County volunteers sharpen their skills

SAN ANGELO — More than 15 Howard County volunteer firefighters — including three women — attended school Friday.

They never saw a classroom and they never wrote a single note — but they learned a few lessons.

The school, the 18th Annual Concho Valley fire school in San Angelo, features hands-on firefighting techniques to battle L.P. gas fires, house fires, car fires, flammable liquid fires and handling fire extinguishers.

The 150 students, equipped with 22 pounds of hot, bulky gear consisting of insulated pants, coat, boots, gloves, and helmet, were divided into groups of about 30, and each was sent to designated areas to work on a specific type of fire.

Early one Friday one group was listening to an instructor in the fire extinguisher area begin his lecture just as the nearby flammable liquid class set off a dramatic, simulated tank truck fire.

It commanded everyone's attention as it seemingly roared out of control.

With fire balls shooting into the sky and the firefighters calling for extra back-up, silent prayers of thanks were expressed that that group opened its day with flammable liquids.

Three-quarters of an hour later, the subject at hand was L.P. gas fire control.

Assignment one: Advance on a blazing oil field "Christmas tree," and cool and protect the person assigned to close the gas valve at the fire's base. The instructors — never hesitant to challenge women with the most dangerous jobs — ordered me to slither through the mud and close the valve.

With the order came the stern warning not to raise my head and a reminder that the air behind the fog pattern of our water exceeded 2,000 degrees. The instructors explained: One breath of air at this temperature and lungs are seared.

While remaining as low as possible by dragging my face through the mud, an instructor maintained a grip on my coat, ready to pull me out in case of panic. Although the precaution didn't prove necessary, concern for the students' safety was reassuring.

After successfully extinguishing the Christmas tree and a flaming butane tank several times, the group tackled a house and car fire.

Student firefighters gained 32 pounds at the house fire — in the form of air packs. Combined with the 22 pounds of gear being carried, the weight of water being sprayed continually and the fatigue from carrying a pressurized hose, some found it a challenge to stand erect and walk.

After donning our air packs, we were told to take the hose, squat, and duck walk into the burning house. Halfway in, the crew stopped and squatted again to attack the flames.

I assumed — having never before been in a fire with an airpack — that it was normal to smell smoke. However, when my lungs began to burn and I felt as though I was suffocating, I began to wonder.

Upon instruction to stand up and move forward, I began to fall — backwards. The weight of the gear, fatigue, and a faulty seal on the face mask brought a quick end to my house firefighting. Despite feelings of having failed, the instructor explained that one purpose of attending the school is to learn limitations as well as potentials.

Learning what can and can't be handled during controlled circumstances is more constructive than getting into a situation you can't handle while thinking you're in control. There are lessons to be learned, even while failing.

Daylight began to fade as the challenge of a flammable liquid fire approached — a simulated tank truck fire like that which grabbed everyone's attention at the very beginning. It was even more intimidating against the black of night. After my house fire fiasco, I decided to watch from the sidelines.

Those fears were reinforced when someone on the back of a hose failed to be alert for kinks and a lead man faced that huge fire with an empty hose. If even one person didn't do his job, everyone's lives were threatened.

County's dry Aid is sought; Official says: 'critical' stage

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Howard County agriculture officials have applied for federal government relief for drought-stricken ranchers.

Rick Lyles, director of the local branch of the Agricultural Soil Conservation Service, applied to the federal Department of Agriculture for supplemental feed two weeks ago, in light of a drought that has decimated county grazing acreage.

If the application is approved by the department, supplemental feed of some form will be provided to area ranchers. Lyles wouldn't speculate on when federal action on the application will be taken.

He did say, however, that area ranchers are in need of the assistance.

"There is no grazing going on, whatsoever," he said. "The cattle have nothing to eat except what (the ranchers) bring out to them."

County Agricultural Extension Agent Don Richardson said he estimates about 200,000 acres of cropland and 350,000 acres of non-cultivated land have been adversely affected by the lack of precipitation. He believes that the problem has reached the critical stage for area farmers and ranchers.

"It's awfully severe," Richardson said of the drought situation. No grasses have been lost as yet, and if rains come soon, the problem should be alleviated somewhat, he added.

If the dry weather continues, however, the situation for farmers and ranchers could worsen in a hurry, Richardson said.

To date, the county has received about 36 percent of normal rainfall totals, Lyles said.

The lack of rain is equally critical for both groups, he said. Farmers need precipitation so they can begin planting their cotton crop. The chances for a good cotton crop are diminished the longer the area experiences a moisture shortage, he added.

Ranchers, on the other hand, need rain so that the necessary grazing land will be available for their cattle. Although many area cattlemen have their herds on supplemental feed, a prolonged drought could force them to disburse their cattle to other areas, Richardson said.

The need for precipitation has reached critical proportions, the extension agent noted.

Guilty! Conviction in tampering death

By RENEE SCHOOF
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE — A woman was found guilty of killing her husband and a woman to collect more than $100,000 in insurance, and the prosecutor says the conviction in the nation's first death-by-product-tampering trial will stop drug tamperers.

Stella Nickell, 44, of suburban Auburn, was convicted Monday of all five counts in the deaths of her 52-year-old husband, Bruce, and Sue Katherine Snow, 40, also of Auburn.

Federal court jurors, who deliberated nearly five days, said Mrs. Nickell's daughter's testimony against her mother proved crucial. Mrs. Nickell, scheduled for sentencing June 17, could receive life in prison. Prosecutors also are considering state murder charges.

"It was all there for (jurors) to make this decision," Assistant U.S. Attorney Joanne Maida said, adding that the verdict will "be a deterrent" to would-be drug tamperers.

Jury foreman Murray M. Andrews, 55, said the panel was split 11-1 in favor of conviction through its first three votes.

Juror Laurel Holliday, who wept when the verdict was announced, told U.S. District Judge William Dwyer on Monday she received an anonymous call Friday from a woman who said, "Don't you all know she (Mrs. Nickell) failed the lie detector test?"

Results of Mrs. Nickell's polygraph test were not introduced as evidence.

Ms. Holliday said she told no other jurors about the call and vowed to disregard the information when the judge told her to do so.

Defense lawyer Tom Hillier, who declined Dwyer's offer to excuse Ms. Holliday, said Monday night he planned to appeal.

"Assuming the 11-1 split included a vote of not guilty by the same juror who reported having been tampered with earlier this morning, then it's my belief that that's no coincidence and that that has to be investigated if for no other reason than to ensure the integrity of the jury system," he said.

The testimony of Cindy Hamilton, Mrs. Nickell's 28-year-old daughter, was decisive. "I think without Cindy's testimony there were, you might say, too many missing links in the chain of evidence," he said.

Ms. Hamilton testified her mother discussed killing Nickell by a drug overdose or by hiring a hit man.

Although prosecutors were unable to link Mrs. Nickell directly to cyanide purchases, she was convicted of all five counts she faced, two of causing death by tampering with a product involved in interstate commerce and three of tampering.

Beset by financial problems and unhappy in her marriage, Mrs. Nickell laced Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules

Forsan pooling its repairs

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

FORSAN — The Forsan school board approved an $1,100 add-on to swimming pool repair work at its special meeting Monday in the superintendent's office.

The board also retained its current officers and swore in trustees Terry Wooten and Fred Holguin for another term.

The $1,100 add-on will be in addition to the $22,200 already designated for the repair work being handled by Holiday Pools of Midland, Superintendent J.F. Poyner said.

The additional money will pay for plastering a 27-inch area around the diameter of the pool. Plastering is necessary to smooth rough spots left on the pool sides after completion of sandblasting, Poyner said.

Pool work should be completed by the end of the school year, Poyner added.

Board President Robert Patterson, Vice President Wooten and Secretary Jack Howard retained their positions for another year. Patterson said after the meeting it is traditional for Forsan board officials to keep their positions for two years.

Wooten and Holguin were sworn in for three-year terms after the board certified May 7 trustee election results, when both men were unopposed for reelection.

In other action, the board:

• Approved a summer basketball camp scheduled for June 13-17 at the Forsan gym. The fee for children attending the camp will be $45, according to Forsan head basketball coach Kurt White.

Students can attend the camp as long as they haven't previously played varsity basketball, White added.

Wooten questioned the fee, and White responded by saying other camps — such as Texas Tech's — have fees consistently higher, and don't give the students the individual attention they would receive at the Forsan camp.

On Wooten's suggestion, White said he would attempt to find a way for children to attend who otherwise couldn't afford the camp.

Howard asked whether the children would be separated by age group, and White assured him that would be the case.

Continuing to express reservations about the camp, Wooten abstained from voting. The rest of board voted in approval.

• Authorized administration to apply for $35,179 in federal Chapter I and II funds. The Chapter I funds will be used to help finance a program to help students at risk and those with dyslexia and related learning disorders, Poyner said.

• Accepted the resignation of fourth-grade teacher Jackie Hayes.

Commissioners award four bids

Howard County Commissioners Court awarded fuel and oil contracts to four Big Spring businesses during its regular meeting Monday.

The contracts are for fuel and oil for county vehicles, County Judge Milton Kirby said.

Specific contracts were awarded to the following firms:

- Gasoline, diesel and lubrication oil — Trio Fuels.
- Transmission differential oil — Grady Walker LP Gas Co.
- Hydraulic oil — Parks Fuel.
- Lubrication grease — McCutcheon Oil Co.

All contracts were awarded on the basis of low bids, Kirby noted.

In other business, commissioners:

• Discussed the county summer work program. Kirby said that four area youths — one each from Big Spring High School, Coahoma High School, Forsan High School and Howard College — will be employed by the Roads and Bridges Department this summer.

This is an annual program, Kirby said, adding that budgetary constraints restricted the number of employed youths to four, lower than numbers in past years.

• Agreed to advertise for bids to replace a Road and Bridges pickup.

with cyanide and gave them to her husband for a headache, prosecutors said.

To make his death appear random, she poisoned other bottles of Excedrin and Anacin capsules and put them on store shelves. Ms. Snow died after swallowing capsules from one of those bottles, six days after Nickell, the prosecution said.

Her husband, Paul Webking, said she might still be alive if local authorities had recognized the real cause of Nickell's death, initially attributed to emphysema.

"The effect of the verdict is secondary to the fact that Sue is dead," Webking said. "No matter what the verdict is, Sue's going to be dead."

"I wish they'd hang her to the highest tree," said Ms. Snow's mother, Marion Chapman, in a telephone interview from Artesia, N.M.

King County Prosecutor Norm Maleng said he would wait until after sentencing to decide whether to file state murder charges.

The deaths of Nickell and Ms. Snow touched off a nationwide tampering scare and prompted Excedrin manufacturer Bristol-Myers to recall its capsules, non-prescription medicines.

"Product tampering is intolerable to society," John Weisberg, spokesman for New York-based Bristol-Myers, said. "When it occurs every effort must be made to identify those responsible and to bring them to justice," he said.

Seven people died in Chicago in 1982 from cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol, but those deaths remain unsolved.

Ms. Maida accused Mrs. Nickell of poisoning her husband to collect on his life insurance. Hillier said Mrs. Nickell was the victim of a lying daughter who stood to gain a $300,000 reward from pharmaceutical companies for information leading to an arrest.

Mrs. Nickell's plan failed because she was careless in mixing the poisonous capsules, greedy for insurance benefits and owned two of the five tainted bottles of painkillers recovered, Ms. Maida said in closing arguments.

Mrs. Nickell, a tropical fish enthusiast, used a bowl contaminated with an algacide for cleaning fish tanks when she mixed potassium cyanide with the Anacin and Excedrin painkillers, the prosecution alleged.

Traces of the compound were found in the five tainted bottles.

Mrs. Nickell also lied about insurance policies and pressed medical authorities for a more specific cause of death, Ms. Maida said.

Mrs. Nickell stood to receive $71,000 in insurance if the death of her husband was from emphysema, as pathologists first concluded, but could have gotten $176,000 if the death were ruled accidental, the prosecutor said.

Mrs. Nickell also left fingerprints on library books about poisons and cyanide, Ms. Maida said.

Hospital fundraiser scheduled May 21

HERALD STAFF REPORT

St. Jude Children Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., will sponsor a Bike-A-Thon at 9 a.m. May 21, in Comanche Trail Park to help raise funds for the hospital's fight against children's diseases.

Founded in 1962 by entertainer Danny Thomas, St. Jude has become the world's largest center for the study of childhood cancer and is the only institution dedicated solely to the treatment and study of sudden, widespread children's diseases, according to information released by Robert Doring, Big Spring chairman of the Bike-A-Thon.

In addition to direct treatment of patients throughout the United States and 29 countries, St. Jude has provided other doctors with methods of treatment for their own young cancer patients, the report stated.

This information is given freely and with no charge to any other hospital or private physician, it added.

The hospital's progress against childhood diseases has been made possible primarily by voluntary contributions raised through events such as the Bike-A-Thon, the report noted.

For further information on the local Bike-A-Thon, contact Doring at 267-5119, or by writing P.O. Box 465, Big Spring, Texas, 79721-0465.

The instructor warned participants to remove all jewelry, bobby pins, glasses and any metal that might touch skin, strengthening the decision to sit this one out.

The instructor explained that this was the hottest fire the group would encounter — even an earring stud could conduct enough heat to cook skin. Anxieties increased upon hearing that and a look into the blackened faces of the firefighters who fought this battle earlier provided no encouragement.

I backed over to the sideline for a good view. The instructor, however, had different ideas.

Taking my arm, he led me to the position directly behind the lead man. Approaching the fire, I desperately avoided looking at the fire by keeping my eyes focused on the lead man's back. Orders from the instructor were specific: Look directly at the fire.

"I want you to see what you're up against," he said, "and what it can do." Facing my fears, I realized at that moment that I could handle it, that the fire was controllable — but only by facing it head-on, with a team.

Placed in the lead man's position on the next approach, I found greater confidence. The team extinguished the fire with no problems and a night of firefighting came to an end.

The experience was great and would likely benefit anyone who even thinks they might need to fight a fire some day.

The 18 Howard County volunteers learned a great deal about firefighting techniques — and some learned a lot about themselves and their potential.

Chairman: Tracks may have licenses by fall

AUSTIN (AP) — The first race tracks may be licensed for pari-mutuel wagering by late autumn, with racing beginning in the spring, the chairman of the Texas Racing Commission says.

Proposed administrative rules, including those regulating the licensing of horse and dog tracks in Texas, were unanimously approved by the commission Monday for presentation at public hearings which could begin later this month.

Action on proposed rules to govern actual racing was postponed until the commission's June meeting, but commission Chairman Hilary Doran said that shouldn't delay the start of pari-mutuel racing later than next spring.

"I would say that if it goes like I hope it does, and we've got the administrative rules down solid and all ready to go in September, I think the earliest (the commission could grant a track license) would be October, late November," Doran said.

After a track receives a license, Doran said he expects it to take another 90 to 120 days before racing would begin.

"Hopefully, early next spring we'll have a horse coming down the track under the pari-mutuel auspices," he said.

Officials said the first tracks to get licenses would be smaller, existing "Class II" tracks. Construction and licensing of major facilities — probably in the San Antonio, Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas — are expected to take longer.

Voters in Dallas and Lubbock counties over the weekend approved local-option referenda to allow pari-mutuel racing, and Doran said Monday that those results indicate how much public interest there is in getting racing started.

"I think it shows how much the people of Texas are ready for pari-mutuel racing to begin," he said. "I think the people are definitely for it and want it. I think it's a very positive indicator."

Doran said two applications for track licenses — from Houston Downs and a Randall County track — already had been received by the commission. Both were returned, as will any others received before rules are adopted, he said.

The chairman said he also hopes that an executive director for the commission can be hired by July. The commission has received 37 applications for the job so far, Doran said.

Child prisoner leaves hospital for foster home

HOUSTON (AP) — A 7-year-old boy authorities said was kept locked in a bathroom with dogs and abused for perhaps four years, left the hospital for a foster home on Monday accompanied by gifts of stuffed bears and toys.

After extensive medical tests, doctors at Ben Taub Hospital decided the slight, 25-pound boy needed "privacy, some love and some food and a good diet," said Judy Hay, spokeswoman for the Harris County Children's Protective Services.

Vannoy Jimenez's plight came to light last week when he climbed out of a window in the bathroom of his parents' apartment and wandered to a service station.

His parents, Alexander Lizcano Jimenez, 38, and Charlotte Anne Bishop, 42, were charged with injury to a child by omission. They remain in the Harris County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond each.

"We were surprised we could take him home this soon," Ms. Hay said Monday. She said the boy was told he would be going to a new family where he could play with other children.

"He was very excited," she said. "He wanted to get a haircut and meet his foster parents."

Ms. Hay said Vannoy has done remarkably well and his apparent high intelligence has surprised those caring for him.

Authorities have not been able to determine how long Vannoy was locked in the bathroom, Ms. Hay said, but there is no doubt he had been severely abused for at least four years.

The boy received so many gifts of toys and stuffed bears there wasn't room for him in his hospital bed, Ms. Hay said.

The child will live with a couple who has provided a home for 65 children for CPS for 14 years, doing especially good work with emotionally disturbed children, Ms. Hay said.

Disabled veteran gliding across U.S.

DALLAS (AP) — A Vietnam War veteran who is trying to become the first disabled man to fly a glider across the United States was expected to land in Dallas today, his publicist said.

Terry Frazier flew from Hobbs, N.M. to Stamford, about 40 miles north of Abilene, Monday after scrubbing a plan to land at the Texas Soaring Club facility near Dallas.

"When you run out of air, you just come down where you can," said Bryant McMurray, a spokesman for Frazier.

McMurray, who is in Dallas, said a crew member reported that Frazier was pleased with the day's flight.

"He said it was great to be flying. He said he was really really pumped up about the soaring lift."

Frazier arrived in Hobbs Saturday hauling his sailplane, The Eagle, from Tucson, Ariz., because poor soaring conditions prevented him from flying.

Similar conditions have dampened the better part of his trip, which began in San Diego on May 1.

He had to tow the 525-pound aircraft from Blythe, Calif., to Wickenburg, Ariz., last Monday. He then flew to Carefree, Ariz., on Tuesday and to Tucson on Wednesday, where he remained grounded due to high winds.

Despite the delay, Frazier said he still plans to arrive in Charlotte, N.C., on May 22 for the Winston NASCAR race, which would complete the company's Soar America challenge of a 2,500-mile journey across the United States.

Frazier also is trying to raise about $50,000 in pledges for the Friends of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Frazier lost both legs under enemy mortar fire. The glider is specially equipped to allow him control.

Education secretary resigning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary William J. Bennett has recommended to President Reagan that he appoint former Dallas schools superintendent Linus Wright, the department's undersecretary, to the top post when Bennett steps down in mid-September.

Bennett met privately with Reagan at the White House Monday and then through the department issued a statement saying he will resign his Cabinet post to return to private life.

Bennett told his staff he had recommended that Wright succeed him.

Wright said he has not discussed the job with administration officials.

Addressing the Intergovernmental Advisory Council on Education in Washington on Monday, Wright, 61, urged a return to "value" education in public schools. For too long, he said, the teaching of right and wrong was avoided because it was considered tantamount to teaching religion.

During his 3½-year tenure, Bennett has been the scourge of school bureaucrats, teacher unions and slipshod standards.

He made headlines with acerbic criticisms of the "blob" of school bureaucracy, the "greed" of colleges raising tuitions twice as fast as inflation, and the "Jim Crow math and back-of-the-bus science" meted out to black children in ghetto schools. He called Chicago's schools the nation's worst and said the city's system was in an "educational meltdown."

Bennett, 44, called for the U.S. military to wage war against drug traffickers and quarreled with the surgeon general over what to teach children about AIDS and condoms.

The outgoing secretary refused to discuss his plans after he leaves office, but they are believed to include hitting the lecture circuit and writing a book on the future of education.

Cowboys recreate roundup days with longhorn drive

ABILENE (AP) — A cattle drive, rodeo and rhinestone roundup will set the stage for a recreation of West Texas' ranching heyday this week.

The fourth annual Western Heritage Classic begins today with a two-mile Longhorn cattle drive into town accompanied by chuckwagons, bedwagons, cowboys on horseback and buggies.

"We're trying to depict true history," said Jana Cobb, an organizer of the six-day event.

"In the past, the townspeople and the officials would come out to greet the cattle drive because it meant money for the town."

Ms. Cobb said history is repeating itself, because organizers of the celebration of the oldtime ways of working cowboys hope out-of-town visitors will bring in tourist dollars. "Hopefully our hotels and restaurants will be full," she said.

The Western Heritage Classic, which runs through Sunday, also features plenty of country music, an exhibit of Western art by 15 artists on Thursday and a glittering gala called the Rhinestone Roundup on Friday.

About 800 guests are to be escorted to the party in surreys and buggies to watch a rodeo performance.

Cowboys from area ranches will demonstrate the tools of their trade: bronc riding, team branding, team penning, team roping, wild cow milking and other events. Prizes will be awarded to the ranch with the best working cowboys.

Era revived with Jackson

And the three men I admire most,
The Father, Son and the Holy Ghost,
They caught the last train for the coast,
The day the music died.

— Don McLean, "American Pie," 1971

The lyrics may have alluded to the death of Buddy Holly, but for many Americans of a certain age, the song evokes a slightly later era. For them, the music began to die on April 4, 1968, the day an assassin in Memphis took the life of Martin Luther King Jr.

To them, the death of the young civil rights leader was, if not the death of idealism, a brutal end to an era of pervasive social change — change nourished by the movement King had led for more than a decade. The assassination in Los Angeles a few weeks later of yet another gifted leader was a bitter coda to the death of King, the death of hope.

After King's death, after Robert Kennedy's death, and finally, after the shootings at Kent State, the nation settled into dormancy. Those who came of age in the 1960s tempered their public passions, endured Watergate and a succession of drab leaders, flirted with self-indulgence and, for the most part, went about the business of making their own lives. As far as they were concerned, the election of Ronald Reagan in 1980 confirmed a counterrevolution.

But if the ardor was diminished, the idealism was not. It was merely tamped down, and Jesse Jackson, to the dismay of his fellow Democrats and the bemusement of his rival Republicans, may be reviving it.

The man who stood with King on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel may be evoking a spirit that transcends issues, practical politics and conventional wisdom. We're not suggesting that he will be our next president or even that he will get the nomination. We are suggesting that he has transformed this campaign by tapping into a strain of emotion and idealism last seen two decades ago.

Jackson the candidate, like John F. Kennedy in 1960, offers himself in vivid contrast to a departing administration whose passion is spent. He raises the specter of a presidency whose values were compromised by ethical lapses, by cynical arrangements with Iranian terrorists and Panamanian drug dealers, by an ideological obtuseness toward the poor and dispossessed. His is a revivalist's call for a return to American ideals. No matter the nature of the revivalist, he has tapped strong emotions.

Black Americans, intensely proud that one of their own is a serious contender for the presidency, have responded. More and more white Americans — aging idealists from the '60s, the "Peugeot proletariat," maybe even the real proletariat — are responding as well.

Jackson also stands out in contrast to his Democratic rivals — and not solely because of the color of his skin. Neither Michael Dukakis, despite winning the Connecticut primary the other day, nor Al Gore has been able to engage the electorate.

It may be that many Democrats who have voted for Jackson in primaries and caucuses so far still consider him unelectable, either because he's black or because he is far to the left of the Democratic mainstream. Their votes may have been cast in protest, as expressions of dissatisfaction with the choices they have been given. But their protest choice grows more formidable by the day.

Even those who have voted for Jackson, whatever their motives, must surely realize his shortcomings. He has never held public office, and questions raised about PUSH, the social-action agency he founded in Chicago, have not been put to rest. Other black leaders have accused him of cynical opportunism in seeking to assume the King mantle.

It's also true that his public pronouncements, his positions on the issues, have not been subjected to the same scrutiny that other candidates have endured. No other serious candidate could have gotten away with Jackson's flirtations with Fidel Castro, Yasser Arafat and Moammar Gadhafi, with his simplistic slogans, twisted economic figures and inaccuracies about military spending.

The scrutiny will intensify in the coming days, but with Jackson, absolute accuracy and consistency in the details may be beside the point. His message, as with Ronald Reagan's eight years ago, may transcend dotted i's and crossed t's.

Jackson's campaign and the welling response evokes another campaign — the one Robert Kennedy waged in the spring of 1968. Kennedy in '68, like Jackson in '88, defied the party regulars. He offered himself — belatedly, unlike Jackson — in vivid contrast to the compromised heir apparent, Hubert Humphrey, and to the diffident Eugene McCarthy.

Jesse Jackson is still a long way from the White House, a long way from the nomination. His stunning victories may scare the party bosses to death, or at least to take longer looks at Dukakis and Gore.

Whatever happens though, Jesse Jackson already has made a difference. He has shown that white Americans will vote for a black candidate for president. He has breathed life and passion and verve into this campaign. He has, in short, transformed the politics of 1988 — and, we suspect, beyond.

What to do with Jesse

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY

The staple question at dinner in New York following the primary was as expected: Does Jesse Jackson have a preemptive hold on the vice presidential spot? One professional newsman said to me: Yes. The question isn't: Does Jackson have the No. 2 spot in his pocket? The question properly put is: Now that Jackson has the No. 2 spot, what are the Democrats going to do about it?

Most people pursuing the question agree that if Jackson were not black, he would not be thought "entitled" to the vice presidential nomination. The contestant who comes into the convention with the second highest number of delegates doesn't necessarily go to second place.

Gary Hart had more delegates than Geraldine Ferraro in 1984, but didn't rate second, no more than Robert Taft in 1952, or Ronald Reagan in 1976. But the question can't be avoided — namely, that many Democrats, and most black Democrats, would interpret a refusal to give Jesse the No. 2 spot as racist in motivation, thereby sinking the ticket. Accordingly, the inquiries proceed.

A second reporter had heard the conversation the night before with Ted Koppel in which it was ventured that it would go as follows: After the California primary, Dukakis would say to Jackson: "Look, Jesse. If I make you the No. 2, what's going to happen is that both of us will lose, and the public will fix the blame on you for the loss, and the black crusade will suffer for years from that setback. In contrast, if you will back the ticket strongly and I name Gore (or whoever), you can get a Cabinet position and emerge from the whole experience as the undisputed post-King liberator of the black American people. Whaddayasay?"

But the trouble with that scenario is that it does not contend with the possibility that Jesse would say no. Jackson might reason that a certain status attaches to a leader of an oppressed minority, and that therefore he has an interest in maintaining the underdog's station in life.

One could argue that if one were to put down the loss by the Democrats of the White House to the vice presidential candidate being black, one could induce a national hangover of the kind that worked, however slowly, on the Democrats when Al Smith was defeated substantially because he was a Catholic. Jesse would work the streets of racist America with even greater conviction than before.

But suppose that he did agree to step aside. What might the Democrats offer him? The rumor has circulated in New York that he would like to serve as ambassador to the United Nations. Hard to believe.

In the first place, he would be not the first black to serve as ambassador, but the third, and Jesse likes to be the first. And in the second place, thanks largely to the inanity of most U.N. debates, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations tends to receive little public attention. Little public attention is the one thing Jesse would not tolerate.

Another suggestion is that he be made chairman of the Democratic Party. That is a high-prestige post, and although most people do not know the name of the current head of the Democratic Party, everyone would know his name if it were Jesse Jackson.

As such, Jackson could make much of the office and use its office leverage to enter into public debate on almost any issue. And he could ease the way for yet another candidacy in 1992.

Another man of the media, surveying the New York scene, commented on what he thought was the primary dereliction of Mike Dukakis. "He should have gone to a huge black meeting and said to them: 'Ladies and gentlemen, the Democratic Party has taken you for granted in the past. That will no longer happen.'"

Certainly this would make for good theater, but it leaves unanswered the question, What supplementary measures that would accelerate the upward mobility of the American black would the Democratic Party be able to endorse? Affirmative action is operative. What else is there? What supplementary social programs can be enacted that would especially favor the black American?

The New York vote emphatically rejected Jackson as the choice of the people of the state. Yet Jackson's achievements were remarkable: He got a few thousand more votes in New York City than Dukakis did, winning the boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx.

This was a considerable achievement, without telling us very much about the United States. In a way, it was more remarkable that Jackson won Delaware and Vermont. There are people out there who see him at or near the White House.

A colleague ended the discussion by asking the hypothetical question: If Dukakis and Jackson were elected, and Israel's Mossad superintended the assassination of Dukakis, would Sen. Gore praise Israel's policy, on the grounds that Israel had given us our first black president?

Jesse plays host of 'Let's make a deal'

By ART BUCHWALD

What makes Jesse Jackson such a simple man is that he has so many simple ideas. I love his most recent one where he wants to sit down with the terrorists and negotiate the release of the hostages in the Middle East. Jesse believes all it takes is understanding and good will to persuade Middle East kidnapers to give back the people they are holding.

"Hi, I'm Jesse Jackson and I'm here to talk you people into returning to me the Americans you're holding."

"Lie down on the ground with your nose in the dirt."

"Hold it. I am ready to reason with you. Don't you remember the last time I was in these parts you gave me a Navy ensign hostage?"

"That's because he was black and we wanted to embarrass Ronald Reagan."

"I, Jesse Jackson, I am somebody, I'm willing to make a deal. What do you people want?"

Art Buchwald

"A truckload of dynamite and a free parking place in front of the American Embassy in Beirut."

"Be reasonable. How about a boatload of Ritz crackers and two dozen Ralph Lauren suits?"

"Who told you that you could come and see us?"

"I came here because we're brothers. I am a man of God and you people are men of God and you are committing a sin holding the Americans in captivity. I am willing to continue this conversation, but first you must take that machine gun muzzle out of my nostril."

"We want the entire Kuwaiti royal family delivered to us tied up over the humps of camels."

"I'll also transmit that. The fact that we are discussing terms is a big plus. I don't think it's necessary to take that pin out of the grenade you're holding to my stomach."

"You know we don't like you, Jackson. You sound like a big know-it-all."

"I'm very likable. If I get to be President I'll invite all of you to the White House for a state dinner."

"How much money will you give us for the hostages?"

"I can't pay ransom, but I could arrange to wire every terrorist's home with cable TV."

"It's not enough. We need arms and explosive devices and hand-held rockets."

"None of those things are out of the question. You have the right as have-nots to want the same weapons the haves have. Please give me the hostages so I can go back to the United States and tell them that face-to-face diplomacy with well-meaning terrorists really works."

Jury finds clan guilty

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The prosecution of a renegade polygamist clan shifts to state homicide charges following the federal convictions of four family members on 20 counts stemming from a church bombing and 13-day police standoff.

The jury, deliberating 25 hours over four days, returned guilty verdicts Monday against clan patriarch Vickie Singer; her son-in-law, ringleader Addam Swapp; Swapp's brother, Jonathan Swapp; and her son, John Timothy Singer.

Assistant Attorney General Creighton Horton said his office intends to file state murder charges next week in the death of state corrections Lt. Fred House in the Jan. 28 assault by law officers that ended the standoff.

"And we do it all over again," Horton said. The Swapp brothers and the wheelchair-bound John Timothy Singer were found guilty of second-degree attempted murder of FBI agents for the shootout that ended the 13-day siege at the clan's Marion farm.

The panel acquitted Mrs. Singer of one count of attempted murder of FBI agents, an accompanying firearms charge and one count of possession of a sawed-off shotgun.

Heinlein dead at 80

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — Robert A. Heinlein, who spent a half century writing about man's relation to technology, writing and the universe, was remembered upon his death at age 80 as science fiction's prolific "grand master."

"He was probably the best of us all at his peak," Isaac Asimov, one of the top science fiction writers, said Monday. "He forged the route the rest of us followed."

"His early stories in the 1940s were so far ahead of everything else being done that he made an enduring name for himself as the best science fiction writer."

Heinlein, whose books explored the future while questioning the morals and beliefs of the present, died of heart failure Sunday at his home in this seaside community 130 miles south of San Francisco.

Escaped killer caught

MOUNDSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — An escaped killer who eluded authorities for five weeks, living in the rugged hills in a lean-to and eating groundhog, was captured when his sprint to flee searchers was slowed by a dog he'd befriended.

Tommie Mollohan, 45, who was serving a life term for the 1973 robbery and murder of a grocer, was caught Monday following a two-hour chase that one officer likened to a deer chase.

Mollohan was the last to be recaptured of three murderers who escaped April 3 from the West Virginia Penitentiary. He was trapped on a remote, heavily wooded ridge about 25 miles from the prison, state police said.

Kentucky winds leave one dead

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

National Guardsmen patrolled looters today in a Kentucky city blasted by powerful winds that killed one woman and injured at least 15 people in a wave of violent storms that pounded sections of the Midwest, Northeast and South.

The storms spawned by a cold front Monday flipped airplanes in Cleveland, knocked out power to thousands in Michigan and unleashed hail as big as baseballs in Texas.

"It's a disaster, just a disaster," said Middlesboro, Ky., Mayor Troy Welch, estimating damage to his city in the millions. The storm destroyed a radio newsroom, tore roofs off buildings, blew furniture into the street and knocked out all power to the town.

Four people were arrested for looting, police said today.

Welch declared an emergency, and Gov. Wallace Wilkinson activated 30 National Guardsmen to help clean up and keep the peace in the city of 11,000 residents near the Cumberland Gap just north of the Tennessee border.

The thunderstorms that lashed the Ohio Valley on Monday weakened considerably by early today, with just scattered showers and thunderstorms remaining from Virginia to New York. But strong thunderstorms continued over sections of Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama.

In Middlesboro, the winds smashed a trailer, killing a woman and injuring her husband and child, police Sgt. Jimmy England said.

Many people were injured and there was an unconfirmed report that one person was missing, state police said. Fifteen people were treated at Middlesboro Appalachian Regional Hospital, said assistant administrator Dan Fitzpatrick.

Helicopters carrying injured to the University of Tennessee Medical Center in Knoxville 45 miles to the south had to turn back because of the bad weather, said a nursing supervisor who refused to give her name.

The storm hit at 10:15 p.m. Monday, just as news director Jim Gilbert of radio station WFXV was getting ready to broadcast a warning about heavy thunderstorms.

"We were sitting there and the wind started to blow really hard and it (the station) exploded," Gilbert said. "It wiped my newsroom out. ... We have nothing. We're gone. My typewriter's gone. I can't even find it."

The wind blew roofs off downtown buildings, shattered windows, tore doors of hinges at the hospital and leveled a furniture store built in 1890, officials said.

"There's furniture all over the street," Welch said.

At the Middlesboro Airport, 20 small planes were damaged, along with fuel pumps, said Don Armstrong of the state Division of Disaster and Emergency Services in Frankfort.

Shrine siege ends

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — More than 700 people, at least half of them women and children, were evacuated from the Golden Temple complex today, a day after security forces laid siege to the shrine after an exchange of gunfire that claimed five lives.

Sikh extremists fired intermittently today at security posts around the shrine.

More than 2,500 paramilitary troops and police armed with automatic rifles and light machine guns have encircled the sprawling temple complex. The siege follows an exchange of fire between militants in the temple and paramilitary troops on Monday in which at least five people were killed and 10 injured.

Police said most of the people who left the complex today were devotees who became trapped inside on Monday.

Police searched and interrogated the men who left the temple.

U.S. vehicle crashes

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A U.S. Army wrecker crashed in the city of Tokori, killing four people and injuring four, the Army said today.

The vehicle, driven by an unidentified soldier from the 2nd U.S. Infantry Division, also damaged six stores and hit three other vehicles in the accident Monday in Tokori, 25 miles north of Seoul, the Army said in a press release.

The Yonhap News Agency said the vehicle's brakes failed.

The names of those killed and injured were not released. The injured were listed in stable condition at a hospital near Tokori, the release said.

The driver was being treated for shock at the 121st U.S. Army Evacuation Hospital in Seoul, it added.

Military officials said Maj. Gen. Jack B. Farris, commander of the U.S. division, has ordered an investigation to determine the cause of the accident.

The U.S. maintains about 40,000 troops in South Korea.

Official marries Soviet

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippine ambassador to Peru was ordered home to explain his marriage to a Soviet citizen, it was reported today.

The newspapers Malaya and The Manila Standard said Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus had ordered the recall of Ambassador Romeo Fernandez and asked the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency to check into allegations that the envoy's wife Tatyana Yashina had links to Soviet intelligence.

Deputy Foreign Secretary Jose Ingles refused to comment on the reports, citing confidentiality.

The newspapers said Fernandez, 62, married the 25-year-old Russian while he was posted in the Soviet Union. Malaya said Fernandez had asked the foreign secretary to reconsider his order.

Mingling

SEOUL — American actress Brooke Shields and a soldier are flanked by crew members during a visit to a U.S. military camp near the demilitarized zone, separating North and South Korea Monday. Shields is in Korea to take part in a pre-Olympic show at the Olympic stadium. The U.S. maintains about 40,000 troops in South Korea.

Poll says most women would marry spouse again

NEW YORK (AP) — Only 7 percent of married women surveyed by Ladies Home Journal say they wouldn't marry their mate again.

The poll of 608 women released Monday found that 88 percent would wed the same man again. The rest were undecided.

Their husband's sense of humor was cited as the reason for falling in love by 49 percent of women surveyed while 39 percent said they decided to marry him because "he shared my vision of the future."

The most common reason given for opposing the idea of remarrying the same man was that the couple had nothing in common, according to the poll published in the June issue. The magazine said this complaint was most often heard from readers ages 45 to 59.

Other problems cited as interfering with marital bliss included communication problems, a lack of emotional responsiveness and opposition to a spouse's independence. The magazine said the last complaint was most often made by women younger than age 30.

A particular protest of Midwestern women who said they would not remarry their husbands was, "he's boring."

The Roper organization conducted the poll for the magazine with telephone and street interviews.

Wealthy cat

LONDON — Dorothy Walker's cat "Pussy," is ready to pay for its board and lodgings at the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals clinic in Putney, south west London, after news that the elderly widow from Richmond, who died in December, has left more than 2,750,000 pounds (U.S. $5,170,000) to the animal rescue society, over $1.88 million higher than its previous record bequest.

Japanese clear import of cookies

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Girl Scout cookies caught in the crunch of a $2,000 Japanese import tariff will be delivered to sailors aboard a U.S. aircraft carrier by the Navy, officials say.

The 402 boxes of cookies didn't clear customs because they were flown in on a plane belonging to American Airlines, which had donated freight space for the cookies, said Cmdr. Joe Baggett with the Judge Advocate General's Office in Washington D.C.

According to a 1960 agreement between Japan and the United States, all materials, supplies and equipment imported by the U.S. armed forces for the use of servicemen are exempt from import fees, Baggett said Monday.

"Japanese customs officials inspect products coming in on commercial planes, such as American Airlines," he said.

That inspection resulted in a duty of $2,000 on cookies sold for $804 to 45 servicemen aboard the USS Midway.

The cookies were returned to Corpus Christi, much to the disappointment of the girls in Brownie Troop 807.

However, their plight received national attention which became a bigger thrill than the massive cookie sale, troop leader Marchetta White said.

American Airlines' general manager in Corpus Christi, Jean Titus, said the cookies will be taken to a U.S. base on the West Coast and then flown via Navy plane to the Midway, homeported in Yokosuka, Japan, the sister city of Corpus Christi.

Meanwhile, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, went through diplomatic channels to make sure the cookies reach the sailors whether they're flown in on a Navy plane or on an American Airlines plane.

Mondale urges against interviewing for Veep

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale says the interviews he held four years ago with prospective running mates proved a "damaged strategy" and he thinks Michael Dukakis ought to find a different way of selecting the Democratic vice presidential nominee this year.

Four years ago, Mondale interviewed a succession of candidates before he chose Geraldine Ferraro, then a congresswoman from New York, as the first woman on a major party's national ticket. One by one, the vice presidential hopefuls visited Mondale at his home in Minnesota.

In retrospect, "I don't think it built confidence," Mondale said of the process. The 1984 Democratic presidential nominee's comments came in a telephone interview from his Minneapolis law office on Monday.

"I don't think the way that process played out reassured Americans," he said. "It's a damaged strategy even though it was not a bad idea."

He suggested that Dukakis "pursue a different way of looking at vice presidential candidates."

Asked if he thought Dukakis, who now appears likely to lock up the Democratic presidential nomination before the July convention, should choose a Southerner for his running mate, Mondale said, "I wouldn't say he has to. But what I can't figure out is how you get the numbers if you don't run strong in the South." Mondale was optimistic about the Democrats' chances of winning a presidential election for only the second time in the last six.

"We've got a shot at this deal," he said.

Republican Vice President George Bush "is a troubled candidate," he said. "I think he gets off in an uncertain way. I think there are going to be vulnerabilities on both sides. But Dukakis looks strong as a person and I don't think Bush does."

Mondale said there is a need to "constantly reassure Americans that you possess that special presidential strength of character and independence and resolve to serve the public interest."

In recent campaign appearances, Bush often has seemed to be campaigning against Jimmy Carter, under whom Mondale served as vice president.

"I believe that's a sign of weakness," said Mondale. "Here's a guy who ought to be filling in the blanks where people are worried about him, which is character and vision and direction and presidential status."

Youth's business is thriving

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Scott Womack heard business opportunity knocking while he was still some 40 semester hours short of a marketing degree at Howard Payne University.

His father, Bill Womack, had acquired a failing bakery business from a tenant of one of his commercial buildings in Brownwood. When the business was closed, Scott, 21, and his father salvaged a single product, revised and improved it, changed the recipe and adapted it for the wholesale food service industry.

The product, a kind of custom-made fried pie with quality ingredients, was launched in Lubbock as Sally's Pies — the namesake for the business being the entrepreneur's mother.

Currently, a staff of 11 people are turning out some 4,000 pies a day for accounts across a five-state area. New accounts soon to become active are expected to require a doubling of the staff within the next 60 days.

The 4-ounce pie contains two ounces of fruit and comes in five varieties. It is made up with a crust that will hold up under deep frying, and is made to taste "like those grandma used to make," according to Scott Womack.

The pies are handmade, meaning they are labor-intensive, and are packaged frozen, ready to cook, in case lots of 48.

Womack recently doubled the overall size of his building to 4,200 square feet of space, and tripled the facility's production area in the process.

He recalled that when the business was started in June 1986, it was something of a one-man show. He would travel around the West Texas area to restaurants and call on convenience stores that had in-house fryers, looking for business opportunities. He would come back to Lubbock, make enough pies for new accounts, then deliver them the following week.

"I did the whole bit," he recalls. "I made the dough by hand — I was alone to start with."

His co-owner father provided the capital for the venture.

Womack found a building in Lubbock that was basically a concrete slab at the time. "The man we are leasing from built it to our specifications."

The encouragement to start the business came from the pie's initial popularity in Central Texas. "I sold like gangbusters in Brownwood," he said.

The first big break in Lubbock was the pie's introduction to the public at the South Plains Fair in 1986. An Oakwood Methodist Church booth sold 4,000 of the fried pies that season, and 6,000 during the fair week in 1987. Womack has already been contacted by the Fair Association for a booth this year.

West Texas Marketing, which represents the product as a food broker, indicated the sales are on an incline. "We represent about 20 different lines, and that has been the easiest to sell," said J.B. Lee, president of West Texas Marketing. "Everybody buys it, and everybody is happy. We have not had one single complaint in the six months we have been representing it."

Womack is now entering the market in Dallas, San Antonio and Austin, primarily in restaurants and similar food-service facilities. The pies also are marketed in Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Womack's education is on hold for now, but he says he plans to continue it when he can afford the time. He says he plans to finish his marketing degree at Texas Tech, but he adds that his business has been an education in itself.

"It's one thing to talk about things in marketing class, and another entirely to get out into an area of which I knew nothing about. There have been a lot of people from Lubbock that have been very supportive and helpful."

Reader has plan for unwanted, edible food

DEAR ABBY: I agree that the waste of good food in the school lunchroom is appalling. Your suggestion that the matter be taken up by the PTA is a good one. There is one more thing that can be done, however.

There is a non-governmental, non-profit agency in St. Paul called Twelve Baskets (named after the baskets of food scraps collected after one of the miracles of the loaves and fishes). About three years ago, the founders approached the St. Paul Health Department with a plan to redistribute unwanted salvageable food. With the guidance and blessing of the health department, the program was begun. It was one of the first of its kind in the country.

Twelve Baskets picks up surplus and distressed food and delivers it directly to on-site eating programs, where it is immediately prepared in approved kitchens and served. The food comes from food plants, bakeries, dairies, restaurants, grocery stores and other facilities where such food may be available.

Unfortunately, schools are not allowed to participate in this program because federal law prohibits redistribution of federal commodities that schools receive. Until the U.S. Congress passes a bill that allows for such redistribution, salvageable, wholesome food will continue to be wasted daily. Minnesota Senators Boschwitz and Durenberger are aware of the problem, and would introduce a bill to correct it, but they don't feel there is adequate support for it in Congress.

There is an increasing need for redistribution of this type of food, and schools are a valuable untapped resource. When there are needy people who can benefit from the work of organizations such as Twelve Baskets, but the law prevents that help, then it's time to change the law.

This is an election year. Please tell your readers to write to their senators and representatives and ask them to support a repeal of the anti-redistribution law, which is a part of the commodities program. Sending this column along with the letter might help.

For information on how to set up a food reclamation and redistribution program, send a long,

By the way, I am in no way associated with Twelve Baskets.

BILL JASPERS (FORMER ST. PAUL INSPECTOR)

DEAR BILL: Neither am I, but it's a crime to throw out edible food when so many people are hungry and homeless. It's a great idea. Rudy and Dave, the ball is in your court!

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this for friends of mine as well as for myself. We would like to know how to say, "I love you. Will you marry me?" in French, German, Danish and Portuguese. We went to the public library, and the librarian gave us some books, but they were of little use.

We would greatly appreciate it, Abby, if you could help us.

Historical marker placed to honor Hindenburg deaths

LAKEHURST, N.J. (AP) — Despite misgivings among officials about honoring a Nazi airship, a historical marker now designates the spot where the Hindenburg exploded and crashed 51 years ago, killing 36 people.

"There was some political hesitancy," Ocean County Freeholder George Buckwald said after Monday's dedication. "But we felt it was time to forget the politics and view it as an historic occasion."

Several hundred people gathered for a ceremony last year marking the 50th anniversary of the crash. The freeholders — county supervisors — paid for a marker at the site, a field at what is now the Naval Air Engineering Center.

The plaque was to be dedicated Friday, the 51st anniversary of the May 6, 1937, tragedy. But the service was postponed by rain until Monday, the 52nd anniversary of the Hindenburg's first flight into the United States.

The bronze marker, set in pink granite, is surrounded by a concrete walkway in an elliptical shape similar to the Hindenburg's outline. Several dozen people attended the dedication ceremony.

"It's a Navy tradition that when we make a ship a memorial, we put a plaque on the bridge," said Capt.

James R. Macdonald, commanding officer at the engineering center. "In this spot is where the bridge, or the control car, on the Hindenburg came to rest."

"They should have done this a long time ago," said John Iannaccone, who was in the Hindenburg's ground crew on the fateful day. "Everybody who comes here wants to know where it happened. Now they can see where it happened."

Iannaccone and several others at the dedication brought small pieces of the 804-foot Hindenburg's charred aluminum alloy frame.

The Hindenburg was filled with highly flammable hydrogen instead of fire-proof helium, a rare commodity that the U.S. government would not willingly share with Germany.

Investigations indicated the probable cause of the explosion was a hydrogen leak in the aft part of the ship, complicated by thunderstorms and static discharge from the landing lines dragging on the ground below.

Nick Grand, a spokesman for the Naval Air Engineering Center, said final details have not been worked out on allowing the public onto the secured base to see the memorial.

Austin company sued for AIDS infection

MIAMI (AP) — Two drug companies and a blood plasma center must defend themselves in the first of three federal court trials brought by three Miami residents who claim they received the AIDS virus from infected plasma.

The suits name the defendants as Cutter Laboratories of Alameda County, Calif., Miles Laboratories Inc., the parent company of Cutter, and Austin Blood Components Inc. of Texas.

Jury selection in the first suit began Monday before U.S. District Judge James W. Kehoe.

According to the complaint, plaintiff Douglas Brett Segal took a Cutter product called Koate Factor VIII for treatment of hemophilia. The other two cases also focus on this drug.

"As a result of the intravenous infusion of contaminated Koate Factor VIII plasma product infected by the AIDS virus, the plaintiff contracted the AIDS virus," the suit charges.

Testing in late 1986 indicated presence of AIDS antibodies in Segal, the suit says, and the plaintiff later was diagnosed as suffering from pneumocystis pneumonia, an opportunistic infection caused by the AIDS virus.

The complaint says that on Oct. 31, 1983, Cutter issued an urgent drug recall for a batch of Koate, "which had been previously dispensed and consumed by plaintiff, on the basis that Cutter had discovered that certain of its products had been contaminated by a virus that caused acquired immunity deficiency syndrome — AIDS."

The Koate product manufactured by Cutter was produced in part from plasma obtained from a donor named Christopher Whitfield of Austin, Texas. Whitfield was a homosexual infected by AIDS, the suit says.

Whitfield died in Austin on Oct. 21, 1983, after being hospitalized in January 1983, according to the suit.

Whitfield had sold 48 pints of blood to the defendant blood center, even though another blood center rejected him as a donor "because of an abnormally high protein level in his urine," the suit says.

The suit asks for an unspecified amount of damages from defendants it says had "a duty to properly select suitable donors, screen for suspect donors, and to use 'such care in the examination of all donors so as to exclude donors at increased risk for transmitting AIDS.'"

Oilers one away from finals

DETROIT (AP) — The heat was rising in the Joe Louis Arena, but as far as Edmonton Oilers coach Glenn Sather was concerned, there was no sweat.

Jari Kurri had the puck. "I've seen him make that shot time and time again," Sather said after watching his all-star right wing score the game-winner to give the Oilers a 4-3 overtime victory over the Detroit Red Wings Monday night and a hammerlock on their Stanley Cup playoff series.

With the victory, the Oilers took a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Campbell Conference final. They can wrap it up with a victory in Game 5 at Edmonton on Wednesday night.

"The great players make shots like that," Sather said of Kurri's hard shot from the right circle at 11:02 of overtime that ended a brilliant hockey game played in steamy Joe Louis Arena where temperatures rose into the high 80s. "He has the quick release that all the great players have."

Esa Tikkanen, Kurri's linemate, had something to do with it, too. He helped set up Kurri with a terrific pass.

"It happened so quickly," Kurri said after scoring his second goal of the game and playoff-leading 12th overall. "I just let it go and I think it hit his (Detroit goaltender Glen Hanlon's) stick. Tikkanen picked it off and made a hell of a pass to me."

Earlier in the period, the Red Wings had come out flying and nearly won the game at the start of overtime.

But some great goaltending by Grant Fuhr helped blunt the Detroit attack.

"That first shift, (Bob) Probert and (Steve) Yzerman had great chances," Kurri said. "It was a big break for us."

Probert was a hero for the Red Wings, at any rate, almost singlehandedly bringing them back with power-play goals at 10:25 of the second period and 13:13 of the third.

DETROIT — Edmonton's Glenn Anderson (9) slides into Detroit goalie Glen Hanlon during Monday night's Campbell Conference final at Joe Louis Arena. The Oilers, the defending Stanley Cup champions, defeated the Red Wings 4-3 in overtime to take a 3-1 lead in the series.

Both were set up on almost identical shots in front of the net by Gerard Gallant. The second goal tied the game at 3-3 and triggered the sellout crowd of 19,873 into a wild eruption.

"He's a pretty sharp hockey player," Sather said of Probert. "You have to give the guy credit, the way he positions himself in front of the net all the time."

From start to finish, the game was a hot one in more ways than one.

Players complained about the heat that not only made temperatures rise, but also made some fog rise from the ice late in the game.

"A lot of our guys believe that if you think you're a tired team, you're a tired team and if you feel you're hot, you're hot," Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky said. "So all the talk on the bench was that we were fresh and cool."

That was a hard thing to do, according to Hanlon, who had to spend nearly four periods on the ice.

"It was very hot, making it hard to breathe," he said. "And there was fog, too." Sather accused Detroit management of turning off the air conditioning to slow down the ice and make the conditions difficult for his speedy team.

"How can you expect to play in a building like this with no air conditioning?" Sather asked. "I know Mike Ilitch (the Red Wings' owner) has enough money to afford air conditioning."

If the ice was slow, the game still seemed to have a furious pace to it following a relatively quiet first period.

That ended in a 1-1 tie as Craig Simpson scored for Edmonton and Adam Oates for Detroit.

Then Gretzky set up goals by Kurri and Glen Anderson in the first four minutes of the second period for a 3-1 lead.

Probert then scored midway through the second period before trying the game in the third.

That left it up to Kurri to take care of things as the Oilers won their seventh straight overtime game in playoff competition and their 11th game in 13 overall in this year's playoffs.

NHL trying to clean up big mess

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Jim Schoenfeld was confident he would be behind the New Jersey Devils bench for Game 5 of the Wales Conference finals once the NHL looked at all the evidence concerning his run-in last week with referee Don Koharski.

The NHL on Monday rescinded Schoenfeld's day-old suspension and invited the coach and Devils management to tell their side of the story at a meeting with the league's hierarchy scheduled for this afternoon in Boston.

That was something the league did not do this past weekend when it suspended Schoenfeld on Sunday, but the Devils responded by getting a restraining order allowing Schoenfeld to coach the team in Game 4.

Complicating the situation on Sunday was the refusal of regular on-ice officials to work the game and the subsequent use of amateur officials in the Devils' 3-1 victory that evened the best-of-seven series 2-2.

It all left the NHL very embarrassed, and Monday it moved to clean up the mess.

The NHL solved any future problem with the officials by agreeing with the union representing them to provide more security for officials.

That was the easy problem. The Schoenfeld situation is going to be tougher to resolve and may hinge on some videotapes the Devils bring to the meeting at the Ritz-Carlton hotel.

Larry Brooks, the Devils' vice president of communications and advertising, said the videotapes show conclusively that Schoenfeld did not push Koharski during their confrontation.

YMCA teams win state titles

MIDLAND — The Big Spring Sidewinders gymnastics team made state history over the weekend by becoming the first boys and girls teams, from the same city, to win state YMCA gymnastics titles.

The girls are coached by Russ McEwen and the boys are coached by Scott McDonald.

Big Spring was the smallest city represented at the state meet, according to McEwen.

Knicks guard Rookie of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Jackson, who set an NBA record for assists by a rookie and helped lead the New York Knicks to their first playoff appearance since 1984, was named the league's Rookie of the Year today.

Jackson received 77 of 80 votes from a national panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Greg Anderson of San Antonio, Winston Garland of Golden State and Kenny Smith of Sacramento each received one vote.

Dorsett hopeful of being Bronco

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett said he is encouraged by conversations about being traded to the Denver Broncos, even though his annuity contract is a problem.

"There are a lot of conversations going on right now between my people and the front office of the Denver Broncos," Dorsett said Monday.

Dorsett said he doesn't know how far along the negotiations are, but told KXAS-TV in Fort Worth, "it's very encouraging."

Dorsett said the major obstacle in going to another team is his annuity contract.

Dorsett's annuity, which will pay him $6.4 million between 1990 and 2014 began being funded Feb. 1, 1985 on a monthly basis for five years. The final $2.4 million of the annuity will be funded over the next two seasons.

Cowboys President Tex Schramm said Dorsett has made a proposal to resolve obligations to the Cowboys, who loaned him money when the former Heisman Trophy winner fell into tax and investment problems in 1986.

Unhappy with his role behind running back Herschel Walker, Dorsett has requested a trade.

as saying that Budd was "a pitiful sight."

Budd, 21, arrived on a flight from London about 2 a.m. (EDT), unescorted except for an airport attendant who helped her with her baggage. She told reporters she planned to stay with her mother in Bloemfontein, south of Johannesburg.

Budd said she would stay in South Africa "until I am healthy again."

Asked whether she intended ever to run again, she replied: "Not at the moment."

Concerning a possible return to Britain, her adopted country under whose flag she had hoped to compete in the Olympics in September, she said: "I can't decide about that now. I am very disappointed."

Reaction from the anti-apartheid lobby was quick and strong.

"Her return to South Africa now literally vindicates our position that she is a South African," Sam Ramsamy, head of the South African Non-Racial Olympic Committee, said in London. "It shows she merely used her British passport as a flag of convenience."

Budd said she had nothing to add to a statement released in London Monday night, in which she announced her withdrawal from international athletics to recover from "nervous exhaustion."

In the statement, released to the British news agency Press Association, Budd said she needed a "substantial period of recuperation along with the support of my family and friends to regain my health."

The athlete said she was not well enough to go on battling contentions that she had participated in a sports event in South Africa a year ago in violation of International Amateur Athletics Federation regulations. Budd has denied breaking any rules.

Budd took British citizenship four years ago on the basis of her grandfather being born in Britain. South Africa is banned from international athletics because of its apartheid policies.

The world athletics federation has demanded that Britain bar Budd from international track events for a year because of her appearance at a track meet in Brakpan, near Johannesburg, last June.

Black African nations had warned they could boycott the Seoul Olympics unless Budd was punished. And the IAAF threatened to act against the British board unless Budd was suspended, possibly suspending the board itself. That would have effectively eliminated Britain from international track meets, including the Olympics.

Jazz trying to figure out way to beat Lakers

By The Associated Press
Frank Layden either believes in reverse psychology or he believes in the Los Angeles Lakers more than he does his own team, the Utah Jazz.

The Lakers and Jazz play the second game of their Western Conference playoff series tonight at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif. That's where the defending NBA champions routed Utah 110-91 on Sunday, holding the Jazz to an embarrassing eight points in the first quarter.

"I think they're a far superior team to us," Layden said. "I don't think we've played a team all year that appeared to be so defensively attentive or coordinated."

But the Lakers might be without Michael Cooper, who bumped into a court-side table after colliding with Utah's Karl Malone and reinjured the ankle that kept him out of 20 regular-season games. X-rays showed there was no fracture.

That could even matter a bit. So might the Jazz having more time to prepare for Los Angeles — Game 1 was played less than two days after Utah eliminated Portland.

"It will be more equal in terms of rest and preparation," Lakers coach Pat Riley said Sunday. "Today we had an edge and we had to take advantage of it."

They did by completely shutting down Utah's attack. The Jazz's first period futility set an NBA playoff record. Seven other teams had been held to 12 in the opening 12 minutes, and the Jazz came close to the six-point all-time low for one period set by Atlanta against Boston in 1986.

The Hawks and Celtics will begin their Eastern Conference series Wednesday night. Tonight, Chicago is at Detroit and Dallas at Denver in the openers of their second-round series.

Jazz-Lakers
As usual, Layden treated his team's situation with humor. The coach was asked what he was thinking about during the disastrous first period, and replied:

"After I slit my wrists? My greatest fear ... sometimes I wake up in the middle of the night shaking because we can't score at all."

When the Jazz finally woke up, they got 29 points from Malone and 23 from Thurl Bailey. The absence of Cooper, who shared defensive duties on Malone with Kurt Rambis, could be significant tonight.

South African runner to drop out of track scene for while

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Zola Budd, pursued by anti-apartheid activists since taking British citizenship in 1984, quit world track and returned to her native South Africa today. She said she did not know if she would ever compete again.

The decision by Budd appeared to eliminate two shadows hanging over this summer's Olympics, one involving a threatened boycott and the other the possible barring of the entire British track team.

Budd said she was quitting because of "nervous exhaustion." A doctor who treated her over the weekend was quoted as saying that Budd was "a pitiful sight."

Budd, 21, arrived on a flight from London about 2 a.m. (EDT), unescorted except for an airport attendant who helped her with her baggage. She told reporters she planned to stay with her mother in Bloemfontein, south of Johannesburg.

Clemens goes on strike; Red Sox whitewash KC

By The Associated Press

Roger Clemens. "There's not much you can say about this one except two words," Kansas City Manager John Wathan said.

"Roger Clemens." Clemens, two-time American League Cy Young winner, allowed three hits, struck out 16, and retired 24 in a row from the first to ninth innings Monday night, pitching the Boston Red Sox to a 2-0 victory over the Royals.

The 16 strikeouts were his second-highest major league total, four shy of his record 20 in 1986 against Seattle. Twice, he struck out five in a row.

Elsewhere, Oakland won its 14th straight game, 3-1 over Detroit; Milwaukee won its 10th straight, 9-6 over Minnesota; California beat Cleveland, which has lost nine straight, 2-1, and Chicago blanked Baltimore 3-0.

Clemens allowed one-out singles to Kevin Seitzer and George Brett in the first inning, then was perfect until Willie Wilson beat out a high hopper over the mound with one out in the ninth.

Mark Gubicza allowed only seven hits in 8 1/3 innings for the Royals.

Boston's first run was unearned. Marty Barrett reached on an error by first baseman Steve Balboni, who dropped a throw, and scored on a triple by Mike Greenwell. Gene Garber relieved Gubicza with one out and the bases loaded in the ninth and, one out later, hit Barrett with a pitch to force in another run.

"I usually get stronger once the situation presents itself in the right way for me," Clemens said. "I feel really blessed every time I go out there. God gave me a lot of ability, and I'm taking advantage of it."

By the fifth inning, Clemens had fanned every batter in the Kansas City lineup except Brett, and he fanned Brett in the seventh. He struck out the side in the eighth on 10 pitches.

Athletics 3, Tigers 1

The Athletics stretched their winning streak to the longest in the major leagues since Kansas City won 16 in a row in 1977. Jose Canseco hit his ninth homer, and Bob Welch allowed four hits in eight innings for the A's, now 12-0 against AL East clubs.

Welch struck out five and walked one in beating Jack Morris. Morris had 11 strikeouts and allowed nine hits in going the distance.

Canseco's homer came in the bottom of the third inning after a Carney Lansford single and gave the A's a 2-1 lead. Canseco leads the majors in homers and is tied with Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees with 32 RBI.

Brewers 9, Twins 6

Rob Deer hit a three-run homer to cap Milwaukee's five-run eighth inning as the Brewers rallied over Minnesota. Odell Jones got the win despite allowing Kent Hrbek's two-run homer in the seventh that gave Minnesota a 6-4 lead.

Paul Molitor walked and Robin Yount singled to chase Juan Berenguer as the Brewers got their big eighth inning going. Jeff Reardon, who has failed in his last two save opportunities, came on, and B.J. Surhoff bunted for a single, loading the bases.

Greg Brock hit a two-run single to tie the score 6-6, and Deer followed with his sixth homer.

Angels 2, Indians 1

Dan Petry pitched seven scoreless innings and helped the Angels extend Cleveland's losing streak. Petry allowed eight hits in 7 2/3 innings, walking two and benefiting from three double plays.

Petry lost his shutout when Ron Kittle hit a pinch homer, and Bryan Harvey got the final four outs for his first major league save.

The Indians won 16 of their first 20 games and now have now lost nine of 10.

White Sox 3, Orioles 0

Jerry Reuss worked 7 1/3 innings for his 200th major league victory, becoming only the second major league pitcher to reach that plateau without ever winning 20 games in a season. The other was Milt Pappas, who ended his 17-year major league career with 209 victories.

Dan Pasqua drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and a home run for Chicago as the 38-year-old Reuss became the 86th pitcher to reach the 200-victory plateau.

Reuss gave up just four hits, and Bobby Thigpen pitched 1 2/3 innings of scoreless relief.

Reds hurler likes pitching against Phillies

By The Associated Press

As far as the Philadelphia Phillies are concerned, Danny Jackson is a two-timer.

The Phillies have faced Jackson twice in the last week and he has beaten them twice with two-hitters each time.

Jackson did it to the Phillies again Monday night in Cincinnati's 2-0 victory at Veterans Stadium.

National League

In his last four starts, Jackson has allowed two earned runs and his ERA is 2.04. He beat the Phillies 3-1 on a two-hitter at Cincinnati on May 4. Philadelphia batters are now 4-for-54 against him, an .073 average.

"I didn't have a real good slider and I didn't throw many changeups," Jackson said. "I was using mostly fastballs inside. If you throw outside, you're messing with the meat part of the bat."

The only hits off Jackson were Chris James' single leading off the third inning and Mike Young's pinch double starting the ninth. Jackson, 5-1, struck out five and walked three.

"He could have the same stuff the next time we face him and we could hit him," Philadelphia third baseman Mike Schmidt had said. "It's good stuff, but it's all hitable."

It was Jackson's second shutout of the season and the eighth of his career.

"I didn't feel as good tonight as I did in Cincinnati," Jackson said.

Jackson was acquired from Kansas City last November with infielder Angel Salazar for pitcher Ted Power and shortstop Kurt Stillwell.

Elsewhere in the National League it was Atlanta 9, Montreal 8; Houston 6, New York 2; St. Louis 7, San Diego 1; and San Francisco 8, Pittsburgh 6. Los Angeles at Chicago was postponed by rain. Philadelphia starter David Palmer, 0-2, allowed eight hits and struck out nine in eight-plus innings.

Barry Larkin opened the Cincinnati sixth with a walk and advanced to third on a single by Chris Sabo. Kal Daniels then singled to right to score Larkin.

With one out in the eighth, Sabo singled and one out later, Eric Davis hit an infield single. Paul O'Neill then scored Sabo from second base with a single.

Braves 9, Expos 8

Gerald Perry and Ron Gant had two-run doubles in a six-run third inning and Atlanta held on to beat visiting Montreal.

Ken Griffey gave the Braves the lead in the second inning when he hit his first homer off starter Dennis Martinez.

Rick Mahler, 1-4, ended a four-game losing streak and got his first victory since beating the Expos 7-4 last Sept. 4.

The Expos scored four runs each in the fifth and eighth innings, but Bruce Sutter came on to get his second save.

Astros 6, Mets 2

Danny Darwin atoned for his poor outing at New York last week by pitching a seven-hitter as Houston beat the Mets at the Astrodome.

Darwin, 2-2, struck out seven en route to his first complete game, retiring 14 of the last 15 batters. Darwin lost to the Mets 8-0 on May 4.

The Astros took a 3-2 lead in the fourth when Glenn Davis reached on an error by shortstop Kevin Elster, moved to second on Kevin Bass' single, and scored on a single by Rafael Ramirez.

Houston made it 5-2 in the fifth on RBI singles by Bill Doran and Bass.

Cardinals 7, Padres 1

Rookie Luis Alicea hit a two-run single to cap a six-run third inning as St. Louis beat visiting San Diego.

Left-hander Larry McWilliams allowed six hits in 6 2/3 innings and improved to 2-0.

McWilliams doubled off starter Ed Whitson, 2-2, to spark an inning that matched St. Louis' biggest of the season. Vince Coleman doubled McWilliams home, took third on Ozzie Smith's infield hit, and Tom Brunansky's one-out double made it 2-0. The Cards added two more runs on Bob Horner's run-scoring grounder and Terry Pendleton's RBI double. Alicea made it 6-0 with his two-run single.

Giants 8, Pirates 6

Will Clark's second double of the game drove in Robby Thompson with the tie-breaking run and Jeffrey Leonard followed with a two-run homer in a four-run eighth inning as San Francisco beat Pittsburgh at Three Rivers Stadium.

Kevin Mitchell went 4-for-5 with a homer, two doubles and three RBI as the Giants blew a 4-1 lead, then rallied to win against former Giant reliever Jeff Robinson, 2-1.

Mears records fastest practice time

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Mears walked trackside from Gasoline Alley, climbed into a new Penske race car and within five or six laps was above 213 mph. And that was in the team's backup car.

"It had a little push with the wind, and if it hadn't been windy it might have had more speed," Mears said Monday after pushing the PC17 to a quick lap of 213.118 mph, the fastest by any driver so far in three days of practice for the May 29 Indianapolis 500.

The first of four days of qualifications is scheduled for Saturday, when the pole position will be decided.

Rain early on Monday gave way to partly sunny skies, but winds gusting to 46 mph greeted Mears and the two dozen other drivers who practiced. By mid-afternoon, the wind was steady at about 30 mph.

"You get in the corner and it wouldn't turn. But because of the wind, you just can't tell too much. You just never know," Mears said. "The car is plenty comfortable as bad as the conditions were, but under the circumstances it's very tough to fine-tune it."

The two-time Indy winner, who set one- and four-lap Speedway records in qualifications two years ago, was testing the backup Chevy-powered Penske that he will share with his teammates, defending champion Al Unser and 1985 winner Danny Sullivan.

The car had never turned a wheel before Mears climbed in it Monday afternoon. On Sunday, driving his own Penske for the first time, Mears was up to about 210 mph within three laps.

His circuit at 213 came shortly after Mario Andretti raised the top speed of the week to 212.665, one mile per hour faster than Dick Simon's top lap during Saturday's opening day of practice.

The speed wars haven't ended.

Al Unser Jr. improved his top lap to 211.317. Derek Daly of Ireland raised his best to 208.478. Scott Brayton climbed to 207.182, and Al Unser improved to 206.896.

Through three days of practice, 22 drivers had topped 200 mph, including rookies John Andretti, Mario's nephew, and Bill Vukovich III, whose grandfather won Indy in 1953 and 1954.

"It's just that things are getting a lot more refined. That's the biggest thing," said Mears, who was the fastest qualifier in the season opener at Phoenix last month and qualified third behind Sullivan and Andretti — at Long Beach.

INDIANAPOLIS — Race driver Rick Mears of Bakersfield, Calif., talks with car owner Roger Penske after Mears turned in the fastest lap of the month with an average speed of 213.118 miles per hour.

"You've got a certain set of parameters, as far as the rules go, and they've been pretty stable the past few years. So everybody's explored all areas of those parameters, and they've found what areas work best so they're just refining those areas now," Mears said of the car designers' constant tinkering to gain additional speed.

"It's becoming a fine line now as far as tuning, trying to get an advantage," Mears said, "just to make a big enough gain to show a half-percent here, three-quarters of a percent there, 1 percent there."

Little League Roundup

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Ponys 17, Lions 1

The Ponys ran their record to 10-0 by taking an easy win over the Lions Monday. The game was called after four innings of play.

The Ponys were paced by a 16-hit attack, including a three-run homer by Wes Hughes. Jason Henderson pitched the first two innings and picked up the win for the Ponys. Heath Gillespie and Hughes pitched on inning each.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Royals 22, Indians 8

Monday night the Royals got a 10-strikeout performance from Chris Morgan, and defeated the Indians 22-8. Edward Aguillar took the loss for the Indians.

Leading hitter for the Royals was Morgan, who went five-for-five at the plate. Craig Phillips added a homer and double, and Nakee Laws hit a homer. Clifford Woods tripled, and Jason O'Brien, Jessie Miers and Nicolas Arguello all doubled.

David Franco paced the Indians with a homer. Hitting doubles were: Gabriel Aguillar, Mario Cavazos and Allan Deal. The Royals are now 3-4 for the season.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Colts 14, Hawks 0

Greg Biddison and Trey Terrazass combined for a three-hit shutout as the Colts blanked the Hawks 14-0.

Biddison pitched five innings and Terrazass pitched the final inning. The duo combined for nine strike outs and only two walks. Michael Sizenbach took the loss for the Hawks.

Brandon Hamblin led the 16-hit Colt attack with a four-for-four performance and five RBI's. Michael Jones also tripled for the Colts.

Spurs may be sold to Boston group

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio Spurs officials are continuing their negotiations to sell the NBA franchise to a group headed by a Boston businessman and say an announcement is possible next week.

Spurs Chairman Angelo Drossos arrived at San Antonio International Airport Monday night following a weekend meeting in Boston where he met with potential buyer Bertram M. Lee, the San Antonio Express-News and San Antonio Light reported Tuesday. Drossos, however, declined comment on the negotiations.

Drossos was accompanied to Boston by Gary Woods, a financial adviser to Spurs President B.J. "Red" McCombs and Dan Webster, a team attorney.

Lee is heading a Boston-based group called LBK Sports Inc., which has offered $50 million to buy the Spurs.

tion on Friday night. "If and when everything is taken into consideration, I feel the charges of physical contact will be put to rest because there was none," Schoenfeld said Monday. "All this was a heated verbal exchange between a coach and an official."

There is no doubt that Schoenfeld verbally abused Koharski after the Devils' 6-1 loss. He waited for the official to leave the ice and more than a few people heard him say to the referee "have another doughnut, you fat pig."

Koharski then walked away from Schoenfeld down a hail and later slipped. He accused Schoenfeld of rushing him, but the Devils say their coach was at least two people removed from the official when that happened.

Schoenfeld was scheduled to fly with the Devils to Boston on Monday, but he got off the team bus after the suspension was rescinded and returned to the Devils' offices to prepare for the hearing.

Brooks said the Devils will pursue all avenues to keep Schoenfeld behind the bench. However, he would not say if the club planned further legal action if the league suspended Schoenfeld for tonight's game. Brooks emphasized, however, that the Devils have made no contingency plans to have anyone other than Schoenfeld coach Tuesday night.

The team, in the meantime, traveled to Boston and the players remained solidly behind their coach.

"It can be a distraction, but the seriousness of the Stanley Cup semifinals make it easy to overcome," defenseman Jack O'Callahan said. "A lot of people can identify with this team. We just want justice. We just want to be heard."

Gary Meagher, the NHL's director of media relations, said talks that led to the rescinding of Schoenfeld's suspension and the granting of the formal hearing were made as a result of conference calls between Brian O'Neill, the league's executive vice-president who remained in Montreal, general counsel Gil Stein in New York and President John Ziegler, whose whereabouts were not disclosed.

"Mr. Ziegler was definitely involved in the discussions," Meagher said.

A spokesman at the NHL's New York office also refused to give Ziegler's whereabouts, but added that the president was scheduled to attend the hearing in Boston.

Equally embarrassing for the league was the fact that Ziegler could not be located on Sunday night.

"I don't know where Mr. Ziegler was last night," Meagher said on Monday.

At another meeting, the NHL came to peace with its officials.

"The association has been assured by the NHL that security at game venues will be improved where necessary," Jim Beatty, a lawyer for the NHL Officials' Association, said in a statement. "The association looks forward to continuing to work with the NHL to protect and enhance the image and integrity of the game of hockey." Beatty and referees Dave Newell and Andy vanHellemond represented the officials' union at the meeting with Jim Gregory, the NHL's vice president of hockey operation, and John McCauley, the league's director of officiating.

In a short written statement, the NHL said simply that the league was satisfied with the discussions with the officials' association and has "agreed with the officials to put (Sunday's) incident behind them."

In Toronto, a spokesman for the NHL Officials' Association said the officials refused to work Sunday's game because they did not believe there was adequate security at the Byrne Meadowlands Arena with Schoenfeld present.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

WEDNESDAY,
MAY 11, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Let your independent spirit show! Only you can decide what is best for you in your quest for success. Serious matters, including financial planning, require your full attention. Others are more materialistic and may not understand when you put family needs first. Make a big contribution to a foundation or political cause. You will get great satisfaction from being a real part of things. Spontaneous celebrations are best in December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: pitcher Walt Terrell, dancer Martha Graham, satirist Mort Sahl, comedian Phil Silvers, songwriter Irving Berlin, artist Salvador Dali, fashion designer Valentino.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Face relationship problems squarely. New technology will help your career, not threaten it. Be open-minded. Listen to well-intentioned advice. Take a youngster under your wing and share specialized knowledge.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Competitors have more questions than usual. You can stall them by giving only partial answers. Check car before taking a long trip. Romance gets a welcome boost.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Not a particularly good day to join an organization or try to get something new off the ground. Listen carefully before making any big changes. Mate lends support at the right moment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Put your dreams aside and learn what you need to know about business. Use the telephone to sell special services. A good book may be the best companion this evening. Postpone romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may find yourself painted into a corner. Others will rescue you because they trust your judgment. You constantly prove your worth to your colleagues and the boss. Ask for that raise!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Exercise more discretion and you will spare yourself embarrassment. You decide to break a bad habit. Trying to keep up with the Joneses can both deplete your pocketbook and lower your self-esteem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Set priorities and refuse to let minor interruptions throw you off stride. An older relative is overly demanding. Offer to help outside office hours. A special friendship leads to happy romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Question an offer that seems too good to be true. Accept rewards and admiration graciously, but remember that inner satisfaction means more than gold plaques or public recognition. You need to simplify your lifestyle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial transactions should go well. Team effort helps improve the bottom line. A stranger enters the picture. Romance is in the air.

You can make a huge difference in a loved one's life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Others share your need for affection and appreciation. Thank someone who has done you favors in the past. Make amends to a loved one you may have neglected for your work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Choices made now will help you maintain equilibrium in your life. Showcase your talents to impress an influential person. Deal directly with high-level authorities. You get better results than an intermediary.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Remain steadfast; higher-ups are impressed by your integrity. Those with generous motives will be rewarded. A teen-ager gets great news involving summer employment. Romance takes on more serious overtones.
