Drought — moderate food jumps likely

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — The drought is bearing down hard on farmers, but Agriculture Department experts say consumers won't feel much of the pressure as they do their grocery shopping this year.

"If the drought continues, food prices will rise, but the increases are likely to be moderate," a senior USDA economist said Tuesday. "The effects of such higher food prices on the overall rate of inflation would be negligible."

Although the forecast will be revised next month, a preliminary analysis shows that 1988 food

"The immediate problem is not one of food shortages or food price inflation . . . but rather the problem is one of responding in a compassionate way to the losses faced by American farmers."

— Assistant Secretary for Economics Ewen M. Wilson

prices may rise by an average of 3 percent to 5 percent, the report said. Until the drought, USDA economists predicted the increase would be in the range of 2 percent to 4 percent, compared with a 4.1 percent gain in 1987.

The report was prepared by Assistant Secretary for Economics Ewen M. Wilson, who acknowledged that "much of the nation's crop land has been gripped by a searing drought which threatens to imperil this summer's crop harvests."

No forecast was issued for 1989; predictions for the following year traditionally are not released by USDA until late November or December.

But many economists believe some drought-related price increases will not appear until next year, particularly in meat prices.

Large livestock sales by drought-plagued farmers this summer and fall could create an initial market glut but could also lead to shorter supplies and higher prices later.

Wilson said the prospect of reduced production has driven up the farm prices of crops and that shriveled forage supplies already have forced many producers to reduce their livestock inventories.

As a result, there has been apprehension over the possibilities of food price increases and even renewed inflation, Wilson said.

"We will see some price run-ups in certain foods," he said. "For example, pasta products made from durum wheat and oats-based cereals, but overall food price inflation in 1988 will be held to moderate levels."

Wilson added: "The upward adjustment of our food price estimate will have a negligible impact on the overall rate of inflation in the United States."

It is still too early in the crop production cycle to assess the full extent of drought damage, he said. However, the impact on 1988 food prices "will be modest" for a number of reasons, including:

— Accelerated marketing of livestock will add to already record supplies of meat and poultry.

— Diverse production areas and irrigation mean that fruit and vegetable prices will be largely unaffected, even though production in some of the Great Lake states will be down.

Rodeo!

$1,000 bucks not a simple night's work

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

How badly do you want to earn a thousand bucks? Hundreds of folks — most under the mistaken impression they can earn thousands of dollars for a few hours' work — contacted Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo officials in recent days.

They apparently have been lured by radio broadcasts and media reports that an industrious person could earn $1,000 a night in Big Spring this week by being a rodeo clown.

There are, however, a few differences between their expectations and reality: For one, the position was not for a clown, but for a bullfighter; and the pay is not $1,000 a night, but $1,000 for three nights — if they win the bullfighting competition.

And there is one more catch to the hopefuls' dream of big money — a rather large, four-legged catch.

Instead of dressing in a funny suit and trying to make people laugh, contestants will dress funny and try to avoid being maimed by surly bulls — selected specifically for that trait.

Three professional bullfighters were slated to compete in the rodeo that opens today at 8:30 p.m. Although two had confirmed earlier this week, a third — Gary Heddeman — was forced to withdraw because of injuries, local rodeo clown Quail Dobbs noted.

Dobbs said a replacement for Heddeman was identified, but he was also forced to withdraw after suffering broken ribs in an encounter with a bull.

The confusion — and the ensuing deluge of telephone calls — began innocently enough with an off-hand remark, Dobbs' wife said.

"What was a passing remark got blown all out of hand," Judy Dobbs said. "(Mr. Dobbs) said something to the extent that a position was open, but we never expected anything like this."

Radio commentator Paul Harvey made note of the situation during his Tuesday broadcast, and said people could earn $1,000 a night by being a rodeo clown in Big Spring this week.

A spokesman for radio station WLS in Chicago — where Harvey's broadcasts normally originate — said he is out of town this week, and could not be reached for comment.

People from as far as Michigan and California have called in response to Dobbs' remarks. Although some of the responses were serious inquiries from professional rodeo clowns, several were from persons with misguided notions about the position, his wife said.

"They thought it was for being a clown — a funny, ha-ha clown," Mrs. Dobbs said. "They didn't know

Miss June Teen

Kimberly McCintuh, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Essie Randle, Big Spring, and Jim McCintuh, Lyons, Kan., was crowned Miss June Teen Texas 1988-89 Saturday in Midland. She also was voted Miss Congeniality by her three competitors. Although Kimberly is a veteran competitor — she was crowned Miss Junior Ebony 1986-87 in Waco, and hopes to be Miss Universe — her ambition is a future in modeling. "I want to be a professional model, that's why I enter these pageants," Kimberly, who moved to Big Spring three months ago from Marlin, said she was proud to represent Big Spring at Saturday's event. She received a $1,000 cash scholarship for her efforts and will have the opportunity to model in fashion shows, make public appearances and appear in commercials, she said.

Wright's possible wrongs stirring little interest here

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Few Big Spring residents are apparently aware — let alone concerned — about the upcoming ethics investigation of U.S. House Speaker Jim Wright, an informal survey Tuesday revealed.

The ethics problems of Wright, the Fort Worth Democrat who serves as speaker, have commanded newspaper headlines and been featured on television and radio broadcasts in recent weeks.

Of the 29 people questioned Tuesday afternoon about the alleged ethics violations, only six said they were aware members of the House Ethics Committee announced June 10 they will conduct a preliminary investigation of Wright.

Many of those questioned said they were unaware of the probe and several even said they had never heard of Wright.

He was elected to Congress in 1955. Sue Read, Box 1043, was frank about what Wright should do.

"He should resign immediately — that's all you need to put down," she said.

Willie Anderson, Box 907, expressed mixed feelings.

"That's like the pot calling the kettle black," she said of the ethics probe.

On the other hand, Anderson said, "Sometimes where there's smoke, there's fire."

Anderson said she believes Wright has had a positive influence on Texas, especially for residents of the Fort Worth-Dallas area, but the investigation could be the result of partisan politics and the speaker should not resign at the current time.

Although Ocey Mason, 1011 Howell Lane, admitted he wasn't familiar with the specifics of the ethics investigation, he was opposed to Wright if he was a "trilateral."

DOROTHY RITZ

COLLEEN SLAUGHTER

Mason said a trilateral is "one of the 500 richest people in the world trying to take over the world."

"I'm against him if he's like (Ronald) Reagan, (George) Bush or the Rockefeller," he said.

Dorothy Ritz, Box 2684, a Republican, said she was surprised that an investigation of Wright would be conducted.

"I can't believe Jim Wright has done anything wrong," she said.

Until the investigation is completed and the allegations are substantiated Wright should not resign, Ritz said.

Colleen Slaughter, Box 1650, a retired school teacher and Republican, said the ethics probe is "worthwhile," if television and newspaper accounts are accurate.

She believes that Wright has been a positive force for Texas.

"Of course I believe he's been good for Texas. He's the speaker of the house and he has a lot of power," said Slaughter.

Although she said, "I'm no fan of Jim Wright," Slaughter is a believer in the "American way" and doesn't feel he should resign.

"I believe strongly that you're innocent until proven guilty," he said.

Charges by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Common Cause, a non-profit group that monitors government ethics allege Wright:

- Lobbied on behalf of oil interests in a case in which he had a financial stake.
- Received unusually high royalties for a book he wrote that was published in 1985 by a longtime associate and contractor.
- Used a Capitol Hill staffer and office funds to help draft a book.
- Used a Fort Worth condominium by a family of a business partner without having to pay.

Third state justice resigning from court

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Texas Supreme Court Justice James Wallace says he is quitting to look for a better-paying job.

Justices are paid $79,000 a year.

"I'm tired of being the lowest paid lawyer in the courtroom," Wallace said Tuesday.

He said he will resign Sept. 1, a move that would put the seat on the November ballot and allow Democratic and Republican officials to pick candidates. Republican Gov. Bill Clements will appoint an interim justice to serve until the November election results are certified.

Wallace, a 60-year-old Democrat, will become the third justice to quit the high court in less than a year.

He was elected to the high court in 1980 and re-elected in 1986. His current term ends in 1993. He said he will practice law in Austin or Houston.

Chief Justice John L. Hill and Justice Robert Campbell, both

Democrats, submitted their resignations late last year. Hill quit to devote time to his push for appointed, instead of elected, state judges. Campbell quit to campaign in favor of keeping the elected system.

Wallace said "quite a few people," including attorneys in private practice, encouraged him to complete his term.

"I offered to trade places with them. They have not taken me up on it," he said.

Asked how much money he thought he could make in private practice, Wallace said, "A whole lot more. . . . Talk to me 12 months from now."

The decision will upset Texas Democratic officials. After the Hill and Campbell resignations, and Mack Wallace's resignation from the Railroad Commission, the State Democratic Executive Committee approved a resolution calling on all Democratic officeholders to keep their jobs in order to prevent Clements from appointing Republicans.

RONALD REAGAN

Summit was not complete Reagan success

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO — America's major allies had effusive words of praise for Ronald Reagan in public, but in private some weren't as kind, handing the president a series of defeats at his eighth and final economic summit.

The bickering got so intense on Tuesday, the last day, that the final negotiating session ran an hour longer than scheduled as the world leaders tried to settle their differences.

The 14th annual economic summit between the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada was not a total disaster for Reagan.

The allies did voice approval for his favorite free-market economic themes and the economic coordination process the United States has championed since the 1986 Tokyo summit.

But in the area of farm subsidies, Third World debt, aid to the Philippines and drug trafficking, the United States either suffered defeats or had to accept less than it wanted, reflecting perhaps the waning influence of a lame-duck president with only seven months left in office.

Little of this was visible on the surface. The leaders used the occasion of the public reading of the final communique to salute Reagan on his last foray into economic summitry.

"His leadership has been strong, his accomplishments substantial and his place in history secure," Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said on behalf of the other world leaders. "We shall all miss his warmth and wisdom."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, a philosophical soulmate of Reagan's, called the president "marvelous," even though Mrs. Thatcher was one of the leaders who pushed Reagan to relent on his insistence for the complete phase-out of all agricultural subsidies.

On that issue, the United States was forced to settle for vague language in which the countries promised to seek ways to reduce subsidies, instead of the U.S. goal of eliminating them.

French President Francois Mitterrand, a Socialist who has often clashed with Reagan, was even more of a problem for the president during the three-day meeting.

Mitterrand also blocked Reagan's effort to single out the Philippines for multilateral foreign aid.

Secretary guilty of capital murder

AMARILLO (AP) — Tearful jurors rejected a Houston secretary's claim that she was "framed" and convicted her of capital murder for plotting the death of her boss' wife.

Jane Ada Callaway, 36, was convicted Tuesday on a charge of hiring a man to shoot Jury Saragusa, 39. The victim was the wife of Michael Saragusa, a prominent, wealthy Houston liquor distributor.

Jurors were to return to court today to begin hearing evidence on punishment for Ms. Callaway. She faces either death by injection or a life prison term, the only options available under a capital murder conviction.

Prosecutors alleged that Ms. Callaway, who had a brief affair with Saragusa, wanted Saragusa's wife killed because she envied her wealth and position.

"Jane Callaway set out to be a fancy dresser, a Rolex watch wearer, where Judy Saragusa was not that way," prosecutor Chuck Rosenthal said in closing arguments Monday. "She tried to show that she would be a type of person more fitting to Michael Saragusa and his financial status."

The verdict in State District Judge Michael McSpadden's court came Tuesday after jurors had deliberated about 17 hours. The case was moved from Houston to Amarillo on a change of venue because of extensive pre-trial news coverage.

BOSTON — Martin Gaffney, 39, holds a photo of his late wife, who died, he says, as a result of an AIDS-tainted transfusion. He seeks federal redress.

AIDS victim seeks $55 million

BOSTON (AP) — A Marine officer infected with the AIDS virus has sued the federal government for $55 million, alleging that Navy doctors gave his wife an AIDS-tainted blood transfusion that eventually killed her and their son.

Martin Gaffney, 39, filed the negligence lawsuit Tuesday in U.S. District Court, claiming the Navy mishandled his wife's pregnancy by causing their baby to be stillborn, then giving her a transfusion that transmitted the deadly virus to him, his wife and a son born later.

"I've asked for an apology," said Gaffney, a chief warrant officer in the Marine Corps. "Even the Soviet Union has apologized for killing an American soldier. But my own government won't apologize for being responsible for the deaths of my wife and son even though I serve them."

Gaffney said he filed the lawsuit because he wants to provide for his 4-year-old daughter, Maureen. She is the only member of the family to escape infection and will likely become an orphan, Gaffney said.

He said he also decided to sue after the Navy responded with an "insulting" settlement offer of less than $1 million to a complaint he had filed internally.

"It's been a very long, frustrating time waiting for the Navy to act," Gaffney said in an interview Tuesday. "I realized I wasted six months of my life waiting for the Navy to act."

Gaffney's wife, Mutsuko, 38, a Japanese national, died in May 1987. The couple's 13-month-old son, John, died in 1986. Gaffney lives with his daughter on a Navy base in South Weymouth, about 15 miles south of Boston.

Though Gaffney's health is still good, he said he has made provisions for his daughter to live with his brother when he dies.

The Gaffneys were married in 1981, three years after meeting in Okinawa, and their first child was due that August.

The lawsuit claims Mrs. Gaffney went into the Navy Regional Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., one Saturday certain she was about to give birth and a nurse sent her home.

Two days later, doctors discovered the baby had died. During a subsequent Caesarean section, Mrs. Gaffney was given two units of blood, one of which was contaminated with the AIDS virus, the lawsuit says.

Navy officials traced the two donors, and one tested negative for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, Gaffney said. The other refused to be tested and it was learned he had been discharged from the Navy for homosexual activity, Gaffney said.

Gaffney's claimed Navy officials have lied to him on several occasions and never apologized to him for what has happened to his family.

Navy spokesman Lt. Ken Ross declined to comment on the lawsuit or Gaffney's charges of bad treatment.

Houston woman injured in acid attack

HOUSTON (AP) — An apartment manager was in critical condition today after a man walked into her office and tossed a bucket of sulfuric acid on her, authorities said.

Pat Schoales, 38, was in her office at the Shibui Apartments early Tuesday when the man came in and threw the bucket of acid at her.

She was burned over 80 percent of her body. She had burns on her face, arms, legs, chest and abdomen, Hermann Hospital officials said. face, arms, legs, chest and abdomen.

She also ingested some of the acid, which damaged her left eye, a hospital spokesman said.

Capt. Andy Brown, a member of the Houston Fire Department hazardous materials team, said the office carpet had to be moved because the acid had eaten through it.

"It was a very powerful substance," Brown said. "It ate through all of the papers on her desk and her glasses."

Railey's wife to be admitted to hospital

DALLAS (AP) — Officials of a Dallas hospital say they will admit Margaret "Peggy" Railey, a former Methodist minister's wife who was the victim of a near-fatal choking attack.

Mrs. Railey, the wife of Walker Railey, will be admitted to Baylor University Medical Center today, said spokesman Steve Habgood.

"Late this afternoon, we decided to admit her to the Baylor Institute for Rehabilitation," he said.

Railey, former senior pastor at the First United Methodist Church in Dallas, said he found his wife on the garage floor of their home on the night of April 21, 1987.

Not long after the attack, Railey attempted suicide. Later, he surrendered his ministerial credentials and moved to San Francisco with a Dallas psychologist.

College board approves budget, handbook changes

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

The Howard County Junior College District board of trustees approved the district's preliminary budget for 1988-89 and authorized employee handbook changes — which include a no smoking policy — when they met Tuesday.

The board also approved bids for the college yearbook and a vehicle, named a district auditor and approved the hiring of 11 employees during the 12:30 p.m. meeting in the Dora Roberts Student Union Building board room.

The total budget approved for Howard County Junior College for the 1988-89 school year is $6,562,362. The total budget approved for Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf is $1,734,173. The SWCID budget is funded entirely by the state, said Howard College President Bob Riley. About $125,000 left over from last year's Howard College budget is included in the 1988-89 budget, said board member Howard Davis.

Faculty pay raises of 4 to 6 percent for all employees of the district are included in the budget, Riley said.

The approved employee handbook changes include:

- A no smoking policy that will be recommended for this fall and made mandatory beginning January 1989. The policy will read: "Smoking or other use of tobacco products is prohibited in all Howard County Junior College District facilities and vehicles."

- Requirements for new academic rank designations for Howard College faculty. Ranks of assistant professor, associate professor, professor and professor emeritus were added to the handbook. Previously, the rank of instructor was the only faculty rank designation at the college.
- Deletion of a page in the salary section of the handbook allowing for additional salary for instructors trained in industrial/technical fields where advanced degrees are not available. According to a memo on the handbook changes, the college has not had any trouble offering industrial/technical personnel competitive salaries and few instructors met the additional salary requirements.

- A policy requiring all professional staff and faculty at SWCID to pass the Professional Sign Language Evaluation Board (SLEB) prior to the sixth semester of employment with the district.

The bids accepted by the board were a bid for $11,697 by Bob Brock Ford for a car to be included in the college's motor pool, and a bid of $6,112.60 by Josten's for the printing of the college yearbook.

The board named Lee Reynolds Welch and Co. as district auditor, and approved the hiring of the following personnel:

- Dr. Andrew Hicks as vice-president for vocational/technical education at Howard College.
- Dusty Ray Johnson as dean of students at Howard College.

- Amy Ragan as director of student activities at Howard College.
- Jeffrey Richards as a counselor at SWCID.
- Anna Rizzo as licensed vocational nursing instructor at the Del Rio campus.
- Eddie McCarter as assistant basketball coach at Howard College.
- Tim Whittington as developmental instruction coordinator at Howard College.
- Melinda Anderson as art instructor at Howard College.
- Nancy Strickland as business instructor at the San Angelo campus.
- Frank Clark as computer science instructor at the San Angelo campus.
- James Moore as legal assistant instructor at the San Angelo campus.

Police said the truck ran into a line of slow-moving cars. At least seven other persons were injured, none seriously. Stevens was reported in stable condition.

L.A. lawyer breaks N.Y. sex barrier

NEW YORK (AP) — For a moment, only Henny Youngman stood between Gloria Allred and her destiny. But Ms. Allred brushed past the irate comedian and stepped into the masculine confines of the Friar's Club, becoming the first woman admitted for lunch there in its 84 years.

"I'm literally walking on air," Ms. Allred, a Los Angeles lawyer, said after a lunch of poached salmon and zucchini.

Ms. Allred, who specializes in sex discrimination law, took a mid-night flight to New York on Monday night after hearing that the U.S. Supreme Court had upheld a New York City law that bans sex discrimination in private clubs.

She has been a member of the Beverly Hills Friar's Club since May 1987, but her previous attempts to gain entry to the New York club, which has a reciprocal agreement with its California offshoot, have been rebuffed.

Until Tuesday, the New York club's policy was to admit women only after 4 p.m. or for Saturday lunch.

Ms. Allred was readily admitted this time, although not without vocal objections from some members, including Youngman.

"I don't think they ought to butt in on our business," the comedian said. "If we want privacy, we ought to have privacy. There's a million clubs in New York. Why do they want to get in? We have fun here."

When Ms. Allred tried to argue, Youngman brushed her off, saying, "I don't know who you are."

She finally slipped past him and into the club, saying, "Nice to have met you, sir. You're entitled to be wrong."

"Some people bring happiness wherever they go; she brings happiness whenever she goes," Youngman grumbled.

Once inside, she said she was treated with hospitality by the executive director, Jean Pierre Trebot, and other members.

"It went very well," she said after dining with Trebot. "I enjoyed the lunch very much."

The decision to admit Ms. Allred was based on the U.S. Supreme Court ruling, Trebot said. The Friar's Board of Governors plans to vote soon on whether to admit women as members. "We expect it will be affirmative," he said.

The Friar's Club, founded in 1904, has 1,360 members in New York, two-thirds of whom are active in the performing arts.

Female Vietnam memorial prompts controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Memo to politicians: Looking for an election-year issue as surefire as the flag, baseball or Mom's apple pie? Maybe a statue honoring American women? Even better, women veterans of Vietnam?

Well, think again.

Although the Senate overwhelmingly approved the idea last week, 96-1, proposed legislation to add a woman's statue to the national Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington ran into all sorts of trouble in the House on Tuesday.

Members of the House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee on libraries and memorials witnessed a genteel clash between actress Loretta Swit, who favored the statue, and Maya Lin, the softspoken designer of the Vietnam memorial, who said it would be a mistake.

The panel also cited reports of allegedly extravagant spending and mismanagement by former officers of the statue's Minneapolis-based sponsoring group, a possible conflict of interest by the sculptor of another statue at the Vietnam memorial and political pressure from former Interior Secretary James Watt.

Moreover, the Commission on Fine Arts reaffirmed its vote last October opposing the plan for an eight-foot bronze sculpture of an Army nurse in battle fatigues at the 2.2-acre Vietnam memorial site on the Mall near the Lincoln Memorial.

The independent agency's approval is required before any monument can be built on federal land in Washington, which bothered Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn.

"If we're just going to serve it up to them to veto again, why bother?" Frenzel asked. "I don't want to pass a bill and find out we're firing a blank."

Miss Swit, who starred on the popular television series "M.A.S.H." as an Army nurse, made an emotional appeal for approval of the monument. She called it a belated tribute to the 10,000 American women who served in Vietnam, now that a sculpture of three combat-weary infantrymen has been placed at the memorial.

She was backed by several members of Congress and major veterans' organizations against Ms. Lin, the American Institute of Architects and others who protested that yet another statue on the site would distract from and damage the artistic integrity of its centerpiece — the black granite wall bearing the names of 58,156 Vietnam War dead, including eight female nurses.

Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., chief sponsor of the House bill, expressed concern over allegations that led to a high-level shakeup in the Vietnam Women's Memorial Project Inc., the private sponsors of the woman's statue.

Chairwoman Donna-Marie Boulay was replaced after two board members filed a lawsuit alleging that the organization spent unreasonable amounts for fund raising and failed to maintain adequate financial records.

Gejdenson and Rep. Mary Rose Oaker, D-

Ohio, the subcommittee chairwoman, strongly suggested that the project's new managers avoid further trouble by funneling privately raised money through an independent federal agency.

Diane Carlson Evans, a project founder and former Vietnam nurse, said the board shakeup in May has resulted in "a complete review of operating procedures and a total commitment by the current board to see the memorial completed professionally and expeditiously."

Ms. Lin said the addition of a statue of three infantrymen at the Vietnam memorial in 1984 was ordered by Watt, the former interior secretary, as his condition for building the main portion of the memorial according to her design. The memorial was dedicated in November 1982.

Retired Air Force nurse Linda Spoonster Schwartz told the panel that Frederick E. Hart, who sculpted the infantrymen's statue, was a member of the fine arts commission when it vetoed the woman's statue last fall.

Water line under repair

A water main break that occurred early today left some downtown businesses without water, but is expected to be repaired late this afternoon, city public works director Tom Decell said.

The break occurred on Second Street, between Rannels and Johnston Streets, Decell said.

As a result of the break, the Downtown Grill, 109 E. 2nd St, closed about 11:30 a.m.

Wheat Furniture and Appliance and the law office of Walton Morrison, which are located on East 2nd Street, were also experiencing water problems.

Sheriff's log

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Howard County Sheriff's Department officers reported investigating the following complaints as of 9 a.m. today:

- Texas Highway Patrol officers reported receiving a call from a motorist concerning another motorist attempting to drive to Scenic Mountain Medical Center.
- The man was reported to have suffered a snakebite, but sheriff's records indicate he was admitted to Scenic Mountain Medical Center for observation and was believed suffering from an insect bite or sting.
- A Martin County report of a possible intoxicated driver resulted in Howard County Sheriff's officers intercepting a Chevrolet Suburban towing a travel trailer. The occupants were an elderly couple who were fatigued, and records indicate officers directed them to a campground.
- Randy Hurrington, 27, 2911 W. U.S. Highway 80, was transferred to Howard County jail at 5:30 p.m.

they'd be facing a bull."

"I bet we've received 150 calls the last two days," said Theresa Sheppard, an assistant for the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce's Convention and Visitors' Bureau.

Although some of the callers wouldn't identify where they were calling from, Sheppard said they called from throughout the state and other parts of the country.

"One person tried to call collect from a pay phone in Montana," she said. "We've gotten calls from Dallas, Houston, Austin, El Paso — everywhere you can imagine, we've got calls from, almost... We were literally hanging up the phone and picking it back up for an hour one day. It's been hectic."

The women said interest in the position cooled after people were informed of the hazards; since then the number of calls received has reduced significantly.

"When the bullfight part of the deal was mentioned, the interest cooled down a bit," said Skipper Driver, one of the rodeo's directors.

An unexpected result of the situation is that the rodeo has received more publicity than ever, which Driver hopes will be beneficial.

"I don't see how it could hurt," he said. "We've never been on a national broadcast before."

"It's been unreal," Judy Dobbs said. "This is probably the most publicity the Big Spring Rodeo has ever received."

Hydrant flushing planned

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The Big Spring Fire Department will be flushing hydrants Thursday morning in the Kentwood addition, Capt. Paul Paredes said.

Fire department employees will be working from 8 a.m. until noon at Tuscon Road to 11th Place and from State Street to Birdwell Lane, Paredes said.

Residents of these areas should refrain from washing clothes Thursday morning, the fire captain advised.

"When we are flushing the hydrants dirty water could enter the washing machines and possibly ruin clothing," Paredes said.

Opinion

Pork barreling leads to waste

Pentagon mismanagement and voracious military contractors are not the only reasons for the appalling level of waste in defense procurement. Lawmakers' ceaseless penchant for pork-barrel spending also deserves much of the blame.

A classic illustration of how Congress contributes to Defense Department profligacy was detailed by The Wall Street Journal. The case against Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, is infuriating not because it is extraordinary, but rather because such egregious examples are so commonplace on Capitol Hill.

During his early years as a Pentagon official and now as head of the armed services panel, Rep. Aspin has championed the fight against military waste and inefficiency. Much of his reputation rests on his past battles with the services over unnecessary or technically flawed weapons programs.

Yet, in order to funnel defense dollars to his home state, Mr. Aspin has authored legislation requiring the Army to purchase nearly 4,000 unneeded trucks — at a cost to taxpayers of over half a billion dollars. The vehicles, which the Army does not even want, are manufactured in Wisconsin. One of the reasons the Army rejects the trucks is that they have a history of breaking down on the battlefield during training exercises.

Executives of the truck maker, the Oshkosh Truck Corp., contributed $1,750 to Mr. Aspin's campaign coffers last year. Not surprisingly, the firm's president wrote to the Armed Services Committee chairman, urging him to require the Army to forego competitive bidding in awarding the truck contract.

Rep. Aspin's wasteful expropriation of the Pentagon's scarce resources comes at a moment when a shrinking defense budget is forcing the Navy to cancel its planned 600-ship fleet, the Army to slash troop levels, and the Air Force to eliminate three air wings.

Is there any reason to hope for an end to Defense Department waste as long as the problem is in the hands of reformers such as Rep. Aspin?

Can voice overcome lack of mints?

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I don't want to sound too high and mighty here, but if it weren't absolutely necessary, I don't think I'd spend the night at a Motel 6.

I spend about half my life in motels and hotels as it is, and I've gotten to the point I need my comforts — minibar in my room, little jars of shampoo, and turndown service where they leave a candy mint on my pillow.

I'm certain a room at a Motel 6 would be clean, but I've got the feeling the towels would be small and there wouldn't be but one pillow and there wouldn't be HBO on the television.

Regardless of all that, I've become a Tom Bodett fan. If you listen to radio at all, you know Tom Bodett is a national spokesman for Motel 6.

His commercials are homey and clever and he always signs off by saying, "We'll leave the light on for you," which is what your mother used to say when you were going to be out late.

In a world where an advertiser would hire that idiot from Australia to scream at you about batteries, Tom Bodett's calming voice is most welcome.

He talks about Motel 6's great room service (there's a pizza place nearby that delivers) and he even spoke the recent good news that in some Motel 6 rooms, there are new bedsprings.

Since I'd never heard of Tom Bodett before he broke in with Motel 6, I set about to find out more about him.

I even tried to talk to the man directly, but he lives in Alaska, so it turns out, and he was off on his dogsled somewhere.

I did learn the following about him:

Tom Bodett was born in Michigan in 1955. He has been a cannery worker, a logger, a building contractor, and a commentator on National Public Radio's "All Things Considered."

He lives in Homer, Alaska, with his wife and son.

I also found out he is an author. I am now in possession of two of his books and I have read them and they have brought me much joy.

One book is "As Far As You Can Go Without a Passport," (Addison-Wesley). The other is "Small Comforts" by the same publisher. Both books are filled with essays that come across as a conversation with your neighbor.

Tom Bodett has a lot to say about stacks of wood, McDonald's coming to Alaska, getting a truck out of a ditch, naming a baby, and machinery.

"Machinery and I have an understanding," he writes. "We hate each other."

What I like most about Tom Bodett's writing is he's not topical. He neglects AIDS, nuclear war, racism, the falling dollar, and airline deregulation and deals instead with the fact he's never been able to spit very far.

Tom Bodett has the most believable voice in radio advertising since Arthur Godfrey tried to sell me tea.

And you know, he is the sort of person who would, in fact, leave the light on for you if he said he would.

Praises local pool

To the editor:
Some of us here in Big Spring are vitally interested in our city pool. Currently, discussion centers on the $2.00 per person fee. I am glad Barbara Evans called attention to the $3.00 per family fee on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. That has got to be a recreational bargain. Imagine being able to take our entire family out for a relaxing evening and only having to pay out $3.00!

Last Friday my daughter and I spent a wonderful hour and a half in a practically deserted pool. At one time there were only five of us in the water. There was plenty of space in the wonderfully clean and refreshing water. I have swum in pools in "exclusive" country clubs which do not even begin to compare with the size and luxury of our pool!

It pleased me to see the pool house newly redecorated. Everything looked spanking clean. The attendants were courteous and friendly. I was especially impressed with our head lifeguard, Ronnie Miller and his staff take pride in keeping a clean safe pool.

Perhaps there does need to be some price adjustment. But most of the people I know can find $2.00 to do what they really want to do. All of us make value judgments with our money. To me a couple of hours of swimming is of great value. I am thankful our city provides such a marvelous pool.

Learning from Gorbachev

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — I have reached a startling conclusion gleaned from 40 years at the Washington ringside and access to countless classified documents never intended for outside eyes: What the United States needs is a Mikhail Gorbachev.

No, I don't want to adopt Gorbachev's totalitarian system; I want to prevent a demagogue in crusader's armor from seizing power and imposing totalitarian rule on the land of the free. This could happen if the federal government doesn't stop the pell-mell rush to a runaway deficit, reverse the erosion of the American economy and get off the downhill slide.

At least Gorbachev recognizes that the cumbersome Soviet system is failing and needs a drastic overhaul. He is trying to revamp the structure and transform the Soviet nation from a backward industrial power into the foremost technological power.

Certainly the United States is ripe to be overtaken as the No. 1 technological power by someone, if not by the Soviet Union, then by Japan. Unless present trends are dramatically reversed, our children will inherit a bankrupt nation, trillions of dollars in debt, ravaged by drugs, ridden with crime, its industrial base eroded, its schools mediocre.

So what the United States needs is an American Gorbachev who will revamp and restructure our economic system. Better still, we need to learn from the Japanese who have adopted so much from us.

I recently visited Japan, an island nation without natural resources except for the fish that swim in the ocean surrounding it. Yet Japan, lifting itself up by its bootstraps after the devastation of World War II, today has surpassed the United States as a producer of quality consumer goods and is challenging the United States in high technology.

How in the world have the Japanese managed this spectacular achievement? Their methods have been simple enough. Here are the essential differences between the Japanese and American systems:

- In the United States, free enterprise has become less and less free. It has become entangled in government red tape, hobbled by bureaucratic encum-brances and deluged with forms to fill out.

Small businesses are inhibited. As the backbone of the American free enterprise economy, they ought to be helped, not hindered, by the government.

- In the United States, the authorities raise obstacles that discourage private enterprises from producing anything new or innovative. Federal agencies obstruct efficient business operations, such as the telephone system, that served the public better before government interference.

- In Japan, the government supports and subsidizes its industries. This cooperative effort is directed by the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, known as MITI. Its operations are described by industrialist Harry E. Figgie Jr. in a report to the U.S. Taxpayers Commission:

MITI "guides Japan's industrial organization and trade policies. It plots economic strategy, controls investment and supplies access to technology. It nurtures its industries and protects them from foreign competition whenever necessary. MITI also helps industries like steels, rubber, petrochemicals and shipbuilding during times of recession by creating legal cartels to allocate market share, even establishing funds for paying firms to scrap excess facilities and to reduce capacity."

- Japan has imported whole industries, usually from the United States, and nurtured them until they are strong enough to enter the world marketplace.

Figgie's report explains that, "The fledgling industry is protected to any extent necessary until it gains knowledge, size, experience, critical mass and costs parity... all this takes place in its own marketplace — the world's second largest — totally protected from foreign incursion."

Our adversarial system — government vs. private enterprise, workers vs. management, small business vs. big business — is no longer competitive in the world marketplace. We should follow the example of Mikhail Gorbachev, who is attempting drastic changes to make the Soviet Union more productive, and adopt Japanese methods, which have transformed a defeated and devastated Japan into an economic superpower.

will respond positively to any such developments."

The leaders welcomed the onset of a Soviet troop withdrawal from Afghanistan and the progress in reducing nuclear weapons since the last economic summit meeting in Venice, Italy, a year ago.

"In several important respects, changes have taken place in relations between Western countries and the Soviet Union since we last met," the statement said.

For a group of six capitalists and one Socialist, President Francois Mitterrand of France, the approval and encouragement to the communist leader reflected the growing accommodation between East and West.

At past summits, the seven leaders were inclined to sharply criticize the Soviets. The statement issued Monday, at Reagan's final economic conclave, found several items to criticize, including a military buildup in the Far East and the "massive presence" of Soviet ground troops in Eastern Europe.

"These threats must be reduced," the statement said.

But its overall thrust was positive.

Mitterrand's spokesman, Hubert Vedrine, said the declaration reflected a major change from the statements issued at the 1985 and 1986 summits.

Reagan's summit meeting with Gorbachev in Moscow apparently was the clincher.

According to his spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, the president was pessimistic about "certain aspects of the defense posture and the overall adversarial nature of many Soviet policies."

And, the White House official said, "he did remind the group that the Soviet Union remains a controlled society."

But the bottom line is that Reagan, who built a political career running against communism and big government, approved of Gorbachev.

"The president feels General Secretary Gorbachev is a leader we can do business with, that he is serious about reforms in a number of areas, economic and social," Fitzwater said.

When the Soviet Communist Party opens its conference on June 28, the first such session since 1941, the endorsement Gorbachev received from Reagan and the leaders of Canada, Britain, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany will at least reassure the rank-and-file within the Soviet Union that the West is with their leader.

From Toronto: Endorsement of Gorbachev's reforms

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

TORONTO — When Mikhail S. Gorbachev holds his Communist Party conference in Moscow next week he will have — for better or for worse — the support of President Reagan and his partners at the economic summit.

Gorbachev's effort to reconstruct the Soviet economy is encountering a lot of resistance, but he now can tell skeptics that he is winning friends — and the promise of more trade — from the West.

The promise is contained in the political declaration issued Monday by President Reagan and his six summit partners. They also urged Gorbachev to expand human rights.

"We confirmed our belief in constructive and realistic dialogue and cooperation," the declaration said. It was based on the individual observations of the seven leaders and a report Reagan gave at dinner Sunday night of his talks with Gorbachev in Moscow.

In his three years in power, Gorbachev has worked hard to convince the West that he is interested in conciliation. He has promoted arms control as one way to ease tensions, and released scores of political prisoners to establish his credentials as a Soviet leader determined to break with the past.

By easing tensions, Gorbachev gets a respite from the arms race and a chance to divert into the Soviet economy the money and energy he saves.

The three-page declaration cautioned Gorbachev and East European leaders that expanded trade would have to be economically sound and "consistent with the security interests" of the seven industrialized democracies.

More to the point, though, it lauded Gorbachev for "perestroika" and for improving human rights and said the West would respond to this "evolution" in a positive way.

"Greater freedom and openness will offer opportunities to reduce mistrust and build confidence," Reagan and his six partners declared. "Each of us

Slippers bring $165,000

NEW YORK (AP) — A house had to drop on a witch before Dorothy could get the magic ruby slippers, but $165,000 did the trick for a man bidding on the shimmering shoes that Judy Garland wore skipping down the Yellow Brick Road.

The auction room at Christie's East, which seats about 400 people, was standing-room-only Tuesday as a bidding war drove up the price to more than eight times the presale estimate of $15,000 to $20,000.

"When our expert asked him (the anonymous buyer) what he'd do with them, he said, 'Treasure them,'" said Lee Anne Fahey, spokeswoman for Christie's East.

Later in the auction of movie memorabilia and other collectibles, $53,955 was paid for 96 unpublished color slides of a young Marilyn Monroe taken in Los Angeles in 1945 by William Carroll.

Seven die in collision

CHEROKEE, Kan. (AP) — A train struck a station wagon at a rural railroad crossing that lacked warning signals, killing all seven in the car, and an ambulance worker collapsed and died trying to save one of the victims.

The driver, who was accompanied by her sister and their five children, apparently did not see the train as she crossed the tracks Tuesday afternoon, said Crawford County Sheriff Lynn Fields.

The crossing in southeast Kansas does not have signals, lights or arms, but it is a clear intersection, Fields said. Other car-train collisions have occurred there.

The station wagon was crossing the tracks on a country road two miles northeast of Cherokee when it was struck on the passenger side by a Burlington Northern engine pulling seven cars, Fields said. The car burst into flames.

"What we've found out so far is that the driver didn't even look up," Fields said.

Deaths prompt recall

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — A subsidiary of Baxter International has stopped making two mechanical heart valves and recalled 6,000 unused devices after malfunctions caused six deaths, a company spokesman said.

Valve malfunctions in 12 patients were reported to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, and six of the malfunctions were fatal, Walter Schlegelburger, who heads the FDA's Santa Ana office, said Monday.

The valves had been implanted in 20,000 patients, most overseas, and all of the malfunctions occurred overseas. The valves were approved for sale in the United States only in May 1987.

"Twelve malfunctions out of 20,000 is a very small number, but it was disturbing enough for us to decide to do the prudent thing" by halting manufacture of the two models, said Les Jacobson, spokesman for Deerfield, Ill.-based Baxter. The company's Irvine-based Edwards Division makes the valves.

KENNEDY SPACE CENTER, Fla. — Shuttle Discovery seems to be pushing its way through a crowd of workers Tuesday at Kennedy Space Center. Discovery is scheduled to be launched into space in late August of early September. The launch will be the first since 1986.

Discovery Move is step toward next launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Shuttle Discovery traveled just 1,000 feet in 25 minutes, from one hangar to another. But it was a major step toward the first space shuttle flight since the Challenger disaster 2 1/2 years ago.

Tuesday's move to an assembly building ended 600 days during which Discovery underwent an extensive overhaul of many of its systems in a hangar.

Hundreds of space workers applauded as a tractor towed the gleaming white and black shuttle over the short route. Today, they were to begin joining the 80-ton vehicle with its external tank and two 126-foot solid fuel booster rockets.

"This is like a rebirth," said Discovery flow director John "Tip" Talone. "We're in business again and we're going to stay in business. It's got to be a tremendous boost to the workers here."

The mating of the spaceship with its tank and boosters is scheduled to take nine days. Discovery then will be transported to Launch Pad 39B to be readied for launch.

The latest launch date is Sept. 3, but National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said it is still possible to achieve a late August liftoff.

"A lot of things have to go right to make the end of August; if not, we'll go a few days after that," Forrest S. McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, said after Tuesday's move.

Since Challenger exploded on Jan. 28, 1986, killing its crew of seven, public attention has focused on the redesign and testing of the faulty solid fuel booster rocket blamed for the accident.

But engineers also have been modifying other shuttle systems, and 210 changes have been made and tested on Discovery since it was moved into the processing hangar on Oct. 30, 1986. Many had been planned before the Challenger explosion but several resulted from studies made after the accident that pinpointed potentially troublesome safety areas.

Major improvements have been made to the three main liquid-fuel engines, the mainframe structure, the brakes and landing gear. A blowout hatch has been installed in the cabin to allow the astronauts to bail out with parachutes in case of trouble while the shuttle is gliding to a landing.

"This is the cleanest orbiter we've ever moved," McCartney said. "Those workers deserve a lot of credit."

Two major propulsion tests remain before Discovery can be cleared for launch. On July 22, with the spaceship bolted firmly to the launch pad, its three main engines are to be fired for 20 seconds to test modifications and to give the launch team countdown practice. Four days later, a fifth fullscale ignition is planned for the redesigned booster rocket at the Morton Thiokol plant in Utah.

The changes and extensive testing have led to lengthy delays in returning the manned shuttle fleet to space. A target date of last February slipped to June and then to August.

Five veteran space shuttle fliers, commanded by astronaut Rick Hauck, will be at the controls when Discovery lifts off on its seventh space mission. The others are pilot Dick Covey and mission specialists John Lounge, George Nelson and David Hilmer.

During a four-day flight they will deploy a communications satellite, conduct experiments and test the spaceship's modified systems.

Canada expels officials

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada expelled eight Soviet officials last week for spying on scientific, technological and military targets and has in recent months barred nine others from returning to the country, government sources say.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said Tuesday that the diplomats and trade representatives were engaged in "improper and unacceptable behavior."

The officials were believed to have links to both the KGB and to the GRU, intelligence organizations run by the Soviet military, government sources told the Canadian Press news agency on condition of anonymity.

Government officials in Ottawa said the eight Soviets expelled last week included two people from the Soviet Embassy and six others who held diplomatic status and were based in Montreal.

Patients begin scuffle

ROME (AP) — Patients at a Rome hospital set up barricades and scuffled with leukemia victims they were trying to prevent from being transferred to their ward, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

About 70 patients recovering from eye operations at San Giovanni Hospital threw up a barricade of tables and chairs on Tuesday to block entrance to their ward, the agency said. When the 24 leukemia patients arrived, members of the two groups began pushing and shoving, it said.

Police put an end to the scuffle and allowed the leukemia patients to move into the rooms, ANSA said. They had been transferred temporarily from another part of the hospital, which was being renovated.

Most Haitians not upset

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Opposition leaders say the military's easy ouster of Leslie Manigat's four-month civilian government has not upset most Haitians because they never accepted his presidency.

The deposed president, meanwhile, called Tuesday for the international isolation of Lt. Gen. Henry Namphy's restored military government. But he virtually conceded he has joined the long list of Haiti's ex-leaders.

In Washington, the U.S. State Department said it would maintain diplomatic relations with Haiti and keep up humanitarian aid.

President Jaime Lusinchi of Venezuela announced in Caracas that his country has canceled aid to Haiti and is talking with other Latin American nations about working to establish democracy in this Caribbean nation.

He did not specify the amount of canceled aid.

Manigat told reporters in the Dominican Republic, to which he was expelled after Sunday night's coup, that he would not "fall into the classic trap of deposed political men who see the return to power from one moment to the other and pass all their time waiting for that imminent return."

Reagan speaks favorably of waiting period

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's support of a waiting period for would-be buyers of handguns runs counter to the traditional views of many of his conservative supporters that there be little or no restrictions on individual access to weapons.

But Reagan's comments Tuesday won immediate praise from Sarah Brady, whose husband, White House Press Secretary James Brady, was wounded by presidential assailant John Hinckley. Reagan also was injured in the March 1981 attack but recovered completely.

The president, answering a question at a news conference in Toronto, expressed support for the waiting period as well as for instruction of new gun buyers.

"In California, for a citizen to buy a gun, that citizen has to come in, lay down the money of course, name, address, and so forth," Reagan said. "And this goes to an agency in the state government that looks into that person's entire background as to who and what they are."

"And then they come back, after that investigation, and if they don't have a record of any crimes or mental problems, or anything of that kind, they are allowed to take their gun home," Reagan continued, adding, "Now, I would like to see that generally — I think that all states ought to take a look at that system."

Transport of transplants is an eye-opener

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from a California reader concerning the casual manner in which the cremated remains of her aunt were sent to her home via regular mail rather than by a more dignified route, I think I can top that.

While dropping off a box of documents to be delivered by a well-known bus company, I noticed on the counter a plastic-foam cooler large enough to hold two six-packs. It obviously had made many trips because the carrier showed signs of wear. I gasped when I read the label on the box. It read: Refrigerated: HUMAN EYEBALLS. I later learned that they were being transported by bus for transplant purposes!

I am well aware of your efforts in this cause, Abby, and I report this to you and your readers merely to point out how commonplace transplants have become.

Please print this. It might make some uptight readers realize that hundreds — perhaps thousands — of donated body parts are in transit daily.

WANTS TO GIVE
DEAR WANTS: I, too, want to give. And when I go, I plan to take nothing with me that could improve the quality of life for the living. Readers, how about you?

Contractor: Secret papers routine

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A defense contractor told federal agents four years ago that a private consultant routinely provided his company with secret Pentagon documents and "every major corporation gets the same material."

The comments of Walter R. Edgington, then vice president of GTE Government Systems Corp., meshed with remarks by a former Pentagon investigator Tuesday that the Justice Department had "substantive evidence that there was massive fraud" in military weapons purchases three years ago.

Robert L. Segal, a former Drug Enforcement Administration agent who investigated procurement fraud cases at the Pentagon for one year until his resignation in January 1985, said there was "extensive evidence" of wrongdoing even though only a handful of companies were charged.

GTE Government Systems was one of the companies against which criminal charges were brought nearly three years ago after an investigation by the Defense Criminal Investigative Service for which Segal worked.

The widespread Pentagon investigation centers on allegations that defense contractors and consultants bribed Pentagon officials to obtain inside information that would give them a competitive advantage in the multimillion dollar procurement sweepstakes.

Edgington and Bernie Zettl, a former GTE consultant, were indicted on charges of espionage and theft of government property, while Robert R. Carter, a former GTE marketing manager, was charged with participating in the alleged conspiracy.

The company agreed to plead guilty and was fined $500,000. But nearly three years after the indictment, the rest of the case still has not come to trial, and all charges have been dropped except a conspiracy count against Zettl.

Delays have resulted from lengthy legal disputes over the release of classified material.

On Feb. 29, 1984, Edgington was interviewed by two Pentagon investigators, according to a document in the court file. The defense contractor told the agents that when he first started with GTE in 1966, "everyone within the office had unauthorized classified documents."

To get a handle on all of the paper, Edgington said, he got "a good sergeant major and put all the documents in the file room so that they could at least be controlled," according to the report on the interview.

"Every major corporation gets the same material," Edgington told the agents, but he declined to reveal names of other companies with the unauthorized material.

Edgington did say that Zettl provided the documents to a GTE employee who routed them to the proper people inside the company. The GTE vice president said he never asked Zettl how he came upon the material because he wasn't interested.

Edgington defended possession of classified documents as a tool in "major technical planning." The information saves the government money by cutting down on start-up time for projects, he said.

Reagan: Pentagon bribery and fraud understandable

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says bribery and fraud are "understandable" within the huge bureaucracy of the Pentagon and that no one can keep track of all the defense employees and military contractors.

Nevertheless, Reagan, who came to office pledging to crack down on waste, fraud and abuse, said Tuesday "all of us are disappointed and upset that such things happen."

But he appeared to excuse himself of any responsibility.

The president commented at a news conference in Toronto at the end of the three-day economic summit of major industrial democracies. Later, he delivered a speech urging economic allies to expand free trade and resist protectionism.

After celebrating his last summit with what he said was a "measure of pride," Reagan returned to Washington, where the mushrooming Pentagon case and lingering fallout from the Iran-Contra scandal are likely to occupy much of the seven months that remain of his term. At the news conference, his second this month, Reagan fielded only a few questions about economics. Instead, the focus was on other issues.

About the drought now plaguing much of the United States, Reagan said it was too early to say what the government could do to help farmers recover.

"Outside of praying for rain, there isn't anything I can do" until a government task force submits a report on the problem next week.

Speaking about the allegations of scandal at the Pentagon, Reagan said, "I have to say that I think it should be understandable how such things can happen in something as big as our government is."

Federal prosecutors this week revealed a widespread investigation into corruption in the Pentagon weapons purchasing system and disclosed that wiretaps had been used to record more than 4,700 telephone conversations.

The president also suggested he favors restrictions on handgun purchases.

Congress: How far, how high?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecutor in charge of the Pentagon bribery and fraud investigation is meeting with members of Congress who are demanding to know how far — and how high — the investigation is likely to reach.

Henry Hudson, U.S. attorney for northern Virginia, was scheduled to travel to the Capitol this afternoon to brief legislators on the 2-year-old investigation.

The lineup for the meetings was uncertain because so many legislators wanted private meetings that the prosecutor responded by saying he would only talk about the case to Senate and House leaders, according to congressional sources who declined to be named.

One figure implicated through wiretaps in the case, meanwhile, has agreed to cooperate with Hudson's prosecutors and another is on the verge of agreeing to tell what he knows, according to sources familiar with the case.

It could not be determined whether the target who is cooperating is a Pentagon employee, a consultant or a defense contractor.

The case involves allegations that defense contractors and consultants, many of whom are former Pentagon employees, paid bribes to Pentagon officials for inside information about planned weapons. The details could be vital in winning contracts worth billions of dollars.

Prosecutors said that they made widespread use of wiretaps in the case, recording 4,764 telephone conversations. Of those, 671 were considered incriminating. Some wiretaps were in place for 290 days last year.

One wiretap picked up a conversation which can be interpreted as suggesting that former Navy Secretary John Lehman Jr. warned his former procurement aide, Melvyn Paisley, about the investigation, sources said.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III refused to say this week if Lehman is among those under scrutiny. Paisley and another former Lehman aide, retired Adm. James A. "Ace" Lyons, have been implicated in search warrants.

The sources said investigators are examining the possible warning as a potential obstruction of justice.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Dan Howard said he didn't know if Lehman had been briefed about the probe, begun by the Naval Investigative Service in September 1986. The FBI later entered the case.

Howard did say NIS officials gave general briefings to James H. Webb, Lehman's successor as Navy secretary; William Ball, who succeeded Webb; and Air Force Secretary Edward C. Aldridge.

BREAST CANCER DETECTION UNIT AVAILABLE TO AREA WOMEN

MONDAY, JUNE 27, 1988
BIG SPRING, TEXAS
HIGHLAND SHOPPING CENTER

A Service of PLANNED PARENTHOOD

CALL 263-8351 FOR APPOINTMENT

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of ten women in the United States will develop breast cancer sometime in her lifetime. It is currently estimated that over 37,000 women die each year as the result of breast cancer.

Ninety percent of breast cancers are diagnosed by women or their physicians finding a lump in the breast. Women who are diagnosed with a lump large enough to feel have a 50 percent five year survival rate. A woman who is diagnosed as having breast cancer by mammography, before a lump can be felt, has a 97% five year survival rate and a 90% 10 year survival rate.

A mammogram can detect a cancer this small, even before it can be felt.

Appointments may be made by calling 263-8351.

The Mobile Breast Cancer Detection Unit will be in Big Spring on Monday, June 27th.

The American Cancer Society has established guidelines for mammography in asymptomatic women. (Women who have no symptoms of disease). Those guidelines have been adopted by the American Academy of Family Physicians, American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and The American College of Radiology. Those guidelines are:

- I. 35-40 years of age — One baseline mammogram.
- II. 40-50 years of age — A mammogram every 1-2 years depending on breast type and risk factor.
- III. 50 years of age and over — An annual physical examination and annual mammogram.
- IV. Asymptomatic women under 50 years of age with significant high risk factors should be examined at appropriate intervals. These risk factors include previous breast cancer and family history of cancer.

V. A symptomatic woman should have a mammogram at any age when she experiences a mass, nipple discharge, skin changes or unexplained breast pain.

A screening mammogram is an x-ray of the breast using extremely low dosages of radiation (usually comparable to dental x-rays) and is designed to find very early cancers.

A female technologist who is highly trained in mammography will perform the examination.

The charge for the screening mammogram is $50.00. The Unit accepts cash, check, Visa, Mastercard and American Express.

The Mobile Breast Cancer Detection Unit will be at Highland Shopping Center.

Let's rodeo!

A parade at 4 p.m. today kicks off festivities for the 55th Annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo — which officially begins tonight and will continue through Saturday at the Big Spring Rodeo Bowl.

The Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association annual rodeo will attract some of the top names in the rodeo profession. This year's edition is expected to have more than $40,000 in prize money. The Big Spring Rodeo Board and Adolph Coors Company contribute the prize money to the event.

Scheduled for nightly performances starting at 8:30 p.m., the rodeo has never been short on entertainment for the entire family.

The parade will begin on 10th and Main Streets, go to Second Street, proceed to Scurry Street and back to 10th Street.

Directly after the rodeo parade will be the annual Big Spring Kiwanis Club barbecue at the Howard County Fair Barn. Charge is $5 per plate.

Then comes the rodeo action. Not only will there be the regular rodeo events, there will be colorful performance by the clowns, and the prestigious Wrangler Bullfighting competition. Big Spring is one of only 12 PRCA rodeos in which the Wrangler bullfighting competition is held.

Three clowns will be competing Wednesday, Thursday and Friday for $1,000 in prize money. The clowns will be judged in different categories.

A local favorite will be renowned rodeo clown and barrelman Quail Dobbs of Coahoma, who will keep the crowd laughing with his famous exploding car act. In 1985 and '86 Dobbs was named the top barrelman in the PRCA.

There will be a new face in the announcer's booth this season — Zoop Dove of Farmington, N.M. Dove has emerged as one of the most enthusiastic and knowledgeable announcers in the business.

Dove worked in almost 80 performances in 25 different states last season, from Washington to Florida, including Hawaii.

For the fourth consecutive year, the rodeo's livestock will be provided by Bad Company Rodeo of Round Mountain. The company is headed by Mack Altizer.

With any rodeo, there has to be some good music and dancing.

Ex-Steer seeking position in NFL

While in Abilene last week participating in the second leg of the Triple Crown Softball Series, I was in contact with Big Spring's second professional football player, Wayne Coffee.

Coffee, his wife Natalie and son Wayne Spencer were in town visiting Coffee's parents. A softball teammate of mine, who grew up with the Coffee clan, gave the Coffees a call and got in touch with Wayne for me.

Wayne, who played at Big Spring but finished his prep career at Abilene High School, graduated two years ago from Southwest Texas State University. He's presently on the disabled list for the New England Steamrollers of the Arena Football League.

He and his family were visiting in Abilene before vacationing in the Bahamas.

The wide receiver fractured his wrist during preseason of the Arena Football League and has been out for seven weeks.

He hopes to return for the final two games.

New England, which plays its home games in Providence, R.I., is currently going through a rough season, fielding a 1-7 record.

Coffee says Arena Football play is a one-year deal. The 24-year-old's main goal is to make it to the National Football League. And the 5-9, 162-pound speedster's chance will probably come with the Houston Oilers.

"I've already been taking with the Oilers about a contract," said Wayne from the LaQuinta Inn Motel room, where our team was staying. "Right now we can't do anything because my contract with New England won't expire until July 15."

Wayne, the smallest and youngest of five brothers, said that all Arena Football League players signed one-year contracts.

Brothers Kenneth 28, and David 25, played college football at Southwest Texas State University. Jimmy, 31, played for the University of New Mexico. Michael, 30, was the only non-athlete of the group. Kenneth played professionally with the Washington Redskins, and Jimmy, a 6-5, 260-pounder in his collegiate days, bypassed the chance to try pro ball.

"I don't think anybody would want to do anything else. I know I wouldn't," said Wayne of signing a one-year Arena Football League contract.

"The whole structure of the league (AFL) is nothing like the NFL. There are no guarantees, no benefits."

Before he got hurt, Wayne was having a good season in the pass-crazy indoor league. In fact, he had already caught three touchdown passes during the preseason game in which he was injured.

"It's just pure passing," said Wayne of the AFL. "With a 50-yard field I'd say over 80 percent of the game is passing. One good thing about it, it gets you in real good shape for the for NFL, which is really every player's goal," said Coffee.

Coffee played in the replacement games for the New England Patriots during last year's NFL strike. It was there that he attracted the attention of NFL scouts.

Steamrollers' Coach Babe Peralli was then a scout for the Patriots. Peralli was a long-time NFL player with the New York Jets and Boston Patriots. In fact, he's the second leading passer in Patriots' history.

Peralli told a Houston scout about Coffee's ability and now the Oilers are hot on his trail.

"It would be great to play for Houston, especially since their new training camp is at Southwest Texas State, which is about 20 minutes from my home in Austin," said Wayne.

"Basically (the Oilers) want to use me to return kicks and punts. That doesn't bother me. I'll start out doing that and eventually I'll get in the position to catch some balls."

One gets the feeling that if Wayne Coffee gets his chance, he'll definitely make the most of it.

Bad Company has good stock

Jerry Torbett used to ride in rodeos. He still follows the circuit, but these days he works for rodeo stock producers Bad Company Rodeo.

"I get a steady paycheck now," he says with a smile. But he still works in rodeo for the same reasons he started riding in them: "It's the last chance to do what a man really wants to do."

"I don't have to punch a nine to five clock," he said. "When I was riding, I didn't have to answer to anybody but me, and now I don't have to answer to anybody but Mack (Altizer, Bad Company owner)."

His day is different, now, too: rather than driving from town to town with his gear and putting up his entry fee to ride, Torbett travels with, or in advance of, Bad Company shows.

He said Bad Company expected approximately 400 entrants and a payoff of $40,000 for the Big Spring show.

"We'll probably bring 40 to 50 bucking horses, 30 to 35 bulls, 50 to 100 calves and 40 to 60 head of steers," he said. The company also will ship in eight head of saddle horses used by Bad Company riders, including pickup men Lester Davis, D.L. Funderburgh and Danny Cannon.

According to ProCom, a company which tabulates entry books for PRCA-sanctioned rodeos, the Big Spring show will draw 333 con-

Greatness Lakers win fifth world title in decade

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers lived up to their coach's promise and guaranteed their place among basketball's greatest teams.

The Lakers, the NBA's first repeat champions in 19 years, took a 15-point lead midway through the fourth quarter Tuesday night, then held on for a 108-105 victory over the Detroit Pistons in Game 7 of the championship series.

James Worthy, the series' Most Valuable Player, scored 36 points, 16 rebounds and 10 assists.

Just as Coach Pat Riley guaranteed they would a year ago, when the Lakers beat the Celtics, Los Angeles repeated as champions — the first time any team has done so since Boston in 1969.

Asked if he'd guarantee a third title, Riley was about to answer when Kareem Abdul-Jabbar stuffed a towel in the coach's mouth. Finally, Riley said, "I'll guarantee that we'll enjoy this all summer. It took 115 games to get this job done. They worked for it. They won. They deserve the credit."

"I can't believe we did it," Magic Johnson said. "We worked so hard against Utah, against Dallas and now against Detroit. We kept coming back, back, back. ... This was the hardest championship we've ever won."

"I want another one," Johnson said.

The Lakers made history, but it wasn't easy.

They became the first team to win three seven-game series in one year, beating Utah and Dallas 4-3 in the Western Conference playoffs.

Pistons Coach Chuck Daly said the Lakers "came out in the third quarter and seized the game with some ferocious defense. They scored on the break, threw a 37-point quarter at us."

"At that point, I said, 'Lights out and it could get worse.' But we went to our speed team and we got back into it.

"It was a gallant, courageous effort by our guys."

But it wasn't enough.

"Give credit to the Lakers, they did what they said they would do, they did repeat," Daly said.

The Lakers, who trailed 52-47 at halftime, hit their first 10 shots of the third quarter on the way to a 15-point lead, then held off a furious rally by the Pistons in the final 12 minutes.

Led by Worthy, the victory gave the Lakers their fifth title in this decade. And they won despite just four points and three rebounds from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer.

Byron Scott scored 12 of his 21 points during the Lakers' 23-7 rally in the third period, which spanned the first 6:25 of the second half and gave Los Angeles a 70-59 lead. Scott capped the spurt with a 3-point goal.

"We worked so hard to get to this moment," he said. "We weren't thinking about history, we were just worried about just winning this game tonight."

The Lakers led 94-79 with 7:24 left before the Pistons rallied.

Vinnie Johnson had three baskets and John Salley five points as Detroit used a 17-4 spurt to close within 98-96 with 2:50 left.

The Pistons got within two on two other occasions before Magic Johnson hit a free throw with 1:16 to go to make it 103-100. Bill Laimbeer then missed a 3-point at-

Graf breezes into third round

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Steffi Graf had her Grand Slam shutout streak broken but still breezed past Karine Quentrec of France into the third round of the women's singles at Wimbledon today.

Graf, the women's No. 1 seed, beat the 18-year-old from Marseille 6-2, 6-0, after warming up for the match against one of the ball girls on Court No. 3.

"I was a couple of minutes early, and they told me to go onto the court, so I hit with the ball girl," said the top-seeded West German, who dropped a game for the first time in three Grand Slam tournament matches.

Graf beat Natalia Zvereva 6-0, 6-0 for the French Open title this month and opened Wimbledon with a 6-0, 6-0 victory over Hu Na of the United States.

Graf attributed the early lapse against Quentrec to unfamiliarity with her opponent, a "lucky loser" who got a place in the main draw when Italy's Raffaella Reggi withdrew because of a back injury.

"I had no idea who she was," Graf said.

The victory by Graf led a string of seeded players through early

Zina Garrison, the women's 12th seed from the United States, beat Diane Balestrat of Australia 6-4, 6-3, and 15th-seeded Sylvia Hanika of West Germany defeated Halle Cioffi of the United States 6-1, 6-2.

In the men's draw, 10th-seeded Tim Mayotte of the United States and 12th-seeded Jonas Svensson of Sweden, a pair of serve-and-volley players with solid Grand Slam records, easily advanced to the third round.

Mayotte, a semifinalist at Wimbledon in 1982 and the Australian Open in 1983, beat American Greg Holmes 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

Mayotte lost only four points on his serve in the first set, then saved three break points in the second set and rallied in the third set, raising his Wimbledon record to 27-7.

Svensson, who upset top-seeded Ivan Lendl in reaching the French Open semifinals this month, beat fellow Swede Magnus Gustafsson 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

Svensson overpowered Gustafsson, whose moment of glory was brief — a break of the Swede's serve in winning the first game. But Svensson broke right

Pirates move into finals

By STEVE BELVIN

It was the "David Akin Show" as the American League Pirates made it a All-American League final by downing the Coahoma Reds 9-2 in Little League city tournament play Tuesday night at the American League park.

Akin stood out at the plate and on the mound, leading his team to the finals against the undefeated Colts. The game will be played tonight at 8 p.m. at the American League park. If the Pirates win, the final game will be played Thursday at 8 p.m. The Pirates' loss in the tournament was a 12-3 decision to the Colts.

Akin was the main factor why the Pirates sent the Coahoma team home in third place. He was crafty on the mound, mixing his pitches well, and a burden for Reds pitchers at the plate. Akin finished the game with a two-hitter, striking out 12 and walking six. At the plate he went two-for-four, driving in two runs, scoring one, not to mention stealing home.

While the diminutive Akin was masterful on the mound, Coahoma starter Jeff Pherneton suffered control problems. The big righty lasted two-and-two-thirds innings, gave up six runs on only one hit. His downfall was 10 walks though. Henry DelaRosa finished the game.

But it was the Reds that struck first, getting their only two hits of the game off Akin in the first inning. The Coahoma team scored its only two runs with the help of three Pirate errors in the inning.

Coahoma leadoff hitter Brandon Adcock walked and then Akin fanned Jamison Ward. Second baseman Kelby Bailey followed with a single to center field that hopped over the center fielder's glove and rolled to the fence. Adcock scored and Bailey went to third. The throw to third base was wild and Bailey scampered in with an inside-the-parker, giving the Reds a short lived 2-0 lead.

The final Coahoma hit of the game was a single by catcher-third baseman Jerry Wayne Krause.

The Pirates scored two runs in the bottom of the inning without a hit. Leadoff hitter Todd Parrish reached base when the center fielder dropped his fly. He eventually scored from third on a wild pitch. Second spot hitter Chris Copeland walked. He stole second, went to third on a wild pitch, and scored when Akin grounded to the shortstop. The shortstop tried for Copeland at home, but it was too late.

The Pirates took the lead for good, 3-2, in the bottom of the second inning. Again they scored without a hit.

Leadoff batter Mikael Balderach was hit by a pitch. He scored when catcher Parrish grounded out to second base. Pherneton got out of a bases loaded jam when Copeland popped out to the pitcher. Pirates' Read White, on third; was running all the way. Pherneton got the easy double play by throwing to third, one of two Coahoma double plays in the game.

In the third the Pirates added three more runs while gaining their first hit of the game. That was a single by Akin after Jeremy Robertson had walked to leadoff the inning. Pherneton, who issued five walks in the inning, walked White, scoring Robertson.

Next the alert Akin caught the Reds pitcher and catching napping and stole home when the catcher was turning around to retrieve his face mask. The sixth Pirate run of the contest came when Parrish was hit by a pitch, scoring Balderach.

The Pirates scored their final three runs in the fifth off DelaRosa. Parrish reached base on a fielder's choice. He scored from third on a wild pitch. Next the ever-present Akin doubled, scoring Copeland and Robertson, who had walked. White also had a base hit in the inning.

A Coahoma double play prevented further Pirate damage.

Akin finished the game by fanning Craig Jackson and Adcock. He ended a good performance by catching a pop fly by Ward, sending the Pirates to the finals against the Colts.

testants — with 33 entrants in the bareback riding, 30 in saddle bronc, 44 in steer wrestling and 41 in team roping. Barrel racing drew 32 entrants this year.

By far the most populous events are bullriding with 80 entrants and calf roping with 73.

But Bad Company isn't counting on sheer numbers to entertain the rodeo crowd this year, Torbett said. The company is bringing several bucking animals that have been nominated for the National Finals Rodeo competition by Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association members in the past years. This includes bulls named Big Ben Coors, owned by Valley Distributing, and Saturday Night Live.

He explained the difference between a bucking horse and an ornery range horse this way: "What makes a buckin' horse different is they just like to buck."

"These horses, that's what they do and that's all they do," he said. Some, like the famous Midnight and a mare named Calamity, ply their trade in the arena for 20 years or more.

"Some will buck two or three times, and then they'll quit. They'll just give it up, or somebody'll spur it out of them," Torbett said. Such horses are no good to rodeo companies, which probably acquired the horses from ranches that no longer could use them. "Some of them are real outlaws," horses somebody tried to ride and couldn't ride, and then some, like Sensation and Rose Garden, are horses that are bred to buck," he said. "That's an experiment, over the years, that people have tried, because good buckin' horses are so hard to come by."

"You could go through 1,000 soured ranch horses and you might get one good buckin' horse," he said.

A good horse can buck for 20 or 30 years, he said, in contrast to bulls. Most bulls are in their prime between four and nine years of age, he said, though some, like Big Ben Coors, provide nightmares for would-be riders much longer.

The production company buys some stock every year to replace bulls or broncs that retire. "You have to add bulls and broncs every year, because they get old, and then you have the loss factor."

Other livestock the company handles include steers — replaced often because after several trips through an arena they "sour," or refuse to run from would-be wrestlers — and calves, which must be replaced from time to time because the animals simply grow too big to tie down handily. But the rough string, the bucking stock, are the stars.

Spinks doesn't want any sympathy

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks decided it was time to get out of the light heavyweight division when his friends began feeling sorry for him because he wasn't making enough money or getting enough notice.

Now they feel sorry for him because he has to fight Mike Tyson.

"They'll pray for me and my health now," said Spinks, who fights Tyson on Monday for the heavyweight championship.

Not that the undefeated challenger is that worried himself.

"He has what he has," Spinks says of Tyson. "He's just as good as anyone else and he makes the same mistakes as anyone else. He's been brought up right in his career and these are the results."

Spinks, who dominated the light heavyweight ranks for four years, owned the undisputed 175-pound title before giving it up to fight Larry Holmes for the heavyweight crown in September 1985.

He beat Holmes — not once but twice — to establish himself as a presence in a division that historically has produced lucrative paydays.

And now, at age 31, Spinks stands to cash in on one of the biggest paydays ever — $13.5 million to fight one of the most devastating punchers in recent boxing history.

"Everybody came to me and said, 'Mike, they say it's the same for every light heavyweight — no big bucks and no big fights,'" Spinks said. "I felt a lot of people felt sorry for me."

Spinks wasn't always enamored with the idea of moving up in weight. He even went so far as to briefly entertain thoughts of losing enough weight to fight then-middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

"I found myself wanting to fight a little bitty guy like Hagler," he said. "But that's not my style. I wouldn't pick on a little guy."

Since becoming the first light heavyweight champion to win the heavyweight title, Spinks has won three other heavyweight fights — two by knockout — and set himself up for the fight against Tyson, which could be boxing's richest ever.

"After winning the title I felt so good because everybody didn't feel sorry for me anymore," Spinks recalled.

As he was against Holmes, Spinks is again a heavy underdog and few outside his camp expect him to win.

In Tyson, he faces a fighter 10 years younger whose ferocious style has earned him 30 knockouts in 34 fights, many coming in the early rounds.

"I think a lot of people who love me and pray for my well-being have some compassion for me in this fight," Spinks says.

Spinks, though, is no slouch himself. In 31 fights since beginning his professional career in 1977, he has not lost, and in the process has scored 21 knockouts. He showed skepticism he can punch in the heavyweight division with his fifth-round knockout of Gerry Cooney in his last fight on June 15, 1987.

"He has the power to catch Tyson's attention," Eddie Futch, Spinks' veteran trainer, said. "He's a legitimate heavyweight now and he hits like one."

Spinks, an unorthodox fighter who sometimes doesn't seem to know where his punches are coming from or going, hinted he may have saved his best for Tyson.

"I have never unleashed the real talent I possess," he said. "I possess a lot, maybe some things I've never had to reveal."

back and gave up only 45 points the rest of the way, losing serve only one more time in reaching the third round for the second straight year.

On a warm, sunny day, the men's draw lost 15th-seeded Amos Mansdorf of Israel because of an injury.

Mansdorf trailed Diego Nargiso of Italy 6-3, 3-0 when a strained abdominal muscle forced him to retire.

The talk around the All-England Club still centered on a first-round match from Tuesday — John McEnroe's triumphant return.

Lose he did, bounced out in the quarter-finals by Kevin Curren.

This time, losing was the farthest thing from his mind.

"I think I'm on the right road again," McEnroe said after beating Horst Skoff of Austria 6-1, 7-5, 6-1. "It feels good to be here."

The rapturous ovation McEnroe received from the packed Court No. 1 crowd in his triumphant return was a testimony to his new image.

Gone were the screaming tantrums and racket-throwing that marked the lowest point of his heyday and earned him a stream of nicknames from the Fleet Street tabloids.

Instead, McEnroe was thoughtful and subdued, scowling and shaking his head only when he made a mess of an easy shot.

Although his reactions were slower than in his prime, especially when trying to cut off passing shots, his touch play and timing baffled the stocky Skoff.

McEnroe is slated to meet Sweden's Mats Wilander, the Australian and French Open champion, in the quarterfinals. The Swede, like Graf, is bidding to win the Grand Slam, and won his first-round match in straight sets against Eduardo Masso.

"I'd like to be the one to stop Mats winning the slam, for all the players," McEnroe said. "I feel I am capable of beating anyone on this surface. But the question is whether I can do it consistently over two weeks."

One player he won't have to meet is Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union, the only seed to fall Tuesday. The Soviet clay-court specialist, seeded No. 14, was ousted 7-5, 6-4, 6-4 by Udo Roglewski of West Germany.

The women's seeds were also reduced by one when West Germany's Claudia Kohde-Kilsch withdrew with a recurrence of a knee injury.

American Pam Shriver, the No. 3 seed, staved off a match-point as she rallied from 1-4 down in the final set to beat Dinky van Rensburg of South Africa, 6-2, 4-6, 8-6.

But there were no problems for the two big favorites in the women's draw.

New York whitewashes Pittsburgh, 9-0

By The Associated Press
In the New York Mets' chain of success this season, Kevin McReynolds has been missing a link.
Until Tuesday night, McReynolds, struggling in clutch situations throughout the year, hit a grand slam and tied a career-high by driving in five runs as the Mets routed the Pittsburgh Pirates 9-0.

producer during his career, was batting only .240 with runners in scoring position entering the game. He had come up 14 times with a runner on third base and less than two outs, but gotten only four of them home.
Ron Darling, who scattered seven singles for his third shutout this season, and Pittsburgh's Doug Drabek were locked in a scoreless game until the sixth.

homer in the Braves' second, the Dodgers scored twice in their half against Smith, 3-4. Scioscia broke a 1-for-20 slump with an RBI single and Dave Anderson had a run-scoring grounder.

The Expos took advantage of two errors by Gold Glove shortstop Ozzie Smith to score three runs in the first inning against Cris Carpenter, 2-3. Nelson Santoveni later homered for Montreal.

his 14th save. Armstrong took the loss.

Houston starter Mike Scott left the game in the first inning. He suffered a hamstring pull in his last start and team officials said Scott departed because he didn't feel ready for game conditions and suffered no additional damage. It was Scott's shortest start in six seasons with the Astros and the second shortest of his major-league career.

single for his 1,538th career RBI, moving him past Joe DiMaggio into 24th place on the all-time list.

The host Phillies stopped a three-game losing skid, pinning the loss on Jeff Pico, 2-2.

Padres 8, Giants 3
Dennis Rasmussen won his third straight start since joining San Diego and San Francisco continued to slump.
The Padres have 10 of their last 14.

Garry Templeton and Keith Moreland had two hits and two RBI apiece for San Diego. Rasmussen, obtained in a trade June 8 with Cincinnati, gave up eight hits and is 5-6 overall.

Rick Reuschel, 10-4, had his five-game winning streak stopped. Mike Aldrete had three hits for the Giants, including a two-run homer in the ninth inning.

National League

"It's been very frustrating," McReynolds said of his slump. "I've been anxious. I'm swinging at bad pitches. That's why I've failed."
McReynolds, a consistent run

Dodgers 2, Braves 1
Tim Leary pitched a four-hitter and Los Angeles won its fifth straight game, sending visiting Atlanta to its fourth loss in a row.

Leary, 6-5, struck out seven and walked one in pitching his fourth complete game. He allowed only one hit after the third inning, a bunt single by pitcher Zane Smith in the fifth.
After Ozzie Virgil hit his seventh

Expos 7, Cardinals 0
Pascual Perez, making his return from the disabled list, shut out St. Louis on five hits for eight innings as Montreal won at Olympic Stadium.

Perez, who broke the middle finger on his right hand May 7, walked none and struck out six. He improved to 4-3 and Tim Burke worked the ninth.

Andres Galarraga hit his 17th home run, tying for the league lead, and also had an RBI triple and single. Galarraga batted .409 against the Cardinals last season and is 4-for-8 against them this year.

Astros 3, Reds 1
Buddy Bell's RBI double keyed a three-run rally against his former teammates and Houston tied a club record with seven stolen bases to beat visiting Cincinnati.

Jack Armstrong, making his major-league debut, held the Astros to one hit for six innings and had a 1-0 lead. But Bell, traded from Cincinnati to Houston on Saturday night, tied the game with a double and Gerald Young's sacrifice fly put the Astros ahead.

Craig Reynolds later stole home as part of a double steal.
Reliever Larry Andersen, 2-3, was the winner and Dave Smith got

Phillies 6, Cubs 1
David Palmer pitched seven strong innings and hit one of Philadelphia's six doubles as the Phillies ended Chicago's five-game winning streak.

Palmer, 3-6, allowed one run on six hits. He hit an RBI double, as did Juan Samuel, Chris James and Steve Jeltz.
Mike Schmidt hit a run-scoring

Tigers snatch victory from Yanks

By The Associated Press
Everyone was sure the Yankees would win, even the Detroit Tigers. Even Alan Trammell.

"This was a game we were supposed to lose, it looked like," said Trammell, whose grand slam in the ninth inning gave the Tigers a dramatic 7-6 victory over New York Tuesday night. "I'm just like a little kid. The last thing I expected was to hit a grand slam in the ninth to win the ballgame."

American League

"Heck, I wasn't even expecting an at-bat."

The Yankees had breezed through the first eight innings, knocking out Detroit ace Jack Morris in the second and leading 6-1 behind the strong pitching of reliever Neil Allen.

Pinch-hitter Dave Bergman led off the ninth with a single and when Darrell Evans walked, Allen was replaced by Dave Righetti. After allowing a single to Matt Nokes to load the bases, Righetti appeared to settle down, retiring Pat Sheridan on a fly ball and striking out Tom Brookens.

But Righetti walked Lou Whitaker and Luis Salazar to force home two runs and with the count 1-0, Cecilio Guante was brought in to face Trammell, who had missed the series opener with a sore elbow.

Red Sox 10, Indians 6
Mike Greenwell extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a homer and three singles and Jim Rice drove in four runs with three hits as Boston won its fourth straight.

The Red Sox' 10 runs on 15 hits gave them 39 runs and 59 hits over their past three games. Greenwell has 10 hits, including four homers and 12 RBI, in the last three games.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 2
Cal Ripken hit an RBI double in the sixth inning and tripled home two runs in the eighth and Oswaldo Peraza earned his first major-league victory for Baltimore.

Through seven innings, the Blue Jays led 2-1 and Toronto starter Mike Flanagan had a three-hitter and appeared headed for his 150th career victory.

Angels 5, Twins 4
Chili Davis hit a two-out home run in the top of the 10th inning and California won its sixth straight game.

Davis hit his ninth homer of the season off Minnesota reliever Mark Portugal, 0-1, who allowed only two hits in four innings.

Royals 6, White Sox 2
Frank White drove in three runs with a homer and a double and Mark Gubicza won his fifth straight decision as Kansas City snapped a four-game losing streak.

Gubicza, 10-5, became the American League's fifth 10-game winner, allowing eight hits in six innings. Jerry Don Gleaton and Steve Farr finished up.

Chicago's Jerry Reuss, 6-3, had his four-game winning streak snapped.

tempt and was unable to save the rebound. The ball went out of bounds with 1:05 to go.

After a missed shot by Los Angeles, Dennis Rodman missed a jumper with 39 seconds left. With a sellout Forum crowd of 17,505 screaming, "Repeat, repeat," during every timeout, Scott hit two free throws to make it 105-100. The Lakers missed three of their next four attempts at the line, however, and the Pistons then trailed by only 106-105 when Laibbeer hit a 3-pointer with six seconds remaining.

But A.C. Green clinched it with a layup with two seconds on the clock.

When the game ended, delirious fans swarmed over the court.

Magic Johnson added 19 points for Los Angeles. Joe Dumars had 25 points for the Pistons, Salley 17 and Adrian Dantley 16.

Isiah Thomas, despite a badly sprained ankle that had him on crutches just an hour before the game, played 19 minutes and scored 10 points in the first half, including consecutive jumpers in the final 27 seconds of the second quarter. Those shots gave Detroit the halftime lead.

But Thomas failed to score in the second half and saw only spot duty in the final minutes.

The franchise now has won 11 titles, the last six in Los Angeles and the first five in Minneapolis from 1949-54.

But it was the first time since moving to California in 1960 that the Lakers won a title with a victory in a seventh game. They lost five championship series that went the seven-game limit, four against the Celtics and once to New York.

The Pistons, making their first appearance in the championship series since moving to Detroit 31 years ago, became the first team since Seattle in 1978 to lose in the finals after taking a 3-2 lead.

The Lakers led 83-73 after three quarters and quickly extended the margin as Magic Johnson scored, then Michael Cooper — 1-for-14 from 3-point range going into the game — hit his second of the second half for an 88-73 lead with 10:49 left.

In the first six games, Worthy outscored Dantley in games won by the Lakers, with the Pistons' forward outscoring his Laker counterpart in the three Detroit victories. They began the game as if their personal duel would once again be reflected in the final score, each scoring 11 points in the first quarter. The Pistons led 23-21 at the end of the period.

Detroit scored just two points in the first 3:50, but persisted in pushing the ball inside and ran off eight consecutive points, including six by Dantley, for a 10-7 edge.

The lead changed four more times and the score was tied twice before Dumars hit a 3-pointer and Dantley converted a three-point play for a 23-19 Detroit advantage with 1:31 left in the first period.

The Pistons led 26-23 early in the second quarter before Worthy, who scored nine points in the period, started an 11-2 run with a turnaround move in the lane. His three-point play capped the spurt, giving Los Angeles a 34-28 lead.

Detroit responded with a 16-7 rally for a 44-41 edge with 2:46 left. Rodman scored six of his eight second-quarter points during the run, but he missed four of six free throws.

The Pistons won Game 1 of the championship series 105-93, handing the Lakers their first series-opening loss at home since 1981, a span of 20 playoff games. Dantley hit 14 of 16 shots from the field and scored 34 points for Detroit.

The Lakers came back to win the second game 108-96 as Worthy scored 26 points. Magic Johnson added 23 points and 11 assists in 42 minutes despite spending the previous two days in bed with a stomach virus. With the series moving to the Pontiac Silverdome, the Pistons had a chance to win the title with three victories at home. But Los Angeles quickly ended that dream with a 99-86 victory in Game 3.

Worthy scored 12 of his 24 points in the third quarter, including the first eight of the period, as the Lakers broke away after leading 47-46 at halftime. The Pistons were outscored 31-18 in the third quarter.

Detroit, limited to 12 free-throw attempts in Game 3, went to the line 46 times in Game 4, tying the series 2-2 with a 111-86 triumph.

Dantley, held to 14 points and two free throws in the third game, scored 27 points and made 13 of 15 free throws in Game 4. The Pistons' defense limited Los Angeles to 35 points in the second half.

MVP saved best for last

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — James Worthy may have saved his best game ever for his biggest challenge ever.

Worthy, who averaged only 13.3 points in the Los Angeles Lakers' three defeats in the NBA championship series, came up with a big performance again when they needed it Tuesday night.

Worthy had 36 points, 16 rebounds and 10 assists in the Lakers' 108-103 victory in Game 7 that gave Los Angeles the NBA's first back-to-back titles since 1968-69.

The first "triple-double" in Worthy's career, along with a 28.5 scoring average in Los Angeles' four victories, helped him win playoff Most Valuable Player honors.

"I guess this was my greatest

The Pistons took a 3-2 lead with a 104-94 victory in Game 5 as Dantley again led the way with 25 points. The Lakers led 15-2 less than five minutes into that game, but the Pistons outscored Los Angeles 52-26 for a 13-point lead. Dantley scored 18 points during that rally.

The Lakers evened the series with a 103-102 victory in Game 6, the first of the series that wasn't decided by 10 points or more. Abdul-Jabbar hit two free throws with 14 seconds left to put the Lakers ahead. Magic Johnson had 22 points and 14 of his 19 assists in the first half.

Thomas scored 43 points for the Pistons in Game 6, including 25 in the third quarter to break a playoff record for points in a period. Philadelphia's Joe Fuiks scored 21 in a quarter during a 1947 game against Chicago.

game, under the circumstances," Worthy said. "I gave it all I had. I knew I had all summer to rest."

Worthy outpooled teammate Magic Johnson 7-4 to win his first postseason MVP award.

Johnson, who had 19 points and 14 assists in the seventh game, won the award in 1980, 1982 and 1987. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was the winner in 1985, the Lakers' other championship year in this decade.

"It's a great honor, but individual honors come with the success of the team," Worthy said. "You win everything as a team."

"I would have voted for Magic because he was consistently there every night. I accept the MVP with all my heart and I know I'll cherish it later in life."

Ex-college coach dies

ATLANTA (AP) — Robert Lee "Bobby" Dodd, the legendary football coach at Georgia Tech, was remembered by friends and rivals alike as a man devoted to winning but dedicated first to his players.

Dodd, who beat prostate cancer in 1975, died Tuesday after a battle with lung cancer. He was 79. Dodd's teams were 165-64-8 in his 22 seasons at Tech. His squads went to 13 bowl games, winning nine.

He retired as coach after the 1966 season and as athletic director in 1976.

Under Dodd, Georgia Tech ran up a 31-game unbeaten streak from 1950-53, going 29-0-2. The Yellow Jackets also became the first team to win six consecutive major bowl games.

Dodd pulled Georgia Tech out of the SEC after the 1963 season, when the conference refused to reduce its limit of 55 football scholarships each year. The meant schools would have to withdraw scholarships to some players because of the NCAA limit of 120 players on scholarship.

He retired after his 1966 team went 9-2, losing its regular-season finale to Georgia and the Orange Bowl to Florida.

In 1969, Dodd was named winner of the General Robert R. Neyland Trophy, named for his old college coach and presented by the Knoxville Quarterback Club to "an outstanding man who has contributed greatly to college athletics."

Race driver still critical

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Veteran driver Bobby Allison, recovering from injuries suffered in a crash at the NAS-CAR Miller 500 in Long Pond Sunday, was "a little bit sharper" and able to squeeze his wife's hand Tuesday morning, a spokesman said.

Allison, 50, of Hueytown, Ala., remained in critical but stable condition Tuesday at the Lehigh Valley Hospital Center's nervous system unit.

Davey Allison said Monday his father had a broken lower left leg, which was in traction, and fractured ribs. He said doctors drained fluid from his father's chest and relieved pressure in his skull, but said there was no further build-up of fluids or internal bleeding.

Initial reports from track officials said Bobby Allison had suffered a bruised heart, but doctors have since ruled that out, said Ed Gossage, spokesman for Allison's sponsor, Miller Racing.

Democrats choose nominee for 78th District House seat

Democrat Party leaders have chosen Knox City businessman David Counts as the nominee for the 78th District House seat being vacated by State Rep. Steve Carriker of Roby.

Carriker is seeking the 30th Senatorial District seat formerly held by Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls.

The 12-county 78th District includes Cottle, Garza, Kent, King, Knox, Lynn and Scurry counties in West Texas.

Counts will face former Snyder Mayor Rod Waller, the Republican nominee, in the November election.

Counts said that before his nomination becomes official, Carriker must be declared ineligible to seek re-election to the House. Democrats would not be allowed to replace Carriker otherwise, and the Republicans would take the seat by default, according to state law.

State Republican leaders have said they plan to look into the validity of the Democrats' strategy, but Counts said Democratic Party leaders have assured him he will be on the November ballot.

"What we do now is wait for Carriker's situation to be cleared up some," Counts said. "He has to be declared ineligible, and I anticipate that being done in the near future."

Counts is a longtime Democratic Party activist who has been Knox County Democratic chairman for eight years. He is past president of Knox City Lions Club.

Cotton council seeks applicants

Applicants for National Cotton Council's Cotton Leadership Class are being accepted.

The program to develop leadership potential in young people was established through The Cotton Foundation by DuPont Agricultural Products Department in 1983.

Candidates must derive their primary livelihood from one of the cotton industry's seven segments, and be between ages 27 to 40.

Deadline for entries is July 1.

For applications and more information, contact The Cotton Foundation, P.O. Box 12284, Memphis, Tenn. 38182.

Module-marking solution

Cotton producers using modular seed cotton storage systems have a solution to module-marking problems.

"Brand-a-bale," a black ink durable to weather but unable to withstand textile processing, was developed by Cotton Incorporated to prevent farmers from using spray paint to mark modules and bales.

Spray paint can contaminate fibers during textile production, resulting in dyeing inconsistencies and machinery slow down, says Dr. William Lalor, senior director of agricultural research for Cotton Incorporated. Since the ink can't endure textile processing, the contamination problem is eliminated.

Cotton Incorporated has licensed Stern Chemtech Corporation of Monroe, La., to produce the product.

The Painting of Hospice

When asked what Hospice means to me, I can answer by stating that it reminds me of a moment of silent reverence which happens only when one is alone with one's thoughts and the tranquility begins forming into a picture that needs painting.

Many people have the impression that Hospice Volunteers are only involved with terminal patients. I would prefer that this impression not remain, because we as Volunteers serve all who are in need of our support.

The family and the friends are also grieving from the experience of the moment and need the love and understanding that is provided by the Hospice Team.

It should really be stated that the Hospice Team works together to assist the patient and his loved ones as they experience the final moments of this lifetime.

Hospice programs provide a meaning for the time that we as Volunteers use to share with those who need the special care we have to offer.

There is a joy in living which only comes to those who serve as Hospice Volunteers. It warms the heart when one watches a smile develop to replace a tear of loneliness as one sits with those who are alone and feel the love as they reach out for a moment of friendliness.

As we listen to the silent thoughts that are moving about the room like a gentle breeze of a warm summer afternoon, a friendship develops everlasting in one's memories, and one realizes that Hospice is the fulfillment of love.

Hospice of West Texas is now taking applications for the Volunteer Training Program to begin July 11. No experience is needed to be a volunteer just a giving spirit. Everyone interested is encouraged to contact Ingrid Upton at 756-2772 or George von Hassel in Big Spring at 267-8201.

Dukakis, Bush a classic choice

The grueling presidential nominating contest that began in the snow-covered farmland of Iowa and ended under the palm trees of California has done little to define a new national agenda to replace the Reagan era. Even so, Americans will face a classic choice in November between the liberal views of Michael Dukakis and the conservative approach of George Bush.

Both candidates need to do a better job of spelling out their broad visions and specific policies for the voters here to consider.

Mr. Dukakis's next crucial challenge will be the selection of a running mate, a decision that may well determine whether the Democratic Party is united or divided in the fall. Jesse Jackson, having won the support of 7 million primary and caucus voters and the second-largest bloc of convention delegates, rightly demands to be considered. But unless Mr. Dukakis finds a formula that both keeps Mr. Jackson off the ticket and wins the backing of black voters, he is unlikely to taste victory in November.

Mr. Bush also must find a running mate who will bolster his support in California. His task is made more difficult by George Deukmejian's understandable refusal to join the ticket and thereby turn over the governor's chair to his Democratic lieutenant governor.

In the meantime, the vice president should begin to step out of Ronald Reagan's shadow. His objective ought to be to illuminate the starkness of the choice Americans will confront on Nov. 8.

Urges steps to avoid 'greenhouse'

A distinguished group of international scientists worried about the "greenhouse effect" that is changing the Earth's climate has bounced the ball, appropriately enough, into the court of the world's politicians.

As gases from fossil fuel burning trap energy from the sun near the Earth's surface, the globe gradually heats up. Over the next 50 years, the melting polar ice caps will raise the sea levels from 8 to 60 inches, the scientists predict.

In the next century, the experts believe, people will endure devastating floods and severe storms. Deserts will get even hotter. Agriculture will suffer in some areas but be made possible in others where now little can be grown, causing population shifts. . . . Canada and Siberia will disappear, as will some species of life.

With proper planning, mankind ought not be among them. The scientists suggest minimizing the damage by rapid development of alternative energy sources and use of nuclear energy, ending deforestation, and planning where to build dikes or take other measures to protect coastal cities.

Let grand jury hear Wright case

House Speaker Jim Wright's problems on the ethics front have taken a serious turn: By using a staff employee to help him write a book, he may have violated the law as well as House rules.

According to The Washington Post, Wright assigned a member of his congressional staff in 1984 to work on the book, "Reflections of a Public Man," which so far has brought the speaker about $55,000 in royalties.

The employee, who is no longer on Wright's staff, was quoted as saying that he spent about 200 hours on the book during office hours.

The book had a peculiar smell even before this revelation. It was published by a friend who reportedly was paid more than $250,000 by Wright's campaign committee for re-election services performed during 1985-86. Wright received a 55 percent royalty on book sales . . . four to five times the normal payment to authors.

The latest disclosure indicates that more than a House committee inquiry is needed. The Justice Department ought to empanel a grand jury to investigate whether Wright has broken the law by using a staff member to work on the book.

Korean student riots a good sign

Anti-Americanism as displayed in the newest student riots in South Korea is not to be ignored — but we shouldn't make too much of it either.

By all indications most South Koreans remain good friends of the United States, appreciative of the 1950-53 fighting to repel the North Korean invasion, appreciative of our co-defense of the Truce Line since that time, and appreciative of our help in bringing about a democratic change in president this year.

We feel the current demonstrations may be another manifestation of the new democracy the Republic of Korea is enjoying, and not a sign the roof is falling in.

Ignorance of math is intolerable

A federal inquiry into the extent of ignorance about math among young students shouldn't surprise anyone in Kansas. . . . Older students are ignorant of math, despite years of concern.

The schools have failed to help the unprepared older students. Remedial training courses clearly have not been provided.

In a few years the statistics about math ignorance among students ought to look better.

One reason for this statistical improvement will be the fact that today's ignorant older students won't be there anymore. The older ones of today then will be trying to function outside the classrooms.

But they'll still be ignorant, because school systems failed to fix the problem and then lied to the student about his graduation qualities.

When a law was passed forbidding the sale of ice cream sodas on Sunday, ice cream merchants got around it by serving ice cream with just syrup.

The sodaless soda served on Sunday became known as a Sunday until objections arose about naming the dessert after the Sabbath.

So the dish was renamed "sundae."

There was a long pause while the boys and girls thought about this, and then one piped up:

"For how long?"

THERE'S A LOT more to maturity than I realized. It doesn't end at 21 or 31 — or ever, I suspect, unless you let it.

And a large part of maturity is realizing that you (1) aren't really special, that many of your strongest principles are regarded by others as nutty, that you disagree with your closest friends on any thing, and that you'd better learn to disagree with them and remain friends, or look forward to a lonely old age.

In fact, you'll find that friends who agree with you a lot are sort of dull and your conversation lags.

That's why you may walk into the newsroom and find a group of us going at it, hammer and tongues, then calling the argument off and going out for coffee together.

TO BOIL it down to a sentence, I suspect more progress results from disagreement argued to its completion than from pleasant conversation.

The important phase is "disagreement argued to its completion." If you depart angrily or mid-argument you lose face and, probably, a friend or two.

Commission supports spending for Martin County transportation

West Texas Opportunities Inc. (WTOI) gained the support of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Wednesday for continued funding through the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation for their Section 18 Rural Public Transportation System.

The application requests $277,939 from the highway department to be matched with local funds for $185,393 plus $1,500 in fares, for a total project cost of $464,832.

The funds have been projected at $134,244 in administrative costs and $20,000 in capital costs, with next operating expenditures pegged at $310,598.

The administrative costs, $134,244, include partial or total salaries for nine full-time employees and office expenses.

Capital costs of $20,000 reflects the purchase of a nine-passenger minivan. Janet Eberhardt, WTOI director, said the van is needed because the system has been using five Head Start 1981 to 1983 model vehicles. "This new one will replace one of those," said Eberhardt.

Operating costs, projected at $310,598, include salaries for six dispatchers, nine drivers and driver assistants, as well as fuel and maintenance expenses.

The system, which provides rural transportation services to the general public, targeted at handicapped and mobility impaired individuals, serves six Permian Basin counties: Andrews, Dawson, Gaines, Howard, Martin and Upton.

The agency maintains dispatchers and drivers in eight towns in those six counties: Andrews, Lamesa, Seminole, Seagraves, Big Spring, Stanton, McCamey and Rankin.

West Texas Opportunities Inc. has agreements with all common carriers in the region which permits them to provide this service.

Eberhardt said most of the people they serve — handicapped, mobility impaired, and low income — pay a fare, which is 25 cents. The transportation is available for in-town trips to doctor's offices, shopping and other uses.

Out-of-town trips are for medical purposes, with trips to Lubbock, Midland, Odessa, Big Spring or San Angelo scheduled as needed.

Denise White was moved in May into the position of Consumer Service Representative of Cap Rock Electric Cooperative. In this new position, she will be available to confer with members in person or by telephone concerning bills or billing procedure questions.

Denise went to work for Cap Rock in 1982. She left employment when her daughter was born and returned to work when she felt the child was old enough to attend day care. All her work experience with Cap Rock has been in the Billing Department, including experience gained since her return to Cap Rock employment in June of 1987.

Married to Mark White, owner and operator of White's Paint & Body, Denise and her family live in Stanton. They have three children: Brian, 12; Eric, 10; and Michelle, 4.

Denise was born in Dumas, Texas, and graduated from Stroman High School in Victoria. She and Mike moved to Stanton in 1982.

Outlook for 1988 cotton crop in Martin County favorable

Cotton experts say warm temperatures and timely rains could mean the blooming of another profitable crop.

Area farmers will plant an estimated 3.2 million acres, according to Plains Cotton Growers Inc., an association of cotton farmers in 25 South Plains counties.

Almost all that acreage is now planted, said Don Johnson, executive director of PCG said Thursday.

Hot temperatures last week are just what the plants need to start growing, Johnson said. High winds, which can damage young cotton plants, died down in the past week, forecasters said.

For the 25-county area encompassing PCG's membership, 1987's cotton crop yielded 2.67 million bales for a total value of $1.06 billion, according to figures recently released by the association.

That topped the previous record of $900 million set by 1973's 2.9 million-bale crop, PCG said.

At an average price of 55.5 cents, PCG set the lint value at almost $711 million. Seed, at $75 per ton for 1.1 million tons, was worth another $85.1 million.

By GERRY YARDLEY

In spite of this hot, windy, dry-ish weather Stanton still has some lovely yards. Have you been looking each week for the "Yard of the Week" sign and wondered how our hard-working Martians must ache from the work it takes to keep those yards looking so lovely?

The last week we saw the sign it was in Gerald and Gracie Hanson's yard. Gerald has offered a bonus gift to "Yard" winners and we'll let you know more about that next week. Just heard that the sign "just" went into R.O. and Allie Anderson's yard for this week — YEA!

We've had lots of young visitors since school is out. You know, many old timers here in Martin County, haven't been in this building — your Old Jail — ever! If you haven't been in here in several years come by and visit.

We are expecting lots of visitors on July 9 — Old Settlers Day! Now you bring your out-of-town visitors by so we won't be disappointed. Of course, you or they may want to buy a child's tee-shirt, a Millionaire game, notecards, postcards, or Centennial plates or books.

Be sure you begin planning your parade float soon. Theme is "Military Heritage" and Edgar Standifer will be a special honoree. There will be food, fun & visitation galore! Come and be a part of it all!

I know some of our Martin Countians are visiting in San Angelo this week (last week) during Old Fort Concho days — really, it is Fiesta del Concho days. Joni Hazlewood has a craft booth and several Martin Countians are planning to go. Sounds like fun!

Bark can take bite out of cotton farmers profits

In 1986, barkly cotton cost growers in Texas alone, about $22 million. The problem of bark can take a big bite out of cotton producers profits.

Under the coordination of the Barky Cotton Research Task Force, six current studies are aimed at reducing the problem.

Early results point to two main things producers can do to reduce barkiness. The first thing to do is ensure as early a crop as possible.

Early season insect control, good quality planting seed, the use of harvest-aid chemicals, correct plant population (40,000-50,000) plants per acre and a weed free field are all important aspects in reducing bark.

There are studies being conducted to produce a more gentle stripping action. This harvester modification will reduce the stick content in harvested material and is a way to reduce the percentage of barkly grades.

The Barky Cotton Task Force involves the Plains Cotton Growers, Cotton Incorporated, USDA, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Stations and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

TU Electric's Martin Lake gains award

TU Electric's Martin Lake Steam Electric Station, the nation's first producer of commercial-grade manufactured gypsum, has been chosen for the 1988 Environmental Protection Award of Power magazine.

The award recognizes the power plant for its pioneering use in turning scrubber residue into gypsum, which is processed into wallboard.

The production of gypsum begins when scrubbers at the three-unit coal-fired plant clean flue gases. The extensive environmental-protection equipment has been fine-tuned so that it extracts a slurry of gypsum as a by-product of the air-cleaning processes.

The gypsum is moved to a nearby plant owned by Windsor Gypsum Co. which can utilize about 1,000 tons per day of gypsum to produce wallboard for the homebuilding industry. The operation began in December 1986.

"Our steady partner in this project has been Windsor Gypsum," said Ned Baker, manager of the TU Electric plant. Baker said Windsor Gypsum now can manufacture high-quality wallboard at a competitive price. TU Electric's customers are spared the costs devoted to putting the gypsum in a landfill.

"We are producing a manufactured product, electricity, and a raw material, gypsum, at the same time. It makes good economic sense and it makes good environmental sense," Baker said.

In a story in its April edition, Power noted that manufactured gypsum dries faster and is stronger than mined gypsum and produces stronger wallboard.

The Martin Lake power plant is located about 140 miles southeast of Dallas near Henderson in Rusk County. The plant's three units produce a total capacity of 2,250,000 kilowatts, making Martin Lake the largest lignite-fueled generating plant in the world.

The magazine said Windsor considers its Henderson wallboard plant to be the most modern in existence.

The Power magazine Environmental Protection Award was presented to Baker today during the American Power Conference in Chicago.

The award reads, in part: "For outstanding achievement by industry in the protection of our natural environment."

Robert G. Schwiager, editorial director, made the presentation.

Schwiager said that the award has been made annually for 18 years. Power, published in New York City by McGraw-Hill.

Gregg

Engineer: Work will be on time — or else

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

The contractor who is eventually selected to complete the Gregg Street widening projects should plan on finishing the job on schedule — or else.

State Department of Highways and Public Transportation Resident Engineer Mike Chetty said that he will personally be supervising the projects and delays will be dealt with harshly.

"We're going to be more difficult to work with than in the past. If the work is not completed on time we are going to charge damages," he said.

That means the contractor will not be paid for work performed past the specified deadline for completion of the projects, Chetty said.

Chetty, who came to Big Spring from San Angelo in September 1986, serves as resident engineer for Howard, Mitchell and Nolan counties.

Highway Department officials announced on May 23 they had decided to proceed with a project to widen Gregg Street from 10th Street to Farm to Market Road 700. The project generated months of discussion and debate among Big Spring residents.

Highway officials notified Mayor Cotton Mize June 8 they have approved a separate project — a continuation of the street widening which will include Gregg Street on U.S. 87 to the Missouri Pacific Railroad overpass — just north of 2nd Street.

On Tuesday night, the council unanimously gave its approval to begin seeking an engineer, to design the relocation of the water lines to comply with highway department officials' request for the Gregg Street widening project.

Big Spring Public Works Director Tom Decell estimated it will cost the city $341,013.11 to move the waterlines from beneath Gregg Street to parallel alleyways.

Chetty said bidletting will begin in April 1989 and estimated it will take approximately one month for a contract to be awarded.

"It should take two weeks to a month for the contractor to move in and set up so they should get started by the end of May or the first of June," he said.

Qualified contractors throughout Texas will be allowed to bid on the projects, Chetty said.

"We've done work with contractors from Kansas City (Missouri) and Kansas, but I don't think these projects are big enough to attract out-of-state contractors," he said.

Several merchants whose businesses are located on Gregg Street where work on the second project will occur expressed concern this week the construction will adversely affect them.

Both projects will be completed within four months, Chetty assured.

"We usually give them ample time, more than enough time (to complete a project), but we're going to really be tough on this one. We want them to be on time, to get in and get out," he said.

Whether work on the projects will occur on Saturdays has not yet been decided.

"That will be up to the contractor and me, but with the volume of traffic on Saturdays working could very well create a safety problem for the workers," Chetty said.

There will be two inspectors from his office at the job site at all times, the resident engineer said.

"We have the ability to add more when necessary," said Chetty.

Although the projects are technically considered separate, contractors will bid on both.

"They are only separate in the sense the money comes from different places," Chetty said.

State Department of Highways and Public Transportation Resident Engineer Mike Chetty says that he will personally be supervising the widening projects and delays will be dealt with harshly.

Merchants to have input

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

State Department of Highways and Public Transportation Resident Engineer Mike Chetty — who is in charge of both Gregg Street widening projects — said he will begin meeting with Big Spring business owners personally Monday.

Chetty said he will be speaking with owners of businesses located in an 18-block area — from 10th Street to Farm to Market Road 700 — in an effort to ease parking problems that will be created by the construction slated to begin next year.

"Right now we're in the process of getting plans and information together on the southern leg of the project. I'm going to be doing it myself and working out where the driveways will be.

"We will be trying to work with business owners so it's most advantageous to them," he said.

Chetty said he expects to be visiting about 42 businesses — an endeavor that will take him approximately a month unless he has trouble contacting them.

Business owners are also welcome to contact his office to schedule an appointment, he said. "Although we are interested in talking to people who work at the businesses, we really want to talk to the owners," said Chetty.

Although he must follow guidelines mandated by state and federal officials' on driveway policy, Chetty said he wants business owners to provide feedback.

"Rather than me saying 'I'd like the driveway to go here', I'd like people to tell me their ideas. Numbers and widths are what we are interested in," he said.

Plans for the street widening project will be delivered to the Abilene office in mid-July and

Big Spring Herald sees personnel changes in news, circulation areas

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Two newsmen have recently joined the staff of the Big Spring Herald, and a new circulation sales manager has been named at the newspaper.

Steve A. Geissen and Michael Duffy have joined the news staff as reporters.

Geissen, a 23-year-old graduate of Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches, will specialize in health and education coverage. His previous experience includes a position with Ultra magazine, a Houston-based monthly publication.

"I'm finding it's quite an adjustment," Geissen said, "moving from Houston to Big Spring. I'm enjoying the climate, compared to the Houston humidity.

"I knew some people who had lived in Big Spring before, and they told me the best thing about it was how friendly the people are. I'm finding that to be true."

Duffy, 38, is a graduate of Northeastern Oklahoma State University. He comes to the city beat from Chickasha, Okla., where he was managing editor of the Chickasha Daily Express, an afternoon newspaper with a circulation of approximately 7,000.

He is married. He and wife Debra Ann have two children, Jason Reed and Matthew Duffy, and are expecting another.

"I've been very impressed with the professionalism of a paper this size," said Duffy, whose experience includes a 4½-year position with the Tulsa World, "and the attention to detail of the people at the paper."

Donna Brence, a senior computer major at Southwestern State University in Weatherford, Okla., has joined the newsroom staff as an assistant for the summer.

She is a 1984 graduate of Minco High School in Minco, Okla. and is the daughter of Samuel and Marcella Brence. Mr. Brence is the manager of the broom factory being moved to Big Spring Federal Prison Camp.

Donna, 21, is the youngest of four children; two brothers remain in Minco and one is a resident of Alexandria, La.

Dale Ferguson has moved from his position as retail manager to circulation sales manager.

"It's a new title for an old position," he said. "Circulation has always been viewed as a delivery job, but Thompson views circulation as a sales position. We don't just deliver the paper, we sell the paper.

"And really, that's true," he said. He has worked for the Herald for almost 10 years in all. He and his wife April have four children: Shelby, Jarrett, Chelsea and Neiman.

Ferguson, 35, replaces former circulation manager Billy Warden, who has taken a position with a newspaper in Hamilton, Ohio.

Bennie Jones has replaced Sylvia Collins, former assistant circulation manager. A Snyder native, Jones has one daughter, Autumn Smith.

ARC hear about legislation

By ALISHA GOLDMAN
Copy Editor

Concerned citizens and members of the Association for Retarded Citizens learned Thursday night how they can involve themselves in legislative and funding issues.

ARC Austin representative Pat Brenner told about 30 people attending the 3-hour meeting about her successes — and failures — in seeing bills passed.

Brenner tearfully told the group, "(My daughter Shelley has) given back a lot more than she's taken. It's my responsibility and yours to see that the Shelleys of the world get what they need to be a member of society."

"If you don't do it, it's not going to get done," was Brenner's advice to the volunteer organization. "We need to be learning the issues."

She emphasized that volunteers can actively participate in the legislative process by calling state legislators.

"If we are going to see any change in the state of Texas, we're going to have to help (finance it)," she also told them.

She urged them to contact U.S. Senator Lloyd Bentsen (D-Houston) about Medicaid reform legislation that will affect families with mentally retarded children.

Gene Adkins, director of special education for the Big Spring school district, also spoke to the group and gave a report on local funding of special education.

He said the local system was responsible for 34 percent of the special education budget during the last school year, and he expects it to be 40 to 45 percent in the coming year.

He said the high percentage of local funding "shows a whole of a lot of support from the school board."

Brenner added that some school districts do not contribute "even one penny" to special education and commended the local school board for its support.

Mr. Pete remembers Juneteenth

Article by STEVE GEISSEN

"Mr. Pete! Mr. Pete!" yelled Artice Berry towards the little rent house in her back yard on the north side of town. "Mr. Pete, someone's here to see you! Mr. Pete!"

A barely audible rustling sound could be heard coming from inside the little house that was covered on the top and the sides with grey shingles and trimmed in light blue.

"Mr. Pete, someone wants to talk to you!" "What's that?" came a voice from inside the house.

"Mr. Pete, someone from the newspaper wants to talk to you about Juneteenth!"

The light blue screen door of the little house creaked open, and Pete Johnson, known to his friends as Mr. Pete, slowly walked out onto his porch with the aid of a shiny metal cane.

An 80-year-old, short, thin black man, with grey hair that stands straight up on his head, Mr. Pete wore a dirty white T-shirt with a clothes pin stuck in the upper left corner and grey slacks that could have used the aid of the belt dangling unfastened from his waist.

After introductions were made, Mr. Pete made it known that the interviewer had come to the right man to get the low down on Juneteenth in Big Spring.

"Sit down, and I'll tell you 'bout the 19th of June.

To my knowin', there's only been one 19th of June here. Right there in that park over there. Mr. Pete points with his cane to the west of his house, located on North West Fifth Street. Right over yonder in Lakeview Park.

I went over there and you know what they was doin'? They was sellin' it! Dollar and a half for a plate of barbeque! I ain't lyin'. Right over there. He jabs his cane in the direction of the park.

I didn't get none of it. I just went over there, looked, turned around and walked right on back.

That's the last I heard of a June 19th being here. They don't have nothin' here, like all the people do. He shakes his head from side to side with a look of disgust. They don't get together and have nothin'. They might have somethin' 'round their home or somethin' like that, but the last 19th of June that's been 4 or 5 years. They don't have nothin' 'round here like everybody else.

I came to Big Spring in 1941. The first of '41 I hit Big Spring, and I've been here off and on ever since. Came here from Marlin on the cotton pool. They brought a truck load of us here.

After pickin' cotton, I got a job washin' dishes. I'd wash dishes here, then go off. I'd go off, come back, go off, come back.

Then I went to cleanin' yards. I was cleanin' yards when they had that June 19th in the park.

Lucille Houston, my old lady then, said "Daddy, you know tomorrow is the 19th."

I said, "Yeah, momma."

She said, "Now, don't work none. I'm goin' off to work, and I'm goin' to get off 'bout 3 or 4 o'clock if I can."

"Alright, momma," I said. But I knows I was lyin' 'cause I had two yards to do over there in Banks. I cleaned them two yards then I came on home.

When Lucille got home she said, "Daddy, what you want to do about tomorrow?"

I said, "Momma, they supposed to have a little June 19th over there in the park."

She said, "You want to go?"

I said, "No, momma, cause they tell me their sellin' that stuff over there, and I ain't goin' to give them nary a nickel."

Momma said, "No, they ain't sellin' nothin'."

Well, the 19th came, and who was it who come by? Some lady came by and asked us if we wanted to ride over there. We rode up that way and turned down there He points out the route with his cane, and we went around to the side of the park.

I walked up there and said how much is it (the barbeque)?

And he said, "Dollar and a half a plate." Mr. Pete's eyes flare.

Momma walked up there and said, "No, I don't believe I want any of it. Daddy, you want any of it?"

"I don't want none of it, no." He quickly shakes his head. I said, "Momma, we got enough to eat at home."

And, man, that has been the last one! He raps his cane on the porch step.

I sure wish I was home back in Marlin when they come havin' the 19th of June. Mmmm, mmmm. A smile breaks across his face. Out in Marlin, Lawda mercy, man, they start on a Friday.

They start barbequin' on a Friday night. . . . You talk about niggers havin' one of the best times they ever had. Dance as long as you wanta, then stop and go eat. Eat all you want — free! Beef, steak, ribs, hogheads, anything you wanted, and they had a whole barrel of soda water sittin up there.

They had this nigger down there called Fresh Robinson, he could barbeque, ain't no lie. When he barbequed you could smell it before you got there.

Last time one of my friends went down there, he said, "Pete, boy, you oughta been in Marlin. They had one of them old time 19th of Junes down there."

I said, "I know they did, you don't have to tell me about it — I know. I was in such bad shape I couldn't get up there."

But 'round here: nothin'. They don't have anything here, not here. I ain't gonna sit here and tell you no lies. They — don't — have — no — good — 19th — here. He emphasized each word with a rap of his cane.

That 19th here, some white man gave those niggers a hog and half a yearlin'. They sat over there cut it up, barbequed it, and all they didn't sell they divided up and carried it home. They didn't give you, no, nothin'! No they didn't, No — they — didn't.

I didn't want none of it no how. No, they don't have nothin' here. If you want somethin' for the 19th you have to get together and go in with your friends and neighbors.

I ain't gonna sit here and tell you no lies and say, His voice drops down to a low pitch "Yeah, they have a good time 'round here for the 19th." Because I know. If I didn't know, I'd tell you: I don't know. But I know, so there ain't no reason to sit here tellin' you no lies.

This year I'm gonna see if my landlady feels like barbequin', and if she do, a couple days before the 19th I'm gonna start huntin' me up some mesquite wood. We'll go into together and buy us some ribs and chicken and beef and invite our friends around. Chester across the road out there can barbeque as good as you want.

Oh, we're gonna get together and try to have something even if we have to buy it. If the Lawd is willing, we'll try to have something on the 19th of June. It may not be all that much, but we'll enjoy the 19th.

How it came to be

Two and a half years after Abraham Lincoln's emancipation proclamation, Union major general Gordon Granger arrived in Galveston and announced that all Texas slaves were free.

Lincoln's proclamation during the Civil War had little effect in the Confederacy, but Granger's declaration on June 19, 1865 brought the long-awaited realization of freedom to Texas slaves.

Some historical facts pertaining to Juneteenth, culled from the June 1988 Texas Monthly:

- Some decendants of emancipated slaves later remembered that June 19 was marked by solemn services of thanksgiving, while others reported jubilous festivities.

- In 1979 black legislators successfully pushed through legislation establishing Juneteenth as a state holiday. But some prominent blacks — those who viewed the celebrations as being strongly associated with negative stereotypes and segregation — opposed the legislation.

- It is not known how the day became to be known as Juneteenth. Black newspapers didn't use the term until the 1920s when the day was an unofficial holiday on which blacks were excused from work.

- Texas is not the only state where emancipation celebrations take place. Other states have their own emancipation celebrations, depending upon when local plantations received the liberation news. Florida's holiday is May 20 and Mississippi's is May 8, for example.

- Blacks who left Texas took Juneteenth with them. June 19 is celebrated in Oklahoma, Arkansas, and even in Milwaukee and San Francisco.

- In the past, on Juneteenth, the all-white city governments in Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Houston allowed blacks to have access to whites-only parks and zoos. In 1953, after a group of black ministers in Fort Worth protested the unfairness of the practice, the official Juneteenth observations in that city went into decline, then were stopped in 1961. They were revived in 1974.

- In East Texas, Juneteenth became the black Fourth of July and was celebrated in similar ways. Family homecomings, suppers under shady trees, baseball games, speeches and readings from historic documents were the order of the day on Juneteenth in East Texas.

New group addressing dropout problem

By ALISHA GOLDMAN
Copy Editor

A local group is addressing the problem of dropouts in schools at a forum for parents and their children next week.

Members of Hispanic Women for Progress met Tuesday night to solidify their plans for a public forum at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the West Side Community Center, 1311 W. 4th St.

Parents of children in the fifth to eighth grades are encouraged to attend and learn about tutoring opportunities, said Lupe Dominguez, president.

"We hope by targeting this age group we can encourage them to finish high school," she said.

Members of the group will be notifying area residents through churches this weekend.

"We want to address the parents — that is why we are going to the churches," said Dominguez.

According to the by-laws, the organization hopes to give help to parents and students who are at high risk for dropping out.

"Already in the first grade we have a list of students who are at risk (of dropping out). These kids have already met failure," said Martha Martinez, secretary for the new organization.

The three speakers at the forum will attempt — by sharing their own life experiences with education — to encourage students to remain in school, said Dominguez.

The speakers are Maria Alvear, a recent

Big Spring High School graduate who has received a scholarship to Notre Dame University; Debra Gwen, a nurse at a local medical center; and Ike Lowe, head nurse of the operating room at Scenic Mountain Medical Center.

A question and answer session will follow the speakers.

The group hopes to establish a free tutoring service for students having difficulty in school, beginning with those who attend the forum. They are seeking volunteers to help with the project.

The tutoring project is only the beginning of the group's plans for projects, however, Martinez said.

"We hope to offer counseling. We aren't just tutoring... we want to have different areas," she said.

Anniversary

The E.R. Thompsons

Mr. and Mrs. E.R. (Shorty) Thompson, 1210 Johnson St., will be honored on their 50th wedding anniversary June 25 in Garrett Hall at First United Methodist Church, from 2 to 4 p.m.

Hosting the event will be Mrs. Thompson's sister, Susie Grant, Wylie; and her nieces, Joy Petty, Abilene, Peggy Billingsley, Parker, and Jodi Grant, Lewisville.

Shorty was born to the late Mr. and Mrs. E.R. Thompson Sr. Oct. 6, 1916 in Dyersburg, Tenn. He moved to Texas when he was a child.

Mrs. (Oneda) Thompson was born to the late Mr. and Mrs. J.A. McWilliams Sept. 12, 1912 in Shep.

The Thompsons met when their families were neighbors in Merkel. They were married June 18, 1938 in Merkel, with the late Rev. O.B. Tatum, officiating.

After Thompson was discharged from the U.S. Army, they moved to Big Spring in 1946. He owned his business, where he worked as a mechanic, from 1946 until retiring in 1978.

All friends and relative are invited to attend.

Rogers wins doubles trapshooting victory

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Big Spring resident Kelly Rogers is the new Texas State Doubles Trapshooting Champion.

Rogers won the title June 10 at the Texas State Trapshooting Tournament in Amarillo, outlasting about 250 other competitors. He tied with five others with a score of 98X100 after regulation.

Kelly, Andy Smith of Lubbock and Gary Sherrod of Idalou shot perfect in the first shootout, with Sherrod dropping from contention in the second shootout.

In the third and final shootout, Rogers outscored Smith 20 to 19 to capture the state title.

The title is the third for Rogers, who won the Texas All-Around and Junior championships in 1982.

He was named runner-up in this year's All-Around and Overall competition, placing second behind Britt Robinson of Tahoka in both events.

Robinson scored 391X400 to Rogers' 387X400 in All-Around competition. In the Overall category, Robinson edged Rogers, 676X700 to 671X700.

Rogers again had to edge Smith in a shootout to capture second place in the Overall category, which occurred on the last day of competition at the Amarillo Gun Club.

About 375 competitors registered for the six-day event, with top shooters from Texas and several other states attending.

Rogers' high marks enabled him to be named to the 1988 Texas State Trap Team. Other members of the team are: Mike Fisher, Australia; Charlie Long, Houston; Smith; and Robinson.

then forwarded to Austin, the resident engineer said.

Project plans call for Gregg Street to be widened by seven feet on each side of the highway to allow for construction of a left turn lane.

Highway officials said the 10th Street to FM 700 project was proposed based on the accident rate of that portion of the highway, thus qualifying for $700,000 in federal funds. An additional $50,000 will be awarded for traffic lights.

"We feel the lack of left turn signals is responsible for the many accidents that have occurred. There have been a number of people seriously injured.

"We are concerned about the public's safety. There is obviously something wrong and we want to do something about it," Chetty said.

A separate street widening project involving Gregg Street on U.S. 87 to the Missouri Pacific Railroad overpass — just north of 2nd Street — was approved by highway officials last week.

The second project will be funded with $400,000 in state monies. Both projects will be completed at the same time in an effort to avoid more problems for business owners, Chetty said.

"All utilities (Texas Utilities and the city of Big Spring) will be removed before we go to contract."

Within five years all the signal lights on Gregg Street will be upgraded, Chetty said.

Pictographs promoted by family

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH
 Paint Rock is famous for its Indian pictographs. Usually when you visit a place with Indian drawings, you will see the work of one group of Indians. But when you go to Paint Rock, you see the work of all the nomads that wandered up and down the Concho River. It's like going to an art gallery where you see the work of someone like Rembrandt and Picasso side by side. You see the techniques of entirely different groups of people with different cultures.
 Kay Campbell is a teacher in Paint Rock. She lives on a ranch just north of town where an outstanding display of Indian pictographs is located.
 "The land was settled by my grandfather back in the 1870's and I inherited the land from him," says Kay. "The pictographs were made by Indians both pre-historic and historic. There are about 1,500 paintings that were made over a period of about 900 years by various nomadic tribes who wandered along the rivers of Texas.

Tumbleweed Smith

 The pictographs cover a large area. They are on a limestone bluff nearly a half mile long and 60 feet high which is located about a hundred yards from the Concho River. Climbing is not recommended, since cactus grows profusely on the hillside leading up to the rocks where the pictographs are.
 Kay has become an expert on the pictographs. She has spent much time studying them and interpreting what the different symbols mean.

 "My family has taken it on themselves to protect the paintings and we try to share them with people as best we can. But still we need to protect them. And that's why we insist that everyone go view the pictographs with a guide."
 Right now the way Kay and her family are sharing the pictographs is by a little river tour. They have a dock in Paint Rock near the Highway 83 bridge over the Concho. "We have trained teen-agers in town to be the guides and all summer the teen-agers take the little river boat down the Concho about a half mile and they follow a trail up to the pictographs."
 Kay thinks the boat trip is probably the best thing they have done as far as getting people to the pictographs. "We're making the young people in our area aware of the significance and the historical background of the paintings."

 Passengers board a pontoon boat that holds fifteen people. The cruise is offered every day and takes about two hours. Kay comments, "Anytime anyone is coming and bringing a larger group they do need to notify us so we'll wait for them and have extra guides on hand." The ticket office for the Concho cruise is in a 100-year-old building in Paint Rock that was once a barber shop.
 The pictographs at Paint Rock are the most numerous in the state. "The other day a scholar from California was here and he said he had always been interested in pictographs and he had visited many pictograph sites. He said he saw more pictographs here than at all the other sites he had ever visited."

PHILADELPHIA — A reticulated giraffe stretches his neck and tongue to get a nibble of some leaves high above his head at the Philadelphia Zoo on Wednesday.

Wandering whale

Teen runaway visits Big Apple, turns around

NEW YORK (AP) — A wayward humpback whale who strayed up the Hudson River cut his Big Apple visit short after Coast Guard officials gunned their engines, banged pipes and sounded horns to get him to turn around.
 The 30- to 40-foot whale, described by ocean researchers as being a juvenile, was last spotted just after 6 a.m. today off the Earle Naval Weapons Station in New Jersey, said Coast Guard spokesman Larry Lawrence. The station is approximately 50 miles from New York City.

 The gray-and-white whale wandered into the Hudson Thursday afternoon. "He just made a wrong turn following the contours of the ocean floor," said Judy Rabb of the Long Island-based Okeanos Ocean Research Foundation.

The whale went as far as 80th Street before two Coast Guard boats that were tracking him got the endangered mammal to reverse direction by sounding horns, banging pipes, gunning their engines and doing anything else they could think of to annoy the creature.
 Lawrence said the Coast Guard was through babysitting the wandering whale.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Edited by Lea Whitehead

Satellite system: entertainment bonanza

Circuit Satellite's staff invites the public to drop by June 25 at their Consumer Information Show to learn more about new state-of-the-art satellite systems that are easy to use and offer a potential of more than 150 channels of information and entertainment. The staff includes (left to right): David Pappajohn, James Crawford, Dawn Berry, Fred Gonzales, Edward Berry and Blane Dyess.

If you haven't looked into home satellite systems in the past several years, you may be in for a surprise.
 "If your satellite system was purchased before 1987, it's like a dinosaur compared with the systems of today," says David Pappajohn, partner in Circuit Satellite, 2605 Wasson Road.
 "When the home satellite system industry began in 1979-80, they were bulky, very big and expensive, and not at all user-friendly," says Pappajohn.
 "The industry has made about a 180% turnaround," he says. "All the components — positioner, decoder and receiver — are in one compact box. The easy-to-use hand control is pre-programmed; it's as easy to use as your conventional TV hand-control."
 Perhaps the greatest news is the entertainment potential posed by the state-of-the-art home satellite system. Viewers get 24 channels on each of 17 satellites — a total of over 150 channels to choose from: music, education, documentaries, movies, foreign language, major networks, video, religion, sports, health, the superstations, and more.
 "About 90% of what the dish owner watches is not available on conventional TV," says Pappajohn. The system also provides many small features: it gives the time, it tells you how many minutes are left on the show you've just tuned in, and it even tells you what the next show is!

 The public can learn more about home satellites at Circuit Satellite's Consumer Information Show Saturday, June 25, at their Wasson Road location. The event is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and free barbecue and soft drinks will be served. A live radio broadcast will add to the festivities.
 "We hope to answer everyone's questions — and remove any doubts — about home satellite systems," says Pappajohn.
 Circuit Satellite offers complete sales and service. They sell and install new systems, update old systems, make repairs and do programming.
 "Our middle name is service," declares Pappajohn. "We're here and accountable." Their service area covers a radius of 60-miles from Big Spring.
 Their most popular model is the Tracker 5 IRD. For a price tag of $2,595 the homeowner will get a 10-ft. aluminum mesh dish, fully installed and guaranteed. Included is a one year's bonus subscription package, including HBO, Cinemax and other choice channels. And remember, you can receive 80 free channels.

 Of special interest to area farmers and ranchers is the data transmission network monitor which will enable them to receive data on stock market, futures, weather, money rate of exchange and other marketing information.
