Spring City snuffs out smoking ordinance

By BILL FOSTER

Staff Writer All the talk was for naught.

Plans for an ordinance banning smoking in public places were ashcanned Tuesday when Big Spring City Council members decided to not even consider such a law.

An hour-long work session, during which council members engaged in a spirited debate of the issue, produced one result — leave things the way they are.

City Council's decision to can any efforts to draft a anti-smoking ordinance lays to rest an issue that has been the topic of community debate for the past month. The smoking ban issue first sur- D.D. Johnson and Gary Don Carey

Joyce and George Riddle attended a later council meeting with petitions containing the names of more than 600 citizens who opposed any city law that would prohibit smoking in public places. Both sides' petitions eventually grew to contain the signatures of more than 1,000 people on each document. Council members Pat Deanda,

Prisoner blend, security should avoid uprisings

By BILL FOSTER Staff Writer

Strict security guidelines and an inmate population blend of nationalities will help prevent violent riots like those instigated by Cuban prisoners at federal detention centers in Atlanta, Ga. and Oakdale, La. from occuring at a privately-operated detention center planned for construction in Big Spring, according to City Councilman Johnny Rutherford.

A complicated lease/sublease operating agreement between the city and Mid-Tex Detention Center was approved by City Council at Tuesday's meeting. The agreements clear the way for eventual construction of a medium-level detention center at the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark.

Plans call for construction of the center on 36 acres of city-owned property, directly east of Freecom Inc., on the opposite side of the main runway. Although Mid-Tex's lease/sublease agreement with the city becomes effective Dec. 1, no date has been set for start of construction on the detention center. Rutherford said. Construction of the facility is contingent on Mid-Tex's ability to secure financial backing for the project, according to Rutherford.

The proposed facility will house about 500 illegal The detention center would house mainly immigration law violators, such as those who repeatedly enter the country, or who are convicted of transporting or smuggling illegal aliens into the United States, Tom Belaski, former superintendent of the Big Spring

Federal Prison Camp, said earlier this year. The types of prisoners to be housed at the center would pose a greater risk of flight than those at the federal prison camp, but the more dangerous prisoners would go to a higher security-level prison,

Rutherford, who has been directly involved with efforts to locate the center in Big Spring, said in an interview this morning he is confident that inmate uprisings similar to those now occuring at federal prisons in Georgia and Louisiana won't be likely

"There will be a blend of prisoners of different nationalities housed at the center here," he said.

That blend of nationalities will prevent large numbers of prisoners from rioting for a common goal such as the Cuban inmates are doing in Georgia and Louisinana, Rutherford said.

"The prisoners housed here won't have a lot in common," he said. Riots by prisoners at both facilities were triggered by a U.S./Cuban agreement to return more than 2,500 Cuban detainees to their communist homeland. UPRISINGS page 2-A

Federal officials are under attack

Dallas Times Herald Bureau WASHINGTON — As efforts continued Tuesday to douse the smoldering tensions in prisons in Atlanta and Louisiana, federal officials came under attack for ignoring the Cuban detainee problem for too long, mishandling the announcement that sparked the riots, and offering a solution that may prove hollow. Singled out for criticism were the Justice Department, which lawmakers and others blamed for allowing the situation to get out of control, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, accused of contributing to the mounting frustrations and mistrust by its reluctance to grant full hearings to the Former Bureau of Prisons chief Norman Carlson, while refusing to "secondguess" the administration, said the situation in Atlanta always has been volatile. He said that those who fault the Atlanta prison staff for not "locking down" the facility after the Oakdale uprising Sunday have short memories.

In 1984, when the first pact for returning prisoners to Cuba was signed, the detainees were locked into cells but violence still erupted, and continued fitfully for a year, said Carlson, who retired in July and now teaches at the University of Minnesota

Board purchasing property

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer The Big Spring school district Board of Trustees decided to buy two property lots — but tabled further purchases — Tuesday afternoon.

Members also agreed to a con-

The property bought by the district — for $6,500 — consists of two lots across from the high school, at 610 Eleventh Place and 1104 Benton Street. The land is currently owned by Johnnie Shortes, according to Superintendent Bill Trott, INS Commissioner Alan C. Nelson and other officials met with representatives of two busloads of women who arrived from Miami Tuesday afternoon.

The women, mostly wives and mothers of Cuban detainees, issued a bilingual plea to their loved ones to trust the attorney general's promise that no one would be deported without a fair hearing and to end the standoff without hurting

Trott said the women - as well as the detainees - were assured that the hearings would consider the Cubans' crimes, their family situations and "any mistakes that might have been made.

To Wade Henderson, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer who has been fighting for three years to secure legal rights for the detainees, Trott's assurances fall short of what is needed to convince the inmates that they can trust the government.

Still, Wolchok praised the officials for their restraint so far in not storming either facility. "I was the detainees in Oakdale had learn- expecting a military action but this ed that several hundred of them has been an appropriate

Neill Horton Payne, 32, was arrested by FBI agents Tuesday at his north Austin office and charged with harboring Beam in October, said Byron Sage, agent in charge of the Austin FBI office

Beam was on the FBI's list of 10 most-wanted fugitives when he was arrested Nov. 6 in Guadalajara, Mexico, on charges of seditious conspiracy for plotting the violent overthrow of the U.S. government.

Payne was arraigned by U.S. Magistrate Stephen Capelle and was being held without bond Tuesday night at the Federal Correctional Institution in Bastrop pending a detention hearing scheduled for today.

The charge of harboring a federal fugitive carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine. The FBI is recommending that Payne be held without bond until troopers his trial, which had not been scheduled, Sage

Hostage trial deliberation begins

FORT WORTH (AP) — A young boy says he would convict the man who held him hostage for eight hours at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and not find him innocent by reason of insanity as the defense contends.

Two people die in Texas storms

VAN VLECK (AP) — Two people died and two others were injured today as a deadly tornado struck the state for the second time in two weeks, authorities said.

A 10-year-old girl and a 23-yearold woman were killed when the tornado struck a mobile home in this rural area, located about six miles east of Bay City, said Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox.

He said a 3-year-old boy and a 7-month-old boy were injured in the storm. Both were taking to Matagorda General Hospital where the 3-year-old was in stable condition and the 7-month-old was in good condition, Cox said.

The names of the dead and injured were not released pending notification of immediate family members, said Matagorda County Sheriff Sam Hurta.

The tornado also blew roofs off other homes, ripped apart trees and pushed cars off roads, but no other injuries were reported, Hurta said. Weather in the area later improved, he said.

'It is pretty much gone," said Hurta. "We still have some rain, but nothing of a serious nature like

The destruction of the home was reported by a relative who lived in the area, Hurta said.

Matagorda was among the counties struck Nov. 15 and 16 after a series of killer storms rampaged through East and Central Texas, killing 10 and injuring more than

"It's kind of unusual that lightning, or in this case tornadoes, would strike twice in the same place," Cox said.

Meanwhile, strong thunderstorms rumbled across Northeast and Southeast Texas this morning, producing heavy rains and increasing the likelihood of flash flooding for parts of Northeast and Southeast Texas.

The violent weather and heavy rains prompted numerous flash flood watches and warnings along with a severe thunderstorm watch for Southeast Texas during the Lightning and heavy rains caused about 20,000 customers to lose electrical power overnight, mostly in the northern and western parts of Harris County, said Houston Lighting & Power Co. spokesman Graham Painter.

More than 9 inches of rain was recorded in Walker County, forcing closure of several roads, but no major damage or injuries were reported, said a spokeswoman for the county sheriff's office.

Geography vital to state's future

Some say America is mired in isolationism. That can only be exacerbated by the absence of geography in American schools. Students who don't know much about the world may flunk a test, but a businessman who lacks sufficient information about the nations with which he deals runs the risk of Gilbert Grosvenor, chairman of the National Geographic Society, pointed out in Dallas that if bankers who made the bad loans to Third World countries had done their homework, their banks might be in better shape today. Brazil, he noted, has tremendous potential but limited ability to improve its gross national product any time soon.

The National Geographic Society and Southwestern Bell Telephone are sponsoring a summer institute in Dallas for high school teachers on the economic aspects of urban geography. If Texas is to become a leader in international trade, it will need to introduce today's students to the culture, needs and traditions of nations around the globe.

It is not enough to know that there is a lot of coffee in Brazil and that Australia loves its funny-looking bears and has a movie star who wrestles alligators.

Tomorrow's business people also need to be familiar with the natural resources, climate and topography of their trading partners.

Reading, writing and arithmetic are the building blocks of basic education, but students who are going to become business ambassadors must be able to work effectively with overseas clients, colleagues and government officials.

Geography must be given a prominent place in high school and college educational programs.

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

Democratic Campaign

WASHINGTON - Now is the time for us to tell a story we have been sitting on for more than 12 years. It concerns Frank Carlucci, President

Reagan's national security adviser and his choice to replace Caspar Weinberger as defense secretary

The story involves Carlucci's personal values — his character, if you will. We have not been caught up in the fever of moral one-upmanship that has become so politically trendy of late, but we believe the story casts pertinent light on Carlucci's attitude toward the unwritten rules of the bureaucratic system he has mastered over the years. Here are the details: By the mid-1970s, Carlucci had risen through the ranks of the career Foreign Service, been director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, and undersecretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. In December 1974, Carlucci's success was capped when President Ford named him ambassador to Portugal. Over the years, Carlucci had earned a reputation for integrity, toughness and personal courage. Indeed, he survived a stabbing as he weas rescuing a group of Americans from an angry mob in the Con-

For all his professional achievements Carlucci's private lite was far froim serene. By 1974, he was legally separated from his wife and was getting a divorce. Meanwhile, he had developed a close persoinal relationship with an administrative assistant he worked with at HEW, Marcia Myers. According to several sources, Carlucci took Myers along when he reported to Lisbon as ambassador in January 1975. She became his special assistant, with

One of our sources said Lisbon embassy employees were quite upset, because Myers' appointment "took a job from someone." Another source told us at the time that the embassy "had to shift people around" to make room for Myers, and "an assistant administrative officer (was) tossed

There were misgivings of a different sort back in Washington, where State Department officials feared the Portuguese, among the most conservative Catholics in Europe, would be upset by the arrangement between Carlucci and his female assistant. Our sources said concern was so great in Foggy Bottom that senior officials asked then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to intervene. One well-placed source said Kissinger had at least one conversation with Carlucci about the situation.

Several months after he took up his post in Lisbon, Carlucci's divorce became final. He and Myers were married on April 15, 1976

Why didn't we publish this story when we first nailed it down in 1975? Just as we were about to, we receive urgent telephone calls from two high government officials whom we knew and trusted. They pleaded with us not to send out the story, on the grounds that Carlucci's first wife and their two children, already traumatized by the separation and divorce proceedings, would suffer additional emo-

Gun law arrives to Disney World

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

The Magic Kingdom, Fla. - This reporter was granted an exclusive interview with the law officer who is heading the investigation into a bloody shootout that occurred here at Florida's No. 1 tourist attraction, Walt Disney World.

'It was bound to happen, sooner or later, with Florida's gun laws,' said Deputy Dawg, who was called in on the case. Although some restraints have been added to the controversial gun laws in the state, one observer has noted. "It's easier to buy a gun in Florida than to rent furniture."

Deputy Dawg explained how the incident began: 'It started at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mouse. Mrs. Mouse (Minnie) and Mr. Mouse (Mickey) became involved in a domestic guarrel. Mrs. Mouse picked up the family .45 and wounded Mr. Mouse in one of his ears. 'How serious was the wound?' the deputy was asked.

"He had a hole in his ear big enough for Tinkerbell to fly though," said the deputy, who went on to explain what happened next.

"Mr. Mouse left the house to seek medical help and then Mrs. Mouse got Goofy.'

"You mean she lost her senses?" "No. I mean she got Goofy, that stupid dog that hangs around here, right between the eyes

'Did the shooting end there?" "Sadly, no," said Deputy Dawg. "Mr. Mouse, after having the hole in his ear patched, went and picked up a bazooka and began shooting up Fantasy land.

'Who was injured?' "Peter Pan got it and so did Jiminy Cricket.

'What ensued?' "A suspect identified as Dr. Duck and his three nephews, Huey, Dewey and Louie, began firing at Mr. Mouse with Ak-47 machine guns they reportedly purchased at a convenience store.

"Mr. Mouse was able to take cover, but the Seven Dwarfs got caught in the crossfire.

"Who was hit?"

"Grumpy and Sneezy. The other five ran under Snow White's dress and took cover." 'Was Ms. White hurt?"

"No. She began firing back with a rocket launcher she won at a church raffle. All we found of the duck family were a few feathers." "Were there any more casualties?"

"Pinocchio decided to stick his nose in the matter." "And?"

"Dumbo, the Flying Elephant, went airborne with two Saturday night specials he got for buying ten gallons of gas at Shorty's Amoco, and shot it right off.'

'Certainly that was the end of "I'm afraid not. Bambi went down too. 'Who on earth would shoot Bambi?'

"Three National Rifle Association lobbyists who stopped by for some hunting on the way to the state capitol in Tallahassee.'

"Did you arrest them?" "What? And violate their constitutional rights?'

I thanked Deputy Dawg for his time and drove away from the scene in my Hertz Rent-a-Tank.

Lessons about the miraculous qualities of music became clear to me during the concert.

 Music really does soothe the savage beast, even when the beast is a man whose nerves are shot after facing the wrath of a wife who has waited an hour for him to pick her up after work

• Enjoyment derived from classical music is enhanced when you close your eyes. Of course, this is done at the risk of getting nasty glances from surrounding audience members who think you are being inpolite by falling asleep during the concert

• Big Spring is fortunate to have a group of people like the symphony association who are willing to make a contribution toward improving the local quality of life by sponsoring and sustaining such

TORRANCE, Calif. — An explosion at a refinery shattered windows and launched a fireball hundreds of feet into the air, sparking a blaze that continued to burn today, officials said.

"It's still burning, and from what I understand, the firefighters are going to let it burn itself out," Torrance police Sgt. Ron Traber said early today of the fire at the Mobil Oil Co. refinery.

One refinery worker suffered minor injuries from the blast, which occurred just before 6 p.m. Tuesday, Traber said. The fire, which at its peak sent orange flames billowing hundreds of feet into the air, was declared contained late Tuesday night.

Home sales increase

WASHINGTON - Sales of existing homes climbed a surprising 3.2 percent in October, the biggest increase in five months, a real estate trade group reported today.

The National Association of Realtors said that sales of existing single-family homes rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.56 million units last month following a 1.2 percent advance in September. Analysts were at something of a loss to explain the increase, which came during a period of rising mortgage rates and the Oct. 19 collapse of the stock market.

More hostages seized

ATLANTA — Cuban inmates overran the federal penitentiary's hospital today and seized 25 more hostages as negotiations resumed to free the 94 hostages held in Atlanta and the 28 held at a Lousiana detention center.

The factionalism among inmates that has made negotiations difficult both here and in Oakdale, La., became further evident overnight as five hostages in the main prison here were freed about midnight Tuesday, before another group took the new hostages.

One of 26 hostages taken this morning was released with an unspecified medical problem, said Sylvia Simons, a federal Bureau of Prisons spokeswoman in Washington.

Negotiations resumed after FBI agents summoned television reporters and photographers who they said the inmates requested as witnesses, and continued as dawn approached, Simons said. "They are slow, but

Leaders convicted in Libyan plot

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal jury struck one of the nation's deadliest street gangs a near-fatal blow when it convicted five El Rukn leaders in a scheme to blow up planes and buildings in return for $2.5 million from Libya, authorities say.

Tuesday's verdict marked the first time U.S. citizens have been convicted of conspiring to commit terrorist acts in this country for a foreign government in exchange for money, said Assistant U.S. Attorney John Podliska.

The evidence showed this is an organization that presents itself as peaceful, but really what they are is killers. They engage in drug trafficking and killing," Podliska said.

Jeff Fort, El Rukn leader, and codefendants Leon McAnderson, Reico Cranshaw. Alan Knox and Roosevelt Hawkins had contended the El Rukns were a religious organization that planned no violence and met with the Libyans only to raise money for a mosque.

"Jeff Fort is a very confident man. He is at peace with himself," said Fort's attorney, Terry Gillespie. "He was disappointed with the verdict but he showed very little emotion.

The U.S. District Court jury returned the verdict after six days of deliberation, which followed a five-week trial. Jurors were sequestered throughout after several reported getting threatening phone Sentencing was set for Dec. 29. Fort faces a maximum sentence of 260 years in prison after being found guilty on all 50 counts of the indictment alleging conspiracy, interstate or foreign travel or use of the telephone in furtherance of the conspiracy, and weapons charges.

Knox, who was convicted on those charges, faces a weapon from undercover FBI acts discussed in tape-recorded conmaximum of 130 years, and Hawkins, who was convicted of conspiracy, interstate travel and a weapons charge, could be sentenced to 25 years

FBI spokesman Bob Long said the verdict will seriously damage the El Rukns, once described by police as one of the nation's deadliest and most sophisticated street gangs.

"The El Rukns are not quite dead, but the people left in the organization are down the ladder quite a way," said Long. "With these guys gone, the void will be difficult to

Five killed in attack

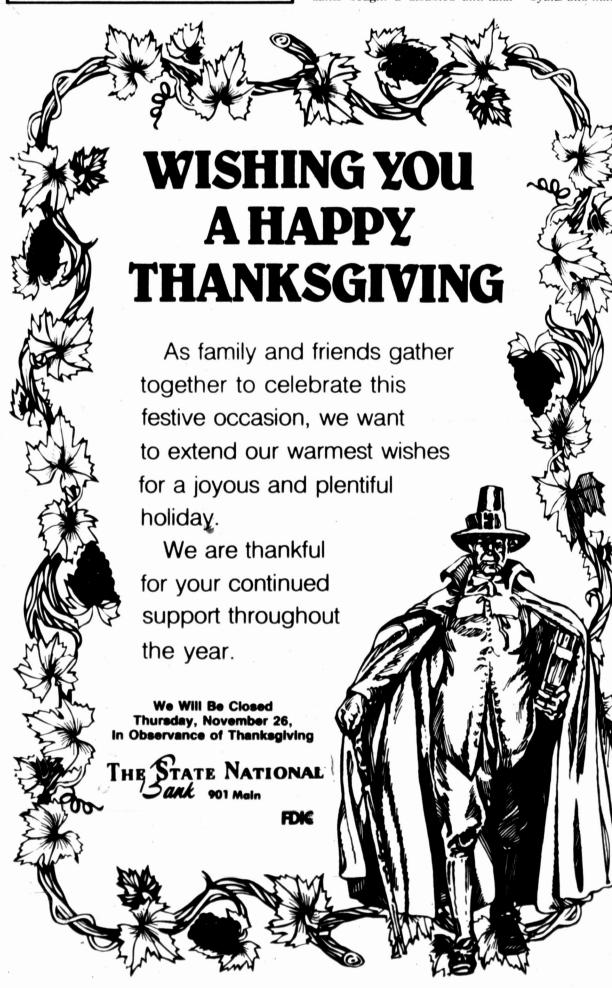

BOGOTA, Colombia — Three men with submachine guns entered the Medellin office of the Young People's Communist League and opened fire, killing five people and wounding three, a radio station reported.

Medellin Mayor William Jaramillo told radio station RCN that eight people were in the league's second-floor office in a building in downtown Medellin, Colombia's second largest city, before the shooting Tuesday.

He said the killers arrived at the building in a car, charged into the league office, ordered the victims to lie on the floor and began shooting. The gunmen escaped with two other men who had remained in the car, according to Jaramillo

He said three women and two men were killed in the attack, and no group or individual has asserted responsibilty.

According to official figures, more than 500 members of the Communist Party and the ultra-left Patriotic Union Party or their supporters have been been slain in political violence in the past two years

Child's IQ not [final word on achievement

BOLINGBROOK, Ill. (AP) -Let's say you have a 6-year-old girl, Jennie, who gets a score of 98 on an intelligence test in first

Can you expect her to do well, average or poorly in school - or does an IQ test forecast academic performance? Can the number rise on a future IQ test?

Such questions were directed to Beverly Hume, a psychologist with the Valley View Schools, before a recent child-rearing program at Fountaindale Library in Bolingbrook.

Jennie's score is within the average range of intelligence, Hume said. 60 percent of people score between 90 and 110 on the most common intelligence test, the Stanford-Binet.

IQ testing helps schools by telling them at what level to present material. Schools gear curricula to students of average intelligence.

Jennie's parents carf expect her to be able to master the subjects at each grade level. But can they expect average grades of C or might they hope for some B's or even A's? That depends on Jennie's "willingness to work," Hume said.

'Theoretically, she should be able to master 100 percent of the material," Hume said, "and if she does, then she could get A's.

"To say someone has average learning ability is narrow," Hume continued. "A lot of things beyond intelligence make a person do well motivation, for instance.

But perhaps Jennie's parents shouldn't demand A's of her. IQ scores are the best predictor of academic achievement, and students who go on to college have IQs of 110 and above on the Stanford-Binet scale.

So might Jennie's parents feel disappointed? It depends on their definition of success, Hume said. "IQ does equate with academic performance. If you want a child to get many academic degrees, then he needs a high IQ," she said.

But if your definition of success is doing anything well, there are a lot of things a person can do well that don't require a high capacity for academic work. If your definition of success is making money, you can make a lot of money at some of those things. And if your definition of success is popularity or athletic success, a high IQ is not going to give those.

"A child with artistic talent may not appear exceptionally intelligent on the basis of IQ score. but she has an ability in one factor that could give her success," Hume

Critics of IQ tests have said they are biased in favor of people from advantaged backgrounds.

Ms. Dellis uses her knowledge of the dramatic arts to help others overcome their personal emotional disorders.

While attending Southwest Texas State University, where she earned a bachelor of arts degree in theater arts, Ms. Dellis worked at the San Marcos Treatment Center as a mental health specialist working with adolescents.

"I hadn't thought of going into the psychiatric field until after working there (at the treatment center)," she said. "I worked there for about two years before I graduated."

Now she is a parttime mental health associate at Glenwood, a psychiatric hospital in Midland, a sister hospital of the San Marcos Treatment Center and part of the Health Care International chain. "Here at Glenwood I am in charge of patients when they are not in the classroom. It's 24-hour care," Ms. Dellis said.

Most of her work at the San Marcos facility was with 13- to 21-year-old males. "The population was aggressive, suicidal, mostly throwaway kids who were largely state-supported, or kids from very wealthy families — that was the mix of our population," she said.

"There were bars on the windows, locks on the doors — it was a very restrictive area. We were one of three units with this volatile type of kids. ... I don't think the public is ready to see that kids have severe problems. Chemical dependency is still a lot more accepted than psychiatric problems. The San Marcos unit kids were kids no other hospital would treat that was their specialty.

By using her knowledge of drama and theater arts, Ms. Dellis helped these patients work through their individual traumas. Some of her techniques included living story books, in which each participant added one line; monologues and dialogues; scripts with patients reading different parts; and music

They would lip-sync and pretend they were a band. When we were talking about scripts, the kids almost always wanted to write about rock stars, or something to do with famous singers,' Improvisation also played a part in her work with these patients. "The kids would pick a character. They would come up with certain solutions to different problems.

I did," Ms. Dellis said. "I did a lot of creative successful and the kids really got into it.

Ms. Dellis also has worked with younger children and adults, and has found each group to be vastly different from the others.

Children are more trusting, even if they have had a bad experience, she said. "The sooner you catch a problem when you are working with a child, the better chance you have to have real effective treatment.

"When you work with 5- to 12-year-olds, you see more behavior problems, but it's a much more relaxed situation to work in than that situation I was in (in San Marcos).'

Adults, on the other hand, usually seek treatment themselves, and take more responsibility for their treatment and problem than adolescents would, she said. "This (working at Glenwood) is my first opportunity to work with adults and it's incredibly different."

Adolescents, she said, like the ones she worked with in San Marcos Treatment Center, often don't seek treatment themselves, but are there at their parents' request. These patients sometimes don't recognize their own problems, but believe their parents are the ones at fault.

"Some of these kids are dangerous," Ms Dellis said. "Sometimes the family is worried about their safety if the kid comes back into the home." In working with young patients such as these, "You have to find out where that anger is coming from and work through that anger."

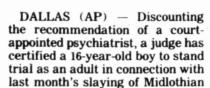

Adolescents need more positive female role models, Ms. Dellis added, "But it's hard to get females to work in a potentially dangerous situation 24 hours a day. You're trained to never go into a situation alone, but many things can happen, especially with kids who are going through that much turmoil."

When working with children or adolescents, expectations are very important, Ms. Dellis said. "If you expect misbehavior, you're going to get it. If you expect good behavior, you're going to get it. And you have to trust again with kids," because children make mistakes.

"Don't take kids' misbehavior personally," she added. "A lot of the time you can't take promises as hard, cold fact - take the kid as he is and act off that."

As an undergraduate in college, Ms. Dellis' Originally, there were several things I thought about trying — going into playwriting community theater or possibly going to New York — several of my friends had done that and been relatively successful."

Although she hasn't shut the doors on any of sidered earning a graduate degree in therapy or counseling and working as a therapist.

Two other teen-agers have been charged in connection with the slaying of Raffield, who was shot and killed Oct. 23 in a field outside of Midlothian, a town south of Dallas. A Midlothian woman has been charged with criminal solicitation of capital murder in the case, authorities said.

Raffield, 21, had been posing as a student as part of a drug investigation at Midlothian High School.

DALLAS (AP) — Discounting ing Tuesday that the teen-ager should not be certified as an adult Schack said Jobe did not exhibit the level of maturity required for certification under juvenile law.

At a similar hearing two weeks ago, Schack recommended that Greg Knighten, 16, be certified to stand trial as an adult in connection with the slaying, which he was.

Schack said that while Knighten showed mature, independent behavior, he was not so sure about Jobe's level of sophistication. "In (Jobe's) case, I was really in the middle, sitting on the fence," the psychiatrist said. "If I was pushed ... I'd say 'no.'

Under Texas law, prosecutors must prove that a juvenile is mature enough to understand the consequences of his actions and that there is probable cause connecting the defendant with a crime serious enough to warrant trial as an adult.

Schack said his finding in Jobe's case was only the second time in 30 certification hearings that he had recommended against trying a juvenile as an adult Scoggins declined comment on his ruling. Jobe's attorney, Marian do Schack said he testified during McGuire of Waxahachie, said she Jobe's five-hour certification hear-planned to appeal the decision.

Advocates attempt to bring attention to down-and-out

Editor's note: As hundreds of thousands of people have found themselves without homes in recent years, a few Americans have stood up as champions for their down-and-out fellow citizens.

Here are profiles of three advocates — a Virginia Mennonite whose fervor forced him to abandon that sect's unassuming ways and go public, a hunger striker in the nation's capital, and a former Wall Street lawyer who fights via the courts in New York.

> By DIRK BEVERIDGE Associated Press Writer

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — The Rev. David Hayden's compassion for the homeless fits the image of a bearded Mennonite minister in the mountains of southwestern Virginia.

But rabble-rousing at public meetings and television appearances are not what one expects from an unassuming member of his peaceful church.

"Obviously, I'm not the typical Mennonite," Hayden said in an interview at his Justice House homeless shelter and church. He founded the place, which houses about 50 people, two years ago after leaving a Mennonite congregation in Asheville, N.C., that wasn't ready for his ways.

Members of the Christian sect, which opposes military service and the taking of oaths, dress in a plain, old-fashioned style and live just as

But Hayden's way of helping the poor has been to loudly stand up for the homeless, whether he is yelling at politicians in public meetings or publicizing his hunger strikes through the news media.

Hayden, 41, who abandoned the life of a rising young corporate official a decade ago, said he gets spiritual support and money from the regional Mennonite church in Harrisonburg, Va.

"There would probably be some who would feel he's too visible," said John R. Martin, registrar at Eastern Mennonite Seminary in Harrisonburg, where Hayden studied to be a minister.

And yet, Martin noted, when Hayden appeared on TV during a 30-day fast to draw attention to homelessness, a group of Mennonites in Harrisonburg fasted for a day in solidarity.

Rev. David Hayden, Roanoke, Va., is a vocal advocate of the homeless. Hayden acknowledges his appearances in the media are a bit odd for a member of his peaceful church. He is shown here breaking bread before television crews this past summer as he ended a 30-day fast that was intended to draw attention to the plight of the homeless.

room for, and the residents form a governing group.

"What we try to do at Justice House is try to create community,' Hayden said. "There is a difference in doing something for somebody and doing something with somebody, and we stress the Raised as a Presbyterian, Hayden became a Mennonite because of the church's pacifism. He was once jailed after a Washington, D.C., antiwar rally, he said.

Recently, a local newspaper editorial rebuked him for disrupting public events after he played a loud tape of laughter to drown out At Justice House, Hayden said, developers at a public meeting on a

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mitch Snyder angers a lot of people with his tactics, but 15 years of working for the destitute in the nation's capital have made him a master at dealing with the country's power brokers on homeless issues.

Using civil disobedience, hunger strikes and a talent for attracting media attention, Snyder, with the Community for Creative Non-Violence, has won over Congress, the White House and the District of Columbia government in relentless efforts to house and feed the homeless.

His group's latest target, the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, so far has not budged, but Snyder is not deterred.

His aim is to get the transit authority to remove a fence it erected last month to keep homeless people from sleeping in a downtown subway station.

"It's another attempt to make the homeless disappear," said Snyder. "For about 11 years people have been finding warmth at the foot of the escalator. Putting a fence up can kill those people.'

Transit spokeswoman Beverly Silverberg insists the agency will not move the fence no matter what Snyder does. Metro is in the business of safe, clean transportation, not providing shelter, she says, and the fence was erected because homeless people were urinating and defecating at the foot of the escalators.

.While acknowledging that the station is not the answer to homelesssness, Snyder insists that taking the fence down and setting up portable toilets would help.

With a commitment based in religious faith Snyder says he gained while in prison on a car theft charge in the early 1970s, he and CCNV have changed focus from overtly political causes to homelessness

He has often clashed with local shelter officials who object to his methods and his habit of positioning himself at the center of camera

Yet, he does move as easily through the hallways of congressional buildings as through crowded homeless shelters.

While seemingly unbending in public battles, he has become adept at backroom bartering. His group now has command of a massive old federal building that. when renovations partly financed by the federal government are completed, he boasts will be a "national model.

On Thanksgiving, he and his group are sponsoring a dinner for 2,000 homeless people. It will be on the Capitol grounds.

NEW YORK (AP) - A trip through Manhattan to Robert Hayes' small, dimly lit office at the National Coalition for the Homeless can be an education in what he's doing there.

A block away on Madison Avenue, a middle-aged man with spittle on his lip and a grimy jacket too flimsy for the cold, parts the sidewalk crowd as he scuffs along toward nowhere, proclaiming to no one, "They don't scare me any They don't scare me any.'

At the building where Hayes works, many more people with no homes, some of them children, wait in the hallway leading to the coalition's office, its door and walls papered with notices of work programs, new laws on tenants' rights, a poem:

'Sleeping in the corners, sleeping in the street," one verse says. "Balled up in a knot with nothing on their feet.

These are Hayes' inspirations the transient released from asylums, the beggars, the evicted families.

Seeing them in the city's corners inspired him to give up the fast track in a top Wall Street law firm. It inspired him to take the unwanted into his own apartment. Actually, it inspired anger, and, as Hayes has said, "When lawyers get angry, they can only think of one He figures he's filed two dozen lawsuits, starting with a class action in 1979, "establishing the right to shelter" for men in New York. The right was extended to women in 1982 and to families in 1985. "In an idiotic way, we had to do it separately," growls Hayes, described by associates as always impatient with the pace of progress. (Still, progress can be measured - for instance, in the number of shelter beds in New York City: a reported 1,500 in 1979, when his suits began, and now more than 27,000.) New York Mayor Edward Koch, like President Reagan a regular object of Hayes' public scorn, sometimes questions "facts"

presented by the homeless coalition's founder but nonetheless calls him an "able and tough advocate." Having won in court, Hayes calls litigation a secondary tool now. Primary is legislative change. With the passage of the $1 billion Stewart B. McKinney Act this year, the first phase of a "Homeless Persons' Survival Act" written by Hayes and others became law.

The cream always rises to the top

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Editor

With the area high school football season over, so is the Herald sports department's Pigskin Prediction contest. The contest lasted 11 weeks and consisted of 16 games to pick the winners each week. The regulars in the contest were Herald staffers Tim Appel, Steve Reagan and myself. This was Appel's third year as a regular and Reagan's first season. The other regulars were Coahoma School Superintendent Gary Rotan, local downtown coordinator Terri Quinones and First Christian Church Minister Victor

Sedinger. Rounding out the list was a different guest picker each

For the third consecutive year yours truly came through as the top picker in the contest. That's right, three years in a row I've answered every challenge thrown at me.

This year's title is really a cochampionship with Appel, but it's better than no championship at all. I've had to hear excuses like 'You make the list of games to choose from', or 'You're always the last person to see the picks.'

This year I remedied that by allowing others to pick the games for the week and even having someone with me when I typed everybody's predictions into the computer.

But like the old saying goes, the cream always rises to the top, and that's just what I did. Appel and I got 124 games right and missed 52, for a .705 percentage.

Reagan went a hot 73-23 over the last six weeks.

Rotan was fourth with a 116-60 season mark and a .660 percentage. For the first time in three years, the guest pickers finished out of the cellar. This year they finished fifth, getting 104 right and missing 60, for a .590 percentage.

Quinones nailed down the sixth position by finishing with a 100-76 tally for a .658 percent mark.

Bringing up the rear was Sedinger who went 93-83 for a

It's been the annual practice of the sports department to take the predictions winner out to eat at the place of their choice. Since we tied, maybe Appel and I will go out and treat ourselves to a big, hearty meal.

Maybe we can even get Reagan to foot the bill.

Former Steers football player Todd Coker had a very good season his freshman year at Greenville College, Ill.

The starting linebacker finished the season as the team's leading tackler with 28 unassisted tackles and 66 assisted tackles. Coker also caused seven fumbles, recovered five fumbles and intercepted three passes.

For his effort Coker has been nominated for the NAIA Division II All-America teams. He was nominated through the region which includes Oklahoma. Missouri and part of the Texas Panhandle. Greenville finished the season with an 8-1 record.

Another former Steer gridder who had a good freshman season was wide receiver Cedric Banks at Friends University, Kan.

Banks had a spectacular season considering Friends ran the Wishbone offense. Banks finished the season with 10 receptions for 433 yards and four touchdowns. He also carried the ball once for six yards and a TD.

His 43.3 receiving average has to be one of the best in the nation.

Friends finished the season with a 6-4 mark.

Former Lady Steers basketball player Teresa Pruitt has been a big hit at South Plains College in the early going. So far the frosh forward is starting and averaging 12 points and three rebounds per game. She is the 10th leading scorer in the conference. South Plains is currently 6-2 for the season.

When Pecos won the state volleyball championship this weekend in Austin, it continued a string of dominance in District 2-4A.

For the fourth consecutive year, the state champion has come from the district. Monahans started the streak by winning it all in 1984. Snyder followed in 1985, Lamesa was next in 1986, and then came Pecos, who finished the season with a 34-0 record.

Don't think this is a just a new trend either. It goes back over two decades. In the last 22 years, 18 of the state volleyball champions have come from District 2-4A.

Knight gets slap on wrist

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) -Coach Bobby Knight, who admitted he "let some personal feelings outweigh good judgment" is under reprimand by the University of Indiana for pulling his team off the floor during an exhibition game with the touring Soviet national basketball team.

The walkout occurred Saturday night after Knight was whistled for a third technical foul and ejected. The Soviets, leading 66-43, won by forfeit.

The university said in a statement Tuesday, "Coach Knight said that he had made a serious mistake of judgment, and that he recognized it caused great embarrassment not only to himself and the basketball program, but also, and most importantly, to the entire university and its supporters."

Meanwhile, Knight turned up Tuesday as speaker for a meeting in Bloomington of the Rotary Club and apologized again for the incident. He said he "let some personal" feelings outweigh good judgment as far as the general scope of things in that particular game were concerned.

Knight also told Rotarians, "Over the years I have put personal thoughts aside far more than anyone in this room will ever know And yet on Saturday night, I didn't. I let a couple of personal feuds in-

The coach said earlier he was angered by a lane violation game officials ignored during free throws taken by a Soviet player.

Tuesday's statement from the university said, in part, President Thomas Ehrlich and Athletic Director Ralph Floyd strongly reprimanded Coach Knight, who gave his assurance that such an incident would not occur again. 'The university has apologized to the sponsor of the game, Amateur Basketball Association-USA, and — through the sponsor to the Soviet team and coach," the statement read.

The nature of the reprimand was not specified.

It wasn't the first time the former Olympic and three-time NCAA champion coach has been involved in controversy during his 17 years as coach.

Purple martin a vanishing breed

By JERRY NACHTIGAL Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — As songbirds go, it's difficult to find a more companionable creature than the purple martin.

The martin has been managed by man longer than any other North American bird species. Native Indians were erecting hollowed-out gourds as nest sites for the insect-eating swallow before the first Europeans arrived.

Today, hundreds of thousands of martin enthusiasts from Texas to Canada erect gourds and often elaborate multi-compartment houses made of aluminum or wood to attract the graceful birds to their lawns and gardens.

However, wildlife officials are concerned about the chattery martin. Studies by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service show the martin is declining within parts of its breeding range.

Breeding surveys conducted annually for the past 22 years show that martin numbers have steadily plummeted in Wisconsin, South Dakota, Ohio, Kansas, and Alabama.

"I actually stopped studying them because it became harder and harder to attract purple martins," said Dr. Richard F. Johnston, curator of the Museum of Natural History at the University of Kansas in Lawrence

"In the mid-1960s, the birds in eastern Kansas experienced some kind of decline. That has continued. You can always find purple martins, but not in the numbers there used to be,' Johnston said

Huge numbers of aggressive starlings and house sparrows, which compete with the martins for nest sites, could be part of the reason for fewer martins in some states, experts say. Scientists say pesticides, predators and disease could also play a role. In addition massive die-offs have been reported in the martin's wintering range in Brazil, possibly due to pesticide poisoning. But while martin numbers have dipped in some states, wildlife officials are encouraged by population increases in Virginia, Texas, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Maryland, Louisiana, Kentucky, and Florida.

The Purple Martin Conservation Association, based at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, was formed in 1986 in hopes of increasing the martin population through research, management and public education.

"I love the martins and most people who get acquainted with them love them," said Jamie Hill, executive director of the non-profit organization. Hill has studied martins for 10 years, and says the association "is my calling

'Martins need our help. They are totally dependent on man (for nesting sites). Among our goals is to find out why the martin is declining in some areas and yet flourishing in others," he said.

Despite their popularity, little scientific data exists about martins, Hill said.

Through wildlife publications, Hill has put out a call for people who have a martin colony or want to start one to register with the Purple Martin Conservation Association.

Respondents are asked to keep an annual 'report card' on their martins — the type of birdhouse used, number of nesting pairs and young raised, etc. The information is fed into a computer to provide further insight into the martin and its habits, Hill said.

So far Hill has received responses from about 15,000 martin enthusiasts, about one-quarter from Missouri

WAC names top players

LITTLETON. Colo. (AP) Wyoming senior linebacker Galand Thaxton and Brigham Young freshman receiver Matt Bellini have been named players of the week by the Western Athletic Conference.

Thaxton, a 6-foot-1, 227-pounder from Denver, had 16 tackles and intercepted a pass during Wyoming's 37-13 victory over Texas-El Paso on Saturday. The victory enabled the Cowboys to clinch a share of the WAC title.

"I'm not going to get into a conversation like that when so many things in collegiate athletics upset me," Floyd said. "Bob Knight's a very close friend of mine. I just don't make comments on it.

Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said he would "consult with people involved. But we have no jurisdiction. The game was an international one. The international and national governing bodies are the authority in it.

Duke said Monday, "I've been getting fragmentary reports of what happened, and I want to get a better idea of the situation. Even though this was an international game, IU is in our conference. And it was one of our officials involved (who ejected Knight)

'This is something that's never happened before, that I know of. There may be no reason for us to act, and there may be nothing we can do. However, I want to keep my options open until I get a complete account of the thing," he said.

Seton Hall whips Ohio Valley favorite PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Seton Hall's boy of the tough Big East Conference. In any given year, the Pirates were almost basketball team is no longer the whipping

a shoo-in for last place. Not any more.

The Pirates on Tuesday night gave notice they are for real this season by getting 19 points from Daryll Walker, building a big first-half lead and routing Middle Tennessee 93-61 to advance to the semifinals of the Big Apple NIT. Seton Hall, 2-0, will face New Mexico on Friday night, while Iowa State, a 104-96 upset winner over No. 2 Purdue in Tuesday's other quarterfinal game, takes on Florida in the other Final Four game at Madison Square Garden in New York City.

This was no ordinary victory. Seton Hall dominated every aspect of the game in beating Middle Tennessee, a team that went to the NCAA tournament last year and was a preseason pick to win the Ohio Valley

The first half might have been Seton Hall's best effort in a long time. The Pirates shot 62 percent from the field in opening a 55-34 lead in the game played before an estimated crowd of 2,100 at the Rutgers Athletic

Seton Hall had to play the game there because its home arena does not meet the 5,000-seat requirement mandated by the But the change of scenery did not affect

Seton Hall, which last season posted its first winning campaign since 1979-80. Walker and Mark Bryant, returning from a one-game NCAA suspension, were the keys for the Pirates. They scored seven points apiece in a 16-5 run midway through the first half that gave Seton Hall a 33-15 edge, and Middle Tennessee never got closer than 12 points the rest of the way.

"For whatever reason, they just couldn't get started," Carlesimo said of the Blue Raiders. "We were the opposite. Shots were going in, guys were blocking shots and the balls were bouncing our way. The thing just snowballed. We're not that much better than they are by any stretch of the imagination. It was nice to happen our way.

Middle Tennessee Coach Bruce Stewart didn't think it was so nice and called it his worst experience as a coach

"I apologized to P.J. because we gave them no contest," he said. "We got outcoached, outhustled, outdefensed, outexecuted on offense, outrebounded. They played with a lot more heart than we did and we took a 30-point whipping which is very embarrassing.

Carlesimo said making the Final Four bodes well for Seton Hall. 'In past years, the teams that have made the Final Four have gone on to have very good years," he said. "It's not a guarantee, but it really seems to have been an accurate

Carlesimo said he is familiar with some of the New Mexico players because he tried to

"New Mexico is a great basketball program. Gary Colson does a great job," said. "They are very talented. It's a tough draw, but there is no good draw. Each round gets more and more difficult.'

Ramon Ramos and James Major added 13 points apiece, while Bryant and Martin Salley had 12 each for Seton Hall.

Freshman Leslie Gregory topped Middle Tennessee with 20 points. Chris Rainey added 14 for the Blue Raiders, now 1-1.

Iowa St. 104, No. 2 Purdue 96 At West Lafayette, Ind, Jeff Grayer scored 19 of his game-high 29 points in the second half for Iowa State.

Purdue led 93-90 with 3:52 remaining before the Cyclones outscored the Boilermakers 14-3, including 10 straight points that made it 100-93 with 40 seconds left.

Iowa State's Mike Born closed the gap to 93-92 on a jump shot with 3:40 to go, and Lafester Rhodes, who finished with 18 points, had two free throws to give the Cyclones a 94-93 lead with 3:09 left. Iowa State never trailed again.

Purdue, 1-1, missed five of its final six shots in the final four minutes. Everett Stephens, who finished with 17 points, scored the Boilermakers' final points on a 3-pointer with 30 seconds to go.

DEFENSE Brad Fulks, linebacker, Southwest Texas

Fulks (6-1, 203, junior, Fredericksburg, Tex.), was a busy person in the Bobcats 24-21 loss to Sam Houston State, being credited with 22 tackles for the day. The Bobcats leading tackler all season, Fulks had 20 assists and two solo stops against the Bearkats and also came up with one quarterback sack and one other trap behind the line of scrimmage.

Economist sees cotton supply rise

COLLEGE STATION — With a much smaller acreage reduction in store for 1988 cotton, the supply likely will increase, according to an extension cotton marketing economist at Texas A&M University.

The 1988 upland cotton program will include a 12.5 percent acreage reduction, a target price of 77 cents per pound, and a loan level of 51.8 cents per pound for base quality, average location, says Dr. Carl G. Anderson, economist-cotton marketing for the Texas Agricultural Extention Service of the Texas A&M University System.

"While the target price and loan rates are slightly lower, the acreage reduction program (ARP) is half the 25 percent for the 1987 crop," Anderson says.

Should the world price plunge below the loan rate, loan deficiency payments will be made to eligible producers who agree to forego loan eligibility," Anderson says.

Up to 50 percent of any loan deficiency payment may be made in generic commodity certificates on a bale-by-bale basis. There will be no paid land diversion program nor inventory reduction program.

The lower acreage reduction program suggests more acreage and more cotton in 1988, provided yields are average or above.

Christmas

Artifacts converts to South Pole

By SARAH LUMAN

Business Writer Santa Claus has set up a temporary headquarters in Big Spring, according to Barbara Hall, owner of Artifacts at 1903-1/2 Gregg St.

Called Santa's South Pole, the Christmas specialty store will kick off the holiday season with an open house today beginning at 2 p.m. and closing at 6 p.m.

Hall stocked the Christmas store with gift items, many for under $5, and decorative touches for the holiday season. In addition, she says, custom gift baskets, wreaths and decor accents are available

"We can make a custom wreath or a Christmas gift basket," she said. "Or we can renew or renovate a wreath or centerpiece for you.'

Upon walking into the store, the first thing you notice is the delicious aroma of potpourri. Hall says several scents are available, including the traditional red-and-green Christmas scent and the new White Christmas fragrance, which she described as amaretto.

In addition, gourmet dressings, mustards and hot fudges, popular ingredients in gift baskets, are available. Ceramic works and seasonal candles are also plentiful.

The store houses a variety of holiday items ranging from wooden puzzles to a complete line of appliqued hostess aprons and Christmas-tree skirts, Hall

In addition, she said, the store offers Big Spring's most extensive variety of Santa Clauses.

"I have them in every variety from handpainted wood to handmade ceramic," she explained. "I will have gift items that are seasonal in nature, but I'm also keeping some things such as pictures and frames, lamps and crystal for gift items available," she said.

Gift items in all price ranges are a specialty in the store, along with seasonal decorations and custom decorating for the season. Hall said

Health club provides relaxing atmosphere

By SARAH LUMAN Business Writer

Appearances can be deceiving. For example, there's a very serious health club in Big Spring but, tucked away behind a modest window sign in a College Park Shopping Center corner, it could be taken for a confectionary, rather than a spa.

Inside New Horizons Health Club, Inc., the deceptive appearances continue. The walls and carpet are a soft shade of pink; trimmings are a dark teal; the sound of laughter comes from behind the dusty-rose curtains.

Owners Mattie Norwood, Mary Palmer, Nell Thames and Lonnie Thames, who describe themselves as "three sisters and a niece," provide the laughter. They chose the decor with care and an eye to soothing the soul, lifting the spirits and boosting the customer's

The heart of the business is its workout center, which features BodyShaper exercise tables. These are a series of seven electronicallydriven exercise machines which, combined with isometric principles, offer the benefits of working out in conventional fashion without the drawbacks

New to Big Spring, the BodyShaper tables are also a recent innovation in exercise technology. Lonnie Thames said, "The company that makes these tables just started in February a

They explained that they established the facility with an eye to offering fitness and relaxation — and they have been successful in both areas, as a populous weight-loss winners' board attests.

An introductory session is free and gives the customer a chance to experience the workout on the tables. A 15-minute tan is included in the offer, Palmer said.

The club offers exercise programs tailored to individual needs. Separate from the six exercise tables in one room is the vibration table, which also has an oscillating effect. Norwood said it is especially popular with patrons interested in relieving stress and tension.

Family's pet fondly remembered

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH

I was doing some interviews in Shelby County at the time and someone told me Sam Mason could imitate the sound of a raccoon exactly, so I went to visit him on his farm near Center. After recording some sounds and stories, we were drinking coffee when his wife came around with a new puppy. It was white with a big black spot on its side. "This is a cross between a border collie and something else," she said. "We're not sure just what. It was born Nov. 2." I had to hold the little rascal. It was just about the cutest puppy I had ever seen. I said, "We've been thinking about getting a border collie." We didn't have a pet at the time, which was mid-November 1976. Mrs. Mason said, "If you had this one, what would you call it?" I replied without hestitation, "We'd call it Shelby." She smiled and said, "Why don't you just take that one home with you?

So I did. I arrived at the house at about 2 a.m. Susan was awake when I got home. "And who is this?" she sked when she saw the puppy. "This is Shelby," I replied. "Her full name is Shelby

Shelby quickly became a part of our family. Both our boys adored her immediately. When we would go outside to play Frisbee, Shelby came with us and yapped constantly while we were playing.

Border collies like to herd things. She wanted us all to stay together in a straight line. She couldn't understand why we wanted to be so far apart while the plastic disc was flying between us. When we would go to the mountains, Shelby would keep us in order, playfully nudging anyone who even looked like they were lagging

Shelby made every day a special event. She quickly became a character. She established herself as queen of the neighborhood. Pearl, Girl, Ruff, Shay and other neighbors' dogs let her have her way. Sometimes they would bow down in front of her and give her the regal status she sought.

One year we had a Christmas picture made of our family. When the photographer came over, he placed us on the couch and started to take pictures with a flash. Shelby started whining. She pranced back and forth outside and let us know she expected to be part of the family photo. She got her way.

Shelby had a way of wanting to be outside when she was inside — and inside when she was outside. In spring and fall we open our doors and windows to enjoy the breezes. Shelby tore up several screen doors coming in and out of

She once got into some trash and ate a threepound can of grease — her coat was shiny for a month. Shelby knew when she had done something wrong. She looked guiltier than if she had committed the worst crime imaginable.

Shelby did not like fireworks or explosions of any kind. When she heard them she would disappear for awhile.

Her hair was long and flowing. It was a beautiful sight to watch her run. She loved to play. She wanted to be in on everything that was going on — with us all the time. We felt the same way about her.

Shelby always wanted to catch something - anything: snake, bird, rabbit, frog, whatever. She caught a frog once and thought she was the smartest animal on earth. She kept that frog around for about a week, dragging it around so she could show everybody what a great hunter she was Shelby was fascinated by the night. She could sit for hours just looking and listening. And she was the greatest greeter ever born. Her greetings to the family were legendary. When one of us would get back from a trip or school, Shelby would do a little dance and give a hug to the person who had gone. When she got real excited, she could wag her tail in a circle. Shelby was kind and gentle, loyal and loving.

She died this week. We miss her.

Evidence in slayings to be on trial

Staff Writer

Examining trials are scheduled Dec. 8 and 11 to consider evidence against four persons arrested last month on capital murder charges.

Justice of the Peace William Shankles is scheduled to preside over the trials, which were requested by defense lawyers representing Jeannie Hernandez Fonseca, Frankie Salazar Hernandez, Joe Hernandez and Arthur Islas Jr.

The four were arrested on charges of capital murder in connection with the death of Noe Perez of Grand Prairie, whose body was exhumed from a shallow grave in Martin County Oct. 17.

Fonseca also has been charged in connection with the October deaths of two Mexican nationals whose bodies were found in the debris of a house fire near Luther.

The state must offer sufficient evidence at the trials for the defenjury, Assistant District Attorney William Dupree said.

Deadline for entrants in the Community Christmas Parade has been extended to Friday, Nov. 27, according to the Lea Whitehead, parade committee chairman.

The extension has been made to accomodate organizations which haven't completed their plans. Anyone planning to enter a float must submit a reservation form in order to be assigned a spot in the parade, Whitehead said.

There is no entry fee, she added. Winners of any official area pageant should contact Whitehead or Debbie Salazar at 263-7331 in order to ride in the parade.

Location assignments will be mailed to entrants prior to the parade. Entrants will meet at 8 a.m., Dec. 5, along the FM 700 North Service Road, with the parade beginning at 9 a.m., Whitehead said.

After moving north on Gregg Street to Fourth Street, it then will turn east on Fourth Street to Main, then north on Main to First Street, where the parade will end. The parade is being sponsored by the Herald in cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce Business Committee First, second, and third place

Joyce, left, and Joe Romine display some of the countless items in their store, A to Z Bargain Center, located at 907 E. 4th St.

By SARAH LUMAN Business Writer

We have a little bit of everything," Joe Romine said of his A to Z Bargain Center, open at 907 East 4th St. The 3,600-squarefoot store houses a variety of items, from English antique furniture to a silken stuffed parrot on a swing.

Romine and his wife Joyce opened the establishment about two months ago, he said. Joyce Romine manages a 7-Eleven store on Fourth St., and Joe runs the Bargain Center.

"I had a truck accident three years ago, and I can't drive for a living anymore," Romine said.

Packed glasss display cases are filled with bric-a-brac, antique lamps and modern knicknacks. Toys — ranging from fluffy stuffed animals to Cabbage-Patch-style dolls - range along still more display shelves.

The store deals in both new and used merchandise, Romine said, because its aim is to provide bargain prices on useable items.

"With the economy the way it is now, I'm afraid it's going to be a lean Christmas for a lot of folks," Jovce Romine said. "So we want Romines' merchandise. them to know that they can come here and we have some of the toys Romine emphasized.

The store also offers a 30-day layaway plan, modified, Joyce said, for the Christmas season.

"If they want to put something on layaway now and come in and pick it up right before Christmas, that's what we'll do," she said.

The store normally does business from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. From now until Christmas, Joe Romine said, he plans to remain open from noon until 5:30 on Sundays.

Appliances are available, and carry a 30-day warranty, Romine

Looking through his collection of clowns, some made from ceramic, some from wood and some soft sculpture, Romine said he believes the store offered Big Spring shoppers wide variety.

Mel's makes variety affordable

By SARAH LUMAN Business Writer

Mel's Fish and Seafood Restaurant opened Thursday, Nov. 5, in an effort to fill a need owner Mel Dickerson saw in Big Spring.

"We wanted to bring in a place where you can feed your family with good food and affordable prices and have fish or seafood," Dickerson said. "It's something Big Spring needed.

The restaurant, at 405 Gregg St., directly adjoins the Dickerson family's other enterprise, a fish market offering fresh fish and seafood in its eighth month of operation.

"All the fish I fry here comes right out of that case," Dickerson said, gesturing toward the waisthigh partition between the restaurant and the fish market. "If you want, you can come in and pick out your fish and we'll fix it for you to eat in or to carry out.

The restaurant's western wall sports a black-on-red menu. Everything is prepared fresh, he said, from the fried catfish to the homemade potato salad and homemade pie. Coleslaw, french fries and hushpuppies round out the dinners' menu for the restaurant.

"If it's in water, we can get it," Dickerson said. "That's our slogan here." As proof, the fresh fish in the case range from buffalo, a huge freshwater relative of the carp, to orange roughy, a saltwater fish from South America.

Dickerson says orange roughy and "any kind of shrimp" are local favorites in the saltwater/seafood line. Octopus, oysters, crawfish and Cajun specialties like frog legs are also available - either fresh in the market or prepared in the restaurant

Far and away favored among freshwater offerings is catfish, Dickerson says. The farm-fed catfish in which he specializes comes from the nation's largest supplier. "It's their top of the line," he says, "and they're the best you can get.

The flavor of the catfish Dickerson fries at the restaurant is absolutely mouth-watering. It tastes superb when fresh and hot; this fish even tastes good cold.

Dickerson attributes the flavor to the fish's leanness. "There's not the amount of fat or grease in this

People are excited about the crop and are anxious to get their crop ginned.

Farmers bring their cotton to be ginned in modules or big trailers. These trailers are weighed, tagged with the customer's name and Once it is time for ginning, the cotton is sucked up — everything creating a push-pull effect — into the gin. The eotton goes through a green boll catcher and then on to an unloading separator. A vacuum sucks the air out of the cotton.

The separated cotton then goes into a feed control that sends it on to the next part of the ginning process. Monigomery says they can regulate how fast the cotton goes through gin during this step.

The cotton then goes into the No. 1 tower dryer, fueled by butane gas, or propane if the cotton doesn't need to be dried the heat can be turned off. The No. 1 cleaner number and put on the yard to is the next stop on the cotton's

Now the process calls for passing through a stick machine, a distributor and on the the gin stands where the seed is separated from the lint. Once the seed is removed, it goes onto the scale, is weighed and then stored in overhead bins.

The separated lint goes to the cleaners and then to the condenser.

Martin County Pecan Show slated Dec. 1-2

Tom Smith, local pecan grower, thinks that this year's Martin County Pecan Show will be one of the best in years.

He says that this year's crop looks real good, but that not enough of the pecans have fallen to tell how they are filling out.

Smith has had 200 trees in his pecan orchard south of town since

He couldn't pinpoint the cause of the late crop, but hopes that it is an omen that the pecans will be well

Smith says that mature pecan trees tend to bare heavier every other year and local pecan raisers are certainly due a good crop this Smith has participated in the local show for years and urged all pecan raisers to participate this Entries are due at the Martin County Courthouse by 3 p.m., Tuesday afternoon and a host of workers are needed to weigh and shell pecans. Pecan judging for the 11th annual show will start on Wednesday at 9 a.m. Food show entries are due by 10 a.m. Wednesday. Awards will be presented at 11:30 with an auction to follow. Ribbons will be given to the first five places. All first places will receive $5. Grand Champion in shell and Grand Champion shelling will receive a pecan plaque and $25. The Reserve Champion in each category will receive $20. each.

GENERAL RULES 1. Each entry must have at least 45 pecans of the same variety. Pecans must be exhibited in their natural state; no artificial alterations.

2. Pecans exhibited must be from the 1987 crop, grown in Martin County by the person exhibiting

3. All pecans when entered become the property of the Martin County Pecan Show. Pecans will be sold to help finance the show.

4. Entries will be accepted at the Martin County Extension Office until 3:00 p.m. on December 1, 1987. Pecans will be judged at 9:00 a.m. on December 2, 1987. Producers are urged to select your entries as soon as possible and turn them in to the County Extension office so they can be processed for the show.

5. Pecans will be shown by variety. Any variety with less than 3 entries will be shown in a group class known as "Other". Judges decision on variety will be final as will all judges' decisions.

6. The first three winners of high quality in each category division will be submitted to the regional pecan show at the judges discretion. It will be held December 7-11

> GUIDELINES FOR SELECTING PECANS

Participants are limited to one entry of each named variety they grow. The grower may enter as many seedlings or known hybrids as he wishes

The exhibitor must be the grower.

A minimum of 45 pecans are necessary for each entry. This minimum sample of 45 should represent the variety and be uniform in size and shell color. Mixed samples (more than one variety in an entry) are disqualified.

The grower may wish to select the heaviest pecans by weighing individual nuts. A varietal entry may be composed of nuts from more than one tree. For example, if the grower has ten Choctaw trees, each tree could contribute nuts to the grower's one Choctaw entry.

Nuts should be without insect and disease damage.

The pecans should be free of dirt and shuck remnants. They should not be buffed to the extent that shape or color is altered. Discolored shells and kernels may result from peeling pecans from the shucks too early.

Pecans exhibited must be from the 1987 crop. Pecans are judged on the basis of size (number per pound), appearance and shell color. Kernal quality is equally important and is based on the percent kernal, color, general appearance, texture, hollowness, taste, freeze and spots.

Paper criticizes Reagan leadership

Is the Great Persuader losing his grip? Recent events would lead one to Battered by the Iran-Contra scandal, President Reagan unaccountably plunged almost immediately into a confrontation with the Senate over nominating "his kind of judge" to the United States Supreme Court. As a result he has twice blown an opportunity to name a right-wing conservative justice to the bench. ...

Why did Reagan, who is supposed to have such marvelous political antennae, expose himself to two such unnecessary debacles — especially in the wake of the Iran-Contra fiasco, which left people wondering who was minding the store at the White House? ...

After nearly seven years of taking the counsel of Attorney General Edwin Meese - the architect of the (Robert) Bork and (Douglas) Ginsburg disasters — one wonders whether Reagan's vaunted antennae have atrophied through disuse.

Blasts cabinet-level Veteran office

So there was President Reagan, the hero of many a war movie, saying during the week of Veterans Day just what many veterans wanted to hear: that he endorses the dubious idea — now gaining favor in Congress of creating a new cabinet-level Department of Veterans Affairs.

Although the veterans' lobby is one of the most influential around, its spokesmen contend that former servicemen and women need an even stronger voice in the federal government.

Trouble is, there's ample evidence that veterans' affairs already are receiving a major chunk of the federal budget — an estimated $27 billion annually, counting myriad programs and services

Congress would do better to explore a more efficient way of spending for veterans' programs now in place. And Reagan, instead of playing to the audience, would be better advised to consider the negative effects of even more outlays for veterans at a time of deep concern over the federal

The American Medical Association (thus) addressed doctors' responsibilities to patients with AIDS.

Part of the answer to that question lies in the statement itself. It simply reiterates the time-honored credo of all who take the Hippocratic

Freedom: Can we keep it?

FROM THE DESK OF "ALKALAI IKE"

This year '87 seemed to be another one of the same and would have been but for that fateful decision to read the constitution of the United States of America. Why not. After all, this year, 1987 would be the year that we Americans would celebrate the anniversary of the signing of that most unique document. A document that changed not only our lives but the lives of peoples all over the world.

So, I read the constitution and I reread it. Additionally I read and absorbed all of the printed material the various publications printed on the subject of that August document.

Politicians, commentators, news medias, teachers and judges, spoke and wrote voluminous tomes RONALD REAGAN, President of the United States, White on "my rights." The "Bill of Rights" was pointed out to me as those tenants that grant me the basic rights to, life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

In all of the discussions of our democracy very few would point out a very disconcerting fact. Nowhere in the constitution is democracy mentioned. Republic however is.

Why was democracy not mentioned in that document? I began my search in the Oxford American Dictionary with the definitions of the words, Democracy and Republic. Democracy — government by the whole people of a country, especially through representatives whom they elect. Republic — a country in which the supreme power is held by the people or their elected representatives What in effect was the difference between the two, if indeed there was a difference. Didn't the definitions of the two words say the same thing? Well they seemed to. That is until I happened onto a a result of my research. The most important, that no government can grant me my basic rights of individual freedom. Those are inherent rights I possessed upon entering this world. The Bill of rights to my way of thinking is incorrectly named, the first ten amendments as an afterthought to the constitution and a condition to which ratification was sought, are rather "prohibition" to the government, reminding the government and bureaucracy which grows out of unrestrained government that my rights are indeed inhertently mine and mine alone.

Mine that is if I can keep them! Those fateful words issued by one of our more notable framers, "A republic, ... if you can keep it.' This past week Charley Reese addressed the issue very prophetically. We individually are responsible for what we have in the nature of a government. Just as we individually are responsible for our actions and only ours. If you the people are not responsible for the actions of your government and those elected by you then you have lost your freedom.

History shows us that throughout the story of civilization governments grow as individuals relinquish basic freedoms

Governments no matter how benevolent ultimately through a self aggrandizing bureaucracy impose the will of the government upon those governed. Can we keep it? Not if the status quo is maintained. I fear not if we allow the bureaucracy to "grow" oppressive agencies stymying the freedoms of individuals in the pursuit of their inherent rights. Haven't we mortals learned from the history of the decline of the Roman Empire? Theirs was a government, benevolent and secure seeking to control their economy, trade and productivity through establishment of agencies whose stern directives destroyed rather than perpetuated a way of Theirs, the Romans' is not the only example we can see if only we wish to. History is full of them.

Stifle a persons inducement to succeed or better himself or herself and enslavement is not far behind. It couldn't happen here? How did Dan Rowan say it?" "You bet your

gress women would openly and brazenly support active communist causes, raising monies through speeches and letters in contradiction to the very oath of allegiance to which they were

More and more our legislative bodies seek to further tax the individual, propose and pass unending and ever increasingly oppressive laws; forming agencies and writing directives intended to do one thing and one thing only. That objective is to make the individual subservient to the government, the parties, the politicians who collectively believe the individual, the American people are unknowledgeable and incompetent, to govern themselves, I wonder. Are they right? No, I don't think so. But only:

and I parrot other more eloquent personalities, if the individual takes to heart the meanings of duty, and responsibility to be synonymous with freedom. Thomas Paine, the first leader of the revolution wrote

"These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of their couwntry: ... Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered: What we obtains too cheap, we esteem too lightly: ... it would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as FREEDOM should not be highly rated."

And consider this ... the only way in which men can remain free and be in control of their individual energies and freedoms is to cut the power of government to an irreducible minimum.

Our forefathers did just that but despite their precautions the government and the bureaucracy have grown to bounds never intended.

Can we keep it ... that which we inherited? We'll see

INCLUDES THE WORD "NO"

It's time to send your children off to school again, to prepare them for the world they must one day confront. The school will do a good job of this, but your cooperation is also needed in order to make sure that they don't learn the wrong things. As everyone knows, we are living in an era where drug abuse is rampant, and the children are being lured into this trap at a shockingly early age. Don't fail to warn them about this, as a part of their preparation for the new school year, for it can be vastly more important than their clothes or books. Moreover, you can reinforce your efforts by enrolling them in the Sunday school at your House of Worship. With all this, you can rest assured that the vocabulary your children develop in school will include the proper use of the word "NO" as the password to a happier, healthier and longer life.

"PIGEON DROP"

The Martin Co. Sheriff's office and Stanton Police Department recently had a report of an attempted "Pigeon Drop" scam.

We would like to warn our local residents about the so called "Pigeon Drop," said Stanton Police Chief Mike Adams.

The Pigeon Drop artists (or suspects) usually pick on the elderly. There are usually two to three people involved.

The scam usually involves a deal where the victim has to bring the suspect(s) a sum of money in exchange for more money, which usually turns out to be newspaper clippings, or the victim has to put up some good faith money.

There are many different twists and deals used in the Pigeon Drop all involving a large return to victim on his investment of "up front"

Usually the suspect(s) have a large amount of "flash" money which they sometimes claim to have found or they need to invest it but they have a strong dislike for going into banks.

A prime example of a "Pigeon Drop" is where one or two of the suspects approach the victim.

tions and body work at reasonable prices.

They flash a large sum of money and claim they have say ten thousand dollars they need to do something with but they dislike going into banks. The suspect(s) then tell the victim that if he or she will put the money in their bank account and keep it for them then the victim will get to keep half of it or five thousand. But the suspects demand that the victim give them five thousand dollars to show "good faith" that they can get their money back.

The victim then exchanges his five thousand dollars for the suspects envelope containing ten thousand dollars. The suspects leave quickly and when the victim open the envelope it will contain tissue paper or newspaper clippings.

This is only one example of many Pigeon Drops scams so if anyone approaches you with a scheme to put up money to make more money then be suspicious and contact your police dept. or sheriff's office. If the scheme is legitimate then the people will not mind the police checking them out.

Jessica's tunnel team feted at Midland event

Members of the tunneling crew who participated in the successful rescue of little Jessica McClure on Saturday, Oct. 14 were assembled downstairs in the Midland Center for a Beer and Barbecue Bust last week. Local resident R.H. "Tex" Houston attended the party.

"It was a chance for the men who worked together to renew new friendships and visit with the men and their families," Houston said. "The tunnelers" and their Dallas and San Antonio. 'I had an opportunity to speak with many of the men with whom I worked during the rescue and families came from as far away as straighten out some facts for the book I have decided to write on the subject," Houston said. "The tunnelers received the concept of a book by one of the tunnelers, very postively as much has been said and printed that is erroneous and even critical of certain tunnelers.' Charles Bronson

R.H. "TEX" HOUSTON Sitting out in the ranch truck in front of the drugstore the other morning waiting for Kyle to open the doors and brew that first pot of 'Hot Black' I noticed a strange car cruising down St. Peter looking the town over.

It was conspicuous by the sign attached to the top of the car. The bearded driver in the beat-up old red sedan made two or three passes through town and then disappeared.

His four sided sign read "J.W. Ritchie — Last of the Hobo Sign Painters, on one side and the other

I have run across a few traveling sign painters in my travels and have myself resorted to using my art brushes to paint signs for a much needed grubstake. Seeing that hobo sign painter reminded me of the story I heard the other

Long before my time another itinerant sign painter came through Stanton plying his trade.

Time and time again, leaving fine examples of his work, always proudly signing his work "Speedy". Not to forget the little curl-Q-'s he would add for florish. William P. "Speedy" Stevens was a very well read man knowledgeable about much according to my sources, and from time to time would require a grubstake to continue his travels

Now Speedy was the proud owner of a finely crafted double-barrel shotgun of now undetermine

Shotgun under arm this gentleman would walk into the bank and hand his prized possession to the bank president. He would leave after a short visit with Mr. Jim Tom, leaving his shotgun as collateral. It might be six months before he returned to pay off his loan and redeem his gun.

The inveterate cigar smoker expressed his fondness for Stanton often and gave as his address Stanton and Ozona, the other city of great liking.

I suspect there are still some of his signs in Ozona as there are around here. As his work is still evident in our community so are men of "Speedy" genre stil found in our society.

Member Information Advisor Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, along with all cooperatives statewide, is participating in the 1988 "Safewatch" program. The program is sponsored by the Texas Electric Cooperatives in Austin. It is patterned after the nation-wide "Crime Watch" programs and is designed to teach citizens the dangers of electricity and to recognize hazards when they exist.

The program is a film presentation that illustrates some of the most common mistakes that result in electrical accidents, as well as the results from these mistakes. For instance, the film illustrates what can happen when children attempt to retrieve kites from highline wires, when CB or TV wires, or when a citizen attempts to remove a downed power line from the roadway. Of special significance is an illustration of what occurs when sprinkler pipes are raised into the air and touch power lines

Purpose of the film program is to enlist the help of teenagers and other citizens in alterting others to

On November 20, 1987, this program was presented to the Shop classes of Stanton High School. The classes are under the supervision of Harold Oldaker.
