Cold snap hits, accidents abound

By BILL FOSTER
Staff Writer

The proverbial strand of barbed wire, separating West Texas from the North Pole, drooped a bit Monday and early today allowing a few chilly hints of winter to creep into Big Spring and the surrounding area.

After basking in the glow of unseasonably warm temperatures for the first few days of November, Howard County felt the hastening advance of winter.

The overnight low in Big Spring dipped to 29 degrees at 5 a.m. today, according to Charles Yates, engineer at the Agricultural Research Service office, 302 N.W. 12th St.

Cloudy skies and sporadic drizzle combined to keep Monday's high at 46 — some 20 degrees cooler than average daily highs during the first few days of the month.

Light breezes created a wind chill factor that caused temperatures to seem colder than they actually were. However, wind chill factor information was not available. Yates said the research service office does not record data concerning wind chill factors.

Rainfall totaling .08 of an inch dampened Big Spring streets Monday and was a contributing factor in four automobile accidents, according to police reports.

A 30-year-old truck driver was injured when the brakes on his truck failed and it struck a set of steps and overturned at 400 S. Gregg Street and 200 W. Fourth Street.

Chester Edward Eckert, Route 3 Big Spring, was taken to Scenic Mountain Medical Center emergency room by Rural/Metro ambulance service. He was treated and released.

A trailer carrying cotton that was being pulled by Eckert's truck also overturned, spilling its contents on the roadway.

The intersection was blocked and traffic re-routed for four and one-half hours while police worked to investigate the accident and clear the roadway.

The accident occurred at 12:53

Family lives with disease's uncertainty

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

To the casual observer, Casie Wood appears to be a normal three-year-old.

She is full of nervous energy, seemingly unable to sit still, and "no" is her favorite word.

But Casie is not normal. She suffers from a genetic disorder that — barring a medical miracle — will kill her before adulthood.

Cystic fibrosis is an inherited disease that strikes children, adolescents and young adults. It is the number one genetic killer of children in the U.S. today, and Casie is one of its victims.

In a recent interview, Casie's parents, David and Zina, discussed the disease's impact upon them and their family's life.

Casie was fine for the first one and a half years of her life, then she began having digestive troubles.

"She was crying constantly, and she wasn't gaining any weight," Zina said. "We kept going from doctor to doctor, trying to find out what was wrong."

"We had all kinds of trouble finding what was wrong," her husband echoed. "One doctor said it was because she was allergic to wheat."

While in Lubbock seeking treatment, one doctor suggested a colostomy for Casie — an idea that David quickly vetoed.

"I couldn't go for that," he said. "Because nobody knew for sure what was wrong with her. I told my wife, 'Let's try someone else.'"

Finally, a local physician, Dr. Mark Schwartz, suggested that they take Casie to Scott and White Hospital in Temple for specialized testing. It was there

Soccer group to play ball for CF

The Big Spring Youth Soccer Association will be getting its kicks this weekend fighting cystic fibrosis.

For every point scored in games Saturday and Sunday, money will be donated to the National Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, according to local chapter president Loyce Phillips. The winning team will be the one that raises the most money, she added.

Cystic fibrosis is an inherited disease that attacks a child's lung and digestive system. It causes difficulties in breathing and digestion, and is fatal, Phillips said.

Although no cure has been discovered, medical research of the disease has resulted in increased life spans for its victims, according to information released by the national foundation.

Locally, Mayor Cotton Mize will sign a proclamation designating Friday as "Kiss Your Baby Day" in Big Spring. Parents will be encouraged to kiss their children and check for a salty taste on their skin — a possible indicator of the disease, Phillips added.

For further information about the Kick-A-Thon, contact Phillips at 263-1738.

Supporters plan welcome for bands

Herald staff report

The Big Spring High School Steers Band placed 11th in state 4A marching band competition in Austin Monday. The Stanton High School Buffalo Band also placed 11th in state competition Monday.

Supporters in both cities will be welcoming the bands back home this afternoon.

"We're just as proud of our kids as if they had won the state championship," said Kent Bowerman, principal of the Big Spring High School, early today. The Big Spring Steers' marching band placed 11th in the state in their division.

The Big Spring High School Steer Band is expected home at 4 p.m. today, Bowerman said. Supporters will meet at the high school parking lot.

The out-of-the-finals ranking was a disappointment for director Ricky Mitchell, who had aimed for a top-five spot this year.

"I saw them in Austin yesterday," Bowerman said. "I thought they looked great. When you get in there to compete against the top 14 bands in the state, it's an honor just to be there. There were a lot of very good bands who did not get in the top five."

Bowerman spoke of the University Interscholastic League practice of naming the top five marching bands in each classification to march in the state finals.

The Crossroads area also was represented at the competition by the Stanton High School Buffalo band.

According to Wayne Mitchell, superintendent of Stanton Independent School District schools, the Buffalo Band's 1987 season marks the second trip to state in three years.

"We're certainly very proud of their accomplishment," he said of the Buffalo Band's 11th place finish. "They left a whole lot of people behind to get there."

The 2A marching contest this year pitted Stanton's 65-member marching band against the top dozen 2A bands in Texas.

"Two years ago," Mitchell said, "they made their first trip to state ever." He credited the band students and director Rick Lee with fine work.

The Buffalo Band is expected to arrive in Stanton at 4:30 today, Mitchell said.

The Steer Band's trip to state this year follows a 1986 season in which they were invited to march in Austin. Support for the band has been strong among BSHS students.

Refinery fire cause under investigation

Herald staff report

A glow from a fire in a diesel desulfurization unit at the Fina Oil and Chemical Big Spring Refinery on east I-80 lit up the sky northeast of town late Monday.

Cause of the fire, which started at about 9:30 p.m. and burned for two hours, was still under investigation early today, according to Refinery Personnel Coordinator Becky Jenkins.

No injuries were reported.

Refinery fire crews battled the blaze while Big Spring city firefighters stood by outside the refinery to render assistance if needed.

Black smoke, billowing from the fire, also rolled across I-80 decreasing visibility for motorists, according to witnesses.

The refinery desulfurization unit is designed to remove sulfur from diesel fuel, Jenkins said.

"We don't know how long the unit will be down," she said.

Work was underway this morning to remove remaining oil from the unit to allow further investigation of the cause of the fire, Jenkins said.

Official blamed for voting delay

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Bexar County elections administrator will appeal his suspension without pay, his attorney said, because he is being made a scapegoat for long delays that voters had to tolerate last week.

A county elections commission last week suspended the official, Marco A. "Tony" Gomez without pay until the end of the month.

County Judge Tom Vickers, chairman of the commission, also said Gomez would be on probation until the 1988 general election and would be monitored and evaluated until then.

Gomez will appeal the decision to the county commissioners today, attorney Frank Herrera said.

"I felt that he was a political scapegoat. The phenomenon was not unique to San Antonio," Herrera said. "There were problems all over the state, long voter lines, no ballots."

The county commissioners could reverse the elections commission decision if three of the five commissioners side with Gomez.

Gomez had made plans on a projection of 19 percent voter turnout, but the actual turnout was 26 percent. He had authorization to use 610 of the county's 1,300 voting machines and tried to send more out during the day.

One of 10 most wanted fugitives arrested

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — White supremacist Louis Ray Beam Jr., one of the FBI's 10 most wanted criminals, is to appear at a bond hearing on Thursday at Fort Smith, where he faces federal sedition charges.

Mexican Federal Judicial Police apprehended Beam at Guadalajara, Mexico, Friday night following a shootout with his 20-year-old wife in which a Mexican police officer was critically wounded. Beam was returned to Fort Smith Monday.

Sebastian County Circuit-Chancery Court Judge Don Langston, presiding at Beam's first appearance Monday, ordered Beam held without bond pending the hearing Thursday to determine whether he should be set free without bond.

Beam had requested that he be freed on his own recognizance until the bond hearing. He said he had never been convicted of a crime and called the charges against him "political persecution."

"I have no money. The Mexican police took everything," Beam told

SHEILA MARIE TOOHEY BEAM

Langston, who presided over the proceeding in the absence of Federal Magistrate Ned Stewart Jr. and U.S. District Judge Morris Arnold, both of whom were out of town Monday. Beam said he had never missed any of his more than 60 court appearances over the past decade.

Beam said he left the Houston area where his father was critically ill in early April, but he declined to say where he went or when and how he entered Mexico.

He entered no plea at the hearing but said at its conclusion, "I have come into this situation with my honor and I shall leave with my honor. Yahweh rules."

Yahweh is a Hebrew word meaning Jehovah or God.

When asked upon his arrival at the federal courthouse at Fort Smith if he plotted to overthrow the government, Beam jokingly said, "What else is a country boy going to do on a Saturday night when the only drug store in town is closed."

Candidate says drug use shouldn't be only factor

AUSTIN (AP) — Marijuana use alone shouldn't have disqualified Judge Douglas Ginsburg from consideration as a Supreme Court nominee, says former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, a Democratic presidential candidate who himself has admitted to experimenting with the drug.

"What I said at the time and would say now is I don't think of itself that should have barred him from consideration, no. What you want to do is see the entire record," Babbitt said Monday.

Ginsburg asked President Reagan over the weekend to withdraw his name from consideration for a seat on the nation's high court, citing the "clamor" over his admission about having used marijuana as recently as 1979.

Babbitt, who said he experimented with the illegal drug "maybe a half dozen times, probably a little less" in the 1960s, told a Capitol news conference he doesn't know whether that will become a campaign issue.

"That's for all of you to decide," he told a news conference. "If you want my personal opinion, I doubt that it would be the deciding factor in how I cast my vote for a candidate."

However, personal character is becoming an increasingly publicized issue in politics, Babbitt noted. "Everything in this new era enters into the calculus," he said.

Babbitt and another Democratic candidate, Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., on Saturday revealed that they had used marijuana in their younger days but said they regretted the illegal drug use.

Babbitt said he discussed the situation with his 10- and 12-year-old sons by telephone on Sunday and explained to them how it happened and what he thinks today.

"They had a lot of pretty sharp questions. We talked on the phone about it a long time," he said.

"I said to them essentially this: we've learned a lot since the '60s."

Refugees aren't on assembly line

Efficiency? The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service knows what that's all about. Just look at how the agency plans to streamline its handling of thousands of refugees seeking political asylum.

First, the agency would eliminate those cumbersome legal procedures that can drag on for months. No more immigration judges. None of those time-consuming courtroom rules. Instead, the INS would substitute its own "asylum officers," in-house experts who understand how to slice through red tape and decide quickly whether a refugee stays in this country or goes.

And, to help protect the privacy of the applicants — at least as the INS explains it — the hearings would be closed. Never mind if the person seeking political asylum wants to tell his story publicly. The INS knows a closed hearing is what's best for him, and not coincidentally, what's most expedient for the agency.

INS officials enthusiastically predict the proposed changes would help them catch up quickly with their backlog of 80,000 political asylum cases.

What the INS seems to have forgotten is the rule of law. America prides itself on its impartial and fair judicial system. It should apply to refugees as well as American citizens.

Respecting people's rights often involves hassles and delays. Even so, few would suggest we dispense with legal safeguards in our courts and go back to frontier justice.

That is why the INS should continue to hear its political asylum cases before immigration judges. They work under the auspices of the Justice Department, just as the INS does, but they have a separate office and function as independent administrative law judges.

The INS should drop this ill-conceived efficiency proposal, which was described by one California immigration attorney as "the single greatest attack on the rights of refugees that has taken place in this country."

The INS tried to sell its quick-fix, closed-hearing program by saying it would benefit the refugees. Great harm might come to these individuals, argued the officials, if they had to stand up in public and talk of the dangers they faced in their native lands.

If INS officials truly believe the applicants' lives are in danger, the best protection is to grant them asylum. Denying legitimate requests in secret is unjust to the refugees and makes a mockery of our laws.

Department of justice ruins one man's standing, career

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — This is the story of justice gone awry. It is also the story of one man's ordeal. His name is James M. Beggs, once a top executive for General Dynamics, who gave up big business for public service. He wound up running the space program for President Reagan. Those who know Jim Beggs describe him as "a straight arrow" and "unbendingly honest."

Jack Anderson

"He would rather lose his right arm than his honor," said an associate. Yet Beggs was wrongfully indicted by overzealous Justice Department prosecutors. In December 1985 they called two press conferences — one in Washington, the other in Los Angeles — to trumpet the false accusations.

The news was splashed on front pages and television screens across America. Overnight, Beggs' proud reputation lay in ruins. A year and a half later, when an embarrassed Justice Department had to drop the indictment and acknowledge it was all a terrible mistake, the announcement was tacked inconspicuously on a bulletin board in a Los Angeles courthouse.

What in the world went wrong? Sources who have followed the case closely say the Justice Department decided to crack down on the defense industry. The prosecutors selected General Dynamics, the sources say, before they decided exactly what the charges would be.

They zeroed in on a contract dispute over the development of the DIVAD anti-aircraft gun, which was eventually scrapped by the military as a failure. The eager support of Robert Bonner, the publicity-wise U.S. attorney in Los Angeles, who had jurisdiction over Pomona, where the gun was developed. The Justice Department sent a trial attorney, Gary Black, to Los Angeles to determine what laws might have been violated.

Black told his superiors at Justice that they had only a 50-50 chance of making the charges stick. Justice won't release Black's findings and he would not talk with us. But shortly after evaluating the case, Black transferred to a different division at Justice.

His replacement, Randy Bellows, plunged into "a web of laws and regulations," in the words of the court, "that almost defy understanding." He brought in auditors from the Army, Navy and Air Force.

He piled up stacks of papers loaded with technological and accounting data. He created a costly computer data base to sort out the complex details. He enlisted lawyers, investigators and technicians to help him analyze the accumulating material.

He still got it wrong. Court records suggest he simply did not understand the contract, the applicable laws or the Pentagon procedures. The contract merely asked for General Dynamics' "best effort" to meet the terms. Under the contract, the company probably could have delivered a bucket of bolts.

Nevertheless, Bellows obtained an indictment against Beggs, the executive who approved the contract, and three other company officials. The indictment charged that they conspired to defraud the government by shifting $7.5 million in cost overruns to other accounts.

Friends say Beggs was devastated. He was stripped of his security clearance, humiliated in front of associates and publicly disgraced. He resigned from the space program and spent the next two years without income trying to clear his name.

His daughter, Kathleen, took a leave of absence from her New York law firm to be by his side. They converted the basement of his home into a legal bunker stacked with depositions, motions and other assorted documents.

U.S. District Judge Ferdinand F. Fernandez, meanwhile, scolded the Justice Department for ignoring the exculpatory language in the contract. Bellows then asked him not to consider the contract in making his pretrial rulings. "This court will not do so," the judge declared. "It will consider the contract."

He also denounced the government for indicting corporate executives, including Beggs, without really tying them to the alleged conspiracy. "That is extraordinarily unfair," the judge said. Thus rebuffed, the prosecutors tossed in the towel and asked the judge to dismiss the case.

Under the American legal system, the Justice Department is totally immune from the mistakes it made and the torment it put Beggs through. The innocent victim lost a year and a half of his life, not to mention his job, his income and legal expenses. The prosecutors who were to blame paid no penalty at all and drew their full salaries.

Meanwhile, the cost to the taxpayer of the aborted investigation, at least by one estimate, was greater than the disputed amounts that precipitated it all.

MINI-EDITORIAL — At last there's a political mailing list we'd like to be on. The latest high-tech campaign technique is to send promotional video cassettes to undecided voters and potential grassroots campaign volunteers.

We don't quite swallow one campaign pro's claim that having the candidate's canned video biography is "the next best thing" to having him in our living room. (The phrase "next worst" would be more accurate, we suspect.)

But think of all those free, erasable video cassettes flooding into the mailbox.

Answers could mean a new turn in White House policy. Thanks to the dog dragging him, the President is almost to the White House door and Mr. Reagan's aides, who have been biting their nails, sigh with relief.

"MR. PRESIDENT," comes a chilling voice from the back of the press pen. "DO YOU THINK THE DOLLAR SHOULD GO UP OR DOWN?"

"I WILL NOT SAY WHAT I INTEND TO DO ABOUT IT BUT I WILL BE MEETING WITH MY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE TO MAKE SURE WE HAVE ALL THE WEAPONS THAT ARE NECESSARY."

"YES, AND TO SHOW GOOD FAITH THEY HAVE TO GET OUT OF AFGHANISTAN."

"I MEAN CONGRESS, NOT THE SOVIETS."

"I KNOW WHAT YOU MEAN. IT'S NOT MY FAULT THAT CONGRESS HAS ITS FEET IN CEMENT AND WON'T PUT UP THE MONEY FOR STAR WARS."

All the newspaper people are writing furiously because these freewheeling questions and answers could mean a new turn in White House policy. Thanks to the dog dragging him, the President is almost to the White House door and Mr. Reagan's aides, who have been biting their nails, sigh with relief.

Leave the skeletons in the closet

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

We're heading into round three, the lynch mob ready? So, Mr. Supreme Court nominee, what skeletons do you have in your closet?

Perhaps you thought you led a relatively sinless life — but wait a minute. Remember when you used to wet your bed, were caught cheating on a high school exam, and went to see a marriage counselor 20 years ago? Do you stand a chance of being nominated to serve on the nation's highest court?

With the scrutiny applied to Supreme Court nominees Robert Bork and Douglas Ginsburg, along with 1988 presidential candidates, it appears that running for public office or being nominated to a high-level governmental post has taken on a new meaning.

Take heed: Only the perfect need apply. If the pendulum continues to swing, America may soon find itself without any "qualified" candidates.

Disclosure of one's private blunders seems to capture the headlines more often than a candidate's or nominee's professional record.

Reagan's second Supreme Court nominee, Ginsburg, paid "a high price for smoking a few joints — a lifetime appointment at $104,100 year — not to mention the prestige of having one of the nation's most influential positions.

The 41-year-old judge withdrew his nomination Saturday after a storm of criticism resulted from his admission of having smoked marijuana in the 1960s and 1970s.

Ginsburg's sin — one which tens of thousands of Americans are guilty of — forced his withdrawal before much of the public, or the Senate, had a chance to weigh his professional qualifications for the post.

Too much attention has been focused on the personal lives of those running for public office — and to irrelevant events that happened many years ago.

If the trend continues, our nation will lose many capable leaders. Surprisingly, the marijuana incident overshadowed a perhaps more damaging disclosure concerning Ginsburg's past.

Just three days after being nominated, The Associated Press reported that Ginsburg directed a Justice Department cable television case while holding a $139,000 investment in a cable company — a potential conflict of interest.

Rarely do I see eye-to-eye with President Reagan, but I was pleased he defended his nominee by saying he had merely "erred in his youth." (Haven't we all?)

I also agreed with Reagan's comment that Ginsburg's past marijuana smoking had nothing to do with his judicial qualifications.

The nominee's statement brought forth a wave of admissions from Senate members — both Republicans and Democrats — of lighting up joints. (Perhaps giving new meaning to "Joint Committees.")

Two Democratic presidential candidates also have admitted to smoking marijuana.

Certainly, not all sins should be punished equally. Looking back at the presidential race disclosures, I still believe Gary Hart's sin, which amounted to a question of character, was indeed severe enough to disqualify him from public office.

Biden's sins, plagiarizing and lying about his law school transcripts, also were highly damaging.

Ginsburg's sin, however, should have been forgiven.

The "sin" list is a long one, ranging from presidential candidate Pat Robertson's child being conceived out-of-wedlock to the Michael Dukakis videotape affair.

I strongly believe it's important to put candidates' aberrations aside to look at the big picture — a person's overall qualifications. Of course, weighing the good against the bad is still an important process in choosing the most qualified leader.

Likewise, criticizing and debating a candidate's qualifications is an important part of the democratic process — but could it be getting out of control?

Why newsmen are losing their voices

The President held a press conference last week. It was his first one in eight months. Now Mr. Reagan can return to his usual way of communicating with the media — yelling.

This is how the Commander-in-Chief deals with the Fourth Estate. The President steps out of his helicopter onto the White House lawn.

A reporter trying to shout over the din of the copter says, "MR. PRESIDENT, ARE WE AT WAR WITH IRAN?"

The President cups his hand over his ear and shakes his head. When the question is repeated he yells back, "NO, I'M NOT SORRY I NOMINATED JUDGE BORK."

"MR. PRESIDENT, DO YOU THINK THERE IS GOING TO BE A STOCK MARKET CRASH SIMILAR TO THAT OF 1929?"

The President creases his forehead and then points his finger at the questioner, "IF IT WILL HELP OUR CONTRAS IN CEN-TRAL AMERICA, THEN I SAY A CRASH PROGRAM IS SOMETHING I WOULD SUPPORT."

Art Buchwald

Now the dog is getting away from Nancy, so the President grabs the leash. It's hard to control the dog and listen to a question at the same time, but the President manages to do it.

"MR. PRESIDENT," comes a voice that can barely be heard above the sound of the copter, "WHAT ABOUT NEW TAXES?"

"WE'RE GOING TO BRING THAT UP WHEN GORBACHEV COMES TO THE UNITED STATES. IF HE WANTS A MISSILE TREATY WITH US, HE BETTER STOP FIXING UP OUR MARINES WITH RUSSIAN GIRLS IN THE MOSCOW EMBASSY."

The President has made it halfway to the White House. Questions keep being thrown at him from the press pen. He pauses to listen to one from a network correspondent.

"MR. PRESIDENT, IS CONGRESS RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL THE TROUBLE IN THE COUNTRY?"

"YES, AND TO SHOW GOOD FAITH THEY HAVE TO GET OUT OF AFGHANISTAN."

"I MEAN CONGRESS, NOT THE SOVIETS."

"I KNOW WHAT YOU MEAN. IT'S NOT MY FAULT THAT CONGRESS HAS ITS FEET IN CEMENT AND WON'T PUT UP THE MONEY FOR STAR WARS."

By this time the White House staff is congratulating the President on the press conference.

Kennedy top prospect

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, nearing a decision on a new Supreme Court nominee, met Monday evening at the White House with his top prospect, Anthony M. Kennedy, an administration source said today.

Kennedy, an appeals court judge from Sacramento, Calif., was accompanied by Reagan's chief of staff, Howard Baker, and Attorney General Edwin Meese III, said the source.

The session came several hours after White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater termed Kennedy Reagan's "leading candidate" for the high court slot.

Stocks drop 44 points

NEW YORK — The dollar tumbled below the 134 yen level for the first time today, the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 44 points in early trading and clerks struck the New York Stock Exchange, intensifying worries in a market still plagued with post-crash uncertainty.

The Dow industrials, which lost nearly 60 points Monday in a nervous session, fell from 1,900.20 to the 1,856 level after about an hour of business.

"I think there's a buyers' strike out there," said Hank Striefler, a senior vice president at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York. "They're just looking for a little more confidence."

Airline statistics given

WASHINGTON — Almost one-fourth of major airlines' flights arrived at least 15 minutes late in September, the government announced today.

New statistics aimed at helping travelers choose airlines with the best service showed that American Airlines had the best on-time performance, arriving within 15 minutes of its schedule 84.5 percent of the time. USAir was last among the 14 carriers with a 67.4 percent on-time performance.

The statistics released by the Transportation Department were provided by the airlines and do not include delays caused by mechanical problems.

Union denies report

WASHINGTON — The Teamsters Union today denied as "totally groundless" a published report that Jackie Presser has been replaced as president of the 1.5-million-member union.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported today that Presser will be succeeded by Weldon Mathis, the second-highest officer in the union. Mathis, the Teamsters' general secretary-treasurer, denied Monday night that Presser is relinquishing his powers.

"That's not true at all," he said. "We expect him back in 30 days."

Asked today about the report, Teamsters spokesman Duke Zeller replied, "I flatly deny it. It's totally groundless."

Forest fires

Rain brings temporary relief

By WILLIAM E. SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

More rain fell today in the South, bringing relief to weary crews battling wildfires in 14 states, while firefighters in Oregon finally controlled a blaze that burned out of control for 71 days and charred nearly 100,000 acres.

Two people have died while battling the Southern forest fires which have charred more than 350,000 acres in 14 states in the worst fall fire season in two decades, said Doug Williams, a spokesman for the U.S.

A downpour was raining from the east Texas across Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky and West Virginia, helping to dampen the fires and clean the smoke from the air over much of the East and South, the National Weather Service said today.

A downpour Monday in Tupelo, Miss., dropped a record 3.7 inches of rain. Elsewhere, nearly 2 inches fell Monday at El Dorado, Ark., and more than two inches had fallen in parts of Tennessee by this morning.

The rain brought a welcome respite to the region's firefighters.

"We'll be taking a couple of days here to get rested up and move some of the Western foresters back home," Williams said. Fifteen firefighters from Arizona and New Mexico were heading home today, he said.

But he added, "This is not going to be the end of the fire season. ... This frontal system has some dry, cold air and there's going to be some pretty strong winds behind it. That will return some fire danger."

In Oregon, meanwhile, the 96,500-acre Silver forest fire was declared under control Monday, marking the symbolic end of a devastating fire season.

Fire officials flew over the charred heart of the Siskiyou National Forest to check flare-ups from increased winds before declaring the battle over, said spokesman Warren Olney.

At least 10,290 fires have burned 225,000 acres since Oct. 24 in 13 Southern states, Williams said. That doesn't include West Virginia, where 150,000 acres have been charred recently.

Smoke from the fires, which at one time stretched from West Virginia into New England, extended early today from eastern Tennessee to Maryland and Delaware, the weather service said.

In Kentucky, a 75-year-old firefighter died after suffering an apparent heart attack on Monday, a day after a 48-year-old man died while battling a blaze.

Rain in Kentucky aided the battle and enabled Gov. Martha Layne Collins to lift an emergency order barring travel into 12 million acres of forest land, clearing the way for a resumption of the hunting season.

The rain isn't expected to end the fire threat, however.

Arab heads meet again

AMMAN, Jordan — Syria sought to block its old rival Egypt from returning to the Arab League, but progress toward a united stand on the Iran-Iraq war was reported as the Arab summit entered a third day today.

The 21 Arab delegations went into closed session, and a conference source said they will continue efforts concerning the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

The session followed a morning meeting between King Hussein of Jordan and Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization. It was their first encounter in Amman since a joint effort for peace with Israel collapsed in February last year.

Death toll may reach 50

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Police today blamed a time bomb, possibly meant for a government target, for a blast that killed more than 30 people and injured 107 others.

Doctors at Colombo General Hospital said today the death toll from the blast during rush hour Monday probably will reach 50.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility. Police have mentioned rebels of the Tamil minority and radicals from the island's majority Sinhalese community as suspects.

Memorial to be unveiled

LONDON — An Englishman's 16-year battle for a memorial to 749 American soldiers killed in one of the forgotten tragedies of World War II ends Sunday when the United States finally honors their memory.

Operation Tiger, a dry run for the D-Day landings on England's south coast, resulted in one of the single largest losses of life after Pearl Harbor. But for more than three decades, details were kept secret and even now, few Americans have heard of it.

For 53-year-old Ken Small, the unveiling of a plaque Sunday commemorating the men who lost their lives in the English Channel off Slapton Sands beach on the Devon coast will mean that America has recognized one of its worst wartime setbacks.

Nazi victims honored

BERLIN — Ceremonies throughout west Germany and East Germany honored victims of the Nazis' first large-scale pogrom of Jews as historians and experts gathered at the villa in Berlin where the Holocaust was planned.

Monday's ceremonies marked the 49th anniversary of "Crystal Night," when Nazi toughs looted and burned Jewish businesses and synagogues across the country. It became known as Crystal Night because of the broken glass that littered the streets.

At least 91 Jews were killed during the action and more than 26,000 were arrested and immediately transported to concentration camps.

Mistress as guest is one too many for ex-wife

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I am 57 and have been divorced from "Joe" for five years. Joe broke up our 31-year marriage by saying he didn't love me anymore, but he did love his secretary, who was 24 at the time. (Joe was 54). They are living together in a house he bought for her five years ago. They are not married.

The problem now is that our 24-year-old son is getting married in December, and Joe is bringing his mistress to the wedding. Abby, I just can't handle her being there. I have been hurt enough without having this woman flaunted in front of my family and friends.

Is there anything I can do to keep her from coming? Joe and I do not speak to each other, but I called him to ask if he planned to bring her, and he said yes. Would it help to appeal to her not to come? I want my son's wedding to be a happy occasion for all of us.

WAITING FOR AN ANSWER
DEAR WAITING: One fact of life that many people have difficulty acknowledging: You can't control the behavior of others — only your own. Yes, you could appeal to Joe's mistress to stay away, but unless she has the IQ of a houseplant, she already knows that her presence at your son's wedding will make you uncomfortable.

Go to your son's wedding, hold your head high and quit worrying about who else will be there. And please remember, above all, that this day belongs to your son and his bride, so do your part to make the day a happy one.

DEAR ABBY: I repeatedly told my former boss not to touch me, hold my hand, play with my hair or pat my rear. He persisted, and rejecting him cost me my job. Abby, your statement that some people feel that their space has been violated is true. However, when I told him to stop it, he referred to me as the "Ice Queen." Because of his abusive ways and unwelcome touches, a federal judge will now have to decide this case.

My former firm calls me...
THE PLAINTIFF
DEAR PLAINTIFF: Hooray for you for standing your ground! And for other women (or men) who have lost their jobs because they refused to put up with their boss's unwelcome touching, holding and patting — contact your nearest Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Sexual harassment is an unlawful employment practice under federal law.

Differences

Solving generational problems

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
A Meredith Magazine

The first thing to look into when feeling upset about the way young parents are raising a grandchild is to determine whether the problem is real or imagined. It's easy enough to figure out the distinction by answering three simple questions: Is the child safe? Is the child healthy? Is the child happy?

According to Better Homes and Gardens' Grandparents magazine if any one answer is no and the parents are not taking appropriate action, there is a problem. But if all answers are yes, the issue is simply one of generational differences in method and life style, and what makes the parents "problem parents" is the belief that the grandparent's way is the only right way.

Older generations have to accept that new knowledge has brought new approaches, that not everything done differently today is necessarily wrong. Prospective grandparents should attend childbirth-education classes along with the mother-to-be. If distance makes this impossible, seek out such sessions in the immediate area.

Knowledge makes many problems go away, but not all. Marital differences are certainly among the most tenacious. Parents who seem headed for divorce rank high as problem parents, regardless of which one is at fault. Normal home life is disrupted. The children live in terror that they might lose the love of Mom or Dad or maybe both. At the same time, the parents vie for the kids' affections and try to undermine each other. It's a scenario of emotional disaster and, sometimes, neglect.

A grandparent's top priority is to provide the safe harbor of family continuity lacking in the home.

See if the marriage can be saved. Often it can't, but it's worth a try. Don't take sides or play referee either. Rather, enlist the help of friends, clergy or a marriage counselor, and team up with the other set of grandparents. When serious concern on both sides of the family becomes evident, this sometimes helps the couple to reconcile.

Frenzied living also makes for problem parents. What makes such a situation a grandparent's business is that children need parents when they need them, not just during the "quality time" scheduled at a busy mom's or pop's convenience.

It is difficult to persuade parents to change their way of life once they've succumbed to the upward-mobility bug. Without appearing to be critical, ask if the extra income is really needed, because it might be. In that case, offer to pitch in financially. Try to enlist the other grandparents in helping the couple. A family conference, without stinging remarks, might help in this regard.

As the family's backup support system fills the gaps left by the busy parents. Instead of having paid strangers take care of the kids, spend more time with them. Baby-sit them, play with them, study with them, have them over for real meals, take them on outings and vacations.

Remember that, even more than under normal circumstances, emphasize a grandparent's function as the vital link in the clan's continuity; to imbue the kids with family history and traditions and with ethnic and religious values.

Supply the structure that children need and subconsciously yearn for. They sense the excessive permissiveness is a form of neglect. Grandparents have an advantage in laying down rules because kids only rarely rebel against grandparents' authority. Have them for frequent visits and insist — without nagging of course — that they adhere to the rules.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

From the Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES:
This is not a day to force issues, since most everyone you'll meet is feeling touchy. Praise and encouragement will work much more effectively. Problems may arise at a place of amusement tonight.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
Avoid an argument with your family or a close friend this morning, or you'll be in a lousy mood all day. Don't drive aggressively.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)
When communicating with others, be sure you are understood correctly. Try to calm down an associate who is apt to be disturbed.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21)
Look for errors in important reports and statements which could be disastrous. Be extremely cautious in motion of any kind tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21)
Get busy improving your income so you can stop moping about being a "have not." Control your temper at home this evening.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21)
Be cautious about revealing confidential information, or you'll get yourself into some trouble which you can't get out of.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)
A new associate may have you irked, but control your temper until you can get some further information on this person from your mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
Try to become more independent. Your superiors will not be impressed if you're constantly asking favors of others in the workplace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
You'll hear some new ideas today which sound suspicious, but don't form an instant opinion. Wait until tonight to think them over.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
Be sure you handle any obligations before running off to some adventures. It may pay you to be suspicious of a newcomer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)
Try to be more understanding of an associate instead of immediately opposing every idea. Don't sign any contracts at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)
You'll be given a lot of work which has to be done yesterday, so get "in gear." Be particularly careful when dealing with people all day.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20)
Even if schedule changes are necessary, get out to some relaxing amusement. Steer clear of an egotistical friend tonight.

If Your Child Is Born Today
He or she will be very close to the home and family in early years, and may need a bit of encouragement to test his or her own wings. Later, however, your progeny will be a hard worker, but may tend to be somewhat boastful, so teach your child a sense of humility.

Crossroads Chalk Talk

Crossroads Country teams ended the season as they began: on a winning note. With the exception of Garden City, last Friday was the regular season finale for area teams. The Crossroads ended the 10th week of play with a 4-3-1 record.

The Sands Mustangs are the only area team to make the state playoffs by virtue of Friday's 30-24 win over the upset-minded Grady Wildcats. The Mustangs, winners of District 4-A Six-Man South Zone, will play Jayton Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Post. Sands goes into the playoffs with an 8-2 record.

A team that had a chance for the playoffs but saw hopes end Friday night was the Forsan Buffaloes. The Buffaloes were upset by the Rankin Red Devils 44-22, ending a four-year playoff-berth string. The Buffaloes finish the season with a 6-4 record. Over the past four years, Forsan has compiled a 39-7-2 mark.

The Colorado City Wolves finished out a successful 7-3 season by downing Sonora 34-7. Garden City raised its record to 3-6 with a 21-14 victory over Miles, and Klondike finished a 5-5 season by dominating Dawson 46-14.

The Coahoma Bulldogs finished their season on a semi-positive note by tying pre-district favorite Merkel, 14-14. The Bulldogs finish the season with a 2-7-1 record.

In other area action, the Stanton Buffaloes finished the season with a 3-7 record, dropping a 13-12 decision to Ozona. Borden County lost 46-14 to playoff-bound Wellman. Borden County finishes the season with a 3-7 mark.

Here is what area coaches had to say about last week's games. Jan East, Forsan, on his team's loss to Rankin which prevented Forsan from going to the state playoffs: — "We played fairly decent. They made four big plays and we were a couple of steps from breaking the big one. That was the difference in the ballgame. "It's kind of strange putting your gear up for the year. We're used to playing at this time of the year. If we had won one of the last two games we would be in the playoffs. It's disappointing. We never did get where we should have with this ballclub."

Joe Bond, Borden County, on his team's loss to Wellman: — "We really didn't play very well, but Wellman has a good ballclub. Jimmy Rios, our starting running back and linebacker, had a pulled groin muscle and didn't play. We really missed him both ways. "Wellman was fired up for the game. Their kids played well."

Sid McCowan, Sands, on his team's narrow win over Grady and this week's playoff game against Jayton: — "Grady played a heck-of-a game. They really played good football. Jay Fryar (Sands' leading rusher) suffered a concussion in the Loop game and the doctor wouldn't turn him loose for this one. "During the game, all six of our starters had something happen to us. We had two sprained ankles, two thigh bruises, one bruised rib and one arm injury. "We'll get another shot at Jayton. They have a good football team. I hope we'll be at full strength by Friday."

Steve Park, Coahoma, on his team's tie with Merkel: — "The kids showed a lot of character coming back and driving for the tying touchdown late in the game. It will leave a good taste in our mouth for off-season. Merkel is a good ballclub. They were the preseason pick to get into the playoffs."

Dale Ruth, Stanton, on his team's narrow loss to Ozona: "It was a stunner. On their last drive they had a fourth and 21, the quarterback completed a pass and they made it. On the winning touchdown they threw a flair pass, we missed two tackles and they scored. "It's ironic, in the first game of the season we win in the last seconds against Seagraves, and the last game we lose in the last seconds."

Tom Ham, Klondike, on the Cougars' win over Dawson: — "The kids played good, an excellent second half. We were a little flat and tentative the first half. We had a discussion at halftime and I think the kids realized they wanted to end the season on a positive note, especially the seniors. "We came out and scored 28 points in the third quarter."

Sam Scott, Garden City, on his team's win over Miles and this week's season finale against Sterling City: — "We were due. Everybody, the coaches and players, had gone through five weeks of playing good enough to win. We didn't do anything different, we just got the ball in the end zone. "We held them to 17 yards rushing and we took three drives over 70 yards and put it in the end zone. We've been driving it to the 10 and faltering. "Sterling City is going to the playoffs. It just depends what happens Friday whether they'll go as the first team or runner-up. They'll line up and run the inside and outside veer. They have two of the best running backs in the district."

Mike Mathis, Grady, on his team's near-upset of Sands: — "I thought we had a real good opportunity to win it. The kids played real well. If they had played this well all season, we would have won more than two games. "We've got to get the kids to play consistent. When we do, the days of the losing Grady Wildcats might just be over. "I'm totally pleased with our progress. I think we know how much better we can be next year."

Tom Ramsey, Colorado City, on his team's season-ending victory over Sonora: — "It was a good way to end the season. We had 420 yards offense in basically three quarters and our defense snuffed 'em. Take away two long runs and they had a little over 100 yards total offense. "It was a good game. We got to play everybody."

Cisco whips Queens, 77-50

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Howard College Hawk-Queens and coach Don Stevens would like to forget Monday's basketball game against the Cisco Junior College Lady Wranglers as quickly as possible. There won't be any fond memories in the Queens' 77-50 loss to CJC at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The Lady Wranglers, the defending Northern Junior College Athletic Conference champs for the past three seasons, outplayed the Queens in every phase of the game while getting the win. The victory was even more impressive than the 71-54 victory CJC took over the Queens in the opening round of the McLennan tournament last week.

In that game the Queens played the Lady Wranglers on almost even terms for the first half. In Monday's game, Cisco dominated from start to finish.

"We played poorly in every phase of the game," said Stevens after the contest. "Cisco played well, but we're better than what we showed," he said of his eight-woman squad.

"We were real flat and played with no intensity in the first half." The Lady Wranglers certainly played like defending conference champs. CJC shot a hot 55 percent from the floor and 89 percent from the line, while forcing 23 Howard turnovers.

Meanwhile the Queens shot 35 percent from the floor and 44 percent from the line.

Cisco led from the start when Stacy Scott hit an outside jumper. The only tie in the game came when Howard forward Karen Mitchell sank two foul shots to tie the game at 2-2 with 19 minutes left in the first half.

Cisco took a 7-4 lead at the 15:37 mark and then turned the tide of the game by going into its halfcourt press. The press prevented Howard from scoring in a two minute span as the Lady Wranglers took a 13-4 lead.

Howard broke the drought when sophomore post player Stefanie Massie turned in a three-point play at the 15:37 mark.

From that point on the Cisco press took its toll and CJC forwards

Naidene Tiemann and Tia Rosser shot well from the inside.

Over the next 10 minutes Cisco outscored Howard 15-7, taking a 28-14 advantage with 3:55 left in the first half.

Rosser scored inside just before the half and Cisco took a 40-20 advantage into intermission.

The Queens managed just 20 shots in the first half, connecting on six while the Lady Wranglers hit on 16 of 33 attempts. Adding to their woes, Howard made just five of 15 foul shots.

Massie led the first half Howard scoring, making five of seven field goals for 11 points. The 5-11 forward ended the contest with a game-high 18 points and eight

Seahawks play muffed ball and lose

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The weather was just like home in Seattle — cool and drizzly. But the Seattle Seahawks play their home games indoors at the Kingdome, which may explain why they played muffed ball rather than football.

The preseason favorite to represent the AFC in the Super Bowl lost to the New York Jets 30-14 Monday night by making just about every mistake a team can make. They included:

— Nine penalties for 101 yards, three of them holding calls that stopped their own drives, two more roughness calls which gave the Jets 15 yards extra on drives that ended in scores. Jets chipped in with 13 penalties for 94 yards, turning the game into something akin to the football follies played by replacement teams during the strike season in September and October.

— A 15-yard shanked punt by Ruben Rodriguez that set up the New York Jets touchdown that increased a 20-14 lead to 27-14; a muffed snap by Rodriguez that set up a Pat Leahy field goal. The Jets contributed, too — Jo Jo Townsend, who earlier returned a punt 91 yards for a touchdown, muffed one the Seahawks recovered at the 3-yard-line, leading to the touchdown that sent them on their way to a temporary 14-13 lead.

— Turnovers that killed Seattle's first two drives — an interception by New York's Harry Hamilton in the end zone; a fumble by Curt Warner at the Jets' 21. Another interception by Hamilton that was augmented by a 15-yard roughness call on Ron Mattes that put the Jets in position for Pat Leahy's 35-yard field goal that gave New York a 10-0 halftime lead.

In fact, the first two Seattle drives were stopped by turnovers; two of the next three by holding calls against center Blair Bush, one of which wiped out a first-down run to the New York 48 by Warner, another which nullified a 21-yard pass from Dave Krieg to Mike Tice that carried to the Jets' 49.

"We ended up stopping ourselves, we always seemed to be in first and 20," Krieg said. "The Jets played well, but this was a game we could have won and should have won."

"Our emotions got a little high," said Mattes, a sentiment seconded by Jets linebacker Bob Crable. "And there were some bad calls. The 15-yard call on me, two guys had me and I was protecting myself. I was stopping a fight."

The Jets, like many winners, made light of their mistakes. "Hey, I learned a lesson," said Townsend, whose muffed came when he tried to field a Rodriguez punt on a bounce, only to watch it slither away on the wet artificial turf. "I was aggressive on the first one and I got a touchdown out of it. I wasn't aggressive on the second and it hurt us. But we won the game in the end, so you can call it a learning experience."

Tournament has strong field

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Local basketball fans will get a chance to see some fine hoop play this weekend when the Howard College Hawks host the Hawk Tournament Thursday through Saturday at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Howard head coach Jerry Kassin and assistant Joe Huber have assembled one of the toughest eight-team fields in the history of the tournament. This is the first time in recent years the tournament has fielded eight teams. Usually it has been four teams with no real winner being determined.

This year a winner will be declared with the championship game taking place at 9 p.m. Saturday.

Headlining the field will be the Midland College Chaparrals, the number four ranked team in the nation. The Chaps are coming off winning their own tournament last week. Midland will play Trinity Valley College, formerly Henderson County College, at 9 p.m. Thursday.

Besides Midland and Trinity, other teams entered are Hill Junior College, Kilgore Junior College, Blinn College, Western Texas College and Cisco Junior College.

Starting off Thursday action will be a 2 p.m. contest with Western Texas taking on Cisco Junior College. At 4, Kilgore Junior College will play Blinn College and Howard College and Hill College will follow at 7 p.m. The evening of hoops will be closed out by the Midland College Trinity Valley contest at 9.

The winner of the Howard-Hill contest will play the winner of the Kilgore-Blinn contest at 7 p.m. Friday. The loser of the games will play Friday at 2 p.m.

"We're excited without question about hosting this tournament," said coach Kassin. "It's a very strong field. Midland is the team that stands up above the rest, and the rest of the field is pretty even."

"Midland College is a well-coached team, very unselfish. We matched up well with them. They are not that tall of a team. They go 6-7, 6-7 and 6-5 on their front line," said Kassin.

Kassin is hoping for avid fan support in the tournament.

"I hope the fans realize we need support in bringing in a tournament like this. We tried to bring in the most exciting teams we could find. With the type of facilities we have, it would be nice to see the town support this tournament every year.

"I hope the fans turn out and back us. That way they give us a chance to show them what we can do," he said of his 2-2 Hawks.

Kassin has liked what he's seen of his team so far. "It's no question we've made progress from the start of the year. More than anything I've seen the intensity level grow."

OU loses ground in poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Injury-plagued Oklahoma, the nation's top-ranked team all season, lost ground for the fourth week in a row in the Associated Press college football poll.

Oklahoma, Nebraska, Miami and Florida State held onto the first four positions today for the fifth consecutive week while UCLA, Syracuse, Notre Dame and Georgia climbed two places apiece and Arkansas replaced Florida in the Top Twenty.

Oklahoma's 29-10 victory over No. 12 Oklahoma State cost the Sooners the services of quarterback Jamelle Holieway and fullback Lydell Carr for the rest of the season but earned them 36 of 60 first-place votes and 1,164 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Nebraska, which has been second to Oklahoma in every poll this season, defeated Iowa State 42-3 and received 15 first-place ballots for 1,137 points. Last week, Oklahoma led 38-15 in first-place votes and 1,173-1,137 in points.

The other nine first-place votes and 1,111 points went to Miami of Florida, which is No. 3 for the seventh consecutive week after defeating Miami of Ohio 54-3. Last week, the Hurricanes had seven first-place votes and 1,108 points.

Two weeks ago, Oklahoma led Nebraska 40-13 in first-place votes and 1,176-1,134 in points.

Queens

rebounds. The start of the second half was even worse for the Queens as they went almost five minutes before scoring their first basket.

Cisco continued to pack the ball inside and score against Howard's 2-3 zone. By the time Cindy Johnson sank a 12-footer for Howard's first basket of the half, CJC had taken a 50-22 lead at the 15:15 mark.

By the 11:35 mark the lead had grown to 62-28 and Cisco started to empty its bench.

Though the Queens hustled throughout the game, it seemed they just couldn't get any momentum going their way. At times it appeared they were trying too hard. A few times, they would gain the advantage on a fast break and simply throw the ball away.

One bright spot for Howard was the second half shooting of Mitchell. After suffering a knee injury in the first half, Mitchell came back and bombed three three-pointers to the delight of the sparse Howard crowd.

Mitchell also was the only Queen who had her touch at the foul line. She was seven of eight from the line, ending the game with 16 points and six rebounds.

Tiemann led a balanced CJC scoring attack with 17 points. She was followed by Scott and Roser who scored 14 and 10 points respectively.

"In the second half we had a burst of energy and we moved the ball good," said Stevens. "Normally against a team like Cisco that shoots good from the outside and has veterans on the inside, you'd play a pressure defense. We tried a little man-to-man for a while but we got so tired so we had to go back to our 2-3 zone. They did a good job of working the ball inside."

Howard, now 0-4 for the season, hasn't seen the last of Cisco. The Queens open the first round of the Odesa tournament against the 4-1 Lady Wranglers at 4 p.m. Thursday.

"It's hard to beat a ballclub three times. I expect us to play better," said Stevens.

Meet Berthe Morisot

Meet Berthe Morisot

Many years ago, there was a French family that enjoyed painting. They would often sit outdoors and pass many hours working on their canvases.

The mother was an important Impressionist painter. Her name was Berthe Morisot (Mor-e-so). Although she was married, she always painted under her maiden name. She lived from 1841-1895.

Museum of Art, Rhode Island School of Design

Edouard Manet (1832-1883) was a famous French painter. Morisot was a good friend who sometimes modeled for him, as she did in the portrait above. Although Manet never exhibited with the Impressionists, he influenced them greatly. Before his time, most paintings told a story. He introduced the idea of painting everyday scenes in informal poses.

The father was Eugene Manet. He was a landowner and writer who also liked to paint. He had an older brother, Edouard, who was a famous painter.

The daughter was Julie Manet. Since her mother had a studio at home, Julie grew up around art and artists.

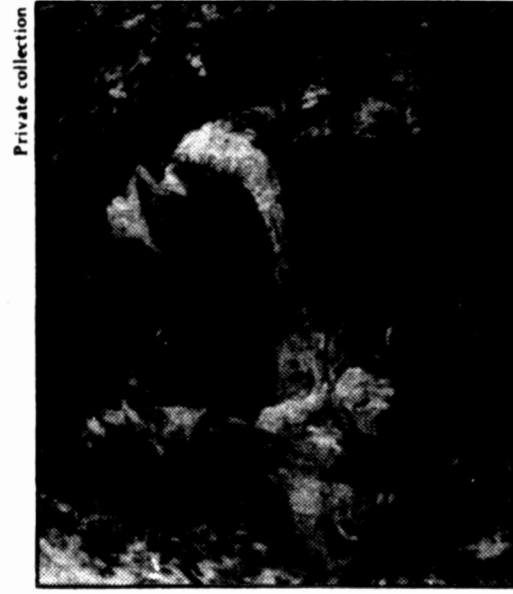

Berthe Morisot grew up in a well-to-do family. At that time, women were not allowed to go to art schools. Berthe and her two sisters took private art lessons.

The Morisots often invited young people into their home for Tuesday evening get-togethers. Many of the eligible men included were young artists.

Throughout her career, Berthe Morisot met and exchanged ideas with many of the Impressionists. She exhibited with them in their first show in Paris in 1874.

Some considered her the boldest and most original artist of the group.

An exhibition of Berthe Morisot's works will be on view at the National Gallery of Art through Nov. 29, 1987. It was organized by the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum in association with the National Gallery of Art. Future showings: Kimbell Art Museum, Fort Worth, Texas, Dec. 12, 1987-Feb. 21, 1988; Mount Holyoke College Art Museum, South Hadley, Mass., March 14-May 9, 1988.

Private collection
Morisot's husband, Eugene, and daughter, Julie, posed for this painting. He holds a sketch book in this painting titled "Eugene Manet and His Daughter in the Garden" (1883).

Private collection
Julie, Morisot's only child, often served as a model for her mother. Morisot painted "By the Lake" in 1884.

Popular Paintings

Impressionist Artists

Widener Collection, National Gallery of Art

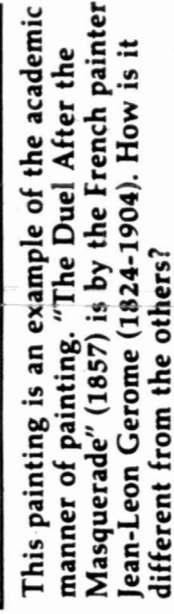

Many people think that Claude Monet (1840-1926) was the most important of the first French Impressionists. He was interested in how light affected his subjects. For example, he made several paintings of Rouen Cathedral (dated 1843) at different times of day.

Edgar Degas (1834-1917) liked to paint people as if they had not posed but rather were caught unaware. He is especially known for his ballet paintings such as "Before the Ballet" (1888).

Auguste Renoir (1841-1919) often painted figures rather than landscapes. He used rich colors and solid forms such as those in "A Girl With a Watering Can" (1876).

This painting is an example of the academic manner of painting. "The Duel After the Masquerade" (1857) is by the French painter Jean-Léon Gérôme (1824-1904). How is it different from the others?

Paintings done many years ago by Impressionist artists are the most popular ones in many art museums today. When artists paint in the Impressionist manner, they use fresh, bright colors that capture what their eyes really see.

The first Impressionists discovered how to show that light had color. They seldom used black in their light-filled paintings.

To some people, Impressionist paintings look unfinished. To enjoy most of them you should stand several feet away. For example, up close a simple brush stroke might appear to be just that, while at a distance it would appear to be a person or object. Today, this style is very familiar. But that was not the case when a group of French painters held the first exhibition and introduced the Impressionist style to the art world more than 100 years ago. Their paintings were so different from the darker colors and sharp lines that most critics accepted as "the way" to paint. This old way was called the academic style. Academic paintings usually told a story. Impressionist paintings did not.

This painting captured a moment in time that seems as fresh to us today as it did then. The Impressionist artists usually painted pleasant scenes about everyday life. They often painted outdoors.

Alpha Fact-A-Poem

R as in Rattlesnake

When a rattlesnake's tail rattles, that does not always mean it is ready to strike. The sound is a warning for the enemy to get away.

S as in Sheep

During World War I, President Woodrow Wilson used sheep power instead of manpower to trim the White House lawn. The men were needed to serve in the armed forces.

Tracing debts

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

October marked the first anniversary of President Reagan's signing of the Tax Reform Act of 1986. It was a glorious day, but many of us may have paid too much attention to the lower tax rates and too little to the fine print. Here's one tax reform booby trap that Changing Times magazine says could not only complicate your life but also cost you money.

Before tax reform, interest was interest. Almost any you paid could be written off as an itemized deduction. No more. Congress phased out the deduction for "personal" interest on debts like car loans and credit cards. This year only 65 percent of such interest is deductible, 40 percent next year, 20 percent in 1989 and 10 percent in 1990. After that, zilch.

So far so good. But the change is accompanied by a mind-bending set of rules that distinguish between different kinds of interest. Personal interest is subject to the phaseout. Passive-activity and investment interest deductions are limited by the corresponding type of income you report. Business and qualified-residence interest remain fully deductible.

Now comes the zinger: It's up to you to trace the use of debt to prove what's what. Proposed IRS regulations make it clear that it's borrowed money is used — not the source of the loan or how it is secured — that determines which pigeonhole the interest fits in for tax purposes.

The primary lesson from these rules is to keep a paper trail tracing any borrowed funds — the date and source of the loan, how the money was used and payments you made.

Consider this example. You borrowed $100,000 on Jan. 1 and put the proceeds in a checking account. On April 1, you withdrew $20,000 to invest in a limited partnership — a passive activity. On Sept. 1, you used $40,000 of the loan to pay for a trip to Europe that included the purchase of a new car — two major personal expenses.

Assuming no other expenditures from the account and no repayment of the debt, here's the way the IRS sees things: All the interest that accrued between Jan. 1 and March 31 is investment interest. From April 1 through Aug. 31, 20 percent of the interest is considered passive-activity interest and 80 percent investment interest. From Sept. 1 to year-end, 40 percent is investment interest, 20 percent is assigned to the passive activity and 40 percent is personal interest.

There's a major exception to the rule that how the borrowed money is used determines the tax status of the interest. When qualified-residence interest is involved — basically, that means debt secured by your home — it is deductible, no questions asked.
