Candidates clash; local reaction mixed

No ground broken

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL

WASHINGTON — George Bush and Michael Dukakis jostled anew over the death penalty, Social Security, defense, environment and the merits of Robert Bork in their final debate of the presidential campaign.

Neither gave ground, or broke any, on major issues.

From Thursday night's first debate question, when Dukakis reiterated his opposition to the death penalty, even if his wife Kitty were raped and murdered, to the close when Bush said Dukakis had his own sleaze to deal with in Massachusetts, both stuck closely to their standard campaign lines.

For the Democrat, that meant reiterating his allegation that the only way Bush can pay for new Pentagon weapons, cutting the capital gains tax and keeping other promises is to "raid the Social Security trust fund."

But Bush insisted he "learned the hard way" the political peril of advocating any cuts or changes in Social Security, and "I don't want to fool around with it."

"Maybe down the line ... you're going to have to look at it" in the first or second decade of the next century, he said, but not on his watch.

Bush accused Dukakis of raiding his own state's pension fund for $29 million to balance Massachusetts' 1988 budget. Dukakis denied the charge and said he was the first governor to move to fully fund the state's pensions. However, he did recently use that much in surplus pension funds to help balance the state's accounts.

On the death penalty, Dukakis said he is convinced there are better deterrents, and he said his state of Massachusetts boasts the biggest drop in crime and the lowest homicide rate of any industrial state.

But Bush said the death penalty

Debate apathy high

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Seventy-two percent of the Big Spring residents questioned in an informal survey conducted this morning said they did not bother to watch Thursday night's second and final debate between President George Bush and Democratic hopeful Michael Dukakis.

Twenty-three of 32 people questioned said they did not watch the debate and only one person said the candidates' performance changed his mind about who he would vote for — if he could vote.

The only problem for Manuel Armendariz, 315 N.E. 9th St., however, was that he failed to register.

"I was leaning toward Bush, but after last night I would have voted for Dukakis," he said.

LeVier Willis, P.O. Box 1733, said his mind was made up to vote for Bush prior to last night's debate.

He said the vice president represents "mainstream" America while Dukakis doesn't.

Harold Canning, P.O. Box 2698, said he didn't like the views held by the Democratic candidate.

"None of us like liberals. We just can't stand Dukakis," he said.

Bush repeatedly referred to Dukakis last night as a "liberal" who supports liberal policies.

H.W. Wright, P.O. Box 30, said he favors Bush "all the way" and he had already made his decision long before last night.

"I thought he (Bush) did fine (in the debate)," said Wright, who then made an indiscernible remark about Dukakis.

Buddy Calhoun, P.O. Box 2285, said "I've already made up my mind" to vote for the vice president, and fears that Dukakis would "give the country away to the communists" if he was

Concrete block falls from top of Settles

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Three city officials and an engineer examined a shattered chunk of concrete Thursday afternoon on the north side of the Hotel Settles, then sealed the area with police lines and barricades.

An independent engineer estimated the size of the piece as two cubic feet of concrete; Richard Dormier, employed by GSW and Associates, estimated the weight of the block at 300 pounds.

"Concrete usually weighs about 150 pounds per cubic foot," he explained, "and two cubic feet wouldn't be a bad estimate of the size of this."

The concrete, broken into several large pieces, apparently fell from a decorative cornice at the top of the building. City Public Works Director Tom Decell said as he prepared to string yellow "Police Line Do Not Cross" tape around the shattered block.

No injuries were reported as a result of the incident.

Street supervisor Elzie Browne and code enforcement officer Leland Graves helped Decell place the barricades and tie the police tape. Dormier also assisted, and he and Decell joked about the public works director's association with city police.

Decell said he was not aware of when the block had fallen or what had caused its fall, and refused to speculate on the likelihood of further incidents.

"It may be the only one to fall for the next hundred years," he said, and Dormier asked, "How do you know someone didn't go up there and push it?"

The public works director said the barricades would prevent more pieces that might fall from striking automobiles, or youngsters traveling to the Big Spring Boys Club located adjacent to the hotel's east wall.

Decell said city officials would inspect the building today. He indicated he does not look forward to climbing to the top of the 13-story building, he said, "but I probably will."

Big Spring Boys' Club Director Bert Andries said he doesn't know when the chunk of concrete had fallen, but first saw it Sunday.

"It wasn't there when I left here Saturday, but when I drove up Sunday afternoon it was there," he said.

The concrete had shattered on impact; it punched approximately a six-inch round hole through the sidewalk below the north face of the abandoned hotel.

Across the street, Callie Bennett of The Kid's Shop said she first noted the concrete Wednesday afternoon. She said she had been out of town previously but saw the rubble when she drove past the building on Third Street between five and six p.m.

Decell said the building's owner, Gil Cuadra of San Antonio, "probably" will be liable for damages if more pieces of the building fall into the street. He said he did not yet know whether the city would seek payment for the damaged sidewalk from Cuadra.

The abandoned hotel, sporting many broken windows on its lower floors, patched with weathered plywood or left gaping, is "a disgrace" in its present condition, Bennett said.

"It's a shame that the city doesn't do something to clean that up and preserve it," she said of the vacant hotel.

"It should be preserved as a historical landmark. They could clean it up and fix the windows, put curtains or a sheet or something behind them, to make it look better," she said.

She also complained about the condition of streets and alleys in Blocks of concrete are shown at the base of the Settles Hotel. The concrete apparently fell sometime between Saturday evening and Sunday evening, leaving a six-inch hole in the sidewalk in front of the building's north face.

Big Spring, saying that she had to take trash from her business home with her because the dumpster in the alley behind The Kid's Shop is "half-buried in weeds and trash."

She said blind alleys and "nasty streets" are a major problem in the city, which she said "isn't that broke that it couldn't do something to fix" the Settles.

"I remember when that (hotel) was the place, the only thing going in Big Spring," she said. "Every meeting was there, dances, weddings, receptions, everything. And look at it now."

Houston cited as major site of Jamaican sting

By JEFF AWALT
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — A nationwide crackdown on Jamaican drug trafficking netted about 40 arrests in Houston, which has been gaining prominence as a hub for the group's criminal activities, authorities said.

"There's no doubt about it, the message is very clear — not to mess with Houston, Texas," said Ron Parra, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, one of 16 local, state and federal agencies involved in the Houston crackdown.

"We're not going to let criminals continue this type of violence and this type of behavior to this extent in Houston," Parra said Thursday.

Of the 435 arrest warrants issued in the crackdown on Jamaican gangs, called posses, 90 were sought in Houston. Among more than 120 now in custody, 50 had been sought on Houston warrants, authorities said.

"If you compare the statistics, almost 50 percent of all the arrests were made in Houston, more than 50 percent of the cash seizures occurred in Houston and a tremendous percentage of the firearms and narcotics that were seized all came from the Houston operation," said Phillip Chojnacki, special agent in charge with the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The arrests, which netted about 120 nationwide, began Wednesday night and covered 20 states, but were focused in Houston, Miami and New York, authorities said. In Texas, the sweep also included Dallas.

Authorities in Houston began their sweep Wednesday evening and by Thursday morning had arrested 39 people and located 11 others already in custody, and confiscated 12 guns, 45 rounds of ammunition, 35 ounces of cocaine and 35 pounds of marijuana.

Authorities in Dallas netted 10 arrests following an ongoing investigation that began four months ago, said Sgt. Tom Wafer, with the drug abuse division of the Dallas Police Department.

Among the items confiscated were about 200 grams of cocaine, a semi-automatic pistol, several other handguns and a small amount of cash, Wafer said.

Of about $139,000 confiscated in cash nationwide, $63,000 came from the Houston arrests, Chojnacki said. Thirty-five pounds of marijuana also was seized in Houston, he said.

The numbers further convinced officials of Houston's growing role in Jamaican drug traffickers' nationwide operations, officials said Thursday.

"Our cooperative intelligence data indicates these individuals are being exclusively imported into the United States to commit crimes and also for the importation of narcotics," Parra said.

"Houston has become a fulcrum both for the activity coming in and also as they commit their crimes in other parts of the United States," he said. "They return to Houston because of the international flavor of Houston, to more or less cool off until they can return back to the country or back to other (U.S.) cities."

However, John Ross, coordinator of the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force, said the Jamaicans are known for violence and also have been a dangerous force within the city.

"They are, in fact, increasing their operations in the city of Houston to the point that they are becoming a very serious problem," Ross said, citing their willingness to use violence.

"When we are referring to posse activities, we're talking about street-level crack dealers," he said. "And in order to ensure a successful operation, they must use firearms."

School board Billy Pineda to chair advisory committee

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

The formation of an advisory committee on minority concerns was approved Thursday by the Big Spring Independent School District board of trustees during its regular monthly meeting.

Board member Billy Pineda was approved as chairman of the committee, and the six committee members nominated by Pineda were also approved by board.

The members of the advisory committee on minority concerns are: Albert Alvarez, Barbara Davis, Pat Deanda, Hebrew Jones, Raul Marquez and Margaret Trevino.

The formation of the committee — designed to improve communication between the district and the minority community — was initiated by Ford Farris, board president, and discussed at Sept. 15 and Sept. 29 board meetings.

Farris and Bill McQueary, superintendent, will serve on the committee as ex officio members, and will not vote or make proposals but serve in an advisory role as requested.

Possible outcomes of the committee, as stated in the committee outline are: to help the district recruit qualified minority staff, and to initiate "ideas for understanding and betterment of relations among members of the BSISD and the minority community in general."

The committee was approved by a vote of 6-1, with Bill Brooks, who had previously expressed his opposition to the committee, casting the dissenting vote.

However, Brooks did not participate in the brief discussion preceding the vote on the formation of the committee.

Board member Dan Wise suggested that no teachers be included on the committee, saying, "I would like for us not to have any teachers or any education people on the committee. I think it should be a community group."

Pat Deanda, who is also a city councilwoman, is the only teacher on the committee.

In response to Wise's comments, Pineda said, "Of all the people I talked to in the communi-

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The Hispanic Women for Progress met Thursday at the West Side Community Center and heard a report from Billy Pineda, Big Spring Independent School Board member, on the establishment of the district's advisory committee on minority concerns.

Pineda, chairman of the committee, told the 25 people attending the meeting that the school board had approved the formation of the committee and the members whom he had nominated.

Members of the committee are: Albert Alvarez, Barbara Davis, Pat Deanda, Hebrew Jones, Raul Marquez and Margaret Trevino.

Pineda said his appointments to the committee "were very well accepted by the board members."

"I think the people I picked are just right for the committee," he said. "But I hope the people here I didn't pick won't hold it against me."

Asked what qualifications he looked for in choosing the six members, Pineda said he consulted with members of the minority community and picked people who had a history of leadership in the community.

"The anglo community is starting to realize there are problems, not just in Big Spring but all over the country," Pineda said. "I think progress is being made. I think this committee is a big step forward for everybody."

Asked how a member of the community could make suggestions to the committee, Pineda said residents could contact him or any other committee member with a proposal.

He said the committee would not serve to foster "gripe sessions," saying, "If we fight and object to everything we're not going to get anywhere."

Bob Mehan, Howard Junior College vice president, spoke about a program titled New Start that he had been involved with at the University of Arizona which offered minority students work study positions in their fields of interest.

Mehan suggested that members of the Hispanic Women for Progress work with Howard College to initiate a similar program that would encourage local minority students to continue

Reagan opposes federal aid bill for impoverished colonias

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residents of Texas' impoverished colonias could be in line for millions of dollars in federal grants to help make their homes and communities livable, but proposed legislation still has to overcome Reagan administration opposition.

The House took a landmark step Thursday when it approved a bill that would help bring such things as running water and sewage systems to the communities of shacks that dot the U.S.-Mexico border areas from Texas to California.

"This is the first time in its history that the U.S. House of Representatives has passed any legislation to specifically assist the colonias," said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Ron Coleman, an El Paso Democrat.

But the Reagan administration opposes the U.S.-Mexico Border Regional Commission's package of proposed improvements for the border region. The administration claims the measures would create another bureaucracy and that similar efforts elsewhere have been unsuccessful.

Coleman's proposed commission would develop and coordinate comprehensive plans to provide grants and loans for a broad range of economic development projects along the border. It has partisan support in the House, including the backing of Speaker Jim Wright, and has a powerful friend in the Senate — Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas and chairman of the influential Senate Finance Committee.

The Reagan administration said, however, that six major Cabinet agencies are already working to encourage economic development on the border and that any "worthy proposals for projects in the border region can be amply funded through existing programs."

The administration also believes another bureaucracy would be created and it "could complicate and duplicate these ongoing efforts, and would create pressure for the establishment of additional bureaucracies to promote the development of other distressed regions."

The statement also said private investors, state and local governments and taxpayers "are generally in a better position than federal entities to determine whether state and local economic development projects are important and meritorious."

Coleman said he's not surprised by the administration's position.

"It's the same old stuff they give you anytime someone comes up with a way the bureaucracy can deal with problems," Coleman said. "I feel sorry for the administration; they just don't understand the problem, they never have. When they said they had a border assistance program, they sent money to Palm Springs."

Bentsen said the proposed commission could be a "catalyst that sparks investment and business interest in an area that is rich in opportunity but in need of a helping hand" and he hopes the administration "will lend its support to this important effort."

Under the bill passed Thursday, colonias in California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas would receive 10 percent of Small Cities Community Development Block Grant funds to each state.

Coleman said colonias in Texas would have received $4.8 million this year. Figures were unavailable for the other three states, Coleman's office said.

Funds in the first year of the program could be used for such items as preliminary surveys, site engineering and architectural services.

After the first year, funds could be used for actual construction costs, including the costs of hookups to water and sewerage.

Coleman's bill also makes colonias in urban areas such as El Paso eligible for assistance from the Farmers Home Administration.

Texas leads decline in health care

AUSTIN (AP) — America's health care, especially in rural areas, is in jeopardy due to federal budget cuts, and Texas is leading the decline, hospital officials say.

As part of a 20-city tour, health care providers campaigned here Thursday for more public pressure on politicians to reverse the record-setting trend of failing hospitals.

Nationwide, 79 hospitals closed in 1987, up from the previous record of 71 in 1986. From 1984 through 1987, Texas lost 52 hospitals, 28 of which were located in rural counties. Another 15 hospitals closed in Texas this year.

"The end result is a slow but steady deterioration of our entire health care system," said Pamela Bailey, president of the National Committee for Quality Health Care.

The problem is that federal Medicare reimbursements have not kept pace with medical costs, a report by the committee stated.

The hardest hit hospitals are those in rural areas, because they depend more on Medicare reimbursements, the report said. Medicare is the federal health insurance program for people aged 65 and over and for the disabled.

George Atkins, vice president of Humana Inc., one of the nation's largest hospital companies, said Medicare represents 7 percent of the federal budget but has contributed 9 percent of deficit reduction cuts.

"It's not just zeros and decimal points. There are people on the other side. You can't just willy-nilly cut the budget and not have an effect," he said.

Terry Townsend, president of the Texas Hospital Association, said Texas hospitals are hit hardest, in part because of the "shameful" level of Medicaid spending.

Medicaid is a federal-state health care program for the needy. States determine eligibility, and the federal government reimburses a percentage of the state's expenditures.

Texas is one of the lowest ranking states in Medicaid spending, Townsend said.

Clements says more prison beds needed

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he will ask legislators to expand the Texas prison system by adding 10,000 beds and pass tough laws for a crackdown on drug trafficking.

But a Dallas County commissioner, blaming Clements for overcrowding in jails, said Thursday he will ask the Commissioners' Court to file suit against the state and the governor.

Commissioner John Wiley Price made the comment while Clements was in Dallas to receive the Crimefighter of the Year award from the Greater Dallas Crime Commission.

However, Clements said Price's charge was "an old wives' tale" without foundation.

Price, at a news conference, said that if commissioners don't vote Monday to proceed with the suit, he would consider filing it on his own.

Clements, speaking to the crime commission, said the state will be powerless to meet its future criminal justice responsibilities unless it first solves the problem of capacity in Texas Department of Corrections facilities.

Clements, as part of an expansion plan he started four years ago, said he would also ask the next Legislature to approve 10,000 additional beds. That would provide a total of 20,000 new beds.

Fire danger serious in parts of state

LUFKIN (AP) — Residents in portions of East Texas are being warned not to burn anything outdoors until the area gets some rain.

The Texas Forest Service issued a fire danger alert Thursday for areas east of Interstate 45 and the Lost Pines region in Bastrop County in Central Texas.

"We're asking that outdoor burning be limited to those who are trained, experienced and equipped to handle fire emergencies," said Mahlon Hammetter, forest service spokesman.

"We've had a long stretch of dry, windy weather combined with already dry vegetation" that increases the likelihood of an outdoor fire, Hammetter said.

Local educators oppose score-related funding

STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

In quite the same manner elementary school children are awarded plastic stars for high marks, the State Board of Education wants school districts with students scoring higher on state tests to receive more money.

The board will recommend to lawmakers next month that the Legislature approve spending as much $100 million to reward school districts that show gains on the student achievement tests, board Chairman Jon Brumley said.

"It is something we should be doing," Brumley said. "If you can reward districts for academic achievement, I think that is beneficial for the whole educational system."

Board members are expected to give final approval to the idea at their November meeting.

Brumley said he envisions using the state's basic skills test — the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills — as the chief criterion for awarding the bonus money.

But the Texas Association of School Boards and the Texas Association of School Administrators are on record as being opposed to any funding system based on TEAMS scores.

At their annual convention in San Antonio earlier this month, association members approved a resolution opposing such a funding system.

Opposition to a funding system based on TEAMS scores was widespread at the convention, said Bill McQueary, Big Spring Independent School District superintendent.

McQueary said he was "totally opposed" to the recommendation, proposed by Brumley, adding that TEAMS instruction is already overemphasized because of reforms instituted as a result of House Bill 72.

The overemphasis on TEAMS instruction can lead to "the tail wagging the dog," according to Gary Rotan, Coahoma Independent School District superintendent.

"When you start doing those things — tying funding to test scores — its going to change what TEAMS was all about," he said.

The TEAMS testing was initiated to measure whether students were acquiring the basic skills necessary for educational advancement.

But both superintendents expressed the concern that if state funding was attached to test score performance TEAMS preparation would be further emphasized and could overshadow normal curriculum.

"If you attach money to (TEAMS results), there is absolutely no way it would be emphasized any less," McQueary said.

J.F. Poyner, Forsan Independent School District superintendent, said his district receives relatively little state funding and would not be affected by such legislation.

Poyner, who attended the state board meeting, discounted the importance of the recommendation, saying "it was one of the most insignificant parts of the meeting."

And he questioned whether the money offered as an incentive would increase the quality of education school districts provided.

Earlier this summer, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby told the Texas Select Committee on Education that it should always look for ways to reward school districts that do a good job and punish those who do poorly.

The committee is studying changes in the state's $11 billion-a-year school finance system in the wake of a court ruling that the system is unconstitutional.

But Brumley said he would prefer to avoid a system that punishes low-scoring districts. "Those districts are the ones that need the money the most," he said. "I think it would be counterproductive to withhold funds."

Brumley, a Fort Worth businessman, said the proposed reward system would support school reforms enacted in Texas and public schools four years ago and should receive from $50 million to $100 million in funding a year.

"There has to be enough money involved that it will encourage school districts to compete for it," Brumley said in Wednesday's edition of the Dallas Morning News. "If improved test scores can bring a district an extra $1 million or $2 million, it will get their attention."

At present, TEAMS is the only examination administered in all public schools in the state. The math, reading and writing test is given to all students in grades one, three, five, seven, nine and 11 every year.

Prisoner refuses food

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Authorities continue to watch a 31-year-old parolee who has refused food and demanded to be kept alone while confined in the Howard County jail.

Jesse Nunez Torres, 31, remains incarcerated in lieu of $50,000 total bonds on charges of attempted escape and armed robbery. Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard confirmed today.

The armed robbery charge stems from an April 9 incident at the local Burger King, according to officials.

"He is a unique person, an extreme person, and he will not address himself to the norms of society or to the norms of confinement," the sheriff said.

Standard said Torres was briefly returned to the upstairs jail Thursday, but the inmate "got on the bars" and created an uproar. Torres has torn plumbing fixtures out of cells in the county jail and has torn up plumbing in the city's jail, Standard said today.

It is possible, according to a letter from Dr. John S. Farquhar that Torres at some point will require medication to subdue him or could require force feeding. Farquhar's letter indicated that neither was appropriate "at this time."

Torres is being taken every other day to see the doctor, Standard said. In his letter, Farquhar identifies Torres' personality as "psychotic."

The letter indicates that should confinement to a state mental hospital become necessary Farquhar will assist in the procedure. It also says the doctor will prescribe medication to subdue Torres if necessary.

According to Farquhar's evaluation, the letter says, Torres' health is good enough to allow him to withstand his self-imposed fast for some time.

Torres is confined in a special cell downstairs, Standard explained. The sheriff said the cell had been built "within the past three months" at a cost of $1,300.

It is not specifically designed for Torres, he said, but was designed to hold any inmate of Torres' type who "is not compatible" with normal jail accommodations, the sheriff said.

Standard said Torres could remain confined in the basement cell until his trial, but said he did not expect that to occur.

"If he continues on his present course, I expect that at some point down the line hospitalization will become necessary," the sheriff said.

Torres could be confined at Vernon State Hospital, Standard said, or a facility with similar secure arrangements.

Torres began acting up following a visit from a family member Oct. 6, Standard said, but was relatively quiet now.

The sheriff said Torres had refused to visit with his court-appointed attorney and has indicated a dislike for that attorney, Wayne Basden. Standard said the district court has been made aware of that situation "and no changes are being made at this time."

Torres' scheduled release date from mandatory supervision parole status is March 12, 1992, according to District Parole Officer David Harman.

Harman said Torres' mandatory supervision status was the reason he was returned to the county after 90 days in the Texas Department of Corrections following Torres' July 14, 1987, parole violation hearing.

"Mandatory supervision means that (parolees) calendar time and their good time together adds up to their release date," Harman explained. "The legislature made it a law that instead of allowing them an early release, they would have to serve out their good time on the street."

Torres was returned to the county Oct. 4, Standard said.

District Attorney Rick Hamby said Torres' trial on armed robbery charges is not likely to be scheduled before December, because his defense attorney needs time to prepare his case, and must be able to talk to Torres in the process.

ty, (Deanda's) name came up 70 to 80 percent of the time."

Wise said he had no objection to Deanda and supported the formation of the committee, but said, "I think we'll maybe have a conflict of interest. I can't tell you one right now, but I can see maybe some conflicts."

"I think Mr. McQueary or Mr. Farris said they would like to have teachers on the committee," Pineda said.

Both Farris and McQueary have previously suggested that at least one teacher be included on the committee.

Wise submitted a motion that no educators be appointed to the committee, but when asked for a second to the motion no board members responded and the motion died.

Al Valdez was the only other board member to comment on the committee before a vote was taken.

"I want to make sure that the people in the community understand that the committee is just to improve relations with the minority community," he said.

"We are reaching out to improve communication, and I don't see any reason why we shouldn't do it."

After formation of the committee was approved by the board, Pineda said, "I think you're going to see a difference in communication between the minority segment of the community and the school board."

Farris concluded discussion on the committee, saying, "I look forward to having great things come from this committee."

After the meeting, Pineda said the committee would meet in mid-November "to get to know each other better and prioritize our goals."

He said he based his appointments on community leadership and input he received from talking with members of the minority community.

Police beat

A 16-year-old Big Spring girl is listed in stable condition at Scenic Mountain Medical Center this morning as a result of injuries she sustained in a two-vehicle accident Thursday night, a nursing supervisor said.

Susan Denise Cox, 3603 Connolly St., was injured shortly after 7:30 p.m. when the car she was driving exited a private drive in the 1900 block of Adams Drive and collided with a car driven by Casey Evan Richbourg, 18, 1402 Runnels St., according to police reports.

Richbourg and a 16-year-old passenger in Cox's vehicle were also injured, but were not hospitalized, reports stated.

Cox was cited by police for failure to yield right of way from a private drive.

Big Spring police also reported investigating the following incidents:

A woman who resides in the Ponderosa Apartments, 1425 E. 6th St., reported she was assaulted by two people she knows.

The manager of Furr's Supermarket, 2301 Scurry St., reported an unknown person attempted to steal 16 cartons of cigarettes, valued at nearly $200.

Marquez granted parole relief

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has granted a petition for habeas corpus relief to Juan Marquez Jr., convicted in 1984 of murdering Robert Dutchover Jr.

Marquez was convicted of shooting Dutchover twice in the head and once in the upper right abdomen, according to court records. He was paid $500 by a Clem Sanchez for the shooting, according to an accomplice's testimony in the case, because Dutchover allegedly owed Sanchez money for drugs.

The court's decision overturned a finding of 118th District Court that Marquez had used a deadly weapon — a gun — in the commission of the murder. Its only effect will be on the date at which he may be found eligible for parole under the 75-year sentence handed down by the jury, according to 118th District Court Clerk Glenda Brasel.

That decision was not made by the jury, according to Marquez's petition. The appeals court ruled the finding improper because a gun is not necessarily a deadly weapon and because the jury was not presented with the special issue of the gun nor instructed concerning the gun.

According to a spokeswoman for the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, Marquez was supposed to be reviewed for parole in December 2003.

Mary Rigney, a public information officer staff member for the board, said Thursday the court's ruling will mean that the court must send the board a copy of its finding overturning the affirmation of use of a deadly weapon in the case.

A copy of its finding also must be sent to TDC, Rigney said, and "TDC will refigure his (eligibility for parole) date using all the good time he was not able to earn because he was a flat-time inmate."

She said the Texas Department of Corrections has sole jurisdiction concerning a possible earlier release date for Marquez, but that pending its findings the review date will remain in December 2003.

Marquez appealed the case to the 11th Judicial District Court of Appeals in Eastland. Chief Justice Austin McCloud denied the appeal, stating that accomplice testimony from a parolee, Ralph Rodriguez, in the trial was corroborated sufficiently by the testimony of four other witnesses who were not accomplices to link Marquez with the slaying.

He also found that the speedy trial provision of the seventh amendment to the U.S. Constitution had not been violated because the 118th Judicial District filed its declaration of ready for trial 107 days after the indictment against Marquez.

was one of the "questions of values" that separates him from Dukakis. He said capital punishment is especially needed for cop-killers.

On taxes, Bush denied that he was misleading the public with his pledge never to raise taxes. "I want to keep this expansion going. I don't want to kill it off," he said.

Dukakis accused Bush of breaking his no-tax pledge "three times in the past year." He derided Bush's flexible freeze proposal as an "economic slurpee," but refused to discuss what taxes he would raise in a bind. Dukakis, who has said he would entertain tax increases only as a last resort, claimed tougher tax collection could bring in up to $50 billion a year from cheats and scoundrels without overburdening honest taxpayers.

Bush, asked to name a single military program he would scrap, singled out an $850 million heavy truck program that he said had been forced upon the Pentagon by an influential congressman.

Bush again depicted Dukakis as a liberal and said "he ran on the left in the Democratic primary."

He also charged the Democrats started the mud-slinging with their "personal attacks on me" at the Democratic convention.

Dukakis said he would not rule out modernizing the U.S. land-based missiles. But he defended his opposition to the Strategic Defense Initiative and the mobile MX missile.

Asked about his links to a Boston group, "Jobs with Peace," that supposedly favors shifting 25 percent of the military budget to domestic programs, Dukakis at first said "I don't happen to share that goal."

lected president. Asked if he watched the debate, one unidentified man responded: "No sir, I didn't. I wouldn't waste my time."

Angela Wright, P.O. Box 3332, said she wished both candidates "would have talked more about the issues, but Dukakis did more than Bush."

Wright said the vice president should look the word "liberal" up in the dictionary before using it so often.

"He'd understand that it means caring," she said, adding that the current administration doesn't know what that word means.

Wright said the Reagan administration claims that it has created many new jobs, however, she takes issue with the quality of those positions.

"They claim there's a lot of jobs, but they are all for $3.35 an hour making pizzas. That's why people are working two or three parttime jobs and wives are going to college so they can supplement their husband's earnings," she explained.

Wright also said that under the Reagan administration a minority of "rich people" are actually running the country.

Harlen Thornton, Route 3, Box 62 C, said prior to watching last night's debate he had already made a decision to vote for Dukakis in the Nov. 8 election.

"I thought Bush did a little better, relatively speaking, than the last time (debate), but he didn't change my mind," he advised.

Karen Reeves, 1401 E. 18th St., said the "debates don't really give a clear picture of the candidates" and "just took up television space."

She added that the debate "reaffirmed" her decision to vote for Bush.

Some of the people questioned said they didn't watch the debate because they were working, but an equal number stated they felt watching politicians for 1½ hours was an exercise in futility.

Several people advised they watched "bits and pieces" of the debate, however, they didn't feel they could make an informed comment.

One unidentified woman said, "I didn't need a good laugh," when asked if she watched the debate.

their education.

The local community is "about 30 to 35 percent hispanic, but I'm lucky if I see 8 percent Hispanic students at Howard College," he said.

In the past, students who dropped out of school or graduated from high school and chose not to continue their education could find jobs paying decent wages, he said. But changes in the Texas economy are leading many business to require college degrees or technical training, he said.

"The new Texas is going to require skilled technicians and a literate workforce," Mehan said.

The Hispanic Women for Progress also signed up students for their tutorial program that begins Tuesday from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Approximately 40 students have signed up for the program, which is open to all age groups. The tutoring groups formed by the organization include four certified teachers as well as volunteers.

Discovery and NASA's future

You can talk about the scientific, economic and military values of the U.S. space program. But it was the dramatic sight of the Discovery spacecraft setting down gently on the runway at Edwards Air Force Base and the sound of the national anthem that sent chills down the spines of millions of Americans.

It was a truly remarkable experience, giving off the same patriotic vibrations as do pictures of the Statue of Liberty, of the Marines raising the flag at Iwo Jima, of Gen. MacArthur returning triumphantly to the Philippines, and of Americans landing on the moon.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration now must turn its attention to carrying out an ambitious flight schedule that calls for a permanently manned space station by the end of the century.

NASA officials have outlined a 57-mission schedule between now and April, 1994, although nobody at this point can say that all of those flights can or could be carried out by that date.

"The setting of a schedule as though it's a Greyhound bus leaving for Peoria is not the way a space program should be run," declared Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, the first American to orbit the earth. Obviously, safety must be the first consideration in determining if and when each flight shall be made.

Beyond that, NASA and the president and Congress must have a clear idea not only of where we are going in space and how we will get there, but also why we are going and what national goals we hope to meet. There are scientific, economic and military reasons for going into space — reasons that are vital to our national well-being. A primary task of the next president will be to help the nation articulate its space goals and then to lead us in carrying out those goals.

A plea for assistance

By LT. TEX W. ELLIS

Since its inception in 1929, your local Salvation Army has served the communities of Howard County with great response and accountability. However, the time has come when your Salvation Army must ask Howard County for its extended financial support.

The local United Way graciously provides us with about 7.8 percent of our operating budget, and without their support we would not be able to provide some of the services that we now provide. Nevertheless, that leaves us having to depend totally upon the people of our community and their generous donations and gifts for the remaining 92.2 percent of our budget.

Because of finances, we are at the present time having to evaluate the possibility of closing down our Social Services and Emergency Shelter. Because of the traffic that we have on a daily basis this would be a great imposition to our community. We are doing everything possible to prevent such an action, however, we must also deal with reality.

Your local Salvation Army is here to serve in any way possible, but we are a non-profit organization and therefore we depend entirely on the public for our support. I fully realize that we are presently in the middle of our yearly United Way campaign and that the economy is a little unstable, yet I fully believe that Howard County can exceed that goal plus help the various agencies raise the remaining monies that we all need to make our agencies work for the less fortunate of our County.

The community revealed its potential back in 1981, through successfully raising the money through our "Light of Hope" camaign to build our present Community Center at 814 W. Fifth Street. That was also a great year for our United Way in reaching their goal.

It is a beautiful and workable building for our community services. However, no sufficient amount of money was set aside for the continuing operating expenses of our services. I am a firm believer that when we say "yes" to those that are seeking our help we are at the same time helping them say "no" to crime and other destructive influences.

Last year your local Salvation Army provided 12,983 meals to transient and resident people of Howard County. More than 2,000 additional meals were served during our summer youth feeding program.

We also provided emergency lodging for 1,285 transients and 1,105 residents. In addition, we were able to send children to summer camp and were able to respond to three local disasters, touching 31 people directly with assistance.

Should you have any questions concerning your local Salvation Army and what it does please feel free to stop by our office at 814 W. Fifth Street or call us at 267-8239.

Enemies work to free hostages

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Israeli and Iranian officials are working to release most, if not all, of the nine American hostages being held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian captors, according to high-level U.S. intelligence sources.

The Iranians are involved because they hope to once again pull the strings on an American presidential election. They apparently prefer the idea of George Bush being elected president.

The Israeli officials involved also appear to favor Bush's victory, but have a clearer objective. If they succeed, they want the American traitor Jonathan J. Pollard, who spied for them, to be released from a U.S. prison and sent to Israel.

In fairness to Bush, our sources swear that neither Bush nor any of his representatives have been involved in any of the negotiations. The last thing Bush needs is an endorsement from the Ayatollah Khomeini, one Bush aide told us.

Why would the Iranians prefer George Bush to Gov. Michael Dukakis? Our sources say the number one reason is an old one — better the devil you know than the devil you don't know, or in this case, the "great Satan."

Last week, the man believed to be the spiritual head of the pro-Iranians in Lebanon who are responsible for the kidnappings, denied any attempt to meddle in the election. Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah demurred that neither he nor any radical Shiites would do that.

He expressed no preference between the two candidates, but noted that Dukakis had made some "harsh statements" on the hostage issue. Then he conceded that the Iranians prefer to deal with Republicans.

Fadlallah's disclaimer is a hollow one in light of the 1980 election when the Iranians dangled hostages in front of the voters as a symbol of Jimmy Carter's shortcomings. Carter had been immobilized by the issue of the 52 American hostages who were held in Tehran for 444 days.

The hostage issue came to symbolize the impotence of Carter's foreign policy efforts during his last year in office. He accentuated it by confining himself to the White

Jack Anderson

House during part of the campaign, a move which was derided as "the Rose Garden Strategy." The hostages were released on Reagan's Inauguration Day.

Whether a homecoming for the American hostages would help George Bush is uncertain. Bush has professed a hands-off policy toward negotiating with the Iranians, as has Reagan. So the candidate could not take direct credit for bringing the hostages home.

A release could even backfire if the public perceived that the White House was using the hostages for political advantage. Voters could blame the administration for waiting until just before the election to get serious about the fate of the hostages.

After the release of an Indian hostage Mithileswar Singh last week, both Reagan and Bush denied involvement in any negotiations for the return of Singh, who has resident alien status in the United States. According to our intelligence sources, that is true. Both the Iranians and Israelis have initiated the hostage release attempts on their own.

Until now, no intelligence officials have confirmed that the Iranians are using the hostages to get Bush elected. Nor has any hint of Israeli involvement appeared anywhere.

But, the Israelis are not new to this game. They were prime mediators in the 1985-86 arms-for-hostages deal. At every critical juncture when American interest flagged, Israeli officials came back with more ideas, pushing harder for the continued negotiations between Iran and the United States.

Israel has always regarded Iran, a nation of Persians, as far less hostile to Israel's existence than most of its Arab neighbors, especially Iraq, which is viscerally anti-Israeli.

We reported in May on secret negotiations between Israelis and Reagan administration officials to trade for Pollard. Until then, Israel had turned its back on Pollard, claiming he was a renegade.

No American traitor has ever been released in the past to the foreign country that paid him to spy. The Justice Department will not cut a deal on Pollard, so the Israelis took their case to the White House and the State Department.

If Pollard is allowed to leave, the United States would probably expect a hefty favor in return, and the American hostages might fit the bill.

DRUG DILEMMA — One of the problems of a prolonged war is the availability of medical supplies. Since the end of the Vietnam War, the United States has not had to worry about shortages.

A military data source in Washington, USNI Military Database, recently studied the pharmaceutical industry's potential to gear up for war. Their report showed that drug companies are dropping to foreign competition.

Many are moving their plants overseas or have been acquired outright by foreign investors. An increasing amount of raw materials used in the production of American medicines come from foreign suppliers.

For several critical bulk drugs, there are no American suppliers. For other bulk supplies, there is only one American source and that includes basics such as ether, insulin and tetracycline.

The good news is that if foreign supplies were cut off, the American companies could step up their production drastically to meet an emergency.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The American Civil Liberties Union has taken on a new cause — women who want to choose their children's last name.

In Rhode Island, a married woman must give her child the surname of her husband, even if she is separated and even if the husband has consented to another name and even if the husband is not the child's father.

The ACLU doesn't think the state has a right to dictate children's names. What will George Bush make of the most recent sinister plot by the ACLU to undermine everything that is good about America?

One man's opinion on abortion

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I watched one of those anti-abortion demonstrations that have been going on in Atlanta for weeks. These people aren't going to stop abortions if they demonstrate for 50 years.

But they're front-page news and the networks have noticed them, too, and you get the feeling that's enough for them.

As I watched I remembered a guy I knew. Call him Larry.

He married this lady and they lived together for a couple of years and then the trouble started.

She said he didn't pay enough attention to her and cared only about his work, and that she was going stir-crazy.

He said he was young and was just trying to get ahead. Someday, he promised, he'd be around more and they would have things.

"Things aren't what I want," she told him. "I want you."

She left him one night and moved in with a girlfriend.

He went a little crazy. He begged her to come back, promised to spend more time with her, and he even sent her flowers every day for a solid week.

She finally agreed to see him again, but only in the presence of a marriage counselor.

"I just can't go back to the way it was," she said.

The counselor showed the couple how to do a better job of expressing their needs and how to argue without throwing furniture.

Larry's wife never moved back into their apartment, but she did begin to spend more time with him and, inevitably, they spent a night together.

A month or so later, quite abruptly, Larry's wife announced she wanted a divorce.

"But we did all this work together," he said. "I thought we could make it."

She said she wanted a life of her own. She said marriage just didn't fit into her plans at the moment.

There were some tears on his part and some more begging, but she stood firm and hit him up for $250 for a deposit on an apartment she wanted to rent.

"This is like being hung," he said, "and having to pay for the rope."

The divorce went through, but it was months later before he found out the truth about the $250. His ex-wife didn't use the money for a down payment on an apartment.

She used it for an abortion. She had become pregnant the night they spent together.

He called her and he cursed her and said she had killed his baby.

She said, "The last thing either of us needed at that point in our lives was a baby. It would have been wrong to bring a child into the world under those circumstances."

It took a while, but he finally realized she was absolutely right.

I wondered if those crazies demonstrating about abortions would listen to a story like that. Probably not.

Let's get serious

To the editor:

I hate to think our judicial system a joke, and I surely hate to think of the courtroom during a murder trial as the proper place for pompous display, condescension or theatrics. It happens, though, and not just in Big Spring. However well our court plays as an example, it would seem that the facts, clearly organized and presented, would be sufficient for a jury without the extra hoopla so popular with attorneys-at-law these days. I realize that not all men are compassionate by nature; nevertheless, the courtroom should be a place reserved for the honorable deliverance of judicial expertise, and not a showcase for excessive dramatic display.

Crawford death a 'tragedy'

To the editor:

During the Arthur McIntire trial, the defense attorney left people who might not have known Randal Crawford with a pretty rotten opinion of him. I've been a close family friend for over 26 years. And knew Randal all his life.

He was a sweet, manly and God-fearing boy who loved his family and God. Randal saw and lived through much tragedy in his young life. Most of which was within his family.

He was like most of the youth of our time, daring and sometimes reckless, but was compassionate, brave and always helping someone, never thinking of himself. He was a loving son, grandson and brother and they loved him.

His death was a tragedy for the Crawford and McIntire families and I feel sorry for them both. But please remember him as he really was and know how his family and friends must feel and the emptiness he left.

Soviets, U.S. exchange books

BOSTON (AP) — Literary glasnost is turning a new page in publishing in the Soviet Union, with the appearance of books formerly found only "under the table," say organizers of a super-power book swap.

The display of 1,000 Soviet books at the Boston Public Library features everything from Russian science fiction to "Dr. Zhivago." Boris Pasternak's classic that was banned for many years in the Soviet Union.

"For our country which was closed, so to say, for a long time, this process has a tremendous influence on the whole population of the country," Evgueny G. Semenikhin, who is traveling with the display, said Thursday.

Censorship still exists in the Soviet Union but "now it's absolutely incomparable with what it was two to three years ago," said Semenikhin.

Sympathy low for gay victims

NEW YORK (AP) — The public is generally sympathetic toward people who have AIDS, but it has little or no sympathy for people who became infected with the AIDS virus through homosexuality or intravenous drug use, a survey found.

A total of 75 percent of the respondents to The New York Times-CBS News poll said they had "a lot" or "some" sympathy for people who have AIDS and 19 percent said they had "not much" or "no" sympathy.

But the level of sympathy declined when the two groups at highest risk of getting the disease were mentioned. Past polls have shown negative public attitudes toward both groups, homosexuals and drug users.

Only 36 percent of those interviewed had a lot or some sympathy for "people who get AIDS from homosexual activity," and 26 percent said they had a lot or some sympathy for "people who get AIDS from sharing needles while using illegal drugs."

Homosexuals and drugs users make up the overwhelming majority of people with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which is caused by a virus that damages the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to infections and cancer.

Attorney-client privilege upheld

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A lawyer for parents of a man killed in a hit-and-run accident said there is a "fleeting felon out there who is laughing" because a judge refused to force the driver's attorney to reveal his client's identity.

Palm Beach Circuit Judge Timothy Poulton on Thursday denied a motion to force defense attorney Barry Krischer to give the name of his client on grounds that the attorney-client privilege of confidentiality blocked the disclosure.

"The plaintiffs' case has tremendous emotional appeal and it is difficult to rule against the plaintiffs," Poulton said, who delivered the ruling after weeks of review. "But I am convinced the law requires it."

The victim's mother, Mildred Baltes, said the family "will appeal if we have to to the Supreme Court."

Krischer was approached by the driver the day after the March 9, 1986, accident and was asked to seek a plea bargain arrangement without revealing his client's name.

Accutane is cause of birth defects

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Studies showing that Accutane, an acne drug derived from Vitamin A, is as serious a cause of birth defects as thalidomide have raised concerns that vitamin A itself might cause birth defects, a researcher says.

Dr. Edward Lammer of the California Birth Defects Monitoring Program reported Thursday that Accutane is as hazardous as thalidomide, causing 40 percent of women to miscarry and 25 percent to have children with severe birth defects if the women take it early in pregnancy.

In a separate report earlier in the meeting, Lammer said that another drug related to Accutane, called Tegison, also appears to cause birth defects.

Both Accutane and Tegison are derivatives of vitamin A.

Scouts weigh policy of survival program

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — National Boy Scout officials are considering a ban on killing animals as part of wilderness survival exercises following an outcry by animal rights groups over a recent camping trip, a spokesman said Thursday.

The leader of the national group that complained to the Scouts about the killing welcomed the announcement, but says he wants misdemeanor charges filed for cruelty to animals and wants the leaders involved dismissed from Scouting.

Killing rabbits and chickens is an inappropriate lesson for youngsters and is not in keeping with Scouting goals of good citizenship and compassion for other living things, said George Cave, president of Trans-Species Unlimited.

"We're very pleased to hear about that," said Vice President Dana Stuchell. "It's something they should make sure never happens again."

The National Boy Scouts of America announced Wednesday that it would examine its policy, just two days after national Scout spokesman Frank Hebb had said he foresaw no policy change. No timetable for making a decision was announced.

"We looked at the wilderness survival merit badge pamphlet and it put food at the very bottom for survival," Hebb said. "We said we should take a look at it to see whether we should ban this sort of thing."

At a camping trip last weekend, scouts were shown how to kill a rabbit and then prepare it for eating. Five to 10 scouts then agreed to try it themselves. The same procedure was used with four or five chickens, said William J. Hawkins, executive director of the Keystone Council, the local Scout affiliate.

The rabbits and chickens were hit on the head with sticks, had their throats slit and were placed upside down on branches so the blood would drain out, said Don Walker, a member of the committee that organized the camp.

About 75 to 90 boys and 20 to 30 leaders from 10 troops attended the camp.

Gunman releases U.S. consul

VERACRUZ, Mexico (AP) — A lawyer who was holding a U.S. consul and his secretary hostage at gunpoint surrendered today after a 14-hour siege apparently caused by a dispute over a family inheritance, officials said.

The gunman seized U.S. Consul Edwin Culp and his secretary at their office in downtown Veracruz, U.S. Embassy and Mexican officials said.

The gunman, who had demanded that some of his relatives be arrested, "agreed to talk about his problems with Mexican government officials," said U.S. embassy spokesman Bob Hugins.

Officials identified the gunman as Francisco Delfin Perez, a lawyer from Cordoba, near Veracruz. He was arrested and being taken to a detention center in the state capital of Japapa, where he faced kidnapping charges.

Alfredo Algarin Vega, assistant secretary of the Veracruz state Interior Ministry, said the gunman had demanded that his two brothers, a sister-in-law and a notary be jailed for allegedly trying to cheat his mother.

Prize stirs controversy at home

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Novelist Naguib Mahfouz, the first Arab to win the Nobel Prize in Literature, is garnering both praise and criticism in his native land.

Some said he should have received the award long ago. Others criticized his support of the 1979 Camp David peace agreement between Egypt and Israel and his book attacking the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser's domestic and pan-Arabist policies.

Mahfouz, the first Arab writer to win the award in its 87-year history, has vividly portrayed poverty in Egypt. The Swedish Academy honored him in Stockholm Thursday with the 1988 prize for literature for advancing the art of the novel, a relatively new genre in Arabic literature.

One of his books, "Children of Gebelawi," has been banned since 1959 in his own country because it offended religious leaders. But the Swedish Academy cited the book as it awarded the prize, saying, "Different norm systems are confronted with tension in the description of the conflict between good and evil."

Nicaragua official criticizes U.S.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The foreign minister of Nicaragua said Thursday that he hoped the next U.S. president would help repair relations with his leftist government.

Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto Brockmann told delegates to the 43rd General Assembly that "the problem in Central America has a first and last name. It is called U.S. intervention."

"When the United States stops making war on Nicaragua and stops involving its lackeys in this war, then the international situation will be immensely eased in Central America," D'Escoto said.

The minister claimed the reputation of the United States had sunk to an all-time low internationally, and "all agree that the dirty, immoral and illegal policy against Nicaragua is the basic reason for this discredit."

China gets unemployment tax

BEIJING (AP) — China will institute an unemployment insurance program to aid the millions of workers who may lose their jobs as the nation reforms its inefficient labor system, an official daily said today.

The China Daily quoted Labor Minister official Ma Dingchang as saying enterprises will be required to pay 1 percent of their payrolls into the fund, and jobless workers will receive relief payments for up to two years.

Ma said the system is now being tested in several cities, and that in Hangzhou, the capital of coastal Zhejiang province, 1,800 unemployed people have already received a total of $32,000 in benefits.

The official Xinhua News Agency said on Thursday that the northeast China industrial city of Shenyang has set up what is probably China's first unemployment offices.

Planned Parenthood more than birth control

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: For the first time since she was born, my 11-year-old daughter needs something from me that I can't give her. She's started to ask a lot of questions about how her body is changing, some new feelings she's experiencing, and how to get a boy she likes to notice her.

When I was her age, I had the same questions in mind, but I didn't have the nerve to ask my mother. I'm glad my daughter feels close enough to me to ask, but I'm not comfortable enough to give her any answers. Besides, I'm not even sure I know the right answers. I suppose I should consider myself lucky. She says some of the "older" girls are talking about birth control! Abby, will you please steer a mother in the right direction? — TRUSTING YOU

DEAR TRUSTING: It may be too early for your daughter to ask about birth control, but it's not too early to get help from Planned Parenthood. In more than 800 Planned Parenthood centers across the country, highly trained professionals do a lot more than just provide birth control. They have a variety of educational programs for parents and children to help them discuss sexual issues in an open, comfortable manner. They also may have educational counseling programs just for parents, and others just for teens or pre-teens.

You also may be interested to know that most Planned Parenthood clinics, in addition to providing birth control, offer medical services and testing, counseling and/or referrals for: pregnancy, infertility, sterilization for women and men, abortion, sickle cell anemia, cancer, AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases, hypertension, diabetes, vaginal infections, prenatal care and menopause. In other words, in many parts of the country, Planned Parenthood is a "one-stop reproductive health shop" for men and women of all ages.

A little-known fact: Planned Parenthood does exactly what its name implies. It not only helps couples prevent having babies they are not ready for, it helps couples with fertility problems, so that they can have the babies they want.

The cost? Only what you can afford to pay. Nobody is turned away because he or she is poor. Call Planned Parenthood today. It's listed in your phone book.

There will be a $12 preregistration fee per family with a $5 fee for each additional family member, or a $15 late registration fee. Registration includes a barbecue lunch to be served at the college.

Presidential debate highlights

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Here are highlights of the debate Thursday night in Los Angeles between George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

TAXES:
Dukakis said any promise by Bush not to raise taxes is "not worth the paper it's printed on" because Bush has gone along with tax increases under the Reagan administration. Bush said the "way you kill expansion is to raise taxes" and in his final statement added that "I want to hold the line on taxes."

SUPREME COURT:
Bush said he would have no ideological litmus test for appointing Supreme Court judges, but "I don't want to see us going to a liberal majority that is going to legislate from the bench." Dukakis said he has appointed more than 130 people as judges and when Bush praised President Reagan's appointments to the high court Dukakis mentioned Robert Bork, critically.

QUAYLE:
Bush strongly defended his vice presidential running mate, Dan Quayle, and said "he could do the job" if tragedy thrust him into the Oval Office. Dukakis replied that Bush had said in advance that the selection would "tell all...and it sure did."

DEFENSE:
"We have to have modernization if we're going to negotiate with the Soviets," Bush said.

LOS ANGELES — Vice President George Bush, left, and his Democratic rival, Michael Dukakis, acknowledge supporters' cheers after their televised debate Thursday in Pauley Pavillion.

Dukakis said "military security and economic security go hand in hand" and "there's no way we can build" all the weapons systems Bush wants built.

CRIME:
Dukakis unequivocally opposed the death penalty, even when he was presented with a hypothetical question in which his wife, Kitty, was depicted as a crime victim. Bush said he supported the death penalty for heinous crimes and called this a "big difference" with his opponent.

SOCIAL SECURITY:
Bush vowed he'd never cut the federal pension program, no matter what Dukakis said. The Democrat cited Reagan administration efforts to do just that.

Texas Both sides claim victory

By TIM LOTT
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Presidential debate No. 2 had a clear winner — according to Texas Democrats and Republicans — but experts say it wasn't a landslide for either Michael Dukakis or George Bush.

"I thought in terms of organization, both candidates had some problems in organizing their thoughts into a two-minute and one-minute discussion session," said Ebrahim Keshavarz, leader of the Rice University debate program.

"In terms of any major mistakes it didn't seem either one tripped up badly," he said.

Partisans tell a different story. Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen, who watched Thursday's nationally televised debate in a hotel suite in Houston, afterward told a Democratic rally that Dukakis "not only won, he won big."

"With all that pressure on him, he stood up and he delivered and he put the Democratic party on the road to victory in November," the Texas senator said. "He won because he gave honest answers to the problems and concerns facing America."

Bentsen's Republican counterpart, Sen. Phil Gramm, said: "I didn't eat any popcorn, but it was a great movie. (Bush) was more confident, more relaxed, and I believe he gained ground, given that he was already ahead."

Ann Richards was on hand for the Houston rally.

"Well, I'm that lady from Texas with all that hair," she said of Bush's animated reference to a woman at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta who criticized him.

"You think George's skin's a little thin?" she quipped.

Dr. Jim Brown, professor of political science at Southern Methodist University, said Vice President Bush was more at ease than Massachusetts Gov. Dukakis.

"I don't think that anyone really committed any major errors," Brown said. "I don't think anyone hit a home run. Overall, I think Mr. Bush probably did a better job than Mr. Dukakis."

"I think it's going to be an uphill fight," for Dukakis, Brown said. "Now, the whole campaign favors Mr. Bush in the way it's evolving. I wouldn't be at all surprised if Mr. Bush pulls back a bit and is not as aggressive on a personal plane."

But Democratic Attorney General Jim Mattox brushed off the notion the Dukakis campaign has an uphill battle.

"I've think we've always got our backs against the wall, but I think we're winning," Mattox said. "I think we're winning because I think we're going to get the people out to vote."

State Republican leaders said Texas will see it differently.

"I think Texans have had enough of Michael Dukakis' doom and gloom politics," said Bush's Texas chair Tom Loeffler.

"Michael Dukakis said his liberal views are not an issue in this election. He's dead wrong," Gov. Bill Clements said.

But Texas chair of the Dukakis campaign, Railroad Commissioner John Sharp, disagreed.

"I think (Dukakis) came off extremely credible in terms of debt reduction and in terms of deficits," Sharp said. "I don't think anybody believed that you can have all the spending programs and all the tax cuts that Bush is promising and get rid of the trillions of dollars in debt. Dukakis was very honest."

INS frees illegal aliens held in 'debtors prison'

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — More than six dozen illegal aliens, including three tearful children, were found by authorities in a house that served as a debtors prison for immigrants who could not pay their smugglers.

Ninety-one people were discovered in the house when it was raided by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and 14 were suspected of being the smugglers, authorities said.

All the aliens were from Mexico and owed from $300 to "whatever the market would bear" to the smugglers, known as coyotes, Tom Gaines, assistant district director for the INS, said Thursday.

Neighbors noticed the coming and going of strangers and numerous cars at the rental home beginning about three weeks ago, said Donna Gimondo, who lives next door to the three-bedroom house in this Los Angeles suburb.

"We'd see three or four, as many as five get in a car, and it would be gone a half an hour and then just the driver would come back," she said.

She said the household was mostly quiet. "But on trash days there would be just this humongous pile of trash outside."

Twelve of those arrested were arraigned Wednesday on conspiracy and illegal immigrant smuggling charges. Two are juveniles and will be deported, authorities said.

INS officers raided the home Sunday as part of a four-month investigation into an alleged alien smuggling ring, Gaines said. "Some of them had just arrived, some had been there a couple of days," he said. "There were no guns found in the house. The smugglers just had guards at every door. It was plain intimidation to keep them there."

In similar cases, illegal aliens who cannot pay their smugglers try to get word of their plight and need of money to relatives, authorities say.

Ms. Gimondo, who witnessed the raid, said the people in the house did not try to flee, and she saw only two people in handcuffs. She saw one family that included a mother, father and three children.

"One kid was 3 to 6 months old and (the mother) had him cuddled in a blanket," she said. "One was about 2½ to 3 years old and the oldest was a 4-year-old boy. All were crying."

While she thought there may have been as many as 30 people in the home, "I was quite shocked... that there were so many in the house, and quite relieved that it was cleared up," she said.

Helen Sklar of the National Center of Immigrant Rights in Los Angeles predicted such situations will continue.

Her organization has been critical of the INS and immigration laws, saying they don't address the social problems that make people desperate enough to try illegal entry into the United States.

"The law considers the pull factor and not the push factor," she said.

Highland Mall
— then and now

When Highland Mall opened in 1965, it was the talk of the town — in fact, the talk for many miles around. Folks made a special trip to see this most remarkable development — an enclosed shopping mall where shoppers could stroll from store to store without stepping outside!

It quickly became a popular place to meet friends, to shop and dine at the new cafeteria. Furr's was one of the original tenants; Sew What and Highland Barber Shop opened that year, too.

Enclosed malls are commonplace today, but Highland Mall regards its heritage with pride. The management and tenants feel a special obligation to its customers because Highland was the FIRST.

South Mountain Corporation was the original developer, and Highland was locally owned for many years. Although West Texas Corporation purchased it two years ago, most of the stores are locally owned. Two new merchants — Vicky's and Art & Frame Center — recently joined the mall roster.

Sherry Rose is Property Manager, Susan Knous is Promotion Director and Victor Zapata is Operations Manager.

Big Spring (0-2, 0-4) at Lake View (0-2, 2-3)

The Big Spring Steers are still in search of their first win of the season, and this week, the trek leads them to San Angelo to take on the Lake View Chiefs.

The Steers have yet to play up their potential on both sides of the line. It's either been a case of Big Spring playing good offense while the defense suffers, or vice-versa.

The Chiefs have struggled of late as well. After opening the season with wins against Ballinger and Lubbock, Lake View has watched its offense go south and victories disappear.

What the heck — the Steers are due for an explosion, and this week is as good as any.

Big Spring 24, Lake View 13

C-City (1-0, 4-1) at Clyde (1-0, 4-1)

The Colorado City Wolves will try to establish themselves as the team to beat in District 7-3A when they travel to Clyde tonight to take on the Bulldogs.

The winner of this one will have the inside track to the district crown, as both teams are undefeated in league play. Neither team had it easy last week, however. The Wolves relied on their defense to down Merkel, 6-0, while a missed two-point conversion by Coahoma enabled Clyde to escape with a 13-12 win.

The teams are evenly matched, but the feeling in this corner is that the Wolves will rise to the occasion.

C-City 18, Clyde 14

Irion County (0-0, 4-0) at Garden City (0-0, 4-0)

Another crucial district matchup will occur in Garden City tonight, when the Irion County Hornets and the Garden City Bearkats tangle in a district-opening battle of the undefeateds.

Both teams are own spotless 4-0 records this season, and both are rated in the top 15 of the Harris Poll. In this tough, tough district, the winner of this game will have a big say in who wins the league crown.

This one will be close, but the Bearkats have too many weapons — and too much to prove.

Garden City 28, Irion County 23

B-County (0-1, 1-5) at Klondike (1-0, 3-3)

The Borden County Coyotes will try to salvage a disappointing 1988 season when they travel to Patricia to take on the Klondike Cougars in six-man action tonight.

Klondike seems to have emerged from its killer non-district action a stronger team, while injuries have contributed to the Coyotes' woes.

The Cougars just have too much of everything and should keep their district record spotless.

Klondike 56, B-County 24

Grady (1-0, 2-3) at Loop (1-0, 4-2)

Another team that seemingly has emerged from the non-district fires a stronger team is the Grady Wildcats, who travel to Loop Friday for both team's second district game of the season.

The 'Cats opened district play in an impressive fashion, downing Sands, 32-18. Loop, meanwhile, defeated Borden County.

It is our belief that the Wildcats — if they're not looking ahead to next week's clash with Klondike — should be able to stay undefeated in district.

Grady 38, Loop 12

Dawson (0-1, 2-4) at Sands (0-1, 4-2)

Coach Randy Roemisch's Sands Mustangs are fighting mad after dropping the district opener to Grady last week. The outmanned Dawson Dragons dropped a relatively close decision to Klondike.

Against Grady, Sands played a strong defensive game, but the offensive firepower was lacking. The Mustangs gained only 78 yards in the second half.

This week will be different. Damien Zarate, Eric Herm and Jay Johnston will help Sands regain its offensive punch. As usual, the defense will do its job.

Forsan (0-1, 1-5) at Wall (0-1, 1-5)

These two teams will be battling to stay out of the cellar. Both are much alike, fielding strong traditions, but having a rebuilding year with youth and inexperience.

This one will go down to the wire, but the home field crowd will help carry the Hawks to victory over the Buffaloes in a close one.

Wall 14, Forsan 12

Ballinger (0-1, 4-2) at Coahoma (0-1, 2-4)

Both of these teams are coming off heartbreaking losses in their district opener. Ballinger dropped a 21-14 decision to Abilene Wylie and Coahoma was nipped 13-12 by pre-district favorite Clyde.

The Ballinger Bearcats are a long-time powerhouse, but they were hit hard by graduation and are down some this year. By no means are they pushovers, though.

The Coahoma Bulldogs don't have all the talent in the world, but they have a truckload of heart, and they are the most improved team in the area.

Ronnie Ruiz and Brad Madry will lead the way, and Coahoma will make the two-point conversion this time. The Upset Special of the Week is...

Coahoma 15, Ballinger 14

McCamey (1-0, 2-4) at Stanton (1-0, 4-2)

The winner of this game may very well be in the driver's seat for the district crown.

The McCamey Badgers' record is misleading, because of a tough non-district schedule. The Buffaloes have a good team, if they are mentally prepared.

It's a sure bet Coach Dale Ruth will have his Battlin' Buffs in the right frame of mind for this one. Watch the Wishbone go, go, go.

Stanton 21, McCamey 13

Showdown set in 8-A

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Editor

In all probability, the Garden City-Irion County contest could end just like last year's encounter between the two teams. Garden City coach Sam Scott wouldn't mind, but Irion County coach Gene Zeigler wouldn't like it very much.

Last year in Mertzon, Garden City's Codie Scott booted a 37-yard field goal with time running out, giving Garden City a 17-14 District 8-A victory.

That season was maturing process for both teams. Under first-year coach Gene Zeigler, the Hornets finished with a 3-7 record, losing three games by five points or less.

Scott, like Zeigler, was at his first year at a new school. The Bearkats also went 3-7, losing just as many close games as the Hornets.

But what a difference a year makes.

The Wildcats and Hornets both sport 5-0 records, ranked No. 9 and 13th, respectively, in the state Harris Poll.

This is just one-half of what probably makes District 8-A the toughest Class A league in the state. Also tonight, No. 7 Rankin plays No. 10 Water Valley.

Zeigler is accustomed to playing in a tough league. "This is a pretty unique situation, four teams ranked that high. I was an assistant coach at Odessa High for 10 years, and you get used to it," said Zeigler.

In Garden City, everybody is pumped for the game, said Scott. "Everybody in Glasscock County is excited about this one. The kids are really excited, they're ready to play today," he said in a Wednesday interview. "Sometimes you have to guard against them getting to psyched before the game, I've seen teams exert all their energy during the week, or even in pre-game." One of the main reasons for each team's success has been lettermen. Garden City returned 17 lettermen, including 15 starters. The Hornets return 14 lettermen, including 12 starters.

The teams have different offensive concepts, which are successful, and both play hard-nosed defense.

The Hornets, led by tailback Ricky West, prefer to stay on the ground. The 6-1, 185-pound West has rushed for 750 yards. Fullback Jason Pounds has 400 yards and quarterback Rocky Lauder milk

Time for West Coast rumble

By The Associated Press The Los Angeles Dodgers are a team of free swingers who leave a lot of men on base and the Oakland Athletics are primarily fastball hitters who'll convert mistakes into extra-base hits.

Los Angeles has a weaker starting pitching staff and a weaker bullpen than Oakland and defensively, the teams are about even.

Those are the impressions from two advance scouts who followed the teams in the final weeks of the season. One National League advance scout gave The Associated Press his analysis of the Athletics and an American League advance scout revealed his thoughts on the Dodgers. Each scout followed the team in the other league for a week near the end of the season and forwarded evaluations to his front office. Both asked that their names not be revealed. Here are summaries:

LOS ANGELES — Fans stand in line for the World Series tickets early Thursday morning at Dodger Stadium. Fans waited for hours in line, and found out that tickets would only be sold by telephone.

Los Angeles Dodgers
"To me, they don't have the hitters that Oakland does. I can't see Oakland needing any more than five games. Outside of Kirk Gibson, they don't have anyone who's going to hit the ball out of the ballpark, while Oakland has seven guys who are capable of that."

"Defensively, John Shelby has to cover a lot of left field and right field because both Gibson and Mike Marshall aren't the best of outfielders."

"They always say good pitching stops good hitting. I don't think their bullpen's as good as Oakland."

"The Dodgers are a fastball hitting club. Left-handed pitchers have good success against the Dodgers. And I think Bob Welch will do well against them. Now, individually, Marshall, you get two strikes on him and he would chase a breaking ball that's three feet outside. I would never throw him a strike with two strikes in the count."

"Shelby he'll never walk. He'll chase high fastballs, low curveballs."

"Gibson, you got to keep the ball up on him. He likes the ball down and away. He's the kind of guy who can look bad one pitch and come back and hit the next pitch out. He hasn't been hitting much lately except for those two home runs against the Mets."

"Steve Sax, he was in a slump all the time I watched him. He hits the ball to right-center and up the middle — every good. If he tries to pull the ball, he's in big trouble. He's a fastball and a high-ball hitter. He seems to be hot right now."

"Alfredo Griffin, you shouldn't try to get cute with him. He's not going to hurt you with his bat. Just throw hard fastballs. He won't walk either. He swings at everything."

"Mike Scioscia is a good hitter. He's gonna hit the ball some. He's a high-ball hitter. You got to get the ball down and in on him."

"The things that sticks out in my mind about the Dodgers hitters is time and time again, Marshall and Shelby strike out with men on base. I would bat Scioscia between them."

"Orel Hershiser, what can you say? He's intelligent, has control over four different pitches. Just outstanding."

"Tim Belcher, you can count on him for four, maybe five, six innings. He comes at you real hard. He lets it all out for the first, four five innings."

"Ricky Horton, he tries to catch the outside corner. And then comes back inside if he thinks you're going to go the opposite way. He seems to be off with his control. They can use him to pitch to one or two left-handed hitters."

"Brian Holton and Jay Howell, they've been pitching pretty good."

Jockey killed during race

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Venezia, a jockey since 1964, had talked about retiring at the end of this year.

In the fifth race on Thursday's card at Belmont Park, the 43-year-old Venezia was killed.

Venezia, the rider of more than 2,000 winners in more than 21,000 races, went down when his mount, Mr. Walter K, broke a leg. Venezia was then kicked in the face by Drums in the Night.

Robbie Davis, the rider of the other horse, was taken to a hospital for treatment of shock. Venezia's mount, a 3-year-old gelding, was humanely destroyed.

Mr. Walter K broke his right foreleg going down the backstretch of a 1 1/16-mile allowance race. Venezia attempted to pull up the gelding, then went off the horse to his left and fell cross-wise on the track, directly in the path of Drums in the Night.

Baldwin wins 4th straight bout

LAKE TAHOE, Nev. — Former Big Spring boxer Juan Baldwin rolled to his professional victory in as many tries, stopping Michael Curaburia of Tucson, Ariz in the first round.

Baldwin knocked out Curaburia with straight right with 1:20 remaining in the first round. The fight was supposed to be televised live by the USA network, but Baldwin's bout started moments after the telecast went off.

Ramona Harris, Ruby Honea, Annie Ward and Betty Ray Coffee journeyed to Big Lake Saturday and won first place in the second flight of the tournament, shooting an even par 72.

In two-lady scramble play Monday, Annie Ward and Patti Woodall won first place with a two-over-par 39 for nine holes.

The golf club will have its quarterly meeting following play Monday evening. Officers for the year will be elected. All members are urged to attend.

Sullivan leading by one stroke sl NIO (AP) — Mike Sullivan had the lead. Corey Pavin had an ace. And Tom Watson had some high hopes.

"The last time I was seven under (par) was eight years ago, in the second round of the 1980 Southern Open," Sullivan said after scattering seven birdies and an eagle across his card in a round of 63.

He chipped in twice Thursday in the seven-under-par effort that provided him with a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $600,000 Texas Open.

Pavin also had an eagle, a hole-in-one, in a 64 that left him one stroke back.

Watson, who broke a three-season non-winning string in the Nabisco Championship on this course last year, had to overcome a pair of three-putt bogeys in a four-under-par 66.

Bobby Wadkins, who has collected $1.4 million in a 14-year career that has yet to produce a tour title, had a collection of nine "3's" in a 64 that tied him with Pavin for second.

Opposing cheerleaders beware of midshipmen

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A Naval Academy tradition of passing cheerleaders from opposing teams up through the stands at football games is being attacked by Yale cheerleaders, who say the practice subjects women to roving hands.

Academy officials said Thursday the custom is harmless fun and that any physical contact is of an innocent nature, but a Yale dean labeled it a form of sexual assault.
 The Yale cheerleading squad, with the support of the dean of student affairs, sent a complaint

Thursday to the academy that cited the conduct of midshipmen at an Oct. 1 game at the Annapolis, Md., institution.
 Near the start of the game, midshipmen carried away at least three female Yale cheerleaders, but managed to get only one into the stands, according to Anna Chavez, captain of Yale's cheerleading squad.

 Jim Kiser, an academy spokesman, said he was sure the midshipmen meant no harm.

The bat woman cometh

TULLAHOMA, Tenn. (AP) — Martha Cruce will have a special interest when Jose Canseco or Kirk Gibson go to bat during the World Series. She made their bats.
 The two big hitters for the Oakland Athletics and the Los Angeles Dodgers are among the 200 major league players that Cruce custom crafts bats for in her special work room at the Worth Sports Co.
 It's a labor of love that brings a special pride when she sees one of her clients doing well, like when Canseco became the first player in big league history to hit 40 home runs and steal 40 bases in the same season.
 "It felt real good," Cruce said about learning that Canseco had accomplished the twin 40.
 Some of her other best-known patrons include Andre Dawson, Glen Davis and Alan Trammell.
 When Cruce was flown out to Oakland, Calif., to meet Canseco on Sept. 20, it was a day of firsts for the 38-year-old mother of one.
 She took her first plane trip, met her first major league player and saw her first major league game in person.

 "I enjoyed it. It was fun. I got to see two games. I just loved it. I get excited watching TV and I really yelled up there in the stands," she said.
 "I congratulated him (Canseco) that they had won the Western Division and I presented him with a bat I had made. He had his 40 home runs and I saw him steal his 38th base. I signed the bat for good luck and we had another one mounted for him, a bat and a ball."
 Later Cruce talked shop with Canseco in the A's dugout.
 "I asked him how he felt about a woman making his bat and he said, 'You do a good job and I feel good about it.'
 "He autographed a bat for me. I have it under lock and key at home," she said laughing.
 "He gave me credit for the 40-40."
 Though Cruce has been making bats for four years, she says she still has moments of worry when she thinks about making a bat that a career swings on.

 "What you have to remember, all those Oakland players, they kill that fastball."
 "But no matter how much scouting you do, if the pitcher doesn't throw where the chart recommends, it doesn't matter how much scouting you do."
Oakland Athletics
 "I don't think they're a great team, but they're a good team."
 "You have to get the game out of hand so Dennis Eckersley doesn't have a chance to save the ballgame. Oakland's vulnerability is in their middle relief. Eric Plunk and Greg Caderet are a little flexible, a little so-so. Gene Nelson has done a good job for them."
 "I don't know how much the four-, five-day layoff is going to hurt. Two days is good. But four, five is going to hurt them. They'll lose their intensity. They might have a letdown."
 "Jose Canseco, he hits everybody. Fastball, breaking ball, everything. He's been tough on the breaking pitch. I think he looks for it. He's so powerful. I've seen him hit the ball off the handle and it went 370, 400 feet. When he gets the breaking pitch, he can really hit it. You better outguess him. If you don't, you're in big trouble."

 "Mark McGwire. He has hit well the last month or so. When he was out five, six games with his bad back, I think he was hurt a lot worse than the media knew. The primary thing is his stroke. He's got a real short stroke for a big guy. I would give him breaking pitches, then come upstairs. I think he would rather have the low pitches."
 "When you have to play Mike Gallego at second base, that doesn't help you. Even though he doesn't do a bad job defensively, he's not going to do that much of a job offensively."
 "Luis Polonia, I think you'll see him against right-handed pitching. He's all right."

 "Dave Henderson isn't great in center field, he doesn't have the speed, but he makes up for it by getting a good jump. He's having a career year. I would give him breaking pitches, if possible. He's the kind of guy who rises to the occasion."
 "Carney Lansford, he's tough. He had a bad second half but he looks like he's getting his rhythm back."
 "The rookie shortstop, Walt Weiss, is just having an outstanding year. He is outstanding defensively and he's not helpless with the bat."
 "Defensively, Terry Steinbach is OK but they're hurting some when Ron Hassey catches. Steinbach has a pretty good release. You can run on Hassey anytime. He is not a quick mover behind the plate. You might see Hassey catching Eckersley. They have great rapport. They think somewhat alike."

 "Dave Stewart has a good, live fastball and now he's come up with that split-finger, which gives him a lot of confidence. You used to be able to sit on his fastball."
 "Storm Davis, if you make him pitch, he'll walk a few people. You have to lay off that high fastball. He's a five-, six-, at the most a seven-inning pitcher. You make him bring the ball down in the strike zone, he'll walk a few."
 "Bob Welch, I think he's outstanding. His fastball runs in on the right-handed hitters and he cuts the fastball to run away from the left-handed hitters. He doesn't throw a slider but his cut fastball is close to a slider."
 "Eckersley, his control has just been astronomical. He doesn't give in to you. The only bad thing you can say against him is that he's more effective against the right-handed hitters than the left-handed hitter."

Showdown

 has completed 45 percent of his passes. The Hornets outscored opponents 37-9 in non-district play.
 Scott lets it be made known that he is impressed with West, but not in awe. "Basically they're going to run the football at us. They say Ricky West is one of the premier running backs in West Texas, but I've got a tailback here that I'll match up against him," said Scott.
 That tailback is senior Tony Ramirez, a 5-8, 160-pounder, who has fueled the Garden City rushing attack all season. Ramirez has gained 823 yards in 125 carries, a 6.6 average per carry.
 The Bearkats can also do it up top, led by the passing combination of Scott's twin sons, quarterback Codie and receiver Jodie. Codie, who's coming off a hand injury, has completed 22 of 49 attempts for 527 yards. Jodie is averaging 21.7 yards per catch with his 18 receptions.
 "Codie chipped a bone in his throwing hand in the Stanton game. He had a cast on it and didn't play offense against Roscoe. But he came out Monday and started throwing. He'll be ready to go," said Coach Scott.

 Garden City's offensive versatility has Ziegler worried.
 "They are very well balanced," said Ziegler. "One week they'll run for 300 yards and you think they're a running team. The next week they'll pass for 300. That's what they have over the rest of the other teams in the district. Either we're good running or good passing teams."
 With all this firepower, there's still a chance it won't be a high-scoring game, because both teams have such good defenses. Irion County is allowing less than 200 yards per game. The Hornet defense is led by coach's son Todd Ziegler, a 6-0, 170-pound lineman, and Randy Catano, a 5-10, 150-pound linebacker.
 The Bearkat defense is led by ends Eleazar Madrid and Tony Aragon and linebacker Weldon Hillger. Garden City allowed non-district foes 142 yards per game.
 Coach Ziegler figures it could be a close finish again. "I'd say it could very well be like last year. I don't look for a high-scoring game, but I don't expect a 7-6 game either. The winning team will have to score two or three times," said Ziegler.

JODIE SCOTT

 In his stern but cocky way, Scott agrees with Ziegler to an extent. "I don't think a lot of points will be scored, unless we put them on the board," Scott said. "I don't think they can score a lot on us unless we give up the big play. It will probably be a good defensive game."

 And as far as Scott is concerned, the same ending as last year would be okay.

FAITH REMINDS US OF OUR MOST PRICELESS POSSESSION

Of all the pleasures we have known
 And all the treasures we will own,
 There's just one thing that stands alone,
 Apart from all the rest.
 We learn it's not a brand new car,
 The means with which to travel far
 Or talent to become a star,
 Which some of us possessed.
 It isn't any sort of rank,
 Or big deposit in the bank;
 But our good Father let us thank,
 With gratitude expressed
 For something which is truly grand
 That our great leaders wisely planned:
 It's all the freedom in our land,
 With which we have been blessed.

For what avail
 The plow or sail,
 Or land or life,
 If freedom fail?
 —Ralph Waldo Emerson

"Behold, I proclaim
 a liberty for you,
 saith the Lord."

Worship at the Church of Your Choice

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I ran away from home a few months ago and now I'm in reform school for some things I did while I was on the run. I hate my life, because there isn't any hope for me. My parents always fight and no matter what I do when I get out of here I know I won't be able to stay straight. We have a chaplain who suggested I write you because you might have some ideas. — T.S.

Billy Graham

DEAR T.S.: Right now one of your biggest problems, I suspect, is that you feel like no one really cares about you or loves you. This makes you think you must not be worth loving — and that's one reason you don't even like yourself. But God can change all that!

There are many suggestions I could offer to encourage you. But the most important thing I can tell you (in spite of what you may feel) is that there is someone who loves you very deeply — God! God created you, and he didn't make a mistake when he allowed you to be born. He also loves you, and it hurts him to see you drifting through life. How do I know he loves you? I know it because Jesus Christ, God's only Son, was willing to go to the cross to die in your place. Why did he do that? He did it so you could be forgiven of your sins and become part of God's family by receiving Christ into your life.

No, you may not understand everything about God's love for you, but right now you can ask Christ to come into your life — and he will. Then each day you can turn to him through prayer and by reading his word, the Bible. He will help you live as you should, and as you face decisions about your future he will guide you — because he loves you and knows what's best for you. You're at a crossroads in your life. Don't take the wrong road and leave God out of your life (even if it seems easier right now), but take Christ's road and begin to follow him.

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: We have been married five years, but I don't know how much longer it can last. Everyone says the first couple of years are the hardest, but it has only gotten rougher. Do you have any suggestions on how to put love into our marriage again? What is love anyway? — Mrs. T.R.

DEAR MRS. T.R.: Many people today define love only in terms of physical attraction or mutual interest. But true love is far, far deeper than this. Somewhere not long ago I ran across this practical outline of what it means to love someone. Think about those four letters: L-O-V-E.

The "L" in "love" stand for "listen" — learn to listen to each other and understand your spouse's viewpoint instead of only insisting on your own way. The "O" in "love" stands for "overlook" — learn to overlook the faults and imperfections of the other person; after all, you are not perfect, either. Constantly pointing out the other person's failings only leads to resentment. The "V" in "love" stands for "value" — learn to value each other and be thankful for each other's good qualities. And the "E" in "love" stands for "express" — learn to communicate with each other.

Kansas pastor takes reins at local church

A former Kansas Outstanding Pastor of the Year began serving as pastor Oct. 2 for the First Church of God, 2009 Main St.

Rev. Darrell Hendrickson comes to the community from Dodge City, Ks. A graduate of Kansas Wesleyan University with a degree in music, the Dodge church under his leadership saw a large growth and completed a $250,000 gym, from which they were debt-free by the time he left.

He also served as vice president of the state, district youth quiz team director, and state youth advisor. In 1979 he was elected as Kansas' Outstanding Pastor of the Year.

He was involved in community activities including the Ministerial Alliance, the Hospital Chaplaincy program and a drug rehabilitation program titled "New Chance," in which the ministers rotated giving devotionals.

In his leisure time, he plays tennis. He ranked seventh in the state in men's 45 singles.

Pastor Hendrickson is awaiting the arrival of his wife, Glenda, who is in Dodge trying to sell their home. She is a teacher in the public school system in Dodge. Mrs. Hendrickson has received public attention for her work in the migrant program in Kansas.

She was a presenter at the National Migrant Convention and was being groomed by the state of Kansas to be a program developer and travel throughout the nation presenting programs for other teachers. Glenda also has been active in the church at the state and district levels. She shares her husband's enthusiasm for tennis.

They are the parents of Dan, a freshman at Big Spring High School, and Tim, a freshman at Wichita State University in Wichita, Ks.

Pastor Hendrickson sees as his goals for Big Spring Church of God as: to minister to the needs of the church and the community; to see growth in numbers and spiritual depth; and to have love and to care for the people.

Services are Sunday School 9:45 a.m. and worship hour 10:50 a.m. and Sunday evening at 6:30 p.m.

The church will host an installation service Nov. 6 at 2 p.m. The service is open to the public.

EL PASO — Juan Lucero holds the Sangre de Cristo statue he carved out of aspen wood. It is one of the many religious carvings he keeps at his home in El Paso. Lucero is a santero, technically skilled and historically versed in the ancient art of carving statues of religious figures.

Man says his art work is form of prayer

EL PASO — Some might call the house cluttered. Juan Lucero, a man whose many interests could cramp a castle, calls it home.

A love seat in the dining area accommodates half a dozen iconographic paintings and a few Wal-Mart flyers. Two electronic keyboards hoard space in a modest parlor, home to a myriad of books, more than one by the mystical philosopher Carlos Castaneda. White walls frame reproductions of medieval and Spanish colonial armor, and a pockmarked, pub-caliber dart board.

Lucero, 40, is an optometrist by trade, and a musician-sculptor-artist by mandate of his soul. Though his diversions are numerous, his passion is singular. Lucero is a santero, technically skilled and historically versed in the ancient art of carving statues of religious figures.

"I consider these works a prayer form," said Lucero, gazing fondly upon a nearly completed statue of San Jose, St. Joseph. "That's why they are not for sale." Lucero grew up in Velarde, N.M., a tiny town buried in the mountains between Santa Fe and Taos. His interest in art began at a young age, when he would help his father paint storefronts. Lucero's teen years found him enamored of music. Playing the

"When you're drilling holes in the hands of Jesus, you're forced to think about what the passion of Christ is all about."

drums brought in cash. Then Vietnam called. After that, graduate school and the needs of a small family.

"I started carving santos when I was about 22," said Lucero, who has two sons, ages 10 and 6, and is divorced. "I had to sell them then to put food on the table and to pay my way through school. But now I don't have to. I'm glad. Santos really don't belong to anybody. They're not owned. They have a life of their own. In the old days, the santos would travel from home to home, depending on who was in need of them."

Lucero's home presently houses a handful of santos.

There is San Jose, who stands about 3 feet tall and features a crowned baby Jesus on his right shoulder. A vine-wrapped wooden staff sprouts from his left hand. Lucero never glues any of his masterpieces together; most parts are removable, held in place through tricks of exquisite craftsmanship.

San Jose is crafted in the "hollow skirt" tradition. The torso and head are solid wood, but the statue's base consists of a wooden frame wrapped in plastered cloth. The figure's resulting light weight was born from necessity, as children often were enlisted to carry the santos.

There also is a small carving of the Holy Trinity, and — a personal favorite — the striking image of a crucified Christ.

"This icon is called 'Sangre de Cristo,' the blood of Christ," the artisan explained, leaning the 4-foot cross on his shoulder. "It was a popular icon when the Spanish occupied New Mexico, and that's where we get the name for the Sangre de Cristo mountain range."

Born from aspen and milled pine, the santo employed two months of Lucero's spare time. Its distinguishing features include a genuine suede loincloth and a tiny angel sitting quietly off Christ's right hip. The angel presses a chalice beneath a bleeding rib wound.

Lucero surmised that most santos carve for a combination of three reasons: diversion, income and philosophical introspection. "Me? Purely philosophical," he said. "When you're drilling holes in the hands of Jesus, you're forced to think about what the passion of Christ is all about."

Lucero said there are hundreds of santos in New Mexico, most residing in the northern part of the state. He said that 10 years ago, the interest in santos was negligible. Today, due in part to popular interest in Santa Fe-style furnishings, the primitive-looking products of faith have found their way into posh modern palaces.

Peace, justice are the topics

By NANCY PATRICK
Special to the Herald

For five years, Peace with Justice Week has been an time for peoples of faith around the nation to raise concerns about justice and peace. The week has become part of an ongoing, year-long process.

Coalitions of religious communities are striving to establish links between justice and peace, and to begin working as a community to implement God's Shalom within the fabric of the lives of people of faith. So it is that the days of Oct. 14-24 are not just a brief flash of action and celebration. Rather, they are part of a growing empowerment and faithfulness that is spreading throughout the country.

This process is also taking root around the globe. There are similar weeks in Canada, Britain, the Netherlands, East and West Germany, Australia and the Philippines.

Since its beginnings, peace with Justice has focused consistently on the call for a reexamination of our nation's domestic and international priorities. It has done so, in large measure, by focusing on the links between issues of peace and social justice.

Five years after its inception, grassroots involvement in the week grows dramatically with each passing year embracing more fully the wholistic reality of God's Shalom; a reality that understands that there is not peace without justice, and no justice without peace.

The sixth annual Peace with Justice Week provides a glimpse of how the river continues to flow, fed by the wellspring of faith tapped when "liberty and justice for all" is proclaimed. On the eve of the national elections, Peace with Justice Week serves to remind America's citizens of the need for leaders committed to justice for all the people of the world.

Across the nation, communities have been preparing for the celebration of Peace with Justice Week. In some places whole states have declared official Weeks and even months for Peace with Justice. In Big Spring, Mayor Cotton Mize has issued a proclamation designating Oct. 14-24 Peace with Justice Week.

During the week, of Oct. 14-24, Francis Armstrong will extend an invitation to enter First Presbyterian Church at Ninth and Scurry streets for prayer. The doors are open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Champions' week planned

The Stanton Fellowship of Christian Athletes, along with area churches, is sponsoring a "Week of Champions" Oct. 24 and 25. Outstanding and successful Christians from around the country are coming to share and present Christ through music and testimonies.

On Monday night, the 1986 Texas state powerlifting champion in the master's division, Ernie Lane will tell about his life with and without Christ. Special music will be the "Advocates," a Christian-rock band from Midland.

The feature speaker for Tuesday will be Jimmy Thomas, head basketball coach at Reagan County High School.

All junior high and high school youth are invited to come to the Stanton High School Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. each night.

In the news

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Although some people nowadays consider religion irrelevant to politics, democratic values are rooted in religion, says the head of the Knights of Columbus.

Virgil C. Dechant, in his annual Columbus Day message, said that "over the long pull, democratic government depends for its health and perhaps its very survival upon values and beliefs which come from religion."

Central to the Judeo-Christian belief, he said, is "an abiding belief in the dignity of the individual human person ... God made us all, and we are equal in his eyes."

GENEVA (AP) — The head of the Soviet Council of Religious Affairs says religious activists are being consulted in reforming Soviet laws on religion.

Konstantin Kharchev, on a visit here with international church bodies, said liberalized legislation is being drafted on religious charitable activities and more freedom for religious education.

NEW YORK (AP) — Delegates to the synod of the New York Roman Catholic Diocese recommended greater participation by the laity in all facets of church life not reserved to the clergy, and that clergy preaching be improved.

CHICAGO (AP) — Sister Joan Chittister, a Roman Catholic nun and peace activist, says everybody can do something for peace without marching in the streets or demonstrating.

"Do you own a postcard?" she writes in the U.S. Catholic, a monthly published by the Claretians. "You could send it to your legislator and ask about his or her voting record on nuclear disarmament."

Tests show burial cloth not that of Jesus Christ

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Scientific tests on the Shroud of Turin indicate it is no more than 728 years old and cannot be the burial cloth of Christ, the archbishop of Turin announced today.

The scientists are "95 percent" sure of the accuracy of the tests, Cardinal Anastasio Ballestrero told a news conference.

Carbon-14 tests conducted by three laboratories put the date between 1260 and 1390, Ballestrero said.

"I see no reason for the church to put these results in doubt," Ballestrero said.

The shroud — 14 feet, 3 inches long and 3 feet, 7 inches wide — bears a faint yellowish negative image of the front and back of a man whipped, speared, nailed to a cross and crowned with thorns. For centuries it has been revered by some as the burial cloth of Jesus and dismissed by others as a clever forgery.

Ballestrero stressed the importance of the symbolism of the image but repeated that the Roman Catholic Church never claimed the shroud to be a holy relic. He said he personally saw the shroud as the "revelation of the face and the body of Christ."

"The church believes in the image and not in the history because this image of Jesus Christ in fact is very interesting and the people believe deeply in Jesus," Ballestrero said. News reports for some weeks have said the tests dated the shroud to the Middle Ages and therefore it could not be the burial cloth of Christ.

Professor Luigi Gonella, scientific adviser to the Cardinal of Turin, said late last month he was told the news reports were correct.

But he said at the time that Roman Catholic Church officials still had not seen the results and were angry because they were being "accused of trying to hide the results, accused of taking part in a conspiracy to hide the truth, of being afraid of the truth."

Laboratories at the University of Arizona, the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology at the University of Zurich and Oxford University conducted the carbon-14 tests on postage-stamp size pieces of linen snipped from the shroud in April.

The tests give a scientific basis for the age of the shroud but do nothing to solve the enduring riddle of how the image was created.

American scientists who subjected the linen to its most rigorous chemical, computer and photographic analysis concluded in 1981 that it was "a real human form of a whipped and crucified man and not the product of an artist."

They speculated it resulted from chemical changes in the linen while it was in contact with a body. Such changes could be duplicated to a degree in the laboratory, they said. But they added no method could adequately explain the shroud's image.

Gonella bristled last month at news reports that a medieval date for the shroud meant it was a fake or a fraud. "It could be a genuine work of Christian art," he said.

The carbon-14 tests were supposed to be conducted as a blind study. Each of the three laboratories was given one piece of the shroud and one piece of linen with a known date. The labs were not to know which was which, but the distinctive herringbone pattern of the shroud could have given its sample away.

Scientists have said the triple carbon dating should reveal the age of the cloth within a 200-year range.
