Ouch! Ranchers feeling drought's pinch

"South Texas is a land of drought, broken up by intermittent floods," says farmer Ann Snyder of D'Hanis. "You can't have one extreme without the other."

LA PRYOR — Pete Emmert, manager of the Chaparrosa Ranch, stands before a herd of Santa Gertrudis cattle recently. The nation's drought is threatening parts of Texas.

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

LA PRYOR — Pete Emmert walked toward his Santa Gertrudis herd basking in the hot South Texas sun and he shook his head.

If the Chaparrosa Ranch he manages doesn't get any rain soon, he will be forced to move the cattle to other ranches, as far away as Oklahoma — a 400-mile trek.

The drought that has strangled hundreds of farms and ranches across the country is threatening to do the same in Texas, as the hot summer begins with little rain in sight.

"I think everybody around here is in about the same boat," said Emmert, who is the general manager of the ranch owned by B.K. Johnson, a descendant of the South Texas King family.

"The younger cows really suffer because there is no water," he said.

The Chaparrosa Ranch, seven miles west of this South Texas community, stretches more than 68,000 acres over Zavala and Maverick counties.

But because of the dry weather the past eight months, Emmert already has had to move more than 3,300 head of cattle to Oklahoma and other parts of Texas.

More than 55,000 acres of ranch grass has dried to an ash-color that is barely fit for rattlesnakes and jackrabbits.

The Chaparrosa Ranch is in the middle of one of the most parched areas of the state, where average rainfall is about 17 inches. Only 7 inches has fallen on this spread since last fall.

For the Chaparrosa and other ranches and farms, the drought could spell multimillion dollar losses because farmers would have to irrigate their crops until maturity and ranchers would be forced to move or liquidate their stock as they did during a drought in 1984, when state officials imported $1 bales of hay to help ranchers.

Steve Munday, a spokesman for the Fort Worth-based Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, said worse conditions elsewhere could cause even bigger problems for Texas.

"Northern Mexico is having one of the worst droughts in some 20-odd years and they are exporting large numbers of steers into Texas and along the border and that has a dampening effect on the price of cattle," Munday said.

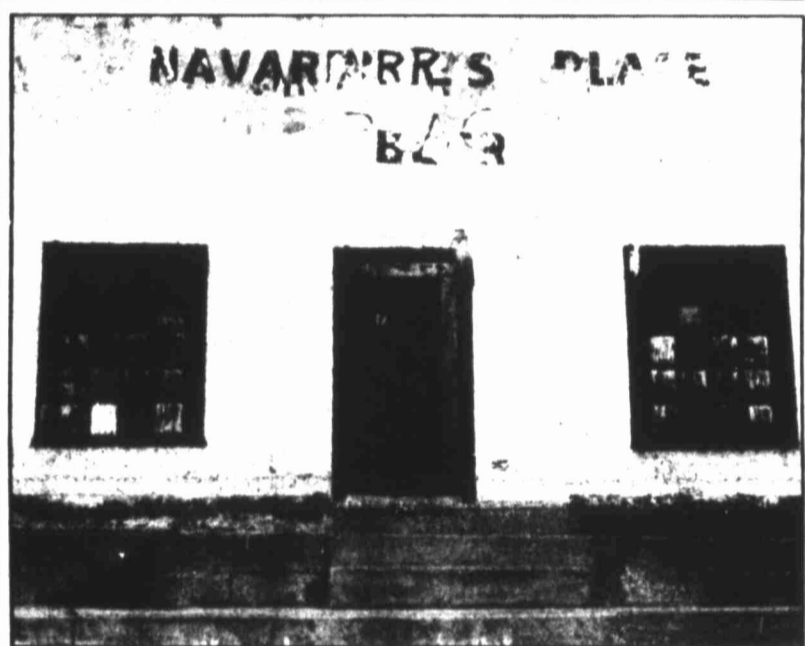

But some South Texas farmers have gotten used to the arid conditions and predict too much rain may not be far away.

"South Texas is a land of drought, broken up by intermittent floods," says farmer Ann Snyder of D'Hanis. "You can't have one extreme without the other."

Along with the lack of rain has been a lack of federal aid. In other parts of the country, Native Americans have done rain dances, but in Texas, state officials are on the war path with the federal government.

About 50 Texas counties have gained U.S. Department of Agriculture approval for emergency feed discounts, but

This was the scene of the Friday night death of Domingo Garcia, at Navarette's, 506 N.W. 4th.

Homicide possible in Garcia's death

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

A Howard County man was killed Friday night outside a northside bar and police are investigating the death as a homicide, Big Spring Detective Scott Griffin said.

The victim was identified as Domingo H. Garcia, 63, Gail Rt., Box 88, Griffin said.

Police were called to Navarette's, 506 N.W. 4th, about 8:50 p.m., and discovered Garcia's body lying outside the bar, Griffin said.

"A verbal argument escalated into a physical argument and Mr. Garcia was struck and knocked down the stairs. It was a heck of a fall. There were no signs of a gunshot or stab wound on the body,"

Sgt. Bobby Armstrong said. Garcia, who was retired, was bleeding from the mouth and arm, Armstrong said.

Griffin said, "we do have a suspect," although no arrest has yet been made. He refused to speculate if an arrest was imminent.

Howard County Justice of the Peace Willie Grant ordered an autopsy and Garcia's body was transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center in Big Spring, Griffin said.

A preliminary autopsy was performed Saturday, but Griffin said police are still unsure what type of injuries caused Garcia's death.

Big Spring detectives are the continuing the investigation.

Grim future Crowding forces shelter's hand

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

History is about to be made at the Howard County Humane Society animal shelter — and shelter director Karen McCarthy finds the prospect devastating.

"We're not in the business of catching and killing animals," McCarthy said. "The shelter's business is to provide housing and care for homeless cats and dogs, and its success has brought about a painful bounty. There are approximately 135 dogs at the shelter; facilities can accommodate 104 dogs comfortably," McCarthy said.

The result? Death sentences for 10 healthy dogs, probably including a purebred, spayed female German Shepherd aged 18 months.

Her case is a rare one, McCarthy noted. Most persons who come to the shelter are looking for purebred dogs. Not many purebreds find their way to the shelter — but at least three other current residents have such credentials.

Papers and history are not available for most shelter pets, McCarthy noted. "When people come and dump a dog on the highway, or leave a dog on our doorstep in the middle of the night, obviously we're not able to get a good history of that animal."

The year-and-a-half-old shelter consists of rows of pens, each with a small, weathertight house and a chainlink fence. The cats' house and the manager's house, for which McCarthy pays rent, complete the facilities. A hydrant serves the cats' quarters; other hydrants serve two to four dog pens.

"Ideally we'd like to have no more than three dogs per pen," McCarthy said. In most pens, the current population is four, or more. Two large dogs have their own quarters; other pens contain as many as seven puppies.

"The criteria we use for separating the dogs right now is pretty much who gets along with who," she said.

She said she dreads the chore of choosing which dogs will be killed.

In the past, the shelter has killed

Sitting behind the fence, the dog known as Mr. Grin awaits his fate. He is one of 10 dogs slated for death because of overcrowded conditions at the facility.

some dogs — animals too vicious to keep among other dogs, or animals suffering from illness or injury beyond treatment.

To adopt a dog, or a cat, contact the Howard County Humane Society, 267-7832. There is adoption donation of $15 per dog or $5 per cat. The shelter adjoins Berea Baptist Church on the north, located on Wasson Road.

"Our policy is not to kill healthy animals. Our policy is to take in

Felines have their cat house

Although current crowding conditions have hung the threat of death over the heads of several canine residents of the Howard County Humane Society shelter, manager Karen McCarthy's responsibilities extend beyond dogs.

She cares for approximately 60 cats, about half of them kittens. Most reside in a cat house on the shelter property, complete with a screened porch.

Within the house may be found every shape, size and shade of feline companionship imaginable, from unweaned kittens to full-grown cats of courtly demeanor.

McCarthy's charges include one cat whose mothering instincts are perfect for her environment: She takes in strangers' kittens as though they were her own, McCarthy said.

One or two of the cats share McCarthy's residence. The manager's house is located at the shelter, and the nature of the job and the size of the shelter population mandate that someone be on the premises full-time.

Videos show payoffs

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Investigators in the Pentagon bribery probe videotaped meetings in which Defense Department officials allegedly took payoffs from consultants, sources close to the two-year investigation said Saturday.

The sources said that two key figures in the investigation, Victor Cohen, deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force for tactical systems, and James Gaines, a deputy assistant secretary of the Navy, appear on some of the videotapes. However, the sources declined to say whether alleged bribes turned up on the recordings of those two Pentagon officials.

The consultants shown on the videotapes also include Melvyn Paisley, the former procurement chief for the Navy whose office was searched on June 7 by federal authorities in the investigation, the sources said.

NBC News reported Friday night that Cohen would leave the Pentagon whenever a defense consultant would call, that his meetings with consultants were recorded and videotaped and that money changed hands.

The sources, meanwhile, said that Gaines also was videotaped at meetings with consultants in which highly confidential documents relating to Pentagon contracts allegedly changed hands.

The Washington Post reported that Cohen, deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force for tactical systems, is among those cooperating in the investigation.

Sources close to the case said this past week that Gaines is cooperating in the investigation. Those sources continued to make that assertion Saturday, while other sources and the Post said that while Gaines gave a statement to investigators earlier, he is not cooperating with prosecutors at this point.

Meanwhile, Defense News reported in its June 27 edition that Paisley, when he was the Navy's procurement chief under Navy Secretary John Lehman, initiated a change that effectively eliminated all but one company from a key procurement program in 1986.

The change was to drop plans for separate competitions on all six components of the Aegis weapon system and instead go with a winner-take-all scheme. The system protects ships from airborne, surface and underwater missiles.

The result of the change, Defense News quoted several unidentified industry officials as saying, was that hundreds of millions of dollars in Navy contracts for the Aegis system went to Sperry Corp., now Unisys Corp., one of the firms involved in the Pentagon bribery investigation.

Jet noise distracting boy with hearing aid

EL PASO (AP) — A partially deaf boy found wandering in Mexico last year was fitted Saturday with a hearing aid, and the noise of airplanes taking off and landing distracted him during a visit to an airport.

The boy — nicknamed Sabath by his caretakers in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico — frequently tugged at the device tucked behind his left ear. "It's going to take him a while to get used to environmental sounds — clapping hands, the slam of a book," said Oscar Pedraza, director of information for the El Paso Center of the Deaf.

The device is "not going to make him speak and it's not going to make him hear," he added. "It'll just amplify the sounds he could barely hear before."

A hearing test two weeks ago determined the 7- or 8-year-old freckle-faced boy was deaf in the right ear and had about 20 percent hearing in the left. The $760

Siemens hearing aid was donated by El Paso audiologist Mark Wegleitner.

Because Sabath cannot speak, write or use sign language, officials in Mexico and the United States have not been able to determine where he is from. The FBI was called into the case when Mexican officials noticed Sabath prefers American food and cartoon characters to their Mexican counterparts, leading them to believe Sabath could be American.

Sabath communicates mostly through gestures and drawings. Some of his pictures seem to indicate he survived a plane crash that killed his parents and sister.

For that reason, Sabath was taken to El Paso International Airport after he was fitted with the hearing aid Saturday morning. Officials hoped he would recognize the type of plane he may have crashed in, but the boy paid little attention to the aircraft.

Officer's story leads to investigation and leave

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas police officer has been placed on leave pending an investigation into allegations that he lied when he said he missed a day's work because he had been kidnapped and robbed at gunpoint.

The officer, Donald Moten, 35, called his supervisors Thursday morning from Italy, Texas, a small town about 40 miles south of Dallas, and said he escaped from kidnappers, police said.

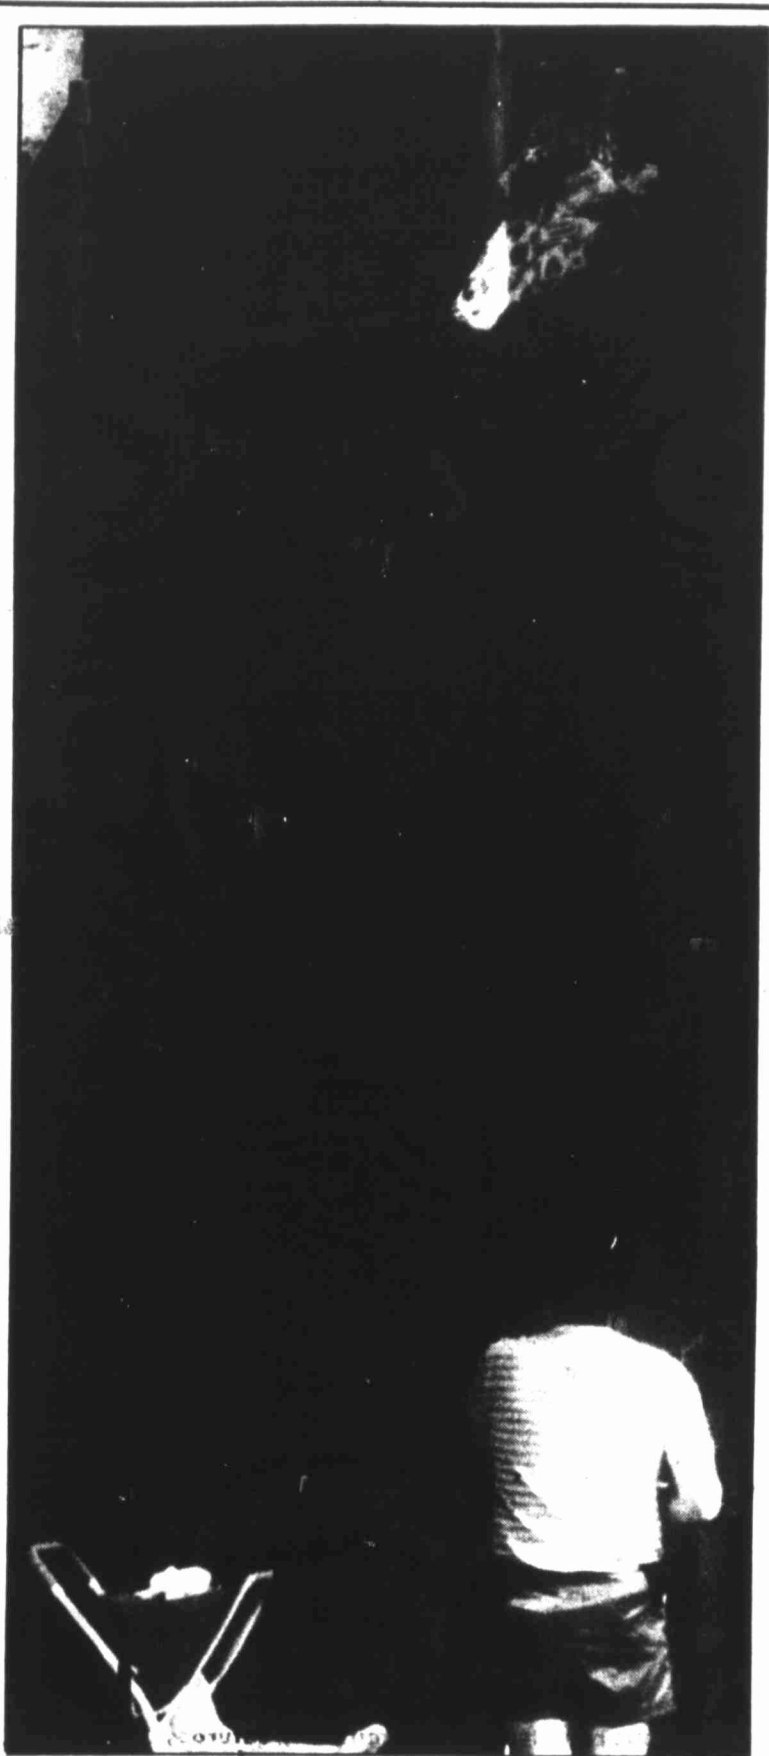

Deputy Chief Ray Hawkins said Moten called him Friday and apologized, saying he fabricated the story because he was late for work.

Moten, who has been on the force less than two years, was involved in the fatal shooting of 81-year-old David Horton on May 18, 1987.

In the incident, Moten and another officer shot at Horton after the elderly black man fired a rifle in their direction as police answered a call at his apartment complex. A grand jury investigation declined to indict Moten in the shooting.

Horton, a crime watch volunteer, was trying to thwart an auto theft when police arrived, witnesses said. His death sparked outrage among the black community and came just two weeks after a congressional committee hearing on the Dallas police department's deadly force policy.

Hawkins said Moten's supervisors became suspicious of Moten's kidnapping story because he had a history of being late for work.

Drug dogs will sniff Rainbows

ZAVALLA (AP) — Drug-sniffing dogs from the U.S. Customs Service will be used to help patrol a massive gathering planned by the Rainbow Family this July Fourth weekend, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said Saturday.

Fewer than 400 members of the back-to-nature groups currently are camping in scattered areas of the Angelina National Forest. But between 12,000 and 20,000 people are expected to attend the annual "gathering of the tribes" July Fourth.

The Rainbow Family already has issued a "rap sheet" advising group members to "Please keep weapons and all poison drugs out of our gathering."

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice has ruled that the group can hold its gathering, but only if no more than 5,000 people camp in any one place and if campgrounds meet health standards.

Extra law enforcement officers from the U.S. Forest Service and the Texas Department of Public Safety are being called in to police the gathering.

In addition, some of the customs service's drug-sniffing dogs will be used, said Steve Moss, Gramm's spokesman in Tyler.

"Efforts are under way to secure additional resources to support the U.S. Forest Service in their enforcement efforts to control the so-called Rainbow Family," Gramm, R-Texas, said in a statement issued Saturday.

"I hope the presence of these highly trained canines will go a long way toward convincing these people that we will not tolerate drug use in East Texas," he said.

Slain couple's pickup recovered

RESERVE, N.M. (AP) — El Paso police Saturday located a pickup belonging to an elderly couple found dead at their ranch south of Reserve, the victims of foul play, police said.

New Mexico State Police Sgt. Bob Wellborn said the pickup was found abandoned on the American side of a bridge linking Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, and El Paso.

Wellborn also said police have classified the deaths of E.P. Martinez and his wife, Molly Martinez, as homicides. Both victims were in their 70s, and apparently were killed Thursday night or Friday morning, he said.

The bodies were sent to the Office of the Medical Examiner in Albuquerque for autopsies.

Police are looking for a Mexican national who had been working at the Martinez ranch located 13 miles south of Reserve, Wellborn said.

He said Juarez police were interviewing at least one individual in connection with the double homicide.

A neighbor discovered the bodies Friday morning. Police said the pickup and several guns were missing from the ranch.

Nude sunbather order to pay $30

AUSTIN (AP) — A man was convicted of indecent exposure and fined $30 for sunbathing in the nude at a Lake Travis park, in what is believed to be the first such case to go to a jury trial in Travis County.

Six jurors deliberated more than two hours after hearing testimony Thursday from the defendant, Heinz Heuman, and county prosecutors in a justice of the peace court. Heuman, a native of Sweden, represented himself.

The misdemeanor offense is punishable by a maximum fine of $200.

Heuman was charged in March after Mark Weaver, leader of the American Family Association in Austin, complained to sheriff's officers that Heuman was sunbathing nude at a county park.

Heuman demanded a jury trial.

Under Texas law, nudity is illegal if it occurs in a public place and if the nude person is reckless about alarming or offending others who are present.

"That means that nudity in a public park almost always is going to be illegal," said Travis County Attorney Ken Oden.

An exception in the area is Hippie Hollow, a Lake Travis park where nude sunbathing is allowed and warning signs are posted, Oden said. He has said he will not prosecute complaints about public nudity at that park.

"I guess what we have here is a case that points up the distinction between Hippie Hollow and other public parks," Oden said.

Officials announce trade pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and Japanese officials announced an agreement Saturday aimed at expanding sales of a range of American-made consumer products in Japan, a market that U.S. companies have found difficult to penetrate.

The agreement would affect American sporting goods and leisure products, furniture, jewelry, processed foods and pet foods, which together accounted for nearly $1.6 billion in exports to Japan last year.

Of the United States' $170 billion trade deficit in 1987, $60 billion of the shortfall was with Japan. American government and business officials have long complained that U.S. products are not allowed to compete fairly in Japan.

Doctors to debate AIDS, training

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors will debate proposals for battling AIDS, overhauling Medicaid and training a new type of bedside hospital worker this week at the American Medical Association's annual policymaking convention.

Members of the AMA's House of Delegates, which convenes Sunday, also plan to discuss a proposed ban on selling plastic handgrips, a move to put warning labels on alcoholic beverages and the association's stand on mercy killing.

The meeting, which runs through Thursday, is expected to attract up to 2,000 doctors from across the country. The 420 delegates represent the AMA's 295,000 members and act as a legislature, setting policy for the nation's largest organization of physicians.

Last state raises drinking age

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming on Friday becomes the last state to raise its drinking age to 21, confronting bar owners with a dilemma — what to do about 19- and 20-year-olds who come in legally Thursday night and suddenly become too young to drink.

The Legislature earlier this year acceded to federal pressure to raise the drinking age from 19 to 21. The increase takes effect at 12:01 a.m. Friday.

But state law allows bars to remain open until 2 a.m., and 19- and 20-year-olds expected to turn out in force Thursday night for their last chance for a legal drink.

NOW takes fight to local level

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A new campaign to pass the Equal Rights Amendment passed won't be limited to lobbying Congress and state legislatures, leaders of the National Organization for Women said Saturday.

The ERA battle also will be fought at Social Security offices, on college campuses and other places where women are treated unfairly, NOW President Molly Yard said during the opening session of the group's national conference.

NOW has called on its local chapters to stage sit-ins at Social Security offices to protest unequal distribution of benefits and at college campuses, where women professors have a hard time getting tenure and where predominantly male administrators are insensitive to campus violence against women, she said.

Reagan urges quick drug action

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan urged Democratic congressional leaders Saturday to appoint representatives to work with the administration on the drug problem, saying it is "too important for us to permit partisan bickering."

Delivering his weekly radio talk from the Oval Office, the president said his own National Drug Policy Board will recommend specific proposals during the coming week "that would be important to any new drug legislation."

In a commencement speech at the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn., on May 18, the president said, "I'm calling on both houses of the Congress, both sides of the aisle, to join with my representatives in a special executive-legislative task force."

IKATA, Japan — Remains of a CH-53D U.S. Marine helicopter lie scattered in a tangerine orchard near a nuclear power station in southwestern Japan Saturday. All seven people aboard were killed.

U.S. copter crashes; seven Marines dead

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S. Marine Corps helicopter slammed into a hillside and burned Saturday while flying in fog near a nuclear power plant, and all seven Marines on board were killed, officials said.

The Sikorsky CH-53D Sea Stallion crashed about 30 minutes after leaving the U.S. Marine Corps Air Station at Iwakuni, in southwestern Japan, said Sgt. Nolan Wells of the station's public affairs office.

Names of the victims were withheld pending notification of their families.

Cloudy skies and dense fog were reported in the area at the time of the crash on the southwest tip of Shikoko island, but it wasn't immediately known if the weather contributed to the accident.

Since 1980, at least 88 people have died in accidents involving the Sea Stallion, or the later-model Super Stallion, the largest and most expensive helicopter used by the U.S. military.

Television footage showed Japanese and American rescue workers carrying bodies in sacks over terraced rice paddies less than two miles from a nuclear power station.

Fog swirled around the hill where the aircraft crashed and burned, and it appeared to be raining lightly. The wreckage was scattered over a wide area, according to a local police official who identified himself only as Sakamoto. Japanese aviation law prohibits aircraft from flying over nuclear power stations and other nuclear-related facilities. There are about 30 such facilities in Japan.

The law also says that aircraft which must fly over such facilities due to bad weather or to avoid a collision, must take the least hazardous course or altitude.

A Japanese Defense Agency official said in a telephone interview that he saw "little problem" with the helicopter's flight path.

"We noticed the copter took a course several kilometers away from the plant," despite the poor visibility in the area at the time of the accident, said the official, who refused to be named.

The Marines were flying to their base at Camp Futenma in Okinawa, 580 miles away, where they were assigned to Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 402 of the 1st Marine Air Wing, Wells said. The United States has about 20,000 Marines stationed in Okinawa.

The Sea Stallion left Iwakuni, about 700 miles southwest of Tokyo, at 9:50 a.m. and crashed at about 10:20 a.m., Wells said.

The CH-53D is capable of carrying up to 55 troops or a cargo of 32,000 pounds. The single-rotor, twin-engine aircraft is made by the Stratford, Conn.-based Sikorsky Aircraft division of the United Technologies Corp.

The helicopter has had a series of operational problems and fatal crashes.

Afghan agents blamed for blast

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — A bomb destroyed a hotel in the center of this northwestern frontier city Saturday and killed 13 people, police said. Officials blamed government agents from neighboring Afghanistan.

Devout Moslems had just finished morning prayers shortly after sunrise when the bomb exploded, tearing through the three-story hotel and tearoom in the old section of the city, said Abdul Ahmed Khan, assistant inspector of crimes.

"It collapsed just like a sandwich," said Khan. Rescuers pulled out the bodies from the ruins of the hotel. Two people survived nine hours under the rubble but died on the way to the hospital, police said.

Soviets expel Canadian attache

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union on Saturday ordered Canada's military attache to leave and barred seven former Canadian diplomats from returning to the country in retaliation for Canada's expulsion of Soviet diplomats.

The Soviets also pulled 25 Soviet workers from Canada's Moscow embassy.

The official Tass news agency accused the Canadian military attache, Larry Bowen, of "engaging in activity that does not correspond to his official status," diplomatic jargon for spying.

Tass said a Soviet deputy foreign minister, Alexander Bessmertnykh, told Canadian Ambassador Vernon Turner that the Ottawa government had "resorted to a new hostile action" by expelling the senior Soviet military attache and barring other Soviet diplomats from returning.

Iran claims chemical weapon use

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq said Saturday its forces recaptured two islands in its southern Howeizah marshes, held by Iran since 1984, and inflicted the third defeat in nine weeks on its foe in the Persian Gulf war.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Nicosia, claimed the Iraqis used chemical weapons to push enemy troops off the islands, one of Iran's only footholds on Iraqi soil. The islands are mud and sand mounds linked by causeways and floating bridges.

A communique read over Baghdad Radio said the Majnoon islands, about 270 miles southeast of Baghdad near the Iranian border, were under Iraqi control by noon after a few hours of fighting.

Troops arrest Marcos loyalists

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Troops arrested three renegade soldiers loyal to deposed President Ferdinand Marcos in a raid at dawn on Saturday and found a plan to attack the capital's international airport, police said.

Police Lt. Col. Romeo Maganto said the men apprehended in an apartment in Manila's Tondo slum district belonged to a group led by former Lt. Col. Reynaldo Cabatuan, who was involved in coup attempts against President Corazon Aquino's government.

Rallies mark war anniversary

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea observed the 38th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War on Saturday with nationwide rallies denouncing Communist North Korea.

Officials said hundreds of thousands of people, led by veterans and anti-communist organizations, attended rallies and memorial services across the country. No overall tally was available. Korea was divided in 1945, when U.S. and Soviet troops came to facilitate the surrender of Japan, which had colonized the peninsula for 36 years.

The Korean War began June 25, 1950, when North Korean troops poured across the dividing line. Three days later, they occupied the capital of Seoul.

Liberals set blueprint for Dukakis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Liberal Democrats, using the conservative Heritage Foundation as their model, are drawing up a progressive blueprint they hope a President Dukakis would use to set the direction for his administration and to avoid "victory without vision."

Encouraged by opinion polls showing Dukakis has stronger support around the country than Republican George Bush, project leader Mark Green said Friday it was put together "because we think conservatism is faltering, because we think there is a new progressive majority."

Green, an unsuccessful candidate for the Senate in New York in 1986, is president of the Democracy Project, sponsor of the attempt to formulate a progressive agenda.

Transition '89 is dedicated to avoiding victory without vision," he said. Looking back at the election of Democrat Jimmy Carter 12 years ago, Green said, "In 1976, it was a political victory without a program." Carter lasted one term and then was trounced in 1980 by Ronald Reagan.

As Reagan prepared to take power from the Democratic president, an obscure conservative think tank called the Heritage Foundation suddenly attained prominence as a source of ideas for the incoming administration.

Heritage was ready with "Agenda for Progress," a 378-page study that recommended cutting $58.6 billion from the 1982 federal budget, while at the same time increasing defense spending by $33.7 billion.

Heritage became a source of ideas and personnel for the Reagan administration and its days in obscurity ended.

Green and his fellow liberals are hoping for a similar resurgence in the event of a Dukakis victory in November.

"We hope to be a conduit between 20 years of progressive, public interest policy experience and a new government open to fresh approaches," said Green, in a statement announcing release of a 140-page book called, "Ideas That Work: 60 Solutions for America's 3rd Century."

The book includes proposals in areas ranging from the economy, education, and the environment to foreign and defense policy.

But while the book offers a preview of the approaches the progressives would take, Green said the main project of his group is an agency study of the 2000 election by 48 experts who will issue their recommendations after the November election.

"While a lot of folks are understandably concentrating on the politics of '88, Transition '89 wants to concentrate on the politics of '89," he said.

One of the people on Green's list was Stephen F. Cohen, an expert of U.S. Soviet relations at Princeton University, who said, "Suddenly, it seems, there's a chance to end the Cold War."

Cohen said Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev "at great risk to himself is revising, in the confines of his own national security elite, almost 70 years of Soviet Cold War dogma." The key Soviet Cold War dogma has been that the nature of the United States made the Cold War inevitable. It had nothing to do with Soviet behavior.

And Gorbachev is now saying that. Cohen said the next president ought to "send a message to Gorbachev, publicly or privately, that this president is prepared to negotiate every dispute, issue, anew."

He expressed dismay at Dukakis' commitment to a buildup in conventional forces and said he has seen no sign from the Democratic candidate that he or his advisers "are willing to seize the opportunity" for dramatic change in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Secret Service Jackson name declared racial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some people are claiming the radio code name, "Pontiac," that the Secret Service uses for Democrat Jesse Jackson has racial overtones, but a Secret Service spokesman said Friday that Jackson does not think it's racist.

The Secret Service gave Jackson the code name when the agency began protecting him as a presidential candidate last fall. Secret Service agents use the code names in their radio transmissions as they track the movements of the candidates.

Jackson aides tried to trace why Jackson had been assigned that name after learning that folklore expert Alan Dundes had said "Pontiac" is a slur — the punch line to a series of racist jokes collected by his students at the University of California, Berkeley, said Jackson's national political director, Frank Watkins.

Pontiac, usually associated with a car and a city in Michigan, is also an acronym for "Poor old nigger thinks it's a Cadillac." Dundes told the Philadelphia Inquirer, which alerted the campaign and the Secret Service to the allegation.

The campaign uncovered no proof of racial motivation in the assigning of Jackson's code name, but Watkins stated:

"Given this administration's civil rights record and what we've heard ... as to the mentality they have toward black people, absolutely nothing would surprise me."

Short draft contains Demos' platform

DENVER (AP) — Democrats released a preliminary draft Friday of a platform that could be the shortest in more than a century: an eight-page document that promises to restore "competence and hope" to the presidency but avoids any talk of higher taxes, a freeze on Pentagon spending or a Palestinian homeland.

The 3,500-word draft was being debated, revised and voted on late Friday by a 16-member drafting committee. Jesse Jackson's supporters were expected to put up a fight on the tax, defense and foreign policy issues.

The drafting committee, chaired by Rep. William H. Gray of Philadelphia, will turn the work over Saturday to the full 186-member platform committee, which will try to put the document in final form by Sunday.

But Jackson, the only remaining Democratic challenger to Michael Dukakis, has said he may take his fight over such issues as higher taxes on the rich and a Pentagon freeze to the floor of next month's national convention in Atlanta.

The preliminary draft incorporated language on a dozen issues that Dukakis and Jackson representatives agreed to two weeks ago on Mackinac Island, Mich.

But in every significant area of dispute, Dukakis' preferences, not Jackson's, were embodied in the preliminary draft.

Ted Sorensen, the onetime John F. Kennedy speechwriter who penned an earlier platform

"discussion paper" for Democratic Party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr., said in an interview today, "I am the drafter of the present draft as well."

"It's fairly clear now this will be the shortest platform in over a hundred years," said Sorensen. "It will be a thematic, readable platform. It will not have the traditional, negative cast. Reagan, Republican, Bush — those words aren't even mentioned," said Sorensen.

The draft is headed "The Restoration of Competence and Hope." It pledges party leaders and elected officials "to restore competence, caring and incorruptibility to the federal executive branch and get it working again fairly for all Americans."

Mattox speaks for Dukakis

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox Friday announced his support for Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis.

"I am supporting Mike Dukakis because I believe that he will appoint judges who will be strong law enforcers of our civil and criminal laws, while respecting the civil rights of our citizens," Mattox said.

"And Mike Dukakis recognizes that one of the major solutions to crime is providing universal quality education," he said in a statement. Dukakis has received endorsements from more than 20 state attorneys general, Mattox said. He also has been endorsed by top Democratic state officials in Texas.

In a statement, Dukakis said he is pleased to have Mattox's support.

"We need a president who will work with members of the law enforcement community toward the day when our schools are drug-free and our neighborhoods are safe again," Dukakis said.

South Texans flock to see ceiling image

TAFT (AP) — Hundreds of South Texans have visited in recent weeks to see what Ricardo and Petra Perez say is an image of Jesus Christ in the ceiling of a room in their home.

The image, formed by shadows in swirls of ceiling plaster, is of the face and "sacred heart" of Jesus, Ms. Perez says.

Visitors have left candles and tacked up written prayers in the room. Ms. Perez said the image is best viewed while kneeling down and looking through a window.

Ms. Perez said the image, which is similar to a devotional picture she owns, appeared in March after she saw an apparition of Jesus. She said the apparition cured her of arthritis, but her husband didn't believe her and told her not to tell anyone.

CRMWD directors to award contract for Stacy Dam intake

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Colorado River Municipal Water District directors are expected to award a contract for the Stacy Reservoir intake substructure construction during their meeting Wednesday.

According to information released by the CRMWD, progress on signing support contracts for pump station and pipeline facilities is expected to follow the award of the substructure construction contract.

The district has been negotiating with two cities, San Angelo and Midland, regarding the contracts. Conditions and timetables for building the facilities and the division of costs based on maximum daily quantities of water used by the cities and the district will be detailed in the contracts, according to CRMWD public information officer Joe Pickle.

The directors also are expected to consider authorizing the water district's general manager to file for an amendment to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers 404 Permit for the Stacy Reservoir, changing locations of the intake and pipeline alignment.

Pickle said other routine matters are on the directors' agenda and guests of the district will include officials of affected cities along with officials of cities belonging to the district.

The CRMWD serves Snyder, Big Spring, Midland and Odessa with water delivered from reservoirs on the Colorado River at Lake J.B. Thomas and Lake E.V. Spence.

Illness delays parks meeting

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The Big Spring Parks and Recreation board meeting — originally scheduled for June 16 — has not yet been rescheduled, vice chairman Rick McKinney said Wednesday.

Mississippi open again; governor: Pray for rain

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

Alabama's governor asked people Saturday to pray for rain to end the drought, Milwaukee officials considered whether to forgo Fourth of July fireworks because of fire danger and barges moved again on the Mississippi.

Temperatures hissed to record highs, but not in the same places as over the past week. Thanks to a cold front, temperatures across the northern Plains were 15 to 25 degrees cooler than Friday, and most of the records were in the Ohio Valley, with relief there expected Sunday.

The depleted lower Mississippi River was blocked to shipping again Saturday by barges running aground.

Showers and thunderstorms were widespread Friday night and early Saturday across eastern Texas and southern Arkansas into the central Gulf coast.

"I ask that God-fearing people across our state put aside time next Wednesday to pray that God will send life-giving rain to our state and our nation," Alabama Gov. Guy Hunt, a Primitive Baptist lay preacher, said Saturday in his weekly radio address.

A few locations in the middle Mississippi Valley never left the 80s overnight, including Ottumwa, Iowa, at 80 and St. Louis, Mo., at 82.

High temperature records started falling early. It wasn't even noon when the temperature at Milwaukee passed the previous record of 95 and kept on rising to a high of 100. Flint, Mich., tied its record of 94 at 10:45 a.m. and continued on to 100 by 2 p.m. The mercury hit 100 by noon at Chicago, and reached a record 102, making this June the first there with three 100-plus days since records began in 1873.

The heat wave has been blamed for five deaths.

Chicago public health officials said people could use air-conditioned public libraries and centers for the aging as cooling shelters Saturday. "We are monitoring the situation and will open more shelters if needed," said Dr. David Marder, a health department official.

Several Wisconsin communities already have decided to do without fireworks this year because of the fire threat, and Milwaukee County officials planned to decide by Monday whether to cancel the aerial displays, said parks director M. Brigid Sullivan. One show will go on because the rockets will be shot over Lake Michigan.

"This is the first time they have been canceled," James Myers, city clerk in Monroe, Wis., said of the fireworks. "It's sad. But it would be kind of sad to see your house burn up too."

A forest fire exacerbated by the heat and lack of rain was 65 percent contained Saturday by more than 650 firefighters after burning 27,000 acres of grass and forest in southeastern Montana and a small area of western South Dakota. At one point the flames overran 18 firefighters, but only one was hospitalized.

A grass and forest fire in northeastern Wyoming was contained Saturday after burning more than 6,000 acres. Shoshone National Forest officials in northwest Wyoming said a fire in prime timberland had burned about 550 acres.

At Memphis, Tenn., a 30-mile-long towboat and barge traffic jam on the dwindling Mississippi River was clearing up Saturday. The river was closed there from Tuesday until a dredge finished clearing a channel on Friday. Southbound barges were cleared during the night before northbound traffic was allowed to start through.

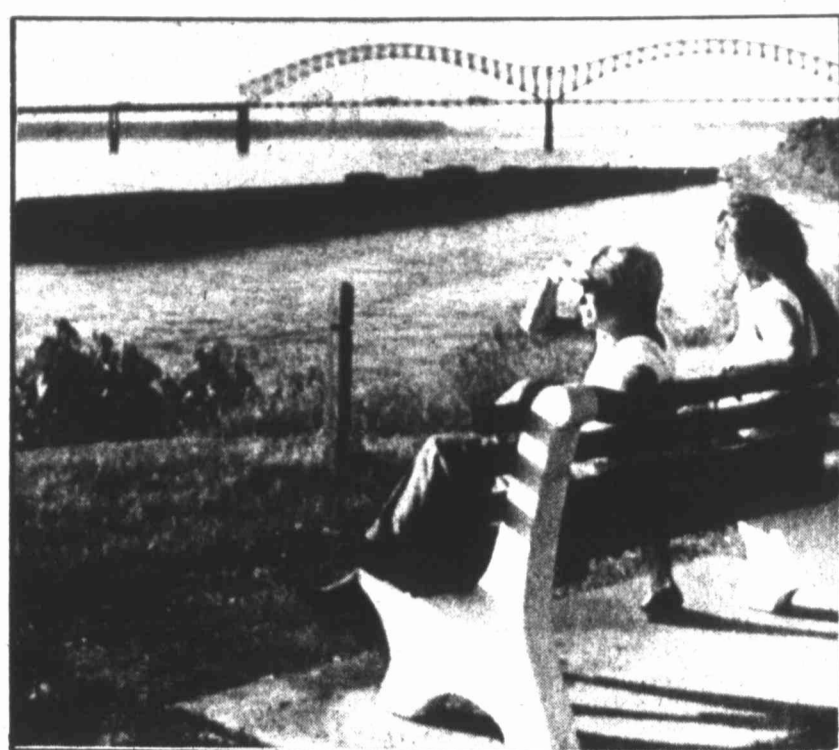

However, the increasingly shallow lower Mississippi was blocked again when barges ran aground near Greenville, Miss., and Helena, Ark., and about 20 miles north of Osceola, Ark., Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Dean Jones said Saturday.

Some shippers are switching to the relatively new Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway.

Poor Mississippi county ails twice from drought

TUNICA, Miss. (AP) — A restaurant owner whose business is off 30 percent quit making doughnuts because nobody buys them. The same news about dried up business is repeated at the liquor store, tire shop, grocery and appliance store.

The worst drought in 50 years is a double whammy for Tunica County, one of the poorest counties in the nation. Farmers who grow cotton, soybeans and wheat in the upper Mississippi Delta are afraid their crops will burn up, and a lake that used to lure tourist dollars is so low that few fishermen and boaters bother to go out.

"Boy, it hurts. There's not a business in town that's not affected," said Jim Fowler, sitting behind the counter of the customerless Brown Bag Liquors. "It's a real bad situation all the way around."

Tunica County is 64 percent farmland. It ranks 78th among Mississippi's 82 counties in per capita income, with a yearly average of $6,800, according to the state economist's office. Other than the recreation business from the lake, it has no industry. The population is 9,652, down from 16,826 in 1960.

Cotton is still king here, accounting for 40 percent of the crop value. But there also are long, straight rows of soybeans, wheat, rice and other crops in flat fields of sandy loam and buckshot black clay.

They're all struggling to grow. There hasn't been a decent rain since April.

"It hasn't got to the point where we're going to abandon the crop and throw the towel in. But we're hurting," said county agriculture agent Dwayne Wheeler.

"The drought affects everybody. When the farmer's not spending money, there's not a whole lot of money being spent," Wheeler said.

"It's killing my business," said Wiley Chambers, owner of the Blue and White Restaurant, where the glazed cake doughnuts are a thing of the past. "These farmers won't spend any money when it looks bad, and it looks bad."

Jim Sturgill, owner of Delta Tire and Alignment, had nary a car or tractor in his garage.

"Look in the shop, there's nothing. We haven't done any business," Sturgill said.

On a 100-plus degree day, the pavement seems to melt in the distance under a blistering sun, and dogs nap in what shade they can find. Tractors pulling discs kick up clouds of dust that hang in the air and assault the throat.

Owen Bibb, 55, has 4,000 acres of land, some of which hasn't been planted while he waits for rain. On Friday, he laid off 15 farmhands.

"We're scared of what may be facing us," Bibb said. "We're in no position to stand a sorry crop. We can't survive a complete bust. All we can do is put our faith in the good Lord. Worrying don't help."

If it's too dry to plow, the fish surely aren't biting at the Tunica Cut-off. The 20-mile-long lake was once part of the Mississippi River, which made a meandering loop.

In 1942, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers eliminated the loop by plowing a new channel, leaving a lake fed by the river. With the river at its lowest level since records were first kept in 1872, the lake is emptying.

The drought's week in review

By The Associated Press

Here are highlights of the drought and the heat wave Saturday:

- Heat has been blamed for five deaths, three in Missouri and one each in Georgia and Illinois.

- Showers and thunderstorms were widespread during the night from eastern Texas across southern Arkansas into the central Gulf coast. More than 5.75 inches fell at Leakey, Texas, and Childersburg, Ala., had torrential rain that flattened cornstalks and caused street flooding.

- Saturday was Chicago's third 100-degree-plus day this month, the most in June since record-keeping began there in 1873. All 24 weather stations reporting Friday in Nebraska had highs of 100 or more, including 110 at Valentine.

- Milwaukee County, Wis., officials will decide by Monday whether to eliminate fireworks for the Fourth of July because of the fire danger. Some Wisconsin towns already have done so.

- A forest fire was 65 percent contained after burning more than 27,000 acres in southeastern Montana and a small part of western South Dakota. Another fire was contained in Wyoming after burning more than 6,000 acres.

- Southbound barges stuck on the Mississippi River since Tuesday near Memphis, Tenn., were cleared through a newly dredged channel and northbound barges began moving through. Traffic was limited on the lower Ohio River, which also has required dredging.

Ranchers

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says another 100 of the state's 254 counties could easily qualify.

Howard County is among those that have applied for aid as a result of drought conditions.

Hightower has criticized the federal government for what he calls its lack of attention to what could become a repeat of the "Dust Bowl" days of the 1930s.

Bobby Wisdom, who works for Hollow Ranch in Frio County, said he and other area farmers have had to irrigate wheat, watermelon, corn, and peanut crops too much this year.

"It's very critical," Wisdom said. "We're fortunate enough that we have eight irrigation wells, but that water cost is almost unbearable."

He said the business has its humorous side.

"I say I've been in agriculture education, unfortunately, all my life," Wisdom said. "It looks to me like its getting worse and worse every year and we're just trying to survive. It's a school in itself."

Thousands of ranches don't survive. Since 1981, Texas has lost 35,000 farmers and ranchers, including 17,000 of those during 1986-87, said TDA spokesman Andy Welch.

He said that 175 Texas farmers and ranchers are expected to leave the industry each week during 1988. There now are 160,000 farmers and ranchers in the $15 billion-a-year industry, Welch said.

In normally wet East Texas, farmers and ranchers are struggling to find hay for their cattle because there was not enough rain to produce an ample crop.

R.M. Kirby, a partner in the Longview Livestock Commission, said people are praying for rain so they will not have to sell off their stock.

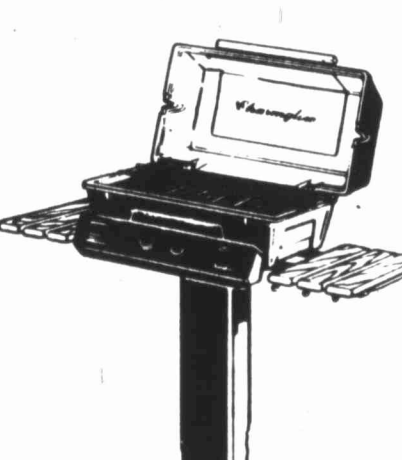

"We're about 12 inches of rain behind for the year. It's been so long that we've had a good rain, I can't even remember when it rained last," Kirby said. "The grass is pretty much burned up and if there is any out there, the cattle have just eaten up, I can bet you."

Tax & financial planning

THE WRITTEN WORD

One way to cut your corporate tax obligation is to keep accurate and thorough minutes of all meetings. The small effort this requires will pay off handsomely if the IRS audits you.

Why does it make a difference? Take, for example, the issue of "unreasonable" compensation of an owner-employee. If you've kept good corporate minutes, you have a properly documented record for the IRS to review. Your minutes help eliminate doubt as to whether the compensation paid to an officer was reasonable salary, and therefore deductible by the corporation, or actually a dividend and not deductible. If the minutes contain no explanation of what appears to be excess or "unreasonable" compensation, the IRS probably will deny the deduction.

What should corporate minutes record? They should document any transfer of funds or assets into or out of the corporation, such as officer salaries, shareholder dividends, officer and employee benefits, and reimbursement of personal expenses — especially when the transfer involves a corporate officer, shareholder, board member, or anyone related to these people. The minutes should explain why the transfer occurred. Who authorized it? When? What, in detail, did the corporation receive in return? If the corporation records it as compensation, why is it compensation and not a gift or dividend? In smaller corporations where conflicts of interest can easily arise, the IRS will look to the minutes for justification of the board's actions. The more detailed the minutes are, the better. If possible, include recommendations by outside experts consulted at the time of the decision.

Have your CPA and your lawyer prepare a checklist of information to be included with each company decision.

Saturday night the Big Spring rodeo concluded in front of a near capacity crowd at the Big Spring Rodeo Bowl.

Local calf roper Jessie Doss had the night's fastest time, roping his prey in 11.2 seconds. Coahoma barrel racer Kay Boyles of Coahoma had the second fastest time of the night, getting around three barrels in 18.40 seconds. Kay Felts of Yokum had the night's fastest time of 18.17.

Leadership in three events changed hands after Friday night competition at the 55th annual rodeo.

The bull riding, bareback bronc riding and barrel racing events saw new leaders after the 2½-hour competition, held at the Rodeo Bowl.

Henrietta native Cody Lambert rode "Takes Care of Business" to a score of 89 to place first, edging Cedar Point, Kan. cowboy Raymond Wessel, who scored 82 points aboard "Hot Stuff."

Cody Custer, from Wickenburg, Ariz., placed third in Friday action with a score of 77.

With his showing, Lambert wrested the overall lead from eight-time world champion Don Gay and Chuck Ingrassia, who posted scores of 82 during Thursday action. Gay hails from Mesquite, while Ingrassia is from Loranger.

New leader notwithstanding, it was a rough night for the bull riders, as only four cowboys hung on long enough to post scores Friday night — all during the first segment.

The no-scores included famed bull rider Bobby Delvecchio. The Fort Worth resident — by way of Brooklyn, N.Y. — found his bull, "Strokin", a little too hot to handle.

Miss Coors Rodeo more than just a pretty face

By SARAH LUMAN

Shelly Burmeister-Gaylord's face may look familiar: she's an eight-year veteran of Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association competitions, traveling to shows as Miss Coors Rodeo, she also serves as a rodeo commentator on a cable television program.

This is her sixth year to appear at the Big Spring rodeo, sponsored by Coors Brewery through Valley Distributors.

A former professional cowgirl — "I used to ride barrels, I rodeoed in high school and now I ride cutting horses," she says — she signed with The Nashville Network as a commentator this spring.

"I do the Mesquite Rodeo," she explained.

Since her last appearance in Big Spring, she has changed her name: in October she married Oklahoman Ed Gaylord.

Her work for a particular show may begin as much as a year in advance, she said. Her duties include helping coordinate with media, arena signs, parades and other promotions for Coors Chute Out rodeos.

There are only 50 such shows a year, and the Big Spring rodeo's ability to draw such top performers as Cody Lambert, Monty Henson and Roy Cooper this year comes from its designation as a Chute Out rodeo.

"We put money in the cowboys' pockets," she said. "This week there's a rodeo in Las Vegas (Nev.) too, competing with this show."

Since pro cowboys compete for points standings as well as total money in world championship competition, Burmeister-

Miss Coors Rodeo Shelly Burmeister-Gaylord has been with the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association for eight seasons. She also does some acting in her spare time.

Gaylord said, the 16 points awarded for appearing at a Chute Out rodeo also serves as an enticement for performers.

Her job entailed more than 90,000 miles of air travel in the past year; she rode in approximately 100 parades and rodeos and also conducted radio, television and newspaper interviews.

Her job involves helping coordinate rodeo committees and Coors distributors, a task she considers challenging. "I'm very thankful to have been blessed with many achievements and friends in the rodeo industry."

She began her rodeo career while growing up in Fort Worth, with a horse acquired when she was 13 — a horse now retired, but still around, she said fondly.

She began in 4-H and quarter horse shows; her passion for cutting horses stems from an animal that displayed unusual talent for the work, despite a lack of papers. After 4-H, she became involved in high school rodeo and has done some WINBLETON, England — Former champion Jimmy Connors disputes a point with the umpire during his men's singles third round match against Derrick Rostagno. Connors, 35, won the match 7-5, 4-6, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Connors makes strong comeback

WIMBLETON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors staged a stirring comeback at Wimbledon for the second straight year, beating fellow American Derrick Rostagno in a five-set marathon Saturday to move into the fourth round.

The two-time Wimbledon champion rallied from a two-sets-to-one deficit to beat his 22-year-old opponent, who was 6 years old when Connors won his first match at the famed grass-court tournament.

After 4 hours and 2 minutes, the match finally ended when Rostagno hit a second serve a foot past the service line. The score was 7-5, 4-6, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Connors, who reached the semifinals last year after overcoming a two-set deficit against Mikael Pernfors in the fourth round, raised his racket in triumph as the crowd on Court No. 1 saluted him with thunderous applause.

"My game has always been staying there 'til I die because you never know what's going to happen," said Connors, who has won eight of his 10 five-set matches at Wimbledon.

Rostagno, a former Stanford star ranked 86th in the world, swatted the net in disgust after shaking hands with Connors. But he had nothing but praise for his 35-year-old conqueror after the match.

"If you don't appreciate what he does, you don't appreciate tennis," Rostagno said. "He comes up with shots no one else does. Tennis is an art and he's an artist."

Third-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden also struggled before overcoming American doubles specialist Ken Flach 6-2, 7-5, 2-6, 7-5. His countryman, second-seeded Mats Wilander, kept his hopes for a Grand Slam sweep alive with a 6-1, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Menno Oosting of the Netherlands.

Also advancing to the fourth round were No. 9 Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia and No. 16 Slobodan Zivojinovic of Yugoslavia.

In women's play, second-seeded Martina Navratilova moved a step closer to her seventh straight Wimbledon singles title and ninth overall by beating Karen Schimper of South Africa 6-0, 6-4.

Tenth-seeded Lori McNeil of the United States and No. 15 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany were eliminated. American Katrina

Adams, a 19-year-old who turned professional less than six months ago, downed Hanika 6-3, 6-3 while McNeil was ousted by South African Ros Fairbank 7-6, 6-4.

The rest of the women's seeds were victorious, including No. 3 Pam Shriver, No. 4 Chris Evert, No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini, No. 8 Natalia Zvereva, No. 13 Larisa Savchenko and No. 14 Katerina Maleeva.

Maleeva's 6-0, 6-0 win over Belinda Cordwell of New Zealand was the second shutout of the tournament. Top-seeded Steffi Graf blanked Hu Na in the opening round.

Rostagno saved a match point in the final set with a freak netcord winner and had a chance to break Connors in the 11th game. But Connors, seeded fifth, saved a break point with a service winner and held Rostagno off to move ahead 6-5.

Rostagno took a 40-30 lead in the next game, but Connors moved to his second match point with a cross-court backhand pass and a winning return off a bullet first serve. Rostagno then served his 10th double-fault to end the match, which was played before a boisterous pro-Connors crowd.

In 1981, Connors lost the opening two sets to Vijay Amritraj before rallying to win the quarterfinal match. Last year, he dropped the first two sets to Pernfors and was trailing 1-4 in the third before staging the second greatest comeback in Wimbledon history.

"They were throwing sand on the grave in that one," Connors said. "I was down and near out. This was a different kind of match."

Indeed, Connors appeared to be in control after winning the fourth set and taking a 5-2 lead in the final set. But Rostagno fought back to even the set 5-5 after saving a match point in the ninth game.

The match appeared to be over when Connors pinned Rostagno to the corner of the baseline with a forehand approach and rushed to the net for the kill.

But Rostagno hit a cross-court forehand blast that nipped the top of the net and trickled over out of Connors' reach.

"I thought, 'Get over,'" Rostagno said. "It was a perfect dink over the net. When that happens, you think, 'Things are going my way.'"

Nelson leading Atlanta by four

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Larry Nelson shot a 6-under-par 66 Saturday to retain a four-shot lead after three rounds of the $700,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

Nelson, the defending PGA champion, was in position to break the PGA Tour record for most shots under par for 54 holes before taking a bogey 6 on the 18th hole, one he had birdied in each of the first two rounds.

It left him with a 21-under-par 195 total, one shy of the Tour under par mark of 22 set by Gay Brewer on a par-71 course at the Pensacola Open in 1967.

Nelson, who has led from the start in quest of his 10th career victory, held the lead over Paul Azinger, who shot 66 and was at 199.

The soft-spoken Nelson, who has a home adjacent to the 18th fairway on the Atlanta Country Club course, was never in danger of losing his lead on the rolling hills of the 7,008-yard layout in the hot, 90-degree weather.

He birdied the fourth, fifth and eighth holes on the front side, scored from 15 feet for another birdie on the 11th and put together three birdies in a row beginning at No. 13 with putts of 10, 4 and 9 feet.

Then, with a record in his grasp, Nelson let his tee shot get away from him on the final hole, landing in a muddy ditch on the left side of the fairway.

He hit it out into the fairway, with mud splattering his face, then laid up and put his approach about eight feet from the pin, but couldn't make the putt.

It opened the way for Azinger, winner at Bay Hill earlier this season, who capped his round with a birdie on the final hole. He also birdied his first two holes of the day and added others on the 12th, 14th and 15th holes.

Bobby Wadkins, a 14-year Tour veteran still seeking his first U.S. victory, rolled in a 25-foot putt for an eagle 3 on the final hole and was alone in third place with a 68-201.

Three others were eighth shots off the pace at 203 — Dave Rummels 67, Scott Hoch 68 and Chip Beck 70. Hoch, playing despite an ailing shoulder, also eagled the final hole.

It was another two shots back to the trio of Clarence Rose, Mark Calcavecchia and Wayne Levi. Rose shot 66, Calcavecchia 67 and Levi 68.

Defending champion Dave Barr had a 70 and was in a group at 205 that also included Hubert Green, who posted the low round of the day, a 65.

Journeyman reliever re-inks consecutive-save record book

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Quisenberry and his submarine sinker. Goose Gossage with his heater. Bruce Sutter and a split-finger fastball.

Great relievers with great pitches.

Now make room in the record book for a journeyman named Jones who challenges batters with a changeup.

"All I do is make them hit the ball and hope they catch it. And I throw strikes," Cleveland's Doug Jones said. "It's nothing spectacular."

It's been enough, however, to accomplish what no other pitcher has ever done. Jones set a record with his 14th save in 14 tries Friday night as the Indians held off the New York Yankees 7-5.

Jones, pitching on his 31st birthday, broke the mark of 13 established by Philadelphia's Steve Bedrosian last year. He retired all seven batters he faced.

"I wasn't worried about the record. I tried to shut it out," he said. "But I think I can relax a little now."

That might make the first time Jones has taken it easy.

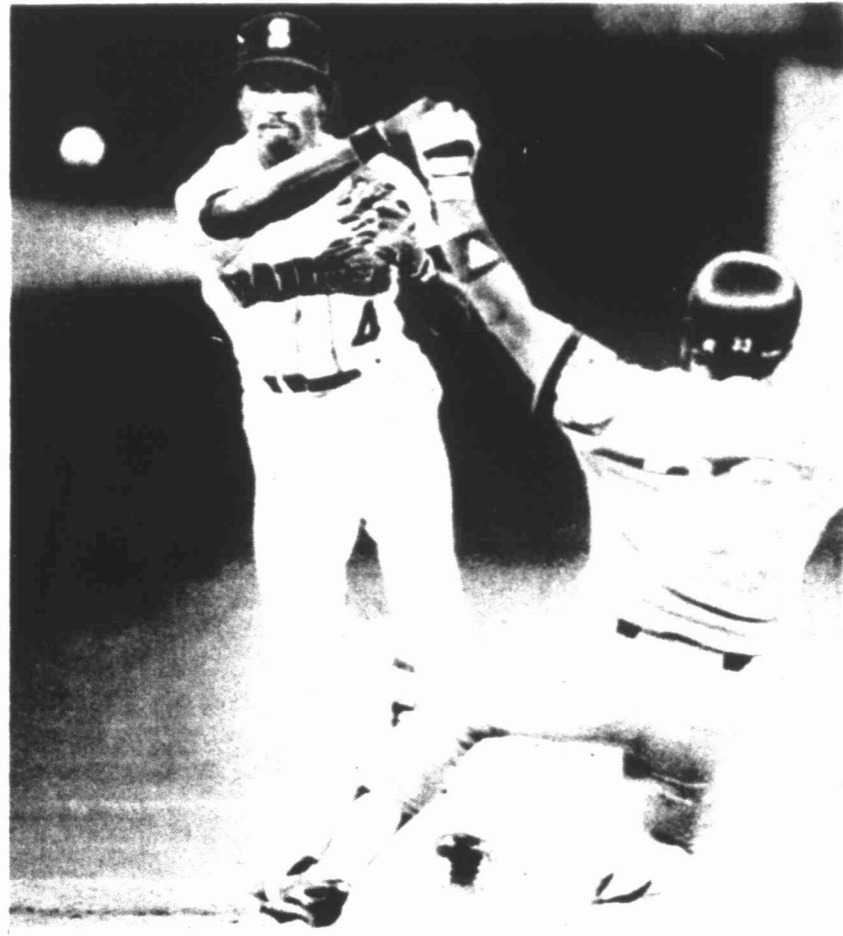

Jones, who spent part of 10 years in the minors, was one of 46 pitchers the Indians brought to spring training. He had a 3.15 ERA in 49 games as a rookie for Cleveland last season and figured he had a certain job.

"I was coasting with the wrong attitude," he recalled. "I thought I had a spot made. I should've known better."

The Indians had reshuffled their front office during the winter and the new bosses weren't familiar with Jones.

"I knew what he could do," Cleveland manager Doc Edwards said. "But the new eyes hadn't seen anything to impress them."

Two days before spring training ended, Edwards called Jones aside.

SEATTLE — Seattle Mariners' Harold Reynolds throws the ball to first base after tagging out Kansas City Royals' Kevin Seitzer (33) during a fifth-inning double play at the King Dome Friday. Seattle beat the Royals, 7-0.

"I said, 'Son, you've got one more chance.' He went out and threw 25 minutes of batting practice the next day and two shutout innings the next day," Edwards said. "He made the team."

Jones, drafted by Milwaukee in 1978, made his major league debut with the Brewers in 1982. He did not make it back to the majors until 1986, the year after Cleveland signed him as a free agent.

Stieb's streak ends as Tigers bomb Bluejays

TORONTO (AP) — Gary Pettis hit a three-run homer, and Darrell Evans added a solo shot as the Detroit Tigers ended Dave Stieb's streak of nine straight victories, beating the Toronto Blue Jays 7-2 Saturday.

Doyle Alexander, 7-4, scattered eight hits, struck out six and walked one in eight innings, and Guillermo Hernandez pitched the ninth.

Evans led off the second with his eighth homer. After Matt Nokes walked and Ray Knight doubled, Stieb fell behind 2-0 on Pettis. Pettis lofted the next pitch into a strong wind blowing out to right for his second homer of the year.

Stieb, 10-4, had won nine of his last 11 starts with two no-decisions, last losing on April 26.

Kelly Gruber homered for Toronto.

Red Sox 10, Orioles 3

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice broke a tie with a two-run single during a seven-run eighth inning as the Boston Red Sox took a 10-3 victory over Baltimore, spoiling Cal Ripken's 1,000th consecutive start for the Orioles.

Mark Williamson replaced Baltimore starter Mike Boddicker in the eighth and was greeted by Dwight Evans' single. Mike Greenwell extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a single and Ellis Burks walked, filling the bases.

Doug Sisk replaced Williamson and Rice singled through the middle, scoring Evans and Greenwell, snapping a 3-3 tie.

Ripken, who began his streak May 30, 1982, became only the sixth player in major league history to play in 1,000 consecutive games.

Weather hot, Sanburg hotter as Cubs down New York Mets

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg's third hit of the game, a tie-breaking single in Chicago three-run eighth inning, carried the Chicago Cubs to a 5-2 victory over the New York Mets Saturday in a game played in 103-degree heat.

Shawon Dunston opened the eighth with a single off reliever and loser Rick Aguilera, 0-3. One out later, Dunston stole second, and Andre Dawson was walked intentionally before Sandberg singled sharply to center, scoring Dunston.

One out later, Randy Myers relieved Aguilera, yielding a two-run triple in the right-center field alley to Mark Grace.

Reliever Les Lancaster, 4-4, was the winner.

Left-handers Jamie Moyer of the Cubs and Bob Ojeda of the Mets each pitched seven strong innings before being removed for pinch-hitters.

The Cubs pulled into a 2-2 tie when Rafael Palmeiro led off the sixth inning with his sixth homer into the right-center field bleachers.

After Palmeiro homered, Ojeda hit Dawson with a pitch in the left arm. Dawson pointed his bat at Ojeda and then took a couple of steps towards the mound but Mets catcher Gary Carter grabbed and held Dawson.

Both benches emptied, but order was restored immediately as plate umpire Harry Wendlestedt issued warnings to both teams.

The Mets scored in the first inning on singles by Mookie Wilson and Tim Teufel and a sacrifice fly by Dave Magadan.

Chicago tied it in the second. Sandberg singled, stole second and scored on Damon Berryhill's two-out single.

The Mets regained the lead in the sixth. Darryl Strawberry singled, stole second, continued to third on Berryhill's throwing error and scored on a single by Carter.

Moyer left for a pinch batter in the seventh after allowing nine hits and striking out six. He gave up three walks, but they were all intentional.

Ojeda gave up the two runs on five hits, while striking out eight and not walking a batter.

Expos' Youmans suspended indefinitely for failing to comply with drug program

NEW YORK (AP) — Floyd Youmans, the troubled Montreal Expos pitcher who underwent alcohol rehabilitation last fall, was suspended indefinitely by the commissioner's office Saturday "for failing to comply with his drug testing program."

Although Commissioner Peter Ueberroth confirmed that Youmans had been undergoing "periodic drug testing," his office would not say how Youmans had violated the program.

Youmans had been scheduled to pitch Saturday night against Pittsburgh.

In a brief statement, Ueberroth said the suspension "is indefinite pending further evaluation."

On March 30, Ueberroth suspended Eddie Milner of the Cincinnati Reds after he admitted using cocaine. Milner, who had undergone rehabilitation last season, returned to action on June 19.

The Expos revealed on Thursday that Ueberroth's office had been investigating Youmans for several days, but club President Claude Brochu refused to say whether the investigation had anything to do with drug testing.

On Saturday, club spokesman Rich Griffin said Expos officials met with Youmans after the suspension was announced and "it hasn't been decided yet what the next step for Floyd is."

Griffin said the Expos would help Youmans with "anything that might come up in terms of medical assistance."

Youmans will remain in Montreal but will not be with the team, Griffin said.

Ueberroth's statement said Youmans had been undergoing testing "as part of the aftercare process" of his rehabilitation program. Although Youmans' reasons for entering rehabilitation last October were never specified, the pitcher has talked about an alcohol problem.

Last season, two female friends

ATLANTA — Atlanta Braves' relief pitcher Bruce Sutter, right, is congratulated by teammate Ron Gant after his 11th save of the season as the Braves defeated the San Diego Padres, 4-3, at Fulton County Stadium Friday.

accused the pitcher of using drugs, but he denied the charges.

In February, Youmans said in an interview that his drinking problem was diagnosed as hereditary and that it began when he was in high school in Tampa, Fla., where he was a schoolboy chum of New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden. Gooden underwent cocaine rehabilitation in the spring of 1987.

He said that during rehabilitation, he learned he would have to change his lifestyle.

"That's why things have to be dull for me, so I won't drink," Youmans said. "I have to stay away from the things and places that will give me the temptations."

Youmans, 24, a right-hander, was 3-6 with a 3.21 ERA at the time of the suspension. In 14 appearances, Youmans pitched 84 innings and allowed 30 earned runs on 64 hits.

Youmans was 0-3 in his first six starts this year with an ERA of 5.24, averaging just six innings per start. Manager Buck Rodgers indicated then that Youmans might be running out of chances with the club.

"It's a situation where a young man has to assume responsibilities for his actions," Rodgers said.

Spinks and manager get along just fine

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks and Butch Lewis are living proof that the fighter and manager who barbecue together stay together.

"If it was not for Butch I'd be out of boxing," said Spinks, who will challenge Mike Tyson for the heavyweight championship Monday night at the Convention Center.

"We're friends first, then comes business," Lewis said Friday.

Lewis, who will be 42 Sunday, lives with his family at Centerville, Del. The 31-year-old Spinks lives at Greenville, about five miles away.

"We go to each other's place for barbecues," Lewis said. "Sometimes I'll call and say, 'Come on over Slim and let's watch the game on television.'"

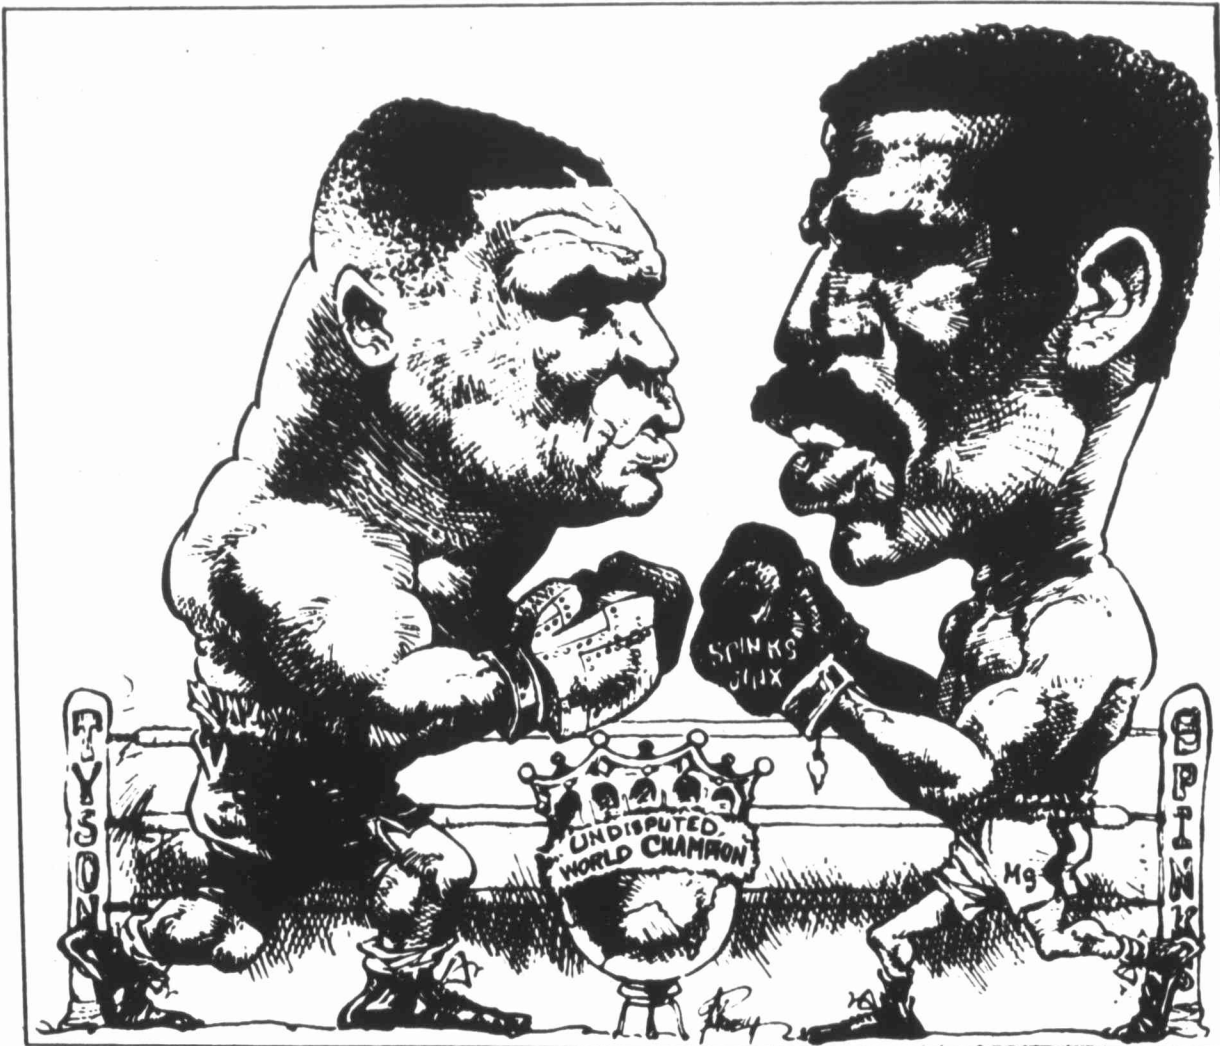

Meanwhile, Tyson is unhappy with his relationship with manager Bill Cayton and is barely speaking to him.

There is speculation about whether the squabbling about Tyson will adversely affect his performance Monday night.

Lewis believes it won't be lack of concentration that will beat Tyson, but Spinks' boxing skill and intelligence.

"When he makes a mistake, we intend to make him pay. We definitely feel we can pierce his armor."

Lewis recalled a conversation he had with Spinks when he told the fighter, then the light heavyweight champion, that he should challenge unbeaten Larry Holmes for a piece of the heavyweight title. "He said, 'do you think I can beat him?'" Lewis said. "Sure you can beat him." "OK, if you say I can beat him."

Spinks beat Holmes twice. Spinks is guaranteed $13.5 million to fight Tyson. Asked what the fighter's reaction was when he was told what his purse would be, Lewis said, "He really had no reaction, but I remember his reaction when I walked out on $10 million the day after the Holmes fight."

Cayton and the late Jim Jacobs, who co-managed Tyson, were furious when Lewis rejected their offer and said they would no longer deal with him. Lewis told Spinks, "I can go back and get you the $10 million, but I can't be part of the deal."

"If you're not in the deal, there is no deal," Spinks said. "Butch is like another me," Spinks said. "He can say things for me that I can't say. To me, he's a much brighter side of me." "We've never come close to breaking up," said Lewis, who met Spinks when he and his brother Leon, the former heavyweight champion, were at the Montreal Olympics where they won gold medals.

Lewis signed them for Bob Arum's Top Rank, Inc., for which he worked.

Lewis split with Arum, not amicably, after Leon's loss in his title rematch against Muhammad Ali in 1978. When Lewis left, Michael wanted to go with him and told Arum that if he couldn't be released from his contract, he wouldn't fight again.

Spinks is his own manager of record since, as a promoter, Lewis cannot legally manage fighters.

"I perform managerial duties, but I don't take a manager's cut," said Lewis, who has promoted most of Spinks' fights. "I take mine out of the promotion."

Since Lewis is not involved as a promoter in Monday night's fight, he said does have a contract with Spinks for the match. He did not disclose the terms.

"Mike has very good common sense," Lewis said of Spinks, who obviously is satisfied with the business aspects of the relationship.

Lewis said that even without what Spinks will make Monday night, the fighter is in good shape financially.

"I take my hat off to him," Spinks said. "I think Butch is best at what he does."

Bout slated for twelve

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The International Boxing Federation on Friday bowed to pressure of a fast-approaching $35 million extravaganza and agreed to sanction a 12-round heavyweight title fight between Mike Tyson and Michael Spinks.

The decision ended weeks of haggling among the IBF, the rival World Boxing Council and the World Boxing Association over whether the bout Monday night would be 12 or 15 rounds. It also guaranteed that there will be an undisputed champion following the fight.

The IBF had threatened to strip Tyson of its title if he fought anything but a 15-round fight against Spinks.

However, the threat was withdrawn when the IBF reversed an earlier decision and granted Tyson an exception to its Rule 21, which calls for all title fights to be 15 rounds in length, IBF President Bob Lee said.

Lee said the exception was passed unanimously late Thursday and Friday by the IBF's championship committee and its executive committee. The vote also ended a federal lawsuit the IBF had brought against the WBA, the WBC, state athletic commissioner Larry Hazzard and Bill Cayton, Tyson's manager.

"I think we agreed to 12 rounds because of the best interests of the public and because they think this is for the undisputed heavyweight championship," Lee said after relaying the IBF's decision to U.S. District Court Judge Alfred M. Wolin. "We didn't do it in the best interests of boxing."

Cayton, the WBC and the WBA had called for a 12-round fight all along, citing safety issues.

"I think the IBF, when the time arrived, made a very wise decision," Cayton said in a telephone interview from Atlantic City. "Much of the credit has to go to Larry Hazzard along with the judge."

The dispute between the organizations centered on a July 1987 agreement between the IBF, the WBC and the WBA to rotate as the lead organization for Tyson's defenses of his title.

The IBF was the lead organization for the Tyson-Tyrell Biggs fight, the WBC handled the Tyson-Larry Holmes fight and the WBA was in charge of the Tyson-Tony Tubbs match.

The IBF is the lead organization for the Tyson-Spinks fight, and as such it maintained that its championship rules should be in effect, meaning 15 rounds.

The WBC, WBA and Cayton balked at that, and when they could not agree on the length of the fight, Hazzard used his authority on Monday to declare the fight a 12-rounder.

The IBF, which already had filed a federal suit against the WBC and WBA, then amended its suit to add Cayton and Hazzard as defendants.

A hearing on the matter began Wednesday and there seemed to be a breakthrough Thursday when Wolin got the parties to negotiate a settlement.

Fight gate at $12.3 million

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mike Tyson weighed in at 218½ pounds Saturday for his heavyweight title defense against Michael Spinks, who weighed 212½.

Tyson will defend his title in a scheduled 12-round bout at the Convention Center Monday night.

Donald Trump, the entrepreneur who bought the live gate rights to the bout, announced the live gate was at $12.3 million, which he said was a record for any sporting event. "I'm ready to roll," Tyson said in an interview on ABC, which televised the weigh-in. "I'm in great shape mentally."

About the turmoil concerning his private life, Tyson said, "Everything will be taken care of, I'm sure. I'm looking forward to taking care of Mr. Spinks."

Spinks weighed in wearing jockey pants and wearing a gold chain with a gold boxing glove around his neck. It was the highest weight ever for Spinks, who has fought four times as a heavyweight. His previous high was 208¾, when he knocked out Gerry Cooney in the fifth round June 5, 1987, in his last fight.

Tyson, who weighed in wearing only briefs, has been heavier in four of his previous seven world title bouts. His previous heaviest weight in a title fight was 221½.

Iron Mike 4-1 favorite

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Publicity over the personal problems surrounding Mike Tyson has resulted in a shift in betting odds, but the heavyweight champion remains a solid 4-1 favorite to beat Michael Spinks in their title fight Monday night.

Odds on Tyson had been as high as 5-1 this month, according to Nate Wolfson, manager of the sports book at Bally's Hotel and Casino.

"I think people might have been persuaded a little by what they read about Tyson's domestic problems," Wolfson said Friday. "I think that's causing some people to lean toward Spinks a little. But the public still thinks Tyson is a better fighter."

Wolfson said the betting action was starting to pick up as the fight approached. "Past history has shown that the 10 or 12 hours prior to the fight is when all the money rolls in," Wolfson said. "You get 80 percent of your action the day of the fight."

The fight may be the richest in history for the two boxers, but it probably won't set any records at Nevada's two dozen sports books — the only state in the country where sports betting is legal.

"This won't be the biggest fight (in terms of betting) because Tyson is such a prohibitive favorite," Wolfson said.

Draft is full of question marks

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA college draft, reduced to three rounds and increased to 25 teams, will be held Tuesday with a long list of question marks following Danny Manning.

Manning's selection by the Los Angeles Clippers was clinched on May 21 at the NBA lottery. "He will definitely make us a better team," Clippers general manager Elgin Baylor said of Manning, the college player of the year who led underdog Kansas to the NCAA title. "He's a terrific player and a fine young man. He's definitely going to have an impact."

Joining the draft this year are two expansion teams, the Charlotte Hornets and the Miami Heat, who will pick eighth and ninth, after the seven spots determined in the lottery.

The draft will be reduced from seven rounds to three this year and two in 1989, a concession made by the league in the April 25 collective bargaining agreement with the players.

The Clippers, who also have the No. 6 pick in the first round, will look to improve on this season's 17-65 record. But the Indiana Pacers, who won the second choice, will be building upon a 38-victory season that just missed being good enough to make the playoffs.

General Manager Donnie Walsh said the Pacers' high draft position, coupled with their close proximity to playoff status, could lead them to select 7-foot-4 Rik Smits of Marist.

"We're considering him heavily," Walsh said. "We haven't made up our minds, but you don't get a chance to get a center often, especially in the team position we're in. We missed the playoffs in a tiebreaker."

"We might not, in fact we hope we won't, have the chance again to draft a big center," Smits, from the Netherlands, is considered a raw talent who flourished in a second-echelon college program.

"He definitely would change the look of our team," Walsh said. "He weighs 250 pounds, but on his frame he could go up to 300 without hurting him."

Smits averaged 24.7 points, 8.7 rebounds and 3.9 blocked shots and shot 62.3 percent from the field as a senior. He had similar statistics as a junior.

"He's raw and he's going to need work, but Patrick Ewing didn't really come into his own until his third year," Walsh said. "Why should we judge Rik Smits any harsher than Patrick Ewing?"

NBA scouting chief Marty Blake believes that Smits has outstanding potential and deserves to be one of the top five players selected.

"He is a big-time first rounder who I think will be a real force in the NBA in three or four years," Blake said.

"I know the competition will be much tougher than anything I've faced in college," Smits said. "Much of the time I was playing against people 6-8."

After the Clippers and Indiana, the first-round draft order, barring trades, will be Philadelphia, New Jersey, Golden State, the Clippers, Phoenix, Charlotte, Miami, San Antonio, New York, Washington, Milwaukee, Phoenix, Seattle, Houston, Utah, Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas, Portland, Cleveland, Denver, Boston and the Los Angeles Lakers.

The 76ers have a pressing need for a shooting guard and have narrowed their choices to Hersey Hawkins of Bradley, Rex Chapman of Kentucky and Mitch Richmond of Kansas State.

"Both Hawkins and Chapman are considered excellent players and each has his pluses and minuses," owner Harold Katz said.

Katz called Chapman a Jerry West-type guard, while Hawkins is a better inside threat.

The 6-3 Hawkins averaged 36.3 points as a senior, the highest NCAA average in 11 years, leading the nation by nearly eight points per game.

Chapman, who elected to leave Kentucky after his sophomore year, averaged 19.0 for the Wildcats.

"He's an exceptional perimeter shooter, but beyond that he's got enormous physical talent," 76ers general manager John Nash said. "He can pull up and take the shot, but he can also dunk on the fastbreak."

But NBA insiders say Chapman and Hawkins are unprepared for the defensive demands that will be placed on them in the NBA.

New Jersey general manager Harry Weltman has a list of potential choices that includes Chapman, Hawkins, Smits, Richmond, 6-8 forward Chris Morris of Auburn and 6-10 forward Charles Smith of Pittsburgh.

Weltman said the 1988 draft is difficult to assess because it has depth but few potential star players besides Manning.

"This is like preparing a fighter," Weltman said. "You don't want to peak until you step into the ring. This is maybe the toughest draft, at least the most difficult in terms of pegging players to certain teams. It also is open to more trade possibilities than any other."

Weltman said the Nets probably won't trade to get a higher pick.

"Surrendering something just to move up two spots doesn't make sense," Weltman said. "No player excites us to the degree that we must have him."

Potential first-round centers besides Smits include 6-11 Rony Seikaly of Syracuse, 6-11 Eric Leckner of Wyoming, 7-0 Will Perdue of Vanderbilt and 7-1 Tito Horford of Miami and the Dominican Republic.

The top forwards besides Manning, Smith and Morris are 6-9 Tim Perry of Temple, 6-9 Harvey Grant of Oklahoma, 6-6 Jerome Lane of Pittsburgh, 6-7 Derrick Chievous of Missouri, 6-9 Mark Bryant of Seton Hall and 6-6 Dan Majerle of Central Michigan.

Leading guards in addition to Chapman, Hawkins and Richmond are 6-5 Jeff Gray of Iowa State, 6-3 Rod Strickland of DePaul, 6-3 Gary Grant of Michigan, 6-7 Willie Anderson of Georgia and 6-8 Ricky Berry of San Jose State.

Chapman, Horford, Lane and Strickland are early entry candidates, along with 6-10 Charles Shackleford of North Carolina State.

Life in Minor League as a manager

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Hundreds of slow bus rides on dusty roads and train trips to towns that are small dots on a map have left Joe Sparks with a burning desire for jet travel as a major league manager.

Sparks, 50, has spent more than half his life in the minors as a player, coach or manager. His professional baseball career as a player began in 1956 at Hastings, Neb., and ended in 1969. He began managing in 1970 and has won American Association divisional titles three times since 1981, including 1986 when the Sporting News recognized him as its minor league manager of the year.

Sparks has endured the frustration of waiting for a call to the big leagues. His only experience at the highest echelon of baseball has come in two one-year stints as a coach.

Sparks currently has his Indianapolis Indians rolling toward a divisional title in a bid for a third consecutive American Association baseball championship under his leadership.

In those three years Sparks has helped develop the nucleus of the current roster of the parent Montreal Expos.

He'd like to manage them in the majors, but doesn't think former Indianapolis manager Buck Rodgers will be vacating the managerial job soon. And Sparks isn't interested in a coaching job under Rodgers or any other major league club.

"I feel like I'm serving our organization a lot more here than I would be sitting on the bench up there, coaching in the big league," he said. "I feel that I don't have a whole lot more to prove down here as a manager ... The last three years have been as good, if not better, than I could ever dream about."

The Indians compiled a 154-126 mark the past two seasons, winning a second consecutive American Association championship last year despite finishing third in the regular season. The Indians beat Louisville 3-2 in a best-of-five semifinal and Denver 4-1 in the best-of-seven final.

Going into the weekend, the Indians were 20 games over .500 and had a commanding 10-game lead over second-place Louisville in the league's Eastern Division.

More than half of Montreal's current roster has played for Sparks here since 1986.

"After having all these players I'd like to manage in Montreal. We feel we have one of the top guys in baseball managing our club up there in Buck Rodgers, but sometimes funny things happen," he said.

"I'd like to be there because I know the players like Dennis Martinez, Pascual Perez and (Luis) Rivera. And I feel there are several here this year who will be with the Expos in the next year or two," Sparks adds.

"I sometimes get discouraged. You see all the good things happen and then you look up and you see people that really have not been successful end up with the prime job of managing a major league team," Sparks said.

"That doesn't set right with me at times ... When you have the confidence that I know I have, it tears you down a little bit, but then you pick yourself up off the floor and say well your time is coming," Sparks continues.

"I feel it's going to come and I know one thing for sure, the club that makes that decision will get a quality guy that knows how to win, knows how to put a program together, knows how to treat players and the press to get the job done. I've been a winner everywhere I've gone."

Bill Stoneman, Montreal's general manager and vice president, agrees that Sparks deserves a chance to manage in the big leagues.

"He'd make an excellent manager. He's a large part of the reason we've had championship teams here. He has tremendous ability to get players to develop, responding to coaching and to win games," Stoneman said. "He deserves a chance and I see it happening in the near future. We'd hate to lose him but we surely would not stand in his way."

"It's just a matter of time before some organization opens its eyes and realizes Joe is the man they need as a manager."

Outfielder Billy Moore is playing for Sparks for a third consecutive year.

"He lets you go out and play and doesn't put any pressure on you. He doesn't give you that 'win or else' attitude. He just coaches you on how to get things done, picks up the little mistakes and explains how you can eliminate them," Moore said. "That attitude works because it makes you want to perform and you realize that is what you have to do if you want to get a shot in the bigs."

"He has a terrific gift of getting players behind a common effort of winning and playing to their maximum potential," said Indians' president and general manager Max Schumacher. "Often when you have players come down from the majors, and we've had a few since Joe's been here, they are disgruntled."

"He's able to get them back into a winning positive spirit. That's good for us and it's also good for the player who wants to get back up ... I have no doubt Joe can be a major league manager and that in a short time he'll be one of the best."

Millionaire developer climbs into boxing ring

NEW YORK (AP) — Politics, they say, makes strange bedfellows. So, Donald Trump might add, does boxing.

After years of rubbing elbows with New York's upper crust, Trump is now in the bizarre world of boxing — a land where the millionaire developer is instead shaking hands with hair-raising Don King and bare-chested Butch Lewis.

"I enjoy it — I've always enjoyed boxing," said Trump, whose Trump Plaza casino in Atlantic City, N.J., will host Monday's Michael Spinks-Mike Tyson heavyweight title fight.

"Of course, my interest is also financial, but I just enjoy boxing."

Until last June, however, the closest Trump came to the fight game was his ongoing verbal brawl with long-time nemesis Mayor Edward I. Koch. Trump kept busy running his two casinos, New York's Trump Tower, and an assortment of other holdings; in his spare time, he wrote the best-selling "Trump: The Art of the Deal."

His deals soon included matching heavyweight boxers — an idea which was not new to Atlantic City, but one which Trump moved to a much larger scale after getting involved last year.

While no-name boxers with little marquee value once fought before crowds of 2,500 people, Trump brought in the big names and began drawing more than 20,000 fans to fights like Gerry Cooney-Spinks and Tyson against Tyrell Biggs and ex-champion Larry Holmes.

The bouts brought Trump tremendous publicity and threatened Las Vegas' reign as home to the big fights. The Tyson-Holmes brawl attracted celebrities such as Muhammad Ali, Don Johnson, Barbara Streisand, Jack Nicholson, Cheryl Tiegs and Kirk Douglas to Trump's casino.

More importantly, each fight attracted the high-rollers who pack the casino gaming tables. For Cooney-Spinks, the amount of money spent at the casino on fight night hit $7.2 million; an average Monday in June would see about $1.2 million spent, casino officials said.

Figuring the casino to make about 15 percent of the total wagered, the fight meant an extra $900,000 for the Trump Plaza that night. Tacking on the two nights before and the night after the fight, the casino made an extra $1.5 million off the bout.

Monday's fight is anticipated to do at least as well for the casino, Trump said. "I got a little lucky with this one. It's turned out much, much bigger than we anticipated."

Heavy pre-fight publicity centering on Tyson's reported marital, management and mother-in-law woes haven't hurt either, although Trump discounts the rumors.

In addition to the money, Trump appears to be enjoying the notoriety of big-time boxing promotion. Prior to the Tyson-Holmes fight, Trump was introduced at ringside. And a commercial promoting the Tyson-Spinks fight shows the boxers nose-to-nose, eye-to-eye, ready to explode. Instead the two boxers stare each other down and say ...

"Thank you, Mr. Trump," offers Spinks.

"Yeah, thank you, Mr. Trump," agrees Tyson, expressing his gratitude as much for Trump's financial outlay as his role in setting up the fight.

Tyson, 21, will pull down $20 million minimum, while Spinks will receive $13.5 million guaranteed. Trump paid $11 million to host the fight and another $2 million in expenses.

Trump, in a telephone interview from his plane this week, proudly boasted the fight will produce the largest live gate in boxing history at an estimated $13 million; ringside seats are priced at $1500.

As far as handling fight negotiations, a lifetime of cutting deals in conference rooms is scant preparation for handling the bombastic King or the bow-tied Lewis. In trying to arrange this fight, Tyson's trainers and Lewis — who represents Spinks — engaged in shouting, exchanging threats and storming out on one another.

Yet Trump has nothing but kind words for everyone who set up this fight, although he did admit to some apprehension about getting involved initially.

"They're very good businessmen," Trump said of arch-rival Lewis and King. "I've found them both to be very honorable."

Trump said his interest in boxing began in 1971 after the first Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier fight in Madison Square Garden, when Smokin' Joe outpointed Ali in one of the greatest fights of all time.

"I believe Ali-Frazier I remains unequalled," said Trump, predicting the Tyson-Spinks fight could rival it while refusing to predict a winner. He does foresee a continuing battle with Las Vegas for future bouts.

"I think they'll get some and we'll get some. They're just a little upset now that I've been getting all the good fights — or most of the big fights," said Trump. "I see them getting more aggressive, and maybe I'll be getting a little less aggressive."

Donald Trump? A little less aggressive?

"We'll see," said Trump. "I don't believe in overpaying for anything."

Going for the crown

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

Jeanie Robertson successfully competed Oct. 20 — against eight other young ladies — for the title of Miss Howard County 1988.

On July 9, Jeanie will be among 63 of this state's most beautiful and talented ladies, including 20 returning veterans, competing for the Miss Texas crown at the 27th anniversary of the Miss Texas pageant in Fort Worth at the Tarrant County Convention Center Theater.

Jeanie, the 20-year-old daughter of Gene and Barbara Robertson, Coahoma, will travel to Fort Worth Friday to prepare for the preliminary competitions, July 8 through July 8.

The competition among the 10 finalists will be July 9 and is to be televised across Texas, locally on Channel 2 at 8 p.m.

The pageant offers more than $400,000 in scholarships and prizes, plus $40,000 in cash scholarships. Each contestant will have at least one college scholarship available to them, according to a news release.

Jeanie is a veteran competitor. She was the Cinderella Miniature Miss Talent winner in 1977, won the title of Cinderella Teen in 1982, was runner-up in the Howard County Rodeo Queen competition in 1983, was crowned Miss Howard County Fair Queen in 1985, and was Future Farmers of America Sweetheart in 1986.

Although a title is prestigious, there are a few drawbacks.

Preparing for competition is never easy, especially when you're competing for the Miss Texas title.

"It's a lot of work. It's more work than everyone thinks, they think it's fun and games — but it's not," Jeanie said.

She began preparing herself in November. She and Linda Conway, Howard College dean of admissions and local pageant director — as well as serving as Jeanie's manager, met at 5 a.m. three days each week for a 45-minute workout.

"It was a real unique situation with Jeanie," Linda said. "Most girls have to lose weight, but she had to gain."

Jeanie's workout was limited to weight lifting and she avoided aerobic exercises. She was placed on a 2,000-calorie per day diet.

Apparently her hard work has paid off.

When Jeanie was fitted for her swimsuit by Fort Worth seamstress Ada Duckett, who makes swimsuits for competitors all across the United States, she was told she had the best swimsuit body Ada had seen in a long time, Linda said.

Linda had a few other tips for Jeanie prior to competition.

"I told her not to fall in love. That really would distract her," Linda said with a laugh.

Jeanie says she is not nervous but quickly adds, "I might be when I get there." She admits the prospect of the interview session with judges makes her nervous, but she loves to perform in front of an audience.

"When I'm on stage, I can really ham it up." She plans to perform a clog/tap dance routine to "Rocky Top."

Linda noted it's expensive to send a competitor to the pageant. Businesses and private individuals have donated money to the pageant fund. Jeanie worked at the recent U.I.L. track meet in the concession stand to help raise money.

And Jeanie's parents, who she says "have been very supportive," have contributed to their daughters needs.

"My parents said, 'this is a once in a lifetime thing' and to get whatever I needed."

Linda is enthusiastic with Jeanie's possibilities of becoming Miss Texas. "Jeanie is doing great. It scares me that she's getting that good," Linda said.

After all her hard work, Jeanie is ready to relax, but admits, "If I don't win — sooner or later I'll probably enter another pageant."

Jeanie is a 1986 graduate of Coahoma High School, and attended Howard College for the past two years. She is 5' 7½ inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, has green eyes and dark brown hair. Her hobbies and interests include cheerleading, dancing, skating, bowling, tennis and horseback riding. She has special training in tap dancing.

Jeanie also has other plans for her future.

"I want to teach elementary education," Jeanie said.

She plans to attend either Texas Tech University in Lubbock, or Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

Town band instrument of 'sanity'

Gene Rigby plays the tuba in the all-volunteer band in Beaumont. The rubber chicken helps Rigby to mute his horn.

BEAUMONT (AP) — Opening his horn case, Gene Rigby nonchalantly removed a rubber chicken from his tuba as he prepared for another Monday night practice.

Seated nearby in a Hawaiian shirt was a 74-year-old baritone horn player. He casually changed his glasses, slipping on rhinestone bifocals with black electrical tape on the tops of the lenses.

As other band members wandered in to the South Park Middle School band room, no one took notice of the rubber chicken or rhinestone eyeglasses. They represent nothing unusual for the Beaumont Community Band.

The all-volunteer band was established 10 years ago, the brainchild of Lowell Clark, director of music for the Beaumont school district.

The Community Band's main purpose is to provide "an opportunity to play in a concert band for those who played in high school and college," says director Howard Hutchinson.

It's not only 74-year-old Tony Palumbo and people of his age group or musical experience who are a part of this group, but also young adults. They are pharmaceutical representatives, retired restaurant owners and construction workers and other various occupations. But all are volunteers who take part in this band out of their love for music and friendship.

"Sanity" is a description given by one member.

On the 70th birthday of their band director, or "baton waver" as band members refer to him, a roast was given in his honor.

"Hutch has many faces, and not one of them is nice," Gene Rigby joked during the roast. But the respect the band has for him is obvious.

"He's a major part of this band," said trumpet player Cheryl Rigby, Gene's wife.

Hutchinson and four of the band members go back a long way, when they attended and he taught band at South Park High School.

The band performs concerts at retirement centers, the Fourth of July celebration at Riverfront Park, the annual Symphony of Trees and at other events. And there are no auditions for this band, no formalities, says Jean Hutchinson, wife of the "baton waver."

The 94 members may not simultaneously attend practice, but that doesn't matter. It just means there's more pizza for the members who showed up. "If you want to know how we really are, come eat pizza with us," Gene Rigby says.

Rigby's sense of humor is no secret.

He first used the chicken in his tuba when he performed in the Port Arthur Theater Group production of "Barnum." His tuba was too loud and he needed to mute it. "But (mutes) cost $80 to $100," he explained. "My kid threw a rubber chicken in it and it worked great."

The makeshift mute got into "Barnum" by chance. One day during dress rehearsal he blew his tuba and it made a horrible sound. He realized he had left the rubber chicken in and pulled it out. "The clowns coming down the aisle were rolling (with laughter)."

Dense fuel
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Researchers at the University of Rochester's Laboratory for Laser Energetics have used a laser to compress hydrogen fuel to what they say is the highest density ever directly measured.

The density was in the range of two to four times that of lead. (If you compressed water to the same degree, a gallon of it would weigh nearly half a ton.)

Fusion research is the effort to recreate and harness the power of the sun on earth. To do that, scientists must compress and heat deuterium, a form of hydrogen present in ordinary water, to the extreme temperatures and densities at the sun's center. If such research is successful, it could yield a limitless and relatively safe and clean form of energy.

Exercise and depression
NEW YORK (AP) — People who exercise regularly have fewer episodes of depression than sedentary people, according to the Reebok Information Bureau.

It says exercise activates brain cells which release dopamine, a chemical that helps regulate movement and emotion. Too little dopamine in the brain results in depression, says Dr. Dwight German of Dallas. The more exercise, the more dopamine, the less depression, German concludes.

U.S. wood abroad
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Japan buys more American wood and wood products than any other foreign nation, reports WOOD magazine.

Industry trade data indicate Japan spent more than $1.9 billion on U.S. forest products in 1987. Canada came next, then South Korea, China and West Germany, Italy, the United Kingdom, Taiwan, Mexico and Australia made up the second half of our top 10 customers.

Woman suspects man of child abuse

DEAR ABBY: Please help me! I had a boyfriend who has a teen-age daughter and a 5-year-old daughter. I have reason to believe he is sexually abusing them. The very thought of it turns my stomach and sickens me so much I just had to get away from him.

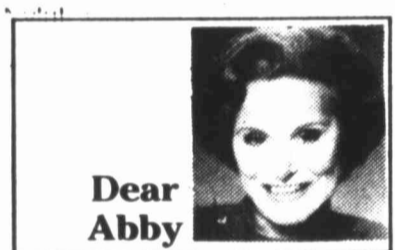

When we first started going together I liked him a lot — we had so much in common — but since I've had these suspicions about him, I don't want anything to do with him.

He keeps calling and asking to see me, but I keep making excuses. The last time he called, he wanted to know if I was mad at him. It old him no, I wasn't — which is true. I am just sick at heart and confused.

Should I confront him and clear the air, or just forget about him and look for a man who doesn't have daughters?

CONFUSED
Confronting him will not necessarily clear the air. What if he denies your accusations?

If your suspicions are based on strong evidence, this man should be reported to your local child protection agency. The people there will know how to approach and question him — and his daughters. Your first concern should be the girls. If your suspicions are correct, they and their sick father will require therapy. Please send me your name and address, and I will gladly intervene for you.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am planning my wedding and have engaged a photographer to take pictures. My problem is that I am blind in my right eye. I have no control over the movement — the eye "floats."

How can I take a nice wedding picture?

AUGUST BRIDE
DEAR BRIDE: Tell the photographer about your problem. It's possible for him to shoot the picture at an angle that will not show your "floating eye."

DEAR ABBY: As information desk receptionists in a large medical center, our hearts go out daily to people who arrive here only to learn that their friends and loved ones are not in this hospital but in another one — sometimes miles away. (Even in smaller cities where there are only two hospitals, this happens.)

People are understandably upset when they learn that someone has been hospitalized, but they could save themselves a lot of time if they would carefully listen to the name of the hospital and if possible write it down. Then before they go there to visit, they should phone to confirm that the person is still a patient. (In many cases, the patient has already been released.)

We told our boss that there should be some way to let folks know that a simple phone call could save a lot of time and hassle, and she said, "Good idea; write to Dear Abby." So here's our letter. We hope you'll think it's worth sharing.

Antiperspirant damage to clothing

By NAOMI HUNT
Extension agent

Holes, tears and discoloration in the underarm area of clothes that otherwise have strong fabric has consumers puzzled.

According to the International Fabricare Institute, the problem occurs when antiperspirants come into contact with items made or blended with cellulose fibers, such as cotton, linen, ramie and rayon.

Antiperspirants usually contain high concentrations of aluminum chlorides which can damage cellulose fibers. The agitation of laundering will cause the chemically degraded fibers to tear or be removed from the fabric.

Antiperspirants should be removed from clothing as soon as possible to prevent this type of damage from occurring. The consumer may also choose to use a deodorant, which should not cause this problem, rather than an antiperspirant.

Frequent cleaning doesn't cause wear

Frequent drycleaning and laundering of clothes doesn't cause them to wear out more quickly. In fact, dirt and soil are what cause garments to wear out.

Focus on family

Dirt has rough edges that can actually be seen under a microscope and has an abrasive effect on the fibers. If cleaning products are not used correctly, at home or commercially, they may damage your fabric and/or its finishes. Also remember that insects may attach garments that are soiled in order to feed on the food. Keeping clothes clean prolongs their wear life.

Home methods for setting dyes — don't work

There are a variety of "home remedies" for setting dyes in fabrics. Unfortunately, none of them work. Some recommend using salt and water, or vinegar and water solutions. These remedies probably have their origin from old dyeing procedures where salt was used in the dyeing process to set dyes on cotton and linen and vinegar to set dyes on wool.

Recent research at the University of Nebraska tested several home dye-setting treatments. They evaluated: salt and washing soda; salt and vinegar; salt, vinegar and alum; epsom salts; a detergent prewash; and salt.

The test treatments did not reduce color loss in fabric. Some actually increased rather than decreased the amount of color loss in the textiles after laundering.

Although you may know people who advise dye-setting some item of clothing, don't believe them. It's a waste of your time, energy and money.

Agent recommends fruit crops

By DON RICHARDSON
Extension agent

I am so tired of not being able to raise a good crop of fruit in West Texas. Are there any varieties proven for use here?

Yes there are. Though it is getting late for such plantings you might file this information away for use in a fall planting later this year. Recommended varieties of peaches include the following: Springgold, Bicentennial, Sure crop, Sentinel, Harvester, Ranger, Redglobe, Milasm, Loring, Denman, Dixiland, Redskin, Jefferson, and Frank. A recommended white fleshing peach is the Belle of Georgia.

Recommended apricots include Bryan, Hungarian and Moorpark Bruce, Allred, Methley, Morris, Ozark, Premier, Wickson and Santa Rosa are good plums for our area. Nectarine varieties include Red Globe, Crimson Gold and Armking.

We currently have a new extension bulletin ordered to keep on hand available to fruit growers. If you desire one please contact our office and reserve your copy. Please refer to bulletin No. B-1581, Home Fruit Production: Stone Fruit (Peaches, Nectarines, Plums, Apricots and Almonds). This new bulletin includes helpful information on soil requirements, purchasing trees, soil preparation and planting, pruning and training, watering, weed control, fertilizing, thinning, disease and insect control.

Our dog has been infested with ticks this year. Are diseases possible from these pests?

Yes. An infestation of ticks can cause a great discomfort to a dog, as well as contribute to generalized skin problems. Ticks sometimes remove so much blood that they contribute to the death of the dog from anemia. But a much more serious threat is posed by diseases transmitted by ticks from infected to non-infected dogs. These tick-borne diseases include: Ehrlichiosis or Tracker Dog Disease; Babesiosis or Malignant Jaundice; Borreliosis or Lyme Disease.

Other diseases include canine hemobartonellosis, canine hepatozoonosis, canine Rocky Mountain spotted fever and tick paralysis. Part of any good pet care program, always keep your dog on a good health and nutrition program, which includes regular visits to your local veterinarian who can professionally advise you on an all-round health program which includes tick control.

Accurate testing

Precise blood tests can detect irregularities in the function of the parathyroid glands, enabling people who suffer from the condition known as hyperparathyroidism to be diagnosed and treated earlier and more effectively, before serious complications arise, according to a specialist at New York University Medical Center.

"Hyperparathyroidism is characterized by the secretion of too much parathyroid hormone, whose function is to regulate the body's blood level," explained Dr. Daniel F. Roses, professor of surgery. "There may be as many as 60,000 new cases of the condition each year in the United States."

An article in an upcoming issue of the center's Health Letter notes that the symptoms of hyperparathyroidism — lethargy, mental sluggishness, psychiatric disturbance, constipation, kidney stones and bone disease — can indicate other conditions as well.

"Generally, the first clue is an elevated level of calcium in the blood, which can be determined in a routine blood screening during a regular medical examination," Roses said. "A procedure now commonly used, called the simultaneous autoanalyzer, measures various blood factors, including the level of calcium."

Since there are many causes of elevated serum calcium levels, such a finding is not sufficient to diagnose hyperparathyroidism, Roses added. Physicians rely on a diagnostic technique called radioimmunoassay, which is used to measure the level of parathyroid hormone in a blood sample that has shown an elevated calcium level. If both calcium and parathyroid hormone levels are elevated, an abnormality of the parathyroids is indicated.

REMOVING A CALLUS SURGICALLY

The pleasure you take in running or jogging can sometimes be hampered when you develop a callus on the ball of your foot. The pleasure can be lost altogether if you develop a "spot" callus, which not only causes pain but may also become infected. A "spot" callus is a deep area with the consistency of a corn located in the center of a spread out callus. This "corn-within-a-callus" is caused by an abnormally depressed metatarsal head or by a metatarsal bone that is too long.

All of the metatarsal heads on the balls of your feet should bear an equal share of the weight load. But if one of them is too long on your foot, this produces a pressure point and abnormal stress on the skin. If you want to know exactly how this feels, tape a pebble to the bottom of your foot and walk on it all day long. Fortunately, this condition can often be permanently corrected by your podiatrist by surgically lifting the depressed or overlong metatarsal bone. This is usually done with a local anesthetic and a minimum of discomfort.

UNITED WAY

Tidbits

By LEA WHITEHEAD
Staff Writer

"I just had the grandest time," says Margie Hill of her recent trip to New York City.

Margie packed a lot into a few days, including three Broadway shows. Her plane was late departing Midland-Odessa Airport, but nevertheless she got to New York in time to drop off her suitcase at the hotel and still make curtain time for the Les Miserables.

Tidbits

The second day, she took a guided tour of the city; and that night attended "42nd Street."

The third day found her walking down Fifth Avenue and breakfasting at Trump Towers. Although she hadn't been able to get tickets to "Me & My Gal" she just walked up to the theatre and found they had seats available for that day's matinee. A performance of the New York Ballet at Lincoln Center that night wound up her whirlwind vacation.

Former residents Randy and Valerie Simmons and son, Gary, 11, Memphis, Tenn., were passing through Big Spring last week enroute to a family reunion in Artesia, N.M. One of young Gary's friends, Jason Belyew, 9, made the trip with them.

Valerie said about 50 persons were expected from Texas, Nevada, Oklahoma, Kansas and New Mexico to the reunion of the descendants of Doyle and Ruby Belvin, Valerie's grandparents.

Highlights of the Big Spring stopover were visiting friends and former co-workers here and taking the children to see Prairie Dog Town.

Denise Crenweige, has brought more radio reporting awards home to Big Spring. The KBST news director recently was awarded a Certificate of Merit by the Texas Hospital Association for her entry "Richard: An Example of Positive Living." The report was about Garden City teenager, Richard Cypert, a spastic paraplegic, who is recovering successfully from rare corrective surgery performed in San Antonio. The Certificate is equivalent to a second place award, selected from more than 90 entries statewide. In the last few days, Denise was notified that she had won Honorable Mention in regional competition that included entries from radio stations throughout Texas and Oklahoma. The kudo was for her spot news coverage of the Jessica McClure rescue in Midland.

It was quite a surprise to Thomas and Helen Ament when their son, Tommy, showed up at the family reunion at Lake Brownwood State Park recently. You see, Tommy lives in Korea!

His sister, Jennie Watkins, and her husband Kenny, who live in Dallas were the only ones in on the surprise. They met him at the airport and drove him to Brownwood. Tommy's wife, La Va-Nita, stayed home with the children. Other surprised relatives were Dennis and Mary Gahagan, Big Spring; Leonard and Colleen Ament, Dallas; and friends, Loretta and Wally Overby, and Steve and Cindy Wilson.

Thomas and Helen drove to Tennessee this week to bring his mother, Lorene Ament, here for a visit.

Dana West says her daughter, Kristie, has enrolled in South Plains College at Levelland to study country-western-blue grass music in the fall. The school has recording and video facilities and everything necessary to train a student to be a performer, says Dana. She'll study the fiddle, too.

Kristie is touring this summer with Joe Whitten's "His Children" Prison Ministries. They have just returned from a tour of Kansas and Oklahoma prisons.

At successful office, wife's the boss

By GREG FIEG PIZANO Corpus Christi Caller-Times CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Going into business with a spouse can be difficult, but it doesn't necessarily have to be. It depends on the couple, Teena Jaime Bracco will tell you.

CORPUS CHRISTI — Teena Bracco, co-owner of the Bracco Construction Company, poses with a few of the heavy machines she and her husband own. She runs the business.

Mrs. Bracco was being a mother to two children, going to college and working as an office manager when she made another important discovery about working and earning money: Working for someone else means making money for someone else.

Midland theater has old-fashioned fare

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH
The Midland Community Theater is in its 40th year of staging a summer melodrama. Each performance plays to a full house. The audience throws popcorn during the show.

"Every night the sweep up crews use great big trash bags and carry our dozens of trash bags of popcorn off the floor," says theater regular Joe Hathaway. "It looks like it has been snowing. It drifts in there. There's no wind but it still drifts in the corners."

The Midland Theater calls its annual melodrama Summer Mummies. "About half of each show is old-fashioned melodrama," says Joe. "Some of them are so old-fashioned that they were written yesterday. The original one we did was 'The Drunkard' that everyone has done as a melodrama."

"The ones we do now are much more likely to be about oil drilling or land leasing out here in West Texas or such as that. But it still in-voles heroes and villains and mortgages that are about to be foreclosed and heroines thrown out of their homes."

The other half of the show is a glorified gong show with strange and bizarre acts. "We have one person, a man, who has made a tradition the last few years of coming out and we see his belly, but not much else. It appears on stage to be a midget wearing a great big hat and whistling. But the midget's face is the belly and the mouth is the man's navel."

Summer Mummer takes place in the Yucca theatre in downtown Midland, an old ornate movie house that has been totally restored. It was in bad shape when the Midland theater group took it over. "It was full of pigeons and the memories of transients who had lived in there. There were no seats in it. The bowl of the theater looked like the bowl of a spoon. It was just a big smooth open floor."

One highlight of each performance is a black and white movie sequence, which follows the story line of the melodrama. "It was just kind of a fill-in for a chase scene which, we were not able to put on stage. Local personalities appear in it, usually doing something way away from their character. It has proven to be extremely popular to the point now where we have several breaks in each show for the black and white movieola."

Summer Mummies
"Banditry on the Border or They Came to Acuna" will play weekends June 24 through Sept. 3. Tickets are $8 and $6.50 with an 8 p.m. curtain for all shows. For reservations call 682-4111.

Perhaps the favorite act at Summer Mummies is a man wearing chaps made from mop heads (the budget for costumes is dozens of dollars) who pops his whip to Frankie Lane's 'Mule Train'. A stuffed goat is sitting on a stool and the man with the whip appears to be trying to make the little furry creature move. About 20,000 bags of popcorn are sold during the Summer Mummies season. Proceeds from the melodrama provide about 25 percent of the theater's annual budget. And don't forget to boo and hiss the villain.

Newman case terminates abruptly in a mistrial

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Actor Paul Newman and delicatessen owner Julius Gold both say they believe jurors were leaning in their favor before Gold's lawsuit against Newman came to an abrupt end with a mistrial.

But several jurors said they weren't even close to a decision and predicted that if the case hadn't ended in a mistrial Thursday there would have been a hung jury.

Gold, who owns a deli in nearby Westport, is seeking stock in Newman's food company, Newman's Own Inc., claiming he helped develop Newman's products and is partly responsible for their success.

"We were nowhere near close to a verdict," said juror Janice Mayeran.

Mayeran and another juror, Timothy Morris, said there was a possibility of a hung jury if the trial hadn't ended.

Bridgeport Superior Court Judge Howard Zoarski declared the mistrial after jurors sent a note saying they couldn't ignore depositions that weren't admitted as evidence but were inadvertently turned over to them Wednesday, the second day of deliberations.

Zoarski's ruling reversed one he made minutes earlier instructing jurors to disregard copies of the depositions from Gold and others involved in the case.

The note delivered to the judge said, "Some members do not feel an unbiased opinion can be rendered in light of their reading of an amount of the depositions."

Zoarski said he had no choice but to order a mistrial.

Afterward, Newman, standing in the courthouse lobby, thanked jurors for their efforts. The Westport resident called the mistrial "a terrible, unfortunate circumstance."

The new Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven produces the finest finish on automobiles this side of the factory. The facilities at Pat Gray Body Works underwent extensive alterations to accommodate the imported equipment. A factory-perfect paint job is made possible by perfectly controlled air, humidity and temperature.

Pat Gray Body Works introduces new paint booth

Big Spring area residents can now get a factory-perfect paint job on their vehicles following body work.

Pat Gray Body Works, 700 N. Owens, has installed a Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven. According to Gray, this is the finest automotive refinishing machine made, and it creates the ideal spraying and baking conditions for refinishing in West Texas.

"This spraybooth oven is made in Italy," says Gray, "and it is specified for many Mercedes and BMW dealership body shops in the United States."

No body shop in the immediate area has this equipment, Grays says.

The machine controls humidity, temperature and air-flow, creating the perfect environment for painting. "Of course the skills of the person doing the painting are important, too," Gray adds.

The air is filtered three times, so there's no chance for dust to get in.

Car owners are assured perfect matching of their paint colors. Pat Gray Body Works can now use the same paints that auto factories use, plus the equipment enables them to utilize the two-stage finish process which offers higher gloss and longer wear.

The firm mixes its own colors, which helps assure a wider variety of shades and a better match when repainting body parts. Lights duplicate sunlight, so personnel don't have to "guess" how it will look.

There are tremendous advantages to the baking process offered by the Blowtherm Ultra, Gray says. Because of the perfectly controlled environment, the bake cycle produces a cured paint job when the vehicle rolls out. With other equipment, says Gray, the paint would need about 48 hours to cure. "During that time you had to watch for tree sap, bugs, washing and waxing compounds, and even leaning on the car."

"The bottom line is, after your car is wrecked it can look good as new,"

Gray said. "The color and finish will be right and it won't fade."

Of course, the process is ideal for car owners who want a new overall paint job.

From the personnel's point of view, the factory-like work chamber will add greatly to the efficiency of the shop. All functions of the unit are fully automatic, just requiring the setting of controls.

"We can paint now no matter what the weather is like," Gray says, explaining that rain or dusty days would bring painting to a standstill previously.

Pat Gray Body Works invites the public to come by and see the Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven.
