mother died several years ago, was considering dropping out of school a year ago. Then she entered a program that helps such students.

The scholarship fund was started by Richie and the national dropout prevention program Cities in Schools.

"I share the philosophy of CIS that we all need to be involved in giving young people hope, incentive and interest in completing their education," Richie said.

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Jay Osmond, the youngest of the former Osmond Brothers, plans to marry a Brigham Young University student in August, honeymoon in Europe, then move to Nashville, Tenn.

Osmond, 32, and Kandilyn Harris, 20, a special education major from Burbank, Calif., will marry Aug. 4 in the Mormon Temple in Salt Lake City, family spokesman Ron Clark said.

After the wedding, the couple will travel in Europe for a month before moving temporarily to Nashville, where Osmond will work in a television series for one season, Clark said Tuesday.

Osmond left the entertainment business three years ago to continue his education. He plans to graduate in two years with a degree in public relations.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cardinal John J. O'Connor plans to do volunteer work for AIDS patients several times a week.

O'Connor went to St. Clare's hospital Tuesday to bless and dedicate the Spellman AIDS Center's dental health clinic, and promised to volunteer so he could "get to better know the patients," said Virginia Stuart, the hospital's director of community relations. O'Connor's spokesman, Monsignor Peter Finn, said the cardinal probably would work as a volunteer several times a week for a month or so.

Stuart said volunteers help patients in a variety of tasks or just visit with them.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Police say a car belonging to U.S. Sen. Claiborne Pell's wife, Nuala, apparently was taken for a joyride after being stolen from the senator's driveway.

The 1981 Buick Skylark with Rhode Island license plates reading "U.S. Senate 1" was reported missing Tuesday morning and found intact a few miles from Pell's home later that day, police said. Mrs. Pell told police she parked the car Monday night at Pelican Lodge, the Pells' oceanfront mansion.

"At this point, we think it was probably a joyride situation," police Sgt. Francis Tessina said.

Grandparents relationship with family discussed

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent
Some older people feel that they get mixed signals regarding their role as a grandparent and their relationship with the grandchildren. On one hand a grandparent may feel needed when asked to babysit, but may feel used if this happens too frequently.

On the other hand, a grandparent may be so busy she has little time to be involved with grandchildren but then feels hurt when she is not included in every family event. Another dilemma occurs when a grandparent offers advice to their children on disciplining grandchildren which is sometimes welcome but at other times rebuffed.

In the situations above, as in many other family interactions, it is not only the grandparents who feel as if they are walking a fine line but their adult children as well. It takes clear communication and a willingness to give and take to keep good family relationships.

Focus on family

Both generations also need time to themselves. Interdependent families who provide services for each other often "feel" their way through doing too much vs. too little, being too available as not available at all and offering will help the two generations keep a balance, sometimes with little formal discussion.

But even with mutual respect and a sense of give and take, signals can get mixed and result in hard feelings. Clear and open communication regarding needs and concerns is important for reducing mixed signals. Plan in advance for babysitting needs. Requesting a grandparent's time in this way demonstrates respect for the older person's personal time. When babysitting is done on a regular basis by a grandparent, have alternative arrangements for days the grandparent wants to attend Senior Camp or a special event. Grandparents can make such needs clearly known well in advance so other sitting arrangements are possible.

If grandparents feel left out of the younger family's activities they may want to think about signals they may be sending. Being rarely available for the younger families may signal a lack of interest. Demanding consideration because of age or status may signal a lack of trust in the younger generation's abilities and values.

Check out signals with adult children when questions arise to foster open communication.

Grandparents have an important role to play with younger families. They can help children with a sense of values based on years of living. They can share their love and strengths as well as their time. Grandparents can also gain a great deal from positive relationships with their adult children and grandchildren. They can feel needed and loved. They can be part of future generations and achieve a sense of continuity through this.

Ask the agent Weather change results in loss of tree leaves

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

Why are my mulberry leaves falling?

This seems to be the most prevalent tree problem our office has been contacted about in the past two weeks. There are several causes. One is that many of these trees are still showing the effects of our late freeze.

As you may recall, a freeze occurred about the time our mulberry trees were budding out and this resulted in what amounted to a severe tip pruning. This forced a lot of new side growth resulting in an extremely thick top growth.

This heavy shading had forced some natural defoliation along with the stress of hotter and drier temperatures. These hotter and drier conditions further dried out freeze damage twigs and branches cutting off water and food lines to the leaves and thus forcing them to lose some more leaves.

We have also had some disease problems that appear to be either bacterial or fungal related. Specimens of such infected trees have been sent off for laboratory analysis and our reports have not yet come back to us.

In the meantime please be sure your trees do not get in a stressed condition. Weak trees are more susceptible to disease and insect injury.

When should I spray my pecan trees for the second generation of casebearers?

Give or take a day or two, the predicted date recommended by our Extension Entomologist for Howard County will be around July 15, this year. Be sure to spray the entire tree with Zolone and don't forget to incorporate NZN with it to help maintain leaf and tree growth and development and avoid the problem of rosette, a zinc deficiency found in practically all West Texas Pecan trees.

How is our Farmer's Market Progressing?

Our opening date was July 1 on the East parking lot of Highland Mall in Big Spring. Participating producers were well pleased with the initial beginning based on community support and sales. Several producers who had planned to come were unable to do so because they could not get into their fields because of the recent rains. The market will continue each Wednesday at this location throughout the remainder of the growing season with a wider variety of produce available each time as our season progresses.

What kind of annuals can still be planted for color this summer?

You can still direct-seed zinnias and portulaca and purchase plants of periwinkle, salvia, marigolds, and purslane. Just be sure to water transplants as needed until roots become established.

How often do I need to fertilize my rose bushes?

Fertilize rose bushes every 4-6 weeks. Apply small amounts of a high-nitrogen fertilizer immediately after a flush of bloom or every 4-6 weeks.

What causes my cucumbers to taste bitter?

First of all, the bitterness is not due to planting with the wrong sign of the moon, improper variety selection, poor pollination or that the cucumbers are crossing with squash or pumpkins.

If you will think about the sequence of events which lead to the bitter cucumbers, you can determine the cause of this phenomenon yourself. Chances are the bitter fruit did not show up until well into the season, perhaps two, three, or even four weeks after the first harvest.

Another family member earns CPA

By Johnnie Lou Avery
Special to the Herald

Neva Joyce Green raised her right hand and smiled to herself. "Finally, it's my turn now." The chairman of the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy conducted the brief swearing-in of a new Certified Public Accountant in Austin on May 16.

Ironically, Neva got her CPA designation just two months before the family business celebrates its 20th anniversary.

She became a full partner and corporate officer when the anniversary was celebrated July 1.

Neva had waited a long time for that moment. Finally, at the age of 54, it was her turn. She had made several strange twists on her way to becoming Neva Green, CPA.

Raised in a traditional farm home, she and her brother were encouraged to go to college, but she was expected to become an elementary or English teacher. Graduated from Hardin-Simmons University in August 1952, she married Max Green, a USDA County Agricultural Stabilization & Conservation officer in Seminole, less than a week later.

Despite not being appointed to a high school math teaching position she sought, she was offered and accepted the job as the school system's assistant business manager.

She and Max began to dream about becoming accountants and she encouraged Max to go for his dream. They moved to Odessa where she was hired by an accounting firm, but fired 15 minutes later when they learned that Max was going to school to become a CPA.

They fired her to hire Max — but they did help her get a bookkeeping job with Acme Bookkeeping Company.

In 1958, she had her first child, Dane, and then Cassandra was born two years later just about the time Max completed his CPA exams. At that time, the company who had been Max's employer wanted to open a branch office in Big Spring and put Max at its head.

Neva began a bookkeeping service from her home while raising the two pre-schoolers and giving support to her husband in his career.

The next Green milestone came July 1, 1967 when Max opened his own accounting firm — a two-room office — with Neva as the office manager. And it was Neva's clients from her home bookkeeping service that formed the nucleus of the young firm's business base.

... it was her turn

The firm flourished and they moved several times to bigger quarters, hiring more staff along the way.

Meanwhile, the children were growing up. Dane graduated from college with a degree in computer science and came back to the family business to set up a computerized office, designing accounting software and choosing expandable hardware.

Cassandra was getting her degree in accounting and Neva said, "All of a sudden, it wasn't strange anymore for a female to choose the goal of a CPA," and remembers, "I had to fight just to become a math teacher instead of elementary or English."

It was while the children were in college that the Greens bought their own building in 1981 and remodeled it with a layout designed to fit their needs and future plans, which included welcoming home their daughter and her husband, both new CPAs. The two joined the family business on July 1, 1984.

On the 17th anniversary of the founding of the firm, the name changed to Green and Fillingim Professional Corporation. The hitch was that Neva couldn't be a stockholder or corporate officer because she wasn't a CPA. "This is stupid," Neva decided. "I've done all the same work, know as much as the rest of the family, and have as many college credits, but without the CPA designation, I have the official status as general flunky."

She began studying, made sacrifices, gave up lots of activities while continuing to work full time managing the business. During the next three years, she was off work only long enough to take her CPA exams. She passed two parts in November 1984, passed the third part in May 1985, and passed the theory section in November 1986. And on May 16, she was sworn in as a CPA.

"I always knew I wanted to be an accountant, but in those days, very few women were CPAs; so I put my dreams on the shelf to help Max. Then I pushed them further back to raise our children, then help them meet their educational goals, and now ... I felt gooooood!"

She acknowledges that having that piece of paper on the wall doesn't really change anything at the office. She still does the same things she did before. She doesn't work any less hours or make any more money, but she has no regrets for the sacrifices.

"The best part is being a stockholder in the company and having my name on the door alongside that of Max, Cassandra and Glen," she says.

Dane says proudly, "I knew she could do it." And Cassandra constantly encouraged her mother when she needed a boost. And, then, there was Max — a believer in equal rights long before it was a movement. He laughs at her achievement, saying, "Neva became a stockholder and immediately destroyed my controlling interests in the business." His pride is obvious.

Today Neva has a tax season behind her, a CPA certificate hanging on the wall, and a notebook full of new goals to accomplish.

Tending to airline problems at the front line

By TOM PETERS

The summer travel season is upon us, and the airlines are doling out lousy service as never before. Legislation, amounting to partial re-regulation, is likely. At least one bill would control scheduling to even out flight arrivals and departures throughout the day at major hubs.

But in the meantime, there are some things that front-line airline personnel can do for beleaguered (and increasingly angry) passengers that would be a big first step toward reversing the clearly perceived pattern of contempt for, and indifference toward, customers that now exists:

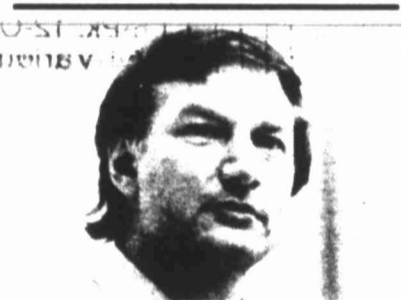

1. — Use the pronouns "I" and "we," not "they." "They require us to ..." is a sentence that sets my nerve ends jangling. The airline employee, at a gate or in the air, is the airline to me, the passenger. "They" is of no concern, because I will never meet "they." "I" or "we" indicates the front-line service provider cares and takes at least some responsibility for what's going on.

2. — Never say, "The computer canceled your reservation" (this happened to me recently on TWA). No it didn't. Computers don't think, or cancel reservations. An airline programmer, following management's guidance, wrote some code which made whatever it was happen (e.g., automatic cancellation of a reservation if you're not there so many minutes before flight time — or even if you are there, but stuck in a long line). All the computer does is tally ones and zeros at a very fast clip. Try a more human, "We canceled ..."

3. — One more no-no: "You should have been told of some arcane restriction on a ticket." I saw this one happen to three vacation travelers in 10 minutes the other day. In an effort to make more outrageous promises than the next airline about super-duper deluxe discounts, airlines have so many confusing fare bases that even those who write the rules don't understand them all. The obscure restriction may well be in the ticket contract, but the airlines caused the basic confusion. Advice: When there is confusion the customer gets the benefit of the doubt; he or she isn't trying to steal from you.

4. — Another that has to go: "There will be a 10-minute delay." I fly about 225,000 miles a year and can't recall a single 10-minute delay. Frequent (and even not-so-frequent but increasingly savvy) flyers know full well that 10 minutes is a code phrase for (a)

on excellence

"It's gonna be our hour" or (b) "We haven't the slightest clue when (or if) it's going to get out of here." In a recent column I pleaded "under promise, over deliver." I still remember, a year later, one Eastern pilot who warned us of a 45-minute delay. When we cleared out of La Guardia just 30 minutes later I was ecstatic — because of both the "early" departure (vs. the grim prediction) and the honesty.

5. — I'd also take kindly to no more "the flight controllers have traffic backed up." It's not the flight controllers. The airlines are purposefully over-scheduling (collectively) in critical hours, often by 100 percent. Most so-called "flow-control delays" are airline made, not FAA made.

6. — And finally (this happens to me from time to time, I must admit), "I'm not going to let you raise your voice like that." Sadly, the only time I get an "I" rather than "they" in response is when I respond to the airline person heatedly. Now, suddenly, it is personal. Losing one's temper is never becoming, I admit. But please understand that I spent $1,000 on the ticket. The flight (and perhaps my week) is a shambles thanks to you (you're the airline to me, remember?). For any $1,000 purchase (it's a tenth the price of an automobile), I expect a lot. And yet when I point out — a bit angrily — that I do expect something, as often as not I'm made to feel that I'm the one being unreasonable, and even irresponsible.

How does the situation get resolved? It probably will take some legislation, I regret to say. But that isn't the issue here. The problem, which has close parallels in every business, can be influenced on the front line.

The key is simple acknowledgment via the most powerful phrase in the language: "I'm sorry." The phrase encompasses not only the usually well deserved apology, but the all powerful "I," signaling acceptance of personal responsibility.

The reason the phrase is so powerful is that we're all ultimately human. I greatly sympathize with the front-line person, at an airline or in any commercial setting. If the slightest indication of personal responsibility is given, then it is easy for me to be tolerant. It is precisely the absence of that responsibility-taking ("they") that leads me to lash out in frustration at the "they" (computer, etc.), whereas I can't imagine lashing out at an "I."

Management, of course, holds the key. First-line people are only likely to accept personal responsibility and be sorry when the airline's (or other's) top management is providing them support, or at least empathy, and seems to care itself.

I fear it is going to be a very long summer in the unfriendly skies, but this simple advice to the front line might help restrain the surge of passenger ire — and also lead to profitability, as only American and Delta (and an equally small share of firms in other industries) seem to understand.

J.C. Penney picks site

PLANO (AP) — Retailer J.C. Penney Co. entered into a conditional contract to buy a 429-acre site at a suburban business park for its new national headquarters.

The announcement that the company had signed a conditional contract with Electronic Data Systems Corp. business park in Plano ended months of speculation on exactly where the giant retailer would locate. Penney's, which has been headquartered in New York since 1913, announced earlier this year it would be moving to Dallas.

"We're very excited about it," said Enid Stepper, Penney's director of public relations for the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Some issues in the contract are unresolved, said Chairman William R. Howell in a statement issued at a news conference. But he said he was confident they would be settled. Ms. Stepper said she didn't have details of the lease agreement.

Speculation on the site had centered on EDS' 2,640-acre EDS Legacy business park, although Penney's maintained it was looking at several northern Dallas sites.

Penney's is the nation's third largest retailer with sales last year of $14.7 billion.

Bramlea names leasing manager

Michael L. Watson, a native of Texas, has been named leasing manager for Big Spring Mall.

A leasing manager for Bramlea Limited Shopping Centers for the past two years, he was previously assigned to retail properties in Pampa; Brookings, S. D.; and Maryville, Mo.

Mall manager Brian Touchstone said that Watson will bring diversified leasing knowledge and broad-based experience to the Big Spring Mall and the community.

He graduated from Tomball High School and earned a bachelor's degree in Business Management from Sam Houston State University in Huntsville.

Nicholson leaves KBST for school

KBST radio anchor Jeff Nicholson has left the station, and will attend law school at Texas Tech in the fall.

Nicholson and his wife Jennifer will move to Lubbock later in the month, Nicholson said.

"It's just something I wanted to do for a long time, and my wife and I decided if we were going to do it, now would be the time, before we had a child," he said.

The Dallas native came to KBST in December of 1984 from a Temple radio station. He was a news reporter, news anchor and sports reporter for the Big Spring station.

Energas buying Kentucky gas firm

DALLAS — Energas announced June 29 the entry into an agreement in principle with Texas American Energy Corp. for the purchase of the corporation's natural gas distribution business — Western Kentucky Gas Company — and other assets and subsidiaries.

Energas has agreed to pay $61.5 million in cash and to assume certain liabilities, according to a news release.

The transaction is subject to the negotiation and execution of a definitive agreement by the parties and approval of the purchase by the appropriate regulatory bodies will be required.

Dodson opens real estate agency

Marjorie Dodson has recently opened a new real estate office — South Mountain Agency, Realtors — at 801-B East FM 700.

Joining South Mountain Agency as sales associates are Big Spring residents Ellen Phillips and Liz Lowery.

Dodson has been in real estate sales full time for two years — after teaching music for twenty years.

Her professional involvement includes activities on the local, state and national levels.

Dodson is secretary of Big Spring's Board of Realtors and is on its Board of Directors. She is a recent graduate of the Texas Realtors' Institute and teaches Real Estate Contracts at Howard College.

In addition, she is serving a three-year term on the Texas Association of Realtors' Community Revitalization Committee, and is a member in the National Association of Realtors.

Dodson and her husband, Tommy, reside at 505 Highland. They have two daughters, Marilyn Leopard of Sweetwater, and Andrea Cobb of Boston, Mass.

Big Spring alteration shop opens

"Seams So Nice" a tailoring and alteration shop located at 1000 11th Place, Room 103, opened July 1.

Owner Bonita Lyght, who recently moved to Big Spring from Minot, N.D., said she has 20 years' experience working in the tailoring business.

The business will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and by appointment, Lyght said.

She said she can alter anything from blue jeans to formal wear.

Drilling report

A new producer has been brought on line in Howard County, with Barbara Fasken as the operator.

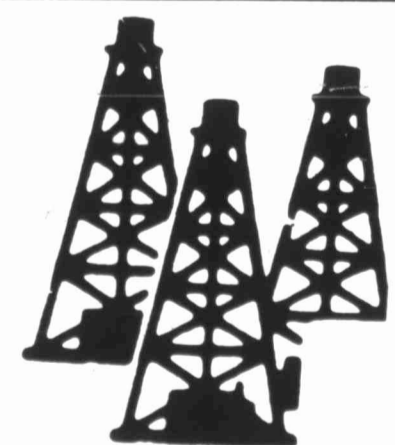

Located nine miles west of Big Spring, the wildcat is in a 640-acre lease in the T&P Survey, Sec. 29, Blk. 34. It is designated as the No. 29-1 Jack Wilkinson.

The operation indicated potential to pump 99 barrels of oil per day. It bottomed at 10,675 feet and will produce from perforations in the Fusselman Formation, 10,510 to 10,518 feet into the wellbore.

The No. 1 Big Ed, a 10,500-ft. wildcat well, is scheduled to be drilled in Howard County. Parallel Petroleum of Midland is the operator. The well will be spudded in a 654-acre lease four miles northeast of Knott in the T&P Survey, Sec. 46, Blk. 33.

A.K. Guthrie Operating of Big Spring has revealed plans to drill an 8,000-foot developmental well in the Howard-Glasscock Field. The operator has 160 acres leased, with drillsite in Howard County's W&NW Survey, Sec. 86, Blk. 29. The well has been designated as the No. 2 R.J. Wallace "B." Drillsite is seven miles east of Forsan.

Royal Oil & Gas has revealed production figures on a plug-back operation in the Howard-Glasscock Field, Howard County. The No. 10 Dora Roberts is located one mile east of Forsan in a 160-acre lease in the W&NW Survey, Sec. 136, Blk. 29.

The well indicated potential to pump 30 barrels of oil per day, plus 100 barrels of water. Production will be from perforations in the San Andres Formation, 2,318 to 2,691 feet into the wellbore.

The same operator originally completed the well Nov. 1, 1962, and production was from Clear Fork Formation perforations at

"We aim to please." That's what the sign says at Hyden's Fina & Auto Repair, 2709 Wasson Road.

It's an accurate motto, judging from the variety of services offered and the quality of work rendered.

"We like to provide our customers with complete car care," says J.D. Hyden, owner. The station offers full service and self service facilities. The four-bay garage features two lifts, providing plenty of room for cars needing attention. Expert repairs for foreign and domestic cars include air conditioners, transmission, brakes, starters and alternators ... everything short of "major engine overhaul."

"We have our own brake drum lathe and build our own transmissions. This gives us complete control over the job," says Hyden.

"Tune-ups are a specialty," he adds.

Hyden's Fina & Auto Repair stocks a good inventory of parts, which often saves time on the job, enabling the customer to have his car sooner. Parts in stock are available retail or wholesale.

For customer convenience, the station stocks Interstate batteries, Lee Tires, plus auto accessories.

The owner does most of the repair work himself or will personally oversee the work being done, a situation many car owners appreciate.

Hyden has been repairing the cars of Big Spring residents since 1948. He worked many years for major car dealerships here until he opened his own station and garage. He has been at the Wasson Road location for 10 years.

"Most of my customers have been with me for many years," the owner says. "I know them — and their cars — quite well, including one customer who will drives a 1957 Chevrolet."

But he welcomes "first-time" customers.

Hyden Fina & Auto Repair is open from 7 a.m. til 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Family atmosphere stressed at Bowl-A-Rama Bowling Center

Employees at Bowl-A-Rama stress the family atmosphere at the Center. Here is what they say:

"We pride ourselves on having a friendly staff."

"We're like a big family here. When newcomers come in, we introduce them around and make them feel at home."

"We take pride in keeping our place clean. We mop, dust and clean every day."

"And we have the best hamburgers in town at our snack bar!"

The 24-lane center, located on the south feeder of Interstate 20 East, features fully automatic AMF Magic Scores automatic scorekeepers, video machines and pool tables, nursery service for ages 6 and under (during league bowling) and a full service snack bar.

They take party reservations for birthday and other occasions. For large parties, the lanes can be booked after-hours.

Bowl-A-Rama has a pro shop, stocking balls and bags; they'll order shoes and other equipment.

And because bowling and bowlers are important to them, they teach bowling to beginners, and they'll help experienced bowlers locate a spot in a league if you want to bowl regularly.

Bowl-A-Rama is owned by Janie and J.M. Ringener. J.M. bought the snack bar in 1965 and operated it until he purchased the center in 1973. The pair also operated Webb Lanes for a time.

Others on the staff are Barbara Vieira, desk clerk; Mark Dobeck, part-time desk clerk; Eloisa Gonzales, snack bar manager; Sam Gonzales, mechanic; Joe Rodriguez, janitor; Walter Little, mechanic.

Also Lupe Martinez, Delia Mendez, Barbara Grant and Joann Gomez, snack bar attendants; Tom Cruz, pin chaser; and Lanora Hauser and Josie Cruz, nursery attendants.

A total of 18 leagues, many of them longtime, bowl at the center, including Ladies Majors, Pin Poppers, Men's Majors, Men's Industrial, Mixed Leagues, Tuesday Couples, VA League and Gays & Dolls (seniors).

Junior Bowlers (7-18) come on Saturdays. There's Casino Colored Pins bowling on Saturdays, Scotch Doubles on Sundays. On Sundays from 10:30 to 1 p.m. bowlers can Rent-A-Lane and the party can bowl for two hours for $10.

Besides the famous hamburgers, the snack bar offers steak sandwiches, shrimp, hot roast beef sandwiches and a variety of other sandwiches. They serve beer (including beer on tap) and wine.

Bowl-A-Rama is open from 8 a.m. to 12 midnight 7 days a week for league and open bowling.

Rain, hail blast Howard County El Pasoans earn honor as jeans washing capital

Rain, wind, hail and lightning blasted parts of Howard County early Tuesday morning, damaging crops and structures, area residents said.

Knott apparently suffered the most extensive damage. Debra Lancaster said that cyclone-type winds blew over the chimney of her home this morning. She added that a neighbor, Fred Phillips, lost his barn to the high winds.

Larry Shaw, a Knott farmer, reported that he received 2.9 inches of rain, and that winds caused several cotton trailers to tip over at his farm.

In Big Spring, lightning struck power lines at two places, according to police reports.

Power lines in the 500 block of West Third St. were struck at 8:24 p.m., and lines at East 18th and Virginia streets were hit 27 minutes later. Fire department units were sent to Virginia Street, where the lines were arcing, police reports said.

With pledges exceeding $20,000, area March of Dimes officials said they were "absolutely overwhelmed" by the results of their Jail and Bail benefit arrest program a week ago.

The program, in which about 100 local residents were voluntarily arrested and encouraged to collect pledges for their bail, raised $20,505.87 for the March's fight against birth defects.

Leanne Wilson, division director for the Permian Basin March of Dimes, said the amount pledged was amazing when compared to similar efforts in Midland and Lubbock.

Midland's Jail and Bail program netted $10,000, while Lubbock raised approximately $5,000, Wilson said.

The former Colonial Acres office complex at 600 FM 700 will house Big Spring's ambulance service, and a local physician will be selected as the service's medical director within a week, Rural/Metro officials reported Wednesday.

EMS Manager Malcolm Swinney said the company obtained a six-month lease and will continue to search for a facility more centrally located.

The office has dormitory space and showers, but lacks enclosed parking, he said. It does provide covered parking, however, Swinney said.

Swinney and Division Manager Chris Black were in Big Spring Wednesday to decide where to locate the service. In addition to the Colonial Acres building, the two had considered the former Bidco building located at Gregg and Edwards streets.

Swinney said two local physicians were interviewed for the position of medical director and a third will be interviewed Wednesday when the firm expects to make a final decision.

Representatives of a Chicago firm that has expressed interest in financing and building a supercollider in the Permian Basin were expected to meet local supporters Friday.

Garden City supercollider site supporters sent a copy of the proposal Wednesday to the firm, SSC Commission Project Manager Thane Akins said Thursday.

He has spoken with the firm's representatives on a daily basis since it was announced last week that the company is interested in buying the necessary 16,000 acres of land and building the billion-dollar project, after securing a lease-back agreement with the U.S. Department of Energy, Akins said.

The Garden City site was eliminated as a state-sanctioned site during May meetings of the Texas National Research Commission, which selected Dallas and Amarillo sites.

Garden City supporters decided at a June 24 meeting to submit the maverick bid independently.

Week in review

"If they're impressed with the report ... they may come visit us tomorrow," Akins said.

The firm's name will not be released until the company announces its decision whether to support the Garden City site, he said.

The economic impact of the Veterans Administration Medical Center on Big Spring and Howard County was recognized by city officials Thursday.

More than $24 million was expended in Howard County by the Veterans Administration in 1986, according to Conrad Alexander, director of the VA Medical Center.

Mayor Cotton Mize was scheduled to express appreciation to the VA's contributions to Big Spring during Thursday ceremonies.

Alexander said Howard County received $20.6 million as a direct result of the VA Medical Center: $18.1 million in operating expenses and $2.3 million for construction.

Monthly pensions, compensation, vocational rehabilitation and G.I. insurance expenditures amounted to $3.7 million, he added.

A second youth died as the result of injuries sustained in a

June 27 automobile accident. Tera Denise Gaskins, 16, Sterling City Route Box T-32, Jeffrey Road, died at 10:20 a.m. June 28. Stephanie Ann Merfield was pronounced dead at 3:48 p.m. June 27 from injuries she suffered in the accident.

The Gaskins' auto collided with another driven by Allen Edward Sundry, 60, 1601 Sunset Road, after the westward bound Gaskins auto failed to yield at a stop sign on Centerpoint School Road, Department of Public Safety Trooper Mike Dawson said.

A slick brochure announcing plans for Big Spring's downtown will be sent to area and national companies that might consider locating in the city's center.

Downtown Coordinator Teri Quinones said Tuesday the Downtown Steering Committee was to meet to discuss marketing the brochures.

"We'd like to target people we know are interested in this type of project," Quinones said.

The committee might seek assistance from a state Main Street project information center in Austin and a national center in Washington, D.C., she said. Both may be able to provide mailing lists of potential customers.

Contracting with a direct mail company for a mailing list of potential retailers is another option, Quinones said.

Oil and gas

Continued from page 1D 2,988 to 3,056 feet. At that time, the well pumped 14 barrels of oil per day.

The original total depth of the well was 3,066 feet, and Royal Oil & Gas plugged the hole back to 2,699 feet.

Montero Operating of Midland is planning to conduct a work-over operation at the No. 1 Davis, a developmental well in Howard County's Big Spring Field. Drillsite is six miles northeast of Big Spring in a 480-acre lease in the T&P Survey. It was originally completed by the same operator March 27 of last year, and at that time flowed 360 barrels of oil per day. Production was from Wolfcamp Formation perforations at 7,146 to 7,186 feet into the hole. Montero Operating plans to seek production in the Fusselman Formation at approximately 9,500 feet.

At a location two miles northeast of Westbrook, Morrison Drilling & Production finalized a new oil producer in Mitchell County's East Westbrook Field.

The well is designated as the No. 2 Newby, pumping 41 barrels of oil per day. Location is in a 57-acre lease in the T&P Survey, A-1853.

The operation bottomed at 3,275 feet and will produce from perforations in the Clear Fork Formation at 2,855 to 3,088 feet into the wellbore.

Mobil Producing has filed first production figures on two new oil wells in the East Itan-Howard Field, Mitchell County. The Nos. 203 and 206 Mary Foster are located nine miles southwest of Westbrook in a 3,840-acre lease in the T&P Survey, A-654 and A-1459, respectively.

The No. 203 well pumped one barrel of oil per day plus 231 barrels of water, while the No. 206 well pumped six barrels of oil per day along with 607 barrels of water. Production at the No. 203 well will be from perforations commingled in the San Angelo and Upper Clear Fork perforations, ranging from 2,428 to 2,671 feet into the wellbore. The No. 206 well will produce from perforations commingled in the San Angelo and Clear Fork Formations, ranging from 2,515 to 2,922 feet into the hole.

Drillsite has been staked for the No. 1-519 Collier "A", an 8,400-foot development well in the Fluvanna Field, Borden County. The operation will be located 16 miles northeast of Gail in a 40-acre lease in the H&TC Survey, Sec. 519, Blk. 97. The operator is Horizon Oil & Gas Co. of Texas, based in Spearman.

A 6,857-foot developmental well is planned by Union Oil of California, based in Midland, at a drillsite 18 miles southeast of Gail, Borden County. The location is in a 4,358-acre lease in the H&TC Survey, Sec. 53, Blk. 25.

El Pasoans earn honor as jeans washing capital

EL PASO (AP) — About 2,000 El Pasoans wash blue jeans for a living.

That makes El Paso the jeans-washing capital of the country, the city's launderers say. El Paso's jeans-washing laundries already employ almost 1 percent of the city's work force.

Many El Paso launderers, knowing a good deal when they see one, are planning to expand their plants and hire more people.

El Paso is benefiting from a boom in prewashed jeans. Jeanswear Communications reports that 400 million pairs of jeans were sold in 1986. John Troeger, Levi Strauss' El Paso area manager, estimates that 70 percent, or 280 million pairs, were prewashed.

Troeger said he expects jeans manufacturers to prewash 85 percent of all jeans made this year. Within five years, Troeger said, 95 percent of all jeans will be prewashed.

That will mean business to El Paso laundries that do contract work. Desert Cleaners, for one, employs between 75 and 100 people to wash jeans for Levi Strauss. Desert Cleaners now washes between 50,000 and 55,000 pairs of blue jeans a week.

It's hard to get exact figures on how many jeans are washed in El Paso each year. Levi doesn't release figures but said its El Paso plant can wash more than 12 million pairs a year. Lee Co. — the other large jeans manufacturer in El Paso — says the number it washes depends on what kind of treatment the jeans get. El Paso laundries claim to wash between 50,000 and 300,000 pairs of jeans a week with less employees than either Levi or Lee.

El Paso laundries are getting ready to expand to handle the rising business. James Viola Jr., owner of Viola Sportswear, has reopened a downtown laundry in addition to his already functioning laundry in south El Paso. Viola, who got out of the jeans-manufacturing business last year, has 250 employees and will add to that number.

Desert Cleaners is getting ready to build a new building, which will double its production. Greater Texas Finishing Corp. is studying expansion.

"It's the main part of our business," Viola said. "And it gets bigger every year."

People don't want the old-fashioned blue jeans — the kind that were put on a store shelf as stiff as a board, the kind that had to be washed repeatedly before becoming soft enough to wear, the kind that might shrink to the right size or might not. Instead, customers want jeans already softened and shrunk to the right size.

That's spelled the end for the traditional blue jeans.

"They're history," said Joudi Joudi, owner of Today's Man, a retail store in El Paso's Basset Center. Joudi still has some stiff jeans in stock.

"We're not ordering any more," he said. "We can't give them away."

Manufacturers have had to respond quickly to this change in consumer tastes. Levi now has 1,000 people washing jeans, checking the results and mending problems at its plant on Pellicano Drive. All Lee jeans made in El Paso are washed, either at its plant or at laundries. Levi contracts with laundries to handle the rest of the demand.

"It's strange," Troeger said. "We opened our laundry in September. We're doing more jeans here and we're sending more work out than ever before."

Levi won't disclose how many jeans it produces — or washes — a week. It also won't say how it washes its jeans, except to say that Levi's washing is unlike anything you can do at home.

The washing machines are things you probably won't buy at home. They are large, about the length of a Lincoln Continental.

"These are the kind you put in your garage instead of your car," said Jim King, Lee's El Paso plant manager.

Lee washes all the jeans it makes in its El Paso plant. Some are washed only in hot water — at least 168 degrees Fahrenheit — to soften them; others face more rigorous washes.

One is the stone wash, a process that uses pumice stones to fade the jeans. This requires putting the right-sized stone in the washing machine. A stone that is too large can damage the jeans; one too small won't get the desired effect. Pumice also hurts washers more than jeans, and King said stone-washing machines need maintenance work every six months. Washing machine manufacturers are now doubling the thickness on the drums that hold the jeans and pumice to make washers last longer.

Stones aren't the only device used. The boom in washed jeans has attracted chemical companies.

"We're doing 100 to 200 different styles a week. There's a tremendous art to it."

"This is a new and emerging market," said Ernest Eissele, director of commercial development for Carus Chemical Co. near Philadelphia. Carus is selling potassium permanganate, something normally used to treat drinking water. Potassium permanganate bleaches the jeans' indigo dye to a faded, white look. Eissele said other chemicals will do the same thing, but potassium permanganate doesn't hurt the fabric.

Carus is selling potassium permanganate to some El Paso laundries, but won't say which is buying it.

"Companies are very secretive," he said. "There are different processes being used and each has a different twist."

The independent laundries are also caught in fierce competition. Cesar Viramontes, owner of El Paso's Economy Laundry, said any new development in jeans washing — no matter how jealously protected — is common knowledge through the industry within three months.

One breakthrough is the "ice wash," a process that ends up with an almost white pair of jeans. It's obtained by soaking pumice in bleach, but each laundry does it differently.

"There's no way to patent a process. 'Nobody's ever done that,'" Viramontes said.

So, each laundry develops its own styles, then markets them to manufacturers. The result is a tremendous number of processes.

"We're doing 100 to 200 different styles a week," said Ron Johnson, plant manager at El Paso's Greater Texas Finishing Corp. "That's a tremendous art to it."

Nate Goldman agrees. Goldman, co-owner of Desert Cleaners, started prewashing jeans 15 years ago when Farah Co., the El Paso apparel maker, offered him a contract. At first, Goldman said, finding the proper look was hard.

"We needed to figure out how to get the right color," he said. "We worked on it a whole month."

Now, Goldman said, "Everybody has their own formula for stone wash."

The harder the jeans are washed — and the more they're faded — the more customers pay for them. At most El Paso stores, a pair of prewashed jeans run about $28. Stone-washed jeans cost upward of $35. Traditional blue jeans cost less than $20 a pair in most places.

Business highlights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says its main economic forecasting gauge posted a fourth consecutive monthly increase in May, a 0.7 percent advance that the Reagan administration hailed as evidence the long-running recovery is not wearing out.

The Index of Leading Indicators posted its best gain since a 0.9 percent rise in March. Additionally Tuesday, the government revised the April figure to show a small 0.2 percent rise instead of what originally was reported as a 0.6 percent drop.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders for U.S. manufactured goods were unchanged in May as strength in civilian categories was offset by a slump in demand for military hardware, the government reported.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday factory orders totaled a seasonally adjusted $200.6 billion in May, the same level as in April, when orders had posted a 0.6 percent increase.

The flat performance in May came from a 14.0 percent plunge in the volatile defense category.

NEW YORK (AP) — The American economy should continue its slow but steady growth through 1988, thanks largely to an improvement in the trade deficit, several economists say.
