

India hospital collapse kills at least 14

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A new wing on a three-story children's hospital collapsed today in the northern state of Kashmir, and a local reporter said 14 people died. Another report said 30 people were killed.

"It is a terrible sight up here. No one knows how many children have died or are dying," Kashmir Times reporter Arun Joshi said after visiting the site. "Police and army rescue teams have so far managed to account for 35 people, including 14 dead."

"I heard children moaning in the morning, but in late evening there was nothing, a kind of strange silence amid the noise of rescue work," he said. "They may be dying."

"At least 75 children and their parents or attendants are involved in the tragedy,"

Joshi said when contacted by telephone in Jammu, Kashmir's winter capital 340 miles north of New Delhi.

Rescuers were pumping oxygen and drinking water through the debris in hopes of sustaining any survivors.

But Joshi said some searchers told him they had little hope of finding anyone still alive beneath the pancaked floors.

Rescue teams have cleared the top floor where they found 14 bodies and 29 survivors.

"But the worst is yet to come, at least 50 children and their parents or attendants are trapped on the first floor," Joshi said.

A police spokesman in Jammu said the collapse was caused by foundation failure of the new wing of the government-run hospital. The new wing, made of concrete and bricks, was added to the old building in 1984. The old wing is still standing.

"The entire new wing has come down. Much of it has just gone inside the earth," said spokesman Satish Gupta.

Joshi said cracks in the structure prompted authorities to evacuate about 35 children on Sunday.

The government has ordered an investigation, and three civil engineers who were responsible for construction have been suspended.

Gupta said it will take at least 24 hours to remove the debris. "Until then it is all guess work, but we fear the toll will go up," he said.

There were conflicting reports on the number of casualties. The United News of India said at least 30 people, including 20 children, were killed. Other accounts put the death toll lower.

The reports could not be reconciled immediately. Most telephone calls did not go through despite repeated attempts to reach Kashmir from New Delhi.

Joshi said three wards with a total of 51 beds collapsed early today. He said some of the beds were shared by two children.

"I saw limbs of children being recovered from the debris. The death toll is likely to go up unless by providence the children are saved," said Joshi.

The Art Department of Howard College is currently exhibiting semester work by its students at the Anthony Hunt Library on the Howard College campus. The show consists of drawings, designs, watercolors, sculpture and advertising art designs.

The show will be on exhibit until May 5. Some works are for sale. For more information, call Becky Smiley, Howard College Division of Fine Arts Chairperson, 267-6311, ext. 243.

Tuesday's absentees' last chance

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Tuesday is the last day county residents can vote absentee for the May 7 municipal and school board elections.

Nine candidates are competing for three at-large seats on the Big Spring City Council, and the Big Spring and Coahoma school board elections feature contested races as well.

In the city council race, 95 voters have cast ballots as of this morning, Assistant City Secretary Mitzi Waltrip said.

Those seeking two-year terms on the council are Bob Smith, 4048 Vicky St.; Sidney Clark, 2707 Coronado Avenue; Ron Booth, 511 Edward Blvd.; Jerry Roach, 1108 E. Fifth St.; Melvin Daratt, 500 E. 23rd St.; Gail Earls, 4016 Parkway Road; Chuck Condray, 4016 Vicky St.; and Dottie and Jimmy Leffler, 1209 Douglas St.

Voters have until 5 p.m. Tuesday to cast absentee ballots in the city council race, Waltrip said, adding they may vote at the city secretary's office in City Hall, Fourth and Nolan Streets, until that time.

Less turnout has been received for the Big Spring school board election, which features two contested races, according to Donna Morris, chief deputy to the county clerk.

In the district four election, with Donnie Baker, 2303 Cindy Lane, and Doug Morris, 2502 Cindy Lane, competing for a three-year term, a total of 34 people have cast absentee ballots, Ms. Morris said.

In the district two race, in which incumbent Ford Farris, 90 Highland Dr. is unopposed, 27 absentee ballots have been cast, she said.

For the one-year at-large seat sought by John Webb, 4017 Vicky St. and Al Valdes, 626 Caylor St., 45 people have voted absentee, Morris noted.

The Howard College trustee race features two uncontested races.

In district three, where Harold Davis is running unopposed, 35 absentee ballots have been cast, Morris said, adding that 15 absentee votes have been cast in the district four race, where Don McKinney faces no opposition for re-election.

Voters wishing to cast absentee ballots have until 5 p.m. Tuesday to vote in the county clerk's office at the county courthouse, Morris said.

In the other contested school board race — Coahoma — absentee turnout has been light, according to administrative secretary Judy Park.

"There hasn't been a lot of interest shown so far," Park said.

Fixin' the dam

Fund request uncertain

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Fixing the dam in Comanche Trail Park has turned out to be a surprising success, city officials say, although the fate of a request to release Big Spring from $150,000 in matching funds for the repairs remains uncertain.

City public works director Tom Decell and acting City Manager Hal Boyd flew to Austin Thursday to present a proposal to Ruth Cedillo, manager of the state department of community affairs.

"She was very receptive to our presentation, and advised us that it appeared we had sufficient supporting documents to release the city from its obligation for $150,000 in matching funds," Boyd said Friday morning.

He said the staff of the community affairs office would review the proposal then notify the city of its final decision.

Decell explained that the city had contracted with the state to provide the matching funds in order to obtain an emergency flood relief funding grant following the overtop at the dam in 1987.

Because some of the flood repairs done by the city were of a nature that could not wait for the grant, such as repairing a washed-out section of Goliad Street and repairs to the sediment tank at the city water treatment plant, Decell said, the city expended more than $225,000 for those repairs.

Based on that expenditure, he said, "we now feel and are of the opinion that we have met our obligation... and have petitioned the state to amend the contract."

He said construction on the repaired Comanche Trail Park's lake is expected to be finished in August. The project will cost $600,000, he said, and involves repairing the dam, raising it to its original height and location and capping it with a thickness of roller-compacted concrete.

Decell and Mayor A.C. Mize said the concrete structure could be likened to a dental crown on a tooth. It is designed as a safeguard.

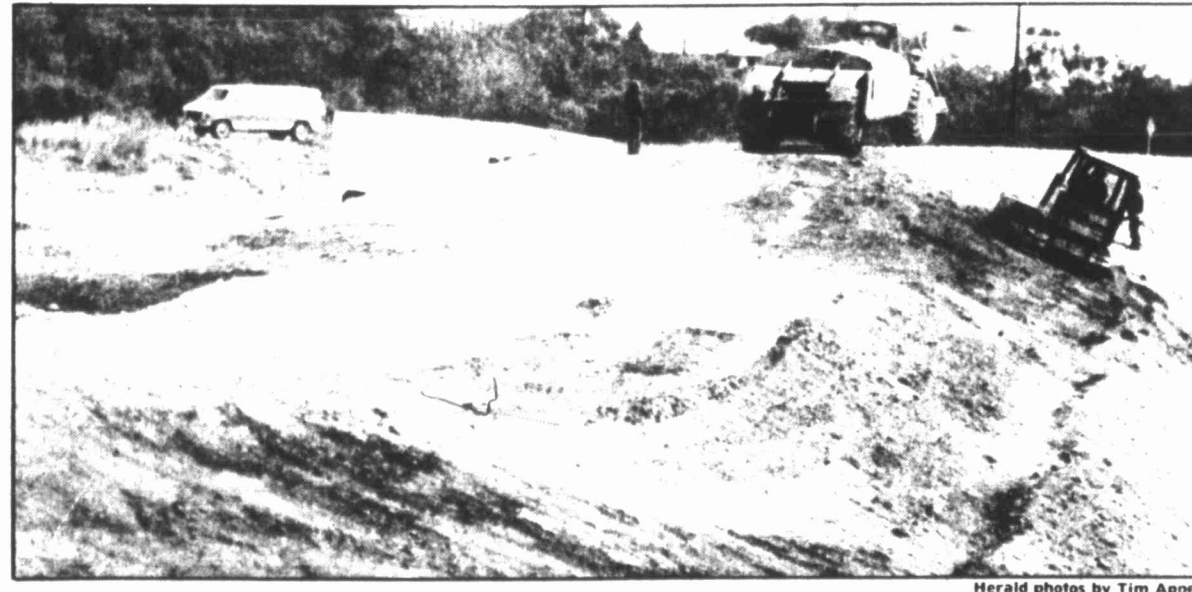

"If we were to have rains of that magnitude again, in the event of the dam overtopping, there would be no erosion or breaching," Decell said, because of the concrete.

Its thickness will vary along the length of the dam from two feet in some places to eight feet in others, he said.

Work on repairing the dam has been proceeding as planned, he said. "In fact, that's about the only project we've done lately that is proceeding the way we planned it."

The lake has not been drained and will not be, he

Sharp wins in ruling by Court

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court said today a manufacturer does not always violate federal antitrust law when agreeing with one retailer to stop doing business with another who sells at discount prices.

The justices, by a 6-2 vote, said such a "vertical restraint" imposed by a manufacturer on a retailer becomes illegal only when "it includes some agreement on price or price levels."

The decision, a significant one for antitrust law, is a victory for Sharp Electronics Corp. and a setback for a former Houston retailer of Sharp calculators.

Business Electronics Corp., owned and operated by Kelton Ehrensberger, was the exclusive retailer of Sharp calculators in Houston from 1968 to 1972.

During that period, Sharp became dissatisfied with BEC's performance. Sharp contended that it was unhappy with BEC's failure to meet sales quotas but a federal jury found that Sharp was dissatisfied with BEC's policy of selling calculators at prices lower than those suggested by Sharp.

Sharp in 1972 appointed Hartwell's Office World as a second retailer of its calculators in Houston, and in 1973 terminated BEC's dealership. Hartwell had told Sharp that it would quit distributing its products unless Sharp ended its relationship with BEC.

BEC then sued Sharp, and a federal jury awarded BEC $600,000 in damages. Under federal antitrust law, that amount was tripled to $1.8 million.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, however, threw out the jury verdict and sent the case back for a new trial.

Today's Supreme Court decision upheld the appeals court ruling.

Writing for the high court, Justice Antonin Scalia said the trial judge erred in telling the jury it could rule against Sharp if it found that BEC was terminated to reduce price competition in the Houston retail market.

"There has been no showing here that an agreement between a manufacturer and a dealer to terminate a 'price cutter,' without a further agreement on the price or price levels to be charged by the remaining dealer, almost always tends to restrict competition and reduce output," Scalia said.

He added that juries must apply a "rule of reason" approach — rather than any automatic rule — in deciding whether such agreements between a manufac-

Eden residents' message on prison: Don't worry

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

EDEN — For Big Spring residents who may have concerns about a proposed minimum security INS prison, residents of this town have a message: Don't worry.

Despite heavy initial opposition from residents concerned for their safety, the Eden Detention Center has become an accepted — and appreciated — part of this tiny community located about 40 miles southeast of San Angelo.

"I think it's the greatest thing that ever happened," Izola Barina said at the local ice cream shop. "I think it's definitely helped the community."

The low-security prison — located on U.S. Highway 87 in the eastern section of town — began operation in 1985. Since then, it has become such an accepted part of Eden "you hardly even know it's there," one resident said.

That wasn't always the attitude.

When the prison was first proposed in 1981 it prompted a lively debate among the 1,200 residents of this central Texas community.

"There was more than some opposition," said Jim Schumann, mayor of Eden at the time. "The greatest concern was for the safety factor of having a prison in our town."

Allen Amos, publisher of the weekly Eden Echo, was more direct in describing the opponents' concerns.

"I think they had the idea we were going to turn murderers and rapists loose on society," he said.

"It was a fearful thing," Schumann said. "I can certainly understand that — why folks would feel that way. I also understand why Big Spring residents would have questions, also."

"For a while, it was a pretty lively debate," said Seymour Mullins, who lives across the highway from the prison. "When you have people who don't know a lot about it, they're a little leery of it."

"They were afraid if you put prisoners in there, the prisoners would get out and hurt people," he added.

A petition circulated by prison opponents eventually prompted a town meeting in 1982. It was at that meeting that opinions began changing, a resident said.

"There was a large crowd that night; many of whom initially opposed the center," attorney John Harrod said. "But after Schumann and others made their explanations, all but a very few changed to either in favor or neutral.

"From that point on, this town has been in favor of the detention center," Harrod said.

Since its opening, there have been 10 escapes from the prison, according to Roy Burns, president of Eden Detention Center, Inc.

Town confidence in the center, however, remains high.

"I don't think the detention center poses any more a threat to citizens than a cigarette does to those citizens who smoke," Schumann said.

"Overall, I think it's been a good thing," librarian Elaine Pritchard said. "It's provided jobs for this area, so in that respect, it's been good."

"It's been pretty successful," Millard Anderson, owner of A & B Men's Wear said. "It brought in some employees from all over the county as well as some from here."

"I live next door to it," Mullins said, "and it hasn't done anything except beautify that end of town. I don't have any problem with it at all."

"It's helped on jobs and it's pretty," store clerk Bonnie Caffey said. "It's helped the economy as much as anything."

"My idea is that we've always

Saudis welcome collapse of cutback talks

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Saudi Arabia's oil minister today said he was pleased by the collapse of OPEC talks on a proposed token cut in oil production.

"It's a very happy ending" to a week of intense bargaining, the minister, Hisham Nazer, told reporters as he left the final session this morning.

His comment confirmed more explicitly than at any time during the talks that Saudi Arabia has adopted a hard-line stance against any production cuts that could give oil prices a boost. A chief beneficiary of higher prices would be Saudi enemy Iran, which relies on oil to finance its war with Iraq.

Last Tuesday, the Saudi government broke diplomatic relations with Iran, accusing Tehran of terrorism and subversion.

Oil markets were expected to react swiftly to the breakdown of negotiations over ways of coordinating OPEC output cuts with a group of six rival producers.

Saudi Arabia led a minority of four cartel members opposing a proposed production cut of 300,000 barrels a day, or about 2 percent of the group's total output.

The cuts were to be made in conjunction with the six non-OPEC producers, who offered to reduce their output by 5 percent, or about 200,000 barrels a day — if the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would do likewise.

Failure by OPEC to decide on a response to the offer was likely to draw criticism from the independent producers, who met with an OPEC committee in Vienna last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Rilwanu Lukman, the president of OPEC, said the cartel leaders would resume their debate on possible cuts in production at their regular summer session, scheduled to begin in Vienna on June 8.

had illegal aliens in town," resident Jimolee Hale said at Hand Maids Gifts. "We might as well have them in one spot instead of running all over town."

The prison also is vital to the town's economic well-being, residents say.

"It's certainly been a blessing," Schumann said. "The economy is bad enough now. Who knows what it'd be like if we didn't have the detention center?"

"This community had all its economic eggs in one basket — agriculture," he continued. "If we hadn't diversified into other type industries, we'd have died on the vine."

Aside from boosting patronage for local merchants, increased business from the prison has allowed Eden to have a full-time dentist for the first time in several years, Amos said.

The publisher also noted other economic benefits derived from the detention center.

"Before, you could tell the town was on the decline," he said. "There was nothing to keep the younger people here at all. The benefits from the center have been tremendous. It has turned this community around."

The city receives $1 a day per prisoner from the detention center — as has been suggested for Big Spring. This averages about $60,000 directly from the prison annually, Amos said.

"That's pretty good when you consider that if the city collected 100 percent of its ad valorem taxes, we'd only get $75,000," he added.

The greatest benefit to the city, however, is increased employment, Amos noted.

After proposed expansion at the prison is complete, it will employ between 60 and 75 employees, Burns said. This will have a snowball effect in creating more jobs for prison support services, the publisher added.

"It's not a boom, but it's steady," Amos said. "It's something we can handle."

Three residents hurt in two-vehicle wreck

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Three persons sustained injuries Saturday evening after the vehicle they were passengers in was involved in a head-on collision on the Benton Street viaduct.

The driver of one of the vehicles, a 1972 Chevrolet, left the scene and was unidentified as of this morning. Records, however, indicate the owner as Keith Alan Nichols, San Antonio, the accident report noted.

According to the report, the Chevrolet collided head-on with a 1975 Ford driven by Donald Rex Farmer, HC 76, Box 248 at about 8:50 p.m. Saturday. Farmer's vehicle was southbound on Benton Street and the Chevrolet was northbound on Benton Street, the report noted. When Farmer topped the viaduct, he saw the other vehicle in his lane of traffic and was unable to avoid a collision, the report added.

Three passengers in Farmer's vehicle — Diana and Guy Farmer and Patsy Horn, all of HC 76, Box 248 — suffered injuries in the collision and were transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center by Rural/Metro ambulance, the report stated.

A hospital spokeswoman said today that the three were treated and released.

None of the persons involved in the accident were wearing seat belts, and Donald Farmer was cited for no insurance, the report stated.

Sheriff's log

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Howard County Sheriff's Department officers are investigating a reported breaking and entering in the Hillside Trailer Park early Sunday.

Ann Maddox reported that between 7:45 p.m. Saturday and 3 a.m. Sunday someone entered her mobile home in the park and took several pieces of costume jewelry and jewelry valued at $100.

Bud Grantham reported that sometime within the past two weeks unknown persons removed two ceiling fans valued at $200 and an evaporative cooler valued at $250 from his residence, HC 76 Box 320.

Deputies also investigated reports of juveniles causing criminal mischief to a stop sign in Sand Springs and of criminal mischief at a residence, 300 Furrah St., in Coahoma.

A fire was reported to the department at 12:15 a.m. Sunday behind the Brass Nail Club on U.S. 87 South. A Silver Heels fire depart-

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements and both of the state's senators were on hand today to greet a Department of Energy team weighing Texas' bid for a $4.4 billion atom smasher.

Clements, Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Republican Sen. Phil Gramm were to appear at a late morning news conference regarding their support for Texas' bid for the "super collider."

The Department of Energy Site Task Force has narrowed competition for the project to seven sites in Illinois, North Carolina, Arizona, Tennessee, Michigan, Colorado and Texas.

The DOE team was scheduled to get a planned tour of Texas' site today.

The project is a planned 53-mile oval tunnel in which protons will collide. The project is expected to cost more than $4 billion to complete.

As many as 25 scientists from Energy offices in Chicago and Washington, D.C., will visit Dallas, Ellis and Tarrant counties through Thursday, said Phil Keith, a department spokesman in Washington.

Energy and state officials planned tours of the Dallas Independent School District's science and engineering magnet school and the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center on Wednesday. A tour of Texas Christian University was planned for Thursday.

said. Mize said there is a fish population remaining in the lake and fish are being caught there.

A proposal has been forwarded to the Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife to restock the lake with game fish in the spring of 1989, Decell said, but no reply has been received.

"At some point we will look at cleaning the lake," he said, "to reduce the population of fish that — from an angler's point of view — might be less desirable."

The city will construct habitats within the lake for gamefish in the future; approximately 10 people are working on the project, Decell said, which he described as equipment-intensive rather than labor-intensive work. The project is expected to return the structure to the dimensions for which it was previously permitted.

The Texas Water Commission's Dam Safety Unit has made one inspection of the dam, he said, and the work so far has been approved. A lull in the construction process will follow closure of the dam while test results on the roller-compacted concrete's breaking point are gathered, but Decell said that delay was part of the design.

"We are rebuilding the breach area now," he said. "We have closure, and we're very pleased with the way the work is progressing."

He said the dam will use the same service spillway as before the flood damage.

Deaths

Elmer Eckert
Elmer Eckert, 70, of Big Spring, died Saturday, April 30, 1988 in a local hospital.

Services will be 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Nalley Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel with Rev. Don V. Hafemann, pastor from Midland, officiating. Graveside services will be 3 p.m. Tuesday in Miles Cemetery in Miles. Burial will be under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

He was born June 25, 1917, and married Dorothy Stork April 18, 1951 in San Angelo. He was a member of Grace Lutheran Church in Snyder. He served in the Navy for four years during World War II, and was involved in 11 battles while stationed on the U.S.S. Enterprise.

He farmed all of his life in the San Angelo area and Fluvana for 22 years. He had been disabled for the last several years.

He is survived by his wife, Dorothy, Big Spring; four sons: Chester, Steve, Carl, and Fred, all of Big Spring; one daughter, Dornell Eckert, Big Spring; his mother, Pearl Eckert, Big Spring; three sisters: Mattie Mull, Sweetwater; Annie Mae Eckert, and Mary Ellen, both of Big Spring; two brothers: Lester, Snyder; and Miles, Odessa; and one grandson.

"In the vast majority of cases, it will be extremely difficult for the manufacturer to convince a jury that its motivation was to ensure adequate services, since price cutting and some measure of service cutting go hand in hand," Scalia said.

"Accordingly, a manufacturer that agrees to give one dealer an exclusive territory and terminates another dealer pursuant to that agreement... exposes itself to the Scalia was joined by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Justices John Paul Stevens and Byron R. White dissented in a 23-page opinion authored by Stevens, and Justice Anthony M. Kennedy did not participate in the case.

Italian ex-POWs celebrate Mass in church they decorated

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press Writer

UMBARGER — Catholic parishioners of this tiny Panhandle community admired their church's painted murals for decades, and 43 years after dedicating the building, welcomed the Italian prisoners of war who decorated its walls.

As part of a visit to the POW camp where they were held captive during World War II, a group of former Italian soldiers Sunday celebrated Mass in St. Mary's Catholic Church.

"When they were here among us before, there were guns to guard them and they were regarded as enemies," said Rev. Blaise Burneston, a New York priest traveling with the group of about 40 ex-POWs and their families. "We now welcome them as friends."

Only two of the artists who were brought daily from the POW camp at Hereford, 10 miles southwest, to work at the church are still living, and only one of those made the journey, retired Brig. Gen. Franco Di Bello.

"My soul is overwhelmed with emotion in coming here today," said Di Bello.

A resident of Pordenone, Italy, Di Bello described to parishioners — some of whom he has corresponded with for years after forging friendships in the 1940s — how the walls of their church came to be decorated with pastel-toned paintings of religious symbols and geometric designs.

A 23-year-old lieutenant at the time of his capture by Allied forces in Tunisia in 1943, Di Bello was one of about 6,000 soldiers held at the Hereford camp from 1944 to 1946.

Although he has returned to the site twice since the end of the war, Di Bello said seeing the camp again still brings back painful memories.

"In life's experiences you always have sad memories but also bright memories," said Di Bello, who still paints in his spare time. "Even though I have sad things to remember, I also have marvelous things to remember." The former camp inmates, most of whom had never viewed the handiwork of their comrades, took dozens of photographs of the interior, wiping away tears while hymns were sung.

Prisoners at the camp, some of whom were trained as artists, agreed to paint the church in 1945 on condition that they not be paid and that U.S. officials understood that they were not cooperating with the government.

The principal artist, Dino Gambetti, is in poor health and could not make the journey to see how his work has withstood 40 years, Di Bello said.

Using a book as a copy, Gambetti and the others painted the ascension of Christ on canvas behind the altar, along with two flanking murals. One soldier executed a woodcarving on the front of the communion table.

The Italians' visit to the Panhandle included the return to the site of the 700-acre POW camp, dismantled in 1946 except for a chapel built by the prisoners in honor of soldiers who died at the camp.

DALLAS — Bobbie Lou Meserole, 54, sings praise to the Lord during the evening service at the Eagle's Nest Cathedral in Dallas Sunday night. Meserole, a former stripper at Jack Ruby's night club, was ordained a minister during the service. Nathan LeLevier, youth pastor of the church, is at the left.

Ex-stripper 'puts on the cloth'

DALLAS (AP) — The last time Bobbie Lou Meserole stood under the spotlights before an applauding crowd she was taking off the cloth instead of putting it on.

"At one time, she was known as Shari Angel and she was the most popular exotic dancer in Dallas," the Rev. W.V. Grant Jr. said into the loudspeaker system of the Eagle's Nest Cathedral. "And from now on, she's going to be called the Reverend Bobbie Lou Meserole."

The former stripper for Jack Ruby's Carousel nightclub was ordained during a Sunday night service before the red-carpeted altar of the sprawling charismatic church.

"I'm finally delivered from everything. I'm really with the Lord," said Ms. Meserole, 54. "I'm not with other people anymore. I'm just a different person."

As a girl, Ms. Meserole said, she dreamed of becoming a nun named sister Louise. She attended a private Catholic school until her father made her quit when she was 13. She worked at a walgreen's drug store, and then moved on to a hospital job before falling on hard times and moving into show business at 22.

She was a stripper at Ruby's club in downtown Dallas and was married to a locally popular comedian who once got into a fight with Lee Harvey Oswald for heckling during an act and calling her husband a Communist.

She was still working as a stripper at the Carousel when, on Sunday morning, Nov. 24, 1963, she turned on her television the weekend of President Kennedy's assassination and saw her boss pull a gun and fatally shoot Oswald in the basement of the Dallas police station. By the time she was 35, she turned to prostitution, to alcohol and later to pills, she said. Four years ago, while under treatment at a suburban Arlington hospital, she turned to God.

"I'm writing a book to help other people like me that were sick and beat and were left for dead, so they don't have to live through that," Ms. Meserole said. "During a year in the sanitarium, I saw a lot of people and they can be healed and my story will help."

She said she plans to preach, beginning with a downtown rally later this month. But most of her work as an ordained minister of Grant's International Deliverance Church will involve counseling others.

"I'll go wherever the Lord leads me, but the county jail is what I've got in my heart right now," she said. "I want to go and talk to the prostitutes and the alcoholics and the people with all kind of problems."

She now spends six days a week cleaning homes for a living, and said she doesn't expect that to change much after the Sunday night service. It's a far cry from the late 1950s and early 60s at the Carousel, when she would dance along a runway, stripping to a G-string and pasties as the top act in town.

"But it's still exciting in a different way," she said. "And it's a whole different life."

Grant, whose church recently moved into its huge hillside complex on Dallas west side, said Ms. Meserole's message will be heard by those he and other preachers can't reach.

"She can walk up to them and say, 'I know what you're going through,'" he said.

13 of Bandidos' gang arrested

DALLAS (AP) — Thirteen members of the Bandidos motorcycle gang were arrested and eight others were being sought on federal explosives and conspiracy charges stemming from two 1983 bombings, an official said.

Among those arrested Saturday in Corpus Christi, Longview and Lubbock were top leaders of the national gang, said Richard Garner, agent in charge of the Dallas office of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The suspects are accused of staging the Dallas area bombings in retaliation for an earlier 1983 clash with the rival Banche gang, Garner said.

The bikers were named in a 23-count sealed indictment returned March 31 by a federal grand jury in Dallas, he said.

Two other Bandidos members named in the indictment were already in custody, Garner said.

Elderly man kills would-be burglar

HOUSTON (AP) — A bedridden 76-year-old man who could barely walk fatally shot a man allegedly attempting to enter his home, according to police.

The shooting occurred Sunday morning, after Phillip Neely heard a knock at the front door of his home, and some voices. Neely said he did not answer the door because he was so weak, and did not feel like getting out of bed.

Neely said he eventually was able to get out of bed, and work his way slowly toward the door, when he heard someone trying to pry the lock and knob off the door, said Houston Police Dept. Homicide Sgt. David Calhoun.

Neely called police and grabbed a pistol he kept in the home, but before police arrived, he fired a shot through the door.

Driver dies in shooting incident

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A man was shot to death in an argument that erupted when he started honking at a pickup truck stopped in an intersection on a San Antonio street, police say.

Jeffrey Deviney, 27, of San Antonio, was shot to death early Sunday, homicide detective Chuck O'Dell said.

O'Dell said Deviney was shot in the head as he sat in his car. He was unable to escape because another car pulled up behind him, preventing him from driving away from the argument.

Witnesses told police that a man got out of the pickup truck and told Deviney, "You shouldn't be honking at my father." Two shots than rang out, police quoted witnesses as saying.

Police said a 30-year-old occupant of Deviney's car was ordered by the gunman to push Deviney's body aside and drive to a nearby parking lot. O'Dell would not identify the passenger because he is a witness.

No arrests had been made by early today.

Cash flow squeezes hospital

ODESSA (AP) — Medical Center Hospital officials are considering a rate increase of as much as 15 percent because of problems in collecting delinquent accounts.

Hospital administrators told Ector County commissioners last week that the hospital's cash flow is tenuous because of more than $450,000 in delinquent accounts.

Officials say the economic downturn, smaller insurance payments and limited Medicaid benefits are partially to blame for the hospital's financial problems.

After the commissioners court tabled a request for a 3.2 percent increase in ancillary rates, such as lab fees and X-rays, the hospital's finance committee discussed hiking rates by as much as 15 percent to generate revenue.

A recommendation on the hike is expected to go to commissioners later this month.

The hospital hired the Odessa law firm of Calaine, Linebarger & Graham last December to collect the bad debts, but only $9,000 has been recovered, said Russ Kyler, Medical Center Hospital's assistant administrator for finance.

"We're interested in anything that can help our collections," Kyler told the Odessa American.

The law firm and three other collection agencies achieve only limited success because patients just can't afford to pay, Kyler said.

"Most of the people who come to the hospital and don't pay their bills just don't have many assets out there," Kyler said.

However, the hospital's total uncollectable debts are shrinking.

From October 1987 to March 1988 — the first six months of the fiscal year — Medical Center Hospital's uncollectable debts amounted to 14.8 percent of all billing, Kyler added.

Klans draws little notice

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — About 10 members of the Ku Klux Klan attracted little attention in staging their annual May Day watch in front of the Alamo, police say.

The Klan members, including one dressed the traditional white sheet and conical hat, stood in front of the shrine in downtown San Antonio for several hours Sunday, Police Lt. Rudy Vernon said.

Each year, since about a decade ago when a vandal claiming to be communist attempted to steal the flag from Alamo, the Klan has posted members near the structure in downtown San Antonio on May Day.

Dukakis has a high hill to climb

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts is now the likely presidential nominee of the Democratic party in 1988. He is likely to be the nominee — but for reasons that may not serve him so well in November. ... He clearly appeals to a wider range of Democrats than Jesse Jackson, but somehow lacks the capacity to generate enthusiasm among potential supporters. He has not sprinted to his front-runner status, but worn his opponents down. To the governor's way of thinking, this may constitute a hidden advantage: After eight years of charisma, he suggests, perhaps competence will appeal to voters. ... Perhaps it will. But with a Moscow summit at the end of next month, another arms-control agreement apparently in the works, with the economy booming, unemployment declining, a stabilized dollar, shrunken inflation, peace talks in Managua, and the Russians backing out of their Afghan war, it's an uphill journey for any Democratic candidate. The Providence (R.I.) Journal

Congress should give Contra aid

The Nicaraguan Contras, denied arms to fight Soviet expansion in Central America by the U.S. Congress, now find themselves being starved into submission. U.S. aid to the freedom fighters expired Feb. 29. Congress finally approved a package of non-lethal assistance after a truce was reached March 23 between the Contras and the leftist Sandinista government. ... But the kicker was that no assistance could be delivered until agreement was reached on resettling the rebels in the cease-fire zone. Day by day, the refusal of Congress to stand behind our government's commitment to democracy is taking its toll on those who bravely resisted the spread of totalitarianism. The Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City

Smoking ban not too much to ask

Airline passengers on domestic flights lasting two hours or less are breathing easier. That's because a new FAA rule prohibits smoking on those flights. The hazards of cigarette smoking, and breathing second-hand smoke, have been well documented. We believe that those who choose to smoke should have the right to do so — as long as that action does not infringe on the rights of nonsmokers to breathe the clean air. With smokers now in the sizable minority, it's not too much to ask that they cease their habit for two hours or less for the comfort of nonsmoking travel companions. Farmington (N.M.) Daily Times

Says Reagan should veto trade bill

The comprehensive trade bill approved by the House of Representatives is an improvement over the overly protective measure that existed just two months ago. But that's not saying much. ... The trade bill, as now written, includes several provisions that could allow the United States to take retaliatory action with quotas and tariffs against other nations. Funny. Usually when these goods enter the United States, Americans buy them because they are built well or because they are less costly than U.S.-made goods. ... If the Senate doesn't water down this measure, Reagan should veto it. The Kansas City (Mo.) Times

Gulf action was the right thing

Is it right for us to be involved in the Persian Gulf? Certainly; the United States made its interests in open shipping there very clear a long time ago. Did we take the right "measured response"? We believe so, since the attack was limited in scale, and aimed at military targets. Will this all end Iran's temptation to be a festering sore in the region? Given the recent history of that nation, and its apparent need to treat the United States as "the Great Satan," we guess it will not. The World, Coos Bay, Ore.

U.S. owes camp survivors money

Only one step remains — President Reagan's signature — before the nation can offer its official apology to the 120,000 Japanese-Americans who were unjustly imprisoned in relocation camps during World War II. The compensation legislation would give each of the 60,000 camp survivors $20,000. While varying payments on the basis of individual losses incurred might be more equitable, it is impractical almost 50 years after the fact. Money, of course, cannot compensate these Americans and their families for the loss of their homes, jobs and businesses. Nor can it make up for the shame and sorrow they suffered at the hands of a government that did not see the error in violating the Constitution at the same time it was fighting a war to defend it. ... The nation cannot repay the 77,000 American citizens of Japanese ancestry and the 43,000 legal and illegal aliens for depriving them of their rights, but conscience demands that it make this long-overdue gesture of heartfelt regret. The Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Backs farm conservation project

The recent drought has made blowing topsoil more visible in South Dakota, but it's nothing new. Easily erodible soil is best left undisturbed. Depleting soil destroys a resource that we depend upon for life itself. That's why the success of the federal Conservation Reserve, a program that pays farmers to return easily eroded croplands to undisturbed tree and grassland sanctuaries for wildlife, is encouraging. This is part of the federal farm program that makes a great deal of sense. ... Considering the values promoted by the Conservation Reserve and alternatives, it is a remarkably worthwhile federal initiative. The Conservation Reserve Program does cost some money. So did the Dust Bowl. The Rapid City (S.D.) Journal

Learning lesson from Helmsleys

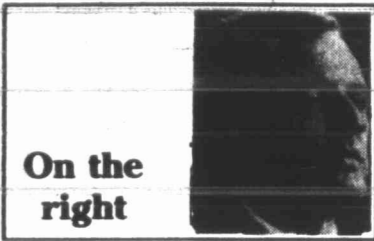

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY

Let us assume that Leona and Harry Helmsley are guilty as charged, never mind that they have pleaded not guilty and are not guilty unless convicted.

So — the jury has found them guilty and the time has come for the judge to pass sentence. Mr. and Mrs. Helmsley cheated the government out of about $4 million, the jury has ruled. There are certainly no extenuating circumstances. They didn't reroute the money to save the boat people in Indochina. They used the money to buy one more swimming pool, and a dance hall, in their private residence. If they had paid the taxes due, they'd have lost much less than 1 percent of their estimated net worth of between $1 billion and $2 billion. The jury, polled by the press, showed no inclination to mercy. "If ever anybody deserved it," one juror was quoted, "this couple did." And the public's reaction was, well, stonyhearted. You see, Leona Helmsley in particular has had much publicity, and she was a real imperious lady, I mean, out there in the kitchens, in the lobbies, in the offices, giving orders to her huge staffs, hiring and firing without any apparent compunction.

That is a part of the public mood. Another part is the utter contempt for the stupidity of the Helmsleys. How could ANYONE earning that kind of money make a mistake so stupid? So that when the judge bangs down the gavel and gives them two years in jail, there will be some sense of public satisfaction. The bigger they come, the harder they fall. The trouble with this is that to send the Helmsleys to jail is just plain stupid. There are 581,000 inmates in federal and state prisons designed to hold less than half that number. Every week, 750 more people are being sent to jail than are leaving jail. The California prison population was 24,569 at the end of 1980. It is now 68,139.

And the big cry is to crack down on crack users. If we succeeded in locating every one of them and putting them all in jail, we would need to multiply our jail facilities by 800 percent. Yes, there are an estimated 4 million people who use crack. Thomas Reppetto, the president of the Citizens Crime Commission of New York City, reports in The New York Times that only 16 percent of all drug-selling felony arrests result in imprisonment (and only 41 percent of drug-selling convictions). The scale, then, of the crime problem points up with devastating force the undesirability of sending anyone to jail who is less than a violent threat to his neighbor. The state of Minnesota has a shrewd way of handling the problem. It takes its prison resources more or less as a given. If more people are convicted than Minnesota has room for, then more people are released, to make room for the newcomers. And the sentences of judges are adjusted in accordance with the state's penological reserves.

That's one way to do it, but not the smartest way to do it if you think of prison as accomplishing two purposes: the first, the punishment of the offender; the second, the protection of society. If there isn't enough room in Minnesota for the people who are likely to murder or maim, more room should be made. It's a big state. The Helmsley case is a locus classicus — there will never again be a couple easier to punish. Instead of two years in prison (cost to the taxpayers, not counting court costs of getting them there, about $25,000 per year, or about the cost, per year, of a small Helmsley hotel room), the judge could sentence them to work for two years as janitors. Not in a Helmsley hotel. That's a nice poetic thought, but they are still the legal owners of their hotels and whatever the government fines them, it's going to be less than $2 billion. No, it wouldn't work for them to serve as janitors in a hotel they own, whose manager they can fire at the flick of a finger. But they could work as janitors in another hotel.

Perhaps that job for half the sentence; for the other half they might be asked to perform duties in a municipal or religious house for the homeless. The judge's imagination here should be given all the scope he wishes.

But the objective would be plain; to punish the offenders; to satisfy the public that restitution has been effected and punishment meted out; and to save prison space for rapists, murderers and muggers. As for the Helmsleys' tax lawyer, it's good that the Helmsleys own the Empire State Building. The top floor of that building would be an appropriate place from which that lawyer could be instructed by the judge — or the Helmsleys — to jump.

Thanks, Magnum, for your assistance

By SARAH LUMAN Staff Writer

Sometimes the milestones in life have nothing to do with reality. Sometimes you're surprised to find that little things mean more to you — or at least are more easily expressed — than major traumas in your daily existence. Take last night, for instance. The last three weeks have been piling stress atop strain for me, but I couldn't bring myself to give voice to my worries or articulate my anxieties — an odd thing for me. I kept my head up and plodded forward and managed not to dissolve in tears through a siege of hospitalized parents followed by the departure of a colleague topped by a trip to the doctor with my boys — all this between the bookends of having wisdom teeth removed. So why on earth was I crying when I turned off the television as the final episode of "Magnum, p.i." ended Sunday? A few years ago, the final episodes of a couple of long-running television series had a strange effect on whole groups of people I knew. I remember thinking that it seemed strange to have a party for the final episode of "M*A*S*H" when I was in college; I remember watching the final episode of "Little House on the Prairie" and discovering many of the people around me in tears when it was over. I had spent some time away from television and somehow neither show's demise had much effect on me.

Write from the heart

Then came the fall, and a much-publicized "final season." I fell for the plot line bringing him back from the edge of the grave and even made allowances for the sly mysticism that crept into his character — after all, someone who's been through that sort of experience in the real world would be excused for getting a little flaky once in a while. Besides, it added another likable dimension to an already-likable character. Otherwise, how could CBS justify spending so much promotion on "the final season?" I figured the final show would probably, if it ever were broadcast, be just another adventure. Television rarely writes finis to a show with complete finality, after all. Besides, I doubted they'd try to top the final episode they'd written a year ago. Turns out they didn't have to. Thomas Sullivan Magnum, who had spent eight years in Hawaii and provided thousands of fans with an excuse not to grow up while proving time and again that you don't have to be rich and or even lucky to be lovable, scraped death at whisker's-width again. But, in the end, he didn't die. Heck, he didn't have to. He just turned out to be a single parent in need of a secure income in the late '80s; suddenly he grew up and got on with his life in a very responsible manner. And took away all my excuses not to.

Man and wife arrested

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A husband and wife wanted for questioning in the slayings of two Illinois men were arrested hours before they were featured on the television program "America's Most Wanted," authorities said.

Stephen Paul Tripp, 32, and wife, Melody Tripp, 26, were arrested without incident Sunday after authorities stopped them on State 102, about 40 miles north of Tucumcari, the FBI said.

They are wanted for questioning in the Oct. 25, 1986, slayings of George Brunton and Richard Stroud of West Frankfort, Ill., said William Brenon, special agent-in-charge of the FBI in Albuquerque.

The Tripps were being held at the Santa Fe County Detention Center on charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. Arraignment was to be held today or Tuesday, the FBI said.

Brenon said the couple had been living and working on a ranch in northern New Mexico.

Aliens flock to legalize

Undocumented aliens hoping to legalize their status have flocked to immigration offices as the application deadline nears, and some officials believe the cost of filing kept them away until the last minute.

"You can't help but ask these people, 'What have you been doing the last 11 months?'" said Jesse Peterson, an official of the Lima, Pa., legalization office, referring to the duration of the amnesty program.

Peterson attributed the surge in last-minute applications to procrastination and fear about the program. He said Sunday that his office processed over 300 applications last week.

Undocumented aliens face a midnight Wednesday deadline to file applications for legal status under the 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act. They must prove continuous residency in the United States since Jan. 1, 1982. Filing is the first step toward citizenship.

CBN drops Swaggart

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Rev. Jimmy Swaggart's refusal to stop appearing on two television shows produced by his ministry led the Christian Broadcasting Network to drop the programs, a CBN spokesman said.

"We had given Swaggart by mail a period of time to decide whether to comply with our request that he not appear in the shows," Earl Weirich, spokesman for the Virginia Beach, Va.-based cable TV network, said Sunday.

"If he wasn't (going to appear) we would continue to carry the shows. But we were notified that he thought that was not in the best interest of Swaggart's evangelical association," said Weirich.

NEW YORK — Victims from a sightseeing helicopter that crashed into the East River are taken from a police harbor launch to waiting ambulances Sunday. The helicopter had just completed a 20-minute tour of Manhattan, when it plunged into the river.

Helicopter Crash kills one, injures four

NEW YORK (AP) — A sightseeing helicopter carrying five people crashed into the East River and sank Sunday, killing a passenger who was trapped underwater for more than an hour and a half, authorities said.

The other four, including the 22-year-old pilot, were pulled out of the murky water by police Harbor Unit officers who found two men clinging to pontoons and two grasping for other bits of wreckage. They were not seriously injured.

The accident occurred almost three years to the day after a helicopter operated by a subsidiary of the same company, Island Helicopter Corp., plunged into the East River with eight people aboard. One man, a Japanese businessman, died.

In Sunday morning's accident, the helicopter had just completed a 15-to-20-minute tour of Manhattan when it plunged into the river about 15 blocks north of its destination, the 34th Street heliport, police said.

The aircraft, a Bell 206-B, was hovering about 1,000 feet above the river awaiting permission to land when the pilot "experienced performance difficulties," said George Dempster, chairman of Island Helicopters. The pilot activated emergency flotation pontoons and "initiated emergency landing procedures," Dempster said. On impact, however, the flotation devices apparently separated from the rest of the craft.

Rescue efforts culminated in scuba divers finding a passenger strapped to a rear seat of the helicopter on the bottom of the river, 35 feet below the surface.

The water temperature was in the mid-40s, and the man had been under water more than 100 minutes, divers said.

The passenger, identified as Takashi Oyama by the Japanese Consulate, was taken to Bellevue Hospital where he died at 9:05 p.m., said Peter Scheckman, a hospital administrator.

Three of the others also were taken to Bellevue, where they were listed in stable condition. They included the pilot, Robert Marshall, of Sea Cliff, N.Y., and two passengers, Yuichiro Suzuki, 30, of Columbus, Ohio, and Furman Alexander, 34, a resident of Australia.

A passenger identified as Gotthelf Max Christian, 55, of Munich, W. Germany, was taken to Cabrini Hospital, where he was in good condition, according to a police spokeswoman, Sgt. Diane Kubler.

Police detain 90 people

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Thousands of people heeded Solidarity's call for a national day of protest and scores of demonstrators were arrested in clashes with police in at least 19 cities.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said 90 people were detained during the protests Sunday on May Day. A spokesman for the outlawed Solidarity labor federation, Zbigniew Romaszewski, said authorities detained at least 200 people.

There were scattered reports of injuries but figures were not available.

Today, an opposition spokesman reported a new work stoppage in southwest Poland.

Jozef Pinior, a Solidarity leader in Wroclaw, said about 700 workers rallied and interrupted work today at an electronic machinery plant in Dolmel. He said workers had not declared a strike, but were seeking pay raises of $50 a month.

IRA guerrillas escape

ROERMOND, Netherlands (AP) — Irish Republican Army guerrillas who killed three British soldiers and injured three in a car bombing and an ambush may have escaped from the Netherlands, police said today.

"It is easy to escape," police spokesman Louis Steens told reporters in Roermond, six miles from the West-German border. He said it takes "a short time to get away" through relatively open borders with Germany and Belgium.

One British airman was killed and two injured in this southeastern city when their car was sprayed with automatic weapons fire early Sunday morning. An hour later, a car bomb in Nieuwbergen, 30 miles north of Roermond, exploded, killing two British airmen and severely injuring a third.

Police said the two attacks on the six servicemen, who were visiting from their bases in West Germany, were closely coordinated.

Airplane's engines fail

TOKYO (AP) — A United Airlines Boeing 747 with 258 people aboard landed safely today at New Tokyo International Airport at Narita after three of its four engines failed, an airline official said.

None of the 239 passengers and 19 crew members aboard UAL Flight 97 from Los Angeles to Tokyo were injured, said the official, Katsuro Isa.

Isa said the Boeing 747-100 landed at 3:17 p.m. (2:17 a.m. EDT) with emergency vehicles standing by at the airport, 40 miles northeast of Tokyo.

He said the aircraft lost the use of one engine over the Pacific Ocean approximately one hour and 15 minutes before landing, a second engine about 30 minutes later and a third engine just prior to landing.

Congressman's aide plunges to death

NEW YORK (AP) — A Maryland congressman's top aide left behind a poem before jumping to his death from a hotel window the day a newspaper said he tried to get a male staffer to perform a strip tease at a staff party.

Tom Pappas, 46, chief assistant to U.S. Rep. Roy P. Dyson, jumped from the 24th floor of the Helmsley Palace Hotel on Sunday afternoon after discussing the effect of The Washington Post story with friends.

One friend said Pappas was worried Sunday morning that the article had irreparably damaged his career but didn't seem depressed.

Dyson, Pappas and another aide were in New York to meet with a lawyer and attend the Broadway musical "Phantom of the Opera," police said.

Pappas left a poem at hotel stationery, said a police spokesman, Lt. Stephen Davis, who would not reveal the contents.

Dyson, and the aide, Todd Skipper, had not checked out Sunday night, the hotel said. Calls to their rooms went unanswered.

A source said Pappas was eating breakfast at the hotel with the two when he excused himself, told them he would not attend a scheduled meeting, and left for his room, where he wrote the poem and then jumped, The (Baltimore) Sun reported today.

He landed on an eighth-floor roof, police said.

In Sunday's front-page story in the Post, Dyson staffers said Pappas had taken control of the office from the 39-year-old Democrat, and that Pappas pressured male staffers to socialize with Pappas.

One staffer quit and another was fired after they refused to attend a private party Dyson held at a Maryland hotel suite last November, the newspaper reported.

TOM PAPPAS

Staffers told the Post that Pappas, who was divorced, told one male staffer he would have to perform a strip tease in 1987 at an office retreat in Virginia. The staffer refused, the Post said.

The article came as the Federal Election Commission investigates allegations Dyson's campaign disclosure reports concealed $6,650 in payments to Pappas.

Pappas, who was paid $72,200 as Dyson's administrative assistant last year, also owns a company, Pappenberg Associates, that received $119,642 in fees and expenses since 1980, a revised Dyson campaign report shows.

Pappas helped engineer Dyson's first election to the Maryland House of Delegates in 1974 and his successful 1980 bid to unseat Rep. Robert A. Bauman, after the conservative Republican was arrested for soliciting sex from a 16-year-old male prostitute.

The charge later was dropped but Bauman admitted he was homosexual and an alcoholic. Political consultant Michael Ford said he talked by phone with Pappas about the Post article for 25 minutes Sunday morning. Pappas told Ford he was worried that the article had irreparably damaged his career and had hurt Dyson's reelection chances, the Post reported today.

"I told him, 'You've done nothing illegal, you've done nothing immoral and therefore I think you can deal with this,'" Ford said, adding he didn't believe Pappas was depressed.

Pappas, however, "felt in his own mind that it was a fait accompli — that nothing could be done about it," Ford said.

Those interviewed by the Post said they did not believe that the pressure to socialize with Pappas and others on the staff went beyond the dinners and events that Pappas organized.

One press secretary, Scott Ourth, told the Post he was hired with the requirement that he not date for a year. When Ourth began dating, "He called me the 'wayward son,'" Ourth recalled. "He told me, 'You've lost the focus.'" Ourth quit six months after taking the job.

Sunday's article quoted a memo from Pappas dated Nov. 14 as saying, "...it is important for everyone on this staff to remember that Tom Pappas is the chief of staff, responsible for everyone's paycheck. When he expresses a wish, however slight, it should be taken seriously."

A classified ad in the Hannibal (Mo.) Courier-Post placed by Pappenberg Associates offered salaries up to $50,000. "Wanted A Young Man in A Hurry," it said, asking, "Are you single and willing to travel?" The ad asked for a writing sample and recent photograph.

Former aides were quoted as saying Pappas excluded female staffers from his social activities.

Accident victim pushes to recover

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — At 22, Judy Farris was smart, pretty, popular and leading a charmed life.

A top-level college student already beginning a lucrative career in accounting, she had her own car, apartment and enough varied talent to feel at home as a pianist at weddings or behind the driving end of a pool cue.

"I was foot-loose and fancy-free," she said, "with my whole life in front of me."

But on Halloween night in 1981, it took only a few seconds and one drunken driver to turn talented promise to tragedy.

Ms. Farris doesn't remember the auto accident or the Jaws of Life that cut her from the car. Nor does she remember the three months of intensive care and neurosurgery that followed.

Ms. Farris was in a coma for several months.

"They've told me, since then, what happened that night," Ms. Farris said.

She was a passenger in a car, on her way to a Halloween party. Her roommate, the driver, had stopped to make a left-hand turn when a large van smashed into the car from the rear, spinning Ms. Farris' side of the car into the direct path of an on-coming vehicle.

Ms. Farris' mother remembers clearly, however. "I'd just gone to bed when the phone rang," Betty Farris said. "The nurse said that Judy was at the hospital and she'd been hurt. I asked if it was serious, and she said she didn't know. Of course, when I saw her — she was still as death."

Mrs. Farris asked the Department of Public Safety officer how such a thing had happened to her daughter. "He told me the man in the van was very, very drunk."

Neither of the two occupants in the van were hurt at all. Both were in their late 30s and had started drinking before noon in Port Arthur. The last tavern they had visited was on Green Avenue in Orange, shortly before the accident at 8:30 p.m.

ORANGE — Judy Farris, 29, eyes the cue ball like she did before an automobile accident seven years ago that almost ended her life. The car she was a passenger in was rear-ended by a drunk driver — spinning her side of the car into the direct path of an on-coming car.

The van's driver registered a .18 blood-alcohol level.

Ms. Farris' collar bones were broken, her pelvis was crushed and she suffered an injury to her brain.

A jury of six decided the van's driver, who had no liability insurance, was guilty of a misdemeanor, fined him $500 and gave him a probated sentence.

"It's the little things that make me angry," said Ms. Farris. "I took piano lessons for eight years. I could play. Now I can't."

More than seven years later, Ms. Farris says she is not bitter. She smiles, showing the bump on her skull where "they drilled a whole in my head" to release brain fluid and awaken her from the coma.

She remembers her parents being with her in the Houston hospital, where they had uprooted their lives to stay close by during the better part of 1982.

She remembers the doctors and nurses, for whom she has special affection, who tried to teach her to walk and talk again.

She remembers her wheelchair, and later, her cane, before taking her first unaided step in December 1983, and the gradual return of her motor skills — enough to beat her mother at computer games.

Sometimes, though, in a dream Ms. Farris remembers bright headlights shining in a rear-view mirror and a crash of screaming metal: "I guess I couldn't really remember that," she said. "I don't know."

Today, Ms. Farris walks as haltingly as a bridesmaid, but she walks unaided. Her speech is slow, but clear. She cannot whistle, sit Indian-style or water ski, but she has signed up for a few classes at Lamar University-Orange and hopes to re-enter the job market soon.

Her doctor has said that she's gone about as far as she can go in recovery. Ms. Farris says simply, "That's a crock," but stresses that she can't take full credit for the strides she has made. "My parents have been wonderful," she said. "The whole family — and it took the whole family, being there with me, their support."

Sometimes when she is around people who are thinking about ordering another drink before setting behind the wheel of a car, "they look at me and say 'uh-uh.'"

Ms. Farris is now an active supporter of the Mothers Against Drunk Driving organization. In an article for "Cardinalview," the 1987 edition of Lamar University-Orange's journal of the arts, Ms. Farris wrote: "I was worth the price he ultimately had to pay. I know it wasn't worth the price I had to pay."

At 29, Ms. Farris is still smart and still pretty. And, with the departure of fair-weathered companions, she is highly popular with her family and her close friends.

Among the awards: "Army Nurse of the Year" was awarded to Lt. Col. Diane Corcoran, who is stationed in San Antonio. She is assistant chief, Nursing Science Division at the Academy of Health Science.

Ann McLaughlin, secretary of labor, spoke Monday evening, and the Honorable William J. Bennett, secretary of education, who spoke Tuesday evening, emphasized the need of academic excellence and the return to the basics of reading, writing, and arithmetic.

Husband's jealousy upsets wife's reunion plans

DEAR ABBY: My fifth high school reunion is coming up soon and I want very much to go, but here's the problem: I met "Bob" years ago while I was on vacation and we were married a year later.

We now live in a small town 600 miles from my hometown. Bob grew up here, where the boys and girls never mixed much, and he is outrageously jealous if I as much as smile at another man.

We have had incidents already where he had no reason to be jealous, but he has been. I know that if I were to hug a male classmate, or even touch him, Bob would make a scene. (He could not understand our graduation pictures — with boys and girls holding hands in a semicircle. "Touching" to him is off-limits.)

We have a good marriage, but I must be on my guard constantly so Bob won't get the wrong idea. He won't let me go to the reunion without him, but the first "Do you remember?" is sure to send him into a jealous rage that could even end in divorce! He is No. 1 in my life, but how can I make him understand that these schoolmates

Dear Abby

are only friends? TORN IN TWO
DEAR TORN: You can't "make" Bob understand anything he doesn't want to understand. If touching an old schoolmate and the first "Do you remember?" will set him into a jealous rage that could end in divorce, I think you'd be wise to skip the reunion. With Bob's hangups, you'd have a miserable time if you went.

You say you have a good marriage. How good is a marriage in which you dare not be your friendly self for fear of making your husband jealous?

Bob needs counseling. If you value your marriage, you will persuade him to get it, unless you don't mind walking on eggshells the rest of your married life.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest your response to "Good Citizen" in the Great Falls Tribune. The question concerned the power of law enforcement officers to arrest drunk drivers.

In your answer, you gave an example of a Los Angeles officer investigating a driver who is slumped over the steering wheel (presumably drunk and passed out) while the car is stationary. Apparently, in L.A., this person could be arrested only for being drunk in public, but not for drunken driving.

In Montana and some other states, such as Missouri, Indiana, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Utah, Ohio and Arizona, the drunk person slumped over the steering wheel of the car would be considered in actual physical control of the vehicle and would, therefore, be arrested for drunk driving. The law courts in the above states came to this conclusion because the person had not relinquished authority or control of the vehicle to another person.

ALBERT E. COKE, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

TRAFFIC HIGHWAY SAFETY, HELENA, MONT.
DEAR MR. COKE: I applaud the law courts for their wisdom.

Lifestyle policy

We will be pleased to announce the news of your engagement, wedding, silver or golden anniversary in the Lifestyle section of the Big Spring Herald. We try to use the story on the date you request, but sometimes space does not permit this.

The information must be submitted to us on a form available at the Herald no later than Wednesday noon before the Sunday it is to be published. The form must include a name and telephone number of a person whom we can reach during the day for more information.

We will use a picture of the couple in the announcement. Or in the case of engagement announcements where a picture of the couple is not available, we will use one of the bride-elect. The picture must be a professional quality studio photograph. We prefer a 5 x 7 glossy black and white print. We ask for this kind of photograph so that it will reproduce well in the newspaper. Following the picture's publication, it may be picked up at the Lifestyle department.

The information for the story may be brought to the Lifestyle department of the Herald, which is located at 710 Scurry. Or it may be mailed to Lifestyle Department, Big Spring Herald, P.O. Jinxed Laker comeback shocks Spurs

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Mychal Thompson came off the bench to score 29 points and Magic Johnson had 26 Sunday night as the Los Angeles Lakers overcame a sluggish start to beat San Antonio 130-112 and take a 2-0 lead over the Spurs in their first-round NBA playoff series.

The best-of-5 series moves to San Antonio for the third game Tuesday night and a fourth game, if necessary, Thursday night.

The Lakers, who trailed by 14 points in the first quarter, outscored the Spurs 29-9 the final six minutes of the third quarter and the first minute of the fourth period to turn a 74-71 deficit into a 100-83 advantage. San Antonio got no closer than nine points after that.

Thompson had 14 points in the fourth quarter as the Lakers pulled away. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 20 points and James Worthy had 18 for Los Angeles.

Alvin Robertson led the Spurs with 28 points. Frank Brickowski had 19 points and Greg Anderson added 18 for the Spurs.

The Spurs took an 8-0 lead in the first 1:48 of play, extended their advantage to 19-6 after 5½ minutes and were on top 30-16 after 10 minutes.

At that point, the Lakers seemed to wake up. They scored nine of the final 11 points of the first period to make it 32-25, and 13 of the first 18 points of the second quarter to take a 38-37 lead with 8½ minutes left in the half.

The rest of the half was close, with neither team leading by more than four points. The Lakers led 60-58 at halftime.

The Lakers made only 10 of their 29 field goal attempts in the first quarter, and four of them came in the final two minutes of the period.

The win was the 14th straight in first-round playoff action for the Lakers, who are going for their fifth consecutive first-round sweep. The victory also gave Los Angeles a 7-0 record against the Spurs, including 5-0 in the regular season.

The Lakers are trying to become the first NBA team to successfully defend its championship since the Boston Celtics did so 19 years ago.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Los Angeles Laker Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (33) takes aim while going over Frank Brickowski (43) of the San Antonio Spurs early in the teams' NBA Western Conference first-round playoff game Sunday night. The Lakers won 130-112 and lead the series 2-0.

Floridian has berth in Seoul

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Win, place or show was the place to be in the U.S. Olympic women's marathon trials, since a top-three finish guaranteed a $25,000 paycheck and a place on the U.S. team in Seoul.

The women's marathon trials was also the place for Margaret Groos to show she could win — and not just be competitive — in a big race.

Groos, 28, of Tallahassee, Fla. who was running in her first marathon since finishing fifth in the 1984 Olympic trials, became the first American woman to break the 2-hour, 30-minute mark in three years and just the fourth overall by winning in 2:29:50 on Sunday.

Nancy Ditz, 33, of Woodside, Calif., regarded as the pre-race favorite in a wide-open field, was second in 2:30:14, and Cathy Schiro O'Brien, 20, of Boston, was third in 2:30:18. Again finishing out of the money and out of luck was Lisa Weidenbach, 26, of Issaquah, Wash., who ran 2:31:06 to match her 1984 fourth-place finish.

Groos' sunny romp through Pittsburgh's spectator-clogged ethnic neighborhoods and rejuvenated downtown was a surprise not only because she hasn't been running marathons, but because she hasn't been healthy enough to run them.

Known mostly as a middle-distance runner — she once held the U.S. 5,000-meter indoor record — Groos was hampered by a hyperthyroid condition that caused her weight to rise to 145 pounds in 1985. She ran Sunday at 120.

"That (1985) was the low point of my career," Groos said. "I couldn't even run an eight-minute mile and every time I took a step I thought my shins were going to break."

She finally solved her thyroid problem through medication and

Jordan adds point record to Bulls' playoffs victory

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michael Jordan put another mark in the NBA record book Sunday.

Jordan became the first player in league history to score more than 50 points in two straight playoff games as he scored 55 to lead the Bulls to a 106-101 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"Let's just say I got things going," said Jordan, who scored 50 in the series opener.

That gave Chicago a 2-0 lead in the best-of-5 series, with the third game in Cleveland Tuesday night.

"We're 2-0 this year instead of 0-2 because we're playing as a team," Jordan said. "I know I'm scoring, but I'm contributing to the offense."

Not only did Jordan score more than half his team's points, but he was the central figure in the critical final minute of the game, in which the Bulls had trailed by as much as 13 points.

His jumper from the corner put Chicago ahead to stay 102-101 with exactly a minute left. Then he hit two free throws with 14 seconds left to make it 104-101 before Horace Grant hit two more foul shots with three seconds left to clinch it.

"When a guy's hot, you don't play him as a decoy," Bulls Coach Doug Collins said.

In other afternoon games Sunday, Boston beat New York 128-102 to take a 2-0 lead in its series and Seattle evened its series with Denver with a 111-91 victory over the Nuggets that represented the Nuggets' worst home loss this season.

In late games Sunday, Atlanta grabbed a 2-0 series lead with a 104-97 victory over Milwaukee, and the Los Angeles Lakers defeated San Antonio 130-112 for another 2-0 lead.

In Saturday games, Houston tied its series with Dallas by beating the Mavericks 119-108; Utah also tied its series with a 114-105 victory over Portland while Detroit took a 2-0 lead over Washington by beating the Bullets 102-101 on Isiah Thomas' off-balance shot with nine seconds left.

Celtics 128, Knicks 102

Larry Bird had 36 points and Kevin McHale 24 points and 12 rebounds as Boston went on a 12-1 spurt at the start of the second quarter to break open the game. The Celtics, who have won 18 straight games against the Knicks

Long night in McAllen sets record

McALLEN (AP) — McAllen Memorial and McAllen High School set a Texas high school baseball record for the longest game, playing 22 innings in six hours and 45 minutes before Memorial escaped with a 5-4 win.

The game, which began Friday night and continued into Saturday morning, appears to have been the longest high school game played in the nation in the past 18 years.

On April 23, 1970, Miami, Fla., and Hialeah, Fla., played 24 innings with Miami getting a 1-0 decision, according to the 1987 edition of the National High School Sports Record Book.

The second-longest game on the books is a 1926 contest between two California schools, Pomona and Fullerton. Pomona won the 23-inning game 6-5.

Ironically, McAllen Memorial won the game with three runs in the bottom of the 22nd inning after allowing McAllen to go ahead, 4-2, with two runs in the top of the inning.

Memorial junior right fielder Joe Perez responded with a solo homer to lead off the bottom of the inning, pulling the Mustangs to within one run.

Memorial coach Gary Lauer said it was Perez's third at-bat of the season.

"When we came in trailing 4-2, I just told them that we haven't quit all season, so let's give it a shot," Lauer said. "Joe's homer really sparked us."

Three batters later with runners on first and second, the Mustangs scored two runs on a sacrifice bunt and a throwing error to get the win.

Perez's "spark" was the second time the longball had saved the Mustangs.

Memorial third baseman Craig Blackwell sent the game into extra innings with a two-out solo shot in the seventh, knotting the contest at 1-1 after regulation play.

For the game, the intra-city rivals combined for 27 hits, 33 strikeouts and 32 walks while using eight pitchers.

Alonso Herrera, who entered the game in the 20th inning, got the win for the Mustangs to raise his season mark to 5-1.

With the win, the Mustangs increased their season record to 17-8 and remained tied with Laredo Nixon for the district lead at 10-3.

Visitors' day: Rangers, Twins win on road

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

Frank Viola's love for Fenway Park obviously does not extend to the Boston Red Sox.

Viola, who professes to have fallen madly in love with the cozy ballpark the first time he stepped into it, became the first visiting left-hander to throw a shutout against the Red Sox in nearly four years on Sunday.

"That's the best I've seen him," Red Sox manager John McNamara said. "He's tough. He threw strikes with three pitches: his fastball, his curve and his off-speed pitch."

Gary Gaetti hit his fifth homer of the season, and Viola allowed just five hits in the 2-0 victory, handing the Red Sox only their second loss in 10 games.

"I enjoy it here, I really do," Viola said. "You have the crowd on top of you, kids yelling at you. This is what baseball is all about."

In the rest of the American League, Chicago beat Baltimore 7-3, Oakland beat Cleveland 8-4, Toronto defeated California 6-4, Texas downed New York 5-1, Detroit beat Seattle 3-2 and Milwaukee defeated Kansas City 10-6.

Twins 2, Red Sox 0

Viola, 3-1, struck out six, walked only one and allowed just one runner beyond first base in outdueling Jeff Sellers.

In his first complete game in six starts, Viola pitched the eighth shutout of his career, but only his third since 1984. His only shutout last year was a 2-0 victory over the

The last time a left-hander shut out Boston while looking over his right shoulder at Fenway's short left-field fence was on July 1, 1984, when Mark Langston of Seattle beat the Red Sox 1-0.

"When he's on, he's as tough as they come — and he was at his best today," said Boston's Mike Greenwell, a left-handed hitter.

White Sox 7, Orioles 3

The Orioles, who broke a 21-game winless

This was only the second time all season the Rangers had scored more than four runs in a game, and the other time they lost 7-6 to Detroit on April 23.

streak Friday night in Chicago, now have embarked on another losing streak, this one just two games long at present.

Ivan Calderon hit a three-run homer in the first, and Kenny Williams drove in two runs with a single in the third.

Orioles starter Mike Morgan didn't even make it through the first inning.

The Orioles now return to Baltimore for an eight-game homestand.

"It'll be nice to go home, but it doesn't matter where you are, you are going to lose games if you don't play better," Orioles manager Frank Robinson said.

A victory would have given the Orioles their first series victory since they took two of three from Oakland last Sept. 4-6. They are now 1-17 under Robinson who inherited an 0-6 record from Cal Ripken Sr.

Athletics 8, Indians 4

Oakland scored six runs in the ninth inning, two on a bases-loaded single by Stan Javier, and rallied to beat Cleveland. The victory was Oakland's seventh in a row, while Cleveland has lost three straight.

Mark McGwire also doubled in two runs in the inning.

Tom Candiotti worked the first seven innings for Cleveland, allowing six hits and two runs, both unearned, and lowering his ERA to 1.82.

The eighth and ninth innings have been the most productive for the A's this season. They have scored 29 runs in the eighth and 20 in the ninth in their 24 games this season.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 4

The Blue Jays held a team meeting before the game, and Lloyd Moseby came out afterward with a two-run homer that led Toronto over California. That snapped a six-game Toronto losing streak.

The Blue Jays scored twice in the second and three times in the third off Angels starter Mike Witt, 1-3.

California's Johnny Ray extended his hitting streak to 15 games, longest going in the majors, with a two-out RBI single in the Angels ninth off Tom Henke, who pitched the final 1-3 for his sixth save.

Rangers 5, Yankees 1

Mike Stanley hit his first homer of the season, backing the pitching of Paul Kilgus and Dale Mahoric as the Rangers averted a three-game sweep by the Yankees.

Kilgus, 3-2, allowed six hits and a first-inning run in his six-inning outing, and Mahoric pitched three scoreless innings in his second appearance since coming off the disabled list Wednesday.

Tigers 3, Mariners 2

Matt Nokes drove in three runs with two homers and Jeff Robinson allowed six hits and two runs over eight innings for Detroit. Robinson struck out a career-high 11 before he needed relief help from Willie Hernandez, who got his first save since last Sept. 9 at Baltimore.

Nokes got the first hit off Mike Moore, a solo homer in the fifth, then erased a 2-1 deficit in the seventh with a two-run homer, his seventh. It was the second time this season and fifth time in his career that Nokes has hit two homers in a game.

Brewers 10, Royals 6

Rob Deer hit a grand slam in Milwaukee's five-run sixth inning, and the Brewers survived a three-run Kansas City ninth to beat the Royals.

Chris Bosio, 4-2, had given up just two Kansas City runs on five hits until giving up four more in the ninth with the help of a throwing error by third baseman Steve Kiefer, two singles and two walks.

Dan Plesac got the final two outs.

The Force isn't with Tatu-less Sidekicks

DALLAS (AP) — Cleveland defender Benny Dargle doesn't score goals. He's paid to prevent them.

Before Sunday, he'd contributed only five goals this season and 38 during the regular season over his 5-year career with the Force.

Yet it was Dargle who provided the Force's offensive spark Sunday afternoon in Reunior Arena, scoring two goals in a span of 1:53 at the close of the first period to send Cleveland to a 2-2 playoff victory over the Dallas Sidekicks.

Cleveland wrapped up the best-of-5 MISL Eastern Division playoff series, three games-to-one, and will face the winner of the Minnesota-Baltimore semifinal series for the division title. Minnesota leads that series, two games to one.

The defeat marked an early playoff exit for the Sidekicks, defending Major Indoor Soccer League champions.

Dargle said Dallas' tight-marking tactics allowed him the space to move up from the back line on both goals.

"The space was there and I went for it," Dargle said. "Those were my biggest goals ever. I know I've never scored two in one game. I needed a little bit of luck. You don't really expect it. I was very surprised."

In Cleveland coach Timo Liekoski's mind, Dargle may have been his team's most unlikely offensive hero.

"You wouldn't expect him to take over, not with the forwards we have," Liekoski said. "That turned things in our favor. Then it was a matter of not letting them back into it."

Dargle scored the only two goals of the first half, the second with six seconds left in the opening quarter.

Dallas made a brief third-period run on defender Bruno Ferretti's right-footed blast that continued into the net off the right hand of Cleveland goalkeeper P.J. Johns.

But Cleveland answered 2:46 later on Craig Allen's power play goal to bump the Force lead to 3-1.

Andy Schmetzer gave the Force a 4-1 lead 3:30 into the final period and after Mark Karpun's power play goal pulled Dallas to within 4-2 with 3:13 to play. Kai Haaskivi closed out the scoring with :24 removed from Nashville to Tallahassee last winter to step up her training under Coach Al Schmidt. Intense 20-mile workouts prepared her mentally, and physically, for the trials and tribulations of the Olympic trials.

"When I crossed the finish line, I felt like dropping to my knees. It felt so wonderful to win," Groos said. "It wasn't just wanting to run 2:30, it was wanting to win."

Groos, Ditz and O'Brien spent the first 16 miles watching Sylvia Mosqueda, 22, a Cal State-Los Angeles senior, run at a world record — and suicidal — pace.

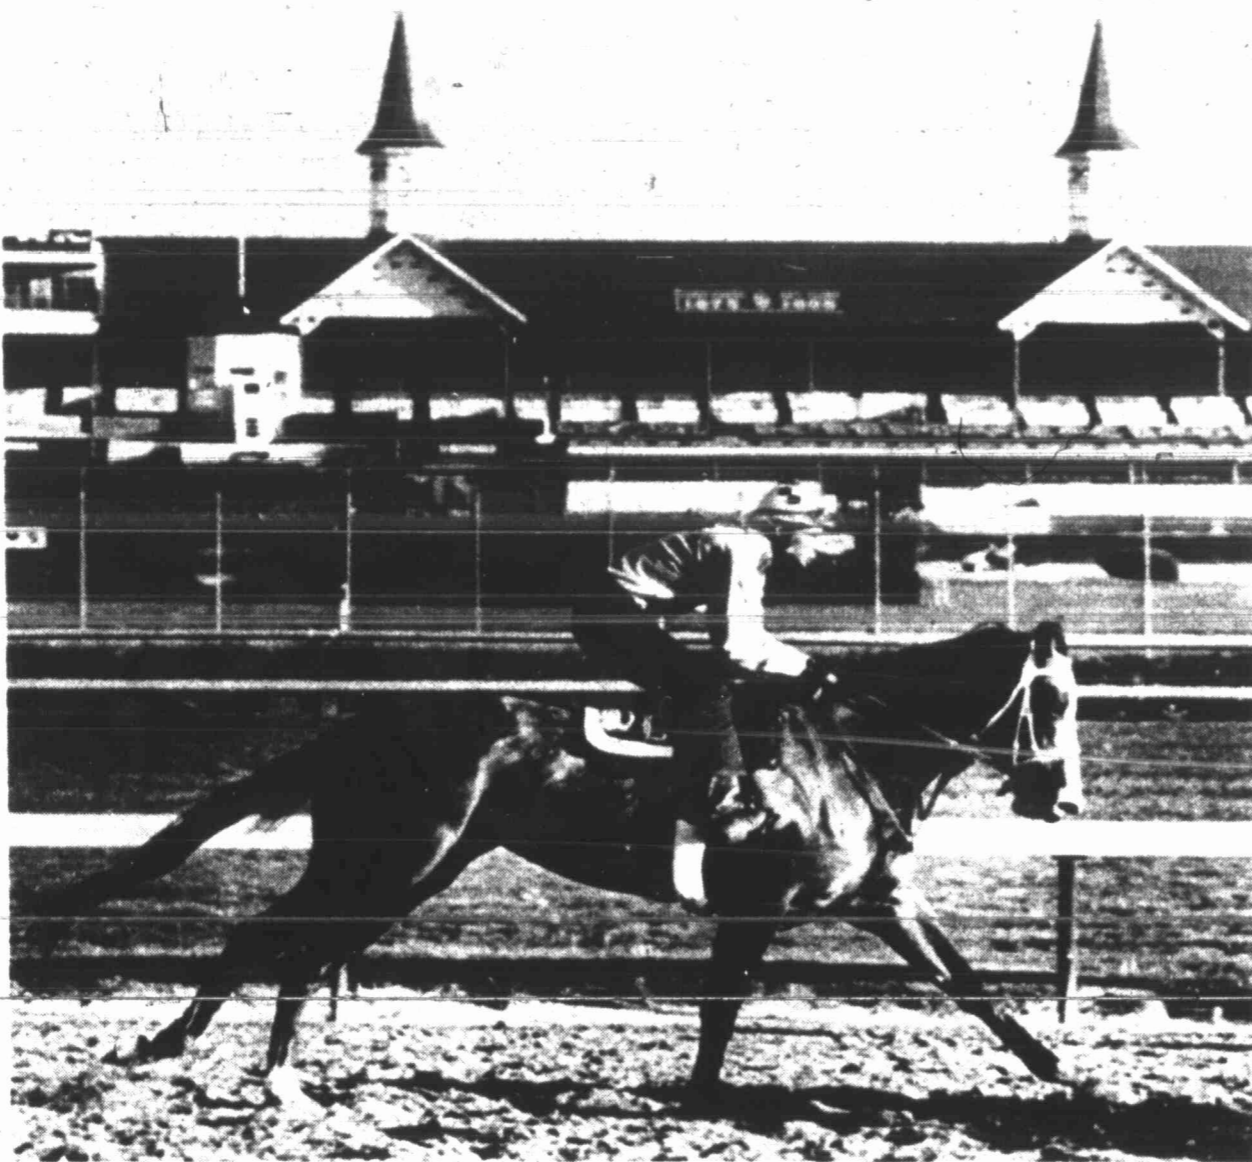

"We were talking early in the race, and we kind of joked among ourselves because she did it," Weidenbach said. "It's not that we don't take her seriously... if she learns to control her style, she could be a great athlete."

Mosqueda, who didn't finish, had burned out by 16 miles and Ditz, O'Brien and Groos then dueling for the lead. Groos began surging at the 21-mile mark and gradually widened her lead for the rest of the race, which by then was downhill.

"I thought maybe I could catch her but I couldn't," Ditz said. "Sure, I wanted to win — you always want to win — but my real goal was to run my best time and make the (Olympic) team and I did. Dreams can come true."

And, unfortunately for Weidenbach, so can nightmares. She smiled after her repeat fourth-place finish, but said, "When I'm alone tonight, taking a shower, I'll probably cry a lot."

"It will really hit me in September, when I'm on my couch watching the race, that I could be there."

Houston loses marathon to Montreal

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

The no-hit decision was no problem for John Tudor.

Tudor, who spent the first three weeks of the season on the disabled list, pitched six no-hit innings against Los Angeles Sunday but left in the top of the seventh for pinch-hitter Tom Pagnozzi.

The game was decided early when the Cardinals scored six runs in the first inning off Tim Learsy and went on to a 9-0 victory.

"I asked him if he wanted to stay in, but he said his shoulder was stiffening," Manager Whitey Herzog said of his ace left-hander. "I told him he had a no-hitter and he said it didn't matter."

Reliever Scott Terry allowed a single to the first batter he faced, Kirk Gibson in the seventh. Terry did not allow another hit the rest of the way and got his first save.

The Cardinals had placed a 55-pitch limit on Tudor in his first start of the season against San Diego on April 26. He pitched six scoreless innings against the Padres in a game the Cards lost 1-0. In 12 innings, he has allowed no runs and four hits.

On Sunday, the Cards had a 75-pitch limit on Tudor who had already thrown 68.

"I didn't want to press it or push it. If it was a 2-0 game I might have gone seven innings, but in any case I wasn't going on," Tudor said. "If I had four or five starts under my belt it would have been different."

Elsewhere in the National League it was New York 11, Cincinnati 0; Montreal 7, Houston 3 in 14 innings; Atlanta 9, Philadelphia 5; Pittsburgh 4, San Diego 2; and San Francisco 7, Chicago 6.

Tudor felt his chances of becoming the first Cardinal to pitch a no-hitter since Bob Forsch beat Montreal on Sept. 26, 1983 were slim at best, anyway.

"I was lucky, there was still a long way to go," Tudor said. "There was very little chance of getting a no-hitter against a team like the Dodgers with my style."

With pitchers Ken Dayley, Joe Magrane and Danny Cox already sidelined, the Cardinals have dropped eight games behind first-place Pittsburgh in the National League East.

"We need John Tudor to help get us back in the race," Terry said. "There's no reason to rush him just because he has a no-hitter."

Bob Horner, Tom Brunansky and Luis Allicea each had run-scoring singles in the first while Tony Pena's forceout brought home another run. Vince Coleman added a two-run single off reliever Brain Holton.

Mets 11, Reds 0

Dwight Gooden pitched a four-hitter for his sixth straight victory and New York hit three consecutive home runs in the fifth inning as the Mets completed a three-game sweep of Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium.

Gooden, the National League's first six-game winner, has pitched four consecutive complete games en route to the first 6-0 start of his five-year career. It was Gooden's 18th career shutout and his 46th complete game in 130 starts.

Expos 7, Astros 3

Tom Foley's run-scoring triple in the top of the 14th inning snapped a 3-3 tie and rookie Johnny Paredes added a three-run homer as Montreal beat Houston.

Foley's triple scored Mitch Webster, who reached on a throwing error by pitcher Jeff Heathcock. After an intentional walk to Tim Raines, Paredes hit his first major league homer.

Brewers 9, Phillies 5

Ozzie Virgil hit a three-run homer and Tom Glavine pitched seven strong innings as visiting Atlanta beat Philadelphia and snapped its four-game losing streak.

Glavine, 1-3, allowed four hits and three runs in seven innings and Bruce Sutter finished. Shane Rawley, 0-5, suffered his 10th consecutive loss. His last victory was Aug. 31, 1987 versus Los Angeles.

 maining with Dallas goalkeeper Joe Papaleo on the bench in favor of a sixth attacker.

Papaleo gave Dargle credit for his opportunistic goals.

"He's a smart player," Papaleo said. "Those were goals he created. He made the runs and saw the openings."

After shocking the MISL with last year's championship run, the Sidekicks' season was short-circuited when Tatu, the MISL's defending scoring champion, went down with a knee injury in the regular-season opener. Coach Gordon Jago felt the Sidekicks would have experienced offensive problems even with a healthy Tatu.

"When you look up at the scoreboard and see that 2, that's the story of our season," Jago said. "We're the lowest-scoring team in the league and all year we've been trying to find some scoring."

"Last year we got by with one player. We were as hungry as we were last season. But we weren't efficient. We'd lose 2-1, 3-2, 4-3. People said we were a defensive team this year. That's not so. We just didn't have any offense."

"I don't think the Lakers would be favored if they lost Magic Johnson," Papaleo said.

Tatu, in uniform for the game even though there was no chance he would play, detected a different attitude among his teammates.

"Going into the playoffs, we were a little overconfident," he said.

"We started talking about how we were going to win it all again. This is not the Sidekicks. I hope we learned a lesson. We've got to be more simple."

Liekoski said his team's preparations for the Eastern Division final would be about the same whether the opponent is Minnesota or Baltimore.

"We've played all these teams so often that it won't really matter," Liekoski said.

 at the Boston Garden, took a 2-0 lead in the series and can wrap it up when the teams move to Madison Square Garden Wednesday night.

It was a far different game than the first one, in which New York led 74-71 late in the third period before losing by 20 points.

"I don't know if we're 20 points better than them," McHale said. "But I always feel we will win big at home in every game so the scores don't surprise me."

Sonics 111, Nuggets 91

Dale Ellis scored 22 of his 24 points in the first half as the Seattle handed Denver its worst home loss of the season. Denver shot only 32 percent from the field and midway through the second period had as many field goals overall — eight — as Ellis.

Seattle, which will host the third and fourth games of the series Tuesday and Thursday, had a 66-41 lead at halftime and led 76-45 midway through the third quarter. It was their first victory in seven games at Denver dating back to Nov. 30, 1985.

Hawks 104, Bucks 97

Dominique Wilkins scored 43 points, powering Atlanta over Milwaukee for a 2-0 lead.

The Hawks went ahead for good, 78-76, on a basket by Antoine Carr at the buzzer ending the third period. Wilkins then scored 12 points in the final period to keep the Hawks in command down the stretch.

The Bucks never got closer than three points in the final 7:03 after Wilkins gave the Hawks an 88-84 lead.

Pistons 102, Bullets 101

Thomas had 30 points in addition to his game-winner despite missing nearly 11 minutes in the first half with a cut over his eye. His winning shot game seven seconds after John Williams made one of two free throws to give the Bullets a 101-100 lead.

Jeff Malone, who led the Bullets with 31, missed an off-balance jump shot with one second left.

Jazz 114, Trail Blazers 105

Karl Malone had 37 points and 16 rebounds and Bobby Hansen had 23 points to lead Utah.

Malone was coming off a 16-point effort and his worse shooting game of the season Thursday night in a 108-96 loss. He scored 23 in the first half as the Jazz took a 58-53 lead.

Rockets 119, Mavericks 108

Houston got more than two-thirds of its points from Eric "Sleepy" Floyd and Akeem Oluajunwon, who had quarreled openly about their roles during a first-game loss. Floyd, hitting 16 of 22 from the field, had 42 points and Oluajunwon had 41 points and 26 rebounds.

Winning Woodlands match suits Strange

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — Curtis Strange saw his bank account get bigger and his new boat longer with his victory in the $700,000 Independent Insurance Agent Open.

"That boat I was going to buy later this summer just grew by about 10 feet today," Strange said Sunday after making a 25-foot birdie putt on the third playoff hole to beat Greg Norman and win the tournament for the third time, all in playoffs.

Strange, who won $126,000 to more than double his PGA Tour earnings this year, started the day tied for the lead with Norman but he knew it wouldn't be an easy victory.

"I felt like I beat the best player in the world," he said. "You have to be at the top of your game to beat him and I knew I had to shoot a good round."

Racing's not just for good old boys

DALLAS (AP) — Today, as always, auto racing is mostly a man's sport.

However, there are exceptions. Shirley Muldowney is a well respected driver on the National Hot Rod Association circuit, and two other women were working on their reputations at the Grand Prix of Dallas, which just ended on a 1.2-mile course on the grounds of the State Fair of Texas.

Lyn St. James has some noteworthy achievements to her credit, as does Deborah Gregg. Both say they have little trouble fitting in on the Sports Car Club of America's Trans-Am circuit. However, each has come through the ranks in different fashion.

St. James pretty much pushed her way onto the circuit, and has paid the price, she said.

"As long as you have a license and pay your entry fee you can pretty much ignore anything else that comes along," St. James said. "I've had incidences. Guys told me I didn't belong at first, but I overcame that by letting my driving speak for itself."

St. James teamed with Tom Gloy and Bill Elliott to win this year's 24 Hours of Daytona, and holds the women's closed course speed record. But, that doesn't deter the old-school hard-liners.

"I still hear some of it," St. James said. "In a roundabout way it gets back to me. It bothers me to the point that there are still some people who are that petty." Gregg on the other hand, has had little trouble with sexist attitudes on the circuit.

"You always get what you give," Gregg said. "I've tried to remain fairly open, fairly positive and I find that people respond much in the same way."

Gregg, in her first full year on the Sports Car Club of America's Trans-Am circuit, had 10 top 10 finishes, five top fives and two top threes in capturing Rookie of the Year honors. That, more than anything, helped establish her as "one of the guys."

Yankees overcome Cardinals

The National Little League Yankees overcame the Cardinals 17 to 7 Saturday night. Matthew Cave had three hits for the Yanks, scoring two runs to lead the victors.

Michael Barkley and Gregg Roman had three runs each in the game for the Yankees.

Cardinal hitter Ross Roberts accounted for a three-run homer and a run-scoring double; Chris Lewis had three hits in the Cardinal cause.

Jason Roberts was the Cards' pitcher, with Lewis pitching two innings in relief. Roman went the distance on the Yankee mound, allowing nine hits and fanning five batters.

The teams' records now stand at 3-5 for the Cards and 1-6 for the Yankees.

Knight protest

Comments on rape stir sanction call

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Protesters, waving signs that said "Rape is Every Woman's Nightmare" and "Rape is No Game," have called for stronger sanctions against Indiana University basketball coach Bobby Knight for his recent comments on rape and stress.

University President Thomas Ehrlich issued a statement last week saying Knight's reference to rape in an NBC special on stress was deplorable and his "coarse language was in very poor taste."

However, some 300 men, women and children who showed up for the "Take Back the Knight" rally on campus Sunday evening said the statement was not enough.

They called for "a stronger response by the university" — though they did not specify what sanction against Knight would be considered appropriate — as well as for a national public apology from Knight.

At issue is Knight's response to NBC correspondent Connie Chung's question about how he handles stress.

"I think that if rape is inevitable, relax and enjoy it," Knight responded in the program, which aired last Monday.

"That's just an old term that you're going to use. The plane's down, so you have no control over it," he continued. "I'm not talking about the act of rape. Don't misinterpret me. But what I'm talking about is something happens to you, so you have to handle it — now."

Carol Loveless, a rape victim from Indianapolis, told the cheering crowd Sunday night that if Knight had suffered her attack, he wouldn't be able "to say relax and enjoy it."

"If he could somehow feel the terror and threat to my life that I felt, he wouldn't use that word as loosely as he did," she said.

"It's a horrible, criminal action ... and people have to realize that, including Mr. Knight," she said. "I'm afraid of his comments being taken wrong by men and being used to justify a date-rape situation."

Susan Jo Thomas, a law student who helped organize the "Take Back the Knight" rally on campus, added, "Whatever his intent, casual jokes about women and rape are dangerous."

Knight could not be reached for comment about the rally. University spokesman Jim Green said, "We have no particular reaction to it."

"The president has issued his statement, and we don't have anything more to say," Green added.

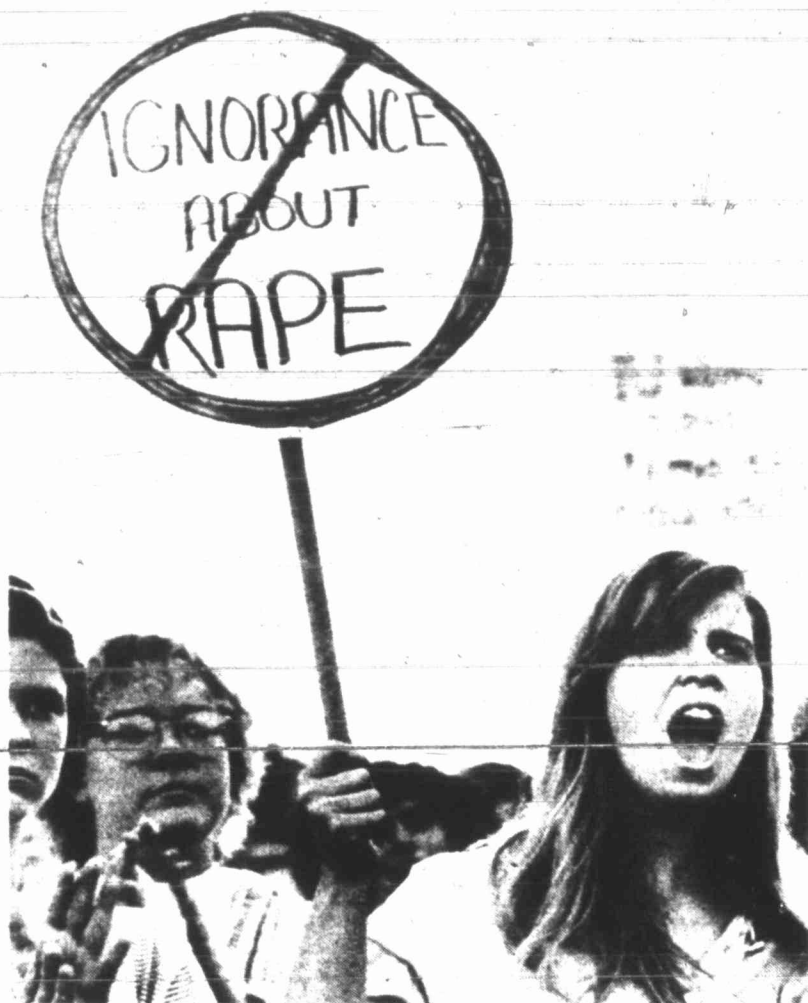

The protesters, however, had plenty to say.

Gregg Moore, a 20-year resident of Bloomington, said the rape remark was just one reason he is upset with Knight.

"It's a long, endless list of Bobby Knight's boo-boos, and I hope this will can him," Moore said, citing Knight's chair-throwing incident during a game against Purdue and his removal of the team during a game against the Soviets last fall.

"I'm offended as a human being," he said of the rape statement. "It shows a real insensitivity on his part, especially since there have been so many rapes on campus. It's a boneheaded, idiotic statement and he ought to quit. I have 14- and 12-year-old boys, and I'd shoot myself before I'd let them play for Bobby Knight."

Patricia Ellis, a junior from Atlanta, stood before a life-size drawing she made of Knight and led the protesters in a song she'd written — "Violent Knight, Holy Knight" sung to the tune of the Christmas carol.

"I thought it was terrible that a role model like Bobby Knight would make a statement like that. A lot of young men across the country look up to him and he trivialized the crime of rape," Ellis said.

Dwight Noble, a Bloomington psychotherapist, said he believes Knight's comment was detrimental to victims of sexual assault.

WEIGHTLIFTING
CARDIFF, Wales (AP) — Yuri Zakharevich of the Soviet Union broke three world records in the European Weightlifting Championships Saturday.

The 243-pound Soviet smashed his own mark for the snatch with a lift of 449 pounds, set a mark for the European lift with a total of 997 pounds, and regained the world record for the jerk with 552 pounds. Zakharevich lost the record to Bulgarian Stefan Botev last month.

TRACK AND FIELD
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Margaret Groos, competing in her first marathon in four years, raced to a surprising victory Sunday in the U.S. Olympic Women's Marathon Trials, becoming the first American woman in three years to break two hours, 30 minutes.

Groos, 28, who finished fifth in the 1984 Trials in her last marathon appearance, took control of the lead between miles 21 and 22, surging past Nancy Ditz and finishing in 2:29:50. She became the first U.S. woman to break 2:30 since 1984 Olympic gold medalist Joan Benoit Samuelson ran 2:21:21, the U.S. record, at Chicago in 1985.

Ditz, winner of five previous marathons, including the 1986 and 1987 Los Angeles Marathons, finished in 2:30:14, and Cathy Schiro-O'Brien, 20, the youngest runner in the field of 207, was third in 2:30:18.

The first three finishers earned places on the U.S. team that will compete in the Summer Olympics at Seoul. Each earned $25,000 from the purse of $165,000 — the first time prize money has been awarded to women in U.S. Olympic Trials competition.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Darrell Ziemis of Fort Dodge overtook defending champion Phil Kauder of Cascade in the final half-mile to capture the Drake Relays marathon Saturday.

Jane Tompkins Lundgren of Marshalltown breezed to victory in the women's division in 3 hours, 2 minutes and 53 seconds.

Ziemis won the men's race in 2:35:12, improving on his fifth-

GOLD COAST, Australia (AP) — Hawaiian Mark Allen won the Daikyo World Cup triathlon event Sunday, completing the 1.9-mile swim, 81-mile cycle and 1.9-mile run in a total time of six hours, six minutes and 26 seconds.

Countryman Scott Tinley was second in 6:10:27 and Ken Glah completed a sweep of the top three spots by clocking 6:19:46.

New Zealand's Erin Baker took the women's event in 6:50:50, 20 minutes in front of Canadian twins Patricia Puntous, who was timed in 7:10:45, and Sylviane Puntous, who had a clocking of 7:11:03.

Saturday's Races

ALBANY, Calif. (AP) — Aloha Prospector, $2.80, raced to a seven-length victory in the $54,050 Piedmont Stakes at Golden Gate Fields.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Fat and Foxy, $3.60, collared Empress of Love early in the stretch and registered a 1 1/2-length victory in the $54,275 Genuine Risk Stakes at Pimlico.

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Michael's Angel, $12, led from the start to capture the $43,850 Valley Forge Handicap at Garden State Park.

CHICAGO (AP) — Saint Oxford, $41, got up in the final stride to beat Two Bagger in a photo finish of the $53,350 Cicero Handicap at Sportman's Park.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Sheesham, $5, scored a 2 1/2-length victory over Affordable Price in the $83,450 Railbird Stakes for 3-year-old fillies at Hollywood Park.

Parsons runs to Winston 500 win

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Phil Parsons has always been fast, but in 110 races he'd never been able to parlay speed into a victory. Then he discovered luck.

Parsons was nearly lapped early in Sunday's Winston 500 when his car ran out of gas. He would have lost that lap, too, had he and his crew not made a daring decision that ultimately paid off in his first victory in six seasons on the stock-car circuit.

"All the other guys pitted for gas on the (lap 14) caution flag and we didn't," said Parsons, a native of Detroit who lives at Denver, N.C. "We were leading the race and just got past the pit road (entrance) before we realized everybody was going in. We really were caught asleep."

On lap 48, Parsons suddenly slowed in turn one and had to coast nearly all the way around the 2.66-mile, high-banked oval.

"We really took a gamble at that point," Parsons said. "We only put in one can of fuel to try to minimize the amount of time we spent on the pit road. It worked out real well."

Parsons barely got back onto the track ahead of Ken Schrader, the leader at the time. With Parsons still accelerating, Schrader appeared poised to pass him on the backstretch.

But Schrader got too close before pulling out and tagged the rear of Parsons' Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme.

Schrader spun four times and "nearly put me in the wall," Parsons said. "But we got a yellow (caution flag) and got to go in and fill up on fuel, and we didn't lose that lap."

Given that reprieve, Parsons resorted to speed to make up the deficit. He got past Geoff Bodine with 15 laps remaining to take the lead, then held off Bobby Allison by .21 seconds at the finish.

"I love this racetrack because I love to go fast, and this is the fastest of the fast," said the 30-year-old Parsons, younger brother of former Winston Cup driving champion Benny Parsons.

Much of the 188-lap, 500-mile race was a duel between Parsons, who led 59 laps, and Bodine, the leader for 99 laps.

The two hooked up in the last few green-flag periods to pull away from the rest of the 41-car field, building margins of nearly 11 seconds.

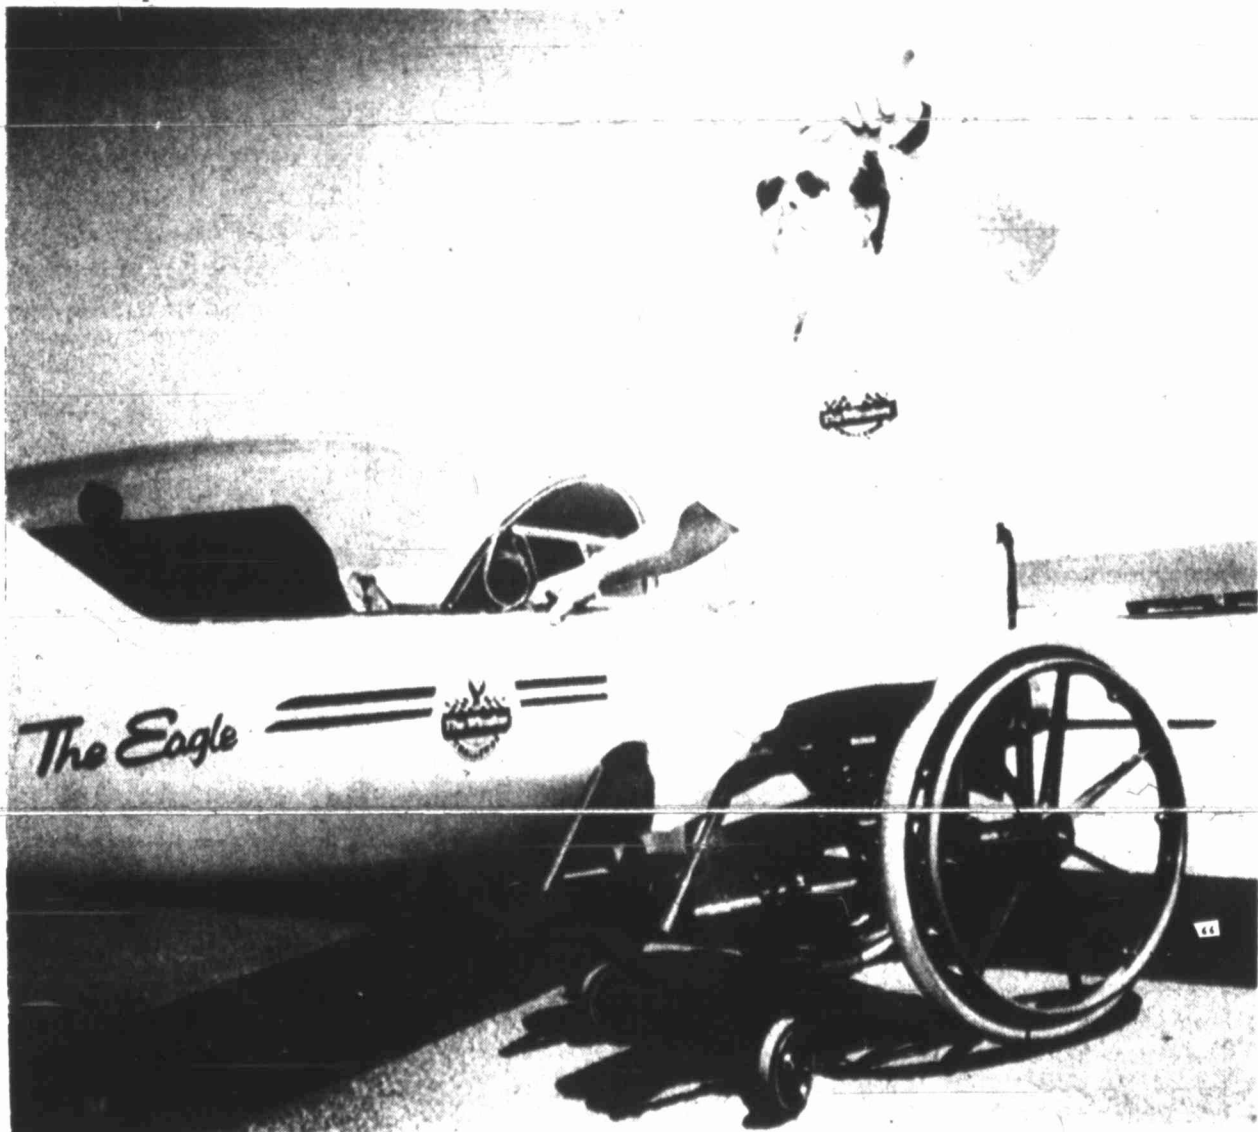

Caution flags kept them from turning it into a complete rout. In fact, it was the last of seven caution flags, this just nine laps from the end, that allowed Allison to get into the thick of the battle and eventually beat Bodine to the wire.

Referring to the last yellow flag, brought out by Ricky Rudd's blown engine, Parsons said, "I really hated it because I felt Geoff and I were the two best cars in the race and it should have been decided between us."

Bodine, who settled for third, said, "I couldn't do anything with Phil. He was awful strong."

Bodine, looking for his first victory since 1986, was just ahead of Parsons as the two flew down the long backstretch on lap 174.

Suddenly Parsons went low on the racetrack, moving up next to Bodine. The cars nearly touched before Parsons nosed ahead going into turn three.

North Carolina or bust

CHULA VISTA, Calif. — Vietnam veteran Terry Frazier, of Charlotte, N.C., prepares for a cross-country flight in his sailplane Sunday. Frazier, legless after an accident in combat, hopes to get to Phoenix, Ariz. by the day's end, with an expected North Carolina arrival date of May 19.

"If anyone knew he beat me, it would ruin his career."

Women who report attacks by their husbands or lovers are less likely to be attacked again within the following six months. But many cases — especially in the higher income strata — go completely unreported. Many women don't even tell their closest friends. And it's happening every day.

More than 300,000 women seek help from crisis intervention centers each year. And hundreds of thousands more need it, but are unreported. And unreported. This is one situation where your help can really help. Call to learn how.

One of our most dangerous diseases is completely curable.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will make an interesting discovery about what is really important to you. Momentous relationship news is announced in July. A new interest in spiritual matters and the arts evolves slowly but surely. Be flexible in social situations and more good things will come your way. Pursue romance only if there is a chance it will become permanent. Finding the right school for a child will be important to his development. A new twist on an old idea brings extra cash.

demands is not your style. Dieting is not enough; you must be willing to change your eating patterns.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. A good day to pop the question! Get better organized at your desk or workbench and the future will look much brighter. Making good decisions is your forte.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have a good shot at a promotion or new job. Bring up a subject that is bothering you before your doubts affect a relationship. Control your temper if things get tense.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your
