

Rescue workers are within inches of trapped toddler

MIDLAND (AP) — Rescuers finally got a first-hand glimpse today of the 18-month-old girl trapped for two days in a well 22 feet below ground, and a police spokesman said early this afternoon that rescue appeared near.

"We expect to bring her out any time now," Midland police Sgt. Jeff Haile said. "Making sure we get her out safely is our main concern."

Authorities moved local photographers who had been promised access to the rescue into place near the well at about 11:45 a.m.

But Haile wouldn't estimate when the child would be brought out.

Earlier this morning, rescuers bored a hole large enough for an engineer to stick his head in.

"She was able to move and she looked like she's OK," said Police Chief Richard Czech. "She's approximately 12 inches above our (breakthrough) hole."

Workers inserted two industrial balloons to keep her from slipping farther down, and a drill bit or metal rod inserted across the well shaft earlier remains in place, officials said.

"Our engineer went in there, he looked in, and he removed the balloon above us, and he was able to see the little girl. She is able to move a little bit. She seems to be all right," Czech said.

He said workers have about 7 to 8 inches of rock to chip through as they try to cut a 20-inch diameter hole to remove the frightened child.

Haile said the child has been crying for her mother this morning, and is no longer singing nursery rhymes as she was Thursday.

Drilling into the shaft early this morning was a great morale boost to the workers who had been trying to reach Jessica for nearly two days, said Police Cpl. Jim White.

"I think it set them (rescue workers) on fire."

"Every man that goes down in there now knows that we're just a short time away," White said. "Three or four hours is nothing compared to the time we've spent here."

After reaching the well shaft with the drilling bit, White said, workers left the bit in the hole so that it would prevent the child from

Interested in a free radiogram?

Would you like to send a free radiogram to a friend or relative to almost any place in the world?

Area residents will have that opportunity Saturday.

The Big Spring Amateur Radio Club will be operating from just inside the ramp on the southeast side of the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Oct. 17 during the Arts and Crafts Show.

The show will continue through Sunday evening.

The club will accept personal messages of 20 to 30 words. Operators Saturday will take the messages, and check the number of words, and the address and telephone number.

Messages will be sent during the weekend and could reach their destination the same day. Military addresses will need to be exactly as one would address a letter.

By sending the radiograms, the club will gain operating experience. Many times amateur radio is the only contact with the "outside" world during disaster situations.

Pocket park

Delay caused by 'itsy-bitsy' spider

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

It may sound ludicrous, but work on the Tubb Pocket Park was delayed because of an itchy-bitsy spider.

Meanwhile, work on other parts of the downtown redevelopment project continue.

A brown recluse, a poisonous spider found in the western and southern United States, bit local contractor Jerry Harmon in September — before construction of the park began.

Harmon had planned to begin masonry work at the park site, located in the 300 block of Main Street between the Courthouse Annex and the former Sparenberg building, in September. The park is part of Big Spring's downtown renovation project — Main Street Inc.

Because of the spider bite, the construction has been delayed several times.

Spider wounds from the recluse may require several months to heal and are occasionally fatal, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

The venom destroys the walls of blood vessels near the site of the bite, sometimes causing a skin ulcer several inches in diameter.

Construction of the park originally was expected to begin around Labor Day, Downtown Coordinator Teri Quinones said.

Quinones, who spoke to Harmon Thursday, said construction is expected to begin in two to three weeks.

Members of the Howard County Road and Bridge Department leveled ground at the park site in early September.

"When the county finished leveling the land, Jerry was going to start with construction," Quinones said.

"I know once he gets started, he's going to do a good job," she said, adding that the spider bite and ensuing delay have been unfortunate.

A groundbreaking ceremony for the pocket park was conducted at the site Sept. 17.

Quinones said one local club and two individuals have donated $400 toward landscaping the park.

In addition, five local civic clubs have agreed to provide funds for landscaping and lighting, she said.

The Downtown Steering committee plans to ask community groups to contribute to landscaping the park by donating trees and plants, Quinones said, explaining that the $24,600 contract with Harmon is for structure and foundation work.

Construction is expected to take about two months, she said.

Although work on the pocket park is delayed, Downtown Steering committee members are proceeding with other aspects of the three-year, $165,000 downtown renovation project. Eleven months remain before public funding ends, Quinones said.

The Downtown Steering committee is scheduled to discuss the Railroad Plaza during a 1:15 p.m. Wednesday meeting at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

The plaza is one of about 20 renovation projects included in the Main Street Inc. program.

The committee will also consider establishing a railroad museum at First and Main streets before seeking businesses to operate specialty shops and restaurants from railroad cars.

When completed, the plaza will create a focal point for activities and entertainment in the Main Street district.

Quinones said 120 questionnaires have been sent to downtown businesses seeking feedback on the renovation project.

Questionnaires must be completed and returned to City Hall by Oct. 23.

The questionnaires ask downtown merchants in a 16-block area for input on the redevelopment project and if they have any plans to renovate or sell their property.

Quinones also said Gil Cuadra, owner of Hotel Settles, is seeking tenants for the Big Spring Executive Center, 107 Gregg St. The office building is located within the 16-block area of the downtown renovation project, Quinones said.

Oil responsible for 57% of business taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — The oil and gas industry pumped $1.7 billion into state coffers in 1986 — 57 percent of all business taxes paid — and it's time to strike a balance, an industry spokesman says.

Bill Abington, president of Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, said stacking a corporate income tax atop the high state franchise tax would not be fair to the industry.

Abington told the Select Committee on Tax Equity Thursday that the Legislature in 1987 increased the franchise tax 28 percent, after a 24 percent increase in 1985.

The franchise tax is based on taxable capital, and thus places a heavy burden on industries such as oil and gas that require large amounts of capital, he said.

"From a tax equity viewpoint, it would not be realistic or equitable to require a capital intensive taxpayer to bear the combined burden of the present corporate franchise tax on net worth and a corporate net income tax," Abington said.

"A corporate income tax, standing alone, would not meet the revenue needs of the state. Only when the income tax is extended to personal income would sufficient revenues be generated," he said.

However, Abington said, "there appears to be strong opposition to state income taxes of any kind."

The citizen-legislator committee was created by the Legislature to review Texas' local and state tax systems and to report to lawmakers and the governor.

Austin lawyer Mark Hanna said professional groups he represents had commissioned a study, which found that a tax on professional services "could largely act as a limited income tax on the professional."

That study showed that extending the state sales tax to services, at a rate of 4.5 percent, would raise $1.68 billion a year, excluding health services, but would result in the loss of 42,700 jobs.

But Hanna told the committee if it did an economic impact analysis and the analysis indicated that "truly a tax on services is the best alternative for the state of Texas, I would recommend that our groups not oppose it."

Permian Basin harboring many abandoned wells

MIDLAND (AP) — Many property owners in the oil-rich Permian Basin probably don't know that their land may harbor one of hundreds of abandoned wells like the one that trapped a toddler, a hydrologist says.

Neighborhood children said they occasionally threw rocks down the 8-inch abandoned water well casing that turned into a trap for 18-month-old Jessica McClure.

"What it does is call attention to the hazard, as well as the liability of these (old wells)," said Joe Reed, a Midland hydrologist and environmental consultant with Reed and Associates.

"There are many, many wells all over town," although no one knows a specific number of abandoned wells veiled by the thick prairie grass, he said.

Reed said Thursday that many old wells still have pumps inside their casings, but if the pumps have been removed, the casings should be capped with a welded steel plate or plugged with cement.

Under the Texas Water Well Drillers Act, landowners are responsible for plugging old wells with cement that haven't been used for six months or more, said Mike Leach, investigator in Austin with the Water Well Drillers Board.

But enforcement of the law is generally left up to the landowner, and sometimes people buy land and are not aware of wells on their property, he said.

"That's why it's a big concern. I'm sure there's hundreds of holes out there that are just open and a lot of people don't even know they are on their land," Leach said.

Reed said during his 20 years as a hydrologist in Midland, he has rarely run into an 8-inch casing — water-well casings in the city are usually 4 to 6 inches in diameter.

"That's very unusual to find someone falling in something that small," Reed said. "It's not totally uncommon, but again it's something that's preventable."

Old water wells are abundant in Midland because during the 1940s and '50s, many homeowners tapped into the shallow High Plains aquifer underneath the city to irrigate their lawns and gardens, Reed said.

And Jessica's neighborhood was once known as rural Midland where wells may have been drilled to use as a primary source of water, Reed said.

Christmas in April seeks aid

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Members of the Christmas in April committee are increasing their fund-raising efforts in an attempt to make house repairs before winter.

About $7,200 has been raised by the committee, according to Liz Taylor, manager of the Chamber of Commerce's Visitor and Tourist Bureau.

Christmas in April is a group of local citizens who hope to make much-needed repairs on homes of elderly and needy people who couldn't otherwise afford them, Taylor said.

Led by program chairman Bob Noyes, the committee is composed of about 20 local residents, who are soliciting labor and funds to complete the tasks.

Members have appeared before several local organizations — such as churches and clubs. Besides soliciting funds and labor, Taylor said the presentations were an effort just to inform people about the group's intent.

She added their is no set goal for the fund-raising effort.

"We're always in a fund-raising mode, because this is an ongoing effort. We hope people who give once will give again next year," Taylor said.

About 15 applications for repair work have been received, she said. Some of the requests are for minor repair work, such as caulking windows — which committee members plan to do soon.

Applications for larger repair jobs, such as paneling or re-roofing, will have to wait until April, when they will be done on one Saturday that month, she noted.

Dozen choir members are all-region

Herald staff report
Twelve members of the Big Spring High School Choir were named to the All-Region Choir, and six choir members were named Pre-Area contestants.

More than 250 students from 11 area high schools competed in the all-region selections, according to Kristy Jasek, high school choir director.

Local students qualifying for the choir are: Christy Alexander, Daniel Andrews, Nicole Bash, Traci Clark, Kathryn Dawes, Malinda Ellison, Matt Mayes, Kelly McCormick, Kerri Plumlee, Angela Reed, Donna Reitzer and Kristie West.

They will participate in a one-day clinic and a 5:30 p.m. concert October 24 at Midland Lee

High School, with Tim King, choral director at Stephen F. Austin University, as the clinician, Jasek said.

Students auditioned Saturday at Odessa High School to qualify for the choir. They performed excerpts from three compositions selected by 1986 State Choir Clinician Don V. Moses.

Students had to exhibit knowledge of the musical language, facility in vocal technique and flexibility in performing various musical styles in the auditions, Jasek added.

Qualifying for pre-area auditions were: Christy Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Alexander; Daniel Andrews, son of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Andrews; Nicole Bash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Currie; Kathryn Dawes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs.

Joseph Dawes; Kelly McCormick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse McCormick; and Kristie West, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike West.

Malinda Ellison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ellison, and Angela Reed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Reed, were both first alternates, Jasek noted.

The students will audition again in early December for qualification in the area auditions. Students who rank among the top four in each section at this audition will go to Lubbock for the all-state auditions Jan. 10, she added.

Those who place in the top seven in the all-state auditions will be accepted as all-state choir members and will perform at the annual Texas Music Educators Clinic/Convention in San Antonio Feb. 13.

Rescue

falling into a deeper area of the well.

Haile said workers planned to try to insert mirrors into the well shaft later so they could see her.

Sitting in a 20-inch wide tunnel, workers used hand-held 30-pound jack hammers to drill upward at a 45-degree angle in their attempt to reach the trapped toddler early today.

Authorities said the girl was awake at times while they worked frantically to reach her.

"She's been sleeping on and off. The doctor says let her sleep," White said. "When she wakes up, she's crying for her mother."

"If she's crying, she's breathing. It's as easy as that," said Dr. Chip Klunick, an emergency physician at the scene, had said late Thursday.

Reba McClure, the girl's 17-year-old mother, periodically yelled down to her daughter, drawing cries of "Mommy." In between brief naps, the child also hummed and sang verses from "Winnie the Pooh," police said.

"We can't let ourselves get depressed and frustrated and start getting in a hurry," said White. "The worst thing we can do down there is get in a hurry and somehow jeopardize her. We are going to go at the same slow tedious pace."

Fire Chief James Roberts said doctors assured him that a toddler in Jessica's condition could survive easily up to four days without serious dehydration or other ill effects.

Steve Allcorn, a rescue worker, said just before midnight that a microphone dangling near Jessica's head picked up the drilling, suggesting rescuers were getting close.

The girl's 18-year-old father, Chip McClure said, "With the Lord's help and your prayers, we know that little girl is going to make it."

Tommy Johnson, the girl's uncle, called her "a fighter."

The 20-pound child fell into the narrow well Wednesday morning as she played behind a home that her mother and aunt use as a day care center.

The 8-inch opening had been covered with a rock or flower pot, said Sgt. Jeff Haile. The well widens underground and then narrows to 6 inches where Jessica landed.

About 25 volunteers took turns in the rescue shaft Thursday drilling at the dense caliche, or hardpan.

"It drains you a lot because you have to work on your knees," a dusty David Perry said after his turn in the hole.

Oxygen was pumped to the girl and rescuers working under floodlights used hot-air blowers to keep the girl warm.

No food or drink was lowered to her because of fear it might cause her to slip farther into the well, Klunick said. He also said he wanted the girl's stomach to be empty in case surgery was needed when she was freed.

"She could have any kind of injuries down there. We just don't know," he said.

Police Chief Richard Czech said a U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration official brought in from New Mexico said the rescue effort was on target, but the going was tough.

"We're digging along and it's very hard, and all of a sudden we hit a spot and we go 5 or 6 inches just like that, and then, bang, we're back in the hard stuff again," he said.

C-City board rejects tax budget

COLORADO CITY — The Colorado Independent School District has rejected a portion of the budget of the Mitchell County Appraisal District that calls for a five percent pay increase for appraisal district employees.

School board President Billy Bridgeford said the school district froze the salaries of its employees this year and board members don't think the appraisal district employees should be given a raise either, because of present economic conditions.

Law requires that all taxing entities approve the appraisal district budget each year. This year's budget is $160,000.

In other business, the board accepted the resignation of fourth grade teacher Billie Roenfeldt who is moving to San Angelo where her husband Glenn will be chaplain of Baptist Memorial's Geriatric Center.

Shelly Campbell was hired to replace Roenfeldt. Campbell moved to Colorado City from the Houston area where she has three years of teaching experience.

The board also approved an agreement with the West Central Texas Education Cooperative, which administers the special education program for the local school district along with eight other area districts, including Loraine and Westbrook.

A resolution was approved by the board supporting the return of an elected state board of education.

In other business, the board:

- Approved the maintenance agreement with A.H. Elevator Co. for maintenance of the middle school elevator.
- Approved the 1987 tax roll in the amount of $187,970,505.
- Approved an agreement with the Wolf Creek golf course for use of its facilities two days a week for members of the high school golf team.
- Heard a report from Superintendent Charlie Uselton that the amount of interest earned in September on various accounts totaled $13,000.

Democratic presidential hopeful the Rev. Jesse Jackson greets residents of a community known as a "colonia" near Progreso, near the Mexican border. About 50 families live in the colonia named La Frontera.

Jesse Jackson: U.S. drug fight lacking 'oomph'

MISSION (AP) — Standing on the banks of the Rio Grande, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said the U.S. government should put as much oomph into its anti-drug smuggling campaign here as it does defending allies' borders in Europe and Asia.

"You need to be congratulated for what you have done, but you obviously need more enforcement," Jackson told Silvestre Reyes, the Border Patrol's chief patrol agent for the McAllen Sector of South Texas.

Jackson, 46, wearing a green Border Patrol cap, gazed across the river into Mexico Thursday and referred to drug smuggling as a form of warfare against the United States.

"We don't use a phrase in Korea and Europe, 'Say no to communism.' We put up a serious defense," Jackson told Reyes while riding along the border in a Border Patrol vehicle.

Earlier in the day, Jackson was critical of U.S. immigration policies, which he said were partly to blame for poverty in the region.

"Most Americans have no idea of the impact of our immigration policy with our neighbors next door and what's happening in the (Rio Grande) Valley here in South Texas," he said while visiting an impoverished community near the city of Progreso.

Odyssey leads to baby, happiness

HOUSTON (AP) — A family's nearly two-week odyssey in search of a missing child ended in happiness after the baby was located in Mexico.

"I feel happy, thanks to God, because I have my daughter," a smiling Marina Reyes told reporters Thursday at Houston's Intercontinental Airport. "There are so many parents with missing children who have not found them."

Wednesday night was the first time Mrs. Reyes had seen her baby, Lilianna, since the girl was discovered missing from her northeast Houston home crib on Oct. 3.

Mrs. Reyes and Houston police Sgt. Jose Selvera flew to Mexico City early Wednesday expecting to identify the baby and quickly return with her to Houston. But Mexican officials delayed the return by a day to conduct their own investigation.

The emotional reunion occurred in the federal police station in the town of Puebla, about 125 miles southeast of Mexico City, where the baby was discovered being kept by a Mexican family, said Stu Hoyt, assistant legal attache at the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City.

"When I saw her I was surprised, and I just screamed," Mrs. Reyes said. "I saw her, and I cried. Now, we are together again."

The saga began Oct. 1 when Mrs. Reyes and her husband, Sergio Reyes, welcomed a woman to their home after a non-Spanish-speaking neighbor brought her to their house. When Mrs. Reyes woke up about 4 a.m. on Oct. 3, she discovered the woman and her daughter were gone.

Police described the kidnapper, in her early 20s, as "mentally unstable."

"We believe in God, and I know God is with me because we tried to help the lady. I don't feel anything bad for her. She is sick and needs help," Mrs. Reyes said.

A Mexican police official in Puebla, who asked not to be identified, said Mexican federal police still were searching for the woman.

He said the woman arrived in Puebla Sunday with the child and claimed it was her own. But he said her parents took the child from her and when federal authorities began an investigation about the child, she apparently left Puebla.

No charges have been filed in Houston against the woman, officials said.

13-year MHMR battle is concluded

DALLAS (AP) — A 13-year legal battle over conditions in Texas schools for the mentally retarded was apparently settled when parties agreed to a plan that should pump an additional $203 million into the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, officials said.

Under the plan, signed Thursday, the state has agreed to hire hundreds of new employees, monitor conditions in the schools for another decade and follow new accreditation standards and investigative procedures to battle abuse and neglect.

Staff-to-client ratio at state schools will be increased by 15 percent over the next three years, including doctors, nurses and physical therapists, the department said.

The signing came 24 hours before U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders was to penalize the state for its failure to comply with a 1983 settlement agreement. In August, Sanders had held the state in contempt of court for violating both the settlement and clients' constitutional rights.

Sanders approved the agreement in open court, saying it was "the right thing to do."

MHMR Board Chairman Roger Bateman said the contempt citation provided a "stimulus" to settle the suit, but denied that Sanders had forced the state to reach an agreement with the plaintiffs.

But plaintiffs' attorney David Ferleger said the state was muscled into the agreement by Sanders' deadline, and by his proposal that the judge hold individual contempt hearings for other schools.

He said the plan was unprecedented because Texas is the first of 30 states involved in similar litigation to guarantee improved conditions at all state schools. Only three state schools — in Fort Worth, Denton and Austin — were named in the original suit.

Texas historical marker in France

PARIS, France (AP) — A French military band played the Texas state song as Gov. Bill Clements dedicated a plaque marking the home of the independent Texas Republic's former legation on the fashionable Place Vendome.

During the ceremony in a light rainfall Thursday, Clements said the marker is a sign of a relationship dating back to 17th century French colonists.

"We in Texas have had a 300-year relationship with the French," Clements said. "We have commercial enterprises, we have academic exchanges, we have joined together for freedom in Europe and France helped us in our battle for independence."

France signed a treaty with Texas on Sept. 25, 1839, becoming the first country to recognize the new republic after its fight to break away from Mexico.

"Vive le Texas!" exclaimed Jean Tiberi, who represented Mayor Jacques Chirac at the brief ceremony.

When Frenchmen think of Texas, they remember the Alamo, the NASA space center and Texan help in World War I and World War II, "for the ideals of human rights and liberty we have fought for together," Tiberi said.

Clements, a Republican, arrived

Thursday in Paris to begin a five-day visit focusing on trade and investment. He will also visit the cities of Lyon and Dijon in eastern France.

"Part of my mission here is to strengthen and establish commercial ties," he told a few dozen people huddled under umbrellas in front of No. 1 Place Vendome, now a hotel offering rooms for 480 to 600 francs (80 to 100 dollars), or 790 francs (130 dollars) with bath.

The four-story building also houses the Morabito leather goods store and an IBM computer showroom.

Jean Mazel, a French historian who researched the Paris archives to find records of where the legation was housed, said there were three different locations between 1840 and 1845, when Texas was annexed by the United States.

"The first was a very humble place on rue de Richelieu," Mazel said.

Texas Charge d'Affaires Ashbel Smith — who had studied medicine in Paris in the early 1830s — moved the legation in 1842 to the Place Vendome, an elegant square dominated by a 132-foot column supporting a statue of the Emperor Napoleon.

The following year, the legation moved a few blocks away to 20 rue de Castiglione, its last home.

Austin draws two-year sentence

MIDLAND (AP) — A man who admitted taking $22,000 from the mortgage company he headed collapsed in the courtroom Thursday after he was sentenced to two years in prison.

But Alan Dale Austin, 36 — formerly of Odessa and now living in Mabank, 45 miles southeast of Dallas — recovered within moments of his collapse.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton was giving Austin options on when he could begin serving his prison time. Standing at the lectern with his defense attorney, Austin shook and then fell to the carpeted floor.

U.S. Probation Officer Richard Russell, Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery, and FBI Special Agent James "Chip" Burrus rushed to assist him.

"That's a crime of violence," Bunton said of a robbery. But misapplying funds was a betrayal of trust, and "you violated trust that was placed in you."

The judge noted that Austin "may have been immature" when he took the money even with the intention of repaying it.

New policy means less

NEW YORK — A new Reagan administration policy will mean lower welfare benefits for many elderly, blind and disabled people who get free food, shelter, firewood or winter clothing from churches and other charitable organizations, according to a published report.

Under the new policy, non-cash help must be counted as income. The New York Times reported in its Friday editions.

"For every bag of groceries we give these poor people, the government will reduce their benefit checks," said Sharon M. Daly of the United States Catholic Conference, the social action arm of the Roman Catholic Church.

"The more we help these people through local parish programs, the poorer they will be," she said.

The Times said the new policy was declared in a confidential "emergency instruction" to Social Security field offices last month from Rhoda M.G. Davis, the associate commissioner of Social Security.

Teen's gambling aided

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Debra Kim Cohen was a high-roller, gambling away thousands of dollars at the blackjack tables and getting VIP treatment in return, including free limo rides, drinks, hotel rooms and expensive meals.

She was also underage, a 17-year-old compulsive gambler whose father repeatedly pleaded with casinos not to let her play, state gaming regulators charged Thursday.

Five casinos — Caesars, Harrah's Marina, Resorts International, Elsinore's Atlantis and Trump Plaza — were charged by the Division of Gaming Enforcement with allowing her to gamble even though she was under 21.

Miss Cohen, now 18, lost money withdrawn from her bank account, earned from sales jobs and given her at her Sweet 16 party, said her father, Leonard Cohen.

"I tried punishing her, I tried not punishing her," said Cohen, an Atlantic City detective. "I tried taking her out myself, spending time with her. I tried psychiatrists, teachers, her peers."

Warning system faulty

WASHINGTON — A warning device that would have told two Northwest Airlines pilots they were taking off with flaps in the wrong position did not sound because electrical power was interrupted to the alarm, aviation sources say.

The finding by the National Transportation Safety Board reinforces speculation that the circuit breaker was tripped either by the electrical surge — and unnoticed by the pilots — or by the pilots themselves to eliminate nuisance alarms.

Investigators were expected to shed additional light on the circumstances surrounding the accident, which claimed 156 lives, when they release an array of documents today.

Missile attack

U.S.-flagged ship is hit

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A missile believed to have been fired by Iran struck and set ablaze a U.S.-flagged tanker in the Persian Gulf today. At least 18 people, including the ship's American captain, were wounded in the attack.

It was the second missile strike on an American-owned or American-flagged vessel in Kuwaiti waters in two days.

The American radio man of the ship hit today was also among the wounded, a U.S. military spokesman in Manama said. The injured crewmen's identities were not released.

Secretary of State George Shultz, in Israel to discuss Middle East peace, called the attack a "serious matter."

Kuwait's Cabinet met in emergency session to discuss it.

The tanker, the 81,283-ton Sea Isle City, is part of the Kuwaiti fleet reflagged by the United States in July to protect it from attack. Iran claims Kuwait aids Iraq, Iran's enemy in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

Also today, a helicopter carrying a U.S. television crew came under fire from an Iranian gunboat in the southern gulf, shipping sources reported.

A member of the NBC television network told The Associated Press there were no injuries or damage to the craft. No other details were available.

The projectile that hit the Sea Isle City crashed into the crew accommodation quarters as the ship moved slowly toward a refueling pier near Kuwait's Al-Ahmadi oil terminal. The tanker was empty at the time.

The Pentagon said the explosion aboard the Sea Isle City was caused by "a bomb or a missile," but a U.S. military source here said it was "99 per cent certain" that it was a missile.

A Pentagon spokesman, Cmdr. Bob Prucha, later said that the source of the attack was not being released, but "there reportedly was an aircraft in the vicinity at the time."

On Thursday, the U.S.-owned supertanker Sungari was hit in a nearly identical attack at al-Ahmadi, on the central Kuwaiti coast. Both attacks occurred in Kuwaiti territorial waters, and U.S. officials declined to say how the United States might respond.

Consensus mounted that the missiles that hit both the Sea Isle City and the Sungari were Chinese-made Silkworms, most likely launched from Iraq's Faw peninsula, which Iran occupies. Iran has deployed the medium-range, surface-to-surface missiles on the peninsula.

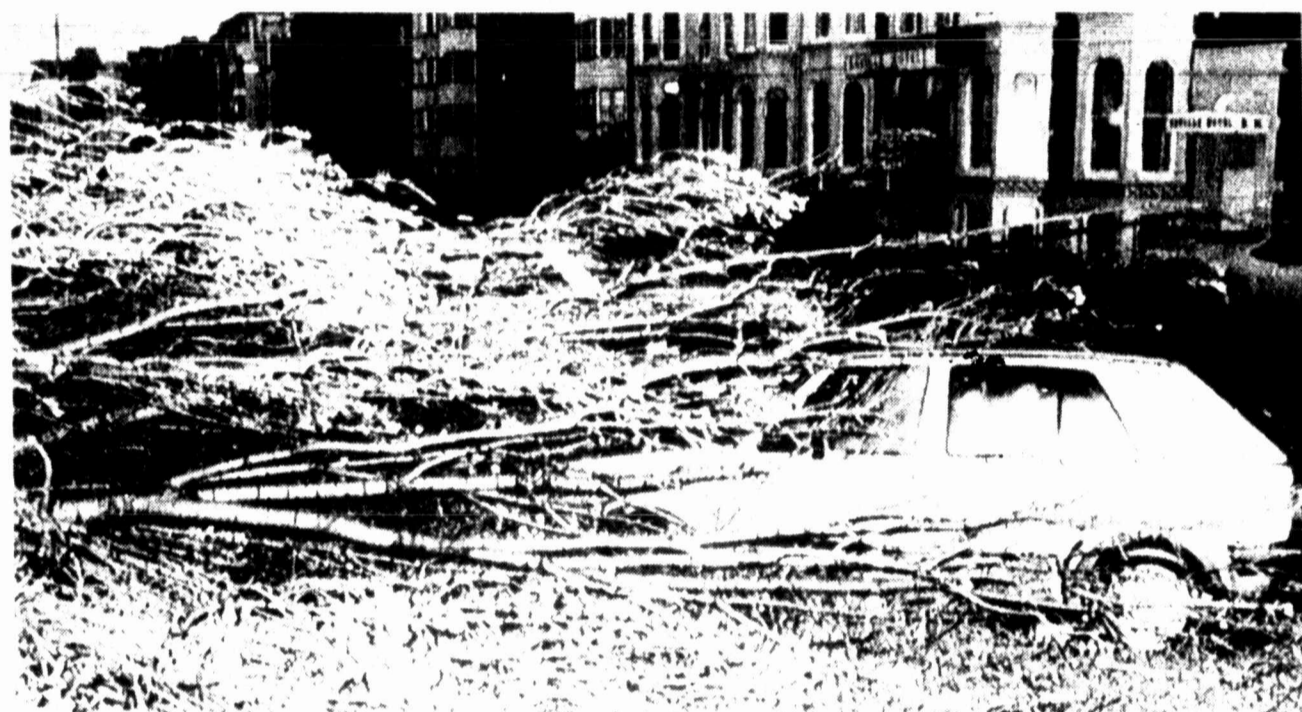

Iran also has U.S.-made Maverick air-to-surface missiles, according to Western intelligence sources, and has equipped its F-4 Phantom jets with them.

Iran did not acknowledge firing the missile. Iranian President Ali Khamenei told worshippers at Tehran University Friday that an American-flagged ship was "hit by a missile."

The official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, quoted the Iranian leader as saying: "Where the missile came from? The almighty knows better."

But, he added, "We have declared that they (the Americans) should not expect us to watch our ships being attacked and other ships remain safe. This is the nature of tension and how it spreads in the region."

At an airport news conference outside Tel Aviv, Shultz noted that the attacks took place in Kuwaiti waters, not the international waters the United States has pledged to protect.

Trees consume car

A parked car is crushed beneath fallen trees at Clarence Parade, Portsmouth, England, after a massive storm — with winds up to 90 miles per hour — struck southern England early today. At least 11 people were believed killed by the gales.

Ousted leader killed

OUAGADOUGOU, Burkina Faso — Ousted President Thomas Sankara was shot and killed after his government was overthrown in a coup led by his second-in-command, a well-informed official source said today.

The Burkina Faso source said Sankara and about a dozen people were killed during the coup. He said they were buried in a cemetery outside this West African capital. The source, who commented on condition of anonymity, provided no more details.

Capt. Blaise Compaore and his Popular Front seized power Thursday and declared today a holiday. The city was quiet today with more soldiers than normal in sight, but a reporter found roadblocks outside the presidential palace unmaned.

Firing was heard outside a military camp Thursday evening after the coup was announced on state radio. It wasn't clear whether the weapons had been fired in combat or in celebration. There were no signs of fighting outside the presidential palace.

Shultz pursues peace

TEL AVIV, Israel — Secretary of State George Shultz arrived in Israel today on the first leg of a Middle East trip aimed at injecting life into the stagnant Middle East peace process.

Shultz met with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir shortly after his arrival at Ben Gurion International airport, and was scheduled to meet soon after with Shamir's coalition rival, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

Shultz also planned to meet in the next few days with a group of Palestinians from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, but recent violence in the occupied territories could affect that encounter.

Arab newspapers today urged a boycott because of what they called Shultz's rejection of Palestinian rights.

"Boycott this fake propagandist," said an editorial in Al Shaab, a daily based in Arab east Jerusalem. "It is obvious that with every new American move in the area, we must expect another conspiracy."

England's winds kill 11

LONDON — At least 11 people died today as gales swept southern England, knocking down a hotel, toppling power lines and blacking out most of London and much of the south.

The London Weather Center said pre-dawn winds in London gusted to 94 mph, the strongest ever recorded in the capital. Fallen trees blocked roads, halting most commuter trains.

Dover, the world's busiest passenger ferry port, closed for the first time in decades.

"We forecast strong winds overnight, but nobody thought it would be anything like as bad as this," said a weather spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He said the southwesterly air stream formed a depression in the mid-Atlantic "and just got deeper and deeper."

None survive jet crash in Italy

BARNI, Italy (AP) — An Italian airliner carrying 37 people crashed during a storm in the foothills of the Italian Alps and authorities said today there were no survivors.

Rescue workers located the craft early today on a craggy hillside but thick fog and rough terrain hindered recovery attempts.

"Our first worry was to organize the rescue, but unfortunately it wasn't needed because there are no survivors," said state prosecutor Mario Del Franco, who is heading an investigation into the crash.

Antonio Giacomino, a fire official coordinating recovery operations, said fog was hindering flights of helicopters and the recovery of bodies from the inaccessible hillside at an altitude of about 2,500 feet.

The crash occurred minutes after takeoff Thursday night on a flight from Milan to Cologne, West Germany.

A passenger list released by ATI, a subsidiary of the state-run carrier Alitalia, did not include nationalities, but most if not all of those aboard were believed to be Italian or West German.

The wreckage of the twin-engine turboprop was seen at dawn today in a heavily forested area known for its high cliffs and deep ravines near Barni, about 40 miles north of Milan.

Giacomino said wreckage and bodies were spread over an area of 500 meters. An alpine rescue team had reached the site and had used ropes to lower themselves from hovering helicopters.

The airliner's flight data recorder and cockpit voice recorder, the so-called black boxes, were not immediately found, officials said.

Del Franco said "we will consider all possibilities but at the moment we don't know how and why it happened."

Amaro and Franco Villa, owners of the Madonna Refuge, an inn at an altitude of 3,100 feet on Mount Crezzo, said they were eating dinner with their family Thursday night when they heard a loud roar.

They said they rushed to the window and saw "a ball of fire" rise into the air near their inn.

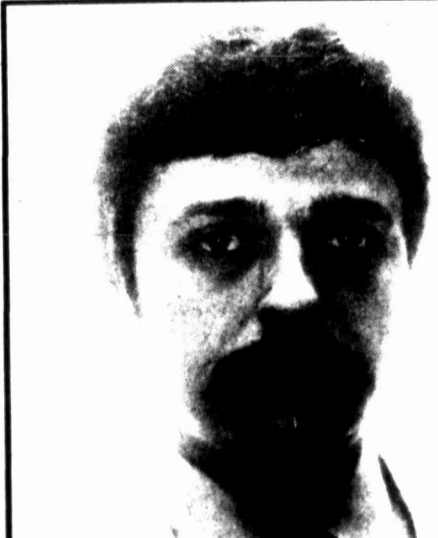

"We were frightened, but we rushed out and we could see an explosion in the valley below, although we could not hear it. It looked like fireworks," said Mrs. Villa.

The Villas' report was consistent with rescue officials' report that the crash occurred at the 2,400-foot level of Mount Crezzo, a mountain that drops off precipitously on one side to Lake Como and its popular resorts near the Swiss border.

Several witnesses reported seeing the aircraft flying abnormally low before the crash. There were also scattered reports that some people saw the plane in flames before the crash, but there was no way to verify those accounts.

"I was in the house when I heard a very strong noise from a motor, like that from a race car," said Anna Maria Conforti, in the town of Onno on the other side of the mountain from Barni.

"I went to the window and saw ... a plane that was flying very low over the roofs of the houses."

YOUR FAITH CAN HELP YOU OVERCOME THOSE ANXIOUS HOURS

Sooner or later, misfortune of some kind must enter all of our lives; and yet if we could count the hours we have wasted in needless anxiety over something that never happened, we would be truly horrified. It may have been the fear of an illness that the doctor dispelled, or the anticipation of a financial setback that didn't materialize, or any number of things. Meanwhile, the agony of all those sleepless nights could have been greatly relieved by regular attendance at our House of Worship, where we learn to trust the Lord to protect us. Moreover, in the event of some real calamity we are better able to cope with it, relying on the Almighty to provide the right answer. When we realize that He is our best source of help and guidance, we will be fully prepared for whatever life sends our way.

NEW YORK (AP) — Charges of doctrinal deviations brought against Episcopal Bishop John S. Spong of Newark, N.J., by two groups have been dismissed unanimously by a panel of seven bishops appointed in the case.

The panel, headed by Bishop Duncan M. Gray Jr. of Mississippi, ruled that the charges did not meet required criteria since the 11 counts were doctrinal in nature and canon law requires that such charges be presented by 10 bishops.

The charges had been made by Episcopalians affiliated with the Prayer Book Society and a group called the Committee of Concerned Episcopalians.

Another presentation against Spong, involving a dispute over a $574,000 fire insurance settlement check for Ascension Church of Jersey City, N.J., still is being considered by the panel.

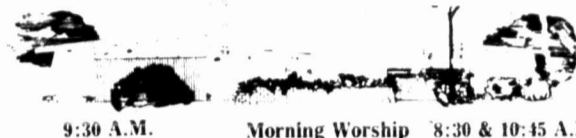

NEW YORK (AP) — Major Orthodox Jewish organizations of America have urged Jerusalem's municipal authorities and Israel's government to halt Friday night movies in Jerusalem, saying they desecrate the Sabbath.

In a joint statement, five U.S. Orthodox bodies also condemned violent acts by "irresponsible hotheads who stoop to stone-throwing in violation of Jewish law" in protesting the movies.

Only "forceful action" by authorities can resolve the situation before "tensions flare totally out of hand," the statement said.

It said "the sanctity of the Sabbath" had long been preserved in Jerusalem, even under the British mandate before Israel became a state, and Israel previously had maintained the policy as "status quo."

Religion Celebration

Catholics observe century in Big Spring

St. Thomas Catholic Church, Sixth and North Main streets, will celebrate 100 years of Catholic presence in Big Spring Tuesday at 7 p.m.

The church will welcome Bishop Michael Pfeifer, OMI, San Angelo, many of the clergy of West Texas, laypeople and its parishioners to the celebration, according to a news release.

Special guest of honor will be Mrs. Jesusita Marques Gonzalez, who will be 100 years old Dec. 24, according to the release.

Other guests of honor include Bishop Michael Pfeifer, Mayor and Mrs. Cotton Mize, Dr. and Mrs. Bob E. Riley, president of Howard College, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd McMillan, assistant superintendent of the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brown, county commissioner.

Others to whom recognition will be given include:

- Charles A. Weeg. His family members, Father Simon Weeg and

JESUSITA GONZALEZ

Anton F. Weeg, brothers, were long-time Big Spring residents. Father Weeg came to Big Spring in 1885-1887 to say Mass in the homes of families, according to the release.

• Mrs. Kathleen Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Morgan, who helped bring all the families and community friends together to build St. Thomas Church in 1910-1911.

• Aldan Ryan, whose great-grandfather, George Bauer, gave the property in deed of trust, according to the release.

• Mrs. Edward (Polly) Settles, relative of the Bauers, whose efforts culminated years of effort to purchase the property, 100 years after the grant in trust. St. Thomas purchased the property on which the church and buildings are located.

• Emiliano Fierro, whose father in 1914 helped establish Our Lady of Guadalupe, in the days before Sacred Heart Church, and attended the original St. Mary's Church.

Since 1887, Big Spring has seen nine Catholic churches rise and be surrounded by many other buildings of education, activities, and other effort to develop religious spirit, according to Robert Vretea, pastor of St. Thomas Church.

Among members of the clergy expected to attend will be Father Francis Beazley OMI, pastor at St. Lawrence. As pastor of St. Thomas, he guided his people to build the present Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church, which opened its doors in 1960, for Christmas midnight Mass, according to the release.

Father James Delaney, pastor of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, has been a citizen of Big Spring for the past 23 years. Both are members of the Congregation of Oblate Fathers of Mary Immaculate of Texas, as is Rev. Robert Vretea, OMI, pastor of St. Thomas Catholic Church, and Bishop Michael Pfeifer, according to the release.

The first Oblate Father to come to Big Spring was Rev. Isadore Tresch OMI, in 1906, according to the release.

NEW YORK (AP) — A Jewish organization, in behalf of a Moslem, seeks to halt some Christian and Jewish displays.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has asked a federal appeals court to bar displays of a Christmas Nativity scene and a Hanukkah menorah on government property in Pittsburgh, saying a Moslem, Malik Tunador, feels excluded by them.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Newark's Roman Catholic Archbishop Theodore E. McCarr-

Resignations

President's Cabinet diminishes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Secretary William E. Brock Thursday announced he will resign from President Reagan's Cabinet, in the process making his first campaign speech for his next boss, Republican presidential hopeful Robert Dole.

"This is not a decision made lightly," Brock said of his choice to become Sen. Dole's campaign chairman on Nov. 1, when he leaves as labor secretary.

"But I am deeply concerned about the enormous range and complexity of issues facing our nation," Brock said. "Sen. Dole's extraordinary personal leadership made the decision imperative."

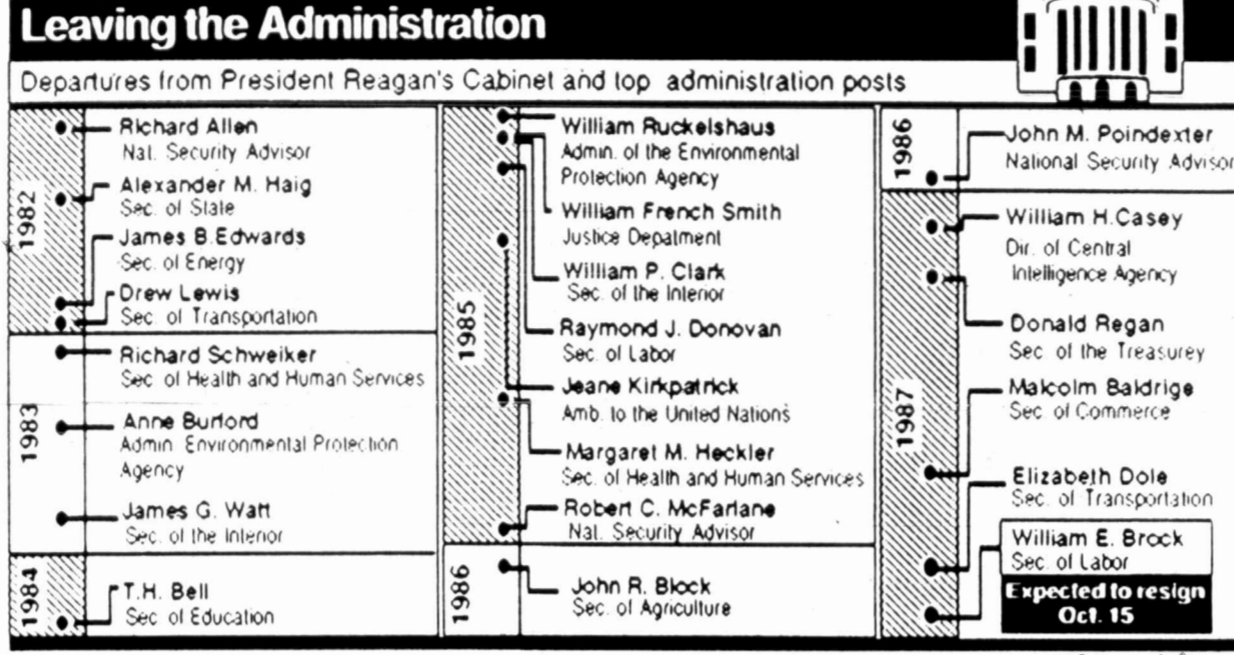

While saying he was stepping down from Reagan's Cabinet with mixed emotions, Brock said Dole's "recognized mastery of moving a program through an increasingly independent Congress will be crucial" to see that America chooses what he referred to as a future of hope.

Brock, 56, is the second Cabinet official to resign to work full time on Dole's drive for the Republican presidential nomination. Dole's wife, Elizabeth, resigned as transportation secretary Oct. 1 to devote her attention to the campaign.

Brock, a former GOP national chairman, is widely credited with rebuilding the party after the Watergate scandal of the Nixon administration.

Dole's campaign staff scheduled its own news conference later in the day with Brock, who is still scheduled to address the AFL-CIO's biennial convention Oct. 19-24 in Miami as labor secretary.

Brock told reporters he had "made a decision some time ago I was going to be incapable of staying out of the race next year."

"In that case, why wait?" he asked. Sources close to Brock said he had told Reagan last week that he would be leaving, but that the resignation was not submitted then.

Brock said one factor in his decision to resign now was the progress of the administration's pension reform bill in Congress. The legislation would alter pension laws, putting new requirements on employers to fund plans while liberalizing their ability to use surplus assets.

"It's moving ahead of schedule," Brock said. "That's one thing I take comfort in, on why I can leave."

Speculation on a successor to Brock as labor secretary centered on four names:

- Constance Horner, director of the Office of Personnel Management.

- Deputy Labor Secretary Dennis Whitfield, a longtime aide to Brock going back to his days as Republican national chairman.

- Former Rep. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., who retired in 1984 after serving for several years as the ranking GOP member of the House Education and Labor Committee.

- Betty Murphy, a former chairwoman of the National Labor Relations Board and now a Washington attorney specializing in labor law.

During his 19-month tenure as labor secretary, Brock re-established Reagan administration relations with the AFL-CIO that had virtually disappeared under his predecessor, Raymond Donovan.

While leading the administration's fight against a broad spectrum of legislation wanted by unions — including a higher minimum wage and mandatory advance notices of plant closings — he persuaded Reagan to budget more money for job training.

Democrats vote to raise high-paid medicare taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats on the Senate Finance Committee, trying to complete work on a deficit-reduction tax increase, voted today to raise Medicare taxes on about 8 million upper-income employees.

The Democrats, who control the committee, rejected a provision that would have imposed new limits on deductions for home mortgage interest. A similar amendment has been accepted by Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee, who are writing their own package of tax increases.

Even as the committees were putting the finishing touches on the tax bills, Reagan was issuing a statement accusing them of fiscal irresponsibility and repeating his contention that spending reductions are the only acceptable way to reduce the deficit.

"If reason should fail, if Congress should actually pass a tax hike, my answer will be simply this: veto," Reagan said.

Republicans on the Ways and Means and Finance committees are boycotting the tax-writing sessions, reflecting Reagan's stated opposition to raising taxes. Democrats are working toward a package that would split the required $23-billion deficit reduction between spending cuts and tax increases.

The increased Medicare tax would be the biggest money raiser in the Senate package, bringing in $2.2 billion during the 12 months that began on Oct. 1, $6.3 billion the following year and at least $80 billion by the end of the century.

Under current law, taxes to finance the Medicare health-care system are paid as part of the Social Security tax. For 1987, an employee pays 1.45 percent of the first $43,800 of wages for Medicare and the employer matches that amount. The $43,800 "wage base" is adjusted each year as average wages increase.

Under the proposal, the $43,800 limitation would be eliminated. Thus, a person who earns $50,000 would pay tax on the full amount: an additional $89.90. The employer would face the same increase.

The bill being written in the House includes no such provision.

However, unlike their Ways and Means counterparts, Finance Committee Democrats refused to restrict the deduction allowed for interest on home-mortgage and home-equity loans. The House panel would limit total deductible mortgage loans to $1 million per taxpayer.

Names in the news

Princess Anne to visit Nashville Oct. 23

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Britain's Princess Anne will be treated to country music performances during her visit to Nashville to ride in the Royal Steeplechase, planners say.

The princess, daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, is to arrive Wednesday and ride in the opening race Oct. 23.

She then will retire to the royal enclosure to watch the final three races, including the $100,000 Queen Mother Supreme Novice Chase, and performances by country entertainers Restless Heart, Ray Stevens and Lee Greenwood.

"Ticket sales are going really well so far. It's been above and beyond what we expected," said Beth Seigenthaler of the International Steeplechase Group, which is sponsoring the event to benefit the Save the Children Fund.

Ms. Seigenthaler said all 40 royal enclosure boxes have sold out for $10,000 apiece.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Actress Angie Dickinson, accepting Hall of Fame honors in her home state, says she's mellowed in the years since she said she'd never return to North Dakota.

ANGIE DICKINSON

In her first trip to North Dakota since 1942, the 56-year-old actress said Wednesday she regrets the remarks she made in a 1959 interview.

She was quoted in an entertainment column then as saying she would never return to North Dakota "if I can help it."

"It was a very angry period," she said. "I was raked over the coals, appropriately, for that. I should never have said it. ... I found I was very arrogant in lots of ways, but you learn, hopefully."

Miss Dickinson was in Bismarck to be inducted into the North Dakota Hall of Fame, a private museum.

Her parents, Leo and Reka Brown, published the Kulm Messenger and Edgeley Mail weekly newspapers. The family left for California in 1942.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Ruta Lee has won another struggle with Soviet officials and brought a second relative to the United States.

Lithuanian Maryte Kaseta, a cousin of the actress, arrived Wednesday and expressed wonder about her new home.

All gays not infected by AIDS virus

DEAR ABBY: I am a bisexual male, 38, divorced with two children, of whom I have partial custody. My sister and her family used to invite us to swim in their pool, but no more. Why? They're afraid I might contaminate their pool with the AIDS virus!

Of course, this is ridiculous, but what is more ridiculous is the fact that many people, despite all the available information, still think that ALL gays and bisexuals are "automatically" infected with AIDS. (Abby, I have been tested for AIDS every six months and have always tested negative.)

My niece won't even let me hold — let alone kiss — her 3-year-old daughter. My children, who are 7 and 9 years old, want to know why these relatives didn't come to their birthday parties at my home. (They fear that the food and utensils may have been contaminated, no doubt!)

I am heartsick over all of this, and I know I'm not alone. Abby, please keep giving your readers the right information about AIDS.

Thank you very much, and God bless you.

A PITTSBURGH READER
DEAR READER: According to Dr. Mervyn Silverman, president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research: "Even if you were antibody-positive, your sister's behavior isn't only in appropriate but insensitive and unnecessary. AIDS cannot be transmitted by sharing eating utensils, hugging, holding, swimming or any other form of casual contact."

***
DEAR ABBY: We've been married for three months. Among our wedding gifts was a silver pitcher. On the card was this poem:

"Wedding gifts usually go to the bride
"And you expect them to walk side by side.
"But if you split, and she throws you the broom,

"Then the pitcher automatically goes to the groom."
(There's a hand-drawn picture of a groom throwing a horseshoe at his bride. It's signed: "Good luck, chum!")

My husband put the pitcher and the card on the shelf in the kitchen. I turn the card to the wall when I cook. But he turns it back when he comes in from the barn at noon, then he sits there grinning like a Cheshire cat.

Shall I open the window and let a stiff breeze blow the card and pitcher into the stubble field? I like the pitcher, but not the card.

David Lilly, an official from the U.S. Bureau of Mines in Carlsbad, N.M. demonstrates to rescue workers the procedure he wishes them to take in their attempt to rescue 18-month-old Jessica McClure Thursday, a day after she fell 22 feet into an abandoned well.

Crisis scene is emotional

MIDLAND (AP) — Schoolchildren prayed and anxious spectators with youngsters of their own looked on Thursday as rescuers struggled to get to the little girl in the well.

"I don't know these people, but it's really been emotional for me," said Carol Davis, a mother of six who watched the tedious rescue efforts.

Throughout the day Thursday, spectators came and went, standing in adjacent backyards and on the street in this working-class neighborhood.

In the yard where the rescue effort continued into the night, a small mimosa tree was almost covered with the rock that had been hewn from the Earth to create a shaft rescuers hoped would become Jessica McClure's tunnel to safety.

In the next yard, the Salvation Army and Red Cross served refreshments to reporters and rescue workers. The next-door yard became an instant press area, complete with a forest of ladders used to peer over the fence.

After school was out Thursday, Lynne Markgraf brought students from the Alamo YMCA in Midland. The 13 children held hands in a circle as Ms. Markgraf said a brief prayer. Some of the children wept.

"It's hard to stop crying," said 8-year-old Amy Dyer, a friend of a cousin of the trapped girl. "An 18-month-old baby, that's quite small."

Ms. Markgraf said the children wanted to come to the scene.

"I definitely feel once this thing is played out they will feel they were part of a victory," she said. "The children are very optimistic."

But as night fell and the lights came on for a second night of digging, optimism was stained by the reality of the rescue effort that began Wednesday morning.

"If you would have asked me yesterday morning, we wouldn't be here today," Midland Fire Chief James Roberts said.

Some spectators said they planned to stay until the end.

"We're just concerned for that little girl," said Debbie Johns as she hugged her 9-year-old son.

"I have a 22-month-old baby myself — my heart goes out to the McClures and to Jessica," said Dr. Carolyn C. Rhode, the physician who brought Jessica into the world. "I'm very concerned, and I am praying for her."

Incident recalls 1949 disaster

SAN MARINO, Calif. (AP) — The plight of a Texas toddler trapped in a well today recalled the tragedy of Kathy Fiscus, a little girl whose death despite heroic rescue efforts in a similar accident saddened the nation 38 years ago.

Kathy, a curly-haired 3½-year-old, was running a race across a field with her sister and cousin on April 8, 1949, when she tumbled into the 14-inch casing of an abandoned well and was trapped 95 feet underground.

The other children heard her cries and ran for help. The struggle to free Kathy gripped Los Angeles and the nation as people waited tensely for details.

More than 25,000 hushed people came to watch the rescue effort by 132 volunteers unfold in 90-degree heat. Others huddled by black-and-white TV sets around the city, watching KTLA-Channel 5, the first TV station in Los Angeles.

In one of the earliest efforts by TV news to cover an event live, the 2-year-old station stayed on the air for 27½ hours.

"It was the first time people experienced this huge power of television," said veteran reporter Stan Chambers.

"They became as much a part of the rescue effort as the men out there digging," he said. "It was emotional story. People found out that their television sets weren't just a play thing."

Newspapers in London and Stockholm held their editions, awaiting the news. Behind the Iron Curtain, the Czechoslovakian government news agency branded the story as being without educational value and purely sensational.

After a 49-hour effort, Kathy's body was brought up. She had apparently died a few hours after falling in.

Bob Thomas, an Associated Press reporter who covered the story, recalled the bulletin AP ran announcing the death.

Physicians debating condition

MIDLAND (AP) — At first, doctors said it would take Jessica McClure about 36 hours to start having serious dehydration problems as she lay 22 feet into a well shaft.

But about 37 hours into the 18-month-old's ordeal, a police spokesman said Jessica could survive into the weekend if need be.

"She's probably so young it's not going to affect her too bad," Midland Police spokesman Jeff Haile said Thursday. "The doctors say she can be there three or four days without being hurt too bad."

The toddler fell into an uncovered well Wednesday as she played with two other children. Rescuers dug tunnels next to the well shaft Wednesday and Thursday to try to rescue the girl.

Jessica was crying and complaining of hunger Thursday, and officials took that as a good sign.

But they did not lower food or water to her because they wanted her stomach to be empty when they rescued her in case she needed surgery, Haile said.

"And if she choked, there would be nothing we could do," he said.

Paramedics were waiting at the scene for the girl's rescue, but they refused comment.

Warm air was being blown into the shaft to keep the girl comfortable, and workers were pumping oxygen down there for good measure.

"Haile would not speculate what the girl's condition would be at the time of her rescue. He said she would be strapped to a board before being taken up to immobilize her."

"That's standard procedure in emergencies like this," he said.
