Landmark's extinction seems near

By BILL FOSTER
Staff Writer

A Big Spring landmark may be headed for extinction.

The solitary white-stone screen tower and rows of speaker pedestals at the old Jet Drive-In Theater have dominated the landscape south of FM 790 and west of Wasson Road for the past 23 years.

Now, those fixtures — defunct since 1964 — are being eyed for replacement by a commercial enterprise more receptive to today's economy: mini-storage warehouses.

City Council accepted first reading of an ordinance to rezone the 4.2 acres of land on which the theater is located from retail, with a specific use permit for a drive-in theater, to light commercial.

Property owner Glen Rogers originally asked the city Planning and Zoning Commission for the acreage to be rezoned heavy commercial.

However, planning and zoning commission members not only unanimously rejected Roger's original request, but also recommended that light commercial zoning for the theater property be denied.

Commission members said they feared either a light or heavy commercial rezoning of the property might be construed as illegal spot zoning.

The commission's recommendation for denial was made because no other property adjacent to the theater property has a light commercial designation, according to Planning and Zoning Commission Chairman Sidney Clark.

"We felt that allowing the property to be rezoned light commercial would open a can of worms ... it would set a precedent for spot zoning across the city," Clark said.

City Council members did not share the planning and zoning commission's concern and Tuesday unanimously passed first reading of an ordinance to rezone the theater property.

"Our greatest concern now is if the adjoining property owners would rather have mini-storage warehouses built at the site, or construction page 2-A

Historical status given Hotel Settles

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

The Hotel Settles — it stands tall and stark against the West Texas landscape.

For decades, Big Spring residents bragged that the 15-story brick high-rise was the tallest building between Fort Worth and El Paso.

The now vacant 57-year-old hotel, at one time a mecca for West Texas social activity, has been named a Texas historical landmark, Chairwoman of the Howard County Historical Commission, Polly Mays, said Friday.

Mays, who has received the marker from the Texas Historical Commission, said the application process took about a year.

Owner Gil Cuadra provided historical information about the hotel and paid a $300 fee to have the marker made, she said.

No date for dedication or posting of the marker has been set.

Cuadra said plans are progressing to open the building to retail businesses.

Cuadra said he is assembling a "retail mix" of local businesses that will eventually occupy a renovated building.

Details of his plans will be announced within a month, he said.

"There is hope for Big Spring," he said.

Owners of buildings designated as state landmarks are prohibited by the Texas Historical Commission from modifying the exterior of the buildings, Cuadra said, but added that renovations to the interior are permissible.

Receiving the marker means the Settles is considered an "important historical landmark," Cuadra said.

Will R. and Lilian Settles built the hotel after the discovery of oil on their ranch in 1927.

With an Oct. 1, 1930 grand opening, the hotel boasted 150 guest rooms, grand public rooms, office and retail space, furnished apartments, restaurants, ballrooms and a private club on the top floor.

But since then the hotel has fallen on hard times — it has stood vacant since the late 1970s.

Cuadra, a San Antonio developer, purchased the hotel in 1984 with plans to use the hotel as an anchor for a multimillion dollar downtown historical district.

But his ambitious plans to open the hotel within 18 months hit road blocks.

Work on the Settles halted after junk and trash were removed from the lobby.

In 1985, Cuadra said restoration was halted because the project lacked community support.

Downtown Coordinator Teri Quinones was later hired by the city to implement a three-year, $165,000 downtown renovation project.

Renovation of the Settles, a long-term proposal, is one of about 20 projects of Main Street Inc. — the downtown renovation plan. Eleven months remain before public funding commitments expire.

Rock's hardness hindered work, helped save girl

MIDLAND (AP) — Rock that could dull even diamond-tipped drills hampered efforts to rescue an 18-month-old toddler stuck in an abandoned well, but it ironically may have saved her life, a federal official says.

When drillers cut wells in this part of the Permian Basin, the bits encounter rock so hard about 20 feet down that they bounce around and create miniature, bell-shaped caverns.

It was such an underground "dogleg" that likely saved Jessica McClure's from plunging to her death, said Dave Lilly, a U.S. Mine Safety and Health investigator from Carlsbad, N.M.

"Apparently right along about 20 feet is where we had a little bit of a dogleg, a little bit of a shelf. That's what she got caught on. If the hole had been straight, she'd have fallen to the bottom," Lilly said.

Dust-covered volunteers, many of them toughened oilfield and mine workers, cheered and cried as the little girl was finally brought to the surface of a makeshift shaft Friday night.

The victory capped a lengthy battle that began Wednesday morning when a truck oilfield workers know as a "rat holer" began digging a vertical shaft parallel to where Jessica lay trapped 22 feet below the surface.

"I never considered (the rescue) impossible. I just knew it was going to be a hard job and it was going to take some time," Lilly said. "It was unusual. What we got into was one of the hardest rocks I've ever seen."

Scott Fletcher, 24, of Albuquerque, N.M., said the 79,000-pound machine was being used for a nearby highway construction project when the call for help came. The truck, with a winch feeding cable through a 65-foot boom, was an unlikely tool for a delicate lift

Eighteen-month-old Jessica McClure is rescued Friday night, after having been trapped 22 feet under ground in an abandoned water well since Wednesday morning.

Physicians operate on Jessica's foot; remaining hopeful

MIDLAND (AP) — Doctors operated Saturday on Jessica McClure's injured right foot, hopeful they would not have to amputate it despite damage from spending 2½ days trapped in a well shaft.

"I'm just glad she's safe and we got her back. I am so happy we've got her back. The whole world has her back," said Reba Gayle McClure, Jessica's mother, appearing calm and happy.

"I want to tell everybody in the world, thank you all for your caring. We love all of you," she said in a news conference Saturday.

Jessica was still in serious but stable condition Saturday night, although she continued to improve, while, workers filled both the abandoned well and rescue hole with concrete Saturday, and a welder inscribed the metal plate capping the well. "For Jessica, with love from all of us."

The 18-month-old girl fell in the abandoned well Wednesday morning and wasn't freed from the 8-inch shaft until Friday night, after round-the-clock drilling efforts. During her 58-hour ordeal, her right foot was jammed across her left leg, cutting off circulation and raising a threat of gangrene.

Several more days of observation will be required before a final ruling on gangrene or amputation is made, Ms. Johnson said. The pediatric waiting area at Midland Memorial Hospital was jammed with balloons and cards for Jessica, whose plight captured global attention.

The toddler was reported to be lethargic and a bit grumpy Saturday. Mrs. McClure, 17, said her daughter had said "Momma," that she wanted her bottle and "Pooh." During part of her ordeal, Jessica had entertained herself by singing "Winnie the Pooh."

"She's a real fighter," Dr. Shelton Viney said. "She's a patient (for whom) we're going to do everything we possibly can."

At the backyard well site, meanwhile, workers filled both the abandoned well and rescue hole with concrete Saturday, and a welder inscribed the metal plate capping the well. "For Jessica, with love from all of us."

At the rescue hole, workers left enough room to plant a red bud tree and a ring of lavender-colored chrysanthemums. The plantings were the brainchild of paramedic Toby Partridge, who aided in the rescue.

"It'll be something to tell kids down the line," he said. "In seven or 10 years down the road, you'll be

B-1B fleet returning to flight status

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force says its B-1B fleet is being returned to flying status after no problems were found during inspections of the bombers' crew ejection systems.

The planes were grounded last week in the wake of a B-1B crash at a Colorado training range Sept. 28, in which only three of the six men aboard were able to escape.

Of the B-1B fleet, 59 planes have been returned to flying status and the other 10 are undergoing other types of routine maintenance, the service said Friday.

Sources said a board of inquiry is still trying to determine why only half the crewmen were able to eject safely from the crippled bomber. The others were killed. The Air Force has said the plane crashed after a flock of birds struck an engine.

The Strategic Air Command, which is responsible for the bomber force, has acknowledged the "precautionary inspections" were "an outgrowth of the Sept. 28 accident."

The B-1B carries four ejection seats for the four primary crewmen — extra passengers have to bail out through hatches in the plane's belly. The B-1B that crashed was carrying six men because it was on a training flight and instructors were on board.

Despite the plane's crippled condition after the bird strikes, the pilots managed to climb to an estimated altitude of about 15,000 feet — in theory more than high enough to allow safe ejection and parachuting.

The statement Friday said the Air Force had "completed inspection of the emergency escape systems in all its B-1B aircraft involved in daily flying operations. No discrepancies were discovered."

The B-1B, the first long-range strategic bomber to be produced by the United States in more than 25 years, is manufactured by Rockwell International in El Segundo, Calif. It has a maximum speed of about 1,000 mph and a range of more than 7,000 miles, but is designed primarily to fly just below the speed of sound at altitudes of only 200 feet above the ground.

The Air Force is buying 100 of the planes for a total $27.3 billion. Before the Sept. 28 crash, 69 of the planes had been delivered. One additional bomber has since been delivered.

The B-1B is powered by four engines and is smaller than the Air Force's aging B-52 but capable of carrying more bombs. It already holds a number of world aviation speed records for a plane of its size.

Vietnam memorial designs are sought

Members of the Big Spring Vietnam Memorial Committee are sponsoring a contest for the design of a permanent local monument to veterans who served in the Vietnam war.

Members are opening to establish the monument at or near the site of the Moving Wall's location on the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf campus near Scenic Mountain.

The contest is open to anyone who wants to submit a design.

However, the committee has established the following criteria for a memorial design:

- No larger than 25 feet by 25 feet.
- Sit on a concrete slab.
- Be a permanent fixture.

- Have placements for three flags.
- Must not be constructed of wood or painted materials.
- Have an eternal flame.
- Have a plaque at the base of a flag.

All design drawings should be sent to the Big Spring Vietnam Memorial Committee, P.O. Box 2854, Big Spring, Texas, 79721-2854.

Deadline for entries is Nov. 2. A winner will be announced Nov. 5. All drawings will become property of the memorial committee.

Donations for use to construct the monument can be sent to the same address.

More information about the proposed memorial can be obtained by calling Robb McKenzie 263-8125.

Better grades sitting on the right

Teachers pay more attention to students on the right side of the classroom. So students who sit on that side get better grades. Pretty simple, isn't it? Too simple maybe. But it's the reported contention of one Dr. John Kershner who made a lengthy study of the matter.

Friday night. "Very slow, as slow as possible," Fletcher said of his instructions when the cable at the end of the massive machine was attached to a paramedic clutching the toddler.

"She could handle the ride out if she could handle the ride down. She took the fast way down," said Fletcher, who ran the truck's winch throughout the expedition. "We usually pull out rocks and stuff, not babies."

Lilly said there was little fear of pulling the child through the pipe, which he said was lined with sticky tar, because Jessica was covered in petroleum jelly to help slip her through.

"Most of my working years have been spent under ground. We've had to rescue miners trapped under slabs that fell on them or trapped under pieces of machinery. That is something you can deal with. That's why I say this is unique because I've never run across something like this before," Lilly said.

The rock that dots the vast oilfield is a mixture of flint and caliche, a hard limestone that is "breaking carbide bits, diamond-tip bits — every tip known to the industry," said Midland police spokesman Jeff Haile.

Earlier Saturday, surgeons performed a fasciotomy on Jessica's foot to relieve swelling caused by her dehydrated body regaining fluid. That process involves cutting through the fascia or protective membrane that surrounds muscle tissue, allowing the muscle to swell outward without cutting off blood flow.

"We are cautiously optimistic about the skin and the muscles that are involved. We still will not be able to tell for a number of days and possibly a week whether we are going to be able to salvage the foot," Viney said after two other surgeons completed the operation.

Jessica spent 90 minutes Friday night in a hyperbaric chamber which provides oxygen at three times normal pressure, forcing more oxygen into the bloodstream to speed the healing of damaged tissue.

Blake enjoys governorship

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, smiled as he scrutinized the gold nameplate inscribed with his name and his temporary title of Texas governor on Saturday.

"Doesn't look bad, does it?" he asked a crowd in the Governor's Reception Room as he prepared to sign proclamations, part of Governor for a Day ceremonies.

Blake, who seemed to thoroughly enjoy the pomp associated with his one-day term in the governor's office, said he was particularly pleased with his first proclamation, which announced a $200,000 grant to his hometown.

The money, distributed by the Texas Department of Community Affairs, will be used to help restore the Hotel Fredonia and construct a hotel-affiliated convention center in Nacogdoches, Blake said.

"The city of Nacogdoches is very much involved with trying to revitalize the downtown area," he said. "We're talking about 90 jobs ... We're talking about a $7 million project for the city of Nacogdoches."

The grant will be used to help match federal funds, Blake said.

Blake, president pro tempore of the Senate, was sworn in as governor under a tradition in which the governor and lieutenant governor both plan to be absent from Texas on one day. The president pro tempore is next in line of authority.

Blake, who was elected to the Senate in 1978 and who first was elected to the House in 1972, has said he is not going to run again for the office.

Dallas visit by Thatcher is scheduled

DALLAS (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will stop in Dallas this weekend for a private visit with her son and daughter-in-law, officials said.

Mrs. Thatcher, accompanied by her husband, Denis, will make no public appearances when she comes to Texas to see her only son, Mark, and his wife, Diane, after a Commonwealth meeting in Vancouver, British Columbia, a spokesman at the British embassy in Washington said.

Terry Purks, the prime minister's deputy press secretary, said Mrs. Thatcher's schedule won't be released. He would not confirm that she would visit Dallas, but Francis Cornish of the British Embassy in Washington said she would stop in Dallas for a couple of days before returning to London aboard her Royal Air Force jet.

Security will be tight for the visit, expected to begin Sunday afternoon, with U.S. Secret Service agents joining British security officers in protecting the prime minister and her family.

Russian seeking asylum

DALLAS (AP) — Andrey Ustinov, a lead dancer for the Moscow Ballet is seeking political asylum in the United States, federal officials say.

His disappearance after the troupe's last of three performances in Dallas has prompted concern, said the ballet's artistic director.

"We don't know where he is. We are very worried about him," artistic director Vyacheslav Gordeyev said at a news conference in Portland, Ore., before the ballet's performance there Friday.

The Moscow Ballet, making its debut in the United States, is in the midst of a 21-city U.S. tour. The 33-member company was in Portland through Saturday night. The tour ends Nov. 28 in Trenton, N.J.

"I don't see any particular reason for him to take such a trip," Gordeyev said through a translator. "As far as this particular tour, he was dancing the principal roles."

The dancer is safe and seeking asylum in the United States, although his location is not being made public, federal officials say.

Ustinov was reported missing to Dallas police Thursday night after the last of three performances by the Moscow Ballet at Southern Methodist University.

Officials are seeking lion's owner

HOUSTON (AP) — The owner of a lion that attacked an 8-year-old last weekend is being sought by Houston police for questioning.

Gary Durkovic, 35, also is being sought by Hidalgo County officials about $500 in bad checks written in Edinburg in 1985.

Houston police juvenile Officer Don Swonke said Friday Durkovic disappeared shortly after he was released from custody after the attack last Saturday. Houston police did not know about the Hidalgo County warrant until after Durkovic was released, he said.

The lion owner, who last week led his chained pet through a flea market where it mauled Roxanne Hernandez, has not shown up at his Houston residence, the officer said. "We sure would like to find him," he said.

Swonke said they are interviewing people familiar with the animal to see if Durkovic acted recklessly in taking the animal into the shopping mall.

Opinion

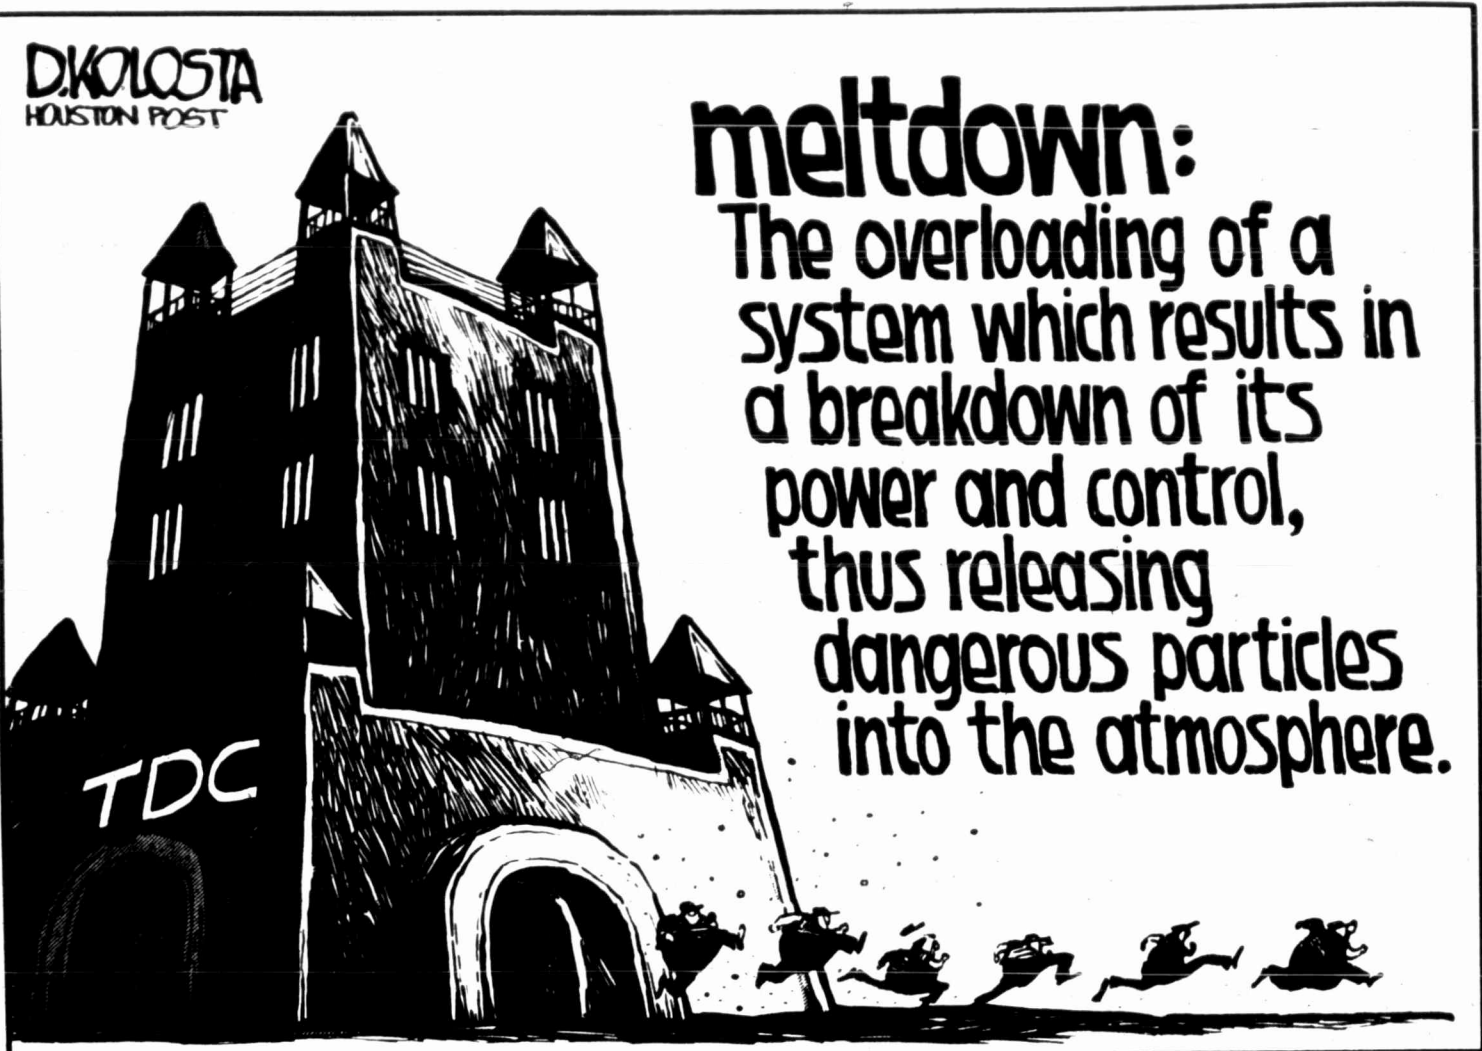

Vote to 'Build Texas'

Texas needs a boost to get its economy moving again. It is highly important, therefore, that voters support the "Build Texas" propositions on the Nov. 3 constitutional-amendment ballot.

- We strongly endorse:
- Proposition 4 is the key to the "Build Texas" program. It would allow the state to back private business ventures. Other states have initiated similar programs, and Texas must do the same to remain competitive.
 - Proposition 5 would allow the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation to enter into financial pacts with the Texas Turnpike Authority to build toll roads and bridges, and permit local governmental entities in the metro counties to do the same if their voters approve.
 - Proposition 6 would provide $125 million in bond money to be used for loans, loan guarantees and equity investments in firms which have new or improved products to market. It would fund a small-business "incubator" to provide managerial and technical assistance to new ventures. And it would finance agricultural-related enterprises, which would allow Texas firms to process more of the foodstuffs grown here.

- Proposition 7 would authorize $400 million in bonds to provide loans to smaller cities and towns to build airports, convention centers, jails and other public works.
- Proposition 8 would authorize $500 million in bonds to build or renovate prisons, youth correction and mental health-retardation institutions.
- Proposition 11 would provide for a "free port" exemption, which most other states have. It would allow exemptions from ad valorem taxation for parts, merchandise and ores that are temporarily stored in Texas for transport elsewhere.
- Proposition 19 would authorize $500 million in bonds to be used to buy land and build facilities for the superconducting supercollider. Texas has an excellent chance to get this high-tech facility if voters demonstrate support for it.
- Proposition 23 would allow the sale of an additional $400 million in water program bonds, which are needed because the state has almost used up its current authority.

Politicians muddling jobs, vows

By ROBERT WERNSMAN

Jobs, job security and being employed are all part of a serious business — our own well-being, for the most part, and that of those who depend upon us.

Criss-crossing our great land are hordes of people who are in an industry that's been breeding considerable job insecurity these days: The paid political staffer.

This is the staffer who works more out of allegiance to an ideal than to see that next paycheck. At the same time, the money plays its role too — don't doubt.

How do you suppose those folks are feeling when, every three to five days, it seems another would-be candidate inflicts a large wound on his political body and proceeds to bleed a messy death before our eyes?

For the political staffer, what happens in the weeks and months ahead can mean the inner satisfaction of seeing his or her candidate make it all the way to the top. Despite all of the tricks and foolishness of the political circus we've been watching, somebody besides Ronald Reagan is going to be calling the White House home in about 14 months.

But for the hardy souls who signed on with Gary Hart, Joe Biden and Pat

Robertson, the whole situation must resemble a bad memory of a good dream gone sour.

I am sure that before they signed on they looked, examined and then made what they considered an educated move to support a candidate meeting their ideals.

So much for ideals. What's left of the candidacies of both Hart and Biden can be placed in an urn and dumped over the Pacific Ocean.

Robertson's destiny is yet to be determined — while the role played by a man on the staff of Michael S. Dukakis in pulling the plug on Biden's boat has gotten him into hot water.

It seems to me, with all that's gone on and the way it's transpired, being on a political payroll now has to be a time for Tums and the need for a quality massage at the base of your neck.

Jesse Jackson survived scrutiny during 1984, but his candidacy is taking on more serious tones and the investigation of his background is sure to intensify in the weeks ahead. The same applies to each person willing to step forward, prepared to undergo the nasty ordeal.

Robertson's predicament has brought a smile to the faces of many who smugly like to believe no one has ever gone through life unsmudged. Perhaps this is so. I like to believe otherwise.

The real question is whether that person has stepped forward or is willing to do so.

For my two cents worth, it seems that Pat Robertson has done something far more serious than pontificate about morality after conceiving a child outside of the vows of matrimony.

What he's really done is put some of my friends in a fine spot, having to do with their anniversary and celebrations thereof.

It seems that on the same day for more than 10 years they have been celebrating their wedding vows, spoken before family and friends.

Now, they have taken to applying to their lives what they call the Robertson Theory of Matrimonial Sanctions.

Which makes them unsure as to what they should do.

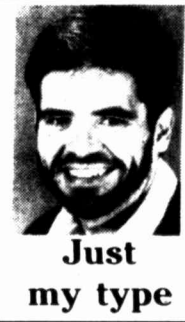

With the anniversary date rolling closer, they are perplexed — should they accept good wishes and presents from their family, or should they tell the truth: They are not really married.

By Robertson's way of thinking, I guess, they really aren't married — since they haven't conceived a child. A childless couple is not so unusual these days. But where does that leave them?

Since Robertson and his wife considered themselves married upon conception of a child, my friends now fear they live together without being official bound.

Are they or aren't they?

Perhaps Pat Robertson can provide a ruling on this one.

Driver dislikes local police patrol tactics

To the editor:

The police gestapo continues in Kentwood.

With between two and three patrol cars hovering, motorists are now on the lookout for speed-traps and are distracted from watching for children crossing the streets. Any such upset condition is like an accident waiting to happen.

So, children beware, you are in much more danger than when school first started.

Why do merchants weep? It is estimated that by now, somewhere between $2,000 and $5,000 in speeding violation fines has been taken from the Kentwood residents, meaning $2,000 to $5,000 they no longer have to spend in our city.

This, of course, is a wonderful way to operate when times are tough. Remember, the police are only doing as directed. It is our "intelligent" city government that calls the shots.

Why this massive gestapo raid in Kentwood? From people like myself who travel 25th and Birdwell every morning, noon and afternoon, we have seen no accidents for a long time. If, at prime times like these we have so many extra patrol cars and men, it is very easy to see how we can save our city a great deal of extra money.

To anyone with an ounce of brains, the people who deserve the citations are not those who exceed 30 mph on 25th, but those who zoned it for 30 mph instead of 40 or 50 mph. Those who "get things done," don't drive 30 mph on a street like this.

On the other hand, if all you have to do each day is pick up your welfare check, then 30 mph would seem right!

Praise for Marquez, criticism for officer

To the editor:

How often so many people do thankless jobs on a daily basis and their praises are never mentioned.

I take this opportunity to say how very proud I am, and our family is, of Raul Marquez. As president of our local LULAC organization, he is able to provide leadership and instill community pride in all the members who are presently active and working together to raise their funds for yet another scholarship year for students of BSHS and Howard College.

Like I said — it's a thankless job. There is no pay. No pat on the back. No "thank you" from the students if they don't apply themselves and make their scholarship worth something in their education ladder.

However, I certainly would expect even just a little bit of respect. I don't know any names (and really don't care to), but my little teenage daughter came home from the Oct. 9 homecoming parade told me: "Mom, as we passed by in the parade there were two police officers (one Anglo and one Hispanic) standing at the corner (of 5th and Scurry streets) and the Anglo policeman said, 'LULAC! you can kiss my ———.' Mom, what did we do to them?"

You know, Sir, I would really like to know. I have instructed my children (and will continue to do so) to have the utmost respect for the law enforcement and their representatives, but I really believe that this was in very poor taste.

Thank you for allowing us the freedom of speech to at least speak out in cases such as this one — kids are mixed up enough in our present time — no need adding to their confusion!

1987 county queen expresses her thanks

To the editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the people of Howard County, for all your donations, your help, and most of all for your support during this past year.

It has truly been an honor to be Miss Howard County and represent the people I've known all my life. The Miss Texas pageant was a wonderful and an educational experience.

I made new friends and realized how lucky I was to be representing the people who mean so much to me. Some of the contestants from the large metropolitan areas are not that fortunate.

Those girls miss out on what I considered one of the most rewarding parts of being a Miss Texas contestant — realizing the people back home knew me and cared about me.

I would like to take time now to thank some very special people.

First of all, a very special thanks to Cheri Sparks, the most positive, patient and kind person I know. Without Cheri, I wouldn't have been able to accomplish the goals that I have.

Thanks also to Doug Peercy because, without his talent and his great personality, the days of competition at the Miss Texas Contest could have been long and very trying.

Thirdly to Linda Conway for her work towards the interview competition.

I would also like to thank some friends whose support was tremendous during the pageant: Elaine Oliver, Richard and Linda Willadsen, Kim Beckam and Tim Haynes.

Most importantly, a special thanks to my parents and brother. Without their love and support, I wouldn't have been able to complete the tasks that go into being a Miss Texas contestant.

And finally to Daron Moore, thank you for always being there.

Thank you, Howard County, for allowing me, and helping me to have one of the most rewarding experiences of my life.

Minor race drawing unusual notice

A race for constable in the sixth precinct in Houston seldom merits attention in an election year, much less four months before the March Democratic primary.

But a contest is taking shape that — along with other developments in Hispanic politics — may help change the outcome of the 1988 presidential elections and the makeup of the Democratic ticket in 1990.

The two actors in the contest are small players on a much larger stage. John Castillo is the current chief deputy constable running to succeed the retiring incumbent; his opponent is Victor Trevino (no relation to this writer). Castillo is aligned with Ben Reyes, a 14-year veteran on the Houston City Council. Trevino is supported by state Rep. Al Luna. Therein lies the tale.

Luna and Reyes, formerly political allies, have become rivals. The battle they have pitched over the constable's seat will determine who emerges as the dominant political leader of Houston's exploding Hispanic population — and much more.

Not only are the two fighting over who becomes that city's No. 1 Hispanic political domo, they are fighting over the influence that such a population — 550,000 in the metro area — could have on state politics.

Houston today has almost as many Hispanics as San Antonio. So it is where Hispanics probably will make their next major political advances.

At the heart of the matter is a huge pool of new voters, who might alter the outcome of the March presidential primary and the outcome of contests between Democrats and Republicans in statewide elections. Because the Luna-Reyes struggle over the Trevino-Castillo fight is going to boost voter registration, more Hispanics will vote in the March presidential primary — and could return in November to vote in the general election.

Any new bloc of Hispanic votes could cut into the region's traditionally heavy Republican vote if Hispanic voting habits, which appear uniformly Democratic, remain unchanged.

But, the primary election in March.

The immediate beneficiary will be the presidential candidate backed by either Luna or Reyes. If the Democratic presidential primary features as many as seven potential nominees, the additional vote generated by the Trevino-Castillo battle over the constable's seat may prove crucial to one of the Democratic contestants.

The fighting now breaking out in Houston between Reyes and Luna resembles a tried and true feature of the best of U.S. political tradition. Luna, once Reyes' administrative assistant, represents the young lieutenant superceding the older captain.

More urbane and more in tune with the forces driving Texas into its future, Luna associates himself with the more aggressive and responsible sectors of Texas society that spend time reflecting on the future, which is not to say that Reyes does not have a reputable past.

But, his critics say, Reyes has allowed Hispanic political progress to atrophy in Houston. Houston's Hispanics, they say, need stronger, visionary political leadership. Those critics may be right, although Houston does have a large population of illegal aliens, which may help explain why Hispanics in Houston have not flexed their political muscle.

While the ultimate story of the impact of illegal aliens on Houston remains unknown, other numbers — the kind politicians running for president or statewide office understand — tell an interesting story. According to the Luna loyalists, the precinct in which the constable fight is being played out contains a pool of 60,000 voters, but turned out only 17,000 votes in the last election.

This kind of anemic voter turnout, Democratic Party statisticians say, cannot continue in Texas' largest city if Democrats are to keep up with spiraling Republican gains. Indeed, a more sophisticated voter turnout campaign targeting Hispanics could deliver as many as 50,000 new votes from Houston in March and November of 1988 and in 1990.

Should Trevino win, Luna's emergence as a Hispanic political power will become clear. A member of the house for seven years, he chairs the increasingly influential caucus of Mexican-American legislators in the Legislature and his name is being hoisted as a possible Hispanic on the 1990 statewide ticket.

Luna's stock climbed when San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros took himself out of the 1990 races. Without fanfare, it is now widely assumed the Democrats will field a major Hispanic statewide in 1990. With another legislative session to further prove himself, Luna may have emerged as the Democrats alternative candidate to Cisneros.

Today in history

Today is Sunday, Oct. 18, the 291st day of 1987. There are 74 days left in the year.

Thought for today: "People of privilege will always risk their complete destruction rather than surrender any material part of their advantage."

John Kenneth Galbraith, American economist.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 18, 1867, the United States took formal possession of Alaska from Russia. On this date:

In 1685, King Louis XIV of France revoked the Edict of Nantes, which had established the legal toleration of France's Protestant population, the Huguenots.

In 1767, the boundary between Maryland and Pennsylvania, the Mason-Dixon line, was agreed upon.

In 1873, representatives of Columbia, Princeton, Rutgers and Yale universities drew up the first rules for intercollegiate football.

In 1931, inventor Thomas Alva Edison died in West Orange, N.J., at age 84.

Plane hits apartments

BUENA PARK, Calif. — A single-engine plane slammed into an apartment building near Fullerton Municipal Airport Saturday, killing at least one person, authorities said.

Fire dispatcher Jim Hall said no other injuries were reported, and it was unclear if the one victim was in the plane or on the ground.

The Piper Cherokee crashed about 12:10 p.m., sparking a fire that burned three apartments, Hall said. Firefighters from five departments quickly brought the flames under control.

"I'm sure they evacuated the apartment (complex). I know I'd have been out the door," he said.

The plane had just taken off from the airport a few miles northeast of the apartment complex when it crashed, he said.

Infant receives heart

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — A baby born with a lethal heart defect was in critical but stable condition Saturday on his second day of life, a milestone doctors said he would not have reached except for a heart transplant hours after birth.

Surgeons, led by Dr. Leonard Bailey, labored 4½ hours Friday to perform the transplant, just three hours after Paul Hoic was delivered by Caesarean section. He was the youngest person ever to undergo an organ transfer.

Goetz sentence due

NEW YORK — Although subway gunman Bernhard Goetz could be sentenced Monday to up to seven years in prison for illegal possession of a gun, most observers — including both supporters and critics — do not expect him to serve a day behind bars.

Court statistics show that in cases like Goetz's, criminals go to jail in only four out of 10 cases. Observers say Goetz probably will be put on probation and possibly required to seek psychiatric care.

"Most people don't see him going to jail, and neither do I," said Thomas Reppetto, director of the Citizens Crime Commission. "Most people think the public doesn't want him in jail."

200 families evacuated

MORRISON, Mo. — A freight train carrying a highly toxic chemical derailed Friday and about 200 families were evacuated as a precaution after one car near the tanker caught fire, authorities said.

Residents within a two-mile radius of Morrison were told to leave when the fire started in a boxcar near a tank car loaded with sulfur trioxide, a highly toxic chemical used to make detergent, said Faye Hampton, a dispatcher with the Osage County Sheriff's Department.

"We're just getting a man suited up in protective clothing to walk down there and get a look at it," John Bromley, a Union Pacific Railroad spokesman in Omaha, Neb., said Friday night. "We don't think there's a big hazard in the area there."

Sri Lanka

Tamil snipers slow Indian advance

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil snipers fired from bunkers and treetop "tiger traps" as Indian soldiers pressed their advance on the rebel stronghold of Jaffna, an Indian spokeswoman said Saturday.

She said the Indian troops, who began a campaign Oct. 10 to oust the rebels from their stronghold in the northern city, had pushed forward despite heavy fighting.

But the spokeswoman, who under briefing rules cannot be identified, said her information was current only through daybreak Friday.

A senior Sri Lankan official said Saturday that the fighting had died down because of talks in India between Indian officials and representatives of the most powerful Tamil militia, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam.

The spokeswoman denied any negotiations were underway.

She said 101 Indian soldiers, including 12 officers, had been killed since the offensive began. About 520 Tamil rebels and sympathizers have been killed during the same period, according to India's count.

The reports cannot be verified. India, which controls the roads leading into Jaffna, has refused to let journalists visit the area. Jaffna is 186 miles north of Colombo.

An estimated 16,000 Indian soldiers are now in Sri Lanka, more than five times the number first sent to the island nation on July 30 to oversee a peace plan.

The Indian-backed accord was designed to end four years of guerrilla warfare by ethnic Tamils against Sri Lanka's Sinhalese ethnic majority.

Tamils make up about 18 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million people and claim they are discriminated against by the Sinhalese, who control most top political and military posts.

The Sinhalese, who comprise 75 percent of the population, are mostly Buddhist. The Tamils, like the majority of Indians, are mostly Hindu.

India was drawn into the ethnic warfare in Sri Lanka, an island nation off the south Indian coast, in part because of its own politically powerful Tamil minority.

By daybreak Friday, the Indian spokeswoman said, Indian forces had made "some progress" in their efforts to subdue the rebels.

"The fighting is going on at the municipal limits of Jaffna," she said.

At Kopai, four miles northeast of Jaffna, "there is heavy firing (by Tiger rebels) from built-up areas and from tree tops at the crossroad

A group of Tamil refugees including infants await repatriation Wednesday in a resettlement camp outside Madras. The Indian government has decided to repatriate more than 20,000 refugees who sought sanctuary in India from the civil war in Sri Lanka.

junction," the spokeswoman said. "They (the Tigers) have set up machangas — treetop platforms used in this part of the world for tiger hunts."

She said Indian forces also had encountered mortar pits, rocket-launching pits and bunkers used by the rebels. She said the bunkers were about 40 feet long and were fortified with bricks and sandbags.

The Tigers are armed primarily with Soviet-designed AK-47 semi-automatic rifles, American-made M-16 rifles, rocket-propelled grenades and homemade mortars, according to Jaffna residents who fled the city. The rebels also have used homemade landmines.

The Indian spokeswoman said two Indian soldiers were killed and six were injured Thursday when Tamil rebels detonated landmines north of Jaffna and blew two Indian vehicles off the road.

Five Indian soldiers were killed while clearing boobytraps at junctions east of Jaffna, the Indian spokeswoman said. She did not say when that happened. She said Indian forces found nearly 400 pounds of explosives left by the rebels at Navatkuli, four miles east of Jaffna.

The spokeswoman said one Tiger committed suicide by swallowing cyanide after he was captured by Indian forces near Batticaloa, another rebel stronghold, 143 miles northeast of Colombo.

She said the Tamil rebel was captured immediately after a landmine killed 20 Indian soldiers Thursday near Batticaloa.

Experts study damage

MANAMA, Bahrain — U.S. and Kuwaiti explosives experts poked through wreckage on a U.S.-flagged tanker Saturday and tried to determine what weapon Iran fired in its boldest strike against the U.S. presence in the Persian Gulf.

The attack Friday blinded the American captain and one crewman and injured 16 others, medical sources in Kuwait said.

In Washington, President Reagan said threats to the U.S. Navy and the shipping it protects in the gulf would be "dealt with appropriately," but did not reveal any specific measures.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz, visiting Jerusalem, said the United States has notified Iran it risks U.S. military retaliation by testing the American "red line" of American interest in the Persian Gulf. He did not say where the United States draws that line or whether it would strike back.

Nessie hunt continues

DRUMNADROCHIT, Scotland — What's 1,400 years old, has outwitted dozens of scientists, generated hundreds of millions of dollars — and may not even exist?

It's the Loch Ness Monster, a legend that may be a tiny step closer to being cracked but, like the Abominable Snowman and Big Foot, still continues to capture the world's imagination.

Nessie managed to preserve her reputation as the most elusive creature of the deep last weekend with three minuscule sonar beeps, although she kept her true identity secret.

Election plans marred

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Preparations for Haiti's first free elections in at least 30 years are taking place against a backdrop of violence that many Haitians say is organized by followers of ousted dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier.

The assassination, allegedly by police, of presidential candidate Yves Volot on Tuesday followed the deportation of opposition leader Daniel Narcisse eight days ago and the slaying of political leader Louis Eugene Attise in August.

The armed forces and their Duvalier-appointed officers are widely blamed for the violence, and the provisional junta of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy is blamed for not putting a stop to it.

Partners blast Britain

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — The 48-nation Commonwealth is hanging together despite its latest summit, where nations ranging from Australia to Zimbabwe blasted Britain for its policy on South Africa.

"I don't defend the Commonwealth on grounds of logic," its secretary-general, Guyanan Sir Shridath Ramphal, said in an interview before the summit ended Saturday. "Each Commonwealth meeting is a challenge to find the ways to act together."

Year-round school schedule praised, opposed

Public school officials in many cities praise the year-round schedule adopted by Los Angeles, but parents' opposition and lack of incentive to change have kept all but a few systems on the traditional nine-month plan.

"Theoretically it makes all the sense in the world," said Wayne Teague, Alabama Superintendent of Education. "I've supported it for years, but the logistics would work havoc with a family."

The Los Angeles Board of Education voted Monday to put the nation's second-largest district on a year-round schedule beginning in July 1989 in an effort to ease overcrowding without having to build new schools.

Under the plan, students in the Los Angeles Unified School District would likely attend classes for two months, then have 20 days off before returning for another two-month segment.

"I don't see that they have any choice," California state schools Superintendent Bill Honig said. "Otherwise they will have classes with 40 to 45 students and the quality of education will suffer."

Jessica's rescue

Donations flow in for medical help

MIDLAND (AP) — A medical fund set up to help defray medical costs for a toddler trapped in an abandoned well generated hundreds of calls and thousands of dollars Friday, officials said.

The fund to assist 18-month-old Jessica McClure was organized by KMID-TV and Texas Commerce Bank in Midland.

KMID spokesman Rick Wood said calls were coming from around the world to help the girl, who fell into the dry well Wednesday morning.

"We've got them (calls) as far away as Connecticut, Minnesota, Detroit, Australia and Italy," said Wood.

"Right now, it is for Jessica's medical expenses. Depending on what it's going to take, afterwards we're not positive what it will be used for if there's any surplus. But it's all designated for Jessica's welfare," Wood said.

Wood had no specific total Friday afternoon, but said at least several thousand dollars had been generated since the fund was established Thursday.

Callers can contact KMID at 915-563-2222. Pledges also can be mailed to Texas Commerce Bank, P.O. Box 3905, Midland, Texas, 79701.

Oil service workers and bystanders examine the 25-foot deep hole used to rescue 18-month-old Jessica McClure Friday night in Midland, as the hole is plugged with concrete Saturday.

40-ton rig plucks 20-pound target

MIDLAND (AP) — When a 79,000-pound oilfield rig plucked a 20-pound girl from beneath the earth Friday night, a cheer rose from the workers and spectators who had waited 58 hours to glimpse a toddler most of them had never seen before.

"I saw her face. It felt real good. We got her out," said Ribble Boler, an 18-year-old driller who, like his father and uncle, had taken turns in the rescue pit that eventually was 18-month-old Jessica McClure's tunnel to freedom.

Workers immediately placed a sign proclaiming

"Thank you America!" on the "rat holer" rig used to smash rock, dig a rescue hole and finally used to delicately hoist Jessica to the surface.

"I thought of my son, who is going to be 2 in two weeks," said Bob Hawk, a Midland contractor who was looking down the hole as Jessica came up. "I'm going to go and call him right now."

Hawk said the next thing he saw that made him happy was the plate that would be used to seal the abandoned water well that had held the little girl since Wednesday morning.

Economic troubles laid aside during girl's dramatic rescue

MIDLAND (AP) — A thundering chorus of hurrahs, hoots and horns greeted the rescue of Jessica McClure, the little girl trapped in an abandoned well who stole the heart of a depression-weary West Texas city.

The residents had laid their economic problems aside for more than two days as they rallied behind the efforts to free the toddler from her darkened perch 22 feet below the surface.

Curious well-wishers and would-be helpers lined up behind chain-link fences for a third day Friday, despite requests from Midland police that they stay away.

Police said crowds were overwhelming the site, and there had been reports nearby of burglaries and vandalism. But the pleas to stay clear were useless.

Children skipped classes and adults left work. Hundreds of people gathered around the well site and prayed while thousands more around the globe watched, listened, read and talked about what had become a preoccupation in the Permian Basin.

In supermarkets, roadside stands and bars, people greeted one another Friday with a question: "Is the girl okay?" Most of the day the question was followed by shrugging shoulders and mild assurances.

Kim Cronk, a Department of Human Services employee, watched the Friday night rescue on a tiny television set. "I've got co-workers who can't even work because of this — the emotional trauma of relating to it," he said.

"Everybody's concerned," said Phillip Marquez, owner of Midland Flower Shop. "That's all that customers talk about. We're concerned about the poor little thing — in fact, when she gets into the hospital we'll send her some flowers."

Mayor Carroll Thomas said he was impressed with the way his community responded to the rescue effort to free Jessica, who was hoisted out of the pit after her 58-hour ordeal.

Revelry spread throughout the city Friday night and into the morning as the town celebrated its winning cause.

Rescue emotional for workers

MIDLAND (AP) — Paramedic Steven Forbes was thrilled when he wrapped his arms around 18-month-old Jessica McClure for the short haul to safety.

But after spending 58 hours jammed in an abandoned well shaft, Jessica, who had pulled some of her hair out during the ordeal, was wary of her rescuers.

"She looked at me when we got her and kept saying, 'No,'" said Forbes.

"She seemed shocked," added paramedic Steve Rhodes. "As (paramedic) Robert (O'Donnell) pulled her through the hole, she was moaning. At one point she yelled at Robert, 'No!'"

Forbes said Jessica seemed to be alert and responsive when he reached her, despite her imprisonment 22 feet underground.

Jessica, barefoot, dirty and strapped to a board, blinked in the glare of TV lights after she was pulled to the surface from the well in her aunt's backyard.

She was whisked to a hospital, where she was listed in stable condition Saturday as doctors operated on her right foot, which had been jammed at an awkward angle during her captivity.

When Jessica was finally freed Friday evening, Red Cross worker Charles Welch cried.

"It's just something that words can't say," he said.

Hours of tedious, gritty labor chipping through solid rock were forgotten as Jessica, held by Forbes, was brought to the surface.

Steve Allcorn, one of the drillers who had been struggling to reach Jessica, said he was overjoyed at sight of the rescue.

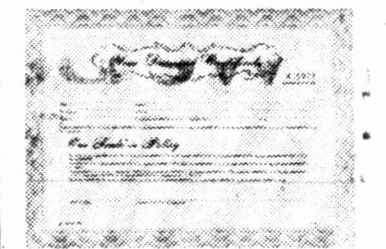

"I watched them pull her up and I got choked up — it was hard to control," he said.

"She was smiling pretty. Her blue eyes wide awake," said rescue worker Bob Hawk, who had been close to the exit shaft since Thursday.

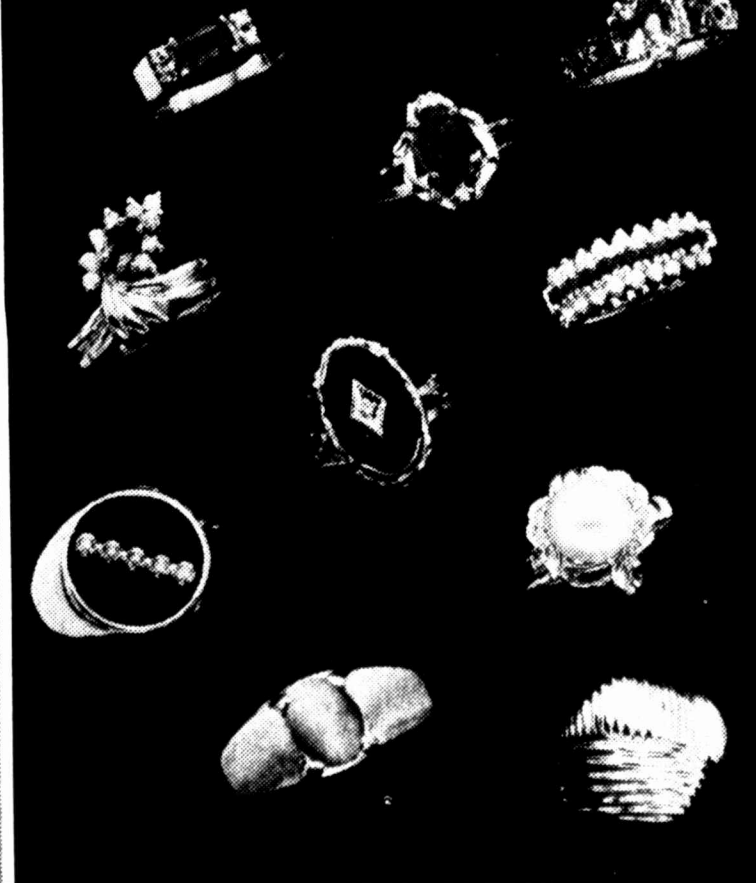

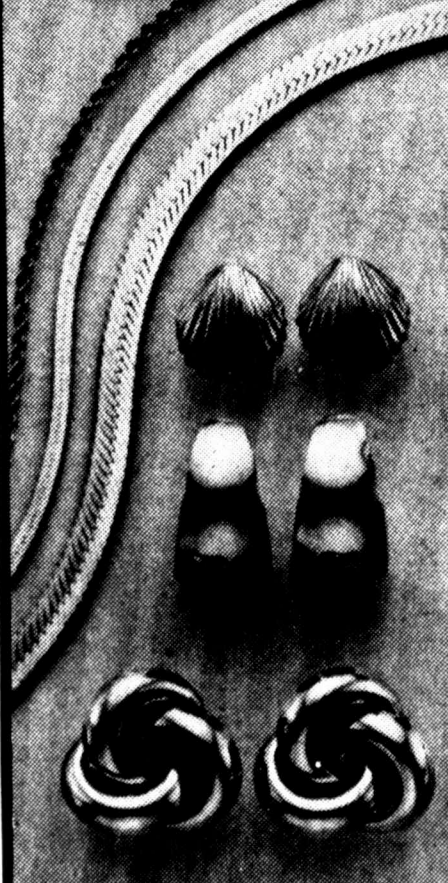

"It's hard to say how I felt. Just happiness. I thought of my son, whose going to be 2."

Young Wall Streeters treated to a new experience

NEW YORK (AP) — The generation of Wall Streeters raised on the great bull market of the 1980s has been subjected to a new experience the past several weeks.

The steady procession of record highs that had become so familiar in the stock market over the past few years has suddenly given way to a barrage of dramatic declines.

While the U.S. economy continues to register slow but steady growth, the value of stocks traded in this country has been driven down by about $486 billion in less than two months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, the best known measure of market trends, has suffered its three biggest point declines ever in just the past two weeks. The most recent, and the largest, came Friday when it plunged 108.36 points to 2,246.73.

The panicky moments in the financial area have naturally touched off concerns elsewhere. The market, after all, is an important cog in the machinery of the national economy, and by reputation a pretty good forecaster of what is ahead for trends in employment, consumer spending and the overall level of prosperity.

Most analysts agree that those concerns may be justified, but they add that the market's decline must be evaluated against its past ups and downs.

Never before has the Dow Jones industrial average dropped nearly 400 points in a two-week period. But never before this year has it had so much room to fall.

Or, for another perspective, consider an index of more than 5,000 stocks calculated by Wilshire Associates of Santa Monica, Calif.

In spite of the drop of about $486 billion in market value since late August, it remains as of Friday's close of trading at $2.81 trillion, up from just a shade over $1 trillion when the bull market began in the summer of 1982.

And while the fears it provoked were very real, Friday's drop paled beside past market declines in percentage terms. At 4.6 percent, according to Dow Jones & Co., it ranked 76th among the percentage losses recorded over the past 90 years.

By contrast, the average fell 12.8 percent on Oct. 28, 1929, the legendary Black Monday, and 11.7 percent the next day.

So while analysts were acknowledging that the market has experienced a crash of sorts lately, it has a ways to go to qualify as a Crash. In the view of some of the Street's most respected analysts and strategists, it is even too soon to write off the bull market.

Until recently, they pointed out, the market had gone more than three years without a significant setback—a span unprecedented in the post-World War II period.

By traditional measures such as corporate earnings or dividends, the market at its summer highs was widely considered to have lost touch with reality, and a "correction"—Wall Street's term for a temporary pullback—was said to be overdue.

The virulent decline since may not have been what the predictors of a correction had in mind. But it has served many of the purposes that these periods of retrenchment are supposed to accomplish, ridding the market of excess exuberance and complacency.

Thus people like Robert Farrell of Merrill Lynch and Greg Smith of Prudential-Bache Securities, both recently anointed "All America" analysts by the financial magazine Institutional Investor, went on record with optimistic market forecasts late in the week.

It is notoriously difficult to distinguish, without the benefit of hindsight, a market correction from the beginnings of a more protracted and painful bear market.

It is also notoriously difficult to figure out in advance how far and how long a correction must go before it accomplishes its mission.

Cancerous lesion prompts surgery for Nancy Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors removed Nancy Reagan's left breast Saturday after laboratory tests revealed a quarter-inch cancerous lesion, and said the first lady was "strong and stable" following the operation.

"Take good care of her," President Reagan advised the team of doctors at Bethesda Naval Center Hospital after they informed him around 9 a.m. that the tumor, a common form of breast cancer, was malignant.

Later, in the recovery room, Reagan was quoted as telling his wife, "Honey, I know you don't feel like dancing, let's hold hands."

Mrs. Reagan underwent a modified radical mastectomy immediately after the cancer was confirmed by biopsy. The 66-year-old first lady had chosen that procedure, which involves the removal of the entire breast and some lymph nodes, in the event a malignancy was found.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the malignancy, which measured about 7 millimeters, was a "non-invasive intraductal adenocarcinoma." He said it was a common form of breast cancer and had not spread through the tissues.

The lesion was found inside one of the ducts that carry milk from the glands in the breast to the nipple.

The spokesman said the surgery lasted 50 minutes and was "without complications."

He said there was no plan for reconstructive surgery or chemotherapy or radiation treatments.

Doctors told Mrs. Reagan they had removed her breast, but she was still groggy from the anesthetic, said Elaine Crispin, the first lady's press secretary.

"They won't know until she is a little more alert how much of it registered," Mrs. Crispin said.

The White House declined comment on Mrs. Reagan's prognosis, but doctors not associated with the case said the small size of the lesion and the fact that it had not spread gives her an excellent chance for complete recovery.

"By and large, she has an excellent prognosis," said Dr. Maria D. Allo, surgeon and associate professor of oncology at Johns Hopkins University Medical Institution in Baltimore.

Parents of abducted youths seeking help

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Kristine Uhlman last visited her two abducted children more than a year ago in Saudi Arabia, they couldn't remember her, even denied they had blue eyes and proclaimed: "We are Arabs."

Uhlman, a geologist now living in Chicago, said Friday that she has been struggling against uphill odds to get her children back since they were taken by their Saudi father in Denver in 1981.

She was among seven parents visiting the State Department with Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., to plead for more attention to the problem faced by more than 2,000 parents who find that their custody rights under U.S. law are meaningless when their children are abducted to a foreign country by a former spouse.

"The irony of this is that Islamic law says a mother and her children cannot be separated from each other up to the age of 7," said Uhlman, whose daughter and son, Maisoon and Hani Ukayli, were 4 and 2 when they were abducted.

While the State Department has records on 2,543 such cases involving more than 100 countries, it has so far done little more to aid the U.S. parents than refer them to lawyers to help them find their way through foreign legal systems, which often is a dead end, Dixon said.

"I know the difference between trying and not trying, and State is not trying," he told a news conference.

"They don't want to be involved in controversies with other countries. They want to go along and get along, talk about the big dialogue, the big issues," Dixon said.

"I understand that there are bigger problems at the department than these 2,500 cases. But for (the parents), it's the biggest problem in the world."

The department's assistant secretary for consular affairs, Joan M. Clark, reported a new desk will be created at the agency to handle inquiries on the abduction cases, Dixon said, welcoming the step.

But he said the department needs to take a more vigorous approach, "jawboning" foreign officials and asserting the American parents' rights until results are obtained.

"Jawboning does work," said Dixon. "They're going to listen to us because of the importance to them of the U.S. relationship."

Patricia Roush of Riverside, Ill., said creation of a desk at the State Department and the Senate's adoption last week of an amendment making the abductions a felony are hopeful signs.

"We have educated the State Department as to what is their responsibility," said Roush, whose daughters, 8-year-old Alia and 5-year-old Aisha, were taken to Saudi Arabia by her former husband despite her legal custody of the girls.

The largest number of cases on record at the State Department, 267, involve West Germany. Another 186 involve children taken to Mexico, 137 to Great Britain and 120 to Italy, the statistics show.

Dixon said the number of cases has grown by 84 percent since 1983, while only 4 percent of the cases were resolved in the past year.

Dixon estimated most cases could be resolved through diplomatic pressure, extradition treaties or agreements under the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Parental Child Abduction.

"These children are American hostages," he said. "We must do everything possible to ensure they are returned home to their parents here in the United States."

Steers in Christmas spirit

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

FORT STOCKTON — Christmas season — and the Big Spring Steers' role as the generous Santa Claus — continued Friday night, and the Fort Stockton Panthers were happy about it.

The Panthers took advantage of seven Big Spring turnovers and turned a district game into a 36-6 rout over the Steers.

Just like in the previous two games, the Steers failed to take care of the football, especially on running plays. Big Spring was in its usual "giving mood," fumbling — and losing the ball — six times. That makes 25 fumbles the Steers have lost in the last three games, and 40 for the season.

"The turnovers and kicking game mistakes hurt us," said a soft-spoken Steers coach Quinn Eudy after the game. "We fumbled a lot of good pitches. Basically, if we hold onto the ball and don't fumble, it's a good game."

And it probably would have been a good game instead of a rout. Looking at the stats, Big Spring held a 199-196 advantage in total yards. But Fort Stockton only fumbled once, while Big Spring had an interception to go along with its six bobbles.

"We were depending on that," a happy Fort Stockton coach Ken Herring said afterwards in a noisy locker room. "We heard they had problems carrying the football. We had the problem last week (in a 20-6 loss to Sweetwater). I'm real pleased we only had one fumble tonight."

The Steers' slippery fingers spoiled quarterback Craig Knocke's return to the starting lineup. Knocke got the nod after Shawn Shellman had surgery on his knee Thursday. Shellman injured the knee in last week's win over Lamesa.

Knocke ran the Veer offense well. On Big Spring's first two possessions he had the Steers moving on touchdown drives — but two fumbles wiped them out.

The Steers managed to stifle the Panthers' offense after the first two fumbles, but the worst was yet to come. The Steers then proceeded to fumble on their next three possessions, and the Panthers converted them into three second-quarter TDs, taking a 20-0 halftime lead.

Also in the first half, the Steers had a bad snap from center and Johnny Landers was tackled without getting a chance to punt.

Fort Stockton's first TD came about when a short Fort Stockton punt bounced back and struck a Steer player going down to block. The Panthers recovered at their own 37. One play later Big Spring was whistled for a late-hit penalty and Fort Stockton had a first down at the Big Spring 43.

Nine plays later David Alvarado scored the game's first TD with 8:52 left in the first half. Ramon Valeriano's extra point gave the Panthers a 7-0 lead.

The Steers kept giving, when Chris Cole and Dennis Hartfield both fumbled good pitches from Knocke. Fort Stockton converted them into TD's, driving 14 and 25 yards for the score.

Because of the fumbles, Big Spring had very few offensive chances, running off 21 first half plays, compared to 34 for the Panthers. Big Spring had only two first downs and 59 yards total offense at the half.

The Steers' troubles continued in the second half. They fumbled once, suffered a pass interception, had a punt blocked for a safety, allowed a 62-yard kickoff return and a 42-yard TD off a fake punt.

Big Spring's only scoring drive came in the fourth quarter. It took a fake punt of the part of the Steers to keep the drive going. On the fake punt, Knocke, the up back, took the snap from center and ran it four yards for the first down.

Bruce Jones capped off the 59-yard drive when he scored for the Steers with 10:30 left in the game from 11 yards out. But the PAT snap was bobbled and holder Tony Lewis' pass to Jones was broken up.

However, the lead had narrowed to 20-6, and with Big Spring finally breaking the scoring ice, there still seemed to be hope for the Steers.

But on the ensuing kickoff, Alvarado found a wedge up the middle, sprinted to the sidelines and ran 62 yards to the Big Spring 20 yard line. He might have gone all the way, had Danny Williams not run him down.

Five plays later Mike Nix scored from the three, and for all practical purposes the game was over.

The Panthers scored again on a pass from a fake punt and added the final two points when Jonathan Card blocked Landers' punt, which rolled out of the end zone for a safety.

Owls tan Buffaloes' hides

It looked as though the Forsan Buffaloes fielded two different teams against Reagan County.

In the first half they were as cool as the north wind that stiffened the flags at Forsan stadium.

In the second half they came alive with a display of character that warmed the heart of head coach Jan East.

The Buffaloes battled back from a lopsided 35-0 halftime deficit and played the visiting Owls on even terms during the remainder of the game.

"We went out in the second half and shut them down... our kids showed a lot of character by coming back against a good football team like they did," East said.

Most observers expected the Buffalo-Owl matchup to be closer than the 35-8 final score.

Both teams went into the game undefeated in District 6-2A and with one blimish on their overall season win-loss record.

However, Reagan County seemed intent on avenging last year's 13-13 tie with the Buffaloes.

The Owls struck early and hard on 23-yard and 68-yard touchdown runs by James West, making the score 14-0 at the end of the first quarter.

West added another TD on an eight-yard run with 8:13 remaining until half, and Owl kicker Roland Saldibar added the extra point to extend the Reagan County lead to 21-0.

Then Reagan County quarterback Scott Lipsey connected with split end Danny Bingham on a pair of scoring passes that looked as though they were traced atop one another on the same chalk board.

Lipsey used the stiff wind behind his back to rifle a 41-yard strike to Bingham who slipped down the far sideline behind the Buffalo defense. Bingham caught the ball over his shoulder with 6:53 remaining in the half and Saldibar added the extra point kick to make the score 28-0.

Lipsey hit Bingham again on a 49-yard carbon copy of the first scoring pass with 42 seconds left in the second quarter. Again, Saldibar booted the conversion kick to send the Owls to the locker room with a 35-0 lead.

Forsan pride came to the forefront following intermission.

The Buffaloes held the Owls to a standoff in the third period before adding a score of their own late in the final quarter.

The Reagan scoring drive was set up when Brant Nichols picked off a Reagan County pass, giving the Buffaloes possession at the Owl 36 with 7:00 remaining in the game.

Two plays later, the Buffaloes found themselves with a first down at the Owl 16 when Forsan receiver Stephen East was interfered with by a Reagan County defender.

Nichols scored on a scrambling 11-yard run two plays later.

The Buffalo quarterback rolled to the left, under pressure from Owl defenders, then cut back to the near side of the field, evaded two Reagan County tacklers and dashed into the end zone.

A pass from Nichols to Ruben Holguin for the two-point conversion made the score 35-8 with 5:14 remaining in the game.

East cited the play of senior Forsan fullback John Roman and senior defensive tackle Mike Averette.

"Although John was playing hurt with a shoulder injury, he had a good night running the ball," the coach said.

"Mike also had a good second half defensively," he said.

Roman was the leading Forsan rusher with 88 yards on 22 carries.

The loss drops Forsan's win-loss record to 5-2 for the season and 1-1 in district play.

The loss was also the first suffered by the Buffaloes in Forsan stadium since they lost to Roscoe in 1983, and was the Buffaloes' first district loss in three years, according to East.

"This game was a big game. There is no doubt about it," East said about the Buffaloes' setback to the Owls.

However, East believes his team can rebound to capture second place in the District 6-2A race.

"We've got to win the next three games. Tonight's game was big, but the next three will be bigger," he said.

Forsan will travel to Stanton next Friday in another district contest.

Champion retains crown

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mike Tyson knocked down Tyrrell Biggs twice in the seventh round and stopped him at 2:59 to retain his undisputed heavyweight championship Friday night at the Atlantic City Convention Center.

Iron Mike was in control from the opening bell and it seemed just a matter of time before he would end it.

That time came when he dropped the challenger twice late in the seventh.

Tyson, who had hurt Biggs with hooks and body shots through the first six rounds, caught him with a left hook that dumped him on the seat of his pants. Biggs' upper body went through the ropes but he quickly got into a sitting position.

The 1984 Olympic super-heavyweight champion struggled up at the count of nine, blood streaming from a cut over his left eye.

Tyson charged to the attack and landed a hard right. He then ripped a left hook that sent Biggs backward onto his back in his corner.

Sands smothers Cougars, 55-22

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
Staff Writer

PATRICIA - The Sands Mustangs with Jay Fryar exploded for six first-half touchdowns to defeat the Klondike Cougars in a key district 4-A Six-Man West Zone battle Friday night.

The Mustangs — raising their district record to 4-0 — came through with more than 300 yards rushing and 150 yards passing to clinch a 55-22 victory over their arch-rival Cougars.

Fryar led the Mustangs with 216 yards rushing on 18 carries. He also passed for another 110 yards on six attempts.

The Cougars were never a threat to the Mustangs.

Sands allowed Klondike only one first down the entire first-half, frustrating and confusing the Cougars to take a commanding 43-0 lead at halftime.

With :24 seconds to go in the half, Chad Nichols attempted to tackle quarterback Kirk Tidwell and landed on his right knee. Nichols was helped off the field and taken to Midland Memorial Hospital for observation.

After Nichols injury, Coach Sid McCown turned to a conservative game by pulling his first string. Klondike quickly responded by stripping the pigskin from John Young of the Mustangs.

Ron Davis of the Cougars galloped for 50 yards and scored to give the home team its first TD of the night.

The touchdown run was set up with the help of a timely penalty against the Mustangs for offsides. The Cougars then connected on a pass from Tidwell to Corbett Foster to move Klondike within striking distance.

Sands slammed the door on the Cougars when Sam Rodriguez ran in from the two yard line to give the visitors a 43-16 lead going into the fourth quarter.

The final ten-minutes were ended with both teams trading scores.

Sands is now 6-1 overall and 4-0 in district play. Klondike falls to 3-4 overall. The Cougars are 1-2 in district 4-A West Zone play.

Bearkats lose close encounter to Bronte

BRONTE — A questionable call by the officials resulted in a 20-14 victory for the Bronte Longhorns over the Garden City Bearkats in District 6-A football.

With Garden City leading 14-12 with 17 seconds left, Bronte quarterback Stephen Lee fired a 25-yard pass to tight end John Morrow. It appeared the ball went through Morrow's hands. One official ruled it an incomplete pass, and another ruled it a completed pass and touchdown, thus giving Bronte the winning score with 10 seconds left.

The contest was an offensive one for both teams. Both showed good balance as Garden City rushed for almost 200 and passed for 166 more. Bronte rushed for 184 yards and passed for 118 more.

Bronte scored in the first quarter on a two-yard run by Shannon Hoffman. The Longhorns took a 12-0 halftime lead when Lee passed 38 yards to Adam Minjarez.

Garden City scored with one minute left in the third quarter. Quarterback Codie Scott capped off a 75-yard drive with a one-yard TD score. He also kicked the PAT.

This set the stage for the controversial call on Bronte's TD pass.

Kenyon led the Bearkats in rushing, gaining 114 yards in 23 carries. Jodie Scott caught five passes from his twin brother Codie, totalling 123 yards. Codie Scott completed 10 of 22 passes for 166 yards. He also intercepted a pass.

Garden City falls to 2-5 overall and 1-4 in district play. Bronte is now 4-3 overall and 2-3 in league play.

Lady Steers drop close match to Fort Stockton

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Time is running out for the Big Spring Lady Steers.

Just like they have so many times this season, the Lady Steers faltered in the third game, dropping a 9-15, 15-12, 10-15 volleyball match decision to the Fort Stockton Prowlers Saturday afternoon in Steer Gym.

It was the 12th consecutive district loss for the Lady Steers. They face the infamous distinction of going through the season without a league volleyball win. The Lady Steers have four games remaining in the season.

Just like they did in Tuesday's loss to Snyder, Big Spring held a lead in the third game, and watched it fade down the stretch.

After winning the second game 15-12, to force the "rubber match", the Lady Steers played exceptionally well at the start of the third game.

Big Spring fell behind 3-1, but rallied when Lisa Alvarez served a point, Melanie Payne served three points and Michelle LeGrand served two more tallies, taking a 7-4 lead.

But the Prowlers, now 8-5 in district play, quickly tied the game at 8-8. Then behind the spiking of Teri Webber and Kim Payne, outscored Big Spring 7-2 to take their 12th win of the season in 21 attempts.

Webber, Payne and Nelda Sanchez were the main offensive weapons for the Prowlers throughout the match. The trio combined to kill 31 of 65 spike attempts against a very aggressive Big Spring defense. Webber, who had three kills and a block down the stretch in the third game, finished the match with 10 of 17 kills. Sanchez was 11 of 22 and Payne was 10 of 26.

The spikes didn't come easy for the Prowlers. Lady Steers' LeGrand, Cary Brooks, Melissa Martinez and Dorothy Viasana made sure of that.

LeGrand and Brooks played strong defensive games at the net, combining for 18 blocks.

Brooks had a game-high 10 blocks. Martinez and sophomore Viasana were all over the court making great saves.

"Our downfall wasn't emotional or anything," said Lady Steers head coach Elaine Stone, concerning her team faltering down the stretch. "The mental errors were the only things that hurt us. Like when we should have been going for the good hits, the girls were going for the kills."

"Our defense was good. Our blocking was tremendous. Michelle (LeGrand) and Cary (Brooks) did excellent jobs. Also Dorothy Viasana played a good game. She moved up from the junior varsity and is really getting her confidence now," said Stone.

Fort Stockton won the first game behind the strength of Sanchez's net play. The 5-10 sophomore killed seven of nine attempts in Fort Stockton's 15-9 win.

But in the second game the Big Spring defense was at its best, as Sanchez and Co. converted only five of 12 kills in the game.

Brooks led the way with five blocks and LeGrand downed three of four kill attempts in the 15-12 Big Spring win.

LeGrand and Brooks were both offensive forces throughout the match as the Lady Steers downed 29 of 64 kill attempts for 45 percent. Meanwhile the Prowlers were 38 of 90 kills for 42 percent.

Brooks killed nine of 19 attempts while LeGrand was a hot 12 of 18. Martinez and Viasana got three kills each.

The loss leaves the Lady Steers with a 4-17 record.

JV'S LOSE ALSO

In junior varsity action, Fort Stockton beat Big Spring 15-7, 13-15, 6-15.

The Lady Steers freshmen will play Monahans there at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday. Junior varsity follows at 6:30 and varsity action concludes things at 7:30.

Baylor loses first league game

WACO (AP) — Freshman Bucky Richardson, making his first collegiate start, passed for a touchdown and provided the offensive spark Texas A&M has been missing as the Aggies beat the Baylor Bears 34-10 in Southwest Conference football Saturday.

It was Texas A&M's first victory in Waco since 1977 and kept the defending SWC champions alive in the league race. A&M is 4-2 and 2-1 in the league race.

Baylor suffered its first league loss and is 3-1 in conference play and 5-2 overall.

It was Baylor's worst loss to A&M in Waco since 1920.

Richardson, a Wishbone quarterback in high school at Baton Rouge, and freshman running back Darren Lewis kept Baylor's defense reeling before the 46,812 fans in Baylor Stadium. He is one of three quarterbacks A&M has been using.

Richardson executed the option to perfection and threw a 17-yard scoring pass to Rod Harris.

Lewis scored twice on runs of eight yards as the Aggies turned a close game into a rout in the third period with 15 unanswered points.

A 61-yard pass from Goebel to Bobby Jack Goforth setup Terry Siler's 21-yard field goal to trim the deficit to 6-3.

The Aggies cashed in another break in the second period when Tim Landrum recovered Eric Gilstrap's fumble at the Baylor 28. Larry Horton scored from four yards out five plays later.

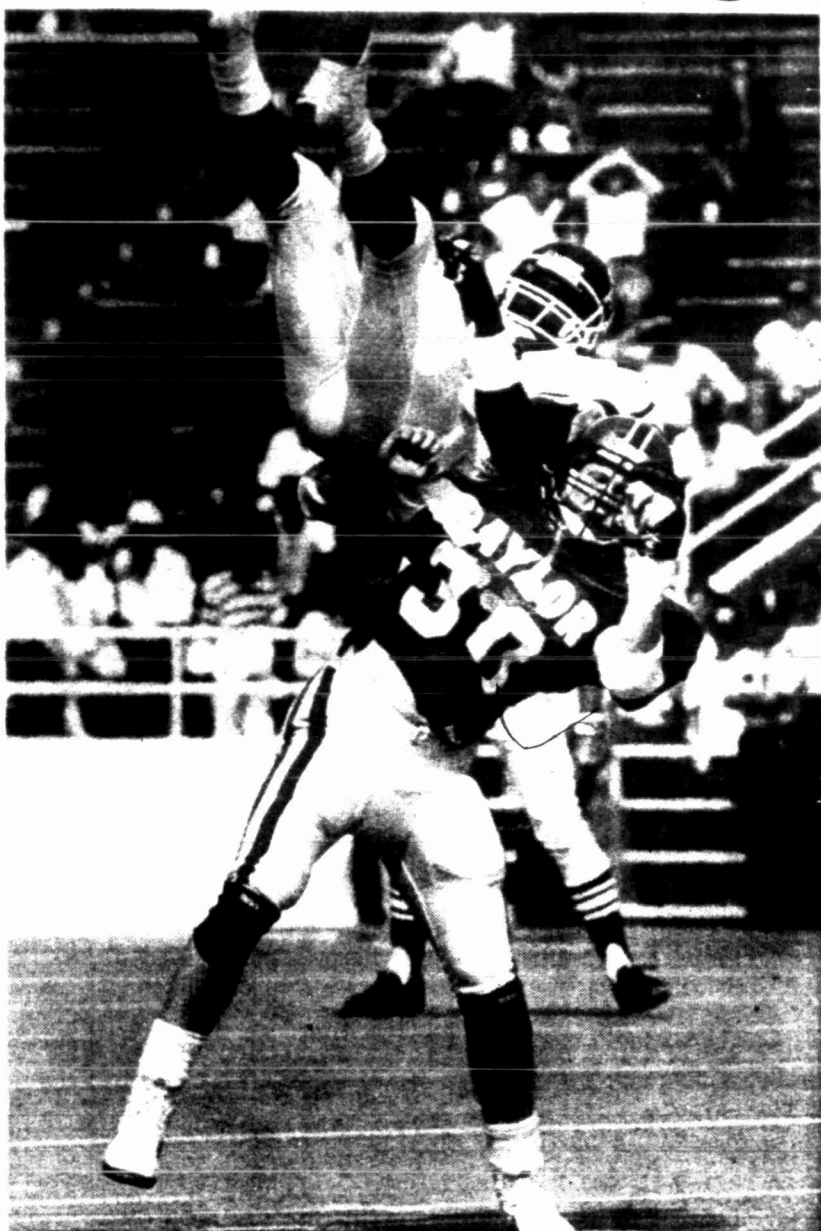

Baylor trailed 12-10 at halftime after Goebel hit Ben Baker with a 28-yard touchdown strike.

Texas Tech 59, Rice 7 LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech tailback James Gray showed up for work Saturday feeling a little puny.

At day's end, he had rushed for a career-high 173 yards, added 26 more on four pass receptions and scored four touchdowns as the Red Raiders romped to a 59-7 Southwest Conference victory over Rice's wounded Owls.

The stubby 5-10, 200-pound sophomore from Fort Worth scored three touchdowns on the ground and caught a pass for another as Tech rolled up a series-high 503 yards and 59 points.

"I really wasn't concerned with the yardage I was making," said Gray. "We just ... did our job."

Dykes said he was concerned before the game how the Raiders would respond to a chilling 31-0 loss last week to Arkansas, a setback that ended their Cotton Bowl aspirations.

Gray raced 40 and 4 yards for touchdowns and racked up 140 yards on the ground as the Raiders mounted a 31-7 halftime lead en route to their first blowout of the season.

Texas Christian 19, N. Texas St. 10

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tony Jeffery's 52-yard touchdown run late in the fourth quarter wrapped up a 19-10 Texas Christian victory over North Texas State Saturday.

With the win, TCU of the Southwest Conference evened its record at 3-3. NTSU, a member of the Southland Conference and ranked No. 2 in NCAA Division I-AA, fell to 5-2.

TCU trailed 10-3 at the half, but held NTSU to just one first down in the second half. The Horned Frogs took a 12-10 lead on Lee Newman's 47-yard field goal midway in the fourth quarter, and Jeffery ended NTSU's hopes with his scoring jaunt.

Newman gave TCU its only first-half points with a 27-yard field goal in the first quarter. NTSU scored on Darren Collins' 28-yard run and on Keith Chapman's 37-yard field goal at the end of the first half.

Trailing 10-3, TCU went 70 yards in seven plays to score on quarterback David Rascoe's 22-yard run on an option play with 6:07 left in the third quarter.

Wyoming 37, Houston 35 LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — A Scott Runyan-to-James Loving 65-yard bomb paved the way for Greg Worker's 35-yard field goal with six seconds to play Saturday as Wyoming edged Houston 37-35.

Houston seemed to have sealed a 35-34 upset with 1:30 left when Johnny Jackson intercepted his second pass of the day to stop 5-2 Wyoming at the Cougars' 38-yard line.

But the 1-4 Cougars failed to move the ball and punted back to Wyoming.

Runyan, who entered the game late in the third quarter after Craig Burnett injured his left leg, hit Loving down the middle with 17 seconds to play and the flanker reached Houston's 18-yard line before Jackson pulled him down from behind.

After Runyan tossed the ball out of bounds on first down Worker sent the 18,000 Wyoming fans into pandemonium with a 35-yard field goal that was good despite a high snap.

Wyoming had led 28-14 at the half and it appeared a rout was en route. But reserve quarterback Ed Powers, who took over after Andre Ware broke his left arm in the first quarter, led Houston back.

A third-quarter 60-yard pass to Kimble Anders pulled Houston to within 28-21. On Wyoming's very next play Gary McGuire intercepted Burnett and scampered 22 yards for the tying touchdown.

Worker gave Wyoming back the lead with a 32-yard field goal with 7:46 left in the third quarter and added another three-pointer with 7:50 left in the game to put Wyoming up 34-28.

However, with 6:06 to play Powers lofted the ball to Paul Smith, who dashed 72 yards for a score. Chip Browndyke's point after gave the Cougars a 35-34 lead that stood until Worker's final field goal.

Sooners, Huskers get big conference wins

By The Associated Press Oklahoma and Nebraska, ranked 1-2 since the start of the season but playing like Nos. 1 and 1A, remain on a collision course after rolling over Big Eight football opponents on Saturday.

Top-ranked Oklahoma, a nine-touchdown favorite, handed Kansas State 59-10, the hapless Wildcats' 11th consecutive defeat. No. 2 Nebraska, meanwhile, made surprisingly easy work of No. 12 Oklahoma State, rolling up a 466-43 margin in rushing yards in beating the Cowboys 35-0.

Oklahoma and Nebraska each face four more games before their season-ending showdown on Nov. 21. The winner of that game will likely play for the national championship in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day.

"I didn't have any idea we'd be able to control the game like that," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "I felt the strongest part of Oklahoma State was their offense, but our defense played a super ballgame."

Nine players scored for Oklahoma, which outrushed Kansas State 518-89.

"You make a mistake against them, and it's a touchdown," Kansas Coach Stan Parrish said. "I had nightmares last night thinking about how bad it could be if we put it on the ground."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, as he has every Saturday this season, heaped praise on his opponent after the blowout.

"Kansas State played a very physical, scrappy game," Switzer said. "They never quit and their defense competed very well."

Oklahoma, 6-0, took a 31-10 halftime lead against the Wildcats, 0-6.

Nebraska, also 6-0, is 25-0-1 in its last 26 games against the Cowboys, who despite falling to 5-1 are off to their best start in 42 years.

"We just absorbed a sound whipping," Oklahoma State Coach Pat Jones said. "(Quarterback) Mike (Gundy) was essentially running for his life. He was running away from people who were quicker than he was."

One more week of replacement football

By The Associated Press One more time. One more weekend of NFL replacement players before the real thing.

The third weekend of replacement-ball and competitive imbalance because of teams who have more picket line crossers than others, figures to be a little different than the past two.

There are some familiar faces — 89 regulars — who returned on Wednesday, the deadline to be eligible for this weekend's games under NFL rules imposed during the 24-day strike that ended

Thursday. Yet, there is expected to generally small attendances again before all the regulars return for the Oct. 24-25 games.

Some of the deadline beaters who will be back Sunday include linebacker Lawrence Taylor with the New York Giants, wide receiver Steve Largent of the Seattle Seahawks, tight end Ozzie Newsome of the Cleveland Browns, Doug Flutie of the New England Patriots and Jim Everett of the Los Angeles Rams.

Everett should help the Rams at Atlanta. The Falcons have only one regular and are trying to end an 0-2 strike skid.

Atlanta Coach Marion Campbell said he doesn't call it replacement ball. He prefers to call it "uneven ball."

The Los Angeles Raiders also figure to benefit with the return of quarterback Rusty Hilger, linebacker Jerry Robinson and kicker Chris Bahr in time for their game at San Diego, which will have the same old replacement Chargers.

Nine Browns, including backup quarterback Gary Danielson, came back this week compared with the Cincinnati Bengals, who have only two players regulars.

None of the Washington players crossed, leaving the Redskins vulnerable for Monday night's game in Dallas against the Cowboys, who have 11 regulars.

In Sunday's other games, it is Indianapolis at Pittsburgh, Seattle at Detroit, Miami at New York Jets, New England at Houston, Philadelphia at Green Bay, New Orleans at Chicago, Minnesota at

Pate leading Disney Classic

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Steve Pate scored two eagles — both on the front side — on the way to a 7-under-par 65 that lifted him into a one-stroke lead after Saturday's third round of the $600,000 Walt Disney World Golf Classic.

"That's the fastest start I ever got off to," Pate said after playing the first seven holes at the Palm course in six under par — including a bogey.

"It was a surprise to me. I've never played that course well. But before I knew what was happening, I was a bunch under," said Pate, who finished one round on each of three resort courses in 199, 17 under par.

Pate won the first title of his 3-year PGA Tour career two weeks ago in Abilene, Texas, beating Mark O'Meara by a single shot in the Southwest Classic.

O'Meara is the major challenger Pate must face Sunday over the Magnolia course in the chase for the $108,000 first prize. O'Meara, the leader through the first two rounds, shot a 3-under 69 on the Palm course and was at 16-under 200.

It was no match for Pate's opening heroics.

Pate pitched in from 60 feet for an eagle on the first hole, and hit a 4-wood second shot to within 2 feet of the flag for another eagle-3 on the seventh hole.

He also dropped 15-foot birdie putts on the fourth and sixth holes and made a longer one, from about 25 feet, on the third.

"It all happened on those first seven holes ... It all happened before I could think about it," he said.

Morris Hatafsky, Andy Magee and South African David Frost shared third at 202, three shots off the lead. Hatafsky had a 67 and Magee 69, both at the Palm course, and Frost shot 68 at Magnolia.

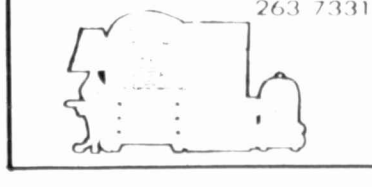

They were followed by Mac O'Grady, Loren Roberts and Mark McCumber at 203. O'Grady had a 67 at the Lake Buena Vista course. Roberts shot 67 and McCumber 68, both at Magnolia.

Tom Kite, PGA champion Larry Nelson and leading money-winner Curtis Strange all remained in title contention.

Kite and Nelson were at 205, six shots back, and Strange was 10 under par at 206.

St. Louis Cardinals first baseman Jim Lindeman tries to tag Twins base runner Kent Hrbek on a throw from Cards' pitcher Joe Magrane. The Twins won the opening game of the World series.

Twins pound Cards

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Dan Gladden's grand slam and RBI double sent the homer hankies waving in the Metrodome, and the Minnesota Twins overpowered the St. Louis Cardinals 10-1 Saturday night behind the pitching of Frank Viola in the opening game of the first indoor World Series.

Gladden's slam, the first in the World Series since 1970, capped a seven-run explosion in the fourth inning, the biggest Series outburst in 19 years. The Twins, whose starting lineup outthromered St. Louis' 173-32 this season, also got a two-run homer from Steve Lombardozzi.

Viola shut down the crippled Cardinals on five hits over eight innings, striking out five and walking none. He went to a three-ball count just once before Keith Atherton pitched a perfect ninth, saving Viola's valuable left arm for Game 4.

Viola, who was supposed to be best man at his brother's wedding this day in East Meadow, N.Y., was certainly the best man on the mound. He threw 100 pitches, 71 for strikes, and the only run scored on him came on a bloop double, flyball and RBI groundout.

Joe Magrane, the first rookie left-hander ever to start the first game of a World Series, wore earplugs to block out the noise of 55,171 fans, but he couldn't block out the Twins' batters.

Magrane extended the Cardinals' post-season scoreless-inning streak to 25 before Minnesota broke loose during a six-pitch outburst in the fourth.

Gary Gaetti and Tom Baylor led off with singles on first pitches and Don Brunansky's single on an 1-0 count loaded the bases.

That sent pitching coach Mike Roarke to the mound, got Bob Forsch warming in the bullpen and had the screaming fans swirling their good-luck handkerchiefs.

Kent Hrbek, just 3-for-20 in the Twins' playoff victory over Detroit, rewarded them with a two-run single up the middle on an 0-1 pitch.

Lombardozzi walked to reload the bases and Tim Laudner, 1-for-14 in the playoffs, met reliever Bob Forsch with an RBI single.

Gladden, the leadoff batter, then sent the Metrodome into madness by lofting a 1-2 pitch into the left-field stands.

Gladden, whose five RBI were one short of the record set by the New York Yankees' Bobby Richardson in 1960, hit the 13th grand slam in Series history, the first since Baltimore pitcher Dave McNally did it in 1970. The Twins' seven-run inning was the largest in the Series since Detroit scored 10 against St. Louis in 1968.

After Gladden homered, the Metrodome continued to play tricks on St. Louis when Gaetti's high pop fell among left fielder Vince Coleman, center fielder Willie McGee and shortstop Ozzie Smith for a double. The ball was lost in the orange-tinted roof and bluish light, not uncommon for first-time visitors at the Metrodome, and made Gaetti the 17th player to get two hits in an inning during the World Series.

Strange sights and sounds were predicted for the Metrodome, and the Cardinals had more trouble late when another ball disappeared in center. By then, St. Louis had seen enough of the ballpark and the Twins.

The Twins had the best home record in baseball, 56-25, and swept two games from Detroit at the Metrodome in the playoffs.

The Cardinals tried to take away some of the home-field advantage early when Jim Lindeman doubled to center, took third on McGee's fly ball and scored on Tony Pena's grounder.

But the crowd did not quiet and was at a fervor pitch two innings later when the Twins showed why they were 26-17 record against left-handers, tops in the majors.

Lombardozzi's homer off Forsch followed a walk to Hrbek in the fifth. Gladden hit an RBI double in the seventh after a single by Lombardozzi.

Tampa Bay, Giants at Buffalo, Denver at Kansas City, and St. Louis at San Francisco.

The Super Bowl champion Giants have the biggest ground to make up. They were 0-2 before the strike and 0-2 with the fill-ins. In addition to NFL MVP Taylor, New York should be improved with backup Jeff Rutledge at quarterback.

Buffalo, also 0-2 during the strike, got some help in running back Robb Riddick and Brian McClure, the former Bowling Green passing whiz.

"Yes, we're improved," said Buffalo Coach Marv Levy. "But the others are improving, too, and we're improving from not being very good."

Chicago, 4-0, is the only undefeated team in the league but Coach Mike Ditka said the Saints present a problem.

"They are a better team on the field than that are," Ditka said. "They have better people. They have 12 people on their squad who went through camp and will be playing in the game. That's one-third or one-fourth of a football team."

The Jets now have their entire defensive line and quarterback Pat Ryan available for Miami.

"I don't know about the experience edge," Jets Coach Joe Walton said. "A lot of teams had the so-called advantage and didn't do well... New England had it over Cleveland and St. Louis had a distinct edge over the Redskins and they lost. It's hard to predict."

Pittsburgh got a big boost with a host of returnees this week, including wide receiver John Stallworth and safety Donnie Shell. Indianapolis, 2-0 during the strike, won't have No. 1 quarterback Gary Hogeboom, sidelined with damaged ribs.

In addition to Largent, Seattle returns center Blair Bush, placekicker Norm Johnson, quarterback Jeff Kemp and linebacker Fred Young. Detroit relies on Gary Hons at quarterback.

Patriots linebacker Andre Tippett and Flutie, acquired from Chicago Tuesday, join veterans in Raymond Clayborn, Tony Collins, Sean Farrell, Tony Franklin and Ron Wooten. Houston, 2-0 since the strike, has gotten solid efforts from fill-ins QB Brent Pease and receiver Leonard Harris.

Green Bay, relying on replacements, lost in overtime to Detroit last Sunday. The Eagles, not close in two strike games, have only one veteran, linebacker Ron Moten.

Minnesota, which went the 2-0, 0-2 route, goes with the same replacements, no veterans. Tampa Bay, 1-1 during the strike, has Dan Turk back to hike the ball.

Kevin Ross, Kansas City cornerback, the only veteran who will play against Denver, which has eight healthy veterans, including offensive linemen Bill Bryan, Winford Hood, Keith Kartz, and Dave Studdard.

San Francisco looks solid with Joe Montana, Roger Craig, Dwight Clark and Joe Cribbs on offense, Dwaine Board, Eric Wright and Pete Kugler on defense. St. Louis has wide receiver Roy Green, safety Leonard Smith, linebacker E. J. Junior and running back Earl Ferrell, all veterans.

secutive game, its best start since the national championship season of 1959.

Rob Moore and Don McPherson combined on an 80-yard scoring pass on the opening play of the game and McPherson later passed for two more touchdowns and ran for two.

Penn State, 5-2, lost at Syracuse for the first time since 1965.

No. 11 Notre Dame 35, Air Force 14
Tony Rice, replacing the injured Terry Andrysiak, ran for two first-quarter touchdowns as the Fighting Irish, 4-1, rebounded from a 30-22 loss to Pittsburgh last week.

Rice attempted just five passes, completing one for 10 yards. But the Fighting Irish, who ran for 354 yards, controlled the ball for 35:19. Air Force is 5-2.

No. 14 Florida 34, Temple 3
Freshman Emmitt Smith became the quickest entrant in the 1,000-yard club when he made it in his seventh game. Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh and Herschel Walker of Georgia had previously reached 1,000 yards in eight games.

Smith ran for 175 yards on 23 carries despite missing most of the second quarter with a sprained right wrist. He had 1,011 yards this season with 11 touchdowns.

Kerwin Bell threw for two touchdowns for Florida, 5-2. Temple is 3-4.

Texas 16, No. 15 Arkansas 14
Five-foot-7 Tony Jones caught a Bret Stafford pass between two defenders in the end zone on the final play as Texas, 3-3, upset the Razorbacks, 4-2. Texas leads the Southwest Conference with a 2-0 record while Arkansas dropped to 2-1.

Stafford completed six passes on the 56-yard drive, including a 19-yarder to Eric Metcalf on fourth-and-10 from the Arkansas 32.

Arkansas outrushed Texas 288-120 but the Longhorns passed for 182 yards to 10 for the Razorbacks, who attempted four passes and completed one as starting quarterback Greg Thomas sustained a shoulder injury.

No. 17 Ohio State 20, Purdue 17
Matt Frantz kicked a 50-yard field goal with 3:10 remaining after the Buckeyes, 4-1-1, had squandered a 17-0 halftime lead.

Two touchdown passes from Doug Downing to Calvin Williams and a 25-yard field goal by Jonathan Briggs tied the game for Purdue, 14-14. Ohio State, which was upset 31-10 by Indiana last week, has not lost to the Boiler-makers and the Hoosiers in the same season since 1947.

No. 19 Michigan State 38, Northwestern 0

Lorenzo White rushed for 187 yards on 33 carries and scored three touchdowns for the Spartans, 4-2, who share first place in the Big Ten with Indiana.

White moved into 34th place on the NCAA career rushing list with 3,838 yards. Northwestern, 0-5-1, has lost 12 of its last 14 games.

Other Games
Demetrius Brown, who threw a Big Ten-record seven interceptions in a loss to Michigan State last week, passed for three touchdowns and ran for another in Michigan's 37-10 victory over Iowa.

Freshman quarterback Alton Grizzard ran for 225 yards on 23 carries and scored three touchdowns as Navy won its first game of the season, beating Pennsylvania 38-28.

James Gray rushed for 173 yards and scored four touchdowns in Texas Tech's 59-7 victory over Rice.

AMY BURGESS

CHANTAY DURHAM

Queens Nine ladies competing Tuesday for local titles

By LYNN HAYES
Staff writer

Nine young women will compete for the title of Miss Howard County and Miss SWCID Tuesday night at 7 p.m. at the Howard College Auditorium.

Among the girls competing are three veteran pageant contestants.

Amy Burgess, 18, first runner-up in last year's Miss Howard County Pageant, said she will compete again this year because she wants to represent Howard County in the Miss Texas Pageant.

"It's real competitive — you don't feel the competition until the night of the pageant," she said.

Amy said her mother is real supportive of her decision to compete in pageants — but added she probably wouldn't compete for the Miss Howard County title again. "I might compete somewhere else," she added.

When Amy didn't win the title last year, she said, "I was kind of upset. I said immediately I'd enter next year. Maybe experience is what I need."

Amy's roommate Jeanie Robertson, 19, also competed for the crown last year. She began competing at the age of nine and was crowned Miss Cinderella Teen in 1984, and in 1985 she became Miss Howard County Fair Queen.

Jeanie said the interview was the hardest part of competing. She felt she did her best last year, except for the interview. "I got real nervous," she said.

"I like to perform in front of an audience. When I'm on stage I can handle it," she added.

A scholarship — and a chance to meet girls from around the state if she competes in the Miss Texas

Pageant, are the reasons Jeanie entered the pageant again.

Jeanie and Amy became friends last year during the pageant. "We encourage each other," said Jeanie. "I wasn't going to enter the pageant again, but Amy encouraged me to. We decided if one of us wins, we'd help the other," she added.

Kim Hawkins, 20, who competed for the title of Miss SWCID two years ago, said she enters the contests because she likes to build her confidence.

Talent is Kim's favorite part of competing, while giving speeches makes her nervous.

Kim said if she didn't win this year she would compete again.

Linda Conway, pageant director and a certified judge in the Miss Texas system, said, "This is not a beauty contest — it's a scholarship pageant."

The winners will receive a $550 scholarship to Howard College and SWCID. This is considered a full scholarship at both campuses, except for room and board, said Conway.

"The judges are looking for talent, intelligence, poise and the ability to communicate," she added.

Reigning queens, James Johnson, Miss SWCID, and Stephanie Dobbs, Miss Howard County, will perform and crown their successors.

Included in the entertainment will be James and Stephanie, who will perform their talents; New Dimension singers of Howard College; singing by Chandra Wrightsil; and Howard College's own version of Motley Crue.

For the non-television crowd, there are only four seasons

By Marcia Smith
DALLAS TIMES HERALD

There's winter, spring, summer and fall. And then there's the year's most-awaited season — the new TV season, when more than 88 million Americans come inside early and reacquaint themselves with the Huxtables, ALF and Mad-die Hayes. Not everybody looks forward to the new fall schedule. Two percent of Americans — those who have no television set — don't know Maddie Hayes from Gabby Hayes. To them, Bill Cosby is an author, Santa Barbara a city. Living without television, says one non-viewer, is "like living in a foreign country in which you don't speak the language."

About women

Leif Oines is one of those people. The 26-year-old Dallas computer programmer kicked the TV habit eight years ago and today, he says he's a little out of touch. "I always see something about 'Moonlighting' in the National Enquirer at the checkout, so I know it's out there," says Oines, "but I don't know what it is."

Oines grew up watching reruns of "Gilligan's Island" after school, but when he left home for college, he didn't pack a TV set. "I didn't miss it," he says, "and after I earned enough to buy one, there always seemed to be something more worthwhile to buy. TV is always trying to sell you an idea that's not fully developed or a thing you don't want or need."

"There's always something better to do."

For Elva Trevino, reading and exercise take the place of the TV viewing she gave up 15 years ago. "I find the TV sits me down," says the 37-year-old IBM saleswoman. "I didn't have TV until I was 14 or 15 — I grew up in South Texas and our family didn't own one — but sometimes I watched Popeye at a friend's house."

"When I met my ex-husband in 1972, he subscribed to three newspapers, read lots of magazines and didn't watch TV. That's when I discovered it was more fun to read."

Mary Beth Burns says cable television peddlers think she's lying when she tells them she doesn't own a TV. Burns, 30, and her doctor husband, Steve, decided nearly five years ago not to waste their time on the tube.

Instead, they renovated a house and became active in church work. Since the birth of her daughter two years ago, Burns has become more determined that a TV set will not take root in a corner of her living room.

"It's not public enemy No. 1, but there's a lot on TV I wouldn't want my children to see," she says. "TV has changed a lot since I was a kid. I'm appalled at the language and what is shown. It presents things as the norm that aren't the norm."

And, she says, it sometimes takes the place of parents. "I'm sure I wouldn't play with my child as much if I were plugged into the TV instead of to the child," Burns says. "And I can see how it would be tempting to let it baby-sit with your kids. But when you're watching TV, you're not interacting with each other."

The couple also noted, "Your friendship is a cherished gift — we respectfully request no other."

Parents often repeat childhood experiences

WASHINGTON (AP) — When people have good memories or feelings about their childhood they try to repeat the experience for their own children, says Vivian Boul, director of The Catholic University of America's Center for Child Services.

"If they have had negative nurturing experiences, parents will try to raise their children differently. People move toward pleasure and avoid pain — as Freud maintained," she explains.

She has found that parents who were read to as children will enjoy reading to their children and those who remember taking leisurely walks with their parents will enjoy doing the same with their own children on weekends.

"Good times are not related to money, but are simple, ordinary shared experiences," she points out.

Mrs. Boul observes that parents who received harsh unjustified punishment as children often maintain they will not do the same to their children.

"People who were not able to negotiate with their parents, or whose parents did not appreciate their ideas, vow not to be that way as parents," she says.

She points out that today it may not be the mother, but rather the stepparent or parent with primary child-rearing responsibility, who tries to repeat or re-create the good memories and the past joys experienced as children.

"When Benjamin Spock wrote his first child care book, he said mothers needed to stay home and raise their children," she says. "Today, with increased numbers of working mothers, he's readjusted his thinking."

Working "moms" shouldn't feel guilty if they can't duplicate the full-time mothering their own mothers may have provided, she suggests.

"Time may be shorter, but the essential ingredients in loving relationships don't change with the times. There's sufficient evidence that quality, not quantity, of mothering is what counts," Mrs. Boul says.

Floor to aid robot vehicles

TOKYO (AP) — An "intelligent" floor for managers who want to use robot vehicles for interoffice transportation is being developed in Japan, reports MIS Week.

The floor consists of square plastic tiles back-coated with ferrite guideways that work with robot vehicles fitted with magnetic sensors and microcomputers.

According to the management information systems journal, the foot-square tiles have either I-shaped or L-shaped ferrite coating and can be arranged in the same manner as carpet tiles to create the guideway pattern hidden underneath.

The robot vehicle can be programmed to move from one point to another in the office via the microcomputers which process data obtained from magnetic sensors and keep track of the ferrite guideways underneath.

Experimental robot vehicles have operated at a speed of 1.5 miles per hour and since they are equipped with touch sensors stop on contact with a person or object.

Tidbits

Staff Writer

"Costume Bash '87" invitations are in the mail. This is the highlight of the Cultural Affairs Council's annual ArtsFest.

The printed invitations themselves are a work of art, featuring an original drawing by Judy Terletsky, art teacher at Goliad Middle School, plus a handful of colorful confetti. The Bash is at 9 p.m., Saturday, October 31, at Big Spring Country Club. Costumes are not a must, says Debbie Reid, Bash chairman, but it's more fun.

Hosts are John and Sidney Arlick, Jerry and Johnnie Lou Avery, Carl and Joyce Bradley, Ron and Laural Brasel, Greg and Lisa Brooks, John and Lynne Brown, Connie and Karen Edwards, Troy and Linda Fraser, Phil and Cherry Furqueron, Mike and Barbara Hall, Terry and Jan Hansen, Diane Linhart, Drew and Glynn Mouton, Teri Quinones, Debra Reid, Tommy and Pat Rutledge, Sonny and Shirley Shroyer, Dickey and Cinda

Tidbits

Stanley, Elizabeth Taylor, and Hardy and Steffanie Wilkerson.

If you didn't get an invitation, call the Chamber of Commerce at 263-7641, or just put on your costume and go.

B. Z. Lewistells his parents, Bob and Susan Lewis, that his band "has gigs from now 'til Christmas." B.Z., a sophomore at McLennan Community College, Waco, and lead guitar in a musical group called "First Floor," says he'll be playing in College Station and San Antonio as well as Waco. His roommate, and also a member of "First Floor," is Doug Baum, son of Colorado City Mayor and Mrs. Jim Baum.

Bill Doll's parents, Bob and Virginia Doll, were in town from Goodland, Kan., to take in the recent Howard College production of Neil Simon's "Brighton Beach Memoirs." Bill was the director.

Sherry and Don Rose are just back from vacationing in New Mexico's Enchanted Circle — Angel Fire, Eagle's Nest, Red River, Questa and Taos — where they took the spectacular foliage tour. Sherry says they played golf every day in "the wonderful crisp air."

Betty Wrinkle, Polly Mays and Joyce Ellis have another project. They've planted native Texas wild flowers on Joyce's property north of town — Indian blanket, gailardia, Mexican hats, mountain pinks and more — from seeds they had gathered from roadsides all over the state. Now they're enjoying a fall harvest, and distributing their seeds locally, under the name of Texas Wild and Woody Seed Company.

Congratulations to Big Spring State Hospital's Doris Day and Murlene Williams for being among the top 20 volunteers in the state in terms of volunteer hours. They were properly honored at the Volunteer Services Council state meeting in Austin recently.

Billig Anderson's sister, Mary Ann Reed, is visiting here from Huntington Beach, Cal., while Billie recuperates from knee surgery.

Friends will be cheered by the news that LaNelle Parks came home Thursday after an unexpected stay at Methodist Hospital in Dallas. On a family outing to Six Flags in late September, LaNelle became ill while having dinner. She was first taken by ambulance to a small hospital, then transferred by helicopter to the larger facility in Oak Cliff where she underwent six-hour surgery for an aneurysm.

Her husband Russell spent most of the past few weeks in Dallas at her bedside. LaNelle will be at home, taking therapy as an outpatient.

Big Spring High School's Craig Fisher got an inspiration at the recent BSHS Homecoming. While talking to some of the early graduates he hit upon the idea of taping their recollections for the high school museum.

He began this week with Reba Orenbaum Baker and Margaret Bainbridge Maples, Class of 1919. Margaret now lives in Longview now. If you're an early graduate, look out — you may be hearing from Craig.

Another Homecoming item: Terri Johansen shared the novelty invitation to her Class of '72 reunion. Respondents were asked to check off one of the following: "Yes, I wouldn't miss it!" Or "No, I'm too old and fat to attend." It probably stimulated attendance.

Make family time quality time

By NAOMI HUNT,
County Extension Agent-
Home Economics

In 1837, families living in the Republic of Texas had to grow their own grain and grind their own flour. They had to mix their homegrown ingredients to bake their own bread. Today, bread is baked in a computerized bakery, thin-sliced and plastic-bagged and delivered to the local grocery store.

This tribute to hard-working, early Texans, is to remind you that although the bakery can do your bread for you, no one else can do your family. The family is an indispensable part of personal growth and development. It should be encouraged, enlivened and enhanced. One way to strengthen your family is through planned "family time."

Most families today don't spend much uninterrupted time together. Families and family members must compete with ballgames, chores, television, meetings, school work....

Family time is based on the idea that each family can benefit from spending time together. Family time is spent in quality projects, events and happenings which deepen, enrich and bring joy to family life. Family time is a planned event which occurs each week.

Family time doesn't have to be an elaborate or costly event. For example, try a "how-to" night, where family members (especially children and teens) learn some useful new skill, like how to write a check or change a tire. A family service project, such as picking up litter in a park, or baking cookies and sending them to someone, is another type of family time activity, or you can play games, work puzzles or discuss a television program you have watched together. With some thought, your family can think of numerous activities for family time.

Be creative in planning family time and allow each family member to share in the planning. Remember, however, what you do is less important than doing it together.

It's especially important to start doing things together when the children are young. Children soon realize that being a part of their family is fun. They feel secure with family members and gradually learn that siblings and parents have much to share with them that enriches their lives.

Start the family time habit by tracking the family's current activities. Each day for seven days, write on the calendar the times family members did things together. You may wish to include the times you spent with one child alone, as well as entire family activities, including family meal time.

At the end of the week, when the family is together, look at the calendar. Count up the time spent together and discuss what time was special for each family member.

Then begin to plan for family activities. Spend some time talking about activities that would be fun and reasonable for the family to do together. Make a family calendar for the month and place it where family members will see it daily and remember what is planned.

In addition to deciding on special activities, you may want to set aside a short period every day to do something as a family. This time might be used for a family devotional, a reading of a special book together or playing a game or crafts.

Strong families work hard to plan and protect the time they spend together.

During the six weeks of training the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree through the community college of the Air Force.

Refrain from kissing unless you're sure

DEAR ABBY: Something is bothering me concerning AIDS information. Young folks, as a rule, pay very little attention to informative TV programs or ads. Not many read newspapers.

However, most parents read your column, so actually you are the best source of information for the layman there is.

Abby, what I read and hear always mentions "body fluids." Does that also mean "deep kissing"? Or just blood, or the sex act?

Color me stupid, if you wish, but I know that most teen-agers do not understand, and many do not ask their parents' advice about anything — especially about sex. They think we are old fuddy-duddies. Thank you.

P.M. SALISBURY, MD. There is still much confusion in the minds of the public. Although there has never been a documented case of the AIDS virus being transmitted via "deep" or "French" kissing, researchers feel it would be prudent to refrain from deep kissing unless you are sure your partner is free of the AIDS virus. Although the concentration of the virus in saliva is minuscule, and the risk appears to be quite small, there are no 100 percent "absolutes" in medicine. So, avoid deep kissing, unless you "know" with whom you are having the pleasure.

DEAR ABBY: I met this guy; he's cute, smart, a law student at Stanford, and he has everything a girl could dream of. He's Prince Charming. But this prince has the worst breath I have ever smelled. It turned me off completely.

Now he can't figure out why I'm too busy to go out with him all of a sudden. This is a tragedy — what a waste! I know it shouldn't matter, but it does — and that's what is killing me. I really like this guy, and I hate to just drop him, but I don't want to smell his breath again, either.

I tried giving him breath mints, but even that didn't help.

CALIFORNIA GIRL. DEAR GIRL: Do Prince Charming an enormous favor and level with him. It could be his teeth, his diet, his stomach — even "nerves." If he isn't aware that his breath turns you off, he'll never seek a solution to what could be a medical or dental problem.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old woman with a problem. It may be a problem that cannot be solved, but I would like to know one way or the other, so here goes: My stomach looks like a road map! I've had three major surgeries that left "major" scars, and I can't stand to look at them.

Along with this, my skin stretched during my pregnancy. I can't wear shorts, and a bathing suit is out of the question.

Please, Abby, is there a doctor who specializes in this sort of plastic surgery? If you saw me, you would know that I am not just being vain. I really look pathetic.

Please help me. I'm desperate! Sign me... ROAD MAP

DEAR ROAD MAP: Ask your family physician to recommend a board-certified plastic surgeon who specializes in repairing the kind of scars you can't bear to look at.

Body cosmetic surgery has come a long way. You shouldn't need a road map to find a competent surgeon.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters to All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

A little ingenuity and lots of manure go the distance

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH

A couple of years ago, Thurman Yancey of Laredo and three other men went elk hunting in Wyoming. To get around in the mountains, they took four burros with them. The animals, imported from Mexico, were loaded onto a trailer and sent ahead by two men who worked on Yancey's ranch.

Tumbleweed Smith

Thurman had just bought a new Chrysler for his wife and wanted to see how it drove. He and his son took the new car while the other two hunters rode in another vehicle. Yancey didn't know his brand new Chrysler hadn't been fully serviced.

The Yanceys made it to the camp site without a problem. As the other two men arrived, they hit a rock and damaged the underside of their car, causing it to lose all its oil. But they put their car problems behind them and concentrated on hunting elk.

The first day of the hunt was fine — the weather was perfect, and Yancey's burro even calmed down after throwing off his rider a few times. Everybody got an elk except Yancey.

The next morning the thermometer showed 31 degrees below zero. The hunters were confident the new Chrysler would get them back to Laredo when they wanted to leave. They gave no thought to checking to see if the car had antifreeze.

Folks in Laredo don't worry too much about antifreeze — people in Wyoming do.

Two days later the campsite was snowed in. The hunters decided they had about all the fun they could stand, so they got into the Chrysler, ready to return home.

It wouldn't start. An examination under the hood revealed a cracked block — no anti-freeze. The engine had simply frozen to death in the extreme cold. The engine had freeze plugs which act as safety valves in case something like this should happen. The freeze plugs had popped out and couldn't be found.

While they were sitting in the mountains trying to figure out what to do next, Yancey recalled that when he was younger, men would put Prince Albert tobacco in the radiator to stop leaks. In fact, Yancey had even put horse manure in the radiator on some occasions. The horses had eaten hay, so the texture of the manure wasn't too different from the tobacco.

Yancey, his son and the two hunters decided to take drastic measures to get off the frozen mountain. They drove small branches into the places on the engine where freeze plugs usually go.

They melted snow and poured a little bit of water into the radiator. Then they filled it with burro droppings. The car started.

Yancey carried a five-gallon can of water as a precaution. They decided to leave the car at the nearest town and have the motor replaced. After driving ten miles, they stopped and put about a gallon of water in the radiator. They drove another ten miles and stopped to check: No water needed. Same thing when they arrived in town.

They decided to see if they could make it back to Laredo, well over a thousand miles away. They arrived home in 24 hours, with the tree branches protruding from the engine and a radiator filled with burro manure.

Yancey took the car back to the dealer where he had bought it two weeks before. The man who owns the dealership couldn't believe the engine was running with the wooden stobs sticking out of it. He jerked the motor out and put in a new one.

Yancey swears what happens next is the truth.

He was driving the car home from the dealership when the new engine began making a knocking sound and finally stopped running. Seems the dealer forgot to put oil in the car.

Yancey called the dealer, who came and towed in the vehicle. He installed another engine, this time checking the oil, anti-freeze and everything else.

Yancey had no more problems with the car, but he has become a proponent of burro manure. He says every car owner ought to keep some in the trunk.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat Magnet' Diet Pill Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally
Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You will start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patent pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body
The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in fat particles. Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested.

Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated.

"Pills Do All the Work"
According to the doctors, the fat magnet pills do all the work while you quickly lose fat with no starvation diet menus to follow, no calorie counting, no exercising, and no hunger pangs. It is 100% safe. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

The fat magnet pills have just been offered to the American public and are already sweeping the country with record sales and reports of dramatic weight loss. It's the "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat magnet pills (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. Treated sewage water plays role in unique program

MIDLAND (AP) — The cowboy refers to notes written on his left hand with a felt-tip pen.

A heifer is dead in one of the far fields, and he doesn't recognize the brand of another cow among a herd, so he tells his boss.

Leaning into the pickup's cab, the cowboy describes the brand — a H lying on its side — known as a "Lazy H."

Long-time cowboy Roy Wallace is responsible for keeping track of 4,000 cattle run on 2,500 acres of land irrigated by the city's treated sewage water in a unique West Texas "intensive grazing" program.

Wallace is one of five employees working for Midland partners Bill Simmons, an independent oil contractor, and geologist Monty Gist, who are leasing the land from the city to use as a type of cattle "fat farm," about 13 miles southeast of Midland.

As part of the lease arrangement on the 2,500 irrigated acres the city receives a 10 to 50 percent share of the profit, said City Manager Fred Poe.

The Texas Water Commission does not allow the city to just dump its treated sewage water. So since they signed a lease last January, Simmons and Gist have had the monumental task of usefully disposing of Midland's 10 million gallons of sewage water produced each day.

The effluent is recycled by irrigating forage on 2,500 acres 13 miles southeast of Midland.

Before Simmons and Gist signed the city lease last January, another local farmer attempted to raise cotton with the effluent, but was flooded out by heavy rains, Poe said.

The heavy rains made it difficult for the cotton farmer to dispose of the required amount of sewage each day and not ruin his crop, Poe explained.

But Gist and Simmons said they believe they have developed a solution for discharging the city's treated sewage water and making use of it through intensive grazing.

"We think this thing has a reasonable amount of potential," Simmons said.

For a fee, livestock are fattened up on 20 separate fields undergoing almost constant irrigation.

Like pieces on a chessboard, cattle herds are rotated around three or four fields every 10 days. Once the cattle have eaten the hay grazer and millet summer forage to about knee-height they are moved to another field.

After the cows leave a field, the sprinklers are turned on and liquid nitrogen is mixed with the water to boost the plants again.

Within 20 days the livestock return to the same field to feed again.

The men said they hope to exceed an average weight gain of 1.5 to 2 pounds a day per head with the intensive grazing program.

Cattle munching on effluent-watered forage are now gaining about 1.7 pounds a day on average, Gist said.

And although the cows are eating grass watered by effluent, it has no effect on their health or the taste of beef, the men said.

"The quality of the water is almost as good as the water we drink," Gist says.

The water is purified with all solids removed by a grit screen chamber. Also before the water is irrigated it settles in eight holding ponds where algae eat away a lot of contaminants, Lowe said.

However, the "no-discharge" permit issued to the city by the state water commission restricts what can be irrigated by the treated sewage water, Lowe said.

Food, such as vegetables that go directly into the food chain cannot be grown with the city's effluent, he said.

And although the city has been unable to obtain a discharge permit from the Texas Water Commission, Lowe said both methods of disposing of water are expensive.

When water is dumped it requires more intensive cleaning, he said.

Last year the city spent $795,000 on its sewage treatment plant and $130,000 for light and power at the leased grazing fields, Lowe said.

Poe said the city is committed to making the best use of its effluent.

Gentry awarded designation

MALVERN, PA. — Marsh Gentry has been awarded the professional insurance designation Chartered Property Casualty Underwriter (CPCU), said Dr. Norman A. Baglini, president of the American Institute for Property and Liability Underwriters.

The American Institute awards the designation nationwide to those who complete a 10-course program and meet rigorous academic, ethics and experience requirements.

Gentry is the branch manager of the West Texas area for GAB Business Services Inc., a nationwide insurance claims services company. He holds undergraduate degrees from Baylor University in philosophy and history and a master's in business administration from University of Texas of the Permian Basin. He also holds the Associate in Claims (AIC) designation from the Insurance Institute of America.

The designation was conferred at national ceremonies in San Antonio Oct. 12. The ceremony was conducted in conjunction with the annual meeting and seminars of the Society of Chartered Property and Casualty Underwriters.

Sawyer will address engineers

George H. Sawyer, 1989 President of the Society of Petroleum Engineers (SPE), Inc. will address the Permian Basin Section of SPE in Midland, October 21. His topic is "Today: The Engineer's & SPE's Role in Industry Recovery."

Sawyer will briefly examine the background leading to the present situation. He will then review some ideas for the recovery of industry, for which there are already signs. Finally, he will expand on those areas where an impact might be made, including such items as technology, organizational effectiveness, and fiscal arrangements. Sawyer is affiliate operations manager for Exxon Company, International in Froham Park, N.J. He joined Exxon in 1956 after graduating from the University of Texas with a degree in petroleum engineering. His 32-year career with Exxon has been split, two-thirds on U.S. domestic activities and one-third on international activities.

With 57,000 members, the SPE is the largest international technical and professional association for engineers, scientists, and managers involved in petroleum drilling, exploration and production.

Trade forum planning luncheon

The Permian Basin International Trade Forum has scheduled a noon luncheon, Oct. 28 at the Holiday Inn Parkway, 3001 E. Highway 80.

The speaker will be Russell S. Autry, new director of Economic Development for the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce. Autry has held a number of positions with the El Paso Chamber of Commerce and has experience in international trade, especially with the Maquila program.

Reservations can be made by calling the Odessa Chamber at 332-9103 by noon Oct. 26. The cost will be $8 for members and $10 for non-members at the door.

World renowned energy consultants Henry Schuler, Dale Steffes and James F. Smith will address short-term national and international energy concerns at the annual Permian Basin Economic Outlook Conference Thursday.

Co-sponsored by the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce and the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, the conference will be conducted 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday, at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Featured speakers will address state, local, national and international economic forecasts.

In addressing the international energy outlook, Schuler will draw on his 25 years experience in the Middle East and North Africa.

He has served as an energy consultant, diplomat and oil industry executive and frequently testifies before congressional committees on energy security issues.

Steffes will speak on current economic conditions and future prospects for the domestic petroleum industry.

He is founder and president of Planning & Forecasting Consultants in Houston and has been dubbed the "Cassandra of Crude." Steffes is a consultant for major oil companies and several OPEC nations.

Smith will address state and local economic conditions. He is the Director of the University of Texas' Austin's Bureau of Business Research, a source of business and economic information about Texas and the Southwest.

He previously served as the director of regional service and U.S. consulting for Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates.

Credit unions

Tri-chapter meeting 'successful'

Herald staff report

The inaugural tri-chapter meeting of credit unions in Big Spring, Abilene and San Angelo met with success Tuesday, when about 130 union members attended a dinner at Howard College.

Among the highlights of the event was recognition given Wayne Pierce, vice president of the Citizens' Federal Credit Union, who has achieved certified Credit Union Executive status.

It is a continuing education program open to any employee or affiliate of a credit union or organization, he said, and involved eight required and five optional subject areas.

Pierce joined Jim Weaver, president of Citizens, as one of 16 Texans who have completed the Executive program. Pierce estimated that 50 of the 1,000 who took the Executive examination in 1986 earned the designation.

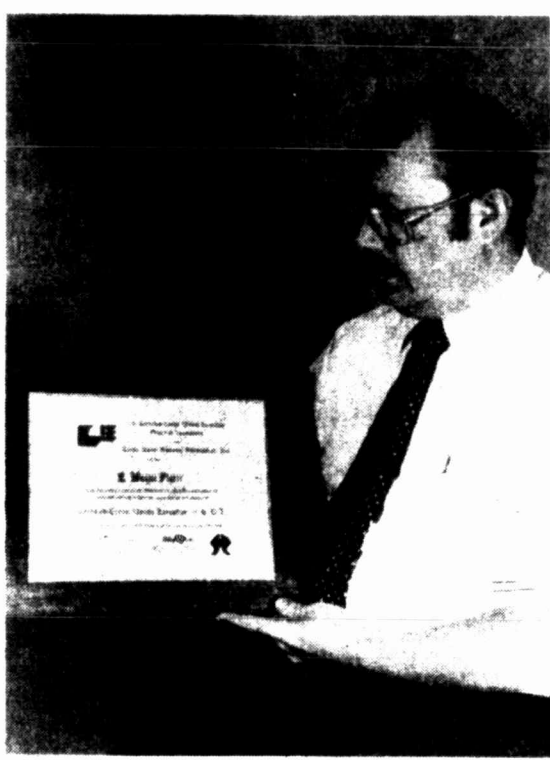

Pierce has been with the credit union since 1973 — when it was Webb Air Force Base Credit Union — and is a Monahans native. He completed his bachelor's degree work at Texas Tech University and attended the University of Houston management school. He has two children, Jennie, 10 and Joe, 14.

Les Young, Big Spring chapter president, said that the groups hope to make the tri-chapter meeting an annual event and he appeared pleased with the first such effort.

"I was surprised at how well it went," for a first time, he said.

Big Spring Police Chief Joe Cook and Tom Clark, Abilene FBI agent, presented an hour-long session concerning actions to be taken in robbery situations, Young said.

Also in attendance was Texas Credit Union League official Dick Williamson, who shared comments about the status of Texas credit unions with the Herald.

Wayne Pierce

"Amid economic turmoil ... credit unions are not only surviving but thriving. They virtually stand alone as a group in remaining stable and secure, trusted by consumers and respected by the community," he said.

Big Spring has nine credit unions, Williamson reported, with assets of nearly $84 million and loans of $45 million. There are 22,171 members, and 10,758 borrowers, according to his figures. Abilene, with 16 credit unions, has $126 million in assets and 50,316 members, while San Angelo's 14 credit unions has $124 million in assets and 56,461 members.

One in every four Texans belongs to a credit union, and new members are joining at the rate of 150,000 a year, according to Williamson, vice president of public relations for the Dallas-based trade association for the state's 1,077 credit unions.

Current assets totaling $11.7 billion represent a projected 1987 increase of 14 percent over last year. Deposits grew 17 percent from 1985 to 1986, he reported.

For the past three years, surveys by the American Banker have shown that credit union members are the most satisfied of all users of financial services; last year, according to the survey report, credit unions gained 49 percent of new business from people who moved money from one financial institution to another, compared to three percent for banks and 15 percent for thrifts.

But it is the lending arena that has in large part shielded credit unions from the turmoil currently afflicting banks and savings and loans. In contrast to the commercial real estate, energy and agriculture industries that borrow from large banks and thrifts, credit unions' specialty is consumer loans; the average Texas credit union loan is $3,145.

Meanwhile, credit unions are diversifying into other, generally low-risk consumer services. Some 340 credit unions offer Mastercard; 316 offer checking programs. A number of them issue automated teller machine cards for the major national and statewide ATM networks, and most offer direct deposit and payroll deduction.

Don't ignore talent of your workforce

By TOM PETERS

A little contest was begun in the office by the employees. One of the managers walks through the coffee lounge, where the contest rules are displayed on the wall.

When he observes the poster, he does a double take.

"It's a work of art — clever, great lettering, first-rate line drawing. Who authorized the art department to engage in such frivolity? The manager engages in a bit of detective work and discovers that the "artist" is a person he has walked past 100 (or, more likely, 1,000) times in the order-entry department.

His revelation leads him to dig a little deeper. Among the 25 or 20 "clericals" in this part of the office, the manager unearths a weaver whose work has been displayed in a local gallery, the leader of a barbershop quartet that won a state championship two years ago, a skydiver, two deacons in local churches, one city councilman in a nearby small community, a first-rate actress in a local repertory theater group, one Brownie and one Cub Scout troop leader, and a person who has four adopted refugee kids. There's no other conclusion: This is a talented bunch!

The above example is real. It happened to a colleague. And as he should have, he told me the story shamefacedly. Why? Because he had ignored the extraordinary talent of the people around him. Worse yet, he had (inadvertently to be sure) stomped out the creative, albeit indirect, application of that talent to his firm.

He had advanced numerous silly and demeaning rules, each a sign of mistrust and contempt; he had even added to them from time to time. He had snickered openly at the suggestion of a pay-for-knowledge program that would cross-train these people in a dozen jobs. He recalls his response to the suggestion: "A dozen jobs? You've got to be kidding. They can barely do the one they're assigned right now."

At extremely successful Chaparral Steel, president Gordon Forward has achieved unparalleled productivity, by far the best in his industry. His secret is turning every member of the nearly 1,000-person Chaparral team into a valued and value-adding resource.

Here, for instance, he explains the role of the ordinarily lowly night watchmen and guards: "It's really amazing what people do when you let them. ... Normally when you think of security guards at four o'clock in the morning they're doing everything they can just to stay awake. Well, ours also enter data into our computer — order entry, things like that. They put the day's quality results into the computer system each night.

"We upgraded the job and made a very clear decision not to hire some sleepy old guy to sit and stare at the factory gate all night. Our guards are paramedics; they run the ambulance; they fill the fire extinguishers; they do the checks on the plant; now we're even considering some accounting functions."

Or consider stellar Johnsonville Sausage Co. of Sheboygan Falls, Wis., — which has increased its share of the Milwaukee area sausage market from 7 percent to about 50 percent in the last few years — and another steel maker, Worthington Industries of Columbus, Ohio. Hourly workers at each company take extensive economics training — balance sheets, profit and loss statements, order economics.

The firms believe that each person needs to know, is capable of knowing, and will contribute much more if they have access to financial data and ability to manipulate it. Because the companies see unlimited capability in each person they are motivated to offer such training.

And the attitude and the opportunity for training contribute to both firms' shining productivity and profitability.

Similar logic explains why I lost my cool at someone else last week, a finance department member. He complained, in most graphic terms, about having seen workers openly goofing off in part of one of his company's plants.

I heatedly replied, "When you walk into a junior high school classroom and see erasers sailing through the air and trash all over, what do you instinctively think? Rotten kid or rotten teacher or rotten principal?" I said I bet it's the latter two. I then suggested that the analogy holds in the plant and the distribution center as well.

That is, when you see extra-long breaks and numerous signs of physical and psychological disinterest, you should be furious — at yourself and at management. I almost guarantee that your staff consists of a collection of energetic, bright (even if not formally educated) people — who are church, scout and community leaders or artists or beekeepers.

And your/our/management's unwillingness to see that talent, and unwillingness or reluctance to develop it for the firm's use is the real crime.

Why don't you start snooping, and perform a sort of talent study of your own? Then ask yourself, "Can they handle this or that sophisticated training? Can they take on this or that additional responsibility? Can they learn a dozen jobs? Can they contribute fresh ideas daily?"

I wager that your answer will be "yes" this time. I further bet that you will be chagrined at the talent you've wasted so long.

Sales tax collections up — and down

Herald staff report

August one-percent sales tax collections in three Howard County cities were up $9,968 when compared to the same month one year ago — but year-to-date receipts are down $43,534, or 3.52 percent, compared to 1986.

The figures were in the latest report from the state comptroller's office and represent checks paid to cities in October for taxes collected on sales made in August.

Big Spring received an $83,335 share of sales tax receipts this month. Big Spring businesses collected $80,137 in sales taxes during August 1986.

However, year-to-date sales tax collections in Big Spring are lagging behind last year's figures. Payments to the city by October 1986 totaled $1,205,804, compared to $1,162,068 this year.

Forsan was the only Howard County city to show an overall gain in sales tax collections on both a yearly and monthly comparison.

Forsan's August collections increased from $865 in 1986 to $1,373 this year. Year-to-date collections in Forsan have also jumped 18.9 percent, from $11,188 last year to $13,301 this year.

August monthly tax collections in Coahoma also showed an increase when compared to 1986, but like Big Spring, year-to-date collections were down.

Coahoma received a $1,581 check from the state comptroller's in October for August collections. This compares with a $1,317 in October 1986.

Coahoma year-to-date tax collections total $20,190, while 1986 collections at this same time were $22,141.

Stanton, in neighboring Martin County, also received a larger sales tax collection payout in October compared to the same month one year ago. But year-to-date collections also have declined in Stanton.

August sales tax receipts in Stanton totaled $2,696. August 1986 sales tax collections in the city totaled $2,593.

Stanton businesses collected $38,362 in sales taxes during the first eight months of 1987, compared to $48,969 during the same months one year ago. This represents a 21.7 percent decrease.

The Mitchell County cities of Colorado City, Loraine and Westbrook also have experienced decreases.

The convention will bring about 65-75 persons into Big Spring for the three-to-four-day convention in October 1988.

Chamber of Commerce

Leadership Big Spring 1987-88 class will have its third scheduled class session on Tuesday covering the health and welfare aspect of the community.

The Chamber board of directors will meet at noon on Wednesday at Winchester's in a quarterly joint meeting with committee chairmen.

The Leadership Big Spring Alumni Association will conduct its regular quarterly meeting Oct. 27 included will be a discussion of the development of a program — Junior Leadership Big Spring — which will involve high school students from Big Spring, Coahoma and Forsan in a program similar to the Leadership Big Spring program.

The Cultural Affairs Council is sponsoring Costume Bash '87 on Saturday, October 31 at the Big Spring Country Club. Tickets will be $5 per person and are available at the Chamber office and at the door the night of the dance. Everyone is invited. There will be a cash bar, hors d'oeuvres and cash prizes for the best costumes.

The Athletic Committee is still working on the project to have billboards at each of the four main entrances into Big Spring, advertising championship high school athletic teams. Donations are being accepted to fund this project, which the committee hopes to complete before the fall season is over.

The Guy Next Door is store for all ages

"What we sell is a 'look,'" says Tom Guess, owner of The Guy Next Door in Highland Mall, "and it's for men of all ages."

His "look" is fashionable sportswear or "fun clothes." Tom likes to call them. There's a certain sophistication about these clothes that go golfing, fishing, dancing, vacationing or any other fun activity. The man who wears these outfits could be "in his twenties or in his sixties and he'd still look just right," says Tom.

Tom orders his stock in matchables direct from the manufacturer. In other words, slacks, shirts, T's, ties, socks, sweaters are available in coordinated patterns and colors. Tom, his own best advertisement for The Guy Next Door's "look," takes all the problems out of assembling clothes — you'll see them displayed together in the store.

The layered looks shows no sign of waning, Tom says, especially with winter coming on. The days are gone when a man just grabs any old sweater to put on when he goes out. A well-dressed man will wear sweaters that coordinate with his shirt.

Pleated pants are extremely popular, especially with side tabs so you can wear them with suspenders. "One of my customers bought them in every color I had."

Suspenders continue to be a trend, and Tom is expecting a shipment of extra wide 1½" suspenders.

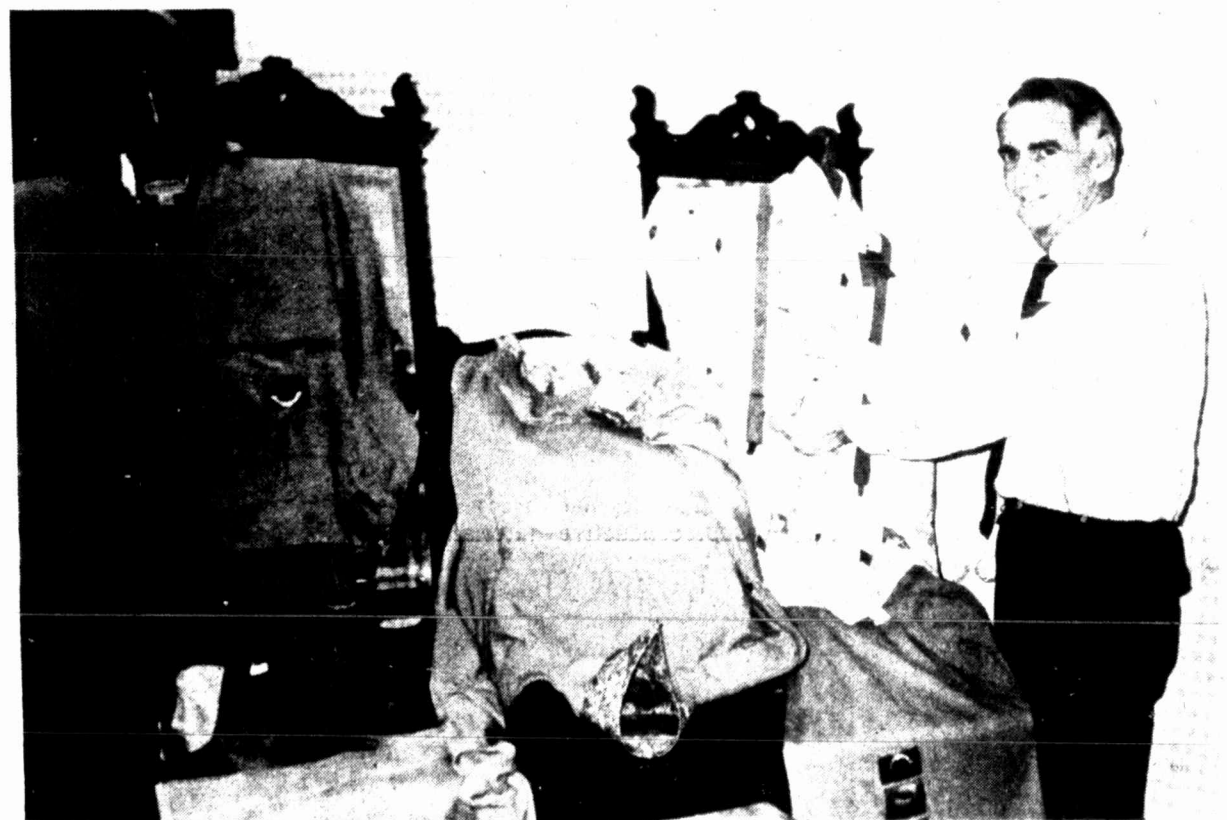

Mickey Mouse ties and boxer shorts have been a very popular item. "If you think this is just a young man's style, you're wrong," said Tom. "One of my 50'ish customers complained that there weren't enough Mickey's on the tie!"

Other popular items are brightly colored long john shirts, knit tops, novelty T's, Rugby shirts, sweats. (Many women have discovered his T's, sweats and long john shirts.)

The store stocks sizes small, medium, large and extra large. Extra-extra large sizes will be available soon.

Tom offers fast personal service on rentals of men's formal wear.

Look for Christmas gift packs for men, coming in soon.

A MAN'S PLACE — Tom Guess, owner of The Guy Next Door in Highland Mall, believes that style and good looks have no age limit. The layered look is still good this fall, as Tom demonstrates in a store display he has assembled.

Wise buy.

Physicist at helm of Austin company's research program

By KATHLEEN SULLIVAN
Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN (AP) — Don't expect Harry Kroger to get excited about the idea of traveling 300 miles an hour in a train that levitates on magnetic fields.

Kroger, director of Austin-based Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp.'s new superconductivity program, prefers the old-fashioned, down-to-earth approach to touring.

"I don't understand why anyone would want to levitate a train," he said with a laugh. "It's never been clear to me why wheels weren't good enough."

Let someone else work on the exotic applications of superconductivity, Kroger has set his sights on what he considers a more attainable goal: teaching superconductors how to behave in computers.

It won't be a straightforward task. The quest is strewn with obstacles.

"It's going to be very difficult to learn to process these materials in a precise, reproducible and manufacturable way," Kroger warns. "But at least we know in principle that it's possible."

In recent months, announcements of breakthroughs in the field of superconductors have stunned scientists around the world.

Long a field marked by slow progress — the technology has been developing for more than 75 years — it has taken off in the past year, fueled by discoveries of materials with novel properties.

Superconductivity is the phenomenon whereby materials, when cooled, lose all resistance to electricity. That means electricity can move through the material at much higher speeds and not lose energy in the form of heat, as normal conductors do.

Although the principle of superconductivity was discovered in 1911, it has taken some time for scientists to understand its marvels.

The Meissner Effect — whereby superconductors repel magnetic fields and cause levitations — was first observed in Germany in 1933. Three American scientists shared a Nobel Prize in physics in 1972 for their work in superconductivity.

But efforts to coax products out of technology have been disappointing.

"Although commercial applications emerged, they failed to live up to the technology's full potential," a recent E.F. Hutton report says. "As a result, superconductivity came to be viewed as a 'pie in the sky' technology, a notion that was reinforced when IBM Corp. temporarily suspended its research effort on superconducting integrated circuits a few years ago."

But in 1986, a pair of IBM scientists in Switzerland jolted the international scientific community with the news that they had discovered a new superconductive material.

Georg Bednorz of West Germany and K. Alex Mueller of Switzerland were rewarded Tuesday with the Nobel prize in physics for their work on superconducting materials.

"When you hear something like that — something you didn't expect — it's very exciting," Kroger said. "What's exciting is that there are many things you don't understand. The speculation as to 'why' is fun. It's fun for physicists to be confounded by Mother Nature."

At first, Kroger couldn't give his blessing to efforts by the Austin-based Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. to start a superconductivity program.

"I was concerned that the hype superconductivity was getting in the popular press could get even sophisticated companies expecting miracles and the possibility that they could make zillions of dollars from the technology," he said.

"Initially, I urged great, great caution because I had high skepticism that these things would have practical utility."

But the forward march of science has won over the 51-year-old Kroger. He points to the results of scientific experimentation around the globe — and to recent computer simulations at MCC — as reasons for his new-found faith.

"In the past four months, I've grown more optimistic that superconductors can be used profitably in some electronic applications," said Kroger, who was doing superconductivity research at Sperry

Corp. before he joined MCC.

Around the world, scientists are plunging into superconductivity research with renewed vigor. E.F. Hutton estimates that more than $1 billion will be spent on worldwide superconductor research in 1988.

In the early days at MCC, Kroger was acting director of its semiconductor packaging-interconnect program.

He was part of a small cast that was responsible for getting the consortium off the ground. Over the past four years, he has watched it grow into a thriving research center employing 450 people.

During his first 18 months at MCC, Kroger spent much of his time as a recruiter. He traveled around the country looking for bright scientists willing to pledge their loyalties to what was then a novel concept in U.S. industry — cooperative research venture.

Once the chip packaging program had a permanent director, Kroger took on other tasks.

He became the group's technical guru. He kept shareholders informed of its technical strides. He was also responsible for directing its discretionary research funds into worthwhile projects.

Was Kroger eager to take the helm of the superconductivity project — the first new program added to MCC's roster since its charter was laid out in 1983?

"Yes and no," he said. "Yes, because it could be fun. I've done a number of high-risk things in my career, and I view this as risky. But I'm a little older now, and I don't need to go on roller coaster rides anymore."

Kroger, whose love of science was encouraged by a grade school teacher, received a doctorate in physics from Cornell University.

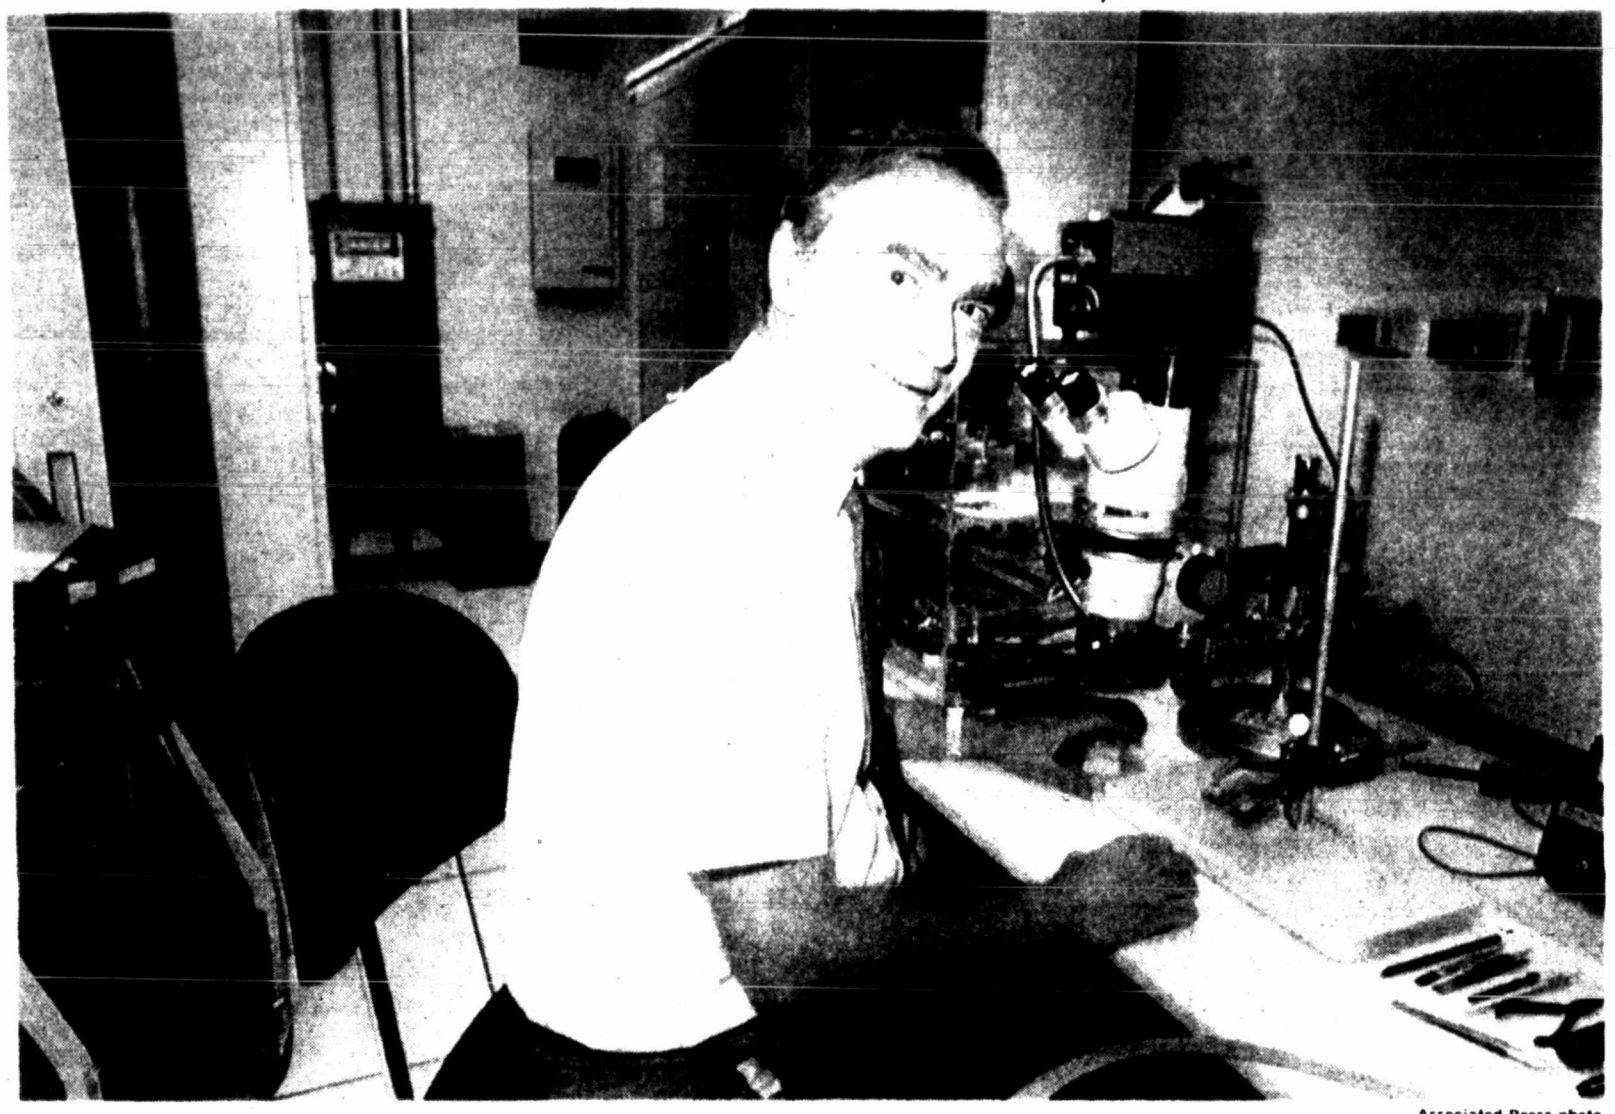

Along the way, he developed an appreciation for doing "tabletop physics" — projects he could understand inside and out.

"I used to look at the Cornell cyclotron — it was a relatively big atom smasher in its time — and all its electronics, and I figured that if something ever broke, I could spend the rest of my life trying to fix it," Kroger said.

That was not an appealing prospect.

"I prefer what people would call tabletop physics, where your experiment is something you've completely designed yourself," he said. "Where you're responsible for everything. Where you have a chance to know all the nooks and crannies of the equipment and the experiment."

Kroger joined Sperry's research center in Massachusetts in 1962, fresh out of graduate school. He stayed on until 1983, when he closed his doors, cutting short his superconductor experiments, which had begun in the mid-1970s.

Harry Kroger, director of Austin-based Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. poses in his lab recently. Kroger was one of a small group responsible for getting MCC off the ground.

Superconductivity

Almost every material resists the flow of electricity through it. The resistance turns the electrons' energy into heat.

Good conductors such as copper have relatively little resistance. A current passing through creates a magnetic field. But some energy is still lost to waste heat.

Scientists have known since 1911 that some materials, called superconductors, lose all resistance when chilled to near absolute zero (-459°F). No energy is lost to heat, a small current will create a strong magnetic field.

The cost of keeping the materials so cold limited the uses of early superconductor discoveries. But recent breakthroughs have found new materials that superconduct at more practical temperatures, and possibly at room temperature.

Telex asks shareholders to defer decision

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Telex Corp. officials asked company shareholders Monday to defer until Oct. 23 their decision concerning an $872 million tender offer from an investor group led by Asher B. Edelman.

Edelman announced Thursday that his investor group would pay $65 a share cash to acquire Telex, a Tulsa-based company that makes computer and electronic communications equipment and audio devices.

Edelman's group already holds about 1.188 million of Telex's 14.6 million common shares outstanding.

Telex Chairman Stephen J. Jatrass said Monday that Telex will send a letter to stockholders asking them to delay making a decision on the offer "until the board has finished its evaluation and has determined whether the offer is in the stockholders' best interest."

Through a partnership called TLX Acquisition Ltd., Edelman's group said it would make the $65 a share tender offer for the Telex shares it did not own. The offer depends on TLX's ability to obtain a majority of outstanding shares and secure financing.

Jatrass said the Telex board will complete its review and contact shareholders by Oct. 23 "to advise them of the board's recommendation with respect to whether they should accept or reject the TLX offer and the reasons therefor."

Jatrass and Telex President

George L. Bragg noted in the statement issued by the company that the offer does not expire until Nov. 6.

Edelman is chairman of two San Antonio computer companies — Datapoint Corp. and Inteltec Trace Inc.

Edelman said Telex would complement Datapoint, a leading supplier of data-processing systems, and Inteltec Trace, a computer service company spun off from Datapoint in 1985. Jatrass and Bragg said Telex's board "will study the offer carefully."

Telex has retained Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. as its financial adviser and Cahill Gordon and Reindel as its legal counsel.

Telex, a 51-year-old company with headquarters offices in Tulsa and Bloomington, Minn., employs more than 8,000 people worldwide and reported annual sales of about $840.7 million last year.

Teacher's tactics criticized

NEW YORK (AP) — Columbia University's decision to void a $100,000 student prize offered by corporate takeover strategist and part-time teacher Asher B. Edelman has won praise from business school officials around the country.

The decision by Columbia Business School Dean John C. Burton to scrap the prize, offered to anyone in Edelman's class who could find him a good company to buy, was sharply criticized by Edelman and some members of the class.

The conflict raised questions about what subjects should be taught in U.S. business schools and the offer "until the board has finished its evaluation and has determined whether the offer is in the stockholders' best interest."

Through a partnership called TLX Acquisition Ltd., Edelman's group said it would make the $65 a share tender offer for the Telex shares it did not own. The offer depends on TLX's ability to obtain a majority of outstanding shares and secure financing.

Jatrass said the Telex board will complete its review and contact shareholders by Oct. 23 "to advise them of the board's recommendation with respect to whether they should accept or reject the TLX offer and the reasons therefor."

Wholesale prices climb 0.3% during September

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices climbed a moderate 0.3 percent in September as higher food prices and increases across a wide range of goods were partially offset by the largest drop in energy costs in a year, the government reported Friday.

The rise in the Labor Department's producer price index followed no change for August.

The increase was in the range considered modest by analysts. In advance of the report, economists had predicted that a sharp rise in the producer price index could trigger further rises in interest rates in already jittery credit markets, and could bring pressure to bear on the Federal Reserve to join in the boosting of interest-rate levels to prevent further rises in inflation.

Deputy White House Press Secretary B. Jay Cooper said, "The report is further evidence that the speedup of inflation earlier this year was temporary."

For the first nine months of 1987, wholesale prices have been increasing at a rate of 3.6 percent, compared to a 2.5 percent drop in prices for all of 1986.

The September rate alone was equivalent to an annual, compounded rate of inflation of 3.7 percent.

After rising 1.5 percent in both July and August, overall energy prices fell 3.7 percent in September, the biggest one-month decline since a similar fall in October 1986.

It is only the second time this year that wholesale energy costs have fallen. The other decline was a 1.1 percent drop in May.

The fall in energy prices was paced by a strong 6.4 percent plunge in gasoline prices, following a 4.2 percent increase the previous month. Heating oil prices dropped 11.4 percent after rising 3.7 percent in August.

Food prices increased 1.1 percent after falling 1.3 percent in the preceding month. Prices rose for fruits and vegetables, pork, beef and veal, while falling slightly for fish and poultry.

The index for goods other than food and energy increased a hefty 0.6 percent, twice the increases in each of the previous months.

Economic policy-makers and financial markets had been eagerly awaiting the figures on wholesale price activity for a sign of whether inflation was again on a serious upswing.

Most analysts, including those in the Reagan administration, had pretty much written off inflation this year as an economic problem. Then came the consumer price index for August, showing an unexpected 0.6 percent jump in prices.

On Thursday, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker said recent fears of resurging inflation are "overblown."

He and other Reagan administration officials said that recent higher interest rates were based on "unjustified" fears in financial markets of higher inflation from fresh falls in the value of the dollar.

Pressure has been building for higher interest rates, both in the United States and in other industrial nations, as major central banks attempt to quell inflation fears with tighter monetary policy.

Nudging rates slightly higher now can help prevent stronger medicine later, according to analysts.

The Labor Department gave these other specifics on September wholesale price activity:

-New automobiles were up 3.6 percent, following a 1.8 percent decline in August.

-Egg prices surged 21.2 percent. Beef and veal were up 1.8 percent. Poultry was down 4 percent.

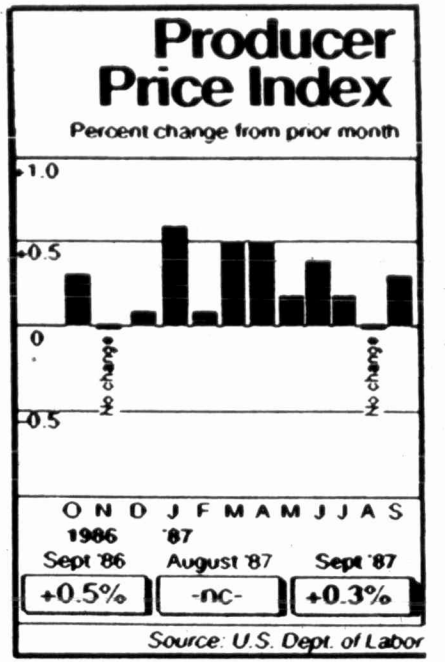

-Natural gas costs rose 0.5 percent after a 2.6 percent fall in August.

-Machinery and other capital equipment rose 0.7 percent after a 0.2 percent increase in August.

The September increase left the producer price index at 296.7, meaning that goods which cost $10 in a 1967 base period cost $29.67 in September.

That compares with a $28.75 pricetag for the same group of products in September 1986.

The index itself, unlike other figures in the monthly report, is not adjusted for seasonal fluctuations.

This business story actually a ballad

WACO (AP) — If business stories could be set to music, the story of Bob Murrell would be a ballad — played on the guttorgan.

The guttorgan? The guttorgan — a guitar that plays organ music.

Murrell, 62, invented the guttorgan in the 1960s, and a business based on his idea was launched.

That business eventually evolved into a company that has no connection with Murrell's instrument, or even music.

Murrell left the business three years ago and began to tinker in his workshop again.

About a year ago, he put his new product on the market — a guitar that plays computer-generated sounds ranging from whistles to, of course, organ tones. He said he doesn't plan to start a company again.

Murrell had a lifelong interest in both electronics and music in the 1960s when, after almost 15 years with Brazos Electric Co-op, he decided to start his own company.

In 1966, after four years of effort, he received his patent for the guttorgan.

His friends thought he would get rich overnight. Murrell was more pessimistic. The guttorgan is a guitar that plays with the tones of an organ tone generator. He accomplished that feat by building the circuits of an electronic keyboard into a standard electric guitar.

Murrell formed Murrell Electronics and in 1970, with a group of investors backing him, Murrell began Musiconics.

But the instrument never reached the mass market Murrell had hoped and it became a specialty instrument.

Advertisement "Just couldn't communicate that the guitar really played organ tones," Murrell said. "It's a tough idea to communicate. If they come in and try it out, they would say, 'Oh, it sounds just like an organ.'"

About 3,000 guttorgans were produced and Musiconics moved into other areas, including steel guitars and medical instruments. The company's name was changed to MCI.

Helena Laboratories of Beaumont bought MCI in 1977. It operated MCI separately until 1985, when the two merged and the name became Helena Laboratories of Waco. Helena now has more than 450 employees in Waco and Beaumont.

Murrell left the company in 1984, and started work on a new product in his home. His current version, the Musiconics MIDI guitar Controller, took about two years to develop. MIDI is an acronym for Music Instrument Digital Interface, the computer language that allows instruments and computers to communicate with each other.

The main component for his instrument is a circuit board that takes about two hours to build. It is inserted inside the body of the guitar and allows it to make scores of different tones mimicking whistling, trumpets and, of course, organs.

He doesn't have a patent on the instrument since he built it with existing technology.

The market response to Murrell's new product after one year has been good, he said. He charged about $1,400 for the MIDI circuit board, including installation.

"It's been all I wanted," he said. "I'm busy, and I don't want to start up another company."

Drill permits constant

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission processed a total of 1,513 drilling applications in September. In August, the total was 1,517.

The September total included 1,110 applications for permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 35 to deepen existing holes, 173 to plugback existing holes, and 46 for service (non-producing) wells. Operators also filed 149 amended drilling applications.

Applications for new oil and gas holes in September included 79 in the San Antonio area (District 1), 58 in the Refugio area (District 2), 104 in Southeast Texas (District 3), 64 in deep South Texas (District 4), 30 in East Central Texas (District 5), 61 in East Texas (District 6), 173 in West Central Texas (District 7B), 66 in the San Angelo area (District 7C), 144 in the Midland area (District 8), 175 in the Lubbock area (District 8A), 126 in North Texas (District 9), and 31 in the Panhandle (District 10).

Drilling report

The No. 1 Blackburn, a 7,700-ft. wildcat well, is scheduled to be drilled in Howard County. Terra Resources of Midland is the operator. The well will be spudded in a 40-acre lease two miles north of Vincent in the H&TC Survey, Sec. 30, Blk. 25.

St. Clair Energy of Midland has revealed plans to drill an 8,100-ft. developmental well in the Vealmoor-Read Field. The operator has 80 acres leased, with drillsite in Howard County's H&TC Survey, Sec. 21, Blk. 25, and has designated the venture as the No. 1 Griffin. Drillsite is five miles southwest of Vincent.

Howard County's Moore Field gained a new producer when Vick & Boyd of Rankin completed the No. 1 C. Ray Russell "A" ten miles northwest of Big Spring. The well indicated ability to pump 20 barrels of oil per day, plus 40 barrels of water. It was taken to a 3,235-ft. bottom, and will produce from perforations in the San Andres Formation, 3,153 to 3,191 feet into the wellbore.

The operation is in a 120-acre lease in the T&P Survey, Sec. 11, Blk. 34.

Union Oil of California, based in Midland, is planning to drill a 9,450-ft. developmental well in the B. C. Field, Howard County. The No. 1 Long will be located five miles north of Big Spring in an 80-acre lease in the T&P Survey, Sec. 12, Blk. 33.

At a location nine miles southwest of Westbrook, Mobil Producing of Midland finalized a new oil producer in Mitchell County's East Iatan Howard Field.

The well is designated as the No. 219 Mary Foster, pumping 61 barrels of oil per day, plus 205 barrels of water. It bottomed at 3,400 feet, and will produce from perforations in the Clear Fork Formation, 2,391 to 3,207 feet into the wellbore. Location is in a 3,840-acre lease in the T&P Survey, Sec. 17, Blk. 29.

Dedica Energy of Mattoon, Illinois, completed two oil producers in the East Iatan Howard Field. The wells are designated as the No. 1 Schattel, located six miles southwest of Westbrook; and the No. 1 Virginia Lotspeich, located one mile south of Iatan, Mitchell County.

The Schattel well pumped 20 barrels of oil per day, plus 15 barrels of water. The Lotspeich well pumped seven barrels of oil daily, along with 150 barrels of water. Production will be from perforations in the Clear Fork Formation, 2,804 to 3,257 feet into the wellbore (Schattel well) and 3,038 to 3,314 feet into the hole (Lotspeich well). Total drilling depths were 3,380 and 3,355 feet, respectively.

The Schattel well is in a 30-acre lease in the T&P Survey, Sec. 12, Blk. 29, while the Lotspeich is in a 40-acre lease.

IRS ISSUES FORMS & EXPLANATIONS

The IRS has published additional explanations of the withholding rules in response to taxpayer confusion over the new Form W-4. The instructions on Form W-4 refer to penalties for claiming an incorrect number of withholding allowances. The IRS states that the $500 penalty will not apply to taxpayers who receive tax refunds in 1988 because of overwithholding. That penalty will apply only where taxpayers deliberately and knowingly falsified Forms W-4 or W-4A in an attempt to eliminate or reduce the proper withholding of taxes.

The IRS also issued instructions to employers on how to withhold for employees who did not file a new W-4 or W-4A by the October 1 deadline. Employers are to make no change in withholding for single employees who previously claimed 0 or 1 allowance or for married individuals who claimed 0, 1 or 2 allowances, or who claimed withholding at the higher single rate. Withholding for single employees whose old W-4 had claimed more than one allowance must be changed to withholding based on one allowance; withholding for married persons whose old W-4 claimed more than two allowances must be changed to provide for withholding based on two exemptions.

Hoping to avoid the kind of unfavorable publicity that it received on its complicated W-4 form, the IRS has released some of the new 1987 tax forms for public preview.

- Among the new forms just out are the following:
 - ★ Form 8582 to determine the amount of passive activity loss you'll be able to deduct in 1987.
 - ★ Form 8598 to compute deductible home mortgage interest on refinancing, second mortgages, and home-equity loans taken since August 16, 1986.
 - ★ Form 8606 to report your nondeductible IRA contributions and to figure the basis (nontaxable part) of your IRA.
 - ★ Form 8615 to be filed by children under the age of 14 who have more than $1,000 of unearned income.
