Jury: McIntire guilty, gets 16 years

By MICHAEL DUFFY and STEVE REAGAN Staff Writers

A nine-man, three-woman Howard County jury found Arthur Clay McIntire guilty of voluntary manslaughter Thursday and recommended he serve 16 years with the Texas Department of Corrections.

McIntire was convicted of the Jan. 9 shooting death of Randal Wade Crawford, 20, in the front yard of McIntire's former residence, 906 Aylford St.

District Judge James Gregg — following the jury's recommendation — formally imposed the sentence on McIntire, 19. He was taken into custody after sentencing.

Jurors deliberated one hour and 40 minutes before reaching their verdict. They deliberated 65 minutes before announcing the sentence.

A conviction for voluntary manslaughter — a second-degree felony — carries a sentence of no less than two years and no more than 20 years, along with a fine not to exceed $10,000.

To convict on a voluntary manslaughter charge, the jury had to decide that McIntire caused Crawford's death because of "sudden passion" and passion that was caused by and arising out of "provocation" by the victim at the time he was killed.

Jurors also had the option of convicting McIntire of murder, involuntary manslaughter or criminally negligent homicide, a Class A misdemeanor. They also could have voted for acquittal.

Courtroom emotions run high

By MICHAEL DUFFY Staff Writer

Shock. Disbelief. Outrage. Family, friends and supporters of 19-year-old Arthur Clay McIntire expressed a wide spectrum of emotions Thursday night after the recommendation of a 16-year prison sentence by a nine-man, three-woman Howard County jury for the shooting death of Randal Wade Crawford, 20, on Jan. 9.

Jurors deliberated 65 minutes before reaching a sentence. The jury deliberated one hour and 40 minutes before finding McIntire guilty of voluntary manslaughter — a second-degree felony.

It was an ugly scene, but certainly understandable.

When 118th District Judge James Gregg read the jury's verdict about 6:30 p.m., McIntire, who was standing with his wife, Lilo, and his attorney, Hardy Wilkerson, sank into his chair and sighed in obvious disbelief. Wilkerson's body seemed to go limp — his mouth agape. Lilo leaned her head on her husband's shoulder and began sobbing quietly — and later uncontrollably.

Friends and relatives of Crawford — some clutching each other — appeared relieved and satisfied when the verdict was announced.

The frail, 5-foot, 8-inch McIntire quickly gave way to his emotions and also began crying.

In asking the jury to sentence his client to probation, Wilkerson advised "Prison is not for him. He couldn't make it in prison, he doesn't have the prison mentality."

When the verdict was announced, McIntire's mother, wailed "Oh my God."

Jurors, walking one-by-one, were led quickly through the courtroom doors, some staring at McIntire and his grief-stricken wife and mother, but showing no obvious signs of emotion.

She ran to her son's side repeatedly sobbing "I love you, baby. I love you. We love you, Clay."

"Hamby, I hope you're happy and satisfied," Donald McIntire, the defendant's father, said in a raised voice to District Attorney Rick Hamby.

The district attorney — standing next to Gregg's bench — jerked his head back and glanced briefly toward his accuser. He did not respond verbally.

Hamby had earlier made an impassioned plea to the jury to render a sentence of "no less than 15 years in the Texas Department of Corrections."

A member of the McIntire group told Assistant District Attorney William Dale Dupree he could "rot in hell."

ly," Wilkerson commented about the conviction.

Asked if he would appeal the verdict, Wilkerson said he would speak with McIntire today. "Certainly this decision is subject to appeal, but the decision to appeal is Clay's," he said.

McIntire was indicted for murder by a Howard County jury on April 27.

In closing arguments Thursday, Hamby said of Crawford "not every drunk's a rowdy. He was sober enough to stop another drunk from driving home. Poor ol' Randal just stumbled into it (being shot)."

Pathologist Dr. Robert Rember testified Crawford's blood alcohol level was .20 — twice the legal limit — at the time he died.

Hamby said after Crawford was shot, "nobody was around (to help) him because everybody had left."

"If he (McIntire) wasn't drunk (when the shooting occurred) that makes his act even more deplorable. My God — he did that sober," the district attorney said.

Hamby said there was a good reason why Thomas Figueroa — the only person besides McIntire to witness the shooting and a close friend of the defendant — didn't want to speak to the prosecutor last week.

"I might be fat, losing my hair, and a little dumb, but I'm not overwhelmingly stupid," he said.

Bush outlines energy policy in Midland visit

By STEVE GEISSEN Staff Writer

Returning to the area where he began working in the oil business 40 years ago, Vice President George Bush outlined his national energy policy Thursday afternoon at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum in Midland.

The outdoor event, sponsored by the Permian Basin Energy Forum, was attended by an invitation-only audience of about 500 people.

Bush was joined at the gathering by group of influential Texas Republicans, including Governor Bill Clements, former Texas Senator John Tower, Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance, and Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Tom Phillips.

Surrounded by museum exhibits such as pump jacks and drilling rigs, Bush said "that a strong domestic oil industry is vital to our national security."

Bush said his national energy policy would rely on "a multi-source energy base." He advocated an increased use of coal and nuclear power as well as other "more exotic energy sources."

"A strong America will, for a long time, depend on oil and gas," he said.

Bush said his energy policy would seek to find and conserve more oil and gas, apply advanced technology to the process, and protect the environment.

He also offered his plan "to get the oil and gas industry back on track."

Vice President George Bush speaks to an audience largely composed of West Texas oil industry executives at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum in Midland.

Bush called for a greater use of natural gas, saying, "We should fully decontrol natural gas and find ways to move it to the consumers more effectively."

He criticized Democratic Presidential Candidate Michael

Dukakis, saying the Massachusetts governor previously advocated regulation of the natural gas industry, and now "talks mushily of the question of deregulating natural gas, of a delicate balancing of interests to protect both consumers and producers."

Addressing the fall in oil prices, Bush said, "The American oil industry is too important to our national security to have its economic underpinnings totally dependent on the political climate in the Middle East."

Bush said his energy policy would provide stability to the oil and gas industry by reducing the cost of exploration and production.

He outlined a plan that includes:

- Tax incentives for stripper wells.

- A 10 percent tax credit for oil and gas exploration — up to $10 million of costs, and five percent thereafter — creditable to the alternative minimum tax.

- The argument is this exacerbates the deficit and I don't believe it," he said. He said the cost of the tax credit would be offset by the revenues that the government realizes from increases in drilling, production and employment.

- Clarification of the R&D tax credit to include enhanced recovery techniques.

- Elimination of 80 percent of intangible drilling costs as an alternative minimum tax preference item for independent producers.

- Repeal of the transfer rule prohibiting independents from using percentage depletion on acquired properties.

Bush said his proposed incentives "would keep independents in business when times are tough. After all it's the independents who are out there taking most the risks."

And he accused Dukakis of experiencing "a battlefield conversion" in his support of the recent

Dukakis says he'll attack Quayle as choice

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS — Democrat Michael Dukakis said today he would continue to slam Republican Dan Quayle as unfit for the vice presidency and depict rival George Bush as weak for selecting the Indiana senator. "I'm going to hit it and hit it hard," he said.

Dukakis said the Quayle issue is double-edged: Is Quayle qualified to be president and does Bush have any judgment?

"Strong presidents look for strong vice presidents," Dukakis said Thursday, showering praise on Lloyd Bentsen and offering ridicule for Quayle.

"Weak candidates look for something else."

Dukakis took the attack a step further in Memphis, telling a rally in a renovated theater: "There are, as we know, going to be major changes in the Supreme Court. Do you want the man who selected Dan Quayle to be making those appointments?"

The Massachusetts governor was campaigning today in Missouri and North Carolina, both regarded as closely contested states, before returning home to Boston for the evening.

Dukakis belittled Republican Quayle in Tennessee after flying in from tiny Lone Star in East Texas where he joined Bentsen for their first appearance following the vice presidential debate in Omaha.

After earlier describing Quayle as seeming "extremely insecure" and "programmed beyond belief" in his televised confrontation, Dukakis said the comparison with Bentsen was having an immediate effect on the Democratic ticket.

"I think it's one of the reasons why people are switching, why this campaign of ours is starting to win," he told reporters after arriving in Memphis.

In Texas, before heading off on their separate ways on the campaign trail, Dukakis looked ahead to his final remaining debate with Bush next week in Los Angeles as he said goodbye to Bentsen on an airport tarmac.

"Great work, again," Dukakis told the Texas senator. "I'll see if I can approach it."

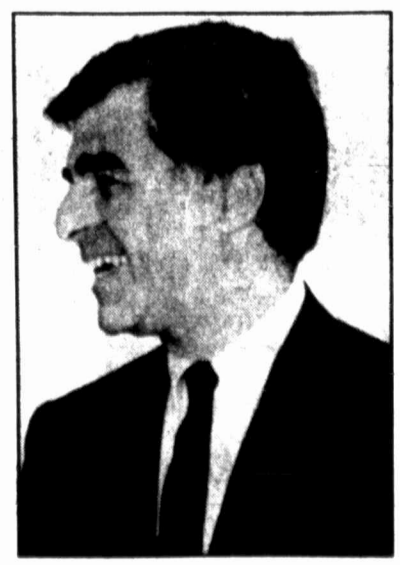

The Dukakis campaign moved swiftly to begin airing a pair of television commercials belittling

Quayle. The ads were produced before the debate and contain no reference to Bentsen's stinging retort to Quayle — "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy." But the campaign did not air the ads until after the debate, confident of the wide perception Bentsen had done well and that Quayle had not put to rest questions about himself.

One ad, the latest in a series of mock depictions of Bush campaign advisers, has one voice saying of Quayle, "We've got a disaster on our hands." Another suggests that Bush dump Quayle from the ticket and "bring in Bob Dole."

A second ad hits even harder. It shows photographs of Harry Truman, Lyndon Johnson and

House: Cabinet status for VA

By JIM DRINKARD Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Elevating the Veterans Administration to full Cabinet status will involve only changing a few signs outside the building, proponents said after the House voted overwhelming support of the change.

Rep. Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss., said the cost of the change approved Thursday by the House will come to less than $1 million in 1989 and will give the nation's 27 million veterans direct access to the White House.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that converting the VA into a Cabinet department would cost $33 million over five years.

The House vote sent the compromise bill, making the VA the government's 14th Cabinet department, to the Senate, which was expected to add its approval. President Reagan backs the move, and it was his public announcement of support last summer that gave impetus to the legislation.

House approval came on a voice vote, overriding objections from opponents who called the move an act of election-year pandering that will result in increased future costs for veterans programs.

"This is an act of great hypocrisy," said Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., who said he had heard numerous colleagues complain privately that the legislation should not be adopted.

"Why does Congress do things like that? We do it because of special interests," Porter said. "Members are in craven fear of retribution at the polls. I think the American people are looking to have people of courage to govern them. You can't serve every special interest in our country without ever adding up the bottom line."

The new Department of Veterans Affairs, which would

Three hails for the Olympians

Ours is a world hungry for heroes. We elevate astronauts, praise politicians and adulate rock stars. But far too often we Americans are disappointed, particularly in our sports heroes. The world heavyweight boxing champion is a thug. Our male tennis players throw rackets and tantrums. In the National Football League, penalties used to mean only 10 yards for holding; now they are one-month suspensions for drug use.

Yet there are still heroes in sports and we have seen them shine as brightly as the Olympic torch. Singling out a few risks slighting many more. But the accomplishments of three young Americans in Seoul transcend sports and make them true Olympians.

Florence Griffith Joyner grew up on the mean streets of Watts, but instead of getting into trouble she ran away from it. She ran so far and so fast that she has ended up with three Olympic gold medals and world records in the 100- and 200-meter dashes.

As glamorous as she is talented, FloJo has persevered through a career filled with sharp ups and downs. Even her triumph at Seoul has been clouded with rumors of drug use, a charge she denies with equanimity and conviction.

Greg Louganis' unhappy childhood was spent in El Cajon, Calif. A lonely child and a slow learner because of dyslexia, he turned to diving and simply became the world's best.

His two gold medals — repeating what he did at the 1984 Olympics — were perhaps the most dramatic victories of the games. On the springboard, he came back from an earlier head injury to clinch the gold; from the platform, he needed a dramatic final dive to snatch victory away from a Chinese opponent half his age.

Jim Abbott led the United States baseball team to a gold medal over Japan — its first ever in what is still a demonstration sport. A fine athlete for the University of Michigan, he is a left-handed pitcher through necessity, not choice. For Jim Abbott was born 21 years ago without a right hand.

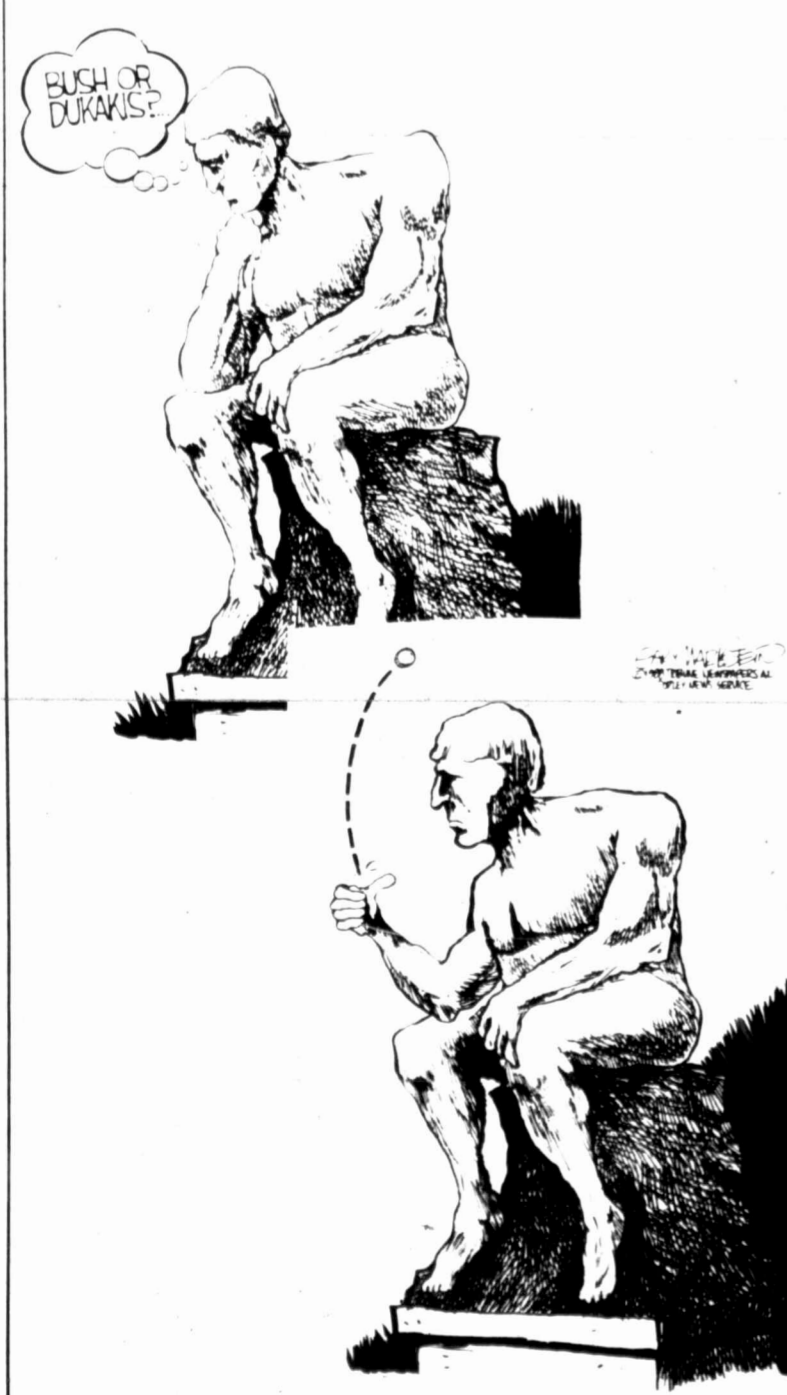

He was the first college player picked in the major-league draft and has signed a contract with the California Angels. But no matter what he does from now on, he's already scored the major victory in his life.

It would be easy to point up the negatives in this 24th modern Olympiad: The fallout from the Ben Johnson doping episode; the continued turmoil in the host country of South Korea; the usual disappointments of individual athletes and national teams.

But Olympic memories are far more positive. For the most part, the Koreans were cheerful and able hosts. The massive boycotts of the 1980 and 1984 Olympics were almost a memory; 161 nations came and only Cuba and North Korea stayed home. Even the ugly bugaboo of nationalism seemed to be less prevalent.

Overriding all these considerations — positive and negative — were the contributions of the athletes themselves. The drama. The exultation. The heartbreak. The world and Olympic records. And the legacy.

We'll be greatly surprised if there isn't a whole generation of little girls who want to be the next FloJo. Greg Louganis, whose avocation is working with troubled youngsters, will be even more of an inspiration. And Jim Abbott proves there is little that people of dedication and spirit can't do.

The ugly war they called a 'conflict'

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

Nearly 38 years ago, United Press International moved the following over the newswire:

"IPSOK, Korea: Chinese Communist hordes, attacking on horse and on foot to the sound of bugle calls, cut up Americans and South Koreans at Unsan today in an Indian-style massacre that may prove to be the costliest of the Korean War.

"Two combat regiments were badly chewed up and hundreds of civilians — men, women and children who tried to escape along the roads leading from Unsan were killed by enemy machine-gun and mortar fire.

"The Communists charged in the frosty early morning hours in an attack so vicious, it left the surprised and confused Americans no choice but to run. Many did not escape."

My father, an Army captain and also a veteran of World War II, was in that god-awful Chinese rout in November 1950.

He managed to escape the Chinese by first hiding under stacks of American dead.

Then, he and a private slipped away from the battle scene, only to be wounded by a lone Chinese Communist soldier who threw a grenade at them.

The soldier, however, turned out to be a defector attempting to surrender to U.N. forces. He apparently panicked when he saw the two Americans and tossed the grenade.

Realizing his mistake, he patched the two Americans' wounds and then hid them from the Chinese for 14 days in a cave, bringing rice and water whenever he could.

The soldier eventually was able to get my father and the private, as well as himself, back to safety.

But my father was never the same after that. His feet froze in that cave. I can still see him taking off his shoes at night after he had returned home. His socks would be covered in blood.

He went to the bottle to forget his ordeals. He cried and screamed into the night.

He left the Army and spent the last 20 years of his life trying to flee from whatever demons possessed him.

He died in 1970, still a relatively young man. He was a casualty of the Korean War.

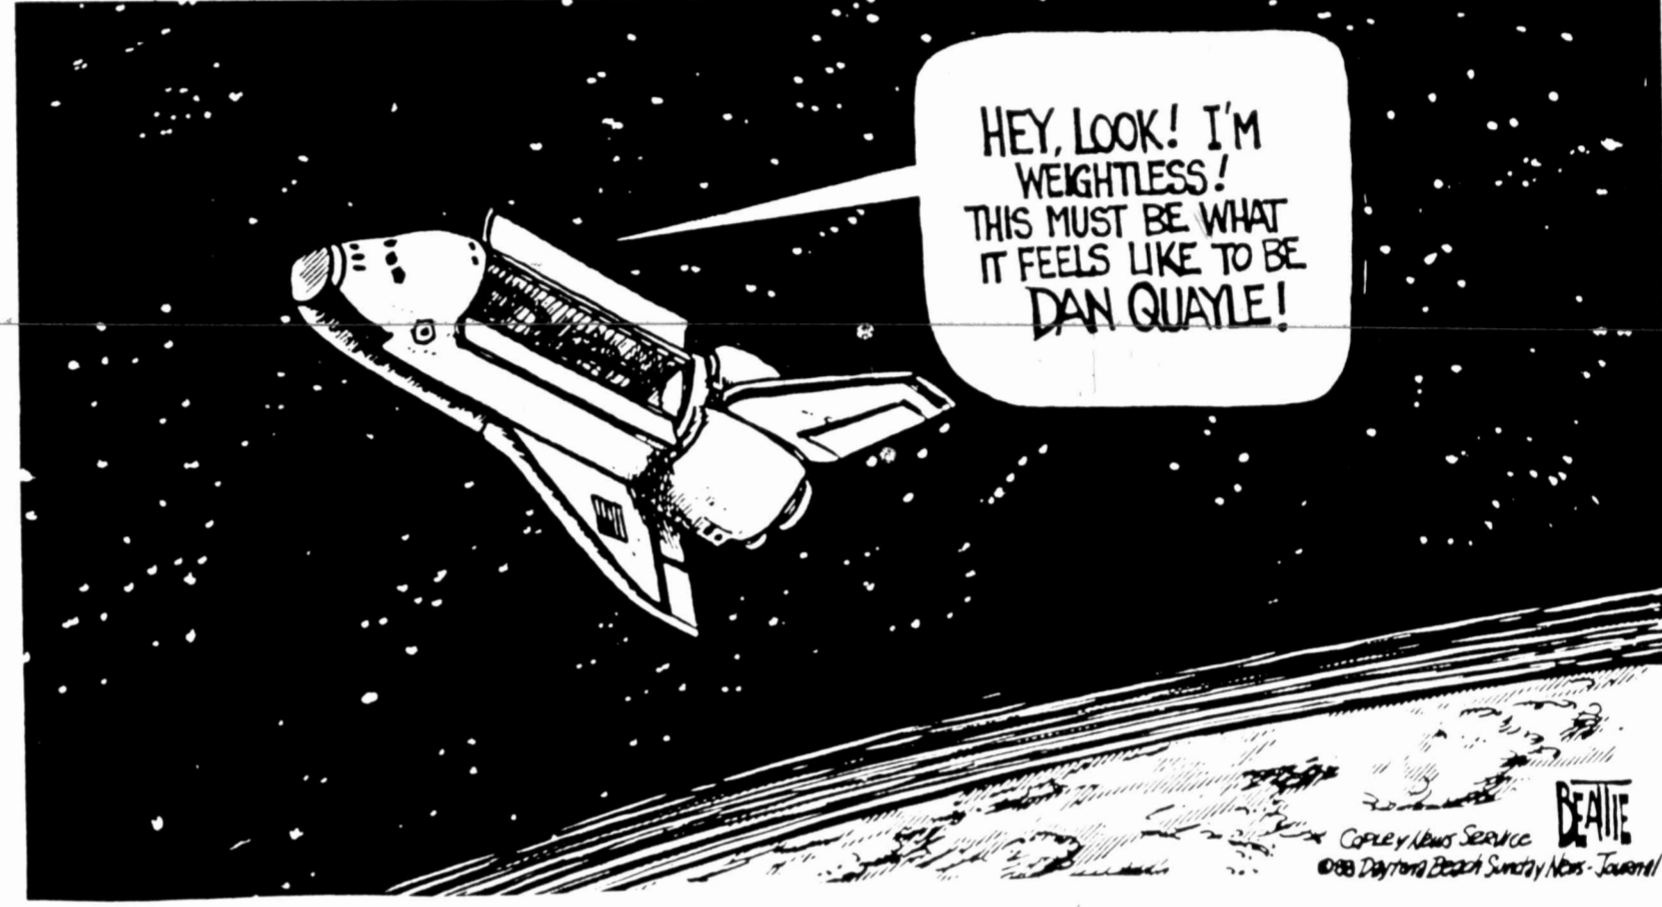

So I sit and I watch the Olympics on television from Seoul, and I think of the men who died keeping it out of Communist hands.

And I think of those who did come home, scarred for life, and how, as was the case in Vietnam, there were no parades and little thanks for what they had done.

"They called Korea a 'conflict,' not a 'war,'" I heard a veteran say once. "The trouble is, you can be just as dead in one as the other."

Perhaps I shouldn't have brought all this up in the midst of the celebration that is Seoul and its Olympic Games.

But somebody had to.

The realities of criminalizing abortion

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

The showstopper, in the opinion of many rhetorical technicians, was when Gov. Michael Dukakis asked Vice President George Bush whether he was prepared to make "criminal" everyone who had had an abortion. It was clear to everyone who watched the debate that George Bush was trapped. But here exactly is how it went:

Question (from the reporter to Bush): "If abortions were to become illegal again, do you think that the women who defy the law and have them anyway, as they did before it was OK'd by the Supreme Court, and the doctors who perform them, should go to jail?"

Bush: "I haven't sorted out the penalties, but I do know that I oppose abortion and I favor adoption."

Dukakis: "Well, I think what the vice president is saying is that he's prepared to brand a woman a criminal for making this decision. It's as simple as that."

In a way, Dukakis is right, it's as simple as that. Put in the form of a logical diagram, here is how it reads:

- In a democracy, the legislature makes the laws.
- In the United States, the legislature can make any law so long as it does not violate the Constitution.
- If the Supreme Court rules that it does not violate the Constitution to forbid the practice of abortion, then...

On the right

...then, then.

- Anyone who practices abortion violates the law and is subject to a criminal penalty.
- Now to use the word "criminal" in the way Dukakis used it is to stir a witch's brew of murder, incest, treason and maybe regicide. Dukakis is saying to Bush, in effect: Is it your opinion that every woman who has had an abortion is to be likened to a murderer? Because if that is your opinion, George, I don't think that person is going to vote for you for president. People don't like it when you say they are murderers.
- Poor Mr. Bush. Polemical opportunism of the kind Dukakis engaged in is hard to deal with, because it requires a little lecture in the composition of law.
- Bush might have said: "Mike, as you know, anything that is forbidden by a legislature in a democracy, always assuming that the thing forbidden is not a constitutional right, is a crime. Double parking is a crime. Do I consider double-parkers criminal? No, I do not, though technically they are.

"Mike, apropos of your war on drugs, are you aware that 94 million people, according to the estimate of a responsible foundation, have experimented at one time or another with illegal drugs? Now, do I believe them to be criminals? Do I think of them as criminals? The answer is: I don't. But the law does.

"If the commission's report is to be believed, and I have not seen it challenged, then it is true that there are at least 94 million criminals loose in America, but that isn't going to upset you any more than it upsets me.

"Now, Mike, the criminal law acknowledges two divisions. If you double-park, you are a criminal. But since the penalty for double parking is less than one year in jail, you are guilty of a misdemeanor. If the penalty were more than one year in jail, the offense is called a felony.

"The question that is tormenting a great many people, including a great many women who have had abortions, is: Does the annihilation of a fetus constitute the taking of human life? As long as the majority of the American people do not believe this to be the case, there won't be any anti-abortion laws.

"But if the majority of the American people did believe this to be the case, there would be such a law.

"The question then would arise: To what extent would the majority make provisions for the minority who disagreed on the matter? An indulgence might be in two forms. Perhaps the Congress might pass the formal law, as for instance there is a formal law against bringing in a Cuban cigar, but if you want to bring one in, do so, and don't worry about it.

"Or perhaps the general understanding will be that women who honestly disagree will not be prosecuted, even as you fail to prosecute teachers in Massachusetts who decline to lead their classes in reciting the Pledge of Allegiance.

"Although, before Griswold, it was illegal in Connecticut to buy contraceptives, almost anyone who wanted to buy them could do so. There are 24 states that forbid the practice of sodomy, and there are 50 states in which sodomy is regularly practiced.

"So, Mike, try to understand how laws acquire effective sanction. When the people think the practice is truly obnoxious, truly hurtful, then they will impose effective penalties. That is a long way off, in the matter of abortion; almost certainly after you and I are both dead and buried. And when that time comes, Mike, may you rest in peace."

"Thank you, George."

"Goodnight, Mike."

Yellowstone donation fund set up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has established a special fund to handle donations to help the Yellowstone National Park area recover from this summer's devastating fires.

The Greater Yellowstone Area Recovery Fund was set up in response to offers from individuals and groups wishing to make donations, said F. Dale Robertson, chief of the department's Forest Service.

Robertson said Thursday that the donations will be used for cleanup operations and to collect local seed, grow seedlings, plant trees, control erosion and repair damaged facilities.

Thirteen major fires burned 1.6 million acres in the greater Yellowstone area this summer.

Army to review WWI heros

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawmaker says the Army will review records of black World War I heroes to determine whether any were denied high honors because of their race.

The study was initiated after Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci acknowledged that racism could have played a role in the awarding of combat medals. Rep. Joseph DioGuardi disclosed in releasing letters from Carlucci and one of his aides.

Assistant Defense Secretary Grant S. Green Jr., in a letter released Thursday by the New York congressman, said the review could take more than six months, partly because many records were destroyed in a 1973 fire at the National Personnel Records Center.

Carlucci, in a separate letter released by DioGuardi, agreed late last month to undertake the study, after prodding by congressmen seeking posthumous Medals of Honor for two black servicemen.

Some 1.5 million blacks served in the world wars.

Court rules against consent law

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A new state law, requiring unmarried minors to obtain parental consent for abortions, was put on hold by a federal judge who ruled that the measure "fell woefully short" of constitutional requirements.

U.S. District Judge John H. Moore said the preliminary injunction he issued Thursday would stand until "further order of the court."

It prevents Gov. Bob Martinez, Attorney General Bob Butterworth

and state attorneys from enforcing the law, which requires unmarried teens under 18 to seek the consent of a parent, custodian or legal guardian before obtaining an abortion.

Moore's ruling "means that the young women of Florida can do what they want with their bodies and exercise their constitutional right to have an abortion," said attorney William J. Sheppard, who represented a women's clinic and three physicians who challenged the law.

'Siege of Atlanta' support drops

ATLANTA (AP) — Leaders of this week's "Siege of Atlanta" begged for more people to attend today's demonstrations during the final day of anti-abortion protests after a dramatic drop in attendance.

The Rev. Joseph Foreman, regional director of the New York-based anti-abortion group Operation Rescue, told about 40 people at a rally Thursday night to gather early today for a private strategy session.

The demonstrations, part of a week of protests dubbed "The Siege of Atlanta," began Tuesday, when 343 of an estimated 800 protesters were arrested. Since then, participation both in the daytime demonstrations outside abortion clinics and nighttime rallies has fallen steadily.

Only 14 people were arrested Wednesday and 11 Thursday. The rallies have dwindled from 1,000 people Monday to less than 200 Thursday.

ATLANTA — Tawana Brawley, left, and the Rev. Al Sharpton appear at a rally in Brawley's behalf in Atlanta last July. The grand jury investigating Brawley's assault case released a report concluding that she apparently concocted her story of abduction and rape by a gang of white men.

Grand jury concludes rape story concocted

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — The state attorney general is asking for ethics probes of the lawyers who advised Tawana Brawley after a grand jury concluded the black teen-ager concocted her story of abduction and rape by a gang of white men.

The girl's advisers — lawyers Alton Maddox and C. Vernon Mason and the Rev. Al Sharpton — told her not to cooperate with the investigation on the grounds it was part of a racist criminal justice system. They also accused some public officials of participating in the alleged rape and others of covering up what happened.

With Thursday's release of the 170-page grand jury report, Attorney General Robert Abrams asked a judicial grievance committee and a judicial disciplinary panel to investigate Mason and Maddox for possible disciplinary action, which could include suspension or disbarment.

"Their outrageous, irresponsible actions have increased the atmosphere of tensions between the racist, not only in New York, not only in Dutchess County, but throughout the nation because of the celebrated nature of this case," Abrams said. "Mr. Maddox and Mr. Mason have made every effort to prevent the criminal justice system from uncovering the truth of what happened to Tawana Brawley."

In a 10-page letter, Abrams detailed 19 statements he said Mason and Maddox made knowing they were false.

The report summarized a seven-month investigation that cost the state at least $620,000, Abrams said.

"We have the facts. We have solved the case. The allegations she had made are false," Abrams said.

There was "no evidence that any sexual assault occurred," the report said. Microscopic examination of physical evidence, including fibers from her jeans, boots and blouse, suggested that she had been in her family's former Wappingers Falls apartment.

Rumors say Waite to be released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Beirut newspaper reported today that Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, missing in Lebanon for more than 20 months, will be freed in 72 hours.

The conservative daily Al-Anwar, which is based in Christian east Beirut, cited unnamed informed sources for its report.

It said one of its sources reported that Waite "has been moved from the (eastern) Bekaa (valley) to Beirut's southern suburbs and predicted he will be released in 72 hours."

But another source, it said, claimed Waite, 48, will be freed after resumption of British-Syrian relations.

There was no way to confirm that Waite's release was imminent. The terse and loosely sourced report, was not carried by other Lebanese media.

The newspaper also has no record of authoritative reports on the hostage issue.

London severed diplomatic relations with Damascus in November 1986, after accusing the Syrian government of involvement in a plot to blow up an Israeli airliner at Heathrow.

Nations shun Burma government

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Foreign nations are shunning Burma's three-week-old military government that has cracked down on a popular uprising for democracy, diplomats said today.

The main official contacts have involved notes from several foreign embassies decrying the bloodshed since Gen. Saw Maung seized power in a coup.

The diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said no nation has sent the standard message of congratulations to the new leader, which would signify recognition of his government. Diplomats also said Saw Maung, who also serves as the new foreign minister, has met no heads of foreign missions.

Ambassadors of the European Community and Japan last month presented protest notes citing the killing of unarmed civilians by troops.

Diplomats and other analysts are skeptical that fair elections can be held given a hardline government that has been willing to shoot thousands.

Shultz denies secret hostage deal

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz has sharply denied reports that Washington is secretly negotiating with Iran for release of American hostages in Lebanon.

Shultz said that anyone who claims to be a U.S. envoy to such negotiations is lying. "Anyone who tries to cut across our policies should butt out," he added.

Shultz made his remarks Thursday at a news conference during his visit to New York for the fall session of the 43rd U.N. General Assembly. He was reacting to a spate of recent reports that the United States is involved in secret negotiations for the release of hostages.

Rocket attacks may force talks

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The government, faced with relentless rocket attacks in the heart of the capital, has scheduled an emergency meeting to discuss ways to make peace with the U.S.-backed guerrillas.

Government spokesmen said the Central Committee of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan would meet Monday to discuss "important matters," including efforts to bring the guerrillas into talks with the government.

Vice President Abdul Rahim Hatif, in an interview Thursday during a flight from New Delhi to Kabul, said "a concerted effort of all mentalities and from all walks of life is urgently needed."

However, he called the guerrillas "irresponsible people with complicated weapons" and accused Pakistan and the United States of continuing to the guerrillas, who are seeking to topple the Soviet-backed Marxist government.

FAITH REMINDS US OF OUR MOST PRICELESS POSSESSION

Of all the pleasures we have known
 And all the treasures we will own,
 There's just one thing that stands alone,
 Apart from all the rest.
 We learn it's not a brand new car,
 The means with which to travel far
 Or talent to become a star,
 Which some of us possessed.
 It isn't any sort of rank,
 Or big deposit in the bank;
 But our good Father let us thank,
 With gratitude expressed
 For something which is truly grand
 That our great leaders wisely planned:
 It's all the freedom in our land,
 With which we have been blessed.

For what avail
 The plow or sail,
 Or land or life,
 If freedom fail?

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Please help me. I just found out my boyfriend is on dope — cocaine mainly — and it scares me. He just laughs and says he can handle it, but I'm afraid for him. I love him and he wants to marry me, but I don't know what to do because if I say too much he'll just turn against me. — W.L.

DEAR W.L.: You actually are facing two problems (although they are closely related). The first has to do with your boyfriend, while the second has to do with yourself. You are right to be scared, because your boyfriend is on a road that leads to destruction. One of the most dangerous things about cocaine, I am told, is that it makes those who take it feel they have an extra burst of power and well-being — while in fact it is destroying them. Your boyfriend is being deceived by it also.

What should you do? First, for your boyfriend's sake you need to confront him with the dangers he's facing and strongly insist he get into a rehabilitation program that will help him break his habit and cope with his deeper problems. Talk with your pastor or someone else who will be able to help you find a good rehabilitation program in your community.

Don't let your fear of losing your boyfriend keep you from confronting him; if he destroys himself through drugs, you will lose him anyway. Then realize that if he refuses, you need to break off your relationship with him (at least as far as thinking about marriage is concerned. Don't accept any promise he makes that he will reform if you will marry him; it almost never works out that way).

Most of all, you need to make Christ the center of your life. Having a personal relationship with God is the most important relationship you can have. Give your life to Christ and encourage your boyfriend to turn to him also for the help he needs.

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Our hearts are broken because our daughter has run away from home and is living with her boyfriend. He doesn't have a job and shows no interest in getting one because she supports him. She won't even have anything to do with us. We feel so helpless because we know she's heading down a dead-end road. Is there anything we can do? — Mrs. D.N.

DEAR MRS. D.N.: There is no easy solution to a problem like this, and your feelings of helplessness will be understood by many who have faced a similar situation. However, God is able to do what you cannot do — and that is why the first commitment you should make is to pray regularly for your daughter. What should you pray? In Jesus' familiar story of the prodigal son, there came a time when the son who had left home "came to his senses." (Luke 15:17) He realized he was on a dead-end road with no hope for the future. Sooner or later your daughter will face a similar crisis because this kind of relationship has little hope of lasting security (since there is no real commitment). When she does, pray that she will come to her senses and return home. More than that, pray she will realize that only God's way is best, and he wants to bless her and put her feet on the right path if she will turn to Christ.

Five nuns seek to avoid eviction

By MICHAEL MORAN
Associated Press Writer

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. — Five cloistered nuns remained barricaded in their monastery Thursday, fighting a church relocation order that came after they protested the introduction of such intrusions as television and snacks.

Four sisters, members of the Order of Discalced Carmelites, locked themselves in the infirmary of the Monastery of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary of Mt. Carmel on Tuesday, and a fifth nun joined them Wednesday.

They are asking the Vatican to stop what they consider a threat by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Paterson to evict them from the monastery because of their adherence to the strictures of their religious order.

"These sisters are keeping a vigil, they are not protesting," said Doreen Ercolano, a sister of one of the nuns, Sister Maria. "They are fearful that if they leave the infirmary they'll be physically forced from the monastery."

Sister Eliane, the senior of 13 nuns at the white brick monastery, said the dispute is a "conservative-liberal issue."

"They do not agree with some changes made here. They are scared to death," she said.

The dispute behind the walls of the cloister developed about a year ago, when a new prioress, Mother Teresa Hewitt, was appointed. She introduced television, music, sweets and a new modern lighting system in the chapel.

"It just became a gradual breakdown" of traditions, Sister

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. — Sister Eliane speaks to reporters Thursday outside the monastery where five nuns have barricaded themselves because they fear eviction for protesting liberalization at the priory.

John of the Cross said in a telephone interview from the infirmary. "In the last year, every aspect of our life has changed. Now there are always snacks, lighting, less prayer, TV, radio and music."

Adherents of the Carmelite order, founded in 1562 by St. Teresa Avila of Spain, attempt to remove all intrusions of modern life and dedicate themselves to contemplation and prayer. Although there is no vow of silence, the order is expected to keep speech to a minimum.

Tim Manning, a spokesman for the diocese, said the dispute "is about a basic difference of opinion over the philosophical direction of the order."

Paterson Bishop Frank J. Rodimer said in a statement that the nuns were not being evicted but have "agreed to seek other monasteries in which they can live out their vocations in peace and solitude."

Ms. Ercolano said the nuns have refused to leave "because they fear if they leave they can be accused of abandoning their monastery and stripped of their vows."

"We would like the pope to know we were being faithful but we were being persecuted because of our legitimate beliefs," Sister John said.

Manning said a nearby convent has offered sanctuary to the nuns until a suitable Carmelite monastery is found. Nuns in convents interact with the outside world, coming and going freely, but in a monastery nuns are cloistered.

Manning said the diocese would not physically evict the nuns and is continuing attempts to negotiate a solution.

Mother Teresa Hewitt refused to comment Thursday. Vatican officials in Washington did not return telephone calls.

The monastery was built in 1926 when this community 30 miles from New York was remote and rural. Today, the Spanish architecture stands in contrast to a suburban backdrop of service stations and gleaming office buildings.

First Nazarene revival set

Rev. Jimmy Dell of Phoenix, Ariz. will be speaking at the First Church of the Nazarene, 1400 Lancaster St., at revival services, Wednesday through Sunday. The services will begin at 7 p.m. each day except for Sunday, which will be at 10:45 a.m. and 6 p.m. The public is invited.

Rev. Dell is a former entertainer and recording artist for RCA Victor. He has toured with Johnny Cash, Paul Anka, the Everly Brothers and others, in concerts throughout major cities of the United States and Canada.

Since giving his life to Jesus Christ in 1964, Jimmy has been used by God to communicate the gospel to young and old alike. He has been in constant demand by churches across the United States and foreign countries, and has become a popular speaker at schools, camp meetings, retreats, and revivals.

Jimmy sings from the heart with a country style appreciated by all who hear him, and preaches from a heart of love and compassion, but with a sense of urgency that draws people to the amazing grace and saving power of Jesus Christ, according to officials from the church.

WASHINGTON — The five top U.S. military chaplains are presently all pastors of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

That the five have emerged as heads of the military chaplaincies is a "historic moment" for the denomination, says its officer for federal chaplaincies, Chaplain Loyd W. Lyngdal.

The five are Rear Adm. Alvin B. Koeneman, Navy chief of chaplains; Maj. Gen. Norris L. Einertson, chief of Army chaplains; Maj. Gen. Stuart E. Barstad, chief of Air Force chaplains; Capt. Walter A. Hiskett, Marine chief of chaplains, and Chaplain Herbert B. Cleveland, director of chaplain services for the Veterans Administration.

— An interdenominational organization that works to uphold the nation's religious qualities, the Religious Heritage of America, has named the Rev. Charles R. Swindoll as "Clergyman of the Year."

Swindoll, senior pastor of First Evangelical Free Church in Fullerton, Calif., is among various religious leaders to be honored at the organization's national awards program at the Crystal Cathedral here on Monday, Oct. 10.

Others named for awards include former astronaut James B. Irwin, president and founder of High Flight Foundation in Colorado Springs, Col., as "Churchman of the Year," and Beverly LaHaye, founder and president of Concerned Women for America of Washington, D.C., as "Churchwoman of the Year."

Officers, and will recognize those officers at a special reception Saturday afternoon, Viera said. Aside from the organization's anniversary, this weekend also marks the 63rd year in Big Spring for the church, and the public is invited to a noon luncheon Saturday to help celebrate the occasion.

For further information, contact Viera at 263-8274.

Church appeals order to return millions

BOSTON (AP) — Lawyers for The Bible Speaks fundamentalist church told a court Tuesday the First Amendment should have protected it from a bankrupting order to return $6.6 million to an heiress who claimed the pastor exploited her.

Attorney Norman Roy Grutman told the U.S. 1st Circuit Court of Appeals that Elizabeth Dovydenas was a "healthy, well-educated woman" with a "long history of charity and religion-inspired gift-giving."

Mrs. Dovydenas, whose father heads the Dayton-Hudson department store chain, was depicted by her attorney, Gordon Walker, as a "susceptible, trusting person" who formed dependent attachments and relied heavily on her psychotherapist.

Walker said that Mrs. Dovydenas was so enamored of her grandfather, a Presbyterian minister, that she was confused to learn he was not part of the Holy Trinity.

Grutman argued that Mrs. Dovydenas was no more manipulated by the Bible Speaks pastor, the Rev. Carl H. Stevens Jr., than she was by the many other controlling influences in her life.

Grutman termed Mrs. Dovydenas an "apostate" who had been "fully committed" to the church before she became a "faith breaker." He called her donations of money to Bible Speaks an expression of "religious solicitation" that should be protected under the First Amendment like all free speech.

Mrs. Dovydenas sued the church for donations she made as a parishioner from 1982 to 1986, contending she was lied to and that her unquestioning trust was exploited by Stevens, the church's founder. The U.S. Bankruptcy Court ordered the church to return her money in April 1987 and the $6.6 million award was upheld by a federal court judge.

Last March, Mrs. Dovydenas won ownership of the church's 65-acre headquarters in Lenox with a $3.23 million bid at an auction in federal Bankruptcy Court.

 Mountain Medical Center, Hamby said. "There's your dignity. There's your dignity."
 Hamby repeatedly referred to the use of marijuana that occurred at McIntire's home on the night of the shooting.
 "Have we become so permissive that this sort of activity doesn't mean anything and so damned permissive in this county you won't do a damned thing about it?" the district attorney rhetorically asked jurors.
 Wilkerson attempted in his closing arguments to paint the state's case as an "illusion."
 "There's a basket-load of inconsistencies — a million inconsistencies — in this case, and that's normal," Wilkerson said. "The district attorney is trying to create an illusion; trying to convince you with slight of hand."
 "The district attorney would love to bring in (Crawford's) casket and parade it around this room," he said. "What happened was tragic — but it was an

 "What about Randal Crawford?" Dupree retorted.
 Donald McIntire — pointing at a Big Spring Herald reporter — shouted "you'll have a field day with this."
 The sobbing became more intense. Wilkerson attempted to comfort Lilo and the defendant's mother, but they were inconsolable.
 After several minutes, the defense attorney tried to tell McIntire that Howard County Chief Deputy Robert Puente was waiting to take him up to jail, one floor directly above the accident."

 Wilkerson told the jury that Crawford's death, which he labeled "a fiasco of its entirety," was the accidental result of McIntire attempting to defend his friend, Figueroa, from being "kicked around by a man who thought he was too drunk to drive."
 "It was at that point that Clay drew the line," Wilkerson said. "He told Crawford to go home, but Crawford refused."
 McIntire then ran into the house, got his rifle and went back outside. A few moments later, Wilkerson said, the gun accidentally discharged, killing Crawford.
 Wilkerson also claimed that the prosecution had not adequately proved that McIntire's finger was on the trigger when it fired, and that the only two witnesses to the shooting — McIntire and Figueroa — both gave testimony to the contrary.
 "It was an accident," Wilkerson said. "Clay's father testified that the gun's accidentally gone off before... His finger was never on the trigger."

"Clay is sorry about the death of this man," Wilkerson said in closing. "We can't bring Crawford back from the dead, but we can let (McIntire) get on with his life."
 In asking the jury to consider probation for his client, Wilkerson called McIntire to the stand and asked if he could follow the established guidelines.
 "Yes sir," McIntire responded.
 Wilkerson called several witnesses — including McIntire's work supervisor, and uncle, Ronnie Burgess — to testify on McIntire's behalf.
 One by one, Hamby asked McIntire if he could comply with each of the 10 terms required for probation. On eight occasions during the questioning Hamby reminded McIntire and the jury that the 19-year-old was now a convicted "killer."
 In arguing for a prison term, Hamby told jurors, "I'm sure (Crawford) would've liked probation — but you don't probate a bullet."
 "And McIntire says his lifestyle's changed," Hamby said. "Mine would too if I had a murder rap hanging over my head. Don't think that didn't play a part."

 Hamby said he takes a lot of the blame for the high rate of probations given convicted felons in Howard County.
 "I'm amazed. I just get amazed at the people in the community who go home and read the paper and say 'that damned Hamby.' That son-of-a-gun got probation. I'll bet everybody who testified at that chair has said that, but when it comes to sending the grandmother's grandson to the penitentiary..." Hamby observed.
 Wilkerson maintained that Hamby was distorting the truth.
 "We're not asking you to let him go," the defense attorney told jurors. "He'll be watched, he'll be controlled. His actions will be regulated," if McIntire was sentenced to probation.
 Wilkerson said he wasn't asking for mercy.
 "We're asking for what's right. We can't bring Randal Crawford back, but a 20-year sentence won't help (McIntire). He wants to do right and he's asking for that opportunity," he said.

 Wilkerson contended that McIntire would not be a threat to the community.
 In deciding upon a sentence, Hamby asked that the jury consider three factors: rehabilitation, punishment and deterrence; the last of which he described as being "far and away the most important."

The district attorney asked that jurors not "turn the other cheek" and not be deceived into thinking that giving McIntire probation would be a compassionate act.
 "Randal Crawford was not the only victim that night. All of our dignity was blood splattered... It's a tough job (deciding on a prison term) and we've got to get tough enough to do it," he said.

courtroom.
 "Please, Hardy, one more minute, please Hardy," McIntire's mother begged Wilkerson.
 The banging and shouting of inmates could easily be heard throughout the four-day trial. The trial was interrupted briefly on Tuesday by the excessive noise and language from the jail.
 In asking the jury for mercy, Wilkerson had pleaded they not put McIntire "up there with those animals."
 Lilo refused to let go of her husband. An unidentified man pleaded with her to "remember you have a baby at home who needs you."

 The couple have a 6-week-old daughter.
 Lilo was finally forced to release her husband and gently escorted from the courtroom.
 As McIntire was starting to leave with Puente, Opal Covington, Lilo's elderly grandmother, hugged him tightly, whispering, "We'll pray for you."
 Two hours earlier, Covington had taken the stand with assistance from McIntire's uncle Ronnie Burgess, to tell jurors she didn't believe McIntire deserved "to be sent to the penitentiary."

"He loves his wife. He never slaps his wife around like a lot of people do," she testified.
 Wilkerson — participating in his first criminal trial — admitted he felt depressed by the verdict and sentencing.
 "I feel like my heart's been torn out," he said while the jury was deliberating.
 Asked for a reaction to the jury's verdict, Wilkerson responded:
 "We are extremely disappointed with the sentencing and feel it is totally inappropriate for someone with Clay's background."

State officials: Lawsuit no way to solve crowding

AUSTIN (AP) — The lawsuit filed against the state by Nueces County is not the way to solve the jail crowding problem, state officials said.
 "I'm disappointed they would file a lawsuit. I don't think it will speed anything up," Jerry Hodge of Amarillo, vice chairman of the Texas Board of Corrections, said Thursday. "You can't wave a magic wand one day and the next day have (prison) beds. We have a massive building program underway."
 The lawsuit filed in state court in Austin Thursday asks that the state be ordered to remove inmates who have been sentenced to the Texas Department of Corrections but are being held in the county jail.
 TDC, under a federal court order because of crowded conditions, limits the number of admissions with a quota system for counties. The suit — which names as defendants the Texas Board of Corrections and TDC Director James Lynaugh — says the state has a duty to take its prisoners.
 Nueces County Judge Robert Barnes described the situation as "the biggest rip-off." The suit says there are now about 167 inmates in the Nueces County jail who belong in TDC. It costs $40 a day to house each state prisoner, money that comes from local property taxes, Barnes said.

 Nueces County jail capacity is 387, but the county has 513 prisoners, including 48 being housed in a Frio County facility, he said. Barnes said Nueces County is under a federal court order itself to meet state jail standards.
 Attorney General Jim Mattox said he does not expect the lawsuit to have any substantial impact, and he predicted it would be pending when the Legislature meets in January. He said county officials should develop a plan to present to lawmakers.
 "The forum to resolve this problem is not at the courthouse," Mattox said. "The court can't do anything to really solve the problem."
 "Even if a court orders us to take prisoners, where we going to put them?" Mattox asked. He said the state is doing what it has been ordered to do by the federal court.

San Marcos artist to show at festival

By MEL PRATHER
Special to the Herald

Wade Butler, a professional artist, will be exhibiting his works for the first time in Big Spring at the annual Big Spring Arts and Crafts Festival.

This San Marcos resident will be among the more than 250 exhibitors from throughout the Southwest participating in the local art show Oct. 15 and 16 in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Butler decided to become a full-time artist in October 1984. What made the accomplishment noteworthy is the fact that he had not had any previous training as an artist. At the time he resigned his position as a biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife, he'd spent more than 15 years with that agency.

"I had a hunch that I could learn to draw and paint as good as some others that were making a living," he explained. "I had done a few little pen and ink drawings in the late 70's and had them printed so I could give them away to friends. Other than that, I just jumped in cold turkey."

His decision to give up his full-time job, however, was not taken without giving the matter a great deal of thought. "Being a religious person, I simply felt we are all given gifts by our Creator and we should be trying to use those gifts. My decision to take such a drastic step was primarily based on faith," he explained. The decision, regardless of the original motive, seems to have been the right one, even in the midst of the tough economic times in Texas.

Wade Butler, a resident of San Marcos, will be among the exhibitors at the upcoming Big Spring Arts and Crafts Festival. This popular full-time artist has received a great deal of attention since quitting his job "cold turkey" to try art fulltime four years ago. An example of his work is at right.

He renders tight and detailed pencil drawings of Texas wildlife and nostalgic scenes. He has recently turned his attention to watercolors. "Pencil and watercolor differ greatly, but I like them both. Sometimes I am in a mood for a slow progressing and detailed pencil drawing and other times I want the rapid and free expression of a watercolor," he said.

In either case, he prefers the primary subject in the work to have substantial detail. Many of his pencil drawings are portraits of animals with every hair and feather in place. His watercolors also exhibit more skill than his years of experience might suggest.

The 12th Annual Big Spring Arts and Crafts Festival will be held Oct. 15-16, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday and from 1 to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

Woman's puzzled; lover just wants to be friends

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a very charming gentleman, and we hit it off immediately. I'm 34, divorced, considered great-looking and I'm unattached. He's 42 (also divorced) and great-looking. I am not accustomed to jumping into bed on the first date, but with him, it was the second date. It was a mutually satisfying experience, and we are dating regularly. However, he keeps stressing a point that I find puzzling. He says, "I believe a man and woman can be 'just friends' as well as lovers."

Abby, what makes a man think he can be physically intimate with a woman, and be "just friends"? I do not have sex with my friends.

I keep telling him that if a person is "just a friend," then sex is not even in the picture.

Am I old-fashioned, crazy or correct in my thinking? — 'JUST FRIENDS'

DEAR JUST: You are neither old-fashioned nor crazy. In a love relationship, lovers can be friends as well as lovers — which is ideal. But a man who has sex with a woman, and keeps reminding her that they are "just friends" is saying, "I enjoy sex with you, but don't expect this relationship to grow into something more meaningful or permanent — like marriage."

Give him high marks for honesty, but don't say you weren't forewarned.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe it's a little early to be mentioning Christmas shopping, but maybe not. I am a widow in my 70s, and I have enough scarves, sweaters, colognes and dusting powders to last me a lifetime, but let me tell you what most people my age would really appreciate for Christmas. Cash!

Please don't think me greedy, but I enjoy going out for a nice lunch once a week, and it would be nice to be able to treat a friend. Also, if I had a few extra dollars, I would be able to buy something I really need. It would also come in handy when I want to send someone a nice card.

Perhaps your readers will appreciate this suggestion. It would save them racking their brains, wondering what to give an older person for Christmas. And they need not be concerned that a cash gift of $4 or $5 would seem small. It would please me more than a $10 gift for which I had no use. — ARKANSAS GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Thank you for a suggestion that will be appreciated by gift-givers as well as recipients.

P.S. How about a gift certificate to a nice restaurant?

Ms. Dot Smith and Jerry R. Smith announce the engagement of their daughter, Lisa Gay, to Chancey Gail Puckett Jr. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Chancey Gayle Puckett, Vernon.

Miss Smith is a 1982 graduate of Borden County High School and a 1986 Texas Tech University graduate. She is currently employed by the Quanah Outreach Center, as an alcohol and drug counselor through the Wichita Falls State Hospital.

Puckett is a 1982 graduate of Vernon High School and a 1988 Texas Tech University graduate. He is presently employed by the Vernon State Hospital as an administrative technician II.

The wedding will be at the Monterey Church of Christ in Lubbock at 6 p.m. Saturday.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A new flexibility will lead to a higher income and greater job satisfaction. Changes make a relationship more fulfilling, giving it tremendous potential. A heavy burden will be lifted from your shoulders. Be less critical. Accept what mate or other family member does at face value. Your faith in someone will help turn him around. Your beliefs are the strongest force in your life. Remain true to them.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Rev. Jesse Jackson, actress Sigourney Weaver, actor Chevy Chase, baseball manager great Danny Murtaugh, Hollywood columnist Rona Barrett, World War

II aviator Eddie Rickenbacker.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make a call if you do not hear from a faraway family member today. Find weekend activities that will test your mental as well as physical skills. A new book proves fascinating.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will be flooded with great memories when you see an old movie on television. Make whatever you and family do today count for something. Live life to the fullest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An unforeseen financial complication could affect your ability to travel. Do not fret. A delay is strictly temporary. Insights you gain today help you build better relationships with young people.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Escape from the routine. Leave household chores and get out of the house this weekend. Your financial position will get better and better. Seize an opportunity to be with someone special now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Too many cooks will spoil whatever you are preparing. Going into the kitchen is a welcome change for those who eat on the run all week. Something you know will delight partner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be trying to keep too many balls in the air at one time. Focus on your top priority. Go ahead and indulge your sweet tooth later today. Splurge a little.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A compromise is all that is needed to save a relationship or business deal. Children may be more successful than their elders at getting things right today. Take things one at a time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A hike or dip in the sea would be wonderful if either activity is nearby. Traveling long distances is not in your best interest. Write letters home for reasons other than asking for money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Fun comes in an inexpensive package this weekend. You need to shift gears and move among more positive people. The social scene is more lively than usual. Your tennis or golf game improves.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You cannot continue to carry the weight of the world on your shoulders. You deserve a break and should take it for health reasons. Reading a good book helps you relax.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You need to spend some time alone figuring out where you really want to go with your career or relationship. A very romantic evening could lie ahead. Prepare a special dish.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Others are able to sway you to their political beliefs. A friendship depends on your keeping a secret. Have your car checked out before taking any long drives. Go over insurance matters.
