

Texas voters face lengthy Tuesday ballot

AUSTIN (AP) — Voters head for the polls Tuesday to decide 27 statewide questions, with much of the attention on two propositions that involve racing around in circles.

Voters will decide whether to legalize pari-mutuel wagering on horse and dog races for the first time in 50 years.

They also will vote on selling $500 million in state bonds to help lure the federal government's superconducting supercollider research project — a $5 billion atom-smasher to be housed in a 52-mile circular tunnel.

The ballot includes a total of 25 proposed constitutional amendments, two referendums and a local option.

Its length has stirred controversy over whether the century-old Texas Constitution is up to the job anymore.

"The Texas Constitution needs revision, not constant amendment," said Diane Sheridan, president of the Texas League of Women Voters.

The Constitution was written in 1876, after Reconstruction, and was drafted by people skeptical of government power. Minor details for running government, established by law in many other states, are an integral part of the Texas document.

Since its adoption, 465 amendments have been proposed to the Constitution and 287 ratified, according to the Texas Research League.

Although voters in 1975 overwhelmingly rejected a constitutional overhaul, Sheridan said the continuous amending shows the need for change.

"The league believes it is time to revise the Texas Constitution so it becomes a basic framework of government," she said. "Let us work together to halt this ridiculous system of running the government by means of the Constitution."

Until a new constitution is adopted, the amending goes on. And this year's bumper crop of proposals has raised another concern: deficit financing.

The ballot includes propositions to issue a total of nearly $2 billion in state general obligation bonds for a variety of purposes: $500 million for the supercollider; $500 million for prisons and mental health facilities; $400 million in water projects; $400 million in local public works projects and $125 million for economic development efforts.

Karl Rove, a political consultant working for the supercollider bonds, said the large number of big-dollar bond issues might scare some voters.

"I think that's a very real fear,"

Q & As of the 911 emergency system

Editor's note: This is the second of two articles on the 911 emergency telephone system to be voted on by Howard County residents during the Nov. 3 election.

By BILL FOSTER
Staff Writer

Members of the Howard County emergency telephone system board have drafted a set of questions and answers concerning the proposed 911 system.

The information was prepared in an attempt to educate voters about the system before they cast their ballots in Tuesday's election, according to board Chairman Tim Yeats.

Here's what board members say about the proposed system:

Q: What is the 911 Emergency Communication District?

A: The 911 Emergency Number Act enables Texas counties to organize an Emergency Communication District as a means of establishing and financing a computerized 911 emergency communications system. The new system is designed to improve emergency communications.

Q: What area is included in the district?

A: The Howard district will serve Howard County. All cities and towns, as well as the unincorporated areas will be serviced, whether they are served by Southwestern Bell or not. All phone companies in the district will provide 911 service to their customers.

Q: Who governs each district?

A: Each district appoints a board of managers. Each board has five members with two appointed by the city council, two appointed by the county commissioners and one from a volunteer fire department.

Q: How much will the 911 system cost me?

A: Under the law the district can levy a service fee on the telephone bills of citizens within the county up to a maximum of six percent of your base rate (not including long distance or other charges).

Q: What is enhanced 911?

A: It's a computerized service that automatically routes calls to the appropriate agency. The caller's telephone number, address and type of phone are displayed.

Q: How will enhanced 911 work for me?

A: In an emergency, no matter where you might be, you simply pick up any phone (including a coin operated phone — no coin is required) and dial 911 for help. Your call will automatically go to the responsible jurisdiction.

Q: What if I dial 911 and then can't speak?

A: Even if you cannot speak after dialing the number, the computer screen in front of the 911 attendant will show the phone number from which you called, and

Valuation and demand boost cotton

LAMESA (AP) — A devalued dollar, improved exports and increased domestic demand have doubled the price of cotton in just a year, and that's only part of the good news in West Texas.

The disastrous 1986 weather left many farmers no choice but to plow over their fields, and farmers had to replant after heavy June rains wiped out an early crop. But the weather has been near-perfect since and harvest time has growers in tall cotton.

"There's really a dramatic story with the cotton industry in Texas this year," said Bill Gruben, senior economist with the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas. "Prices are up, yes. But there's also the risk the Southern High Plains farmers took this year, replanting in June and risking bad weather later."

Production in the prime cotton region is expected to approach last year's statewide total.

"Production-wise, this is probably the best crop I've had in five years," said Val Stephens, whose family farms near Lamesa. "Price-wise, it's the best since 1978. And it gets a West Texas farmer excited to see prices and production up like this."

Statewide, cotton production this year is projected at 3.9 million bales, up 54 percent from the 2.5 million in 1986, according to the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service in Austin. U.S. cotton production is projected to increase 38 percent to 13.1 million bales.

Yield per acre in Texas is estimated at a record 440 pounds, growing by about 25 percent from last year's 33 pounds per acre.

Merchants in Lamesa say they were already seeing the economic effects of an improved harvest, even before the crop was in. City sales tax receipts are up and the sales of farm implements has increased.

Norman Stewart, president of the First National Bank of Lamesa, said that for the first time since 1979, he is projecting an increase in agricultural lending for next year.

A number of complex market changes caused a surge in the price of cotton.

Victim Services will now provide shelter

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Rape Crisis/Victim Services will expand to include temporary shelter for crime victims, Executive Director Cecilia McKenzie said today.

The Big Spring center, which serves Howard, Martin, Borden and Glasscock counties, received a $48,514 Victims of Crime Act grant from the governor's criminal justice division to provide the shelter, McKenzie said.

The grant marks the second consecutive year that the center has received its funding requests, she said.

The crisis center received a $28,000 grant in 1986 to begin "Victim Services," and Assistant Director Lisa Brooks was hired to inform victims of their rights — which include the opportunity to apply for compensation from the Texas Crime Victims Compensation Fund.

The governor's office this year received more than $3 million in grant requests for $1.3 million in available funds, McKenzie said.

Crisis centers could not apply for more than $50,000 each, she added.

"The grant will expand services to provide shelter for victims — not just domestic violence victims," she said, explaining that the service also will provide shelter for sexual assault and violent crime victims.

McKenzie said she has a Big Spring facility in mind for a shelter — the address of which won't be disclosed for security reasons.

"My target date is Dec. 1 (for opening the shelter), but that may be optimistic," she said.

She estimated that as many as 12 persons could be housed at one time in the shelter for 30-day periods, after which each case will be reviewed. McKenzie speculated that crime victims could be authorized to stay at the shelter as many as 120 days.

Both males and females will be eligible for temporary shelter, but won't be housed in the same location, McKenzie said.

Two full-time employees are expected to be hired today as shelter director and night-time staff member.

The shelter will be staffed 24 hours a day, and volunteers may be sought to assist with the shelter's operations, she said.

City studying suit defense

By BILL FOSTER
Staff Writer

Big Spring officials are trying to determine whose responsibility it will be to defend the city against a $2.5 million lawsuit filed by a former police officer.

The city's insurance contract with the Texas Municipal League is being evaluated to determine if the company is obligated to defend the city against the suit, City Attorney Hardy Wilkerson said this morning.

Jeanette C. Holley filed the suit at Bexar County District Court in San Antonio on Oct. 22. Holley's attorney Thad Harkins alleges in the lawsuit that Holley was wrongfully denied employment at a U.S. marshal because of actions taken by the City in 1986. Former city managers Doyle Curtis and Don Davis, former Police Chief Rick Turner and Police Captain Lonnie Smith are named as defendants.

The suit seeks $500,000 in general and actual damages, $500,000 in special damages, exemplary damages of $1 million and attorney fees of $500,000. Holley began work for the police department June 1, 1984, and was forced to resign in November of that year "due to the concerted efforts by certain officials of the city and the police department ..." the suit states.

Wilkerson said he had no comment when asked if Holley and the city reached an agreement to allow her to resign because of personal reasons in return for the removal of a reference to forced or involuntary termination from her personnel records, as alleged in the lawsuit petition.

City council will meet 5 p.m. Tuesday at city hall to discuss the lawsuit in closed session.

If it is determined that the city's insurance company is not obligated by contract to defend the city against the lawsuit, then council members will be responsible for selecting a legal representative, according to Wilkerson.

"The council will determine who is responsible for representing the city ... whether it be the insurance company, myself or independent counsel," he said. Meanwhile, Wilkerson said he was still evaluating the case to determine what the city's legal response should be and "when and if" a response should be made.

Rove said. "We've got 25 constitutional amendments and two ballot propositions. Voter confusion is going to be high."

Probably the most attention has centered on pari-mutuel wagering. Backers championed horse and dog racing as a much-needed economic boost for the state.

The Texas Horse Racing Association said 11,000 new jobs would be created. Backers said pari-mutuel racing would mean more tourism and higher tax collections, plus a boost for Texas agriculture.

"By voting 'yes' for pari-mutuel horse racing on Nov. 3, Texans will be creating a multibillion-dollar industry that will initiate explosive economic opportunity, not only for the farm and horse community, but also for a variety of industries across the board," according to Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, sponsor of the pari-mutuel referendum legislation.

Opponents argue that race track gambling isn't an economic plus, would create compulsive gamblers, could lure organized crime and wouldn't generate substantial tax revenues.

"It's a dying business that raises almost no money for the state," said Sue Cox, of the anti-gambling Texans Who Care. "People who care about animals, the cleanliness of the racing industry and the integrity of our state should vote no to pari-mutuel gambling." A recent poll for The Dallas Morning News and Houston Chronicle showed 56 percent of respondents favored legalized gambling and 37 percent opposed.

But University of Houston political scientist Richard Murray, who directed the poll, said a low turnout could make the outcome difficult to predict. "If I were betting, I would bet it would pass, but you lose bets sometimes," he said.

Also being decided Tuesday are local-option pari-mutuel elections in 58 counties. If the statewide referendum passes, a local-option election still is needed before gambling can begin in a county.

Voters who have paid attention to their televisions have seen commercials plugging two other issues — the supercollider bonds and a referendum on the future of the State Board of Education.

With Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot doing much of the talking, backers of the appointed State Board of Education urged voters to reject the plan to change the board to an elected body.

When the Legislature in 1984 passed House Bill 72, the sweeping school reform law pushed by the Perot-headed Select Committee on Public Education, it abolished the old, elected board. That panel was replaced by 15 people appointed by the governor.

But there was a catch: the law called for the board to revert to an elected group in 1988. Time's almost up, but Perot and others say changing back now could jeopardize the reforms that have won Texas national acclaim.

"The futures of our children cannot be relegated to partisan politics and to special interest groups hovering around this pile of money (education aid)," Perot said.

Opponents — including the state's largest teacher groups — said the Legislature promised elections again. Opponents also argued that the public, not politicians, should choose board members.

"An elected board would be more accountable to our type of people," said Sandy Kibby, legislative chairwoman of the Texas PTA.

The supercollider bonds involve a project that's hard for many people to comprehend but that backers say is vital to putting Texas at the forefront of scientific research.

The atom-smasher would be used in high-energy physics. Many states are vying in a fierce national competition conducted by the U.S. Department of Energy. The winning state will be the recipient of several thousand new jobs, boosters of the project say.

"Everyone must understand that if Proposition 19 fails, we probably will not get the project, that the project will actually hinge on the passage of Proposition 19," Gov. Bill Clements said.

Opponents, including the Libertarian Party, said the bond sale would put Texas in debt on behalf of a special interest. Calling it a "super-boondoggle," Libertarian Party secretary Gary Johnson said, "Special interests, government contractors, and the usual wheeler-dealers will get the benefits. We the taxpayers will bear the costs."

Tucked into the lengthy list of constitutional amendments are eight propositions — of which the supercollider bonds is one — dubbing the "Build Texas" plan.

Some of those proposals would authorize state bond sales for correction facilities, mental health/mental retardation projects, local public facilities, small businesses, new products, agricultural businesses and water projects.

Others would make it easier to build toll roads, exempt some personal property from local taxes if in transit for manufacturing purposes, and let the Legislature loan or grant money for economic development.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a Build Texas author, sounded a warning to his supporters: beware of voter apathy.

"This is an off-year election," Hobby warned. "We are battling apathy. We don't know how many (people) will vote, and a low turnout is traditionally a negative one."

On getting goats to keel over

An ailment in some goats is called myotonia. It shorts out their nervous systems so they stiffen up when startled, lose consciousness, and keel over.

A low-flying plane can flatten them. So can horn honking, hand clapping and yelling. A string of firecrackers can knock over a whole herd.

Q. Why is the liver called that?
A. Experts of long ago thought it was what made blood, the organ that kept you alive.

The banister is not the handrail, but the uprights that support the handrail, technically. So nobody ever really slid down a banister. Our Language man says, "Phooey, common usage makes ... And so on."

Last time there was a February 30 was in 11 B.C.

GOING BAREFOOT
Q. You quoted a doctor as saying that going barefoot improves the eyesight. Why?
A. Wasn't a doctor, it was a woodsman. He said it forces you to watch where you put your feet down. Frontier Indians were the best trackers, he claimed, because they'd learned from babyhood to look at the ground when they walked, and they'd never outgrown the habit by wearing hard-soled shoes.

When feeling romantic, all the male humpback whales sing to the females of the species. Our Love and War man is not into whales. He does not know how a female whale knows which male she prefers. Because all the males — almost like beach boys — sing the same song in any given year.

It's reported that Gary Eugene Duda petitioned a court in DeKalb, Ga., to allow him to change his name to "G. Zippidy Duda." Mad a good nickname throughout his youth, he said, so why not keep it?

If people could do what come naturally, says one sleep researcher, most of them would take two naps a day.

Roman orator and author Cicero was a fulltime government bureaucrat. Historians say he wrote his essays, poetry and letter after hours. I don't believe those historians know how it really works.

What? You don't buy the claim that cotton is heavier than water? Such be the claim.

Sheriff's log

Herald staff report
Several Howard County residents reported thefts to sheriff's officials during the Halloween weekend and a woman reported being bitten by a dog.

• Marvin Watson, Route 3 Box 104, reported Friday that two gold rings containing diamonds were noticed missing from his residence since July 30. The rings are valued at $1,900.

• L.E. Clawson, Eubanks Road, reported that a videocassette recorder was stolen from his home Sunday between 11 a.m. and 3:45 p.m. No value of the item was listed.

• Yolanda Halario, a clerk at Lee's Store on West Interstate 20, reported the theft of $22.75 worth of gasoline.

• Barbara Smallwood, Wasson Road, reported Sunday that she was bitten on the left ankle by a dog at the intersection of Midland and Terry streets. The dog was apprehended by animal control personnel to be quarantined for 10 days, but Sheriff A.N. Standard reported today that the dog had received rabies shots.

• Abram L. Giesbrecht, 31, Rankin, was released on a $1,000 bond Sunday after a 4:54 p.m. arrest on U.S. Highway 87 on charges of driving while intoxicated.

• Douglas Wayne Paul, 23, and Ernest Lee Paul, 18, both of Route 1 Box 377, were arrested at 1:05 a.m. today on charges of possession of marijuana under 2 ounces and public intoxication. Each was released on bonds totaling $700.

• Louis B. Evans, 34, Midland, was released on bonds totaling $1,600 Sunday after an arrest on Department of Public Safety traffic warrants and a DWI warrant.

Colorado City banquet planned

The Colorado City Classroom Teachers Association will host its second annual Fall Teacher Banquet on Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in the Colorado Middle School Cafeteria.

Keynote speaker will be Rev. Jerry Kunkel of Amarillo, an ordained Methodist minister who is involved in full-time motivational speaking.

Special guests at the banquet will be Wendell Wittenburg from Sweetwater, State CTA president;

Linda Montgomery from Sweetwater, State CTA director, and Francine Allen from Snyder, State CTA director.

Entertainment for the banquet will be the fourth act from "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running" by Robert Anderson which will be performed by Carl and Marsha Moore.

Cost of tickets is $7.50 for the public and $5 for CTA members and their spouses. Call Debbie Blair at 728-3424 for ticket information.

Police beat

Gun pulled during Sunday incident

A 35-year-old Big Spring man told police that a man pulled a gun on him and caused an estimated $432 worth of damage to radio equipment inside his jeep late Sunday.

The incident occurred at 7:18 p.m. Sunday at 206 Northwest Fourth St., according to police reports.

• Nita V. Boyd of 1303 Runnels St. reported that someone entered her home and stole $68 worth of cash and coins, a billfold and a cosmetic bag.

• Two air conditioning and heating units were reported stolen from the Desert Sands Motel, 2900 West Highway 80. The units were valued at $600.

• Dorothy Henry of 1904 Alabama St. told police someone entered her home and stole four rings and a watch valued at $600.

• Mary Jane White of 507 North Lemasa St. reported that someone damaged a tire on her car. Damage was estimated at $275.

Big Spring police also made eight arrests over the weekend.

• Andy Juarez, 28 of 1010 Northwest Second St. was arrested on charges of public intoxication and disorderly conduct. He was also cited for not having automobile liability insurance, displaying an expired license plate, and failure to display a driver's license.

• Larry Don Martin, 27 of 805 North Scurry St. was arrested on a charge of DWLS. He was transferred to the Howard County Jail and released on $500 bond.

• Louis Butler Evans, 34 of 2608 Langley St. was arrested on a charge of DWI and not having automobile liability insurance.

• James Edward Puga, 48 of 1604 Owens St. was arrested on a charge of DWI. Puga was transferred to the Howard County Jail and released on $500 bond.

• William Horce Carter, 32, and Ronda Joyce Newsom, 24, both of 2504 East 24th St. were arrested on suspicion of possession of marijuana under two ounces.

• Theodore Rios, 17 of 3208 West Eighth St. was arrested on suspicion of possession of drug paraphernalia.

• Richard David Lopez, 35 of Armarrillo was arrested on a charge of DWI.

Firefighters plan Tuesday meeting

Howard County Firefighters Association will hold a regular monthly meeting 7 p.m. Tuesday in the county court room on the second floor of the courthouse.

The meeting is open to all county volunteer firefighters and any other interested persons.

A representative of MidAmerica Pipeline will speak about pipeline emergencies.

Volunteer firefighters will also conduct an oil and gas fire control training session at the Big Spring refinery beginning 1 p.m. Saturday. Fina Oil and Chemical personnel will serve as instructors for the session.

Members of the Big Spring Fire Department will also be present to assist with training volunteers. Big Lake and Greenwood Volunteer fire departments are also sending firefighters for training.

CRMWD plans lower budget

For the second consecutive year, the 1988 budget of the Colorado River Municipal Water District will be less than the previous year.

The total outlay of $12,572,228 adopted by the directors at a meeting Wednesday morning at the Stacy reservoir project is one percent less than the 1987 budget, which will be substantially under-run, according to information provided by CRMWD.

While debt service costs will be up 7.56 per cent due to $440,000 increase in principal payments on the 1984 bonds, operational expenses will be $386,998 less than budgeted this year, officials said. Electric power costs will be 11.59 per cent or $503,405 less than budgeted for this year. This will offset a gain of $313,475 in payroll and employee benefit expense, or 17.76 per cent. While a portion of this gain was due to modest raises, the bulk was in additional personnel occasioned by the Stacy project, secretary/treasurer Joe Pickle reported.

Although the budget for 1988 will be lower, it still contains $1,054,150 for future water supply projects.

While water rates to support the budget are not fixed until the January meeting, indications are that there will be no substantial movement in the rate structure at that time.

Budget highlights included $6,545,344 (down $386,998) operating expenditures; debt service $4,024,038 (up $282,801); bond coverage $948,761 (up $28,518).

the address, so help can be sent even without voice contact.

Q: Can children or the deaf and hearing impaired people get help through 911?
A: Yes. Children can easily dial 911 and get help, even though they may not know their location. Calls coming from handicapped citizens with TTYTDD equipment can be received.

Q: Is using 911 faster than dialing the operator?
A: Yes. If you dial "0" for operator, you may get an operator who is not even in the area. That operator then has to determine which is the responsible agency for your emergency and then dial a seven-digit number for you. A call to the operator cannot be identified as an emergency and may ring many times before being answered.

Q: Will response time be shortened with 911?
A: Yes. With the enhanced 911 number, the time required to get an emergency call completed to the proper agency is significantly shortened. With enhanced 911 a person simply dials that one number for all emergencies and calls are automatically routed to the proper agency. When number and address information is flashed on the computer screen the attendant answering the call can dispatch an emergency vehicle, even if the person placing the call cannot speak or be understood.

Currently, addresses must be communicated and written down by hand, which slows the response time significantly.

Q: People say the 911 system saves lives. How does enhanced 911 save lives?
A: In an emergency, seconds count. Any time saved in getting help to you in an emergency may save your life.

Q: Is there a great need for 911 and its benefits?
A: Yes. In emergency situations, people are often confused, in shock, panicked, under stress. They are not functioning at their best and do not always think clearly. With 911, you simply dial 911 for any emergency anywhere in the county and the emergency system is activated on your behalf.

Q: What will happen when I use this emergency system?
A: The 911 number is dialed. The call is immediately identified as an emergency because number 911 was used. The phone rings at the answering point and an attendant trained in handling emergency calls answers the line. The attendant determines the type of emergency and either dispatches help directly or, with the push of a button, establishes a three-way call between the caller, the attendant and the proper emergency agency. The emergency agency dispatches assistance to the caller's location. Help is on the way.

Residents return home after scare

TEXAS CITY (AP) — Authorities advised continued caution as thousands of residents returned to homes evacuated after an industrial accident released a toxic cloud.

The 48-hour evacuation of about 3,000 people living near the Marathon Petroleum Co. plant was ended Sunday night by Mayor Emmett Lowry, who told residents at an emergency center they were free to go home.

Police advised residents the danger was not fully past.

"They can go home if they want to," said a police dispatcher, who refused to give his name. "As to us giving us the all-clear, it has not been given."

The evacuation was ordered Friday after a crane accidentally dropped its load, rupturing pipes leading into a hydrofluoric acid storage tank. When the acid came into contact with air, it vaporized, sending a toxic cloud skyward, said Marathon spokesman Bill Ryder.

Emergency crews sprayed the cloud down with water, shut off pressure to the tank and began working to drain it of its remaining chemicals, Ryder said. The tank was emptied by 9:40 p.m. Sunday, he said.

"We gave them (city officials) our input, and we told them we're not working to get that last bit out of there and they made the decision that it was safe to go back," said Ryder.

Progress of the cleanup operation was slow due to the delicate nature of the task, and numerous safety precautions.

"It is time consuming and with the precautions we are intent upon taking, it's a slow thing," Ryder said. "It's the amount of product. It's hard to move and the temperatures are causing us problems."

Ryder said pipes draining the chemical needed to remain chilled, posing a tricky problem.

During the weekend, about 520 people sought treatment for breathing difficulties and skin and eye irritation at AMI-Danforth Hospital, said spokeswoman Beverly Boase. Most were considered minor injuries.

Of the more than 100 admitted for treatment, only 31 remained in the hospital as of late Sunday, and all were in stable condition, she said.

Hydrofluoric acid, strong enough to etch glass, is used in the refinery as a catalyst to speed up separation of hydrocarbons into lighter products, such as benzene.

Across town from the refinery, an elementary school was opened up for evacuees who did not have friends or relatives to stay with. A few hundred people stayed at the shelter, officials said.

Norwegian firm has contracts with Kelly

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Norwegian company accused of selling the Soviets equipment to make submarines run quieter has multimillion-dollar contracts with Kelly Air Force Base, the San Antonio Light reported Sunday.

Kelly officials told the newspaper they had contracts worth $13.2 million with a division of Kongsberg Vapentabrik to manufacture turbine parts for the sophisticated F100 engine, used in the F-15 and F-16 fighter jets.

Kongsberg was accused by the Defense Department of a gross security breach after it was disclosed this summer that Kongsberg and Toshiba shipped $17 million worth of computer-controlled milling equipment to the Baltic Shipyard.

The equipment will allow the Soviets to make quieter submarine propellers so they can elude detection by U.S. forces, officials say.

Kelly officials defended their contracts, which were awarded in San Antonio 'high-threat area'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Federal officials say a growing high-technology sector and large military presence make businesses here attractive targets for espionage.

"This is a real high-threat area," Michael T. Lappe, assistant special agent-in-charge of the U.S. Customs Service office in San Antonio, said.

He added that foreign governments appear to be targeting San Antonio to purchase military spare parts, acquire high technology and gather intelligence.

The Customs Service is probing whether some area companies have bought Air Force surplus spare parts and shipped them to countries such as Iran, Nicaragua and Cuba, said Lappe.

The investigation is part of Project Exodus, a national program intended to stem the flow of high-technology with potential military applications to unfriendly countries.

Federal customs officials are also trying to halt the tide of surplus parts through front companies that conceal the ultimate destination of parts.

"Once you get away from the military, your record-keeping statistics break down," one customs investigator told the San Antonio Light. "It's easier to manipulate."

1981, saying that the division they dealt with, Norsk Jet Air Motors, was not involved in the submarine transfer issue," Kelly spokeswoman Phebe Brown said.

Norsk was sold by the parent company in September and is no longer connected with Kongsberg, she said.

The Defense Department has banned any future contracts with Kongsberg or any of its subsidiaries.

"That ban would apply to any future Kelly contracts even if the Norsk division was sold, a Pentagon official says.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said the relationship between Norsk and Kongsberg still is being explored. However, the current contracts will not be canceled, the official said.

Officials say the fact that a foreign defense contractor was making money from both the Soviets and the United States points to the extreme difficulty in keeping Western weapons and technology out of the hands of the Soviets and their allies.

S&Ls hope for three-year recovery

DALLAS (AP) — A majority of chief executives from Texas savings and loans institutions say it will take at least three years for thrifts to return to satisfactory levels of profitability and net worth, a survey shows.

More than 80 percent of thrift executives made the assessment to the Dallas Morning News in a survey of S&L leaders. Many blamed a grim economy for their problems.

In the survey results, published today, almost 60 percent admitted that the reputation of their industry had been severely damaged.

About the same number say the recently approved three-year, $10.8 billion bailout of the S&L insurance fund will be inadequate to clean up after failed thrifts around the nation.

"I wouldn't even want to begin trying to come up with a dollar amount," the chief of one Dallas S&L that is struggling but still relatively healthy told the newspaper. "It's indeterminate. I don't think there's enough money to do the job."

Statewide, more than one-quarter of S&Ls are insolvent, officials say, and Texas thrifts as a group have a negative net worth.

Some large cases of alleged fraud and mismanagement caused the Justice Department to launch what it called the largest banking fraud investigation ever.

The newspaper's research department conducted a telephone poll from Oct. 7 to Oct. 19, contacting each of the 281 thrifts listed in the 1987 Texas Savings & Loan Directory.

Those responding were promised confidentiality. Chief executives from 206, or 73 percent, of the institutions responded, and another 15 thrifts refused.

Thrifts' single biggest problem, in the view of CEOs, was the Texas economy. When asked to name major factors that created the S&L industry's crisis, 52 percent mentioned general economic conditions and 35 percent answered industry deregulation of interest rates and types of lending.

Another 30 percent listed the oil market collapse, 28 percent said the real estate slump, 17 percent blamed poor management and 13 percent cited developers coming into the S&L business.

Also, 11 percent mentioned insider abuse and 10 percent cited fraud. The total exceeds 100 percent because most mentioned more than one factor.

Controversy engulfing betting spot

FORT WORTH (AP) — Complaints about use of a controversial anti-gambling commercial showing greyhounds killing a rabbit claim that its makers have made their point only too clear.

Officials said the advertising's use will be scaled back. The television commercial contends that approving pari-mutuel betting would encourage animal cruelty. It has been the focus of the anti-gambling campaign of Texans Who Care.

On Tuesday, Texas voters will decide whether to legalize pari-mutuel gambling on horse and dog racing.

Dick Sanford, political director of Texans Who Care, said a new commercial which contends that racing is a flagging industry will run in one-third of the spots purchased by the betting opponents between now and the election.

"It's on a rotation of two of the animal abuse (commercials) and one on the dying industry," said Sanford.

"Some folks felt the economic one might cover some people that the animal abuse one would not reach. It was kind of a judgment call," said Sanford.

He said the decision was made several days ago and wasn't related to complaints about the greyhound spot.

The ad, showing two greyhounds chasing and killing a rabbit, was filmed in 1978 by ABC-TV "20/20" producer Charles Thompson. Thompson said last week that the film depicted a national coursing event in Kansas and it was a distortion to say it represented greyhound training.

Nation's oil rig count jumps by one

HOUSTON (AP) — The number of oil and gas drilling rigs working in the United States last week rose by one to total 1,131, Baker Hughes announced.

The rig count was down by four the previous week to 1,130, Baker Hughes said Monday. A year ago, the count totaled 860.

Baker Hughes' count reflects the number of rigs working as of last Friday. The Houston-based oil toolmaker tallies the number of rigs actively exploring for oil, and not rigs producing oil.

The rig count is considered to be the yardstick of drilling activity, and Baker Hughes officials have said they expect the total to top 1,200 by December.

Last summer, the rig count fell to 663 — the lowest since Hughes began compiling figures — as oil prices plunged to less than $10 per 42-gallon barrel.

In December 1981, the height of the oil boom, the count reached a peak with 4,500 active rigs.

Among some of the major oil producing states, Kansas had an increase of seven; Oklahoma, four; Pennsylvania, three; and Colorado and Louisiana up one each.

Wyoming's count fell by four, Texas and Michigan both slipped by two and California's count fell by one.

Hughes Tool Co., which merged this year with Baker International Corp. of Orange, Calif., has kept track of the number of working rigs since 1940.

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinions from around the state.

Says appoint education board

For the education of the schoolchildren of Texas, we must select not only the best and the brightest as teachers, but we also must select the best and brightest to be those who make the policies for operation of our state school system.

That is why we must retain the State Board of Education as an appointive board, rather than as an elected one.

There is clear evidence that the poor management of many of the state's school districts has been eroded because we now have a state school board composed of highly qualified community leaders, rather than politicians.

We cannot return to the shoddy political and unresponsive operation we had before an appointive board.

We have nothing more at stake than the future of well-educated Texans.

San Antonio Light

Opposes pari-mutuel wagering

The proponents of pari-mutuel betting on horse races paint a picture of handsome animals pouncing around the track. They ignore the dangerous illusion of easy money and the crimes that too often accompany the racing crowd.

When Texans go to the polls on Nov. 3 to vote on referendum Proposition 2, which would legalize pari-mutuel wagering on horse and dog races, we hope they will look beyond the romance of the track to the ugly implications of legalized gambling.

The Texas Legislature put the pari-mutuel gambling plan on the ballot because its members were tempted by visions of race revenue to help balance the state budget. After the racing business was firmly established, it was argued, the state might get $100 million a year out of the betting public.

But that is only a fraction of the state's revenue needs, and much of the gambling money would be needed to pay for the higher police and welfare costs related to racing.

We urge a "no" vote on Proposition 2.

Dallas Times Herald

U.S. should have say in oil spills

Not to worry, the Mexican government oil monopoly is telling Texans: The steadily growing oil slick from a runaway well in the Bay of Campeche poses no threat to the Texas coast.

Given the bitter Ixtoc experience, which resulted in Texas' beaches being marred by oil for literally weeks on end, and given the fact that Pemex statements in the past haven't always been unswervingly reliable, Texans may perhaps be forgiven if they keep a watchful eye on developments.

What's more, the latest word from the U.S. Coast Guard was not exactly reassuring.

Should Pemex fail to live up to its claim that it will have the well capped by Nov. 4 or 5, the U.S. government should insist that it be given a role in the continuing effort to keep this from becoming another major ecological disaster.

Corpus Christi Caller-Times

Defends media coverage of Jessica

Invariably, whenever personal dramas unfold in the newspapers, objections are raised over the loss of personal privacy for those involved. The ordeal of the family of 18-month-old Jessica McClure and the breast cancer surgery undergone by Nancy Reagan are the latest examples.

Journalists always risk lapsing into sensationalism in covering these stories, but most such reporting today is fair and evenhanded, and it results in far more good than harm.

Consider: The stock market took a nosedive, the war heated up in the Persian Gulf and countless sordid events occurred last week, but Jessica reminded us of what is important. The little girl, her family, and the heroic people who rescued her gave us the blessings of compassion, community, selflessness and love.

In a similar way, public concern for Mrs. Reagan's health has meaning beyond the First Lady herself. People can relate to her composure in undergoing the surgery and can hold her hand in spirit as she recovers. They also can learn from her experience and take strength from her strength.

Bryan-College Station Eagle

Both sides to blame in Bork bumble

The U.S. Senate, as expected, finally rejected President Reagan's nomination of Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court by a 58-42 margin. Now that it's all over, neither side should take any pleasure in this unfortunate episode.

If President Reagan had nominated a "mainstream" conservative with a good judicial record and no personal flaws, the nominee probably would have sailed through the Senate. Instead, Reagan opted for the truculent Bork, a man with a questionable role in the Watergate scandal and a history of saying and writing bizarre things about the Constitution and recent case law.

But even though Robert Bork may have been a tad more conservative than some senators liked, that was no reason for them to deny his confirmation — and essentially that is the reason Bork was defeated.

The Constitution and modern tradition basically hold that a president should be allowed to nominate Supreme Court justices who share his judicial and political views.

All we can hope now is that President Reagan will find a nominee who adheres to his conservative views and yet is more acceptable to the Senate.

Nuclear commission keeps investigators on short leash

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is supposed to keep a tight leash on the nuclear power industry to prevent safety lapses and corner-cutting that could lead to a Chernobyl-style disaster. Instead, the agency's industry-friendly commissioners have been keeping a tight leash on their own investigative bloodhounds.

In the process, the five commissioners have said one thing in public and another thing in private. They promised Sen. John Breaux, D-La., and Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., at a recent hearing that they would never, never do anything to block or interfere with the work of the NRC's Office of Investigations. The office and its 34 investigators are independent, they assured the senators.

Behind closed doors, however, it was a different story. Our associate Stewart Harris obtained a transcript of the commissioners' private meeting last July 29. There, they suggested that the agency investigators should be "team players," not independent diggers who might make trouble for the NRC and the industry. Ben Hayes, head of the Office of Investigations, had requested the executive session in hopes of clarifying the situation, in which his investigators feel they are being hampered by the commissioners and the NRC administrative staff.

Hayes told the commissioners that his power to initiate investigations was meaningless as long as the commissioners retain the power to cut off the investigations at any time. And that is precisely the power the commissioners intend to hold onto, as Commissioner Aldo Zech made perfectly clear. "Certainly, you have something to do with helping us determine whether we should proceed," he told Hayes, "but to say that you (have) the primary standing, really, I don't think is correct."

Victor Stello, NRC staff director, chimed in with an assertion that the commissioners are the final arbiters when the agency staff opposes a probe by the Office of Investigations. "If ever there is a contest — and I don't expect that it ought to be very often at all — have a short paper come up to the commission and you decide it," he said to his bosses. "That sounds fine to me," said Zech. "I don't see anything wrong with that."

Hayes and his deputy director, Roger Fortuna, saw plenty wrong with it. Hayes explained that without the power to continue an investigation, he lives in constant danger of having the rug pulled out from under him by the commissioners. "That has a hell of a chilling effect," Fortuna told the commissioners.

Jack Anderson

Commissioner Kenneth Carr, a firm opponent of an independent investigative office, was plainly offended by Hayes' request that he be allowed to operate without interference from the front office.

"It boils down to if Ben wants to be a team player, we'd like to know where you play on the team, Ben," Carr said. "Are you going to be an individual, or are you going to be the coach?"

The struggle over investigative independence has been going on for several years. During that time, the commissioners tried to put their own candidates on the investigative staff, prompting suspicions that they were actually planting spies in the office.

The commissioners also set up a review board to screen tips before they were given to the Office of Investigations. When Hayes tried to circumvent the board, commissioner Thomas Roberts threatened to fire him. The board was dissolved after six stormy months.

The Office of Investigations would win its long-sought independence under one provision of legislation proposed by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, setting up an inspector general for the NRC.

But Breaux and Simpson claim Glenn is invading their legislative turf, and he may have to leave the Office of Investigations under the control of the commission to get his bill through. That means the NRC commissioners would still be able to clamp down any incendiary tendencies of the agency's investigators.

WHO'LL RUN THE CANAL? — In the prolonged and heated battle over the Panama Canal treaty during the Carter administration, conservative treaty opponents argued, among other things, that the Panamanians would never be able to run the busy waterway efficiently when it is turned over to them in 1999.

This argument has now been confirmed by the CIA. Sources in the agency told us that Panamanian leaders have reluctantly come to the conclusion that they won't be able to operate the canal.

Will they, then, decide to abridge that part of the treaty and ask the United States to keep running the strategically vital canal? Don't bet on it.

According to the CIA sources, Panama is already starting ultra-secret discussions with — are you ready? — Japanese experts who might operate the canal under contract when the time comes.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Is Columbia University trying to destroy the very foundations of our society? Bad enough the venerable institution is totally unashamed that its football team has set a new record for consecutive losses.

Now the dean has forbidden a part-time business school professor (and full-time corporate raider) to give $100,000 to any student who'll find a company for him to take over. Hail Columbia!

Offending the nation's jocks and the greed generation to boot. Ah, well. Columbia's Ivy League rivals can probably be counted on to maintain modern morality by striving for victory on the gridiron, in the executive suites — and in the criminal courts.

Playing ball shouldn't be U.S. priority

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Maybe it's time the pro football fans went on strike.

No matter who wins a football strike, fans lose. To attend games, we must pay higher ticket prices; to watch telecasts, we must endure numerous commercials. There will be more Brian Bosworth-style shenanigans from would-be stars.

Write from the heart

In the long run, we'll lose sight of what football's all about. It's a game. We need to remember that football is only a game — like basketball, for instance, or baseball or hockey. Our children need to understand that, too.

The NFL strike came at the same time as a Chicago teachers' walkout, but the players took over the headlines and television newscasts far more completely, even though there were fewer people involved in the NFL strike than the teachers' boycott.

Recent comments from Forsan school superintendent J.F. Poyner and Big Spring's Texas Employment Commission representative Joe Wallis struck a chord about the inequity in priorities that prompted those strikes.

Like them, I have a problem sympathizing with striking football players when I compare the football players' incomes to those of schoolteachers and nurses.

But more young people aim at the superstar sports than schoolteaching and nursing as professions. That says something about us in America, and I'm not sure what it says is good. We've made playing games the best living a youngster can imagine.

Is it any wonder Johnny can't read? Too often he spends his extra time practicing touchdown throws or strikeout pitches, home-run swings or halfcourt shots, and we think that's great because we want him to grow up to be a star.

Only we don't want him to grow up to die, like Len Bias. We don't want him to graduate from college and be unable to read.

We complain about the poor teachers and the meat-factory athletic programs. Perhaps we ought to encourage Johnny and Jane to read, too. Maybe we should suggest they even read instead of practice sports in their spare time.

Certainly we need to consider the priorities of a nation willing to pay $65,000 a year as a guaranteed minimum to a man whose job is tackling another football player but unwilling to pay a schoolteacher $40,000 annually.

After all, the conventional wisdom maintains, a teacher only has to work from August through June — and a football player must work from August all the way through December if he's on a playoff team.

America's future, folks, doesn't depend on the Cowboys. It depends on you and me and all the other working men and women like us. We're America's team, and we're in the trenches everyday.

No matter how unfair it is, our sons and daughters will find themselves far more often in the same professions we're in now than in the glamorous fast lanes of the NFL or NBA, the American and National Leagues or the courts at Wimbledon.

The dreams of pro sports and the accompanying rewards are just that for most of us: dreams about games.

I'm not saying we don't need to dream. I'm saying we ought to face the reality beyond the dream. Very few sports careers last ten years; most last less than five. And for every athlete in the pro leagues, there are a hundred in college and five hundred in high school.

Most of those players will have to grow up and not be players. They'll have to be doctors or lawyers, teachers or engineers, mothers and fathers.

They deserve to be rewarded for the lifelong effort they'll expend. Should they be rewarded equally with pro athletes? No.

They're going to work a lot harder for a lot more years, and they deserve more to show for it. The billion-dollar-plus claims of athletes drain resources we could better spend on teaching our children — and making such careers as teaching more attractive.

Fans, after all, make the pro sports possible. We do. Our children will. It's time to equalize the paycheck, isn't it?

Flight plan

Remember to go before departure

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I'm always goofing up when I fly. Sometimes, I forget to bring my seat back to its original locked and upright positions for takeoff and landings.

Probably the worst thing I do when I fly, however, is in the unlikely event there is a loss of cabin pressure, I don't breathe normally when I place the oxygen mask over my head and face. I breathe like Secretariat down the stretch.

The other day, I goofed up something new. I boarded my flight a few minutes before it was scheduled to take off.

When it came time to push back from the gate, however, the plane just sat there. The last time an airplane pushed back from the gate on time was when Wilbur and Orville lugged their flying contraption out of their workshop in Kitty Hawk.

I'm not sure why my flight didn't push back on time. Perhaps the pilot wasn't in the mood or one of the flight attendants had broken a nail.

We can send a man to the moon, but we can't figure out how to get the 3:13 flight to Kansas City in the air before 5:30.

After sitting in my unmoving seat for nearly an hour, I had to go to the bathroom.

Bad timing has been my entire life story. I was inside the restroom maybe 11 seconds, when there was a loud banging on the door.

"Sir! Sir!" cried a female voice, obviously that of one of the flight attendants, "We can't pull back from the gate while you're in there."

Wait a second. We'd been sitting here all this time, and as soon as I get inside the restroom they can't wait a few more seconds so nature can take its course?

I hurried as fast as I could and then returned to my seat as all the other passengers stared at me.

I could hear their thoughts:

"Nice going, weak-bladder."

After we finally had taken off, one of the flight attendants came to my seat and apologized.

Another blue Monday

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street headed for a third, consecutive blue Monday today as Dow Jones industrial average lost more than 26 points in the opening minutes following another steep decline in the dollar.

The Dow industrials fell 508 points two Mondays ago in the worst decline in history and lost 156.83 points last Monday.

The dollar was off sharply again today in New York, raising fears of instability that could frighten away foreign investors, push up inflation in the United States and hurt economic growth overseas.

Caesarean rate rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — A public interest health group said today that approximately 455,000 babies were delivered by Caesarean section unnecessarily during 1986 in the United States despite heightened risk to the health of the mother.

Public Citizen Health Research Group, which is affiliated with the Ralph Nader organization, based its calculation on a finding that 24 percent, or about 906,000, of the estimated 3.76 million births in 1986 were by Caesarean section compared with a study that suggests the optimum rate would be about 12 percent.

GOP unleashing furies

WASHINGTON (AP) — For voters who already are getting jaded with the Democratic presidential campaign — and after umpteen debates there are apparently a lot of you out there — Happy Days are Here Again.

When the six Republican candidates met last week in Houston to hold their first debate it was as if someone finally had unleashed four years worth of pent-up GOP furies.

The highlight, of course, came when Alexander M. Haig Jr. taunted Vice President George Bush with the fact that he, Haig, had opposed an arms control proposal, fought it to the "bloody devil" at the Cabinet table and "I never heard a wimp out of you."

Smoking ban success

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Frank Lautenberg's daughter warned him 20 years ago about his smoking, she didn't know just how seriously he'd take her.

Not only did Lautenberg quit, but as a New Jersey senator he led a successful drive last week to sharply curtail smoking on the nation's airlines.

Recalling his daughter's scary warning — "Please stop smoking, Daddy, or you'll get a black box in your lungs" — Lautenberg won approval for a plan to keep "No Smoking" signs permanently lit aboard nearly three-quarters of the nation's commercial flights.

Transplant

Doctors say girl doing well

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 3-year-old girl who had been near death "looks good" after a five-organ transplant operation, and began moving her limbs today as she awakened from the experimental surgery, officials said.

"What her prognosis is now, it's almost impossible to say because I think we're on uncharted ground now," Dr. Marc Rowe, chief surgeon at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, said Sunday after the nearly 15-hour operation on Tabatha Foster of Madisonville, Ky.

"Tabatha is doing very well now, taking into consideration that she's had a very large operation that went into the night," Rowe said. "She looks good."

The toddler, who has been in hospitals for all but two months of her life and has never eaten solid food, received a liver, pancreas, small intestine and parts of a stomach and colon during the surgery, which ended Sunday afternoon.

She was born with short gut syndrome, a deadly condition in which her twisted intestines interfered with blood circulation.

"She really had nowhere to go," Rowe said. "This child was at the end of the line."

Tabatha was in the intensive care unit today in critical condition, normal following transplants, said

Lynn McMahon, a hospital spokeswoman.

"Tabatha had a very restful night," Ms. McMahon said. "She has regained consciousness since surgery. However, doctors are keeping her sedated so she can rest."

The girl began moving her limbs today as she awakened from surgery, and doctors were watching her closely for signs of rejection and to ensure that the organs were functioning properly, the hospital said.

"The first 72 hours are critical," the spokeswoman said.

Tabatha's parents, Sandra and Roy Foster, had seen Tabatha after the surgery and described her as looking great, according to Sue Cardillo, another Children's spokeswoman.

"They feel very good about everything. I think they are just kind of exhaling now," she said.

Surgeons removed Tabatha's spleen, which acts as a blood filter and can trigger rejections of transplanted organs, said Rowe.

In 1968, Children's Hospital's Dr. Thomas Starzl developed the multiple-organ transplant procedure, said Rowe, who watched Starzl and seven other surgeons perform the weekend operation and acted their spokesman.

Communists 'timid'?

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today blasted his critics in the Communist Party leadership as too timid or too impatient and called for a moderate but determined course in rebuilding Soviet society.

In a nationally televised address marking the 70th anniversary of the revolution that brought the Communists to power, Gorbachev accused Josef V. Stalin of "enormous and unforgivable" crimes and announced formation of a commission to resume the rehabilitation of Stalin's victims.

Chinese appoint leader

BEIJING (AP) — Premier Zhao Ziyang, became head of the Communist Party today, capping a major leadership reshuffle that swept younger, reform-minded officials into the top echelons of power.

Deng Xiaoping, who stepped down from three high party posts on Sunday, was reappointed chairman of the powerful Central Military Commission in a move that indicates the 83-year-old leader will continue to dominate China's political future.

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran will accept a U.N.-sponsored cease-fire with Iraq only after "a decisive blow on the battlefield," a top Iranian leader declared.

"In our talks with the United Nations, we have told them the solution for ending the war. But as the time goes on, it seems that they are unreliable and that they are cheating us," state-run Tehran television quoted Hashemi Rafsanjani, the powerful Parliament speaker, as saying Sunday.

Iraq and Iran said their warplanes flew more raids against each other's oil installations Sunday, and a senior Soviet diplomat was quoted as telling Iranian officials that the Soviets want U.S. warships out of the gulf.

Attack said to be plan

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition leader Kim Young-sam charged today that government agents staged an attack on rival leader Kim Dae-jung in an attempt to destroy the opposition.

Kim Young-sam said his Reunification Democratic Party was not involved in the attack in the southern port of Pusan on Sunday night, when dozens of men attacked a hotel where Kim Dae-jung was staying.

"The incident was provoked by the ruling party and the government," Kim Young-sam, told reporters.

Both men are running for president.

Ginsburg questioned in cable TV case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg faces Senate questioning about his supervision of an administration effort that helped win First Amendment protection for cable television operators — at a time Ginsburg had almost $140,000 invested in a cable company.

Financial disclosure statements indicate that at the time of the cable court case, Ginsburg's stake in Rogers Communications Inc. was by far his major non-real estate holding. His next largest stock holding was valued at less than $1,000.

An administration official close to Ginsburg said Sunday that Ginsburg did not discuss the possibility of a conflict of interest in the cable case with his superiors in the Justice Department or with ethics officers. Ginsburg discussed the situation with subordinates and concluded there was no conflict, according to the official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

"I certainly want to ask him about this," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Judiciary subcommittee on judicial nominees, said Sunday night. "Every judge has to avoid even the appearance of a conflict, so we should look into this."

Leahy said he would look to non-partisan ethics experts to provide guidance on the matter.

Ginsburg, as assistant attorney general in charge of the antitrust division, supervised the drafting of a friend-of-the-court brief that the Supreme Court embraced in a 1986 decision likely to reduce government regulation of cable operators.

A former federal ethics official familiar with the cable case, but not Ginsburg's role in it, said the case was "a First Amendment rights case that had economic consequences to it. ... If I am holding cable stock, that is a good thing for me."

The 41-year-old Ginsburg, who sits on the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, will be the focus of intense Senate scrutiny following his nomination by President Reagan to fill the Supreme Court seat of retired Justice Lewis Powell Jr.

In 1986, Ginsburg was confirmed to the federal appeals court without senators' noting the coincidence of his investment and his role in the cable case. During confirmation proceedings, Ginsburg listed the cable case as among the 10 "most significant litigated matters that I personally handled."

Charlie's still hiccupping in spite of readers' cures

DEAR READERS: On Sept. 16, an Iowa woman wrote to ask me if I could help a fellow Iowan named Charlie Osborne, who's 95. He got the hiccups in 1922 when he tried to lift a 350-pound hog to butcher it, and he's had them ever since. She said Charlie was a celebrity in Anthon (population about 800) and after 65 years of constant hiccupping, he would appreciate a good night's sleep. Did any of my readers have a cure for the hiccups?

Not one to pass up a chance to help a fellow Iowan — or a good story — I phoned the Anthon Herald, a weekly run by Sheryl

Dear Abby

Ashley and Shirley Nelson. Yup, it was true: Charlie Osborne was still hiccupping — in fact he had already hiccupped himself into the Guinness Book of World Records.

So I ran an item in my column asking any readers who had a sure cure for the hiccups to please send them to Charlie in Anthon.

Well, the day that hit print, Charlie got a telephone call at 8:20 a.m. from a Richmond, Va., woman who had a sure cure. For the next three days, phone calls came from all over the country offering cures, solutions and prayers. Charlie, who had always walked downtown to the post office to pick up his mail, needed help to carry his mail home. The first week he received more than 1,000 letters and cards, and I received nearly 900 "cures" to send on to Charlie. A radio talk show host in Austin, Texas, called Charlie for an impromptu interview. He's had two offers (one from California and one from Alabama) to appear on TV shows there. He said if they'll send him a ticket, he'll go.

According to Charlie, the only cure that gave him any relief was one used by a doctor who visited him from Illinois. Using carbon monoxide, the doctor cured Charlie's hiccups for 30 minutes, but they came back again.

Readers, I know you mean well, but please don't send any more cures to Charlie in Anthon — he's moved. Last week he sold his house, packed up his belongings and went to live with his daughter, Lucretia, and her husband in Minnesota. Charlie says the move is not permanent. He may move back to Anthon someday.

DEAR ABBY: The most popular parlor game these days seems to be snooping into the past of famous people to find out when they were married and when their first baby arrived. This is embarrassing to say the least for some of our most respected — and least suspected — public figures.

I am reminded of a letter you once published. It went something like this:

"Dear Abby: Our son was married last January. Five months later his wife had a 10-pound baby girl. They said the baby was premature. Tell me, can a 10-pound baby be this early?"

You replied: "The baby was on time — the wedding was late. Forget it."

LEO H., MANCHESTER, CONN.

DEAR LEO: Apropos counting the months — friends who "count" don't count.

DEAR ABBY: ***

afternoon I drive three women from my apartment building to the market for groceries. A few months ago another neighbor, Mae (fake name), asked if she could join us. We all agreed.

Mae has become a terrible pain in the neck. She has turned our weekly trips into thoroughly disagreeable experiences. She talks, talks and talks until we are ready to scream. She has a loud, harsh voice, and interrupts confriend's wedding in New York, so I framed several skyline pictures I had taken of Manhattan and gave them to the couple as a wedding gift. They will be living in Florida, so I thought this would be an appropriate gift since they were married in Manhattan. My girlfriend thought my gift was tacky. She says art is a very personal thing, and this couple may feel obligated to display my pictures, even if they don't like them.

I enjoy giving gifts that I have created. This seemingly trivial disagreement has caused a major argument. I'd like your opinion.

W.E.H., CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR W.E.H.: Was the gift you gave the New York couple a gift from you alone, or was it a gift from you and your girlfriend? If it was from both of you, then she could have given something less personal if she objected to your selection. For her to have called your gift "tacky" was rather tacky of her — and unkind as well.

I think a Manhattan scene, personally photographed and artistically framed by you, was most appropriate since they were married in Manhattan.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Names in the news

DALLAS (AP) — Dancer Andrei Ustinov, who fled the Moscow Ballet in Dallas two weeks ago, makes his debut with the Dallas Ballet next month — as an honorary citizen of the city.

"Your decision to stay in the United States and this city was a supreme act of courage," Mayor Annette Strauss told Ustinov in awarding him honorary citizenship on Wednesday.

"Today, I speak English very bad," the 32-year-old dancer said. "Here (I find) freedom of artist and of my religion, my pleasure. Thank you very much."

Fleming Flindt, artistic director of the Dallas Ballet, said Ustinov will make his debut with the company Nov. 10.

"It was an enormous opportunity for the Dallas Ballet when he chose to begin his ballet career with us," Flindt said.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden bought two houses here for $850,000, and will move from his native Tampa, where he had a soufle with police last winter, his agent says.

Gooden, who is engaged to be married Nov. 21, will divide time between St. Petersburg and a home he owns in New York, Jim Neader said recently.

Gooden's parents, sister and brother-in-law also plan to move from Tampa to St. Petersburg, Neader said.

The 22-year-old baseball star pleaded no contest last January to charges of resisting arrest and battery on a police officer, and was placed on probation.

His attorney, Charles Ehrlich, said part of the reason for moving was to find a larger home for Gooden's family.

"I think a fresh start is also a consideration," Ehrlich added.

According to records, Gooden bought two waterfront houses, paying $320,000 and $530,000.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Hope Lange returned to the stage a day after a fainting spell forced her to leave her role in the Gore Vidal play "The Best Man."

"She's doing OK. She was checked by doctors and is doing the matinee today," Christine Cox, an Ahmanson Theater spokeswoman, said Thursday.

Miss Lange, 53, fainted Wednesday night during the opening act, in which she plays the wife of a senator, portrayed by Mel Ferrer.

Three doctors in the audience revived her, Ms. Cox said. The play was stopped briefly then resumed with an understudy in Miss Lange's place.

Miss Lange was in last year's thriller movie "Blue Velvet." She had her own television series in 1969-70, "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," for which she won two Emmys, and earned an Academy Award nomination for her role in 1957's "Peyton Place."

STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — William A. Anders, a former astronaut and ambassador to Norway, piloted the first flight of the first U.S. helicopter assembled in Norway.

The aircraft he flew Thursday was the first off a new assembly line at Helicopter Service A.S., which is licensed to build 19 Bell-412-SP helicopters for the Norwegian defense forces, the Norwegian national news agency NTB said.

Components for the aircraft are being shipped from the United States, where Anders is deputy director of Bell Helicopter Textron.

Anders, 54, Frank Borman and James A. Lovell were the first men to orbit the moon during the Apollo VIII mission in December 1968. Anders was ambassador to Norway in 1976 and 1977.

OVIEDO, Spain (AP) — British track star Sebastian Coe and United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar received 1987 Prince of Asturias awards from the prizes' namesake, crown prince Felipe de Borbon, in a televised ceremony.

Coe accepted the prize Thursday for sports and Perez de Cuellar the award for Ibero-American cooperation.

The 19-year-old royal heir presented the awards as his parents, King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia, looked on.

In his acceptance speech, Perez de Cuellar said Latin America "needs a revolution... a profound economic, social, cultural and humanitarian change within a genuinely democratic mold." But he rejected any "revolution of demagoguery and blood."

Proceeds will go to the nutrition program at the center.

Friends, family honor mother-to-be at shower

Renee Jennings Burleson, Hobbs, N.M., was honored at a baby shower Oct. 24 at the home of Phyllis Graumann, 1903 Nolan.

Corinne Buckner, Lorene Butler, Betty Cota, Carole Drake and Irene Ringener were co-hostesses. Centerpiece was a pink boot decorated with a house, miniature babies and flowers.

Special guests were Jean Jennings, Renee's mother; Eleanor Burleson, mother-in-law; Donna Burleson, sister-in-law; Juanita Jennings, grandmother, all of Big Spring; and Donna Brewster, Van Horn, sister.

Academia

Area college students are invited to attend a reception Nov. 10 at 6 p.m. in the Devonian Room at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, hosted by the Phi Theta Kappa Alumni Association.

The purpose of Phi Theta Kappa is to recognize and encourage scholarship among two-year college students. For this reason the alumni chapter is presenting this opportunity for junior college students to obtain information about scholarships and other financial assistance available at UTPB. Students will also be able to get information regarding recommended lower level courses and degree planning.

Larry McMurty, Pulitzer Prize winner, will speak at 7 p.m. in the student lounge.

McMurty is unique among contemporary American writers. He chronicles the truths of the heart and the heartland. His unique ability to create characters, men and women, we recognize, believe in, and care about is confirmed in his books, "The Last Picture Show," "Terms of Endearment," "Lonesome Dove," and "Texasville."

Students and faculty will be charged $5, all others will be charged $10 to hear McMurty speak.

Comeback Oilers skin Bengals

CINCINNATI (AP) — Quarterback Boomer Esiason felt spooked after the Cincinnati Bengals produced another horror show in the closing minutes Sunday.

Esiason had one of his most productive passing days as an NFL player against the Houston Oilers, but it couldn't ward off what has become a sequence of last-minute disasters for the Bengals.

Houston rallied for 17 points in the final 5:38 for a 31-29 victory, scoring the game winner on Warren Moon's quarterback sneak with 55 seconds to play. It was Cincinnati's third consecutive non-strike defeat in the final minute, leaving the players unable to provide a rational explanation.

"I don't know. Maybe we need an exorcist," Esiason said.

The Bengals let this one slip away with another eerie ending.

A kickoff fumble set up one of the Oilers' closing touchdowns, and a 19-yard punt put the Oilers in position to win the game.

The defeat came in the wake of a setback against San Francisco in which the Bengals failed to run out the clock, and a defeat last week in Pittsburgh in which they failed to get off a potential game-tying field goal as time ran out.

"That's the third time it's happened," Esiason said. "Why, I don't know. It's almost like there's a dark cloud hanging over the team. It's no one person's fault. It's a combination of errors that just for some reason seems to haunt us."

Whether it was their familiarity with the 2-5 Bengals' plight or their soaring self-confidence, the 5-2 Oilers felt they could pull out a victory even when Cincinnati went up 29-14 with 6:41 to play.

"We told everybody on the sideline that the last team with the ball is going to win this thing, because we're coming back," Houston Coach Jerry Glanville said.

said. "That's one thing about this team. If we've got two or three more ticks left on the clock, we're going to keep on playing, we're going to keep on trying to win it."

Tony Zendejas kicked a 47-yard field goal to cut Cincinnati's lead to 29-17 with 5:38 to play, and Houston recovered a fumble on the ensuing kickoff to set up Spencer Tillman's 1-yard touchdown run.

The Oilers then stopped Cincinnati, and rookie Greg Horne's punt went straight up into the air and traveled 19 yards to the Bengal 45.

Six plays later, Moon sneaked the final inches for the winning touchdown.

A stunned crowd of 52,700 booed loudly when Esiason threw his second interception to end Cincinnati's hopes in the final seconds. Several banners referring to the two previous last-minute blunders had draped the stadium for the first post-strike game in Cincinnati.

A somber Bengals Coach Sam Wyche refused to single out any factor in the collapse in a brief postgame news conference.

"Nobody let us down. No one guy let anybody down," Wyche said.

While the Bengals remained remain plagued by their last-minute woes, the Oilers shattered their own haunting streak of futility.

The Oilers' second consecutive last-minute triumph gave them their first victory at Riverfront Stadium since 1980. Houston is off to its best start since that year, the last time it won the American Football Conference Central Division and went to the playoffs.

"We've kind of developed a new slogan around here — find a way to win," Moon said. "Today, we found a way."

The outcome overshadowed a spectacular passing performance by Esiason, who completed 26 of 41 passes for two touchdowns and 387 yards. He threw a 47-yard scoring pass to Eddie Brown at the outset of the second half, and seemed to put the game out of reach with a 3-yard toss to Anthony Munoz on a tackle-eligible play with 6:41 remaining.

Jim Breech kicked five field goals for Cincinnati to match the club record set by Horst Muhlmann.

A pair of Houston fumbles set up Breech's first two field goals.

The Oilers failed to cleanly cover a short, bouncing kickoff that opened the game, and Cincinnati recovered on the Houston 34. The Bengals got a lucky break four plays later when Breech's 32-yard kick slammed off the right upright and deflected through.

Moon's precise passing gave the Oilers a lead they would hold until late in the half. He completed five of seven tosses for 60 yards in the Oilers' first drive, including a 7-yard scoring pass to Jamie Williams.

A replay dispute delayed the game for several minutes and gave the Bengals possession in the second quarter. A fumble on Moon's option pitch was recovered by linebacker Reggie Williams as he slid out of bounds, but officials initially ruled that the Oilers retained possession at the Cincinnati 27. The call was overruled on review, and Cincinnati covered 59 yards in eight plays to set up Breech's 33-yard kick.

The Bengals had to settle for a 26-yard field goal with seven seconds left in the half after driving to the Houston 8. With the Bengals out of timeouts, Esiason threw a second-down incompletion to stop the clock and set up the go-ahead field goal as the fans booed the failure to get into the end zone.

Houston Oilers' quarterback Warren Moon (1) reacts after scoring the winning touchdown against the Cincinnati Bengals in the closing minute of their NFL game at Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati Sunday afternoon.

Chicago Bears' quarterback Jim McMahon (9) keeps his grip on the ball as he is sacked by Kansas City Chiefs' Art Still in the third quarter of Sunday afternoon's game in Chicago. McMahon passed for three touchdowns in the contest.

Chargers win 6th straight

By The Associated Press The San Diego Chargers, ticketed by many for last place in the AFC West this season, may get the last laugh against the rest of the NFL.

The Chargers, riding the momentum of a 3-0 record during the NFL strike, won their sixth straight game and improved their record to 6-1 with a 27-24 overtime victory over the Cleveland Browns Sunday.

"This was a great test for us," Coach Al Saunders said of the victory over the Browns, an AFC finalist last year. "It's exciting for all of us. We've made great strides from last year. But it doesn't mean anything where you are in November. It is where you are in December."

Saunders took over as the Chargers' coach when the team was 1-7 last season, and it finished 4-12.

San Diego trailed 24-14 late in the fourth quarter, but came back to tie the score in regulation and won the game in overtime on Vince Abbott's 33-yard field goal. The game-winning kick was set up by Vencie Glenn's interception of Bernie Kosar's first pass of the extra period.

The 6-1 record is the best start by the Chargers since 1961, when they began the season with 11 straight victories. The Browns dropped to 4-3.

Abbott's game-winning field goal came with 2:16 gone in the overtime after Kosar was intercepted by Glenn, who returned the ball 30 yards to the Cleveland 20.

"The easiest way to describe it is I made a bad play," said Kosar, who completed 24 of 42 passes for 298 yards with two touchdowns and two interceptions. "They did a nice job on the pass rush. I had time. I probably should have just thrown the ball away."

San Diego ran two plays before Abbott kicked the winning field goal on third down.

Trailing 24-14, the Chargers rallied to within three with 5:08 left when quarterback Dan Fouts hit Lionel James with a 22-yard touchdown pass, the 250th of Fouts' 15-year career. Abbott kicked a 20-yard field goal with 1:46 left to make it 24-24.

Fouts was 25-for-42 for 315 yards with two touchdowns and one interception.

Bears 31, Chiefs 28 Jim McMahon brought Chicago from behind for the second straight week, throwing two touchdown passes to Willie Gault in the fourth quarter after Kansas City led 28-14 on four scoring passes by Bill Kenney.

McMahon, who won his 24th consecutive game as a starter, completed 23 of 34 passes for 287 yards, including touchdowns of 25 and 38 yards to Gault. McMahon also threw a 28-yard scoring pass to Cap

Boso in the first half.

McMahon was making his first start since last Nov. 23 and he underwent shoulder surgery last December.

The Chiefs led 14-0 on Kenney's touchdown passes of 29 yards to Carlos Carson and 15 yards to Jonathan Hayes, before Dennis Gentry returned a kickoff 88 yards.

NFL

for the Bears. Larry Moriarty caught a four-yard scoring pass from Kenney in the second quarter, and the Chiefs took a 28-14 advantage when Kenney hit Stephone Paige with a 43-yarder.

Colts 19, Jets 14 Albert Bentley, whose days as a starter are numbered because of the arrival of All-Pro Eric Dickerson, rushed for 145 yards as Indianapolis kept a share of the AFC East lead with New England by beating New York.

Jack Trudeau threw a 44-yard flea-flicker touchdown pass to Matt Bouza and Dean Biasucci kicked four field goals for the Colts.

Dickerson, acquired from the Rams on Saturday, rushed for 38 yards in 10 carries and gained 28 yards after catching a swing pass in the first quarter.

The victory gave the Colts, 4-3, their first winning record since moving from Baltimore in 1984.

Tons of fun at Tae Kwon Do School

By SARAH LUMAN Staff Writer

Editor's Note: This is the second and final part of a series about the YMCA Tae Kwon Do School.

Tae kwon do students vary as widely as their reasons for studying at the Big Spring YMCA Tae Kwon Do school.

According to assistant district attorney William Dupree, the sport offers several advantages. "I originally started for health reasons," he said. "Weight control and high blood pressure, primarily."

"But I found it also offered aerobic benefits, without the stress to joints," he said. "I think it's an excellent sport for anyone who wants to improve their overall fitness but doesn't want to do damage to knees or ankles."

Dupree said he found a personal challenge in Tae Kwon Do. "Of every 2,000 students who take up this form (of martial art), one achieves the black belt. Most of them are young men between the ages of 16 and 25," he continued. "So I feel that at 45, or 46 or 47, whenever I get there, I will have beaten even more substantial odds."

"The YMCA is very good to offer this program and other programs for fitness and wellbeing," Dupree went on. "But for me, this is the best."

"I don't participate in aerobics and I'm a klutz in basketball," he said quietly. "But I enjoy this. I played football in high school and college, and karate is a contact sport."

"So it isn't something totally alien to me," he said. "And with my job, I have a lot of stress and I sit behind a desk and don't get any exercise on the job. It's important for me to be physically active, and karate is a wonderful way to reduce stress."

"I recommend it for anyone who needs to be physically fit," Dupree said.

"I think it would be particularly attractive to women, because it offers them aerobic training and a skill, an art, to protect themselves."

Dupree holds a red belt with a black stripe, the last advance before a black belt. Assistant instructor Pat Buske holds a third degree black belt and chief instructor at the YMCA school Master Yoo Sun Lee holds an eighth-degree

First-degree black belt Chris Bilbo, 13, is the school's first black belt — and its youngest. "I've been studying for about two years," he said.

"I like the art, the sport of tae kwon do," he continued. He said his favorite move is the roundhouse kick. "It takes a little practice, but it isn't hard."

Chris has attended one tournament, in Abilene June 24-26. He placed second in the forms competition.

"I started out," he said softly, "because kids were, you know, picking on me in school." From the beginning of his studies, he has trained with the nunchaku, a karate self-defense weapon.

Thomas Moore, another outstanding student, has recently won first place in the Texas state competition, advancing to nationals in Tulsa, Okla. where he placed fourth. Traveling with him to national competition this summer was his father, Tommy Moore.

"I started almost two years ago," Thomas, who expects to advance from his red belt standing to a black belt within three months.

Chance to see Olympic Games

Big Spring Boxing Club coach J.V. Martinez recently attended a Olympic American Boxing Federation Convention in Tulsa, Okla. The federation is embarking upon a program which involves a lottery in which the winner will win a ten-day trip for two to the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, Korea. All expenses will be paid including airfare and hotel, plus $500 for personal expenses. Martinez still has some tickets for the drawing. A total of 2,500 tickets have been printed, and the cost is $20 per ticket, which must be paid prior to the drawing. The date of the drawing is Aug. 1, 1988, from the New York Pick 4 Lottery. The USA Today newspaper, which is distributed throughout the country, publishes the winning number daily. Anyone interested in trying to win this 10-day trip can call J.V. Martinez at 267-4365, or write to him at 2509 Gunter, Big Spring, Tx., 79720.

Stanton Week of Champions

STANTON — The Stanton Fellowship of Christian Athletes, along with area churches, is sponsoring a Week of Champions Nov. 2-4 at the Stanton High School auditorium. Former Texas Tech and USFL quarterback Ron Reeves will be guest speaker Monday night. On Tuesday Wellman basketball coach Gary Bridges will be the guest speaker, and McCamey football coach Buster Leaf will be guest speaker Wednesday. Meetings each night begin at 7:30 p.m. For more information call Wilma Stirl at 756-3326.

Booster Club to meet tonight

The Big Spring Booster Club will meet tonight 7 in the high school library. The booster club is not for support of football athletes only, it supports all athletes in all sports. So everyone is encouraged to attend and support BSHS athletics.

Women's bowling tournament

The Big Spring Women's Invitational Bowling Tournament will be the weekends of Nov. 14-15 and Nov. 21-22 at Big Spring Bowl-A-Rama. Entry deadline is Nov. 4.

Lendl wins, ready to go home now

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — Ivan Lendl, who usually relies on unrelenting willpower and concentration for his success as the world's top tennis player, could only think of one thing as he won the world's richest indoor tournament — home. So Lendl appeared to be upset Sunday when he was presented with the winner's check for $215,000 after beating Miloslav Mecir 5-7, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3 to win the European Community Championships because he had already missed the first plane home. "I felt many times this week to just walk up to the net, shake hands and go on the next plane home" to Greenwich, Conn., Lendl said after proudly displaying the ostentatious gold-and-diamond ECC racket to the crowd of 9,000. Lendl's victory wrapped up a hectic month of five tournaments and brought him closer to the end of a season that started in Australia in January.

Kenyan, Brit win NY marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — A confident Ibrahim Hussein of Kenya, saying he "wasn't going to quit marathoning until I won the New York City Marathon," fulfilled his goal Sunday, coasting to victory in two hours, 11 minutes, 1 second, the fastest in the race since 1983. Hussein caught early pacesetter Pat Petersen shortly past the 14-mile point and led the rest of the way in becoming the fifth consecutive foreigner to capture the New York City Marathon in the 18th running of the nationally televised race. Hussein, ninth in the 1985 race in his marathon debut and fifth last year, probably could have run faster Sunday. But he had such a commanding lead there was no need to push the pace in the closing miles. "When Petersen was one minute behind with five miles to go, I knew he needed a 4:37 mile to beat me," Hussein said. "I knew he was never going to get me, so I slowed down." Still, Hussein finished 52 seconds ahead of runner-up Gianni DeMadonna of Italy. Priscilla Welch of Britain had an even easier time capturing the women's division and becoming the oldest women's winner in the race's history. She led all the way in winning in 2:30:17, more than a minute ahead of second-place finisher Francoise Bonnet of France.

Welch will be 43 Nov. 22. The previous oldest winner was Miki Gorman, who was 42 years, 75 days when she won for the second consecutive time in 1977. Welch is 42 years, 344 days. Like Hussein, this was Welch's third appearance in the New York City Marathon. Welch, who did not begin her running career until she was 34, finished third in New York in 1983 and 10th in 1985. For Hussein, 29, a former Western Athletic Conference steeplechase champion at the University of New Mexico, this was his fifth marathon and third victory. He won the Honolulu

Marathon in 1985 in a course record 2:12:08 and bettered it last year in defending his title in 2:11:44. He also has won the Bay To Breakers Race in San Francisco in 1984 and 1985 and was the first men's finisher in the 1986 Trevira Twosome 10-mile race in New York. Prior to this race, the soft-spoken Hussein said he felt very relaxed — as compared to last year when he ran "scared" — and was "very confident" this time. Early in the 26-mile, 385-yard race through New York's five boroughs, it was Petersen who tried to steal the race. The top American finisher in the 1984 New York City Marathon when he placed fourth, and in 1985 when he was third, Petersen set a blistering early pace, opening a 35-second lead at five miles. At that point, he was on a record 2:04 marathon pace (the world's best is 2:07:12, by Carlos Lopes of Portugal) before Hussein reeled him in shortly past the halfway point. Petersen hung on to second place until the final 200 yards before being overtaken and placing fourth in 2:12:03, behind DeMadonna (2:11:53) and Pete Pfitzinger (2:11:54), the 1984 U.S. Olympic Trials marathon winner. Tommy Ekblom of Finland finished fifth in 2:12:31. Italy's Orlando Pizzolato, the 1984 and 1985 New York City Marathon champion, made his usual second-half charge, moving into third place at one stage before fading to sixth in 2:12:50. The men's and women's winners each received $25,000 plus a new Mercedes-Benz.

Cowboys must face hostile home crowd

IRVING (AP) — Ever hear of a home field disadvantage in the NFL? The Dallas Cowboys may be facing one on Monday night against the New York Giants when they come back to Texas Stadium for the first time since the regulars returned from the strike. The Cowboys are 3-3, while the defending world champion Giants are 1-5 and face what Coach Bill Parcells' calls a "must-win" situation in every game. Parcells might feel he is playing in Giants Stadium before the evening is over. The Cowboys' strike strife is well documented, and there has been recent squabbling by Herschel Walker and Tony Dorsett over who should get the ball more. Dorsett trade rumors flew all week and were strongly denied by club president Tex Schramm. "We'll probably get booed good," said outspoken Dallas linebacker Jeff Rohrer, who called Cowboys' fans stupid for "being led around by their noses by management" during the strike. "The fans will probably be down on us good. They'll let us have it." While the Giants' replacement team cratered with an 0-3 record, Dallas' collection of free agents and high draft choices captured the fans' imagination with a 2-1 mark. There was general unrest because Dallas Coach Tom Landry didn't start rookie quarterback Kevin Sweeney in the last replacement game against Washington after he sparked in two earlier victories. Dallas lost that game to the Redskins.

Watson breaks three year drought

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Curtis Watson won the PGA Tour's money-winning title. Paul Azinger won "Player of the Year." Tom Watson won. "He's back," Azinger howled as he watched Watson's 6-iron tee shot on the final hole nestle in close to the cup Sunday in the Nabisco Championships of Golf, the final official event on the PGA Tour schedule. "You can write it: he's back. It's great for him and it's good for golf," Azinger said. "I'm about the happiest guy in the whole world," Watson said after he successfully battled his own quivering nerves and brought an end to a non-winning string that went back to July 1984. "After three years of frustration, three years of questions and frustrations, dealing with the internal questions..." Watson, once golf's greatest player but a deeply frustrated struggler for three long years, let the sentence trail off unfinished. But those questions and frustrations came to an end in his scrambling, struggling, 2-under-par 68 that gave him a 268 total and a two-shot victory over Chip Beck on the Oak Hills Country Club course. It also gave Watson $384,000 from the total purse of $3 million, almost 10 percent of the total distributed on the PGA Tour this season.

The prize money was broken down into $2 million for the tournament and another $1 million for the Nabisco Grand Prix of Golf, which also ended in this event. For Watson, however, the money didn't really matter. "The money never was a factor. The victory is much more important. That's what I'm out here trying to do, win golf tournaments," Watson said. It was very important to others, however. There was Strange, who finished dead last in the 30-man field but remained first in the Grand Prix standings. He won a total of $207,000 and took his second money-winning title with a record total of $925,941. The title he wanted, however, eluded him. His 293 total, 13 over par, knocked him out of the Top 10 in scoring average, reduced his point total and handed the Player of the Year title to the disbelieving Azinger. "Are you sure? I didn't think I had a chance," Azinger asked. "It's tough," said Strange, who had led the Player of the Year standings since August. "It's tough to swallow. I'm embarrassed." Azinger finished second on the money-winning list at $822,481, far ahead of the record $653,296 won by Greg Norman last year. Watson led all the way in acquiring his 32nd Tour triumph, a total that does not include his five British Open titles. "But it wasn't easy. He was armed with a four-shot lead on the back nine before, he said, "the nerves took hold." "The pressure was getting to me. I felt it. When I was winning a lot, in this position I'd be expecting to win. This time, I was hoping to win," Watson said. "I was nervous. I was pacing like a leopard in some hunter's gunshots." It was a struggle bringing it home. He missed four greens in a row and bogeyed the 16th as Beck made a late move that cut Watson's lead to one stroke. Watson had to get up and down, holing a nerve-testing four-footer on the 17th, to hold the lead. Then he finished it off with a closing birdie. "Winning your first tournament is tough. The comeback is tougher," Watson said. Beck took second with a closing 64 and a 270 total and won a total of $238,000. Norman was next at 66-271 and collected $172,000. Azinger followed at 67-273 and won $164,000. The group at 274 included Ben Crenshaw, South African Nick Price, Hal Sutton, Corey Pavin and Mark Calcavecchia. Crenshaw closed up with a 64, Price and Sutton had 67s, Pavin 68 and Calcavecchia matched par 70.

Continued from page 1-B said. "I went to a private school which had no athletic programs, and I wanted something interesting to do. "So I got into tae kwon do," he said. "If I had to pick a move, I'd say the flying back kick. It's one of the more powerful kicks in tae kwon do." His father, who is not a member of the class, talked about Thomas' training. "I've seen a real improvement in his memory and concentration," Tommy Moore said. "His grades are better, too. "And Thomas is not an extra tall person, but he can jump and touch the top of the rim of a basketball goal now. When he began studying tae kwon do, he couldn't outrun me. Now, he can burn me pretty good." He said the overall benefits of the sport were not limited to improved fitness and concentration, though. "Thomas wants to go into the service someday. "If he's ever in a war, this could be the straw that brings him home," Moore said. Working out with his son as a sparring partner in practice before tournaments has convinced Moore of the value of tae kwon do as exercise. "It's an excellent workout," Moore said, "but it's more than that. Mr. Lee teaches discipline.

He'll ask the kids in class during the week how their grades are, all the way down the line. "And everybody in here has respect," he said. "Mr. Lee believes in respect for parents and teachers. He teaches self-control and respect." Twelve-year-old Chris Park became interested in tae kwon do for self defense. "I had read about what happens in big cities," he said. "I wanted to learn to defend myself, to keep from being mugged. "Plus, tae kwon do builds concentration," he said. "If you can concentrate in here, you can concentrate better on other things, too." The Runnels Junior High student has been studying for about a year and a half. "I like to spar, and work partners," he said. Green belt Ben Chau has been studying for ten months. "I had a choice between karate or piano lessons," he said quietly. "So I got into tae kwon do." He likes the side kick because "it's faster than other kicks," he said. "I can use it pretty strongly, too. I like sparring best, the competition and using all the things we learn and making it work." Bill Barnes, an eight-year-old yellow belt, has been studying about three months. "I like the back kick," he explained. "If someone is behind you, you can turn and get to them." He said he started studying tae kwon do to defend himself against hazing at school. Nine-year-old Barkley Robinson also has a yellow belt. "My friends got into karate, and told me about it," he said. "So I started taking it too." "I like the heel kick," he said. "You can just, and he demonstrated, "go around with it." His least favorite move is a flying kick: "It's very hard." Tommy Olson, 11, has been studying for about two months. He said he had wanted to study for a long time before discovering the YMCA class and deciding to join. "I like the jump kick," Olson said, "because it's quick. I like the sparring best." Nita Leleck, a green belt, began studying in April. "I started studying for self defense," she said. "But it's also terrific exercise." To advance from one level to the next, she explained, students must pass tests. "You have to know the forms, and then when you get into the higher levels, you go to breaking." "It's a mental discipline, a philosophy," she said.

Continued from page 1-B Saints 28, Falcons 0 New Orleans intercepted five passes by Atlanta quarterback Scott Campbell to post their sixth shutout in 21 years of existence. Bobby Hebert completed his first six passes in two first-quarter scoring drives for the Saints. In New Orleans' first possession, Hebert completed three passes for 19 yards and also ran twice for 25 in an 80-yard drive he capped by hitting Mike Jones with a seven-yard scoring pass. Dalton Hilliard later scored touchdowns on runs of five and 30 yards. It was the worst loss for Atlanta since the Los Angeles Rams defeated the Falcons 59-0 in 1976.

Buccaneers 23, Packers 17 Steve DeBerg drove Tampa Bay 84 yards for a touchdown to open the second half and threw a scoring pass to Gerald Carter a minute later as the Buccaneers held on to beat Green Bay. Leading 3-0 at the half, the Buccaneers moved 84 yards on 11 plays, with DeBerg hitting passes of 12 yards to Calvin Magee and 12 and 20 yards to Mark Carrier. Jeff Smith's one-yard run capped the 5½-minute drive. On the first play after a fumble at the Green Bay 5, DeBerg hit Carter with the Bucs' second touchdown in just over a minute, making it 17-0. Eagles 28, Cardinals 23 Randall Cunningham's third touchdown pass of the game, a nine-yarder to Gregg Garrity with 40 seconds remaining, gave Philadelphia its victory over St. Louis. The Eagles, who fell behind 23-21 with 1:50 left on a touchdown pass from Neil Lomax to Robert Awalt, drove 70 yards in eight plays to the winning touchdown. Philadelphia led 21-6 in the third quarter, but Lomax, who was sacked six times, sparked St. Louis' comeback with a 14-yard touchdown pass to J.T. Smith. Chargers 27, Browns 24 Free safety Vencie Glenn intercepted Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar's first pass attempt in overtime, setting up Vince Abbott's 33-yard field goal that gave San Diego its sixth consecutive victory. The 6-1 record is the best start by the Chargers since 1961, when they began the season with 11 straight victories. Abbott's game-winning field goal came with 2:16 gone in the overtime after Cleveland won the toss to get the first possession. After two running plays, Kosar's pass was intercepted by Glenn, who returned the ball 30 yards to the Cleveland 20. Chargers 28, Vikings 17 Dave Krieg passed for three touchdowns, including a key 27-yarder to Steve Largent early in the second half, and backup Jeff Kemp added a 28-yard scoring toss with 1:32 left as Seattle beat Minnesota. The Krieg-to-Largent touchdown pass gave the Seahawks a 21-10 lead with just 3:46 gone in the second half. Krieg also passed four yards to Daryl Turner for a first-quarter advantage and went on to post their first shutout since 1984 by allowing the Lions to cross midfield only four times. Elway and Johnson hooked up on their scoring pass late in the first half, and Elway's seven-yard run on a quarterback draw early in the final period made it 31-0. Seahawks 28, Vikings 17 Dave Krieg passed for three touchdowns, including a key 27-yarder to Steve Largent early in the second half, and backup Jeff Kemp added a 28-yard scoring toss with 1:32 left as Seattle beat Minnesota. The Krieg-to-Largent touchdown pass gave the Seahawks a 21-10 lead with just 3:46 gone in the second half. Krieg also passed four yards to Daryl Turner for a first-

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

From the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Changes in your relationship with an associate will give you a new perspective on present business affairs. Try to be more open-minded in conversations — listen to other points of view.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A long-running argument with a co-worker can be settled by an older person you both know. Today is a fine time to reaffirm friendships.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) That expert advice you've been considering is too expensive. Rely on practical and proven methods, and you'll get excellent results.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't allow a new acquaintance to disrupt your schedule this morning or you'll be late all day and miss some great opportunities.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get an early start today and conclude some important business. Advice from a superior and a co-worker could be valuable.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) If you restrain that bad attitude about current situations, you'll realize that what seemed like big problems are actually easy to resolve.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A recently assumed obligation which has been worrying you can easily be fulfilled today. Enjoy the domestic scene with your mate tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Even though your partners don't agree with you, don't be drawn into an argument. They will soon see you were right all along.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can be unusually industrious and constructive today if you cooperate more with others. Don't let details slow you down.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Steer clear of gossiping friends today; engaging in such pursuits could get you in serious trouble. A romantic evening is in store for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Invite a recent acquaintance into your home. This person can be extremely helpful to your career and will greatly improve your mood.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Postpone that meeting with a business associate until you can get the added information which you feel may be necessary.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Keep your new ideas to yourself, and rely on your intuition today. Advice from a so-called expert is apt to be full of misinformation.

If Your Child Is Born Today
He or she will have a very clear idea of an intended profession while still very young. Take this desire seriously, and give your progeny plenty of encouragement in this and any other endeavors. Your child will have a knack for using modern methods to improve old ones.

The Stars impel; they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Grandmother, 84, helps with support group

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Sally Haines was crushed. Still reeling from learning her son was homosexual, she found out he also was dying of AIDS. Nurses told Mrs. Haines the one person she had to see was Frances Peabody.

An active member of an AIDS support group, Mrs. Peabody helps families understand the disease and overcome their feelings of isolation, reassuring them in her comforting, 84-year-old voice.

"Let the person know there's no criticism, just love and affection," she tells families. They should learn all they can about the disease, but they "must not be so pessimistic that they convey the feeling to the person who has AIDS."

After the disease had killed her grandson in 1984 and an artist friend a year later, Mrs. Peabody felt compelled to share her experience. She has helped several AIDS patients and about a dozen of their relatives, including Mrs. Haines.

"She's a very warm, supportive person with a great deal of knowledge," Mrs. Haines said. "I found her particularly helpful as someone who had gone through this."

Dr. Michael Bach, an AIDS specialist at Maine Medical Center in Portland, said, "The fact that an older person can handle this makes them say, 'Well, gee, if a lady like this can handle it, why can't I?'"

"It's great to see a little grandmother come in, especially when your own grandmother won't show up," added Dr. Owen Pickus.

Nattily dressed in a black and white dress and a green ascot, Mrs. Peabody sat erect in a hand-carved, straight-backed French chair at her Victorian home and bristled when asked about the public response to people who have AIDS.

"It makes me feel very sad because I think the human race hasn't come very far," she said.

For churches to preach "that anybody who gets AIDS because he is homosexual is paying for his sins is absolutely ridiculous and goes back to the Middle Ages."

Mrs. Peabody told a minister at the AIDS support group in 1985 that while she did not feel trained enough to work the hotline, she had done extensive research on AIDS and could empathize with victims' families.

The minister was concerned that given the tenor of public reaction to AIDS, Mrs. Peabody's friends might shun her when they learned she associated with AIDS patients and their families.

"At my age, those things don't make any difference," she said. "If people didn't want to be a friend, that was all right with me. I knew where I stood."

Doctors who put her in touch with families say parents are appreciative because they've often been rebuffed by friends after news got out about their child having AIDS.

Homosexuality "is a condition that a person is probably born with," she tells parents who struggle to understand their son's way of life. Mrs. Peabody has a 50-year-old son who is homosexual.

Some parents feel guilty, blaming themselves for their sons' homosexuality, she said, but in most cases they have accepted the gay lifestyle "with great understanding, and loved their sons and brothers nonetheless, perhaps all the more."

That's the kind of support she and her family gave grandson Peter. For a year, Mrs. Peabody flew from Portland to San Diego once a month to visit Peter, and the family's struggle to cope with the disease was the focus of a poignant book, "The Screaming Room," written by Peter's mother, Barbara Peabody.

"We don't condemn a person for his ideas and thinking. We can argue about it, but we don't condemn it," said Mrs. Peabody.

Brought up in a family of what she called "broad-minded Republicans," Mrs. Peabody learned the value of humanitarian work as a youngster in New Mexico. Her mother did child welfare work and her father, a lawyer, volunteered his services to Indians.

"We just always thought of ourselves as part of the community, and if you were, you did community work," she said.

She moved to Maine in 1951 when she and her late husband bought a shoe company. A founder of the Portland Landmarks historical society, Mrs. Peabody also is active in the Sweetser Home for emotionally disturbed children.

Piled on her coffee table is a mound of magazine articles and newspaper clippings about AIDS.

Where AIDS has become a fixture in the news, "there's no excuse" for the public not to learn more about it; some people just don't want to, she said.

"It's when we don't understand and we close our minds that we become bigots and unsympathetic."

Quick to play down her role in the AIDS support group, Mrs. Peabody praises the dedicated efforts of others and expresses her gratitude for their acceptance.

"They make me feel like I'm not elderly or on the shelf," she explained. "I'm very much a part of the scene."

Hospital chaplain heads AIDS advisory group

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis says a new committee being formed to make recommendations on ways to deal with the increasing costs of treating AIDS patients is vital.

"As the disease of AIDS continues to receive increasing attention, it is imperative that we examine its financial impact on our state," Lewis said Wednesday.

"I am confident the creation of this task force is a major step toward identifying our role in battling this deadly illness," Lewis said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's press secretary, Saralee Tiede, said the AIDS panel would be headed by the Rev. Chris Steele, staff chaplain of Houston's St. Luke's Hospital.

Six lawmakers and 11 public members will serve on the panel, she said.

Lewis named three House members and five members of the public to serve on the committee.

Lewis appointed James L. Fariss Jr., Austin, chairman of HealthCare International; Larry L. Fitzgerald, Houston, chief fiscal officer for American Medical International and Jerry Hall, Fort Worth, executive vice president of Southwest Service Life Insurance Co.

Also, Adan Rios, Houston, head of the department of oncology and director of academic affairs at the Institute for Immunological Disorders, and Jeff Turner, San Antonio, administrator for the Bexar County Hospital District.

House members who will serve are Reps. Billy Clemons, D-Pollak, Nancy McDonald, D-El Paso, and Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, the Legislature's only physician.

Ms. Tiede said senators who will serve are Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, Grant Jones, D-Temple, and Craig Washington, D-Houston.

"We haven't got all our public members yet," Ms. Tiede said. "We know who they are, we just haven't contacted all of them yet."

In an interview with the Dallas Times Herald, Rev. Steele said, "Texas is behind the eight ball in terms of dealing with AIDS. We've really got to pull ourselves up by the bootstraps."

The committee is similar to panels formed in 40 other states, officials said.

It will file a report with the Legislature next December after assessing the costs of caring for AIDS patients, studying health care programs and defining the state's role.

Child care seminar set

A week-long seminar for child care center administrators will be held in Odessa Nov. 9-13.

The seminar will enable child care center directors to obtain professional status by going through the Professional Administrator Credential Seminar administered by Child Care Management Service's Sherry Workman.

Eligibility requirements are: one year's supervisory experience in child care or administration; fifty clock-hours of prior training; membership in Texas Licensed Child Care Association of Texas or Texas Association of Child Care Administrators; and three reference letters.

The five-day seminar is designed for practical use by child care administrators. Upon completion, the director of a child care facility will receive the Professional Administrator Credential.

The seminar is recognized by the licensing branch of the Texas Department of Human Services.

Genetic mappers Dr. Helen Donis-Keller, right, senior researcher, and Dr. Philip Green are shown at the labs of the biotechnology firm Collaborative Research in Waltham, Mass. They have drawn the first detailed map of key signposts along the strings of genes shared by humans, which will help in the research of many common inherited diseases.

School is accepting applications

BELTON — The Scott and White School of Nursing at the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor is now accepting applications for the 1988 spring semester of its baccalaureate nursing class. Applications should be in by December 10.

Upon graduation, students will be eligible to take the State Board of Nurse Examiners licensing test to become registered nurses. UMHB graduates have exhibited a high rate of success on the licensing exam, according to Theda Maxfield, associate dean of the school of nursing.

This past year, nursing graduates posted a 100 percent pass rate on the 1986 Registered Nursing Licensing Exam, ranking them first in Texas and tenth in the nation on the exam's mean scores.

Breastfeeding offers advantages

During pregnancy, there are many decisions to make. Choosing to either breast or bottle-feed your baby is an important decision.

Even with modern formulas, breast-fed babies are still healthier than bottle-fed babies. The following list cites the advantages of breastfeeding:

- Breast milk provides antibodies and friendly bacteria that help babies resist infections.
- Breast-fed babies have fewer illnesses and need to be hospitalized less often.

- Breast-fed babies are less likely to have allergies.
- Breast-fed milk is easily digested and contains the nutrients that babies need in the right proportions.

- Breast-fed babies are less likely to be fat in infancy and later on as well.
- Breastfeeding is cheaper.
- Breast-fed babies are easier to take on trips; just grab diapers and go.
- Breastfeeding is ecological. Breast milk is a valuable natural resource.

Smoking during pregnancy risky

November is National Smoke Out Month and Smoke Stoppers of Methodist Hospital is urging individuals to kick the habit. Women who smoke are not only endangering their own lives, but the life of their child if the mother becomes pregnant.

American Cancer Society studies show that if a woman is pregnant, every cigarette she smokes can hurt the unborn baby. The following facts emphasize the hazards of smoking during pregnancy.

- Smoking definitely increases the chances of prematurity. Prematurity is associated with the child's having higher rates of learning disorders, lower IQ, hearing and vision problems.
- Smoking increases the risk of premature rupture of the membranes. This leads to premature birth.

- Smoking increases the risk of ectopic pregnancy, that is a pregnancy in which the embryo implants outside the uterus, usually in the fallopian tube. An ectopic pregnancy must be ended by surgery.
- Smoking increases the risk of miscarriage and stillbirth.
- Women who smoke at least half a pack a day have a higher risk of toxemia.
- Smoking, in some studies, has been associated with a higher risk of certain birth defects.
- Women who smoke have more abnormalities in the placenta and more bleeding during pregnancy.

Old Indian medicines used in modern times

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Nancy Lonsdorf will prescribe an antibiotic if you need it, but she's mostly interested in helping you prevent all those sore throats in the first place.

She'll take the same approach if your problem is a pattern of urinary tract infections, or lower back pains, or skin rashes, or insomnia, or arthritis.

Operating from the premise that all illness results from an imbalance of one kind or another within the body, Lonsdorf is among 100 or so U.S. physicians incorporating an ancient Indian medical system called Ayurveda into modern practices.

Although patients generally have some kind of specific complaint when they go to an Ayurvedic clinic or doctor, the approach is oriented heavily toward prevention.

"Most of the people I see have problems that are somewhat chronic and have been treated by modern medical techniques but keep recurring," Lonsdorf said in a recent interview. "Or, the medicines they have been taken give them side effects they don't want to put up with any longer."

The Ayurvedic system, holding that mental and physical health are inexorably linked, is being promoted in the United States and Europe by the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, who distilled Indian meditative techniques into a westernized version introduced in 1957 as Transcendental Meditation.

Indeed, Ayurveda emphasizes a strong spiritual component — the mind-body link — but a World Health Organization expert on traditional medicine says it also is a detailed and formalized system of medical care.

"The traditionalists were there long before us," said Dr. John Canary, a WHO consultant and professor at Georgetown University medical school in Washington.

Noting that most of the ailments afflicting Americans are what health experts call lifestyle-related — stemming from poor diet, lack of exercise and poor adjustment to stress — Canary said "prevention is the only way to go."

Dear St. Lawrence folks:

Everyone said you can't visit St. Lawrence at this time of year and not have a good time.

Your annual Fall Festival was everything they said it would be, and more: The food was great, the fellowship wonderful, and the weather was great, too. Thanks for all the fun and games.

Shall we do it again next year?

All of us who enjoyed Sunday's Fall Festival

Visiting was the order of the day Sunday when friends and relatives gathered for the annual St. Lawrence Fall Festival. Julie Ann Cadenhead, above right, was practicing her table manners while in the arms of her aunt, Belma Madrid of rural St. Lawrence. Belma calls Julie "the miracle baby," having been born two months prematurely and a "little over three pounds at birth." Having grown to 20 pounds at 10 months, the daughter of Joe and Mary Cadenhead of Big Spring appears to be having no trouble handling her spoon. Cleanup is a dirty job — but somebody has to do it. At right are Dwayne Anderson and Carol Schwartz, both of St. Lawrence. Was Carol ready to go home after serving and clearinging tables? "No, I'm just waiting for tonight's dance!" she said. Below, children found their own brand of fun, while some of the workers got a chance to enjoy the food at the end of the day. From left, serving themselves near 3 p.m. after the official food line had closed were Doris Schwartz, Joyce Halfmann, Richard Wilde and Helen Jost.
