Demo leaders make peace in Atlanta

ATLANTA — Michael Dukakis is promising Jesse Jackson a substantial role in the fall campaign and the money to carry out that responsibility, in what Jackson supporters say is a step toward bringing Jackson's constituency into the fold.

The bottom line from Monday's meeting between Dukakis and Jackson, Jackson backers said, was that the challenger will get the respect he thinks he earned in winning 7 million votes in the primaries and registering thousands of voters along the way.

The two men, along with Dukakis' running mate choice, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, forged a unified front for the November election, publicly ending days of tension between the campaigns that followed Dukakis' selection of Bentsen a week ago today — and the governor's failure to give Jackson advance word.

In their press conference and in a later briefing by their top aides, these details of the agreement were revealed:

• Jackson will keep much of his organization intact, paid for by party funds, and will continue to campaign for the Democratic ticket.

• His travel costs will be paid. "If the man's got to travel, we're not going to let him fly commercial," said Joseph Warren, a longtime Dukakis supporter who has been involved in the negotiations. "Make no mistake about it. What Jesse needs, Jesse will get."

• Members of Jackson's team will be integrated into the Dukakis campaign at all levels, although Dukakis aide Paul Broutas indicated it was not automatic everyone would have a job.

• Jackson supporters will get close to half the 25 at-large members of the Democratic National Committee to be appointed Friday, and a new DNC vice chair.

The dramatic news conference just hours before Monday's kickoff of the Democratic National Convention came after a meeting that started with breakfast and moved in phases through a review of the campaign, discussion of the rift and then an agreement on a new relationship.

Hours later, Jackson said that while he would be involved in the campaign, Dukakis must reach out to his followers as well.

"Gov. Dukakis must convey to those persons that... he cares for them, that they are on his agenda. When it is all said and done, the nominee must convince people," Jackson said.

Autopsy ordered in death

HERALD STAFF REPORT

WESTBROOK — Mitchell County authorities are investigating the death of a man whose body was discovered near Interstate-20 Monday morning.

Mitchell County Justice of the Peace Ruby Claxton said the body of a white male was discovered by an oil field worker about 9 a.m. in a bar ditch about one-quarter mile north of I-20 at the 200-mile marker.

There was no identification on the body and authorities are still attempting to learn the name of the victim.

Claxton said she pronounced the man dead about 10:45 a.m. and ordered an autopsy.

A spokeswoman for the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office said this morning an autopsy will be performed later today.

Mitchell County Sheriff Wendell Bryant is on vacation and the sheriff department's chief investigator was unavailable for comment, a dispatcher said Tuesday morning.

Claxton said the body appeared to be that of a man between "45 and 50 years old" who probably died from a gunshot wound to the head.

"He was bleeding from the head, but right now I'm awaiting word on the results of an autopsy to determine the exact cause of death," she said.

The body had apparently only been at the scene a short time before being discovered, Claxton said.

DA files for revocation

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Howard County District Attorney Rick Hamby said today he has filed a motion to revoke the probation of Pedro Mendez Cantu, charged with two counts of aggravated assault in connection with the Friday morning wounding of two women.

Hamby said a hearing date would be scheduled soon.

Cantu, 40, 307 San Jacinto St., remains in city jail in lieu of $90,000 bond.

He is charged with the shooting of Lydia Yanez, 39, and her daughter, Lizzie Franco, 20, in the parking lot of the Northcrest Apartments, 1002 N. Main St.

Yanez is listed in good condition at Scenic Mountain Medical Center and Franco has been discharged, a nursing supervisor said today.

Cantu — who was also wounded — was arrested Friday at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, according to police.

Cantu was convicted of aggravated assault by a Howard County jury last year and sentenced to 10 years probation.

The jury found him guilty of shooting Ramon Calderon in the face with a shotgun on March 30, 1986 in Comanche Trail Park. The injury left Calderon permanently blinded.

Morales investigation may head for grand jury

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Howard County Justice of the Peace William Shankles today said he may turn a March 28 shooting death case over to a grand jury for further investigation.

Shankles said the March 28 shooting incident which resulted in the death of 39-year-old Fred Morales Jr. has raised numerous questions he feels merit further investigation before he makes a ruling.

"In a case like this you don't want to jump in and make a ruling that it's a homicide, when it may be a suicide," he said. "You don't want to rule it a suicide when it may be a homicide or an accident."

"There are just so many questions in my mind," he said, "that I feel there should be further investigation."

He said he has not yet formally consulted the 118th Judicial District Attorney's office about presenting the case to the grand jury as an investigation, but expects to do so this week.

He said he has not yet ruled out the possibility of calling an inquest into Morales' death or presenting the case to a coroner's grand jury.

Shankles had said earlier that he had never called for a coroner's grand jury in a case during his tenure. Cases requiring inquests or coroner's grand juries are exceptional, he said, in their complexity.

Assistant District Attorney William "Dale" Dupree today said the case could go before the grand jury in August.

"All I can say about it is that it is a circumstantial type case, and there are several aspects that need to be looked at."

"There may be several offenses that may have occurred in this case," he added. "With a grand jury you get 12 people who can apply their life experiences to things like this, and that removes the chance of bias from prosecutorial or police authorities in these cases."

No formal charges have been filed in connection with the case, both Shankles and Dupree said today.

population younger than 16, it also means means that 1 million young people a year will be looking for jobs for the first time. There haven't been enough to go around recently.

A recent study by the National Manufacturers Chamber showed that, because of the crisis, only 350,000 jobs were created last year and the number was not much higher in 1986.

So unemployment, already high, will continue to be a major problem in the near future.

This and another study by Salinas' Institutional Revolutionary Party, also known by its Spanish initials as PRI, agreed that roughly 28 percent of Mexico's labor force of 47 million people aged 15 to 65 lack steady jobs and 14 percent are jobless — a total of 42 percent.

Gwen Fair Municipal judge enjoys her job

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Big Spring Municipal Court Judge Gwen Fair says she is a judge who "goes by the book," but performs her responsibilities by trying to help the people she deals with.

"I love people and enjoy them. I haven't become 100 percent cynical yet. I take people at face value," she said.

Fair, a native of Washington, D.C., arrived in Big Spring with her family at 7 p.m., Jan. 3, 1975. She recalls it vividly.

"The first thing we saw when we drove into Big Spring was Scenic Mountain and I told my children, 'it looks like a big city,' then I saw the state hospital and the refinery," she joked.

In fact, Fair enjoys living in Big Spring.

"The people here are very friendly and there are a lot of things I really like about this town," she said.

In June 1986 the mayor and city council named Fair acting municipal judge when former judge Melvin Daratt was forced to take medical leave because of illness.

"He was scheduled to retire and in October 1986 I was appointed Municipal Court judge," she said.

Fair served for 10 years as Municipal Court Clerk — and still performs those duties.

"I still do the court clerk's work, which entails making bank deposits and filing state reports," she said from her office located in the Municipal Court Annex building.

The state of Texas requires that a person who serves as a Municipal Court judge must have detailed knowledge of criminal statutes, traffic laws and city ordinances, Fair said.

"I go to yearly seminars and am notified by mail of any changes in state laws. Once a year, I must be recertified by the Texas Municipal Court Association Training Center," she said.

The addition in April of Bruce Morgan, who serves as warrant officer and bailiff, has helped to greatly reduce Fair's workload.

Morgan, a certified officer with the Big Spring Police Department, serves Municipal Court warrants and has the authority to arrest people. He also works as a uniformed officer with the department when the situation dictates.

"He has been a great help in reducing the paperwork I have to do," said Fair.

The judge's secretary, clerk and typist, Gailene Baker, is also an invaluable asset.

"She's my right hand and left hand," said Fair.

Baker can assist residents with practically every kind of traffic ticket, except those who are cited for no driver's license or proof of liability insurance, Fair said.

The judge believes dealing with the public is a necessity in Municipal Court.

"Municipal Court is not the lowest court, but in a way, it is. That's the reason we deal with people more directly, per se," Fair said.

She has listened to about every kind of reason why fines haven't been paid — and is sympathetic to a point.

"We used to have a 90-day payment plan. Some people would tell me what day they could pay and I'd never see them again. They'd leave town," Fair said.

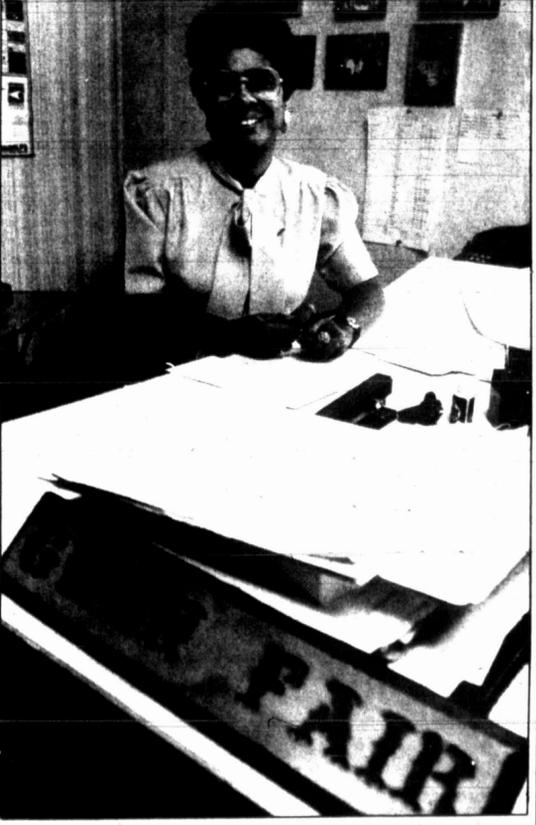

There was only one course of action the judge could take for people who displayed that kind of irresponsibility — issuance of a capias warrant. Persons arrested on capias warrants must pay cash for the entire amount of the fine before they can be released, Fair said.

"Either you pay it or lay it (in jail)," she said.

Fair handles cases involving people charged with Class C misdemeanors — which include traffic offenses, public intoxication, assaults and violations of city ordinances.

Richards bashes Bush, enthralled crowd

By Ken Herman

ATLANTA — Democratic keynoter Ann Richards drew laurels — and laughter — for a speech that used an easy, homey tone and wicked humor to talk about what the Democrats can do for American families and what the Republicans have not.

"This Republican administration treats us as if we were pieces of a puzzle that can't fit together," the Texas state treasurer said in her Monday night speech that departed in style and tone from the traditional stemwinder that opens political conventions.

ATLANTA — Texas State Treasurer Ann Richards waves during her keynote address during the opening session of the 40th Democratic Convention Monday night.

Ms. Richards, who is Texas' state treasurer and a 54-year-old divorced mother of four grown children, saved her most pointed quips for Vice President George Bush, the GOP presidential nominee-to-be.

The Omni audience interrupted the speech at least 50 times with applause and laughs. Afterward, delegates said they were taking their favorite Richards' lines home with them.

"George Bush is going to live for a long, long time with a silver foot in his mouth. That one will stick," said delegate Florence Peterson of Grand Rapids, Mich. The "silver foot" line, an instant classic among delegates, was interrupted twice in the midst of it and ended with a roaring response from delighted delegates.

"Poor George," Ms. Richards said, grinning broadly. "He can't help it. He was born with a silver foot in his mouth."

Bush was barbecued early and often by the treasurer from the state where he has a Houston hotel suite that he calls home.

"I am delighted to be here with you this evening because after listening to George Bush all these years I figured you needed to know what a real Texas accent sounds like," Ms. Richards, who plans a 1990 race for Texas governor, said in an opening line that quickly got the crowd on its feet.

Ms. Richards was emotional, too. She talked about a woman from Lorena, Texas who had written her a letter that complained that life has become difficult despite a family income of about $50,000.

"I believe people like us have been forgotten in America," the mother of three said in her letter.

"Of course you believe you're being forgotten. Because you have been," Ms. Richards said, blaming the Reagan administration.

She excited both major factions at the convention by heaping praise on presidential nominee-to-be Michael Dukakis and runner-up Jesse Jackson.

The "Jesse, Jesse" chant rang out after Ms. Richards called him "a leader and a teacher who can open our hearts and minds and stir our very souls."

Dukakis backers chanted "Duke, Duke," when Ms. Richards said the best traditions of straight-talking Democrats "live today in Michael Dukakis."

And she had warm words for another Texan, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Dukakis' designated running mate.

Texas A&M names new president

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The new president of Texas A&M University says he will make recruiting minority students a personal priority during his tenure.

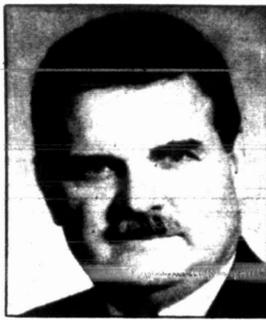

"We've made great improvements and we must continue," said William H. Mobley, who was named Monday as the 20th president of the 112-year-old school. Only 9 percent of the 40,000-student campus is minority.

"We will continue to expand our outreach program, better organize minority students we already have here and spread the word."

Mobley, the former dean of business administration, now serves as executive chancellor of the Texas A&M University System, a statewide teaching, research and public service network of institutions and agencies.

At 46, the former Senior Fulbright Scholar and organizational psychologist will become one of the youngest presidents in the history of Texas A&M when he takes office Aug. 1.

He succeeds Frank Vandiver, who announced in January that he would leave after seven years as president to help establish a defense studies think tank on campus.

Mobley said Monday that Texas A&M will continue to emphasize its research programs, focusing on areas such as space, marine and ocean sciences, energy, materials and agriculture.

Last year the board of regents approved a new admissions standard after a sharp rise in enrollment. Officials expect the student population to be over 40,000 this fall.

Stabbings result in prison deaths

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A former death row inmate is suspected of stabbing another inmate to death in one of two fatal stabbings in the Texas prison system this week.

Roman Gomez Jr. died Monday after being stabbed Sunday evening in the Texas Department of Corrections Ellis I Unit recreation yard.

In another stabbing incident Monday, William Lee Horton, 24, was stabbed several times with a screwdriver in the day room of the Gore Unit and was taken to the Huntsville Memorial Hospital where he died at 4:30 p.m.

The suspect in the Gomez stabbing was identified as a former death row inmate whose sentence was commuted to life last year, prison spokesman Charles Brown said. The 32-year-old suspect was convicted of capital murder in Cameron County in 1981.

Horton was serving a 10-year sentence for burglary of a habitation with intent to commit theft and robbery from Harris County.

The stabbing suspect, a 29-year-old serving a 25-year sentence for attempted murder with a deadly weapon from Gonzales County, was being held in pre-hearing detention.

Walker County sheriff's officials are investigating both stabbings.

There have been three slayings this year in the 26-unit Texas prison system, the nation's third largest behind California and New York.

Wall falls in new amphitheater

DALLAS (AP) — The open-air seating of a controversial amphitheater will be closed on its first weekend unless engineers who constructed the showplace can show a recent wall collapse won't endanger concertgoers.

City building inspectors said Monday they will close up to 12,500 seats in Fair Park's new Starplex Amphitheatre following collapse of part of a 35-foot-high exterior retaining wall.

The $10 million, 20,000-seat complex is owned by conglomerate MCA and Pace Entertainment Group of Houston. It is scheduled to open with a concert Saturday featuring veteran rock star Rod Stewart.

Sam Harting, assistant building official for the City of Dallas, said all lawn seating will be banned unless an engineering study can be produced to show the area is not life-threatening.

A section of the 1,000-foot-long wall, about 40 feet to 50 feet wide, collapsed about 2 a.m. Sunday, officials said. The failure was attributed to water erosion, said Laurie Muslow, a spokeswoman for Pace and MCA.

A team of engineers from Southwestern Laboratories Inc. of Dallas was on the site Monday afternoon, examining damage to the wall, which rises to 10 feet behind the far audience and is designed to cut off sound from surrounding neighborhoods, as well as to support grassy slopes for open festival seating.

The other 6,500 seats in the facility are permanent and under a covered pavilion.

Fathers sue to remove billboards

AUSTIN (AP) — A billboard campaign criticizing fathers who don't pay child support is discriminatory because it doesn't mention non-paying women, according to six fathers who filed a federal lawsuit against state Attorney General Jim Mattox.

The six divorced or separated fathers suing in U.S. District Court in Tyler want the removal of the billboards, which say, "Who's bad? Fathers who don't pay their child's support." — Jim Mattox.

Besides discriminating against "the single largest minority in the United States (men)," the suit says, the billboards violate their constitutional rights by sowing "seeds of discord" between parent and child.

The men also allege the signs are being used by Mattox to further his candidacy for governor. Mattox has not announced but is eyeing the 1990 governor's race.

Plaintiffs in the suit filed Friday are Stephen F. Brewerton, Rodney Hendricks, Jeff Slye-Nelson, David Lewis, Angelo Navarro and Gary Ponder. The men, all with Tyler addresses or post office boxes, are described as fathers of minor children who have reasons for not paying child support.

Hendricks did not pay child support for a period of time because he injured his back, said the lawsuit.

"There is no good reason" for not paying court-ordered child support, said Elna Christopher, spokeswoman for Mattox.

The men asked for a judgment that Mattox violated the U.S. Constitution by putting up the billboards, and an injunction ordering Mattox to take down existing signs and not to institute them again.

Federal law prohibits the attorney general from assisting parents with complaints about visitation rights, other than putting them in touch with a parent-locator service, Ms. Christopher said.

Drilling wastes ruled no threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Environmental Protection Agency administrators overruled a staff recommendation that a small volume of oil and gas drilling wastes be regulated as hazardous — a decision a staff member says was swayed by oil state senators.

"This is the first time in the history of environmental regulation of hazardous wastes that the EPA has exempted a powerful industry from regulation for solely political reasons, despite a scientific determination of the hazardousness of the wastes," said Hugh Kaufman, assistant to the EPA's director of the hazardous site control division.

But administrators deny their call was influenced by political pressure.

The majority of an EPA working group that studied the issue had recommended that a small volume of drilling wastes come under stringent regulation as hazardous. But agency administrator Lee Thomas and J. Winston Porter, EPA's assistant administrator for solid waste and emergency response, said in a June 30 report to Congress they had decided that all oil and gas drilling wastes would remain exempt from hazardous waste rules.

So-called "associated wastes" account for 1 percent of the total volume of drilling wastes but contain highly toxic materials such as benzene, heavy metals and corrosive acids that are regulated as hazardous in other industries, the staff said. It concluded the wastes pose a threat to the environment if not handled properly and that states are largely doing a poor job of enforcing existing regulations.

A draft staff report said the cost to the industry would have ranged from $200 million to $500 million a year.

Heroin smuggling increases on border

EL PASO (AP) — Police are seizing greater amounts of heroin along the Texas-Mexico border, and they report that the heroin they find is generally purer than it was in the past.

The head of the El Paso Police Department's narcotics section said the problem of heroin smuggling across the Rio Grande could be impossible to solve, and El Paso County's coroner said the heroin's unexpected purity is killing people.

"We have such an open border and there aren't enough law enforcement officers to watch it all," said narcotics section head Joe Diaz. "Very, very large quantities of heroin are coming across between El Paso and Brownsville, and a lot of it is just walked across. They wade the river and carry it over."

Statistics suggest that the El Paso-Juarez area is becoming a major shipping point for Mexican black-tar and brown heroin, said Phil Jordan, special agent in charge of the Drug Enforcement Administration in Dallas.

From Sept. 1, 1987, until the end of June, the amount of heroin seized by El Paso police tripled from the same period a year before, according to police records. They confiscated a little more than a pound from Sept. 1, 1986, to June 30, 1987, compared with almost 5 pounds from Sept. 1, 1987, through June 20 this year.

"There is a significant trend," Jordan said last week. "Not only is there an increase in the amount of heroin coming into this area from Mexico, we are particularly concerned with the high purity levels of Mexican black-tar heroin."

In May, Contini reported he had conducted about 12 autopsies of heroin overdose victims in four weeks. About eight to 10 people died of heroin overdoses the entire previous year, he said. He said the addicts probably thought they were taking their usual doses but were instead using black-tar heroin at twice the purity they were used to.

Recycled bottles could become roads

AUSTIN (AP) — Two University of Texas scientists think they may be on the road to finding a use for the growing number of discarded plastic soft drink bottles.

David Fowler and Don Paul want to recycle the bottles to make polymer concrete, a highway repair material that has been used for almost 20 years but which has seen many of its advantages outweighed by high costs.

Fowler, a civil engineer, and Paul, a chemical engineer, say they hope to solve it, and that out of this will come some industries in the state to recycle and use the materials," Fowler said.

Experts say polymer concrete is attractive because it does not corrode and is resistant to acids, water and salts. It also sets up in about an hour, compared with a week or more for ordinary concrete. Polymer concrete also is stronger and less brittle on structures such as bridges.

"Water also gets into ordinary concrete and cracks it. So, if you can keep water out of it, you can make something a lot more durable," he said.

research into the idea from the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, part of $60 million in scientific and technology research grants approved by the Legislature in 1985.

A division of Shell Oil Co. in Houston is one of the world's largest producers of polymer concrete, but it costs about $1,200 a cubic yard. The same amount of ordinary concrete costs about $50.

"The No. 1 need is lower cost. We have to solve it, and that out of this will come some industries in the state to recycle and use the materials," Fowler said.

Laughing gunman had been of concern to family

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A man accused of killing four people and wounding five others with a rifle as he roamed his neighborhood, laughing between shots, was upset because his pregnant wife left him, friends and neighbors said.

Michael Charles Hayes, 24, was charged Monday with two counts of first-degree murder, and other charges were expected, Forsyth County Sheriff Preston Oldham said. Hayes was listed in critical condition today with six gunshot wounds suffered Sunday night when deputies returned fire, ending a 12-minute shooting spree that neighbors said was punctuated by Hayes' laughter.

"Every time you'd hear a shot go off, he'd laugh," said R. Timothy Beck, who lives nearby.

Hayes' family tried to have him committed to a mental hospital on Saturday after he broke one of his hands beating a wall, said his stepfather, Garis Edwards. But the family was told they would have to file an involuntary commitment petition with a magistrate in another county, and a sheriff's lieutenant said the commitment could wait until Monday, he said.

"(Hayes' mother) talked to me Saturday for two hours and cried," said Gary, a family friend who would give only his first name.

"She said, 'Gary, why can't they do something? Why can't they do something to stop him? Why can't they do something before he does something?'"

Sheriff's Capt. Charles McGee defended the department's actions. "If we made a mistake, we'll take the blame for it," McGee said. "But I don't think that's the case here."

Several hours before the rampage began, neighbors said Hayes could be heard firing a gun in the field behind his small moped shop, as he frequently had done before.

Stanley Parks, who lives across the road from the shop, said Hayes then ran along his driveway and banged on the door of Parks' house, shouting "Come on out, I'm going to get you."

Hayes fired his .22-caliber semi-automatic rifle into the house, shattering an entry window, Parks said. Another bullet went through the entryway wall.

Parks sent his wife and 15-month-old son into a back room while he called police. "He was firing at everything that moved," Parks told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "He was laughing real strange."

Police said the gunman shot at cars driving through the two-block residential area in southern Forsyth County. Three people were found dead in their cars.

159.2 percent, has eroded the average purchasing power of wages by more than half.

Salinas says one of his priorities will be to restore the value of earnings.

"We will have to provide that and also housing, education, health care and other basic services," not only to gap current deficits but also for the 6 million new job-seekers who will emerge during his administration, Salinas said in a recent interview with the private television network Televisa.

If foreign debt payments become too burdensome they will be re-negotiated or suspended altogether, he added. As it is, Mexico already has a shortage of capital-money, even though it accumulated a record $16 billion in foreign currency reserves over the past three years.

The survey by the PRI's think-tank — the Institute of Political, Economic and Social Studies — showed that gross fixed investment has been dropping by an annual average of nearly 5 percent, with a drop of 12 percent in 1986.

For decades, illegal emigration of millions of Mexicans to the United States acted as an escape valve for the overpopulation problem. But the 1987 Simpson-Rodino law that fines employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens could shut or narrow that.

As budget and planning Secretary for five years in outgoing President Miguel de la Madrid's administration, Salinas' name has been associated with belt-tightening and other unpopular measures.

Both the PRI's labor wing and the "old guard" strongly opposed his nomination, but since the election Salinas has been busy trying to mend fences, especially with Fidel Velazquez, the 88-year-old leader of the Mexican Labor Federation.

The centrist PRI has won every major election since it was founded in 1929, its critics claim often resorting to ballot-fraud.

Many say the party has been unable — or unwilling — to meet Mexico's increasingly greater demands for more orderly government, less corruption and taxes, greater economic development and more efficient state services.

Whoops!

Big Spring Patrol Officer Tom Hain and John William McCauley, 77, 1505 S. Johnson St., survey the damage following a Monday afternoon accident in the 300 block of South Goliad St. Hain was preparing to make a U-turn about 3:50 p.m. — when the emergency lights on his unit flashing — when McCauley began backing up his vehicle and collided with the patrol car, according to reports. McCauley was cited for unsafe backing. There were no injuries reported.

Dorton plans claim appeal

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Former Fire Chief Carl Dorton will appeal to the state Pension Commission a Big Spring Firemen's Relief and Retirement Fund Board of Trustees ruling to deny his disability claim, officials said.

The board voted last month to deny Dorton's disability claim in a 3 to 2 vote.

Board chairman Nolan Beall, vice chairman Paul Brown and trustee Steve Hedges voted to deny the claim. Trustees' Cotton Mize, Big Spring mayor, and Tom Ferguson, city finance director who serves as board secretary, voted to approve Dorton's claim.

Brown said Dorton maintained he was unable to perform his duties as Big Spring fire chief because of back injuries he suffered on the job.

Dorton resigned as fire chief effective June 1 and currently serves as Howard County 911 administrator.

His appeal will be heard Aug. 11.

'Step Ahead' being planned

HOWARD COLLEGE BUREAU

Howard College, in conjunction with Big Spring, Forsan and Coahoma High Schools, is formally announcing Project Step Ahead.

Project Step Ahead is a concurrent enrollment program that allows high school students to enroll in college courses and receive both high school and college credit for those courses.

Chapter 75 legislation, passed several years ago by the Texas

Legislature, gave districts the option to adopt agreements with local colleges for dual enrollment.

Classes scheduled for the fall include English, history, government, typing, auto technology, cosmetology and drafting.

Other arrangements are being made to also offer calculus, physics and Spanish II.

For more information, contact a high school or college counselor.

Slaying suspect is sought

The Pima County (Arizona) Sheriff's Department is seeking to identify this man, a suspect in the March 7 slaying of Robert Morgan Thompson, 55, a transient who often stayed in Big Spring. Thompson was beaten to death behind a Tucson, Ariz. truck stop. Detective Keith St. John is asking anyone with information to contact him at (602) 882-2808 or 622-3366.

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Big Spring police reported investigating the following incidents:

- Jose Hernandez, 60, 1107 W. 7th St., was arrested on warrants charging him with keeping fowl in the city limits and failure to appear.
- Assisting the Texas State Fire Marshal in arresting Janie Jackman, 21, 3304 West Highway 80, Apt. 39, on Andrews Sheriff's Department warrants charging her with aggravated assault and forgery.
- Carla Carter Shaw, 31, 1205 Stanford St., was arrested on charges of failure to maintain single lane, defective tail lamps and failure to maintain financial responsibility.
- A man who resides in the 1200 block of East 17th Street, reported an unknown person took a .38-caliber revolver without his permission.

Sheriff's log

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Howard County Sheriff's Department officers reported investigating the following complaints as of 8:30 a.m. today:

- Martin Puga, 24, 2105 W. Third St., was arrested on Taylor County warrants Monday. He paid $113.10 by money orders and was released, according to sheriff's records.
- Fred Bruce Hoffman, 50, Odessa, surrendered on a warrant for revocation of probation for theft when they appear before Fair — after regaining their sobriety in jail.

"They are credited with $45 for each day they spend in jail, so they have usually laid out their fine by the time they come before me," she said.

The judge also hears cases involving violations of the family violence code.

Police sent to the scene of a domestic disturbance have the option of arresting a person who is assaulting a family member or forcing the individual to leave the premises.

Healthy people who are oblivious to parking spaces designated for the handicapped can expect to pay a $50 fine for their indiscretions, Fair said.

"If a police officer doesn't see a sticker or portable permit inside the front windshield that vehicle will be ticketed," she said.

Fair also alternates on a monthly basis with the Howard County Justices of the Peace to handle arraignments for persons arrested and charged with crimes during off working hours.

"One of us is on call 24 hours a day, one week a month," she said.

Fair has an understanding philosophy when dealing with the public — despite the sign on her desk that reads "A Closed Mouth Gathers No Foot."

"I have an open door policy — at least for five minutes," she said.

overgrown weeds and unsightly vehicles are among the most common city ordinance violations, Fair said.

"The problem with prosecuting those kinds of offenses is that many of the people who own those properties don't live in Big Spring," she said.

Individuals arrested by Big Spring police on county or district court charges will be read their Miranda rights by Fair, who also sets bond.

Bond is not allowed, however, for persons arrested for alleged parole violations, the judge said.

Indigent people who are arrested on public intoxication charges are often allowed to plead guilty and then released by check. He was sentenced to three years in the state penitentiary after pleading guilty in 118th District Court and given credit for 209 days. He is being held without bond in Howard County jail.

Oscar Hernandez, 27, 1010 N. Rannels St., is being held in lieu of bonds totaling $3,500. He was arrested by Big Spring police on charges of bondsman off bond for possession of marijuana, driving still to be worked out now that the principals have reached agreement on what Jackson called "a relationship of substance and support and candor."

That was something the Jackson forces had said their leader was not getting from Dukakis in previous discussions, which were characterized as cordial but superficial.

A top Jackson adviser, Ron Brown, who attended the meeting with the candidates and with Dukakis aide Paul Broutas said that although the candidates had met many times, "I doubt very much whether any conversation of the depth of the one held this morning" had previously occurred.

Jackson's close ally, Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., said the agreement would give Dukakis "more credibility" with Jackson's supporters, but added, "It remains to be seen whether the people who have been turned off over the past few days can be turned on again."

Dukakis was asked if his embrace of Jackson carried a risk of alienating some of the important conservative Southern swing voters that his campaign is seeking through the selection of Bentsen.

"That never really has been a problem. It's really a question of things evolving," he replied.

Jackson said he wanted "no salary, no title and no job" out of the arrangement. He said he is better off not to take a formal position because then "I would be in the employ. That's not a good role for me to play."

"He is going to be involved actively and fully in a way that will bring us together," said Dukakis, who praised Jackson for registering "more voters than anybody in this country."

Effects of porn displayed in film

"A Winnable War," a film dealing with the effects of pornography, will be shown at 7 p.m. tonight at the Howard College Student Union Building Cactus Room.

The film, sponsored by the Howard County chapter of the American Family Association, features James Dobson, an author, family spokesman and host of the daily radio program "Focus on the Family."

Dobson served on the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography.

Because of its subject matter, the film is not suitable for children, organizers said.

Opinion

Mother Earth getting hotter wave? It's too early to tell. But mounting evidence suggests that the Earth is heating up.

Humans can't do much about the present dry spell except conserve water and hope for rain. But there's much that can and should be done to avert worldwide climate disruptions caused by human activity.

To understand what's happening, consider some numbers: The four warmest years in the past century have occurred in the 1980s. The first five months of this year have been warmer than any similar period in recorded history.

A fluke? Maybe. But some scientists warn that if present trends continue, average temperatures north of the equator could rise by 3 to 9 degrees by the year 2050, much sooner than such a change had been predicted.

A warming trend would bring not only more droughts, coastal floods, a drop in Great Lakes water levels and other environmental disruptions.

The jury is still out on what's causing the problem. But many researchers blame carbon dioxide and other gases generated by industrial activity such as the burning of fossil fuel. These so-called greenhouse gases trap heat.

A theory is all it is at this point. But only fools would ignore the warning signs. If they care about their own survival and that of the planet, humans will have the sense to take preventive steps such as these:

- Expanded energy conservation and research into environmentally safer alternatives to coal.
- Stronger international efforts to protect tropical forests.
- A broader commitment by industries to speed up the search for substitutes to chlorofluorocarbons, industrial gases that contribute to the greenhouse effect, and expansion of a 31-nation treaty that will curtail production of CFCs.

Of course, there's always the chance that the greenhouse theory will be disproved; maybe climate trends will stabilize. But it would be folly to base human behavior and global policy on such cockeyed optimism when caution could help prevent a possible catastrophe. The stakes are too high to gamble.

Russia: A truly classless society

By ART BUCHWALD

LENINGRAD — These are more notes of a man who only spent a week in Russia because he would rather trust than verify what the Soviets are doing.

Traveling first class in the Soviet Union is like traveling fourth class in the Soviet Union.

My tourist bus drew up alongside a jammed city bus in Leningrad, and I saw a man with his nose pressed against the window talking to himself. I asked my guide what the man was saying.

The guide shrugged his shoulders and said, "He is probably saying that he hopes his wife stood in line and got some sugar today so he could make vodka in the bathtub when he got home."

"That way he could forget that he didn't have a bathtub. But knowing his wife, she'll probably buy cucumbers instead, and if you had to eat cucumbers for 345 nights in a row, you would be talking to yourself on a bus, too."

There are certain scenes that stick in your mind when you are traveling. The one that remains most vivid to me took place at Peter the Great's Summer Palace outside of Leningrad, which had been almost completely destroyed during World War II and then rebuilt by the Russians.

I was walking through one of the great halls talking to Jim Berry, the cartoonist, and Jim Boren, the professional bureaucrat, and his wife Alice, when a group of tourists angrily went, "Shshshshh."

It turned out that they were German and became furious about the noise we were making because it prevented them from hearing their guide relate how the Germany army had destroyed Peter's palace.

Food still presents a problem for tourists as well as residents in the Soviet Union. There is a suspicion that all menus are decided by a Food Czar in the Kremlin, and that the exact same meal is served to everyone, four hours after the waiter takes the order.

There are no chefs left in Russia. There are just dissidents cooking bad meals while waiting to get their exit visas for Brooklyn.

The only tourists I observed who were able to handle the bad food, the heat, the long waits and abuse from hotel employees were little old American ladies in Nike tennis shoes.

No matter how many times they were knocked down, they came up off the mat for another round, thus convincing Gorbachev once and for all that America was not a paper tiger.

Why are such large numbers of tourists fighting to get into the Soviet Union? It's part of gnosticism. The Evil Empire has opened its doors and all nationalities are dying to see what they have been missing.

It turns out it's everything they thought it would be — and less.

Because automobile production is down, the Soviet Union now has more alternate parking places than any country in the non-Free World. And the good news is that if you're a tourist, you don't have to worry about spending any money in Russia because there is nothing to buy.

But there are some disappointments. In the old days, the KGB followed all foreign visitors. If you were important enough, they would compromise you with a Russian bimbo, and then take pictures of the two of you with a hidden camera which were later shown in the first-run movie houses in Samarkand.

Now, however, because there are so many tourists in the country, the KGB has thrown in the towel, and the bimbo who picks you up in a bar is just that, and not a sexy agent provocateur of the second greatest secret service in the world.

Each person in our group was allowed to make one request of Soviet officials. "Please," I begged, "don't send America any more Russian taxi drivers — at least not until the ones you sent us already learn how to get from Kennedy Airport to Manhattan."

It was a short visit, but very pleasant. The one question we were constantly asked was, why did Americans like Gorbachev? Our answer was simple: "Because he doesn't look like a Communist."

My last act before leaving Mother Russia was to present a carton of cigarettes to one of my Soviet hosts.

"Thank you," he said.

"Don't mention it," I replied.

"My government has ordered me to bump off one Russian on every trip."

Sorry seems to be the hardest word

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

About the best thing to come of the Mike Dukakis-Jesse Jackson-Lloyd Bentsen mess is that now everyone knows the answer to that irritating question: What does Jesse want?

It's very simple — Jesse wants Dukakis to suffer.

No, that's not quite it, either. Jesse wants Dukakis to squirm; to writhe in pain; to lay prostrate before the Jackson altar and beg forgiveness for being such a boorish lout.

Jesse is ticked — and he wants Dukakis to pay.

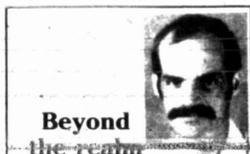

And who can blame him? Jackson was, after all, the most visible candidate seeking the vice presidential slot on Dukakis' ticket. He told anyone who would listen that he wanted the spot; that it should be his.

It seemed like such a tiny payment for all those millions of registered black — read Democratic — voters.

Now, anyone with half-a-gram of political sense knew Dukakis wouldn't pick Jesse for the second spot on the ticket. Too many people remembered him hugging Yassar Arafat and Fidel Castro — not to mention him describing New York as "Hymietown."

Besides, all of Jesse's posturing must have been giving Dukakis a migraine.

But one would think the

Beyond the realm

Massachusetts governor would have at least had the common decency to give Jesse the word on Bentsen beforehand.

He told vice presidential hopeful John Glenn the bad news early; same for Albert Gore, Lee Hamilton and Dick Gephardt.

He even told a bunch of reporters — who, as far as I know, weren't even considered for the job — the news about Bentsen before the formal announcement.

But he didn't tell Jesse. Coincidence?

Well, if you believe that, I have some oceanfront property on Scurry Street I'd like to sell you.

Rev. Jackson, who has never been accused of being a calming influence, was understandably miffed about the whole thing, and hinted to the multitude of reporters — who just happened to be there — about the possibility of three or four floor fights at the Atlanta convention.

That was all his supporters needed to hear. Now Dukakis is faced with the unpleasant task of walking into a convention hall where one-third of the delegates are screaming for his blood.

There's only one other alternative left for the governor — he'll have to grovel at Jesse's feet for a few days and maybe promise him an ambassadorship or two in order to leave Atlanta with anything resembling party unity.

In other words, he's going to have to tell Jesse that he's sorry — several times.

"Hello, Governor, how are you?"

"Hello, Jesse, I'm just great. How are you?"

"Well, I'm OK, but I'm worried about my delegates. They're rather upset about the events of the past few days. By the way, have you noticed how many of them there are?"

"That's what I wanted to talk to you about, Reverend. You know, this whole vice-president thing's gotten blown all out of proportion, and I think it's time we calmed the seas, so to speak."

"An excellent suggestion, Governor. Now, I don't want anything for myself, but my delegates — my hundreds and hundreds of delegates — feel an apology is definitely in order."

"Well, OK, Jesse, I want you to know that I'm mptfphff."

"You're what?"

"I'm mptfphff."

"Mike, I can't hear you when you have your hand over your mouth. What did you say?"

"I said I'm suh-suh-sorry."

"There. That wasn't so bad, was it? Well, rest easy, Mike, all is forgiven. But there is just one more itchy-bitsy thing."

"What's that, uh, Jesse?"

"Well, I feel kind of silly even mentioning it, but my delegates — that veritable sea of delegates — feel that the best way to really show you take me seriously is to offer me an ambassadorship of some kind."

"I guess we can work something out. What did you — er — they have in mind?"

"Oh, I don't know; 'Ambassador to the Soviet Union' has a nice ring to it, don't you think?"

"I kind of promised that to someone else, Jesse. How does 'Ambassador to Ghana' grab you?"

"How does 'floor fight' grab you, Mike?"

"How about Japan?"

"Floor fight, Mike."

"Canada?"

"Flooooder fiiiight."

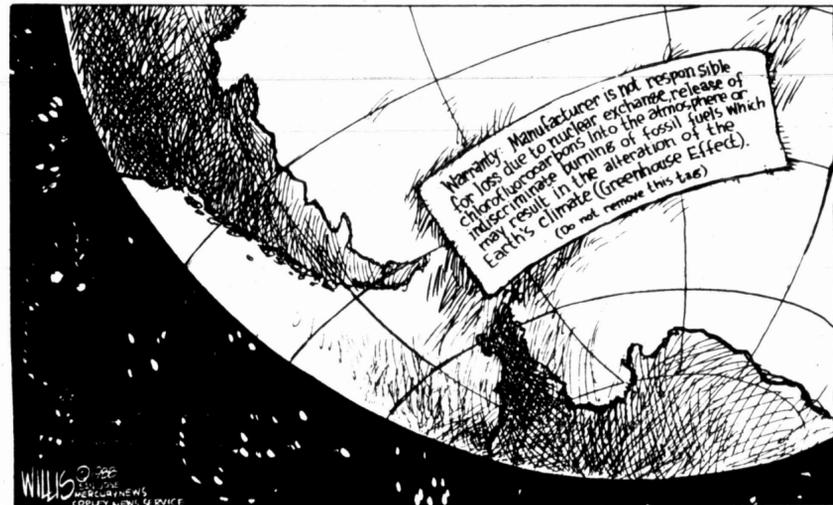

"OK, OK, Soviet Union it is — and I'll even name you Secretary of State in the process. How does that sound?"

"Done. My delegates will thank you, Mike, and you can count on one thing — I'll be behind you all the way."

"That's what I'm afraid of."

"What was that?"

"Nothing, Jesse, nothing."

Quotes

"It's like a six-day party where everybody you ever met is there, and you're the host." — Robert Farmer, Michael Dukakis' chief fund-raiser, about the hobnobbing at the Democratic National Convention in which Dukakis hopes to raise millions of dollars for this fall's general election campaign.

"This Republican administration treats us as if we were pieces of a puzzle that can't fit together." — Texas State Treasurer Ann Richards, keynote speaker at the Democratic National Convention.

"He was laughing real strange." — Stanley Parks, neighbor of Michael Charles Hayes, 24, accused of killing four people and wounding five others with a rifle as he roamed his neighborhood, laughing between shots.

Dukakis did smart thing in choosing Sen. Bentsen

By JESSE TREVINO

In the end, Michael Dukakis had no choice. Had he ignored the history and the geography of how Democrats win national elections, the election would have been over before it started.

But Dukakis apparently rejected the "big state strategy" suggested by some. That approach called for winning the White House by putting together the electoral votes of the large midwestern and northern states with California's, forgetting the South in the process.

But he chose not to ignore the South, and so, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is on the 1988 Democratic ticket.

By choosing the traditional Democratic formula for victory, Dukakis rooted his candidacy in the North and South so as to produce a balanced ticket.

Those pundits who were saying Ohio Sen. John Glenn was the hands-on favorite should have figured out a long time ago what Dukakis was thinking.

It was Dukakis, after all, who realized early in the presidential primary game that in order to gain legitimate national standing he would have to win a big southern primary on Super Tuesday.

And didn't this Spanish-speaking northeasterner target Hispanics as the core base to win Texas? That propelled him into the lead for the nomination, even as he was losing the rest of the southern primaries to Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee and Rev. Jesse Jackson, two sons of the South.

And now, as with Kennedy-Johnson in 1960, Hispanics may again be the group that puts the Democratic Presidential ticket over the top in Texas.

That year, JFK-LBJ won Texas by 46,000 in an election in which less than 150,000 Hispanics voted. In 1988, as many as 1.5 million

Jesse Trevino

Hispanics may be registered to vote.

Many of those Hispanics will rally to Bentsen's cause. Hispanics, even Hispanic Jackson supporters, should have no quarrel with Bentsen. He has been an excellent senator for them, having long ago passed muster with crucial votes on civil rights and Supreme Court appointments.

Bentsen has come a long way with Hispanics since the days he upended the popular Ralph Yarborough in 1970. Bentsen's political organization helped marshal enough Hispanic votes that made the difference in Mark White's upset victory over Bill Clements in 1982.

Since then, politics — like Dukakis — have seen how Hispanics can form the basis for a win in Texas.

Bentsen is certain to unleash another get-out-the-vote effort that may well move Texas' 29 electoral votes into the Democratic column and further enhance the role Hispanics play in Texas politics, especially in the crucial 1990 election.

Something else may be on Dukakis' mind as he looks to California. He, more so than Vice President George Bush, may recognize California has a Texas-Hispanic connection.

In a state the polls say may be within the Democrats' reach for the first time in 24 years, Dukakis may be aware of the roots that tie Texas Hispanics with California Hispanics.

Dukakis may exploit an unseen reservoir of latent support among California Hispanics who have South Texas, Bentsen's backyard, as their own roots.

Those Texan Hispanic roots go back to the late 1950s and early Sixties, when Mexican-Americans by the thousands left the agricultural spreads of South Texas and journeyed to the orchards and fields of California.

To many of them, Bentsen is not an unknown name.

One can forget, too, that the intense loyalty Texas breeds in its sons and daughters extends to Hispanics, also.

As Dukakis copys the route followed by Kennedy-Johnson in 1960, he will be playing a strengthened hand in California. Demographics since 1960 have made that state competitive for Democrats.

More than 1.5 million Hispanics may vote in California in November.

Texas itself, while its internal politics have changed dramatically, can go for Dukakis-Bentsen if the Hispanic vote is energized. My own early guess of states in the Democratic column adds up to 192 electoral votes, 78 short of the 270 needed to win.

If polls in California are correct, and Dukakis leads Bush in the race for that state's 47 electoral votes, the Democrats may well be within two states of reclaiming the White House.

As for the future, Texas' role in presidential politics will only grow larger as the state continues to grow in population. As I was saying in this space last week, Texas politics can change quickly. But some things will not change.

Texas will always be necessary for the Democrats. Dukakis is fortunate he understands that.

U.S. Navy aviators rescued, returned by Vietnamese vessel

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Three U.S. Navy aviators who were rescued by a Vietnamese vessel after their plane made an emergency landing in the South China Sea flew back to their base in the Philippines today.

The aviators arrived in Bangkok from Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, aboard a transport plane dispatched by the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok. They flew on to the Philippines on a plane sent from Cubi Point, said U.S. Embassy officials who asked not to be quoted by name.

U.S. Ambassador William A. Brown was among those greeting the aviators at Bangkok airport. The three were not injured in the July 12 incident and appeared in good condition.

One of them, Lt. j.g. Elizabeth A. Steinnecker of Corpus Christi, Texas, is pregnant.

"This is going to be one strong baby," she said, gesturing to her belly before getting on a van to transfer onto the plane to the Philippines.

Ms. Steinnecker, 29, co-piloted the CT-39E twin-engine jet that made the emergency landing in the vicinity of the Spratly islands. The other aviators were the pilot, Lt. Richard K. Maurer, 30, of Harvey's Lake, Pa., and Petty Officer First Class Michael A. Neel, 34, of Albuquerque, N.M.

U.S. embassy officials in Bangkok said the three were flying from Singapore back to Subic Bay Naval Base in the Philippines when their navigational equipment failed and they couldn't make a scheduled refueling stop in Malaysia. With only a little fuel left, they made a "controlled landing" in the sea.

A Vietnamese vessel rescued them and brought them to mainland Vietnam. Vietnam maintains military forces on some of the Spratly islands, which are also claimed by several other countries.

The official Voice of Vietnam radio said Friday that the aviators were given good treatment and Vietnam notified the U.S. government.

The United States does not extend diplomatic recognition to Vietnam's communist government, and observers said the speed with which this incident was resolved reflected recently improved bilateral relations.

In the past week, Vietnam made one of its largest returns of remains of Americans missing in the Vietnam war and agreed in principle to resettlement in the United States of people it had detained in political "re-education" camps.

New scratch found on memorial

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. park rangers say a vertical scratch has been discovered in the Vietnam Veterans Memorial that is deeper than scars detected earlier this year.

The latest scratch, four inches long and an eighth of inch wide, does not touch any of the 58,156 engraved names. The highly polished granite wall is so hard that National Park Service officials said the damage only could have been inflicted deliberately.

Park Ranger James Lance, who served in Vietnam in a non-combatant role, discovered the damage Sunday morning but said he was not sure when the damage occurred.

Investigation will last through July

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's investigation into the downing of Iran Air flight 655, originally due to end on Monday, will last at least until the end of July.

A Defense Department announcement Monday said Rear Adm. William M. Fogarty "has requested additional time to complete his investigation."

Fogarty flew to the Persian Gulf on July 4, the day after the incident, and has been there since, trying to determine how officers aboard the USS Vincennes mistook the Iranian A300 Airbus for an attacking F-14 fighter.

The Pentagon said he will send all "findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations" to the commander of American forces in the Persian Gulf, Gen. George B. Crist, who will forward the report to the Joint Chiefs of Staff. It will then be sent to Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci.

Paper carrier saves elderly lady

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A 15-year-old newspaper carrier may have saved a 94-year-old woman's life when he noticed that she was not collecting her newspapers, police said.

David Wallace alerted his supervisors at the Akron Journal on Sunday after he noticed the woman had not picked up her morning newspaper for two days. They called police after getting no answer at the woman's apartment door.

Officer Ron Deger said police broke into the apartment and found the woman lying in her bed, unconscious and breathing.

The unidentified woman was taken to Akron General Medical Center, where doctors said Monday that she had made tremendous recovery, going from critical to fair condition.

Church custodian kidnaps children

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A church custodian was arrested in the kidnappings of two girls, including a 4-year-old missing for six weeks who was found boarded up beneath the church altar, police said.

Kenneth Alvin Michel, 32, was arrested Monday by Sacramento police and sheriff's deputies as he drove up to the United Methodist Church in suburban Elk Grove. He had no previous criminal record.

Federal magistrate orders release

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — A federal magistrate has given the government 10 days to appeal his order for the public release of three search warrants and other documents related to a massive investigation of alleged fraud in the competition for Pentagon weapons contracts.

U.S. Magistrate James Kenkel on Monday directed that both the warrants used to search three homes and the inventory of items taken.

Search continues for missing crewmen

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Coast Guard cutter searched off the Golden Gate today for eight crew members of a Navy helicopter that exploded over the open sea while on a training exercise, officials said.

"There's still no sign of survivors, but we're hoping and looking," Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Jack Hardin said. The search was hampered by dense fog that reduced visibility to 150 yards.

The MH-53E Sea Dragon helicopter was 11 miles northwest of the Golden Gate and five miles off Marin County when it vanished Monday in a burst of two explosions, Navy officials said.

Search crews found scattered wreckage that included seven helmets, Coast Guard Petty Officer Thomas Cowan said, adding that no survivors were expected. The cutter Blackhaw continued the search overnight with spotlights.

Names of the missing crewmen were withheld until the Navy had notified relatives.

Crew members of the Northern Lights, a fishing boat, reported they heard two explosions about 11 a.m. "and saw the helicopter disappear from the sky," Cowan said.

"Initially we had some reports there were explosives on the helicopter. It turned out they were pyrotechnics — flares — and small arms ammunition, which poses no threat to shipping," said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Ken Freeze.

The explosions also were seen by those on board the Lovely Martha, a salmon fishing boat. Pete Giddings, a KGO-TV weatherman who was aboard the boat, said, "All of a sudden, I saw a puff of smoke. ... Eleven seconds later, we heard the first explosion. Four or five seconds later, we heard the second explosion."

The Coast Guard closed the Golden Gate to ships for about half an hour after the explosions while two Navy helicopters and two Coast Guard choppers joined the Blackhaw, two smaller Coast Guard vessels and the Northern Lights in the search.

The helicopter, which was conducting a routine mine countermeasure exercise, was attached to Mine Countermeasures Squadron 15, based at Alameda Naval Air Station on the eastern shore of San Francisco Bay, said Navy spokeswoman Virginia Felker.

The MH-53E Sea Dragon, along with its sister aircraft, the CH-53E Super Stallion, is the largest helicopter in the West, Navy officials said. The helicopter is 99 feet long with the rotors turning, weighs 73,500 pounds and can travel at 150 knots. The minesweeping version, the MH-53E, has a larger fuel capacity than the CH-53, allowing it to fly farther and faster.

The MH-53E, manufactured by the Sikorsky Aircraft Division of the United Technologies Corp., sweeps mines by pulling a "sledge" through the water, but it was not doing so at the time of the explosions, the Navy said.

Iraqi planes attack Iran today

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran said Iraqi warplanes raided a nuclear plant and other targets in Iran today, causing deaths and injuries a day after Iran accepted a U.N. plan for ending the 8-year-old Persian Gulf war.

Iran said it shot down three Iraqi jet fighters and Iraq said its aircraft shot down one Iranian warplane.

The Iraqi fighters damaged the nuclear power station, a petrochemical plant and other industrial targets in the gulf coast city of Bushehr, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said.

The unfinished petrochemical plant is a joint Japanese-Iranian project. IRNA said Japan announced today it was willing to begin talks on completing the project.

Gorbachev calls leaders corrupt

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev accused leaders of the Armenian unification movement of exploiting a territorial dispute to hide their hostility to his drive for reform, Radio Moscow reported today.

The Soviet leader spoke Monday to the country's highest executive body, the Supreme Soviet, which rejected the movement to unite the Nagorno-Karabakh region of the Azerbaijan republic with neighboring Armenia.

He charged that leaders of the campaign were conservative and corrupt and had "stuffed their wallets" before he came to power, Radio Moscow said.

An Armenian journalist said today that the campaign of civil disobedience was continuing in the southern republics despite the Supreme Soviet's decision.

Flash floods kill 18, strand 1,000

BEIJING (AP) — Flash floods and mudslides killed as many as 18 people and stranded about 1,000 on central China's Mount Huashan, one of the country's five most sacred peaks, according to reports today.

The overseas edition of the official People's Daily (Renmin Ribao) said soldiers were called in to rescue climbers and tourists.

including an undetermined number of foreigners.

Some people were apparently stranded on the mountain for up to three days.

The report said torrential rains and hailstorms washed out paths and caused cave-ins on Friday and that almost all those on the 7,000-foot mountain had been evacuated by Monday.

Officer wins key role in leadership

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — A controversial hardliner in the guerrilla war against Nicaragua's leftist government has become the first military man to win a key role in the rebel leadership.

Col. Enrique Bermudez, who survived an ouster attempt in April, joins a seven-member Contra directorate that oversees the U.S.-backed insurgency against the Sandinista government.

The 56-year-old professional soldier, a former colonel in the Nicaraguan National Guard under ex-dictator Anastasio Somoza, was elected by a 44-2 vote Monday by an assembly of rebel delegates meeting here.

Three of the 54 assembly members abstained and five were absent when the vote was taken on the second day of the assembly's three-day meeting in this Caribbean capital.

Canada to restore ties with Iran

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada is restoring diplomatic ties with Iran that were severed when Canadian Embassy officials spirited six American diplomats out of Tehran in 1980.

The Canadian government said Monday it decided to revive relations after Iran dropped a demand that it apologize for smuggling the Americans out of Iran.

"There were no conditions. There was no apology," a Foreign Ministry official told a news conference. The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

The agreement was reached before Iran's announcement Monday that it would accept a U.N. Security Council resolution for a cease-fire in its 8-year-old war with Iraq.

Rodeo queen Johnson wins Texas title

ANDREWS COUNTY NEWS

Shawna Johnson, 17, granddaughter of Wanda Johnson, Garden City, was crowned the 1988 Texas High School Rodeo Queen July 9 in Seguin.

The Andrews High School senior-to-be will lead Texas' 50-member team into the National Finals Rodeo in Pueblo, Colo. July 21-31 and she has set her sights on bringing home another crown.

"Shawna will represent the Texas High School Rodeo Association throughout the coming year at different functions all over the state, but right now, her main objective is winning the national title," said Shawna's mother, Shirley Johnson.

"She is honored to have been selected as the Texas queen and to have the chance to compete at nationals. And we are all looking forward to watching her compete in Pueblo."

Shawna was chosen from 18 of Texas' most qualified beauties to sit on the THSRA's 1988 throne after several days of competition at the state finals.

The contestants were judged in seven different categories including modeling, public speaking, photogenics, personality and appearance, horsemanship, a personal interview, and an examination on the history and rules of rodeo.

Shawna won the critical rules test and was among the top three entrants in all of the other events while enroute to the title.

"I feel like my consistency was the key," said Shawna. "I couldn't believe it when they announced that I had won. It was such a shock, and something I never expected. I had put in a lot of time, and winning it meant a lot to me." But reigning over the queen competition wasn't the only thing on Johnson's mind during her week-long stay in Seguin.

ANDREWS — Shawna Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Berry Johnson, shows off the merchandise she received for being crowned the 1988 Texas High School Rodeo Finals Queen. She will compete in the national finals in Pueblo, Colo. July 21-31.

Riding San Mantivado, she placed seventh in the girls' state cutting horse competition, just narrowly missing a repeat berth in the national event set for Pueblo during the last week of July.

"San Mantivado worked extremely hard for me," Shawna said of her horse, which is owned by Jack and Liz Williams, Andrews. "I ran into some bad luck and wasn't able to qualify (for nationals), but I plan on getting back next year." Next year's plans, however, will be pushed to a back burner for now as Shawna eyes her shot at the glamorous title.

"Shawna wants to compete in a way that would all Texas proud of her," her mother said. "As she said in her speech at Seguin, she is proud to be a Texan." She has many, many things to take care of in the next couple of weeks to be ready to do well, but I think the challenge is exciting to her."

Upon being named the 1988 Texas winner, Shawna was awarded unlimited use of a custom horse trailer for a year, a hand-tooled saddle, a pair of boots, a belt buckle, a boot bag, a hat bag, and a gift certificate from Panhandle Slim and a $500 scholarship. But with 10 straight days of countless appearances in store for Shawna, she has still been forced to busy herself collecting sponsors to help offset the costs of rodeo outfits, party dresses, casual wear and travel expenses.

"The people of Andrews have been a great help to us," Shawna said.

Community provides cash for college-bound students

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — When Jed Kensinger needed to borrow money for college, he went to his neighbors for help.

the association's success. "We exercise very tight control," he said. "We know where all our students are and how they are doing."

It wasn't the first such request. For the last 30 years, the Manheim Student Loan Association has provided thousands of dollars to Manheim youngsters without a single default.

He also credits the attitude the community fosters in its young people.

Manheim Central High School graduates may borrow up to $875 a year for four years — a total of $3,500. After they leave school, they have five years to repay the loan at 6 percent interest. Currently, 24 students have loans.

"The students seem to feel very good about recirculating the money," he said. "They repay their loans quickly, so it can go out again to help someone else."

Thanks to a recent $25,000 bequest, the association now has assets of $100,000, according to Dennis Denenberg, president of the community group.

Requirements for eligibility are kept as informal as possible. Denenberg said the association looks at a number of factors when considering an applicant: the money needed, financial need and the number of siblings, particularly if they are going to be enrolled in college at the same time.

"It's the first time we've had any extra money in a long time," he said. "We try to see every dollar in the fund is working for someone's education all the time."

Denenberg attributes the rising number of applicants in recent years to increasing college costs. And since the loans are offered for renewal every four years, the association has only been able to grant about half the requests.

The remaining funds come from community sources. Denenberg said. Some local businesses, organizations and individuals contribute regularly.

Readers reply on dressing for church

DEAR ABBY: This concerns "Frosted in Lake Forest" who criticized a mother for bringing her children to church in their pajamas. I want to thank "Frosted" for setting me straight.

I had always believed that God's house was open to all people — not just the well-dressed. I got this crazy idea from reading the Bible. I thought that since Jesus hung out with prostitutes, poor fishermen and lowly tax collectors, he wouldn't be uncomfortable in the company of hard-working people who couldn't afford the luxury of dressing up.

Thank you, Abby, for giving the mother credit for taking her children to church.

LOVES THE LORD
IN EL PASO

DEAR ABBY: I commend you for your response to the woman who was perturbed by the pajama-clad children in church.

As state chaplain of the Kansas Campers, for three years I dove from Wichita to Topeka every Sunday to offer Mass. Why? Because the church pastor, three miles away, refused admission to anyone who came in camp garb. Many youngsters approached communion in shorts, some parents wore tank tops, others came in jeans, and a few were barefooted. I served 200 Catholics every week. I agree with you. I'm sure the Lord didn't care what they were wearing.

Dear Abby

FATHER BOB IN WICHITA

DEAR ABBY: Come on, Abby. No kid in this nation has to come to church in pajamas. It's just a part of the ever increasing tendency toward sloppiness, plus the attitude that whatever people want to do is their business. Today we see slobbery 300 pound shopping in stores without shirts, wearing shorts. They're just plain repulsive.

You said, "The Lord doesn't care what they are wearing." That was one of your worst and silliest replies.

HAZELWOOD, MISSOURI

DEAR ABBY: I am plenty frosted over "Frosted's" objections concerning what children wear to church. Did she ever stop to think that maybe the mother was running late that morning and in stead of dressing the children and walking into church late, or skipping church altogether, she chose the alternative? At least she was there!

I used to be a Presbyterian. Now I'm a Catholic. I would rather see people in blue jeans and shorts every week than those phonies who dress up to come to church only at Easter and Christmas.

MILWAUKEE CHURCHGOER

DEAR ABBY: You're nuts! I think the point "Frosted" was trying to make was simply that proper attire in church shows respect. You'd be shocked at what you see today, and I don't mean children in pajamas! The way some people appear in church is disgusting.

Give the parishioners non-Latin, Saturday services with "come-as-you-are" attire and they won't ask for anything else.

Nationals eliminated

Mid-City hands Americans first loss

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

MIDLAND — The Midland Mid-City All-Stars got a strong pitching performance from Joseph Golding and a home run each from Kerry Doan and Ross Sport to defeat the Big Spring American League All-Stars 5-2 in District III Tournament action Monday night.

The win leaves Mid-City as one of only two undefeated teams left in the tournament. Midland North Central is the other undefeated team. The Big Spring American League All-Stars are now 2-1 in tournament play, in the second week of the double elimination affair. There are six teams left in the tournament.

Golding and Big Spring's David Akin engaged in a pitcher's duel, as both hurlers stayed in control of things for most of the game. Both mixed their fastballs and curves well, keeping the opponent off balance.

While going the distance Golding fired a two-hitter. He struck out three and walked two. Akin pitched a seven-hitter, fanning eight and walking two.

The game started off with a bang as Mid-City leadoff hitter, Doan, blasted Akin's fastball over the center field fence for a home run. It was the catcher's third homer in three tournament games, and the second straight game that he's hit the first pitch of the game out of the park. Center fielder Abel Sanchez followed Doan's homer with a single. Next Akin fanned Golding, and Chris Ward reached base on a fielder's choice, forcing Sanchez out at second.

Ward went to second on a passed ball, and scored when Sport singled, giving Mid-City a 2-0 lead after the first half inning of play.

In the bottom of the second, the Americans touched Golding for their only hits and runs of the contest.

Left fielder Chris Copeland reached base on a fielding error by the third baseman. First baseman Brandon Rodgers followed suit by reaching base on an error by the second baseman. With Brandon Hamblin at the plate, Copeland was thrown out by Doan while trying to steal third. Hamblin fled to center field for the second out of the inning.

Next center fielder Jeremy Robertson hit a single just over the reach of the second baseman, scoring Rodgers from second. Right fielder Trey Terrazas then hit a bloop double to right field, scoring Robertson from first, and tying the game at 2 apiece.

In the third Mid-City threatened again by fine defensive plays by the Americans prevented any runs. Shortstop Todd Parrish backhanded a hard grounder deep in the hole, and threw the runner out. And Robertson made a shoestring catch in center field to take away an extra base hit.

In the fourth Mid-City broke the tie by scoring an unearned run. With two outs, Akin walked pinch hitter Casey Givens. Pinch runner Lee Jay Bateman ran for Givens and went to second on a wild pitch. Bateman went to third on a single by pinch hitter Rick Lawson, and scored when American third baseman Ryan Hamby couldn't find the handle on Doan's grounder.

In the fifth Mid-City padded its lead with the long ball again. After Ward doubled down the left field line, Sport drove Akin's second pitch over the left center field fence for a two-run homer, giving the Midland team a 5-2 advantage.

The Big Spring Americans will play Odessa Floyd Gwin tonight at 7:30. The other game pits Lamesa against Midland Western.

The other Big Spring team, the National All-Stars, were ousted from the tournament last night, dropping a 4-1 decision to Odessa Floyd Gwin. The Nationals finished the tourney in seventh place.

Price isn't right at British Open

LYTHAM, England (AP) — The record book will show only that Nick Price has twice been a runner-up in the British Open.

But there is a vast difference between the entries for 1980 and 1988.

"They say I lost the first one. This time, he just played better than I did," Price said after being overwhelmed by Seve Ballesteros' career-best round, a 6-under-par 65 on Monday.

Price responded with a 69, including a meaningless three-putt bogey on the final hole when he tried to make the long putt needed to force a playoff.

When it missed, it didn't matter that the comeback attempt also failed. It just changed Ballesteros' winning margin from one stroke to two.

The performance was a far cry from Price's effort at Troon, Scotland, in 1980, when he blew a three-shot lead with six holes to play.

This time he simply ran into a career-best effort by one of the game's great players. "This was one of those rounds that happens every 25 or 30 years," Ballesteros said.

He was pushed to that performance by Price's stubborn refusal to fold.

"If Nick Price keeps playing like that, he will be a champion. Someday he will win this championship," Ballesteros said. "He made it very difficult."

He did, indeed. Ballesteros played the sixth and seventh holes birdie-eagle, yet he picked up no ground. Price, playing in the same threesome, also went birdie-eagle.

Ballesteros dropped a 20-foot birdie putt on the 10th. Price put a 10-footer in on top of it. Both birdied the 13th, Price with an approach that almost went in for eagle.

Only Ballesteros' wedge shot to the 16th, which stopped two inches away, separated them. Price couldn't answer that one and Ballesteros went on to a victory.

"There is nothing better than to be able to play the kind of golf we played in the last round of a major championship," Price said.

"I think we were both waiting for the other to make a mistake. We didn't make any mistakes. He just played better than I did."

"I'm very happy with the way I played," said the South African-born Price, who lives in Orlando, Fla., and spends most of his time competing on the American tour.

"It gives me confidence that I have a game that can win in the majors. It gives me a lot of confidence for the future," said Price, whose only American victory was in the 1983 World Series of Golf.

"I'm not feeling down," Price said. "Not the way he played. When you encounter something like that, you just bow out gracefully."

All-Stars close to crown

The Big Spring American Senior League All-Stars (ages 14-15) overcame a 4-1 deficit and defeated the Midland International League All-Stars 8-4 in Sectional Tournament play Monday night at Roy Anderson Complex.

The win vaults Big Spring into the championship round of the four team, double elimination tournament. Big Spring will play Wednesday against the winner of tonight's contest between Midland International and Midland American.

Shannon Coats and Neal Mayfield pitched a four-hitter, combining for the win for Big Spring. Coats went the first five innings, allowing four runs and striking out three. Mayfield picked up the save, fanning four batters in the final two stanzas.

International ace James Madrid took the loss. He went six innings and struck out four. He was relieved by Paul Zarate. Going back to spring junior varsity baseball play, it was the first loss Madrid has suffered.

Big Spring started its trek to victory in the fifth inning. Third baseman Patrick Chavarria started things off with a double. Shortstop Freddie Rodriguez and Mayfield also got hits in the inning. Rodriguez doubled, and Mayfield singled. Chavarria and Rodriguez scored in the inning. Third baseman Marvin Rubio, who had walked, also scored in the inning, giving Big Spring a 5-4 lead.

In the top of the sixth, Big Spring catcher Steven Robles sealed Midland's doom. With the bases loaded, Robles hit a long double that nearly made it out of the park. Robles' two-bagger scored Rubio, Chavarria and Rodriguez.

Big Spring is now 2-0 in tournament play while Midland International falls to 1-1.

Big Spring coach John Arrick said that second baseman Shane Kemper "has played two nights of errorless ball, and should be commended for his defensive efforts."

MIDLAND AMERICAN 6, MIDLAND NATIONAL 5

Brandon Oden singled in Justin Fibens in the seventh inning and the Midland American All-Stars defeated Midland National All-Stars 6-5, ousting the Nationals from the tournament.

Jimmy Martin was the winner for the Americans, going the distance. Brad Sanders took the loss in relief for the Nationals.

Rocket traded

HOUSTON — Houston Rockets Robert Reid was traded Monday to the Charlotte Hornets in exchange for Bernard Thompson. Reid, a 10-year veteran forward-guard, has played his entire career with the Rockets.

Lewis leaps to first place

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It's two down and one to go for Carl Lewis as he works toward duplicating his 1984 feat of winning three individual Olympic gold medals.

Lewis was pressed to come up with one of his best long jumps ever to extend his streak of victories in the event to 35 Monday at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials. Larry Myricks, the last long jumper to beat Lewis, came up with a personal best of 28 feet, 8 1/4 inches on his third of six jumps.

Lewis, who had a wind-aided 9.78-second clocking Sunday in running the fastest 100 meters ever in the finals of the event, quickly met the challenge. Jumping minutes after Myricks, Lewis topped his meet record by going 28-9. It matched the fifth-best long jump ever.

"Larry jumped within two inches of my personal best and I basically had to pull out that type of a jump in order to win the competition. At that time I simply had to dig down and do what it takes to try to win," Lewis said. "Larry helped bring out the competition in me and in everybody else. We were dueling for first and second and they were staging a duel for third."

And the winning leap was accomplished on a runway wet from a heavy rain that began falling with Lewis preparing to take a 28-2 1/4 jump that gave him the lead on his previous jump. Moments after that jump, a heavy downpour halted the competition.

Myricks, who last beat Lewis in the long jump seven years ago, was unable to match the effort on his next three jumps.

"I think this was the best competition he and I had together," Myricks said after making the Olympic team for a fourth time. "My first priority was to make the team. If I had beat him, fine. But it's no big deal. I'll be jumping a couple of years from now, so I still have a lot of time."

Myricks and Mike Powell, who fouled four consecutive times before going 27-5 1/4 on his final attempt to place third, also are heading to the Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

Steve Lewis, a 19-year-old freshman at UCLA, won his 400-meter semifinal heat in 44.11 — a half-second quicker than the world junior record of 44.61 he had set one day earlier.

It also was the second-fastest time run at sea level, behind only the 44.10 by Butch Reynolds of the United States last year.

Six other finals were held Monday night.

Kim Gallagher, the 1984 Olympic silver medalist who had been struggling the past three years because of physical ailments, won the women's 800 meters in 1:58.01, the fifth-fastest time ever by an American. It made her the No. 3 U.S. performer, behind only Mary Decker Slaney and 1968 Olympic champion Madeline Manning.

"I couldn't have a race strategy, because everybody was pushing and shoving throughout the race," said Gallagher, who took the lead at 600 meters.

DeLisa-Walton Floyd finished second in 1:59.20, and Joetta Clark, who fell over the finish line, was third in 1:59.93, edging Debbie Marshall (1:59.97).

It was the first time four American women ran under 2:00 in the same race.

Johnny Gray, the American record-holder in the men's 800, broke the Indiana University Track and Field Stadium record in winning in 1:43.96. National champion Mark Everett finished second in 1:46.46, with Tracy Baskin third in 1:44.91. Both ran personal bests.

Diane Dixon, a gold medalist in the women's 1,600-meter relay at the 1984 Olympics, won the women's 400 in 50.38, the fastest by an American this year.

NFL tougher on steroids

ATLANTA (AP) — For the first time, NFL players who test positive for steroids this season will face disciplinary action, including possible suspensions, a newspaper reported today.

The Atlanta Constitution, in a copyright story, said it obtained a copy of a 15-page directive from NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle to the league's teams, warning that he has added anabolic steroids to the list of drugs whose use can result in punishment by the league.

Other drugs already on the list include cocaine, marijuana and amphetamines.

Steroids artificially enhance muscle growth and have been used by some athletes who want to be bigger and stronger.

The memo said steroids deserve

"special mention" because there has been "widespread misuse ... throughout much of the sports world, including football."

Rozelle said studies have indicated that steroids are harmful to a person's physical and mental health and "there is a growing concern that players using steroids can cause serious on-field injuries."

"The NFL Physicians Society declares there are no legitimate medical purposes to prescribe steroids for NFL players," the newspaper quoted the memo as saying.

Under the NFL's drug-testing program, players are tested when they report to training camp and again if there is "reasonable cause."

Sports Briefs

Local teams out of UGSA play

MIDLAND — It was tough going all the way through for local teams at the United Girls Softball Association Class II State Tournament.

Big Spring had All-Stars teams entered in Division I, Division II and Division III, but neither team made the finals of the round robin tournament. Only four teams made it to the finals from each division. There were 11 teams each in Division I and III, and 15 teams in Division

II. Big Spring Division I teams went 1-3; and Division II and III All-Stars finished with 2-2 records.

The Class A State tournament will begin Wednesday. Teams from Colorado City and Coahoma are entered in the tournament.

Here are Monday's results:
Division I — Midland 6, Odessa 4; Abilene North 11, Fort Stockton 10.
Division II — Sweetwater 19, Odessa Blue 18; Midland Pink 6, Abilene North 4; Odessa Pink 6, Midland Purple 2; Abilene North 14, Midland Purple 0.
Division III — Midland Black 12, Abilene North 0; Sweetwater 11, Midland Red 10.
Division IV — Midland Black 10,

Midland Blue 9; Abilene North 14, Odessa 2.

S-ball tourney in C-City

COLORADO CITY — The Mitchell County Child Welfare Board is sponsoring a men's slow-pitch softball tournament July 29-31 at Hertenburger Field.

It is for Class C teams only, and there is a 13 team limit. Entry fee is $100 and there will be team and individual trophies awarded to the first three finishers. There will also be awards for all-tournament, MVP, golden glove and sportsmanship.

For more information call Rogena Spruell at 728-2476 or Rocky Vierra at 267-7773.

Junior Leaguers play tonight

The Big Spring Junior League All-Stars (ages 13) will begin Sectional Tournament play tonight when they host the Midland Junior League All-Stars at 7:30.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Shake off the shackles that have kept you bound to work you do not enjoy. Independence is more important than ever now. Your financial fortunes look promising. The development of a close relationship gives you inner strength as well as love. Friendships will be revamped. Socialize with people who can help your career or business. You need all the allies you can get to break into a tough field. Travel brings good luck.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: explorer Sir Edmund Hillary, actress Donna Dixon, California Angels ace Mike Witt, Maryland's Sen. Barbara Mikulski, actress Diana Rigg, former Cabinet member Elliot Richardson, actress Natalie Wood.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will be happy about today's career developments. Mend a rift with a sibling. You need to cooperate about a money matter. A personal decision continues to weigh heavily on your mind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do something about straightening out a financial mess. Regular exercise will help you look and feel better. Clothes could make the person at a social gathering this evening. Dress to impress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A relationship has more potential than some think. You will win in a legal or money matter. A prime piece of real estate could figure in your investment plans. Rely on expert help.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A home-cooked meal will lift your spirits and be a stimulant to romance. Your business instincts have never been better. Travel would prove counterproductive. Stay close to home!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The financial picture is excellent. Going off alone to meditate will be good for both your physical and mental health. Given time, a relationship will thrive. Avoid making too many demands.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Missing items surface in the nick of time, preventing embarrassment. Take advantage of an unusual opportunity to advance your career. You stand to benefit financially! Romance is sweet. Speak from the heart.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A business trip proves lucrative. Real estate transactions deserve careful scrutiny. Read the fine print in contracts. Someone may be trying to mislead you. Pay more attention to details. Double-check figures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):

Control your temper and you will accomplish more. A close relationship may be getting serious. Make certain you see people as they really are. Appearances can be deceiving. Remove those rose-colored glasses.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not take on more than you can handle. Look for ways to boost efficiency and reduce your work load. An on-again, off-again relationship needs re-evaluation. Face facts. You deserve better!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your energy is at a peak. Channel it into useful activities. Seize an opportunity to work with the public. You get positive feedback from an attractive member of the opposite sex.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A relationship should be on solid ground now. You seriously consider making a permanent commitment. Be firm but loving when dealing with a young person. Show affection openly. Share the limelight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid getting involved in a power struggle with your associates. Try seeing the other side of a family problem. Your wit and charm make you popular. You bask in public approval.
