County to appoint assessor

By SARAH LUMAN Staff Writer

Howard County Commissioners met in regular session today, subdued by the news that County Tax Assessor/Collector Dorothy Moore had died.

An emergency meeting has been scheduled to appoint someone to fill Moore's unexpired term Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the Commissioners' Court.

Moore's office was closed early today. The courthouse and courthouse annex will not open, County Judge Milton Kirby said today, until 2 p.m. Tuesday out of respect for Moore. Funeral services are scheduled for Tuesday morning. County Commissioner O.L. (Louis) Brown made a motion unanimously passed — to fly the U.S. flag at half-staff the remainder of today and all day Tuesday in Moore's memory.

Discussion of the prerequisistes and requirements for someone to fill the office occupied a major portion of the meeting, and was renewed after an appearance by Zeke Pena, an auditor from the state office in Midland, who informed commissioners that a new assessor/collector must be named before a required audit of the office inventory could be completed.

Commissioners also will meet in emergency session at 1 p.m. today. The sole item on that agenda is approval of a contract with Taylor County to allow Howard County to send juvenile probation detainees there should the Howard County detention center exceed its

'We used to have to send all ours down there before we built our detention center," said Commissioner David Barr. "Since we built ours, we have not had to send any down there, but if we don't have this contract, we could not send any (to Taylor County) if we need-

He said the contract "won't cost the county any money.'

Commissioners also approved a one-year contract with the Big Spring Independent School district to continue leasing the YM-CA/Lakeview facility

The contract calls for one year of lease at $120 per month and offers the county 90 days' notice if the property is sold.

The commissioners also approved a letter to be sent to all nine volunteer fire chiefs outlining pro-COUNTY page 3-A

Debate: To sit or to stand

WASHINGTON (AP) Negotiators for George Bush and Michael Dukakis have agreed to almost all provisions for the two debates between the presidential candidates.

A spokeswoman for the Dukakis campaign said talks will continue this week over the only remaining question — whether the candidates will stand as Dukakis prefers or sit as Bush wants.

Lorraine Voles, a spokeswoman for the Democratic nominee, said final agreement on the length and format of the debates Sept. 25 in Winston-Salem, N.C., and Oct. 13 or 14 in Los Angeles were worked out by telephone Sunday. The debates will each last 90 minutes and feature one moderator and a panel of three questioners, she said. Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brountas and adviser Thomas Donilon and Bush campaign chairman James A. Baker and media adviser Roger Ailes also agreed that the candidates will make closing statements instead of opening statements and that the candidates will be allowed to take notes However, Bush and Dukakis will not be able to bring prepared notes

The two sides also agreed to allow the campaigns to use footage from the debates in television commercials but the material cannot be used out of context, said Voles.

Clean Water Act may prove costly

By MICHAEL DUFFY Staff Writer

The federal Clean Water Act will have serious financial reperwill have serious financial repercussions on the budgets of municipalities throughout Texas including Big Spring — after

The new guidelines call for more stringent water quality standards on wastewater treatment plants, said Kevin Hamby, assistant director of public information for the Texas Water Commission, said.

"In Texas, we've adopted aspects of it to meet EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) guidelines," he said.

The new guidelines call for "anti degredation" or higher levels of treatment at wastewater treatment facilities, Hamby said.

"The new requirements affect plant discharges into any streams (Beals Creek in Big Spring) to make sure they don't become worse than they already are. The water should be of good enough quality that humans can swim in it and fish can live in it," Hamby

The new guidelines will affect not only municipalities with wastewater treatment plants, according to Hamby, but "virtually anyone who uses chemicals to

Needed trust fund sits unused

DALLAS (AP) — A federal fund established to pay for part of repair and expansion at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and other facilities is not being used for what it was intended, officials said.

Accumulation of money in the fund is a "crying shame" at a time when airport improvements are needed nationwide, said Andrew Sobel of the Airport Operators Council International in Washington.

The Airport and Airway Trust Fund was established in 1970 so airline passengers and other commercial aviation users could pay for part of the upkeep, expansion and construction at U.S. airports.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the fund's unspent balance has increased to an all-time high of nearly $6 billion, while traffic at the nation's airports has soared beyond capacity. D-FW Airport could easily use "a couple hundred million (dollars) over the next five years," Oris Dunham, the facility's executive director and incoming chairman of the Airport Operators Council, said Sunday.

"At D-FW Airport alone, we need new runways and new taxiways, and we were the last airport that was built," he said.

The trust is being "held hostage" dericit, said Û.S. Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan. She said in a speech last year that the trust is misused "for the sole purpose of disguising our annual deficits.'

Every time an air traveler buys a ticket, 8 percent of the fare goes into the trust fund. But complicated rules governing federal appropriations and other factors made it difficult to use the trust's surplus, officials said.

How the fund should be managed could play a role in this year's presidential election. Democrat Michael Dukakis favors spending more of the money, while Vice President George Bush has not yet taken a stand on the issue Torral said the taxi had been stolen shortly before Romero Juarez, who was in his mid-40s, was killed. He said state and federal police have an alert out for the vehicle.

The Cardenas movement maintains that six earlier shootings in Mexico City, including the death of a key Cardenas' advisor a few days before the July 6 presidential election, are political crimes Authorities and ruling party officials have rejected politics as a motive in each case. None of the slayings has been solved.

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) - A Baytown woman had her car back Monday after flying to Laredo over the weekend to pick up the auto that had been confiscated by Customs agents.

The car was seized last week after Theresa Miller declared that a companion bought two stone pipes in Mexico, as souvenirs.

The onyx pipes were considered drug paraphernalia by agents, operating under the government's 'Zero Tolerance'' policy. The agents seized the car.

But after pressure from the media and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's office, Customs officers in Laredo released the vehicle Nix finally was able to pull Fadal away from the plane, but not before both men were burned, Mrs. Nix said.

"We had to be lucky to be sitting there because there was a gaping hole in front of us," Frank Nix told the Waco Tribune-Herald in an interview after the crash.

"The plane was not engulfed, but heat and smoke was everywhere. Ed rolled out of the plane next, but before he could get back to the plane to get his wife, it became engulfed in flames. He rushed to get his wife, but I had to pull him back. It cooked his face. He had to be restrained," said Nix.

been a smoldering problem in Montgomery County, where fire officials say losses of $6 million last year are a doubling of the previous year's level and a sign of tough economic times. In the first quarter of this year, the county fire marshal's office added 30 structure arsons to its caseload, double the number in the same period of 1987. "It's an exceptional problem here," said County Fire Marshal Dan Welsh. "We're in a prime area, adjacent to Houston. Oil bellied up, and we're seeing the effects of that, strictly because of our location.

Fire investigators say that as the economy goes down, arson tends to flare up as people try to defraud their insurance companies.

Figures from the state fire marshal's office show Montgomery County's trend is not an isolated one. Structure arsons have increased steadily in Texas for three years, particularly in neighboring Harris County and other areas that have suffered since the oil prices plunged.

Silence forced, claims engineer

FORT WORTH (AP) — A former engineer at the troubled Comanche Peak nuclear power plant today claimed he was paid for his silence by the plant's manager and a subcontractor after he complained of alleged safety defects in the project.

Joseph Macktal, who was an electrical engineer for Brown & Root Inc., and his attorneys have filed a motion with the U.S. secretary of labor to strike restrictive portions of a settlement agreement which Macktal claims paid thousands of dollars to him.

Macktal alleges he was forced by his former attorneys to sign the restrictive agreement with Texas Utilities and Brown & Root, the subcontractor at the plant, in settlement of a labor case.

"The agreement required that he agreed never to voluntarily testify in any court or administrative proceeding concerning Comanche Peak," said David Colapinto, a Washington labor lawyer for Macktal. "In effect, it was a gag order on his testimony of safety concerns about the nuclear power

Wayne Jones, a fire crew chief from Bushnell, Fla.

Today's forecast was almost as good as Sunday's weather: a chance of rain or snow, temperatures no higher than the 50s and light winds.

But by Tuesday, a drying trend is expected, with temperatures climbing back into the 60s and 70s. "In five or six days we could be back in a more severe weather situation," Bill Baden, Forest Service director at the Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho, said today on the CBS "This Morning" program.

Firefighters took advantage of Sunday's good weather to strengthen their defenses against the wildfires, which have blackened about 900,000 of Yellowstone's 2.2 million acres since June in what firefighters call the worst fire season in the West in 30 years.

The weather allowed park officials to reopen the west entrance and the road from there to Old Faithful and Madison Junction north of the famed geyser. The rest of the park remained closed to visitors.

Residents of park headquarters at Mammoth were allowed to return home, but were told to be ready for another evacuation if flames from a 263,400-acre fire threatens the area again. A 328,100-acre fire in the park's northeast quadrant expanded significantly, combining with an 87,500-acre fire. But weather conditions helped firefighting crews, enabling them to attack the blaze Lower temperatures raise humidity, and the moisture is soaked up by tinder-dry trees, said Joe Halliday, chief naturalist for Yellowstone's west district. The wood will "be less likely to burn, although the fire shouldn't have much trouble," Halliday "Basically with this cold front that's moved in, it's going to put us

kind of in a holding pattern," said park spokeswoman Marty Tobias. Cabinet officials, who toured Yellowstone National Park over the weekend on President Reagan's orders, said the fires must be extinguished, and said the policy of letting naturally ignited wildfires in national parks and wilderness areas burn unless they threaten property or people hasn't Pendleton, Calif., and two Army battalions would be dispatched to the firelines. The Pentagon has already sent 2,300 Army soldiers to help hard-pressed fire crews. "So by the end of next week, we will see a doubled representation by the military in this effort," Taft

Some critics of the "let-it-burn" guidelines, including Sen, Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., have called for the resignation of National Park Service Director William Mott for adhering to the policy.

Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, has called for an "immediate and sweeping" re-evaluation by Congress of the Park Service's forest management.

'We need to emphasize that there are thousands of men and women on the fire lines who need our support," Hodel said. "We've received some expressions that indicate the 'Monday morning said. "There's a great deal of natural beauty and wonder still to see. We do have devastation to the vegetation, much of it along roadways where visitors will see it."

The Boise Interagency manages supplies and personnel for large fires involving overhead manage-ment teams. It has transported nearly 2.7 million pounds of equipment to the blazes this year with a total cost of about $15 million, said Sandi Sacher, BIFC fire information officer.

Some 68,490 fires have burned more than 4 million acres this year in the United States, including Alaska, said Boise Interagency Fire Center spokeswoman Sandi cedures for equipment and maintenance requirements for their departments. As a result of a change, the fire chiefs now may come directly to County Auditor Jackie Olson for purchase requests; they also must notify the county following each response to a fire in order to have service done on the fire truck. Otherwise, the service will be done once weekly.

The commissioners also unanimously voted to set the 1988-89 tax rate at 31 cents per $100 of property valuation.

They approved changes in status for four sheriff's department employees, including Allen Parrish to replace resigned deputy Carl Thurman and training two jailers.

The commissioners voted to move their regular meeting from Oct. 10, Columbus Day, to Oct. 11, a nonholiday, approved enclosing the courthouse bulletin board with glass to prevent loss of foreclosure and trustee sale postings, and paid the bills.

Brown also noted that the county will begin work, possibly within the next two days, to lower the level of a dip north of an intersection between two county roads to its lowest point, across the length of the dip.

"I don't want any more water go-ing south there," Brown said, noting that flowing water in that area had not only sparked controversy among neighboring landowners but prompted one to notify the county of intent to file a lawsuit.

Give NASA some competition

Sure. NASA did put a man on the moon. But make some big technical project a national priority, throw billions at it . . . and even the government can accomplish something.

But government is singularly inept at running day-to-day operations of anything, especially of something so complex as space exploration.

Happily, a new era may be dawning.

On Oct. 6, America's first private commercial rocket is scheduled to be launched in Florida by the EPrime Aerospace Corp., a publicly held Florida company. It will be a modest launch, lofting into space a few scientific and industrial experiments.

The important thing is that it's the first of a series of private rockets that will compete with NASA.

NEWS ITEM: RESEARCH SHEDS NEW LIGHT ON SEXUAL MORES OF OUR FOREBEARERS

Is everybody still with me?

By SARAH LUMAN Staff Writer

The end of the world, with discussion to follow Well, if you're reading this, you know for sure whether it's happened the way we were told it would or not. If it happened, the remaining population of the planet is in for some heavy grief. If it didn't, everybody who thought it might happen is probably in for some heavy grief from all the people who said, "no it won't.

Now they're saying. "I told you so," and words to that effect.

Thing is, it may have happened and they didn't notice. That is, the numbers and visibility of the people affected by the rapture may have been so select that the event cannot be confirmed

I mean, there's a war in Israel, for catsakes. Not to mention the ones in Southeast Asia, Afghanistan, India. Central and South America, and all the other places where people are beating. stoning, bombing and shooting sometimes in the name of religion, sometimes in the name of philosophy, occasionally in the name of politics, and all too often in the name of bloody profit.

Perspectives differ. For instance, those who are convinced, as I write this Sept. 7, that the rapture is about to take place are gathering friends and family and spiritually renewing themselves in preparation for the grand event. Those who believe it's coming, but would not care to say the world will end Tuesday, for instance, are preparing as well

But not as feverishly.

Some segments of the population don't believe the event will take place at all. Most of them are watching in bemusement. A few are openly scornful.

Having first heard that the world is ending next week about 20 years ago, I respectfully request the right to reserve judgment.

If the world ends, well - what can I say? If a percentage of the heaven, I suspect it would be impolitic to speculate on any individual's chances of being among the chosen.

Of course, if the world doesn't end, we're faced with the same old problems. Added to the normal everyday quota of absurdities with which we all live, some will inevitably find the continuing state of the planet cause for further grief. Some will be sorely disappointed if the world doesn't end; others will take a kind of maliciously gleeful point of view, and still others will rail that just because it didn't happen Tuesday in their front yards doesn't meån it won't happen. Those folks, I suspect, are going to be proven right in the long run. The world is going to end, someday, in some fashion.

Personally, I'm rather glad I don't have a copy of the program to peruse in advance. There are too many questions for-which I fear I would not like the answers. Since I was a small child, I have firmly believed the innocent belong in heaven. Now, you have to understand my ideas of innocence, and heaven. Heaven should be at least as good as the best possible home, and it should be a place of reunion and joy, I figure. You see, preachers have their streets of gold and their nold could sit up and take solid jeweled harps - but other food. treasures are dearer in the hearts of small children.

Innocence is what you find in small children: guilelessness and gentleness, wonder and delight.

Were I to tell you more, I would be accused of blasphemy. Suffice it to say the destination will be worth the journey.

Politics: the challengers' plight

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

It is widely observed that if you are a representative running for re-election to Congress, the chances of your being defeated are remote. It is less widely known that, increasingly, the odds also favor the senatorial incumbent, for all the obvious reasons and for some not so obvious

In New York, for instance, it is unlikely that political quizmasters could give you the name of the person who is running against Daniel Patrick Moynihan. It isn't quite that bad in the state of Connecticut. though very nearly so.

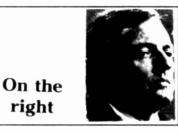

And for the paradoxical reason that Lowell Weicker, the Republican incumbent, is always in the news because he is, well, so awful. By some people's calibrations, that was the reason Sen. Joe McCarthy was always in the news, except that Senator McCarthy wondered whether people were as patriotic as he was, while Weicker wonders whether people are as morally magnificent as he is.

I went to the Rotary Club in Stamford to hear Lowell Weicker's Democratic opponent, Joseph Lieberman, 'hold forth. Lieberman is the attorney general of the state of Connecticut, and he has a reputation for being an eat-'emalive liberal.

He certainly didn't act that way in speaking to the Rotarians, and though it is natural to change emphasis just a little depending on what group you are speaking to, one walked away from the Sheraton Hotel doubting that Joe Lieberman deals in forked tongues.

He is a Democrat who applauded the use of military force in Grenada. Applauded the antiterrorist strike in Libya. Applauded the deployment of naval forces to keep open the sea channel in the Persian Gulf. All these positions,

Republican Senator Weicker opposed

Lieberman, at whose bar mitzvah former Sen. Abraham Ribicoff predicted he would one day be a senator, believes in school prayer and, as he put it, "in order." He believes in God, in love of country, and in the work ethic. By contrast Lowell Weicker prays every day only that there shall never be prayers said at school

Lieberman believes that Fidel Castro is one of the most finished totalitarians of the century: "He is more of a Marxist-Leninist than Gorbachev." Weicker belives that Castro is "a man of enormous intellect and idealism

Lieberman believes that one should first seek out a way of cutting expenses and only then go for extra taxes. He'd have voted, however inelegant he thought it as a piece of legislation, in favor of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings bill, which Weicker opposed.

On the matter of gun control, the attorney general says that not only the U.S. Constitution, but that of the state of Connecticut, grants certain sanctions to private gun ownership. He likes the Connecticut law, under which privately owned weapons are registered.

On abortion (Lowell Weicker will be satisfied only when the federal government provides a bonus to anyone who aborts her child), Lieberman looks and sounds genuinely distressed. It is, he says, a profound moral question. He op-

And then he points out that Roe vs. Wade, which turned the country's laws around on the subject of abortion, recognized the right of the state at some point during pregnancy to extend protection to human life. He was saying, in effect, that although it developed under Roe vs. Wade that anyone can get an abortion at any time, in fact, the Supreme Court licensed it only for early pregnancies.

Lieberman spoke with that degree of ideological modesty that highlights the imperial obnoxiousness of the Republican for whose seat he is competing. If politics is heavily a matter of character, as we are all urged to believe in the matter of Dan Quayle, then many independents, and even some Republicans, are going to look at the two alternative candidates and say: Better a Democratic Lieberman than a Republican Weicker. Some would go so far as to say,

Better nobody than Weicker. James Jackson Kilpatrick, the renowned columnist, mentioned the other day that in all the years he has worked on the Hill, he has vet to hear one human being, senator or congressman, utter one respectful, let alone admiring, let alone affectionate, word about Weicker. Does that surprise Mr. Weicker?

Evidently not. For a while it was thought he would run this year for governor rather than for the Senate, but he decided to stay in the Senate, he reported to the Litchfield County Times, in order to 'aggravate the New Right.

But Weicker, always in search of keener formulations that better express his character, went on to say: "I've always been the turd in the punchbowl." An artistic triumph of self-description.

it has a rich history as a weapon. A tire tool is that thing in your trunk you use when you have to change tires on your car.

Not long after the horseless carriage came upon the scene, somebody invented the tire tool, and it became an instant hit as something with which one could do enormous damage to others.

The first recorded tire tool incident was in Cairo, Ill., in 1917. Lon Forcastle found his best friend, Arnold Soberdash, was fooling around with his wife, Glenda.

Lon located Arnold drinking beer in a local tavern and said to him, 'Arnold, you scum-sucking pig, you've been fooling around with

I'm not certain what happened to fighting with tire tools over the past several years

I guess all that kung fu and karate became popular and it often is a lot easier just to pull out the pistol you bought at the pawnshop and shoot somebody rather than have to go all the way back out to the parking lot and get your tire

Maybe, however, because a popular football hero like Bobby Humphrey fell victim to a tiretooling, it will make a comeback.

It's less expensive than shooting somebody. You've got to buy the gun and then the ammunition. Tire tools come free with cars.

Plus, it's the right of every American to bear a tire tool. That's not in the Constitution, I don't think, but it's probably in all Ford truck drivers' manuals.

They switched after lawyers from the city and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People agreed on a compromise housing plan the councilmen hope U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand will accept.

Fines imposed by Sand on the city reached $1 million a day on Friday, forcing the layoffs of hundreds of workers that would have taken effect Saturday had the councilmen remained defiant.

Sand told lawyers for the city. the federal government and the NAACP to gather Wednesday to go over the alternative plan.

Sand could accept the new plan or again order the city to abide by his original order.

Sand had called for 200 units of low-income public housing on a number of sites scattered throughout mainly white neighborhoods and 800 units of middle-income subsidized housing scattered throughout Yonkers.

The City Council had agreed to the original plan earlier this year and the city agreed in a consent decree to follow it. But officials disagreed on how it should be implemented.

Art also is an excellent diagnostic tool to find different mental disorders, Ms. Ellis said.

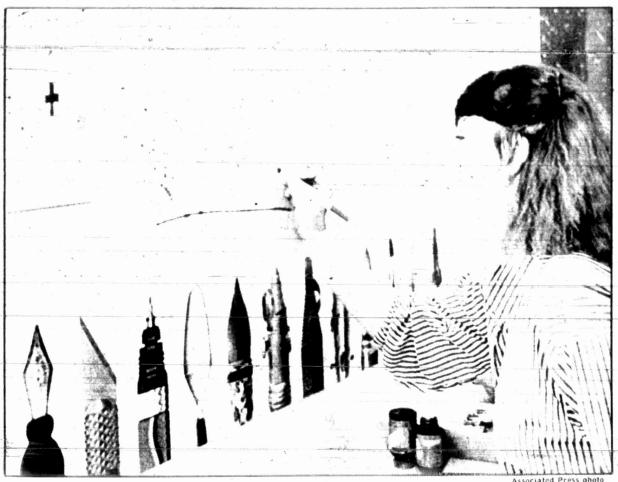

People with schizophrenia, a mental disorder marked with bizarre and sometimes delusional behavior, tend to draw highly disorganized sketches that are rich in symbols, Ms. Ellis said.

For example, a schizophrenic might draw a picture of the sun in the shape of an eye or turn a simple window pane into a cross, she

Procrastination leads to late birthday gifts

DEAR ABBY: Earlier this year just before Mother's Day - I phoned my sister to ask if she would please buy a Mother's Day gift for me and drop it by our mother's. I am an airline pilot and sometimes get in tight jams with gifts. Also, I live in Portland, Ore., and my sister lives five minutes away from my mother in Carmel, Calif.

My sister agreed to help me out. No sooner had I written the check for the gift, when my phone rang. It was my sister, informing me that she had reconsidered and decided not to buy the Mother's Day gift, as it would "mean more" if it came from me. Abby, here it was 24 hours before Mother's Day and she flatly refused to help me out. Needless to say, my mother received a belated gift.

Soon after, my sister's birthday rolled around, so I called my mother and asked if she would kindly get my sister a birthday gift. She graciously agreed to. Later she told me she bought a rather expensive bottle of wine for my sister and I immediately sent Mom a check. My sister never acknowledged the

Abby, am I unreasonable to feel annoyed? And shouldn't my sister be sent to "charm school" THE CAPTAIN

DEAR CAPTAIN: There is no excuse for failing to acknowledge a gift, but if you're considering sending your sister to "charm school," go with her and learn somethingabout gracious gift giving.

Don't wait until the last minute and then ask someone to buy the gift and deliver it for you. Your penchant for getting into "tight jams" with gifts reflects poor organization, chronic procrastination and an obvious lack of caring.

NEW YORK - Now when they compare Mats Wilander to Bjorn Borg they can talk about the things Borg never did.

Up until now, the focus has been on the failings of Wilander.

But his stirring five-set victory Sunday over Ivan Lendl in the men's final of the U.S. Open chang-

And today the computer rankings released by the Association of Tennis Professionals will have No. 2 Wilander replacing Lendl as the No. 1 player in the world.

talk about him not winning the big

Ever since Wilander, 24, burst on the scene as a 17-year-old champion at the 1982 French Open he has been seen as the next Super Swede. But mostly the performance has fallen short of the promise.

And no one is more aware of that than Wilander.

'It felt better than the first Paris time," he said after he stopped Lendl from winning his fourth consecutive U.S. Open and took the No.1 men's ranking away from

'It meant so much. I never won here. A Swede never won here. And 'm going to be number one now in the computer rankings.

By winning at the Open, Paris the first time. Wilander did something Borg never did. And by winning three Grand Slam events in the same year, he did something else his countryman never accomplished. In fact, no one among the men have won three Grand Slam events in the same year since Jimmy Connors did that in 1974.

Wilander came into this event with victories in 1988 at the Opens of France and Australia.

Borg, who won the French Open six times and Wimbledon five times, never won more than two Grand Slam events in the same year and was a loser in four finals at the U.S. Open.

The victory over Lendl capped the big year Wilander had been expected to have since he won at unbelievable," said Lendl.

In 1983 and 1984, he won the Australian Open and came back to win the French again in 1985. But the next two years produced no Grand Slam victories and the whispers were that he lacked the aggresiveness to rise to the top of the game.

But he has put that talk to rest with three Grans Slam victories this year and the top spot in men's tennis

Monday matchup important for both Dallas and Cards

AP Sports Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. - Phoenix coach Gene Stallings and Dallas coach Tom Landry both say tonight's NFL game is vital to their team's playoff chances, even though it's only the second week of the season.

"It's a long season and you take them one at a time. But if you want to get in the playoffs, you have to win in the division," Landry said. "Those are the tiebreakers you have to deal

The Cardinals, who moved to Phoenix from St. Louis this spring, missed making the playoffs last year on a 21-16 loss at Dallas in the regular-season finale. 'In order to make the playoffs, which is our main goal this year, we've got to at least split with the teams in the (NFC) East. This is one of those games," Stallings said. "There's 16 games left and they're all important. But after you lose one, it makes the next one doubly important.'

Phoenix is coming off a 21-14 loss at Cincinnati in the season-

The Cardinals failed to score twice on first-and-goal situations at the beginning and end of the game. They have revamped their goal-line offense and also shuffled their secondary after giving up cluding a 61-yard bomb on a blown assignment.

"We made a lot of mistakes," Stallings said. "We got to reduce the points we give up, we got to reduce the big pass plays given up on defense and we got to increase big plays we make on offense and defense.

"The good part of the game was we had 66 percent efficiency on third-down plays. We had some long drives and showed we could do something right. But we got to score touchdowns.

Dallas also lost its opener, 24-21 at Pittsburgh, as Luis Zendejas was short on a 49-yard field goal that would have tied the score with 44 seconds left.

"We had Pittsburgh on the ropes. We should have at least went into overtime," Landry said. "We let it get away from us and that's the disheartening thing. But overall, we didn't play very well. We gave up a lot of points and yardage. I was disappointed in our defense.

Landry said he will again start Steve Pelluer, who was 24-of-37 for 289 yards and two touchdowns with two interceptions, including a crucial one in the Steelers' end zone late in the fourth quarter.

Oilers win a wild one over Raiders

BY MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON - Houston quarterback Cody Carlson had a better memory Sunday against the Los Angeles Raiders than he did Saturday night in his dreams.

"I woke up two or three times in he might and couldn't remember a single play," Carlson said. "I couldn't even eat lunch today. By kickoff, however, Carlson had better recall of the Oiler playbook. Making his first NFL start for injured Warren Moon, Carlson threw two touchdown passes and fueled a last-gasp drive that led the Oilers to a 38-35 victory.

"We just kept picking ourselves up until we got the job done," said Carlson.

Allen Pinkett, who started in place of injured Mike Rozier, was also a super-sub, scoring three touchdowns, including the 6-yard game winner with 31 seconds left in the game.

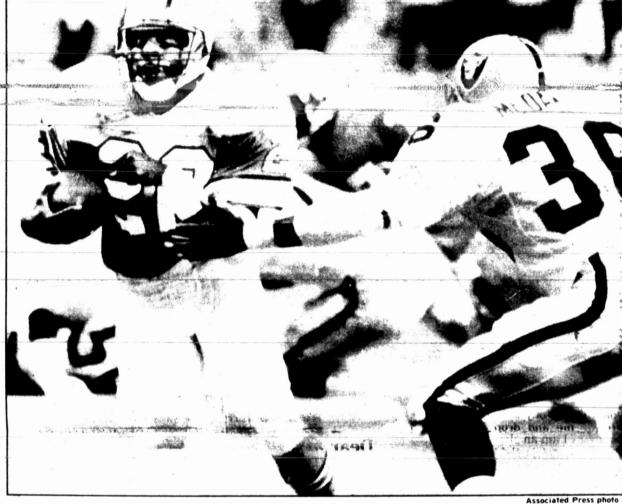

"Our execution on the play was superb and I just ran for my life," Pinkett said of his final score. "There wasn't a single player ready to throw in the towel. We never doubted our ability.

Rollerskater has dreams of Olympic gold

By SARAH LUMAN Staff Writer

Eight years is a long time to cherish a dream - unless, like Danielle Chastain, your dream is of Olympic gold.

She has a Junior Olympics National Championship gold medal to fortify her dream. There are two trophies from invitational competitions and 14 medals in all among the quiet 11-year-old's collection of winnings as a freestyle rollerskating contestant.

Hers is a new sport — Junior Olympics has conducted only two years' competition in rollerskating, and the speed, freestyle and pairs events will be performed as an exhibition in Seoul this month but by the time Danielle has attained the required world-class competition age of 16, she anticipates the Olympics will have events waiting.

To that end, she practices between 20 and 22 hours weekly during her regular routine; since moving to Big Spring in August, her practice routine has been somewhat disrupted, however, and Danielle says she thinks finding a coach may be difficult here.

She and her older sister Jennifer moved to Big Spring last month with their mother, Kathy, to join her father. Daniel, who moved here in December after retiring from the U.S. Army.

Although South Carolina school administrators were very receptive to Danielle's scheduled events, Kathy Chastain said they have not yet spoken to Danielle's principal about a possible clash between the demands of her competitive schedule and the no-pass, no-play rule's restrictions on absence from

"In South Carolina, they're very strict in the schools," Mrs. Chastain said, "and there was never a problem with her being out of school for competition.

The move — which took Danielle out of the training stables of Gene Buell, who Mrs. Chastain said is the second-ranked coach in the United States — has added to the difficulty of pursuing an Olympic berth in another way: support for rollerskating on an Olympic level is very rare in Big Spring.

"The owners of the skating rink here have been very good, we've actually had better access to the rink than in Carolina," Mrs. Chastain said. "But now we have to find (Danielle) a pro.'

It is the pros — or coaches — who choreograph routines and choose the music to which skaters

Danielle's specialty is a basic spin, called an inter back upright, done with exceptional speed. "That's what won her the Junior Olympic medal," her mother said. 'One of the national judges told Gene (Buell) that she had never seen that spin done that fast.'

Danielle is also an exceptionally proficient jumper - perhaps because, for a skater, she is very tall. She says the key to her performance is simple.

"In a meet, you just go out and have a good time," she says, with a smile, "and do the best you can."

She began skating after receiving a pair of skates as a Christmas gift several years ago, when the family lived in Germany. "I used to skate up and down the streets in

"After I first started (competitive training) I began to do it easier, and faster.'

She skated with the Columbia club for a time; Buell also operates a larger club in Lexington, N.C., she said, and she named several friends and fellow skaters she

Her mother says she is hopeful that rollerskating will escape the "politics" endemic in Olympic ice events. "It should be like gymnastics." Kathy Chastain said, "where the one who performs the best wins. In ice skating, you have to wait for the reigning champion to quit."

Tennis really needs some anti-cool rules

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

What tennis needs is a rule against cool.

Cool is for autumn evenings and jazz that won't stop. Cool is for ocean breezes and mountain streams. Cool is for the wind whistling through a plush, green forest and Dom Perignon on ice.

Cool is not for winning the tennis Grand Slam.

Steffi Graf moved into the pantheon of her sport the other day, completing a sweep of the major tournaments by winning the U.S. Open to finish off tennis' first Grand Slam in 18 years.

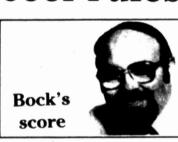

And she responded to capturing the most treasured title in the sport most matter-of-factly, with about as much emotion as you might see from the winner of some country club seniors tournament. Maybe less.

This is the Grand, by gosh, Slam, accomplished by just four other players in history and only under the most difficult of circumstances. This is no everyday bit of business. And Graf responded like it was nothing more than another day at the office.

Maybe that's all it was for her. Maybe she's that good that winning the Grand Slam at age 19 is just routine. But if that's the case then she should have faked it and acted at least a little excited. The achievement would seem to deserve more than the ho-hum reaction Graf gave it.

To win the Slam, you must capture the four major tournaments, each played on a very different surface. You start with the rubberized synthetic of the Australian, continue over the slow, red clay of the French, then conquer the worn out brown grass of Wimbledon and finally win on the concrete of the U.S. Open.

Accomplish all that — in the same calendar year, Martina and you deserve at the very least a high five, maybe even a forearm bash. Graf barely allowed herself a shy smile.

There were no arms thrust in the air the way Mats Wilander celebrated his Open championship a day later. There was no falling to her knees, bowing to the tennis gods. There was no zest, no flair, no passion.

Graf was cool and businesslike at a moment that cried out for hot and partying, a time when she should have been dancing around center court at the National Tennis Center and celebrating.

The closest thing we had to honest-to-goodness emotion was supplied by her coach, Pavel Solzil, who ignored his pupil's prevailing, low key reaction and jubilantly sailed his cap across the court. Please, Pavel, let's have a little decorum here.

When Pat Cash won Wimbledon year ago, he scrambled into the stands to celebrate with his father and friends, ignoring the royal box ritual in a display of raw emotion that shook the traditional foundations of that oh-so-proper tournament. The British Crown somehow survived the crisis.

And that was for winning one Grand Slam tournament. What would Cash have done for all four? Maybe ordered a round of cold ones for the ball boys and girls. That kind of cool would have been fine, under the circumstances Graf's almost disinterested

import legislation

Opponents of the bill managed to keep it bottled up in the Senate over the weekend, even though it already has won approval.

A second vote is needed to send the measure to the House, which already has passed a similar bill and must now vote upon Senate changes in the legislation.

The opponents threatened to filibuster the second vote and it appeared that the Senate would not be able to wash its hands of the bill until Tuesday or even later. But there is no question that supporters will eventually get the bill to the House and this week's dispute mainly represents a mopping up action.

The drug bill before the House would add another $2 billion on top of the $3.9 billion now being spent annually by the federal government on anti-drug efforts. In addition to debating whether to penalize drug users, the House will try to decide whether to keep in the bill a seven-day waiting period for handgun purchasers.

An amendment being offered by Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., would drop the waiting period in favor of a voluntary eystems under which dealers could check by phone or other means on whether a would-be gun buyer had ever been convicted of a felony.

Those favoring a harsh crackdown succeeded last week in attaching provisions calling for a federal death penalty, no government benefits for twice-convicted users and court use of evidence seized illegally if police obtained it while acting "in good faith."

Report on OSHA's enforcement of laws is questioned

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration has failed to enforce laws protecting the nation's workers, a failure contributing to thousands of workplace deaths, a critic of the federal agency says.

A recent report by the Chicagobased National Safe Workplace Institute concluded that OSHA's ineftough with violators has resulted in protecting (its) workers.' more than 9,000 avoidable workplace fatalities since 1981. However, statisticians and the federal agency disputed the figure and said on-the-job deaths have declined sharply during the 1980s.

"This report represents a selective use of statistics," OSHA's chief spokesman, Terry Mikelson, "It creates the impression that more and more people are being killed at work, that more and more people are being hurt, when just the opposite is true.

Halliburton plans sale

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co. has announced it will spin off Life Insurance Co. of the Southwest because the insurance subsidiary does not fit the company's growth strategy.

"Our principal objectives relate to more fully developing the company's oilfield services and engineering and construction business segments,' Thomas H. Cruikshank, president and chief executive officer of Halliburton, said in a prepared statement last week.

Cruikshank said competition and changes in regulations in the life insurance industry over the past several years have demanded innovative lines of life insurance products.

The Dallas-based insurance subsidiary had assets totaling $518 million at the end of 1987, with capital and surplus reaching $54.4 million. It generated $194.3 million of net premiums written in 1987 and currently has more than $4 billion of total life insurance in force.

Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. has been retained by Halliburton to engineer the sale of the insurance company, which has an estimted value of about $55

Penrod deal papers signed

DALLAS (AP) — Trust estates of the Hunt brothers have signed documents with creditors in an agreement that could settle $750 million in outstanding bank loans to Penrod Drilling Co., a company spokesman said.

The agreement, signed Wednesday, calls for the $\operatorname{Hunts}-\operatorname{Nelson}$ Bunker, William Herbert and Lamar - to convey numerous tracts of real estate to the banks in consideration for forgiveness of \$200 million in existing debt.

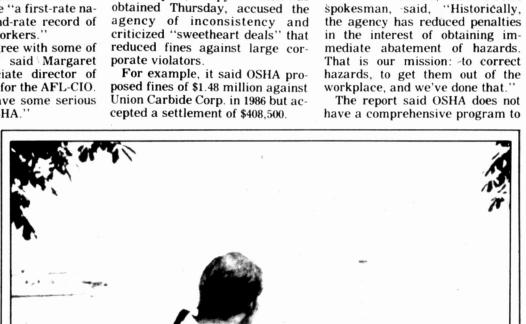

In addition, a newly restructured loan to Penrod in the amount of $525 million will be secured by notes and Penrod assets, and the restructured company will make a cash payment of $53.8 million.

'The agreement ends months of sometimes heated negotiations over the future of Penrod," according to a statement by Hunt Energy.

The trust estates of the Hunt brothers filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in August 1986, for the trust partnership that owns Penrod Drilling. Penrod, one of the world's largest offshore drilling companies, was not under bankruptcy court Penrod and the Hunts' Placid Oil Co., a sister company to Penrod, sued 23 of their lenders for fraud and misrepresenatation in 1986 after defaulting on about $1.5 billion in bank loans.

All parties to the Penrod agreement, Penrod officers, bank representatives and Hunt estate trustees were on hand in New York to sign documents executing the plan. The documents will be held in escrow pending approval of the plan to reorganize
