How's That? Social Security

Q. My wife and I both will be 65 next year. How soon should we apply for our Social Security benefits?

A. You should apply for retirement benefits about 2-3 months before you plan to retire. That way, your claim can be processed in time for your payments to start when you stop working. Even if you decide not to retire, you should file an application for Medicare 2-3 months before you turn 65 to be sure you will have full Medicare protection starting at age 65, according to the Social Security Office.

Two, maybe three, run for state seat

By BILL FOSTER
Staff Writer

A two-candidate race has developed for the District 69 State House of Representatives seat as of this morning.

And it appears the election could turn into a two-party contest. Cecil G. Gilstrap, 57, a Howard County oilman, has filed as a Democrat against four-term incumbent Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring.

Shaw, also a Democrat, filed for reelection last month.

A spokesman at Republican State headquarters in Austin said no GOP candidate had filed for the District 69 seat as of 11 a.m. today.

However, City Councilman Johnny Rutherford informed the Big Spring Herald late this morning that a Republican candidate will announce his candidacy at a press conference at the Park Inn Motel at 6 p.m.

A need for stronger representation and putting a stop to "over regulatory" state government prompted Gilstrap to file for the post, he said.

"I think this district needs better representation," Gilstrap said during a telephone interview Monday morning.

Gilstrap, who called himself "an ultra-conservative" said he opposes any further state tax increases and what he considers restrictive state laws.

Instead of increased taxes, Gilstrap said he favors trimming government waste as a means of balancing the state budget.

"We need to decrease state taxes, not increase them. The people are being taxed to death," he said.

The state's $5.7 billion tax bill passed last year was "completely out of hand," he said.

This is the first time Gilstrap has sought political office.

Gilstrap said he plans to retire from the oil business.

No other candidates have filed for county-level offices since last Thursday, according to the Howard County County Clerk's office.

Candidates have filed for election to the following positions:

• District 3 County Commissioner: Pete Jenkins, Sterling City Route; Jimmy Newsom, 1206 Nolan St.; and incumbent Bill Crooker, 2802 Parkway Road. All three have filed as Democrats.

• Precinct 1 County Commissioner: incumbent O.L. "Louie" Brown, 1508 Oriole St., and Emilio Rey Molina Sr., 1103 N. Scurry St.

Other incumbents who have filed, but have yet to draw an opponent in the March 8 primary are: Sheriff A.N. Standard, Tax Assessor/Collector Dorothy Moore and Justice of the Peace Precinct 1 China Long.

District Attorney Rick Hamby, running on the Democratic ticket, also will seek reelection. No other candidate has filed against him.

School daze marks start of new term

Herald staff report

Ready or not — or perhaps like it or not — Howard County students returned to classes today after a two-week break for the Christmas holidays.

Big Spring, Coahoma and Forsan public schools opened their doors again after closing Dec. 18, according to spokeswomen at the districts' administrative offices.

Kent Bowerman, principal at Big Spring High School, said that after the first day or so, students should become re-acclimated to school routine.

"The first day back, everyone walks around in kind of a daze, he said. "But I'm extremely pleased with the lack of tardiness. The halls looked deserted this morning."

Students will have little time to reacquaint themselves, however, as all three districts will begin preparation for the end of the six-week reporting period Jan. 15. Bowerman said he doesn't expect the two-week layoff to have an adverse effect on studies.

"The teachers kind of eased them back in," he said. "But the students will get their attention back quick. They don't have time to daydream."

Teachers at the high school are busy completing study units before beginning semester review work next week, Bowerman said. End-of-six-weeks tests will be Jan. 14 and 15, he added.

The new semester will begin Jan. 19, after teacher inservice the previous day, the district spokeswomen said.

Along for ride

As Lynda and Jimmie Long take a skate around the rink, son Kyle, 3, gets to tag along for the ride. With the cool weather during the weekend, the three were at Skateland Saturday afternoon for a bit of indoor entertainment.

Ten file in state for presidential primary

AUSTIN (AP) — Ten Republicans and Democrats have formally filed in Texas as presidential candidates in the March 8 "Super Tuesday" primary election, and officials said four more are expected to file by today's 6 p.m. deadline.

Pete du Pont of Delaware, the only announced Republican presidential candidate who did not file in Texas Saturday, is expected to file today, said John Weaver, state GOP executive director.

Democratic officials said that Bruce Babbitt, former Arizona governor; Gary Hart of Colorado, who rejoined the race for president last month; and U.S. Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee were also expected to file today.

Related story page 2-A

Five candidates formally filed for the Republican presidential nomination Saturday at the state GOP headquarters.

Campaign officials for Vice President George Bush were the first in line, at 10:30 a.m., and submitted a stack of petitions about 3 feet high that bore signatures of nearly 35,000 Texans, while former Secretary of State Alexander Haig's filing was so tardy officials had to keep the office open after 5 p.m.

U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, the Rev. Pat Robertson and U.S. Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas also filed as Republican candidates.

Officials from each of their campaigns submitted between 6,000 and 10,000 signatures. Republican presidential candidates must submit at least 5,000 signatures to file for the primary in Texas.

Five candidates had filed in the Democratic primary by Saturday — the Rev. Jesse Jackson, U.S. Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and political extremist Lyndon LaRouche Jr. of Virginia.

U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Texas, of Amarillo filed Saturday for the U.S. Senate seat held since 1971 by Democrat Lloyd Bentsen.

Five Republicans are expected to seek the nomination and an eventual head-to-head race against the powerful incumbent whose get-out-the-vote effort in 1982 helped the Democrats oust Clements from the governor's mansion and sweep all other statewide races.

State Sen. Bill Sarpalus, D-Canyon, announced as a candidate for Boulter's congressional seat. State District Judge Brian Poff of Canyon filed Saturday in the Democratic primary for the state Senate seat being vacated by Sarpalus.

Dole campaign co-chairman Tom Pauken of Dallas said officials turned in about 8,000 signatures for Dole, and San Antonio co-chairman Van Archer said, "If we wanted to, we could have gotten 50,000. We only worked on these for about two weeks."

Richard McBride, Southern coordinator for Kemp, turned in about 6,000 signatures.

Ambulance, city floods, and dam make headlines

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

1987 marked the end of a 10-year battle — a fight that Stacy Dam supporters won.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in April issued a permit allowing the Colorado River Municipal Water District to begin building the Stacy Dam and Reservoir — 10 years after it applied for the first permit.

The endangered Concho water snake had put the bite on the project, causing lengthy delays as environmentalists fought to stop the project, fearing construction could wipe out the endangered species.

The permit was approved with special conditions to provide for the snake's protection — amounting to a $3.1 million water district plan that includes bulldozing 30 miles of Colorado River shoreline to create more habitat for the reptile.

Amid jokes about the endangered Concho water snake, local, state and national leaders in May broke ground for the $70 million dam project — but they shoveled dirt in a box on the Ballinger High School lawn, because of muddy conditions at the dam site.

An estimated 1,500 people attended the groundbreaking ceremony at the high school — located about 25 miles from the actual dam site.

Contractors Brown & Root USA began moving dirt at the reservoir site in June.

More than 100 employees are now working at the site and the number is expected to peak at about 225.

Construction appears to be on schedule, according to officials, who anticipate completion in early 1990.

When completed, the dam will impound 544,000 acre feet of water and will cover more than 19,000 surface acres in Concho, Coleman and Runnels counties. Officials estimate the lake's greatest width at four miles at flood level.

The project is expected to provide drinking water for 500,000 people in Abilene, San Angelo, Midland and surrounding areas that buy water from the CRMWD. Big Spring's water quality is expected to improve, by relieving the drain on Lakes E.V. Spence and J.B. Thomas, lakes from which the city draws its water.

Ambulance debate prompts bids

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Uncollected debts forced Lee Ambulance Service to announce in April plans to end its contract with Big Spring and Howard County.

The announcement set off a flurry of activity to find another service before Lee ceased operations July 15.

An ambulance advisory committee, consisting of county and city officials, began meeting to study the situation.

Officials examined the feasibility of a public service, but later nixed the idea, citing cost as an impediment.

The search for a new service was punctuated by a mixture of discussions including charges that officials prematurely elected to seek bids for the service, then mishandled those bids. Bids from six companies were received, including Lee Ambulance.

In the end, county and city officials awarded a contract to the lowest bidder — a Scottsdale, Ariz.-based company called Rural/Metro.

Two council members, Pat DeAnda and D.W. Overman, voted against awarding the contract to Rural/Metro, while county commissioners unanimously approved the contract.

DeAnda and Overman cited higher user costs, and questioned whether bidders were treated fairly by local officials.

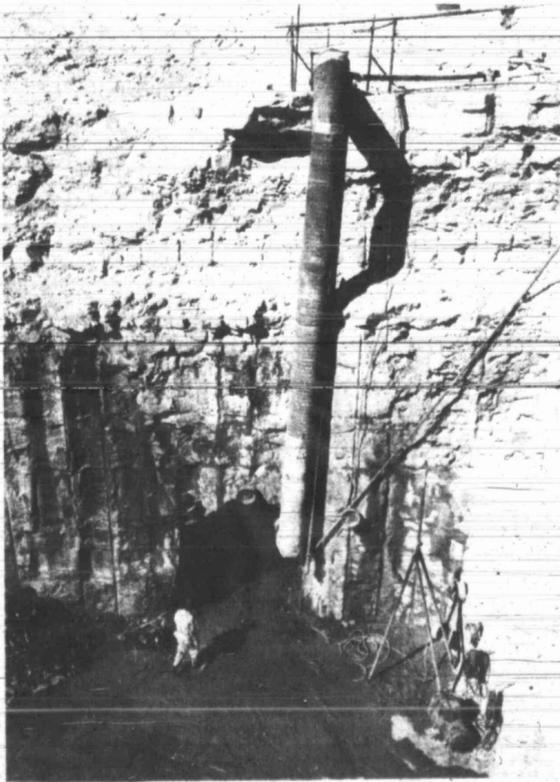

Rural/Metro was awarded a three-year contract with a 90-day termination notice available to both parties.

Lee Ambulance employees, who complained of low pay and longer working hours with the new company, agreed in June to work for the service, which is located at 600 FM 700.

Rural/Metro Operations Manager Michael Black says he's pleased with the company's service to the area.

For the past couple months the service has met its goal of responding to 90 percent of its emergency calls in eight minutes or less, Black said.

Local officials also appear to be pleased with the level of service being provided.

A lone worker enters a tunnel, being dug in November, that will eventually run the length of Stacy Dam. In 1987, after a 10-year struggle, the CRMWD was finally issued a permit by the Army Corps of Engineers to build the West Texas dam.

Rain, rain go away said city

By BILL FOSTER
Staff Writer

Flood waters were at the forefront of local news again during the past year.

Heavy rains in late May and early June caused Beals Creek to overflow its banks, flooding the Jones Valley area of west Big Spring for the third time in the past two years.

Property damage caused by the high waters prompted the owner of a business on Third Street to threaten a lawsuit against the city.

Chuck Cawthon, owner of Chuck's Surplus, maintained the city was negligent by allowing sediment and debris to clog Beals Creek, preventing the outflow of gathered rainwater.

Although the city has been working to clear the creek of debris, city officials disagree a clogged channel is causing flood problems along Beals Creek.

A Corps of Engineers study indicates the flooding would be relieved by increasing the depth of the creek 18 feet and installing a concrete channel.

The project would cost $20 million, according to city officials. Although a federal grant might be available, the city would be required to match it.

Providing the matching funds would double the city debt and

Boulter to take on 'tax-happy' Bentsen

Herald staff report
Saying that the people of Texas deserve a responsible alternative to Lloyd Bentsen's record of tax and spend, 13th District Congressman Beau Boulter today announced he will seek the Republican nomination for the right to challenge Democrat Lloyd Bentsen.

Boulter was at Midland International Airport at 11 a.m. today for a press conference with area media.

"He's tax-happy. Lloyd Bentsen shows an astonishing enthusiasm for tax increases," Boulter said.

"He says he works for Texas as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, but it seems to me he has worked more for taxes," Boulter said.

"I will not criticize Lloyd Bentsen for ineffectiveness. The problem, unfortunately, is he has been all too effective in steering through the Senate two new tax bills this year alone.

"It's great that a Texan is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, but what good is it for Texas if he's using it to lead the charge for higher taxes?" Boulter said.

Boulter today began a three-day tour of the state to announce his candidacy for the U.S.

Senate. The trip began in Houston and will end in Texarkana.

Bentsen has held the seat for 17 years. By Wednesday, Boulter will have traveled more than 4,000 miles across the state.

Boulter said he made the decision to challenge Bentsen when Bentsen unveiled plans to raise taxes by $23 billion over the next two years.

"The big-money people of this state and the self-appointed political pundits may say it can't be done, but we're going to draw a line in the dust and get it done."

A gaping crater in the concrete at East 11th Place and Mt. Vernon Avenue exposes a six-inch Big Spring City water line that broke last week. The break left residents in the Washington Heights area without service for a short time. The water line rupture was one of eight that have occurred throughout Big Spring during the past week, according to Public Works Director Tom Decell. Decell speculated that the expansion and contraction of water pipes caused by extreme variance in temperatures caused the breaks.

Sheriff's log

Herald staff report
One person was arrested by the Howard County Sheriff's Department over the weekend.

Michael Gene Anderson, 26, 3708

Hamilton Ave., was arrested on a charge of possession of a controlled substance. Anderson was still in custody in the county jail Monday morning.

Firefighters investigating blaze

Herald staff report
A fire that caused $1,500 damage to a storage room at the Thrifty Lodge Motel, 1000 W. Fourth St., Saturday was still under investigation by the Big Spring City Fire Marshal's office this morning.

Fire fighters responded to the blaze at 5:16 p.m. Saturday. The fire, which reports list as being of a "suspicious" origin, had been extinguished before fire fighters arrived at the scene.

cause a significant tax increase, city officials said.

The project would require relocation of buildings, roads and railroads before work could begin.

In flood-related matters, Big Spring City Council members approved plans and specifications for the reconstruction of Comanche Trail Dam in the southern part of the city.

Bids on the estimated $800,000 project are expected to be opened Jan. 28 and presented to the council for consideration at the second meeting in February.

The construction work is necessary to repair damage caused by heavy rains, leading to the breach of the dam in August 1986.

The top of the dam levy will be restored to its original elevation of 2,551 feet above sea level.

A rolled concrete cap will be used to strengthen the top of the dam and a portion of the downstream side of the structure.

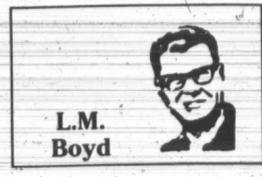

Eight hundred cubic feet of rock rip-rap will be dumped on the upstream — east — side of the dam site to control erosion.

Project specifications also call for the clearing of both banks of the entire dam site.

As a name, Red goes way back

By L.M. BOYD
Tell your friend "Red," if you have any friend so called, that Red is one of the oldest nicknames in human history. Scholars say certain ancient Egyptians were known as Red.

Q. How come so many oldtime movie theaters were named Roxy?
A. Roxy was the nickname of a Pennsylvania baseball player named Samuel Lionel Rothapfel early in the 1900s. Later he managed a succession of movie theaters noted for spectacular lighting effects. All those Roxy theaters were named after him. It was he who designed the Radio City Music Hall, might mention.

Female guppies prefer homely males. Homelier, the better. So say scientists who've studied the sexual preferences of those fish. They conclude females evolved to pick drab mates in self-defense. In deadly cannibalistic societies, they say, the less conspicuous the sex partner, the better the odds of survival.

Q. How long does a balding man have to lay off work to get a hair transplant?
A. Half hour per session, about. He can go back to work the next day.

Argument continues over whether it's okay to reheat coffee. Nobody used to think so. But authorities now say recently brewed coffee just cooled can be reheated in a microwave without giving it that burnt taste. In fact, it tastes better that way, they say, than coffee left too long on a warming plate.

Q. How come you're not supposed to store ham in foil?
A. Salt in the cure eats holes in the foil, research suggests.

A computer run on 3,600 sorts of mammals in North America indicates 2,150 are rodents. That's too many rodents. Write somebody about this.

Ranch poaching triples; students partly to blame

KINGSVILLE (AP) — The number of poachers nabbed on the vast King Ranch nearly tripled this hunting season, with Texas A&I University students accounting for about a third, officials say.

Many of the interlopers hunger for thrills — not venison — and an increase in fines that went into effect in September seems to have simply raised the stakes in what game officials consider a gambling game.

"We've had more outlaw hunters shooting deer on the King Ranch this year," said ranch security agent Clint Ferguson. "And we're surprised that about a third of them have been A&I students."

"We arrest a lot of repeaters because they're like gamblers," he said. "They're addicted to outlaw hunting and they consider it a cat-and-mouse game."

Ferguson said 125 cases have been filed against 70 people since early November for poaching incidents at the 823,000-acre ranch in South Texas. The hunting season began Nov. 14 and ends today.

Last year, about 50 cases were filed on 25 violators, and the average in past years has been about 25 violators, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported today.

The cases are filed in justice of the peace courts by six game wardens and five King Ranch security agents, who are also Kleberg County sheriff's deputies.

Pupils evacuated from school

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — About 100 elementary school children inhaled carbon monoxide fumes apparently emitted by a faulty furnace today and were treated at hospitals, police said.

Between six and 10 of the children were unconscious when they were evacuated from the Edison Elementary School about 9:30 a.m., said Sgt. Ron Hill of the Hammond Police Department.

It could not be immediately determined if any of the children were seriously injured.

"I just felt light-headed and nauseated," said Jill Dodge, a first-grade teacher. "I think it hit us all at the same time."

Police responded to a call that "kids were passing out at their desks," said Hill.

Temperatures were in the teens, and city buses were used to keep the students warm after they were evacuated. Some students were taken to churches and neighboring homes to wait until their parents picked them up.

Buses from the Hammond Transit System, ambulances and anxious family members with cars stood by during the evacuation. Parents and grandparents searched for children.

"I just happened to be here looking for my kid and had a station wagon. Now I have about 16 kids in there," said parent Debbie Evans.

Between 300 and 500 students attend the elementary school, and Hill said a total of about 100 students was brought to five area hospitals.

Man indicted on eight forgery counts

He had been indicted on eight counts of forgery.

Mitchell County Sheriff Wendell Bryant said Johnston's bond was set at $2,500 for each count by 32nd District Judge Weldon Kirk. Johnston made the bond requirements and was released by the Scurry County officials.

Midland crash kills one

MIDLAND (AP) — A small plane went down in a fiery crash northwest of Midland Air Park Monday, apparently killing one person, authorities said.

Investigators did not know how many people were aboard the Cessna aircraft when it crashed, Department of Public Safety spokesman Lloyd Christmas said.

But initial reports indicated that one person was dead in the crash that started a grass fire in the field where the aircraft went down, Christmas said.

"It just disintegrated," said Lee Fisher, 41, who lives about 150 yards from the cotton field where the plane crashed. "Nobody in the plane walked away."

Fisher said the plane hit power lines before going down, knocking out power to his home.

"It went straight into the ground," he said.

The crash was reported at 9:49 a.m., Midland Fire Department dispatcher Lloyd Dunagan said. Three fire trucks and one ambulance were sent to the scene, he said. The fire was reported out by 10:20 a.m.

Jobless rate expected to remain stable

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' relatively stable 1987 unemployment rate is expected to continue through this year, although an economist cautioned that a catastrophe in oil prices or the national economy could darken his forecast.

"We'll see some modest improvement, but nothing dramatic," said Bernard Weinstein, director of the Center for Enterprise at Southern Methodist University. "At year's end, there should be at least a few more people employed than at the beginning of the year."

Unemployment in Texas fell a full percentage point in 1987 and hovered around 8.5 percent for much of the year. The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics is to release December's tally Friday.

Wide swings in the number of working Texans belied the stability of the unemployment rate, which is computed from the numbers of jobholders and people looking for work. An estimated 725,000 Texans were seeking employment in November, the BLS reported last month.

"1987 was a real see-saw year," Weinstein said. "During the first six months, we lost jobs. During the second six months, we recaptured a lot of those job losses."

He predicted the number of Texas jobs will grow between 1 percent and 1.5 percent this year, but only if the economy is not sidetracked by a national recession or another sharp slide in energy prices.

Economists appear to agree both are distinct possibilities.

"The biggest risk now is a national economic downturn just as we are escaping the twin troughs of economic base and construction activity," Barton Smith, chairman of the Department of Economics at the University of Houston, said in a year-end interview.

Meanwhile, some of 1987's optimism about oil prices has evaporated.

"We've seen oil prices give up about three to four dollars a barrel in recent weeks," Weinstein cautioned. "That's not a good sign."

Officials had credited prices that stayed in the $20 range for several months last year with helping the Texas economy recover somewhat from the woes brought on by far lower prices in mid-1986.

February deliveries of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude oil, settled Thursday at $16.70 per barrel on the New York Merchantile Exchange.

Living in Mexico a bargain for many retired Americans

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (AP) — Retired Americans living in Mexico find their dollars go a long way, despite soaring inflation that rapidly eats away the gains made from the steady devaluation of the peso currency.

Most Americans who have retired here, whether longtime residents or newcomers, caution that the going is easy only for those who can count on a steady income in dollars arriving from outside Mexico.

And they say it helps to be a bit adventurous and prepared for surprises that greet those living in a foreign land.

"The person who is willing to pull up roots is, age and all, a person with a certain amount of flexibility," says Dasha, a psychologist who is a native New Yorker but a resident of Mexico since 1939. She uses only one name.

Dasha said that most of her clients see her to "re-evaluate" their decision to live outside the United States, and that in the past few years more have come to discuss events in light of Mexico's continuing economic upheaval.

The onset of the economic crisis in 1982 included a freeze on all dollar accounts in Mexican banks, a traumatic experience for many Americans who retired in Mexico.

Real estate values plummeted with the fall of the peso, which traded at 26 to the dollar in 1982. Now the rate of exchange is more than 2,200 pesos to the dollar. Stories abound of people who bought luxury homes for $300,000 and then were lucky to get $140,000 when they sold.

"People who bought houses with dollars (before 1982) would like to get that back — and more," said Dr. Nan Platas, a native of Gainesville, Texas, who has been practicing in Mexico for some time. "So some people are trapped here."

The peso-dollar comparison is deceptive, however, because inflation also has run steadily in double- and triple-digit figures during the years of the crisis. Analysts say inflation will likely have exceeded 140 percent for 1987.

A study done for The New York Times' travel section found prices for visiting Americans had not changed appreciably since 1985, despite the fall of the peso.

Even so, especially outside resort areas, bargains are available.

"If your money comes from the States, you're better off every day," said another longtime Cuernavaca resident, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he has business interests in Mexico. "Nowhere in the world could they live like this. ... They live like kings."

He said, for example, that he pays a maid $15 per week, down from the equivalent of $50 weekly before the economic crisis began.

The low cost of labor — Mexico's minimum wage went up to about $3.50 per day as of Jan. 1 — has spread the word in the United States that handicapped people and others needing personal care can do well in Mexico.

State death toll tops predictions

By The Associated Press

While undercutting the Department of Public Safety's Christmas prediction, Texas outpaced the New Year's Eve forecast as at least 36 people died on the state's highways during the latter holiday period.

The New Year's count topped the DPS prediction of 35 on Sunday when, for the second time in as many days, Texas recorded a multi-fatality collision involving a car traveling the wrong way on an interstate highway.

The DPS' 102-hour period ran from noon Wednesday through midnight Sunday. The final tally will be released this morning. During the 102-hour Christmas count, the DPS predicted 42 fatalities but recorded 36.

DPS spokesman David Wells said 20 of the later period's fatalities occurred in a 10-hour span beginning at 8 p.m. on New Year's Eve.

"That is extremely unusual to have that many fatalities in that short a period during the holidays," Wells said.

James John Jamison III, 27, of Lubbock and a passenger, Mark Arnold Schweigert, 22, of Lubbock were killed early Sunday when the car Jamison was driving collided head-on with another car on Interstate 27, about three miles south of Plainview in Hale County. The driver of the other car was hospitalized in critical condition.

Two jailed after motel shoot-out

DALLAS (AP) — One man was killed and two were jailed following a motel shooting linked to a dispute among Jamaican drug dealers, police said.

Andrew Stanley McGregor, 32, of Dallas died Saturday after a gunman pumped nine automatic-pistol bullets through a motel room door, hitting him in the neck and chest, Sgt. Tom Shelton said.

The gunman and another man then barricaded themselves inside another room at the Dallas motel, and it took police nearly two hours of negotiations to secure the men's surrender, he said.

Murder charges were expected to be filed against a 21-year-old man and a 22-year-old man, Dallas homicide investigator Rick Silva said.

Another man who was in McGregor's room at the motel told police he saw two men, one with an automatic pistol, standing outside the door. Nine shots were fired through the door, and an undetermined number hit McGregor in the chest, Silva said.

The suspects, the victim and the other man had been engaged in another dispute Friday night that Shelton said is believed to be linked to Jamaican drug gangs. One of the suspects had also rented a room at the motel.

Arson ruled in fire that killed girl

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Authorities say the fire that killed a five-year-old girl whose family had been terrorized by former neighbors was intentionally set.

Kara Holmes died Sunday when fire roared through her apartment in a housing project. She suffered second-degree burns over 75 percent of her body, authorities said.

Lynn Holmes, the girl's mother, said someone set fire to a mattress she had used to cover a window that was broken out last week.

The girl went to the second floor of the apartment to awaken her 11-year-old brother, Daniel, the mother said, while she went to a neighbor's home to call the Fire Department.

The girl apparently thought her mother still was in the unit and wanted to go back downstairs after her, the mother said.

"Daniel said, 'No, no, mom's outside. Come on, come on, we've got to get outside.' I thought they'd have sense enough to go out the second-story window and go down the balcony," she said.

The boy escaped by that route, but the girl remained inside. Firefighters found her under her bed.

The fire was ruled an arson, and police are searching for two suspects, Fire Capt. Dan Davila, chief arson investigator, said.

Fire officials estimated the damage at $20,000.

Holmes, 32, said former neighbors have been harassing her since the neighbors were kicked out of the project after she reported a juvenile was burglarizing her house.

"I was told later on, 'Don't report them because they would get even with you worse than you got them,'" Holmes said, adding she has been burglarized numerous times and her children have been attacked.

Got a question? Ask the Answer Center

FORT WORTH (AP) — The questions can be downright strange — one person wanted to know how to copyright his face, and another wondered if it's legal to import a Bengal tiger as a pet — but a special center (usually) has the answer.

Every weekday, five federal workers help match the proper federal agencies and programs in the area with hundreds of questions that range from the routine to the oddball to the occasionally heart-wrenching.

After nearly 20 years as a federal information specialist, Elsie B. Wanner said, she has heard every kind of problem imaginable. She takes pride in knowing that she has helped resolve many of them.

"As long as the caller is sincere, every question is legitimate," Mrs. Wanner said.

Mrs. Wanner, who oversees the Dallas-Fort Worth area Federal Information Center and its four employees, is the voice behind 767-8585 — the federal information number listed in the blue pages of the telephone book. She has been on the job as long as the center has been in existence — 20 years next May.

The caller who wanted to copyright his face was a circus clown who sought to protect his artistry from competitors. Mrs. Wanner tried to help by forwarding a copyright application and told him to send it to the Library of Congress.

Finding an answer for the lady who wanted a Bengal tiger as a pet was more difficult. Staff member Danny Bolton had to search through several directories before he found an agency that could help — the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which is responsible for issuing licenses for any animal brought into this country if it is on the endangered species list.

Telephone inquiries flow into the office in downtown Fort Worth at the rate of about 600 a day, Mrs. Wanner said. Although most are from Dallas and Fort Worth, the staff also serves Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Little Rock, Ark., and Albuquerque and Santa Fe, N.M.

The number of calls often is a barometer, of sorts, of economic and political events, Mrs. Wanner said.

The Iran-Contra hearings, for example, prompted 50 to 60 calls per day when Lt. Col. Oliver North — the Marine accused of playing a key role in diverting money from Iran arms sales to Nicaraguan rebels — was testifying.

"We listened to the radio and when they started hollering at Ollie North, the callers called us like you wouldn't believe," Bolton said. Most of the calls were in support of North, and Bolton referred them to a telephone number that had been established by North's attorneys.

North inspired more calls than any other person or event in the history of the information center, including the Watergate scandal and President Nixon's resignation, Mrs. Wanner said.

The lengthy and official-sounding names of federal agencies also can result in some humorous malapropisms from callers that frequently require a few questions to untangle, Mrs. Wanner told the Dallas Morning News.

A young man recently called, seeking some federal alcoholics. Mrs. Wanner gave him what he really wanted — the number for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

A woman wanted to find an agency to neutralize her husband, who was from Mexico. Upon questioning, Mrs. Wanner referred the woman to the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

One of the more serious calls to the center was from a worried woman in Little Rock. The woman said her daughter had run away and was last seen near Canada at the Border Patrol station near Swanton, Vt., Mrs. Wanner recalled.

"We called the eastern region of the Border Patrol to find the number of the Swanton station so the woman could contact them and ask them to be on the lookout for her daughter," Mrs. Wanner said.

Opinion

Views of papers across the U.S.

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the nation:

Wedtech a matter of connections

Wedtech, a little, minority-owned machine shop in the Bronx, quickly became a $100 million military contractor. If all the indictments are given any credence at all, Wedtech's real stock-in-trade was graft and corruption.

The indictments began with a former New York City alderman and reached up to Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y. Now indictments have been returned by a federal grand jury against two of (Attorney General) Edwin Meese's old pals. ... Both worked for Wedtech and are accused, in part, of having tried to influence Meese on Wedtech's behalf.

James McKay, the independent counsel who is investigating the case, says with pointy precision that "there is insufficient evidence as of this date" to indicate that Meese "knowingly participated in criminal activity in connection with his Wedtech actions."

No arcane judgments are required to understand this case, though. Just an ability to connect the dots. Meese's old pals take Wedtech's money and try to win it special treatment in the White House.

Meese — who acknowledges this — instructs his staff to review a Wedtech job bid. The bid wins. President Reagan even gives Wedtech favorable mention in a big speech, by name.

The dots lead to an inescapable conclusion.

Israel sounding like South Africa

Shooting and killing demonstrators, blowing up the homes of suspected terrorists, putting people in jail without formal charge or trial, restricting the press — all this sounds a little like South Africa.

Instead these things have been going on lately in the areas occupied by Israel since the Six Day War in 1967.

The Reagan Administration had proper grounds for criticizing the harsh response by Israeli troops to demonstrations by Palestinians who are fed up with the occupation and their second-class status in Israel. ...

By reacting with such unrestrained violence, the Israeli government plays into the hands of the instigators. ...

Israel is dependent on American aid, especially in arms. This gives the United States good reason to demand that Israel conduct itself in such a way as to justify the continued aid. If it refuses, the aid one day will have to stop.

Urges protection of sea turtles

Sea turtles have no political lobby; they don't vote. They don't breathe under water either, and many of these endangered animals drown when they are caught in the nets that shrimp fishermen use in the Gulf of Mexico. ...

But beginning next year, shrimpers will be required to use turtle excluder devices, or TEDs, on their drag nets. ...

Some in the turtle industry argue that using TEDs will cost each boat as much as $45,000 per year in lost catch. ...

These are not pretty animals. They're no use as pets. Turtle soup is a viable menu item only in "Alice in Wonderland." So why worry about them?

Because each time an animal species becomes extinct, human beings extinguish another link in their own live-giving chain of existence.

Farm funds called most important

Congress has completed action on a bill that would bail out the federal government's sagging Farm Credit System with $4 billion in new money. Many banks in the system, which lend exclusively to farmers, have been on the verge of collapse the last few years because of a depression in the nation's farm economy.

The system has lost almost $5 billion in bad loans to farmers since 1985, and its net worth has dropped to just more than $1 billion.

The new legislation, if signed by the president, will enable the system to recover most of its losses by selling $4 billion worth of 15-year bonds to the public over the next five years.

It is estimated the plan will cost the taxpayers about $1 billion in interest payment on the bonds. That cost is minor compared with what the collapse of the farm lending system would cost the nation.

Keeping an uninterrupted supply of food flowing from the farm to the kitchen is still the most important industry in the society. The farm credit bailout plan should be finally approved and put into effect as early as possible.

The Tennessean, Nashville, Tenn.

Airline safety checks small price

Some flight crew members grumbled as they passed through airport metal detectors and emptied pockets of keys and change alongside pre-holiday travelers. ...

The tightened security does not go nearly far enough. Based on unannounced checks by the government, some airports failed time and again to prevent access to places and ramp areas by unauthorized persons. ...

If anything, there needs to be more monitoring of persons entering these supposedly secure areas. If a flight is occasionally delayed for a few minutes, so what? That's a small price to pay for safety.

Boesky sentence disappointing

It's been more than two months since the stock market crash. Financial analysts and politicians are still trying to sort out what happened. Just over a week ago, Wall Street's image suffered another blow: the sentencing of crooked stock speculator Ivan Boesky.

Boesky was sentenced to three years in jail for conspiracy in an insider trading scandal in which he made millions of dollars in illegal dealings. Boesky will not go to prison until March. Then, he probably will serve a little over a year and return to his millions.

Everyday criminals who steal pocket change often serve more time than that. ... A sentence of 10 years with at least five years actually spent in prison, would have been more appropriate in Boesky's case.

Hatred boils in a Mideast valley

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Even as this is written, revolutionary zealots are plotting acts of terrorism against Americans. They have been enlisted in an underground war against the United States by Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini.

He has ordered his terrorist legions to strike back at the "Great Satan," as he describes America, for sending a naval force into the Persian Gulf.

This message was addressed to us and delivered to our associate Barbara Newman by Hussein Musawi, the terrorist operations chief in the terrorist stronghold of Baalbek, Lebanon. Two newsmen have already been grabbed by terrorists in Lebanon. Yet Newman, traveling with a trigger-ready escort of bodyguards arranged by a Lebanese warlord, recently visited Baalbek itself.

She has kept in touch with the warlord, Ellie Hobeika, whose own headquarters is located in Lebanon's forbidden Bekaa Valley, not far from Baalbek. The message from the terrorist stronghold has been confirmed by intelligence sources. They agree that Khomeini's terrorists are preparing to strike against U.S. targets in the Mideast, Europe and perhaps America itself.

The implacable ayatollah has recruited an invisible army of terrorists from squalid, restive Shiite villages across the Moslem world. They were the deprived, the dispossessed, the disillusioned. But overnight these nobodies have become somebodies; they have been transformed into "soldiers of God," driven at once by idealism and hatred.

Most have been indoctrinated and trained at nine terrorist camps in Iran. But Lebanese terrorists are trained in Baalbek at a former Lebanese army post, called the sheikh Abdullah barracks, which occupies a hillside above the town and casts an intimidating shadow across the valley. They are trained by Ayatollah Khomeini's revolutionary guards, who were sent there from Iran.

The scruffy, raw recruits go through intensive training. They are taught puritanical Islam, inculcated with a fierce hatred of things foreign, and instructed in the grim arts of assassination, sabotage, hijacking and hostage-taking. Even more ominous is a suicide course; the graduates are sworn to die for the ayatollah.

Khomeini has a mystic, menacing appeal that incites a worshipful hysteria among the Shiite masses, however remote from his own power center. He has become an agitating force sweeping across Shiite villages, the amplified voice of their frustrations and yearnings, the symbol of shames avenged and foreigners defied.

His trained terrorists operate under various names to confuse their adversaries and to accommodate rival clans. In Lebanon, the motley terrorist bands are governed by a secret body called the Council of Lebanon, made up of Shiite mullahs, revolutionary guards and terrorist chiefs. The operational orders, like commands from on high, come from Iran.

The dominant terrorist group in Hezbollah, the "Party of God." From former terrorists who lost their enthusiasm for suicide missions, Newman learned that Hezbollah's security chief, Imad Mughnyah, has custody of most foreign hostages. They are held in basement cells in the Sheikh Abdullah barracks.

One exception is Anglican envoy Terry Waite, who few to Lebanon on a mercy mission to negotiate the hostages' release and is now himself a prize hostage. He's reportedly still alive, though in poor health, under close guard in the Shiite section of Beirut. Newman was told he'll be among the last to be released, because the terrorists are angry at Britain. Apparently they also believe their own propaganda: that he's a CIA spy.

Meanwhile, the Syrians have become apprehensive about the emergence of an Islamic puppet state, loyal to Khomeini, in the middle of Syria's sphere of influence. This has severely strained the Iranian-Syrian alliance.

As a result, the Syrians have blocked the free flow of terrorists and supplies in and out of the Bekaa Valley. Syrian authorities are now applying quite pressure on the terrorists to release the hostages, particularly Waite, whose seizure has outraged the civilized world.

But the fate of the hostages is in the hands of Ayatollah Khomeini, who has revealed a bellicose hunger for kindling the Mideast tinderbox, for promoting theistic, revolutionary, anti-Western agitation, and for eliminating American influence.

The hope in Washington is that the ayatollah, given the laws of geriatrics, cannot last much longer. But as in the Greek legend, from the teeth of the slain dragon there will likely spring up new enemies shaped in Khomeini's image.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Isn't it baffling that the surgeon general, in his pitched battle to save the country from lung cancer, has no policy on some of the most noxious things in the smoker's bag of tricks: cigars and pipe tobacco?

Those products carry no health warnings and they can be freely advertised on radio and TV. We asked a spokesman for the national doc why that was so. "Probably because it just hasn't come up," he said.

Then he speculated that cigars and pipes don't trouble the public conscience because their sales have been dropping off anyway and because they are unlikely to appeal to children. We didn't realize those surgeon general's warnings about cigarettes and cancer were directed by kiddies.

Thinking of the unthinkable

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The flight had arrived late and I was tired. I stood at the registration desk at the Kansas City Hyatt Regency Hotels, numbed to any thoughts but a shower, a cheeseburger from room service and a bed.

The desk clerk pecked at a thousand buttons, it seemed, on her computer. It wasn't that long ago when desk clerks simply reached behind them, pulled a key out of a mail slot and handed it to you, was it?

As I waited, I picked up a conversation behind me. A woman was speaking to a man. She pointed upward. He followed her hand up with his eyes.

"I never saw so much blood," she was saying. "And people were crying and screaming. Oh, God, I'll never forget it."

It was just then that it came back to me. I was standing in the lobby of the Kansas City Hyatt, only a few steps from where two skywalks collapsed during a tea dance in July of 1981.

It was shortly after 7 p.m., July 17. The Hyatt had been opened only a year. Dancers were on two skywalks, one above the other in the classic Hyatt atrium design. Suddenly, there were sounds of metal tearing away from metal, followed by the screams of hundreds who were falling into heaps from the skywalks, or who were being crushed underneath by the falling debris.

Witnesses agreed the top skywalk, which some had seen swaying to the beat of the music before the crash, tore loose first, plunging into the second skywalk, two floors below it.

It took until 8 the next morning before all the bodies were recovered from the twisted metal and concrete that had killed them.

Deaths totaled 114. There were more than 200 injured. There were subsequent investigations and lawsuits and charges of faulty design and shoddy workmanship.

It is the nature of us to be curious of disaster. I walked over to the couple who still looked above them.

"Were you here when it happened?" I asked the woman.

She said her name was Joannie James and that she drove a school bus.

"I was standing right about where I'm standing now," she began.

"The band was playing music from the '50s and '60s. There must have been a thousand people here (official estimates were 1,500)."

"All of a sudden, it happened," said Joannie James. "The music stopped and the bodies were falling all over each other. I'd never seen so much blood in all my life."

"I did all I could to help stop those who were still alive from bleeding to death. I remember a dead woman who was wearing a pink petticoat. I tore it off her and tore it into shreds for tourniquets."

"We need to go," the man with Joannie James said. She was still looking upwards when they entered the door outside.

I had my shower and my cheeseburger and I went to bed, one thought still with me as I drifted into sleep:

We know not the day nor the hour.

Amtrak crash marked

CHASE, Md. — Hundreds of people marked the anniversary of Amtrak's deadliest crash a day early on Sunday with a track-side ceremony and a meeting of a new travel safety lobbying group.

"I still have nightmares," said Mike Cooper, 18, among the first residents who helped pull injured passengers from the wreckage. "Somebody handed me a baby, and it went limp in my arms. I thought it died. ... A couple days later somebody told me the baby was not on the list of dead."

Sixteen people were killed and more than 175 were injured in the 1:15 p.m. accident Jan. 4, 1987.

Tears are encouraged

DOVER, Ark. — Teachers met with professional counselors to help students cope with a holiday killing rampage that left 16 people dead, including four of the youngsters' classmates.

Superintendent Danny Taylor of the 1,150-student Dover School District said tears would be encouraged today from students returning to school after a holiday vacation.

The four students killed were children of R. Gene Simmons, 47, the man police say is their only suspect in the 16 deaths from Dec. 23-28. They were Loretta, 17; Eddie, 14; Marianne, 11; and Rebecca, 8.

The suspect's attorney, John C. Harris, said a plea of innocent by reason of insanity was possible.

Professional counselors were to be available at the Dover school, which has kindergarten through 12th grades on the same campus, while next door at First Methodist Church, ministers from several churches established a religious counseling center for students.

Clean-up to resume

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Emergency crews worked today to contain a 20-mile-long oil slick that has contaminated two of the city's three rivers, threatened the drinking water for 750,000 people and halted shipping along the Monongahela.

About 7,000 of the approximately 1 million gallons of diesel fuel floating in the Monongahela River was recovered by late Sunday, officials said.

More equipment was heading to the area today to help, but officials said the cleanup could take weeks.

The fuel stretched at least 20 miles, from the Monongahela at West Elizabeth into the Ohio River near downtown Pittsburgh. The rivers were moving early today at only 1 to 2 mph, the National Weather Service said.

Women survive 10 days in car

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Two women who got lost and stuck on the way home from a skiing trip lived in their car for 10 days on melted snow, a bag of peanuts and a sweet roll, playing backgammon and cards to pass the time, relatives said.

Jami Goldman, 19, of Scottsdale and Lisa Barzano, 18, of Phoenix suffered severe frostbite on their feet but otherwise were in good condition following their ordeal in eastern Arizona's White Mountains, according to doctors at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital.

"Medically, their prognosis is good," Dr. Kerry Zang said. "But the prognosis for their feet is guarded at best."

They were found Saturday near Crescent Lake about 25 miles southwest of Springerville by snowmobilers Michael Estes, 45, and his son Jake, 13.

"We came up on this red car, and when we got closer, we found these two girls," said Estes, from nearby Eagar. "It was pretty emotional. They were crying, and they wondered why no one had been looking for them."

The women had been to the Purgatory Ski Area in Colorado and were returning home when they became lost Dec. 23, officials said.

They were last seen in the Gallup, N.M., area, and their parents thought they had been abducted. The state Department of Public Safety formed a search force, but the area where they were lost was not searched.

"They took a wrong road and got so far and couldn't go any farther and became stuck in their vehicle," said Claudette Womack, spokeswoman for White Mountain Communities Hospital in Springerville. "Of course, we had a big snow right after that; we had about a foot and a half of snow in that area, and they have been in their car ever since."

Instead of staying on a highway that would have taken them to Phoenix, they wound up on a rural road that is not maintained in winter. Ms. Womack said their Chevrolet Blazer wouldn't start after it became stuck the first night.

"They stayed with the Blazer which was the best thing to do," said Ms. Goldman's father, Michael Goldman. "They survived by eating snow. Between the two of them they had a bag of peanuts and a sweet roll the last 10 days."

They also played backgammon and cards to pass the time, relatives said.

"They put on every piece of clothing that they had," Goldman said in an interview Sunday on KFVY radio. "Here's a girl that loves skiing. She said she does not want to go skiing. She does not want to be cold again."

He said he didn't know how they ended up in the White Mountains. "They made a very large mistake over Interstate 40 (80 miles north of Springerville) and compounded it over the mountains. Why they made that mistake we just don't know," Goldman said.

"Our (Christmas) presents haven't been opened yet," he added. "They'll be opened in the next few weeks when Jami comes home."

Man witness to killing

MANILA, Philippines — A Philippine Airlines employee testified today that he saw a soldier shoot President Corason Aquino's husband, marking the first time in the current trial that a witness claimed he saw the killing.

Jessie Barcelona, 30, said he saw the soldier in a towing tractor around the Manila airport on Aug. 21, 1983, when he saw former Sen. Benigno Aquino descending from a China Air Lines jet with three uniformed escorts.

"I saw the soldier at the back of the man in white point the gun at the nape," Barcelona said. "He fired the gun and he (Aquino) fell forward."

Barcelona, who was brought to the courtroom with seven security guards, did not point out the assailant during his testimony, which was to continue Tuesday.

Prosecutor Raul Gonzalez told reporters later that Barcelona's account indicated the killer was Constable 1st Class Rogelio Moreno, one of 40 defendants.

Thatcher visits Africa

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher flew out of London's Heathrow airport today for a five-day visit to Kenya and Nigeria, her first to Africa for nearly nine years.

She left behind a British press filled with pages of her picture and policies. On Sunday she became Britain's longest continuously serving prime minister this century, with a record in office of eight years and 244 days.

Mrs. Thatcher, 62, the first woman to lead the Conservative Party and the British government, overstripped the tenure of Liberal Party leader and prime minister, Lord Herbert Henry Asquith in 1908-1916.

Death toll rises to 26

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Rescuers dug out five more bodies from the wreckage of buildings, hit when Israeli jets raided Palestinian guerrilla bases, raising the death toll to 26, police said today.

Three people were still missing after the night-long search by lamplight through the rubble of devastated buildings in south Lebanon's port of Jiyeh and the nearby town of Barja, police said.

The attack by 12 Israeli fighter-bombers was in apparent retaliation for the Nov. 25 raid, in which a Palestinian guerrilla flew a motorized hang glider to an army outpost in northern Israel.

The guerrilla killed six soldiers and wounded eight others before he was gunned down. A second airborne guerrilla was shot down inside Israel's self-proclaimed "security zone" in south Lebanon.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Rachel Rauser, a 5-year-old New Jersey girl whose father allegedly tried to sell her for $100,000, flew Sunday to Florida to live at the home of an aunt and uncle who won a three-year custody battle for her.

A belated Christmas celebration was planned for the girl, who flew from Philadelphia to Fort Lauderdale with the uncle, Gary Stern of Sunrise, Fla.

"We've reunited the family," a teary-eyed Stern said after they arrived. "We scored a major victory from the family point of view."

Three weeks ago, a New Jersey judge granted custody to Stern and his wife, Deborah. The child's grandparents and stepmother also sought custody.

On the plane, Rachel chattered about Disney World, Mickey Mouse and swimming, Stern said. When she walked into the Fort Lauderdale airport, the little girl was met with the glare of TV lights and the cheers of family, friends and well-wishers.

She hugged her aunt, asked about her two cousins and was whisked away.

Rachel's mother, Michal Rauser, died in a fiery car accident in 1984.

Rachel's father 23-year-old Joseph Waltman, who was Michal's boyfriend at the time, later won a custody battle with Michal Rauser's parents, Ruby and John Rauser of Elmer.

Rachel lived with Waltman and his now-estranged wife, Cynthia Sullivan-Waltman, until March 10, when the Alloway Township man was arrested and charged with trying to sell the child to the Sterns in the parking lot of Giants Stadium in East Rutherford. The Sterns notified authorities of the alleged offer.

Waltman is free on $10,000 bail pending trial on charges of endangering the welfare of a child.

Ms. Sullivan-Waltman, Ruby and John Rauser and the Sterns all had sought custody of Rachel following Waltman's arrest.

In awarding the Sterns custody, the judge ruled that Rachel should split five yearly visits to New Jersey with the Rausers and Ms. Sullivan-Waltman.

John Rauser said he was unable to say goodbye to the child because of the judge's ruling on visitation rights.

Man praises wife who died of cancer

DEAR ABBY: I noticed with sadness the letter from "Half a Woman." She should know that any truly caring man would not be put off after learning of her mastectomy.

At the ripe old age of 32, my wife was diagnosed with metastatic breast cancer. Both breasts were removed. In the next five and a half years, she had extensive chemotherapy and radium treatments, numerous surgeries (including total hysterectomy), and finally ended up in a wheelchair.

After her death, I was left with her memory and three children (12, 8, and 6) to help heal my pain. However, not once during all those years of her trauma did I ever consider her less than the most remarkable, beautiful, loving person that she had always been. Not once did anyone who knew her consider her as less than a whole woman.

I did not marry her breasts or any other part of her anatomy; I married her, what she was at any given point in time — her personality, her essence, if you will.

Dear Abby

"Half a Woman" should understand that the physical "problem" is hers, in her mind, and should really be no problem at all. If I could find any woman who is half the person my wife was with no breasts, I would never let her go! Sign me...

STILL LOVING AND STILL LOOKING
DEAR STILL: You appear to be a very special man who deserves to find another high-quality woman. I hope with all my heart you do.

DEAR ABBY: I recently went on a short trip and asked a good friend and neighbor to water my plants. Naturally, I gave her a key to my house. When I returned from my trip, someone told me that in my absence, this friend had taken several people through my house on a "Cook's tour," made coffee and entertained them in my home! Needless to say, I feel disappointed and betrayed that my "friend" would invade my privacy in this manner.

Am I being too sensitive about this unscheduled "tour"? It's weighing on my mind and has affected my friendship with her. How would you handle it?

BETRAYED
DEAR BETRAYED: At the appropriate time, I would tell my friend what I had heard, and give her a chance to confirm or deny the story. It is unfair to silently buy a tale without giving the accused an opportunity to defend herself — or at least explain the circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter about the mother-in-law who complained about her 30-year-old daughter-in-law who puts her two small children down to nap while she watches the soaps for two hours. I am furious!

I also have a 30-year-old daughter-in-law with two small children. She never watches soaps or anything else. She also never puts her children down for a nap; instead she gets up in the morning and heads for the mirror. She has a beautiful face and she knows it. She thrives on constant attention wherever she can get it. So off she goes every day with the two little ones in the car. She runs to tennis lessons, clubs and wanders through stores and malls shopping, dragging her tired, sleepy children with her.

On weekends the kids get a nap while my wimp son baby-sits so his wife can run and shop some more! He treats her like gold, telling her how "beautiful" she is. What I wouldn't give for a daughter-in-law who would stay home and watch the soaps every afternoon while her little ones nap!

Names in the news

QUEEN ELIZABETH

CHAIM POTOK

SANDRINGHAM, England (AP) — Dozens of photographers flocked to the country home of Queen Elizabeth II for a photo session after the royal family attended church services.

About 40 photographers assembled at the old Sandringham fire station to take pictures of the queen, her husband, Prince Philip, son, Prince Charles and his wife, Princess Diana and their children.

Shutters snapped for eight minutes while the sons of the Prince and Princess — William, 5, and Harry, 3 — clambered on a vintage fire engine. The boys were joined by Peter Phillips, 10, and Zara Phillips, 6, the children of Anne, the Princess Royal, and her husband, Mark Phillips.

Earlier Sunday, a crowd of 5,000 watched the family go to church.

NEW YORK (AP) — Chaim Potok says he is eager to return to writing fiction after spending nearly two years turning his best-selling novel "The Chosen" into an off-Broadway musical.

"What I want to do now, as soon as this enterprise is on the boards, is go back to my work," Potok said in an interview published Sunday in The New York Times.

The musical opens Wednesday at the Second Avenue Theater.

Potok's story of two teen-age Jewish boys and their fathers in 1940s Brooklyn has sold millions of copies since it was published in 1967.

"The Chosen," which previously was made into a motion picture, deals with the Holocaust and the creation of the state of Israel.

"There's some very serious material here ... but the novel itself is not heavy-handed," Potok said. "And I thought it might be interesting to try, at least to try" making the musical. Potok's other novels include "The Promise," "My Names is Asher Lev" and "In the Beginning."

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan laughed it up with Bob Hope at a party to mark the opening of a $20 million entertainment center named for the comedian.

"Bob Hope has given generously of his valuable time and valuable talent in support of worthwhile causes, perhaps more than any human being alive today," Reagan said Saturday as the Bob Hope Cultural Center opened.

Accepting the first "America's Hope Award" from Reagan, the comedian said, "I appreciate the nice things he said about me, even if I'm not Russian."

The new, tough breed of political wife

By COSMOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine

There's a new breed of tough, savvy political wife who rejects the old image of the invisible spouse in favor of a career of her own and equal partnership with her husband.

Many of the wives of the current crop of presidential contenders fit this new-age political wife, according to an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan. They tend to be younger than their forerunners and often have their own careers.

Hattie Babbitt, wife of Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, is a law firm partner. Elise DuPont, wife of former Delaware Gov. Pete DuPont, is a lawyer. Kitty Dukakis, wife of Massachusetts Gov. Mike Dukakis, is a director of the Public Space Partnership program at Harvard. Jeanne Simon, wife of Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, is a lawyer.

"We don't play the victim role," said another new-age wife, Janis Berman, married to California Rep. Howard Berman. "We were women in our own right before our husbands were elected and we do what we want to. It's not all peaches and cream, but we've made the system work for us. If we don't like what we're in, we divorce and get out."

Wives with their own careers are vulnerable to conflict of interest charges. Marilyn Quayle, wife of Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle, and Molly Sly Boren, wife of Oklahoma Sen. David Boren, gave up legal careers to avoid any conflict. Molly Boren became an interior decorator instead.

Debbie Dingell gave up her job as a General Motors lobbyist after marrying Rep. John Dingell of Michigan. She considers her career "definitely on hold. I'm limited in upward mobility until John retires."

The traditional role of a political wife is not an easy one.

"If you don't come to Washington with a very solid marriage and aren't madly in love, I'll put money on it you won't leave Washington married," said Arlene Crane, a private investigator who is married to Illinois Rep. Philip Crane.

"The erosion that takes place is terrifying. It's a fishbowl experience. I can't envision one single member of Congress whose wife isn't under some kind of stress, who doesn't have a problem."

The 435 members of Congress keep long hours, are under continual pressure and have uncontrollable schedules.

"Everything revolves around his schedule," said Ellen Proxmire, a party planner and wife of Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin. "You have to accept that or leave."

Teresa Heinz, wife of Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania, said:

"My husband often is just not available," she said. "You learn to handle things by yourself."

The politicians' demanding schedule results in a tug-of-war between spouse and staff. Emily Malina Scheuer, interior designer wife of New York Rep. James Scheuer, said: "Staff members want all of your husband. They can be obnoxious about doing their job."

Works of art in craft media

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Eloquent Object," an exhibition designed "to demonstrate how works of art in craft media have become eloquent voices for contemporary artistic expression," has been organized by the Philbrook Museum of Art, Tulsa, Okla.

The exhibition features more than 200 works by 139 American artists, from private and public collections made in media once associated with the crafts alone — wood, clay, metal, fiber and glass. Many are not "functional." Others serve as jewelry, furniture and small sculptures.

Houston ekes out win

Houston Oilers running back Alonzo Highsmith (32) high steps through the line in the third quarter of the NFL AFC Wild Card playoff game Sunday. Highsmith gained six yards on this carry. Houston won in overtime on a field goal, 23-20.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler kicker Tony Zendejas was convinced he would not wind up the joker in the AFC wild-card game. "I was grateful I got a second chance," Zendejas said after his 42-yard field goal gave Houston a 23-20 overtime victory over Seattle on Sunday. "I felt I let the whole team down."

All year long, he was perfect on field goals inside the 30-yard line, trying eight and hitting eight. When he lined up Sunday with 1:47 left in the fourth quarter, he faced a 29-yard chip shot that would give the Oilers a 10-point cushion.

But the kick slammed off the left upright and fell back to the turf. Given a last chance, Seattle moved 80 yards in 10 plays to tie the game at 20-20 and force overtime.

The Houston defense forced Seattle to punt in the extra period and quarterback Warren Moon engineered a 61-yard drive to give Zendejas a second chance.

"I was just thankful that I had another opportunity," Zendejas said. "I was pretty sure I could make it. I was kind of nervous, but you're nervous all the time."

Houston Coach Jerry Glanville was on his knees along the sideline as Zendejas lined up. Moon, so drained he doubted whether he could return to the field, huddled close to fullback Alonzo Highsmith along the Oilers bench. He

Houston kicker's family treats patrons to drinks

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — Tony Zendejas' field goal that gave Houston a 23-20 overtime victory against the Seattle Seahawks in the AFC wild-card game Sunday paid off for patrons of the Zendejas Family Restaurant.

There was a round of drinks — a double for those who wanted one — for the 150 patrons who watched the game on television with Zendejas' parents, Genaro and Ninfa, and most of his six brothers and three sisters.

When Zendejas kicked the 42-yard game-winner, the place erupted. "It was wild," Genaro Zendejas Jr., one of Tony's brothers, said. "Everyone was screaming. My mom cried."

"We were going to give everyone a drink if the Oilers won," Genaro Jr. said. "But after Tony's kick, we said, 'Make it a double.'"

The place had fallen silent about 10 minutes earlier, when Tony missed a 29-yarder with 1:47 left in regulation.

Seattle Seahawks' John L. Williams (32) loses the ball as he tries jumping over the line during third quarter action as the Seahawks faced the Oilers in Sunday's AFC Wild Card game. Houston's Keith Bostic recovered the fumble.

Lambert rides Texas Circuit to overall win

FORT WORTH (AP) — Cody Lambert of Henrietta, who barely missed qualifying for the National Finals Rodeo last month, took the 1987 all-around title in the Texas Circuit Finals Rodeo.

Lambert, who edged out Olie Smith for the title, placed consistently and finished second in the average in saddle bronc riding. Lambert won $17,161 to $14,463 for Smith.

"My not making the National Finals made December a slow month," said Lambert, a three-time National Finals qualifier. "It felt good to pick up some good money here to help me get to the winter rodeos."

The rodeo, which concluded Saturday night, determined the 1987 champions on the Texas Circuit and is one of 12 geographic regions in the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association that determines event champions each year.

Dave Appleton of Arlington had the best time in bareback riding and saddle bronc riding. In calf roping, Mike McLaughlin of Fort Worth emerged as Texas' best. McLaughlin's 9.5 run for third place helped him hold the lead for the title.

Tuff Hedeman of Bowie, the 1986 world champion bull rider, finished in dramatic fashion with an 87-point ride on 777 Copenhagen, owned by the B-J Rodeo Company.

Hedeman, who won the average at the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas two weeks ago, continued his hot streak by winning the average.

"Things have gone extremely well for the last month," said Hedeman, who in 1987 finished third for the world title in bull riding with $97,222. "I had a good National Finals Rodeo, a good Texas Circuit Finals, and I'm looking forward to going in to 1988."

While Hedeman won the average by making four qualified rides on four bulls, 1987 world champion bull rider Lane Frost rode three bulls to hold on to the Texas title. Frost finished second Saturday night with an 83 score.

Although Chuck Logue failed to place in the bareback riding, he entered the rodeo with a commanding lead and won the title.

"I didn't go to as many rodeos in Texas this year as some of the other contestants," said Logue, who in 1987 finished fifth in the world standings with $67,877. "But I guess I rode enough in Texas to win the buckle."

Controversial replay rule helped Oilers

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — The NFL's replay rule, an adventure in high-tech football, is under considerable fire and may not survive the next owners' meeting. Until then, though, it has the enthusiastic support of the Houston Oilers, who may still be alive in the AFC playoffs today only because of it.

Despite a huge statistical advantage in just about every category, the Oilers found themselves locked in overtime Sunday following a dramatic 80-yard Seahawks touchdown march in the last two minutes of regulation time. Worse than that, there was Seattle linebacker Fredd Young, gleefully clutching a tipped pass that looked suspiciously like an interception, well inside the Oilers' end of the field.

Young will never quite understand how the officials could call it anything else. "The ball was tipped at the line," he said. "There wasn't anything I could do but catch it. I did. With both hands. No question."

Well, there was some question, at least in the mind of head linesman Dale Hamer, whose job it was to make the call. And there was Hamer, waving off the catch.

"(I) was downfield about five or six yards, looking straight across into the play," he said. "I thought the ball, the ground and the hands all came together at the same time. It's an incomplete pass."

Young was flabbergasted at the call. "I knew I had it," the linebacker said. "There was no way possible that ball could hit the ground. I was totally surprised they looked at the replay. Why did they have to look at the replay if it was that clear?"

The replay, however, was Seattle's court of last resort and ultimately the Seahawks were sunk by the rule's "inconclusive clause."

Replay official Tony Veteri said, "We could not tell whether the ball hit or not. We did not get a clear view of whether he caught the ball before it hit the ground. Part of his arm covered up the ball. So we had to go with the call on the field."

The replay rule permits reversal of a call by the eye in the sky only if the upstairs official has conclusive evidence that the call on the field was wrong. In the fourth quarter, Veteri decided he had that evidence and overruled another call, awarding a fumble by Houston's Mike Rozier to the Seahawks. Seattle was unable to capitalize on that opportunity and could not prevent the Oilers from doing so when they got the chance.

Unencumbered by details like Young's alleged interception,

Houston continued merrily toward Seattle's goal line, reaching the Seahawks' 24 before turning the game over to placekicker Tony Zendejas. Earlier, he had hit from 47 and 49 yards and missed from 52 and 29, bouncing those latter attempts off the right and left goal posts. This time, he was good from 42, giving Houston a 23-20 victory.

"It's ironic that in crucial plays, it's all on the shoulders of a guy who's out there four plays a game," Houston guard Bruce Matthews said.

The real irony of the Seahawks' situation, however, was that they even got to overtime. That in itself

U.S. skaters looking to Olympics

DENVER (AP) — It's been a good year for Americans on the international figure skating scene. Now, they've turned their attention to the domestic front.

The U.S. Figure Skating Championships, which began today, will serve as qualifying for next month's Olympics and the World Championships in March. Most American skaters have been priming for the nationals by dominating competitions from Japan to Hungary.

"You always look forward to the nationals," said Debi Thomas, who will try to recapture the title she held in 1986, then lost to Jill Trenary last year. "That's especially true this year because of the upcoming Olympics."

"I feel I have a lot to prove in the nationals," Thomas added. "I want to be U.S. champion again."

Thomas was bothered by a stress injury in her feet last year. It may have cost her the national title, but she skated well at the worlds, where she was defending champion but was edged by Katarina Witt of East Germany.

Since then, she has taken a leave of absence from Stanford, where she is a premed major, and moved to Colorado. Thomas is taking courses at the University of Colorado on a part-time basis.

At Skate Canada, where most of the top contenders for Olympic medals skated, Thomas performed flawlessly in the long program. She trailed Canada's Elizabeth Manley heading into the freestyle, but her four-minute routine lifted her to the title.

Lakers blow out Portland;

Hawks rip LA

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers insist that they genuinely feel threatened by the Portland Trail Blazers.

The Blazers claim they're inching closer to the defending NBA champs in the Pacific Division.

But when the two tangled Sunday night, the result was familiar: a Lakers blowout and the 23rd Los Angeles victory in the last 27 games between the two teams.

"We were so bad. We really stunk up the joint," Portland's Clyde Drexler said after Los Angeles won 98-81, their 10th straight victory.

Portland's shooting was as icy as the weather outside Memorial Coliseum. The Blazers' 28.4 field goal percentage was an all-time franchise low and the worst in the league this season. Their 27 field goals also was a team record-low.

Hawks 121, Clippers 84. Atlanta crushed the Clippers for its fifth straight victory, with Dominique Wilkins scoring all of his 26 points and Doc Rivers passing for all of his 15 assists as the Hawks grabbed a 74-40 halftime lead.

Wilkins scored 14 points in the first quarter, including eight in a row during a 12-0 streak that put the Hawks ahead 24-9 with 5:42 left in the period. Randy Wittman scored 12 of his 18 points in the opening period, which ended with the Hawks ahead 42-22.

Los Angeles, which has lost six straight, was led by Mike Woodson and Quintin Dailey with 14 points apiece.

Atlanta's biggest lead was 106-63 in the fourth period.

Cotton Bowl

Game to get sponsor, ticket hike

DALLAS (AP) — Expected increases in financial guarantees for participating teams are prompting Cotton Bowl officials to increase ticket prices and begin searching for a corporate sponsor.

The bowl's board of directors voted to boost the per-ticket price from this year's $25 to $30 next year, Jim Brock, the Cotton Bowl's executive director, said this weekend.

Financial commitments will force every major sporting event in the country to have a sponsor by the mid-1990s, Brock predicted. And he said that corporate sponsorship is the "No. 1 priority" for next season.

Brock said moves for a sponsor and ticket increase are necessary because the $2.3 million guarantee for participating teams may reach $3 million soon. He also said it was important to acquire a sponsor before the bowl's television contract with CBS expires in 1990.

That could spell problems for some bowls, Brock said, including the Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston's Astrodome.

The Bluebonnet Bowl, which barely made its commitment to pay Baylor and Colorado last year, attracted only 23,288 fans for Texas' 32-27 victory over Pittsburgh last week.

"My heart goes out to the Bluebonnet, but I think I ought to let them comment on their future," Brock said. Two possible sponsors for the Cotton Bowl fell through before the 1987 season, Brock said. Two Texas companies he declined to name are being considered for sponsorship — neither from Dallas — and he said he is confident a sponsor will be in place by next year's game.

Several of the 18 bowls already have sponsors — the Sugar Bowl's sponsorship by USF&G, an insurance company, being the latest, Brock noted. More games will consider sponsors because the NCAA minimum guarantee of $500,000 per team probably will be increased to $750,000, he said.

Although four new sites for bowls are being considered, Brock said, he believes financial difficulties will reduce the number of bowls to 15.

The Cotton Bowl's last ticket increase came three years ago when the price was increased by $5 to $25. Cotton Bowl officials resisted a price increase last year because of the state's bad economy, Brock said. The 1989 Cotton Bowl will not be played on New Year's Day for the eighth time in 53 years, Brock noted.

The game will be moved to Jan. 2 because New Year's Day falls on a Sunday and the bowl's directors did not want to compete with the National Football League playoffs, Brock said.

Curry overcomes Aquino

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Gianfranco Rosi, a 30-year-old Italian who is becoming accustomed to upset victories, retained the World Boxing Council junior middleweight title by knocking out American challenger Duane Thomas.

Rosi's next goal is a successful defense against Donald Curry, the former king of the welterweights.

Curry scored a unanimous decision over former WBC champion Lupe Aquino on the same card. The fights were staged after midnight local time so as to be shown during prime time Sunday night in the United States.

In the earlier bout, the 26-year-old Curry, of Fort Worth, Texas, piled up a points advantage in the 12-round bout with precise hooks and combinations to the body which weakened Aquino.

However, Curry's victory drew little response from the crowd and little praise from boxing experts who witnessed the bout.

Curry said he was thinking only of winning the fight and not staging a show, "because it was the fight of my career" and crucial in gaining a title shot.

The Rosi-Curry bout will be held April 8, in Italy or at Las Vegas, Nev. The confident Italian said he was aware of his power following a convincing seventh-round knockout of Thomas and now is ready to fight any opponent.

Rosi, who had won the WBC crown last Oct. 2 with a unanimous decision over Aquino, contended after the bout at the local indoor sports palace that "Americans tried to steal my title by allowing Thomas to fight overweight."

Rosi and his party had claimed after the weigh-in that Thomas had failed to make the 154-pound weight limit, but that American matchmakers and WBC supervisors had overlooked it.

"Luckily, I foiled their attempts in the ring," said Rosi, who displayed superior boxing skills.

Thomas' dream of winning back the title he had lost to Aquino last July faded 50 seconds into the seventh round when Rosi unloaded a barrage of powerful hooks that sent him sprawling across the ropes.

"I trained hard to improve the power of my punches, and Thomas experienced it," Rosi said.

It possibly was the last chance at a title for Thomas, a 26-year-old native of Detroit who suffered the third defeat of a professional career against 29 victories. Rosi is 43-2 with 14 knockouts.

Curry said he needed to restore his confidence and credibility after suffering unexpected knockout losses at the hands of Lloyd Honeyghan and Mike McCallum.

Honeyghan handed Curry the first defeat of his career in wrestling the welterweight title in November 1986. McCallum knocked him out in the fifth round of a title fight at Las Vegas last July as Curry made an unsuccessful bid for the junior middleweight crown.

Curry said Rosi proved to be a good fighter and powerful puncher, "but I am going to win the April fight."

With luck, says SMU coach, bowl win may distract A&M

By The Associated Press Southern Methodist basketball Coach Dave Bliss just hopes the Texas A&M Aggies will still be celebrating the Cotton Bowl when his team arrives in College Station Wednesday night.

SMU, 11-2, and one of the favorites to win the SWC title, opens play against Coach Shelby Metcalf's Aggies after having whipped them 89-66 in the consolation finals of the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu last week.

"I know we are one of the favorites, but my team is good about not listening to all talk and just going out and playing its game," Bliss said. "We know A&M will be a different team than the won we played in Hawaii. I just hope they're still celebrating that fine Cotton Bowl victory (35-10) over Notre Dame."

SMU ripped Morgan State 96-65 Saturday night to get ready for the Aggies.

The SWC regular season got under way on Saturday with the Texas Longhorns nipping the Houston Cougars 65-63 in Austin before only 3,639 fans in the Super Drum.

Texas, 7-6, took advantage of Houston's poor guard play for the victory. The Cougars' starting sophomore point guard, Randy Brown, left the team to go back to Chicago last week.

"Randy was the heart of the team and we missed him," said

Houston's Richard Hollis. Houston is now 5-3 for the season.

"It's going to take us awhile to replace Randy," Houston Coach Pat Foster said.

Texas, bolstered by the return of Alex Broadway, went to a three-guard lineup. Broadway, who passed a class at a community college to become eligible again, had five assists in the victory.

In other games Wednesday night, Texas is at Arkansas, 9-2, the preseason SWC favorite; Rice, 2-7, is at Texas Tech, 4-5; and Baylor, 9-4 is at Texas Christian, 6-5, in a battle of the Iba cousins — Gene at Baylor and Moe at TCU.

Oilers

"From where I was, it was going close to the middle," Zendejas said.

"I was trying to decide whether or not to watch," Glanville said. "I watched. I was watching the blocking. I was looking at our guards and center to see if there was any penetration."

"I couldn't even watch," Moon said. "I just grabbed Alonzo and listened for the crowd reaction and nudged him."

Moon said Zendejas' missed field goal was a disappointment at the time, but he believed the Oilers defense could hold the Seahawks. It didn't.

Seattle marched 80 yards in 10 plays, with Dave Krieg hitting Steve Largent with the 12-yard scoring pass with 26 seconds left.

"We were fortunate to be in a position to tie the game," Largent said. "The guy missed a field goal that would have put us out of it. I know he was feeling a lot of pressure before that last kick, but they deserved to win."

Seattle won the coin toss to get the first shot in overtime.

"Winning the coin toss was a big break for us but we couldn't move the ball," Krieg said.

"We started out in overtime trying to take what the defense gave us," Seattle Coach Chuck Knox said. "We were right back in it. We got the ball and couldn't do anything with it. And they got it and drove down the field with it."

"We nickel-and-dimed them," Moon said, describing the final drive. "We weren't going to do anything foolish. We didn't get conservative, but we moved the ball downfield and the rest was up to Tony."

"I knew it was just a matter of making the plays."

"They drove the ball down the field on us when they had to," Largent said.

Except for the first time they had the ball in the game and the last possession in regulation, the Seahawks struggled on offense, gaining just 29 yards rushing without the injured Curt Warner, the AFC's No. 2 runner.

"They brought a lot of people up on the line of scrimmage and made it difficult to run the ball," Krieg said. "We had some success throwing the ball but unfortunately we couldn't move it the last time we got it."

"Three points — that was the difference in the game," Knox said. "We were right there at the end, forced overtime, won the toss, but had to punt it. We couldn't control the ball."

"There's always pressure, even when you miss before," Zendejas said. "You just concentrate on what you have to do. I've been playing this game long enough to know you're going to miss some field goals."

"My hat's off to the Oilers," Largent said.

Replay

And much of Seattle's scarce production came in the dramatic drive to the tying touchdown in the final two minutes of regulation time. Except for the opening minutes of the game, it was the only time all day that the Seahawks offense made any significant impact.

There was one other statistical edge that belonged to the Oilers and in the end, it was decisive.

Replay reversals overcome: Houston 1, Seattle 0. It was a small-sized miracle, considering how badly they were outplayed. Consider the statistical imbalance.

Time of possession: Houston, 47 minutes, 44 seconds; Seattle, 20 minutes, 21 seconds.

Third down conversion: Houston 10 of 18, Seattle 2 of 12.

First downs: Houston 26, Seattle 11.

Total net yards: Houston 437, Seattle 250.

Bull riders seek out eight-time world champion Don Gay for expert advice

FORT WORTH (AP) — Don Gay, an eight-time world bull riding champion, is basically retired from his sport these days, but he's still sought out for advice by the top riders of the day.

Reigning world champion Lane Frost is one. Last week, when a number of cowboys gathered to compete in the Texas Championship Rodeo at Cowtown Coliseum in Fort Worth, Frost was checking out some information with the former title-holder from Mesquite.

Gay may have turned in his bull rope for a lariat as a team roper, but he's still regarded as the authority on riding bulls.

"Don, I believe, can teach the older riders more than the younger ones," said Frost, who is in his fifth year on the tour. "He knows so much about the subject, he tends to go over the heads of the young ones."

"I feel real fortunate to have Don as a teacher. I always say that I've had the three best teachers in the world — Don, Freckles Brown and my dad."

Brown, now dead, was a legendary bull rider who competed well into his late 40s. Frost's dad, Clyde, was among the better bronc riders on the tour in the 50s.

Frost himself won the world title last month at the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas. It was his fourth time to qualify for the NFR in his five years on the tour. He finished the year winning more than $105,000.

Despite having missed almost three months — from early August to late October — because of a broken collarbone, Frost led the standings almost the entire year in 1987.

Ted Nuce took over the lead during Frost's absence and stayed there until the finals, when Frost put on a big surge and beat him as well as Tuff Hedeman for the title on the last day. He won more than $42,000 at Las Vegas.

Frost credits Hedeman, last year's world champion, as playing a big role in his championship season, along with Cody Lambert and Jim Sharp.

"We travel together, and we all have the same ideas," Frost said. "We all are out to win the world championship, giving us all that extra incentive to win. We don't have anyone along just for the ride."

Frost said he frequently recalls a Don Gay rule. "You know, Don wouldn't let anything slow him down. Even when he wasn't riding well, he'd tell himself he was riding well, and pretty soon he'd be doing better again," Frost said.

"I try to keep that in mind all the time. You've got to be positive."

Saturday's Puzzle Solved:

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

From the Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1988

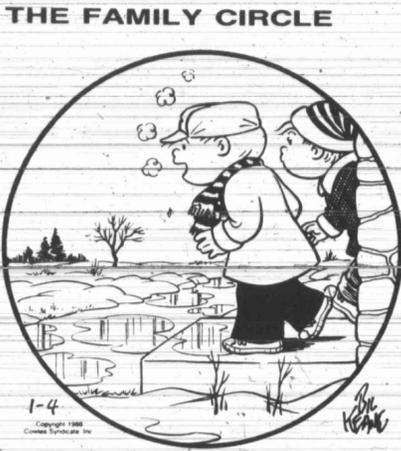

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This morning is a good time to complete projects connected with your home and family that were started, but never finished. Use your creative talents to make your work move more quickly.
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Help your kin to gain their wishes this morning, but later try to improve your own talents. Drive carefully, and be sure your brakes work well.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Clear up the loose ends connected with your work and you can make greater progress. Use your sense of humor to relieve tensions at home.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan a new budget, but before implementing it, talk over your plans with an expert. Take care of any neighborhood responsibilities.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Take any treatments that can improve your health and appearance. Don't be extravagant in the spending of money tonight.
LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Handle all your important private matters before making plans to get together with friends. A new acquaintance can be very helpful to you.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't be so casual about achieving your goals - go after them with a vengeance. Your friends can give you good advice if you ask for it.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get your duties finished up early today so you'll have plenty of time to take care of some important personal affairs which have been put off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to gain the favor of a superior who can further your career interests. Be sure to take care of any important credit matters.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure you're armed with the proper information before you begin any new activities. Rely on common sense, not on hunches.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study the promises you have made, and either carry through with them or make some revisions which will make them more practical.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If a friend asks for your support, give it willingly if the plan is feasible. Study civic matters carefully so you won't end up looking foolish.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be efficient, and use more patience with co-workers. This will make everyone happy and more cooperative. Get plenty of rest.
If Your Child Is Born Today He or she will have the potential for great success, especially in some sort of executive position. Be very encouraging to your progeny so that his or her ambitions will not be stifled. A good education is essential here, and don't neglect training in music if an interest is expressed.

Year in review

The USS Stark with smoke still rising from on-board fires, limps through the Persian Gulf after she was hit by a missile fired from an Iraqi jet last May. Iraq claimed the incident was an accident.

Lt. Col. Oliver North is sworn-in this past July before the Iran-Contra Committees prior to his testimony.

Submitted for your approval

The Iran/Contra hearings, which shook an administration and — briefly — made Oliver North a household name, ranked as the top news story of 1987 in a year-end poll of Associated Press member newspaper editors and broadcasters.

The year brought news as diverse as terrible airplane crashes, troubles in the Persian Gulf, scandals in politics and TV evangelism, and a stock market crash.

The hearings ended with Lt. Col. North a momentary hero, and the man who may have masterminded the operation, CIA Director William Casey, dead.

The sessions took most of the summer and received testimony from 500 witnesses, among them Adm. John Poindexter, the former national security adviser.

North, who was fired from the National Security Council for his role, admitted he had misled Congress and shredded documents. His former secretary, Fawn Hall, told the committee that there were times when one must "go above the written law," but then retracted the statement.

In a final report on the affair, two congressional committees concluded that Reagan had failed in his constitutional duty to faithfully execute the law.

The $500 billion market collapse of Black Monday, Oct. 19, the worst market panic of modern times, seemed to catch even Wall Street experts by surprise. Stocks prices, in fact, began falling sharply in the week preceding the crash when the government reported the nation's trade deficit had worsened.

The nation was stunned, however, when Black Monday's crash eclipsed the crash of 1929. By late December the Dow had recovered more than 200 points from its October low, but still was 500 under the year's high.

The third story on the top-10 list was the three-day summit meeting of Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in December.

The leaders of the two superpowers signed a treaty to ban medium-range nuclear missiles and proclaimed it "a historic turning point." Most liberals praised the treaty; many of the president's fellow conservatives denounced it.

Fourth was the phase in Persian Gulf violence that began with the reflagging of Kuwaiti oil tankers so they could travel under U.S. Navy escort.

In May, Iraq's air force attacked the U.S. Navy frigate Stark, killing 37 Americans. Iraq said it was an accident and the United States accepted the apology.

Fifth was the drawn-out and acrimonious effort by President Reagan to appoint a replacement for retiring Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell. His first choice, appellate judge Robert H. Bork, favored by conservatives, was rejected by the Senate, 58-42.

When it was discovered that Reagan's second choice, Douglas H. Ginsburg, another appellate judge, had smoked marijuana in the 1960s and 1970s, Ginsburg asked that his nomination be withdrawn.

Sixth was the disclosure in March that TV evangelist Jim Bakker engaged in a motel room tryst in 1980 with a church secretary, Jessica Hahn, and allegedly paid her hush money to keep the affair quiet.

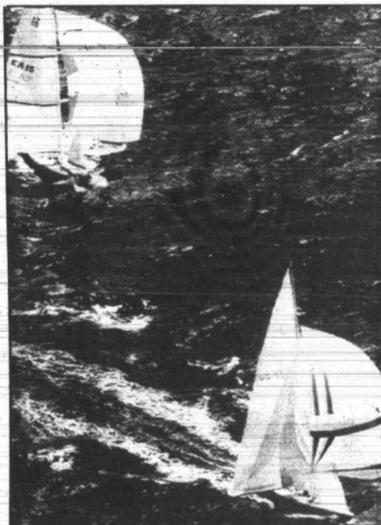

Bakker was defrocked and his PTL ministry was turned over to another TV evangelist, Jerry Falwell.

In seventh place were two political debacles. Former Senator Gary Hart dropped out of the presidential race after press disclosures of his relationship with Miami model Donna Rice. Another candidate, Sen. Joseph Biden, also withdrew from the race after he was found to have lifted material from other politicians for his campaign speeches.

Eighth was the spread of the AIDS virus. Between 1981 and the end of 1986, the federal government had received reports of some 30,000 cases of AIDS. The year also recorded 11,000 AIDS deaths. At year's end no cure had been found, but treatment improved with the government's approval of the drug AZT.

Ninth were airplane crashes in Detroit and Denver, both on takeoff. In Detroit, Northwest Airlines Flight 255 crashed Aug. 16 and tumbled in a fireball onto a highway interchange, killing 156 people. A 4-year-old girl was the only passenger to survive. In Denver Nov. 15, Continental Airlines Flight 1713 flipped over and broke into three pieces when a wing tip scraped the runway; 28 of the 82 on board were killed.

In 10th place was the rescue of 19-month-old Jessica McClure from an abandoned well in Midland. It took rescuers 58 hours to drill through solid rock to reach the child.

Stars and Stripes sails to victory over Kookaburra III in the America's Cup in February.

Traders watch monitors from the floor of the New York Stock Exchange during "Black Monday" in October.

Two women are overcome with emotions during a funeral Mass at the Saragosa Cemetery for victims of a tornado that destroyed most of the community in May. The tornado killed 30.
