Bus driver remains in critical condition

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — A school bus driver allegedly shot in the head by a 10-year-old boy remains in critical condition, hospital officials say.
Russell Jean Hampton was shot in the base of the skull Thursday with a small-caliber handgun, police said. Another bus driver found her slumped over the steering wheel and then called an ambulance.
Ms. Hampton, 40, remained in critical condition early today at St. Mary's Hospital.
A 10-year-old boy described as a "normal, all-around" elementary student was taken into custody later Thursday. The boy, police said, was seen running from the bus shortly before Ms. Hampton was found.
The shooting occurred after Ms. Hampton had dropped off students at Dick Dowling Elementary School and was returning to the district's bus storage barn, police said.

"Apparently this boy had missed the bus earlier in the day and she had seen him riding his bicycle along the road on her way back," said police Lt. J.W. Fontenot. "We don't know whether he was riding his bike to school or playing hooky."
The boy was taken into custody at his grandparents' house, near the site of the shooting. His grandmother had called police.
Police speculated that Ms. Hampton had told the boy to get on the bus, with the intention of returning him to school and possibly reporting him for truancy.
Fontenot said the boy also may have been afraid school officials would discover the weapon. A .22-caliber handgun and the boy's bicycle were recovered from the bus, Fontenot said.
The boy was being questioned at the Jefferson County Detention Center in Beaumont.
Russell Cocco, assistant superintendent of Port Arthur schools, said district officials did not know the name of the boy.
The shooting victim's father, Russell DeJohn of Port Arthur, said he was shocked by the incident. Ms. Hampton is a long-time resident, and she graduated from Lincoln High School in Port Arthur. "She was a housewife and a mother and she never bothered anybody," DeJohn said.

Starving cattle get care

FORNEY (AP) — The discovery of thousands of malnourished cattle at a North Texas ranch, where officers have also found some animal carcasses, has prompted authorities to try to determine who is responsible for their condition.
The Santa Gertrudis cattle were from the King Ranch in South Texas but had been under the care of a Dallas man, said Kaufman County Sheriff Robert Harris, adding probably more than 60 cattle had been found dead.
"It isn't something that happened overnight," Harris said. "I'd say they haven't been fed since they've been up here" in July. "This has been progressing."
According to Ken York, who said he operates American Livestock Management Co., based out of Marshall, the cattle ended up in Forney because of the severity of the drought in South Texas.
York said he has often contracted to sell the King Ranch's cattle but in this case only helped the ranch find land farther north.
"I looked at the place and it looked good," said York. "King Ranch cut a contract" with someone to take care of the cattle.
The person responsible for taking care of the cattle never notified the King Ranch of trouble when North Texas also was stricken by the drought, York said.

"The reports kept coming in and every indication was that things were OK," York said. "This thing is serious out there."
He said a King Ranch representative asked him to check on the cattle after hearing reports of their starvation.
Stephen Kleberg, the King Ranch manager contacted by telephone in Kingsville Thursday night, said he wasn't aware of details surrounding the cattle but added authorities from the ranch were checking on the matter.
Meanwhile, cattle feed had been brought to the site and Harris said authorities would be there constantly to care for them.
Some cattle were so malnourished they could not walk and feed was put just in front of them.
"Their ribs were showing," Harris said. "A lot of them were completely down. Some can't even see — they're starved so much that they're blind."
Harris said it was the worst case of animal cruelty he had ever seen.
"They're high-bred cattle," he said. "They're Santa Gertrudis, they're not just scrub cattle."
In the 1920s and 1930s, the King Ranch crossed Shorthorns and Brahmans to develop the Santa Gertrudis.

Senator served his country well

Since 1967, Sen. William Proxmire has made more than 3,000 speeches with a single objective: to persuade his colleagues to ratify, and incorporate into U.S. law, the international convention against genocide. In 1986, he finally succeeded: the Senate ratified a convention adopted by the United Nations in 1948 and since accepted by 96 countries; in October, Congress enacted legislation imposing severe penalties for acts of genocide, defined as "a specific intent to destroy, in whole or in substantial part, a national, ethnic, racial or religious group."

Gradually, Proxmire and other proponents overcame conservative fears that the treaty might infringe on U.S. sovereignty — specifically, that others might try to use it against his country for its actions in Vietnam, for segregationist practices or abuses against American Indians. The Senate adopted a clause declaring that the convention would not bind this country to submit to any World Court ruling contrary to the U.S. Constitution. The treaty, while largely symbolic, puts this country on record against barbarous behavior that, tragically, continues in some parts of the world. Proxmire is retiring after 31 years with a reputation for probity, fiscal conservatism, social liberalism and a single-minded dedication to a number of causes, chief among them fiscal prudence and the genocide treaty. He drew both praise and criticism for his much-publicized "Golden Fleece" awards, which ridiculed and condemned government waste, often in a trivializing, dismissive manner that seemed unfair but that, just as often, were right on the mark.

With all his quirks, Proxmire has been a hardworking public servant who was careful with the public's money. He maintained a smaller staff than most of his colleagues, regularly returning substantial portions of the funds allotted to him. And, because he was so popular with his Wisconsin constituents, Proxmire spent only $177 on his 1977 re-election campaign, most of it for stationery and postage to return unsolicited campaign contributions. This has been no ordinary senator.

Let's put whales in perspective

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I like whales just as much as the next person. I was in Maui once and could look out my hotel room and see a whale anytime I wanted to.

After witnessing my eighth whale, I lost interest. Whales are a lot like liberal Democrats. You've seen one, etc.

So now we have the story that captured the attention of a great deal of the world.

Those three whales got caught in the ice up in Alaska. One died, but even the Russians sent over an icebreaker to get the other two out.

It probably wouldn't have been all that big a story if it had been covered only by newspapers.

Newspapers would have put the story back on page 17, and a few veterinarians might have glanced through it, but that's about all.

But this was a perfect story for television, what with nothing else much going on but Bush and Dukakis trading verbal blows.

They had that great footage of the two whales bouncing up and down out of the water in order to breathe, and the Cable News Network updated the story approximately every eight seconds.

Here's what I think about the whales:

It was their own fault they got caught in the ice. They lingered around the feeding ground far too long after the other whales had left.

Once I was at a dinner in Heidelberg, Germany. They were giving away free beer to our group. We were off on a "sightseeing" voyage down the Rhine.

When the tour director said, "Back in the bus, everybody," I said to my dinner companions, "There's plenty of time left. Let's have another pitcher of beer."

The bus left and my companions made me pay for the taxi ride back to the ship, which took all my deutsche marks.

"Let's hang around and have a few more fish," one of the whales said to the others, and they got "bus-left" like I did.

I have no idea how much money was spent on the whales; but it must have run into the millions.

How many homeless Americans could have benefited by all that money? And why don't the Russians free the people they trap inside their own country before they get so concerned about trapped whales?

We worry about the lives of the two whales, but how many fish do we kill by allowing factories to dump waste into our rivers?

We worry about the lives of two whales, but we aren't doing very much about acid rain, which kills forests and the animal life that inhabits them.

We worry about the life of two whales, but turn 15 zillion hunters loose in the woods to kill Bambi.

Little Jessica McClure trapped in that well in Texas was a news story. Two whales trapped in the ice in Alaska was Nature doing what comes naturally.

No winner in the campaign ads race

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judging by some of the television ads the presidential candidates are running, Americans have a choice this fall between a dangerously naive fringe liberal and an incompetent liar with bad judgment.

This year's television drive, with each candidate planning to spend more than $30 million, is not only the most expensive but arguably the most negative in the modern history of presidential campaigning.

On the sunny side, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis is vowing that he's "on your side" while Vice President George Bush swears that he's "ready on day one to be a great president."

But Republican Bush is also asserting in his ads that "America can't afford" the risk of a Dukakis presidency. And Democrat Dukakis is belittling not only Bush's competence and judgment, but lately his veracity as well.

While the 30-second spot reigns supreme as Election Day approaches, particularly in battleground states, the candidates are also purchasing network time for longer appeals to the nation's couch-potato contingent.

Dukakis gave two five-minute TV speeches in October and planned two more for Nov. 1 and Nov. 5. He and Bush each have bought a half-hour of time on the three major broadcast networks on election eve.

Dukakis, the underdog, also was seeking opportunities for extended television interviews in an attempt to persuade voters to give him another look before making up their minds. In one four-day period he appeared on two network morning news programs, Larry King's talk show on Cable News Network, for 90 minutes on ABC's "Nightline," and for 14 minutes of CBS' "Evening News" half-hour newscast.

Bush's advertising has taken a double-barreled approach from the start.

Capitol report

One set of ads presented the soft-sell: Bush the family man with his grandchildren; Bush the leader with foreign affairs experience; Bush amid balloons and cheers at the GOP convention insisting he wants "a kinder and gentler nation."

"The vice president spelled out his vision of America and we reinforced it," said veteran media consultant Roger Ailes, who heads the Bush ad team.

A second set of ads was used in an attempt — successful, polls indicate — to demolish the positive impression many voters had of Dukakis immediately after the Democratic National Convention.

One ad charged that Dukakis made a $6 billion mistake by failing to clean up Boston Harbor. Another said he gave "weekend passes to first-degree murderers who were not even eligible for parole," opposes the death penalty and vetoed mandatory jail sentences for drug dealers.

More-recent spots attacked Dukakis' tax and furlough policies as well as his stands on various defense matters. One showed inmates walking in and out a revolving door and said that "while out, many committed other crimes like kidnapping and rape, and many are still at large." Another showed Dukakis riding on a tank while a narrator said he opposed "virtually every defense system we developed."

The tank ad implied Dukakis opposed a long list of weapons, some of which he is on record as supporting, and provoked an unusually quick response from a campaign widely criticized for failing to defend itself.

"Full of lies, and he knows it," Dukakis said of the tank ad in an ad of his own. "I want to build a strong defense; I'm sure he wants to build a strong defense. So this isn't about defense issues; it's about dragging the truth into the gutter."

Dukakis also struck back on the furlough front with several radio and television ads, one of them charging that Bush "has taken a furlough from the truth." The spot notes that the Massachusetts program was started by a Republican governor and says "thousands of drug kingpins" were released under a federal furlough program while Bush led the war on drugs — including one ex-inmate who raped and murdered a pregnant mother of two.

Along the way Dukakis has also released TV spots attacking Bush's record on drugs, education, Social Security and the environment, his role in the Iran-Contra affair and his choice of Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle as his running mate. He has released ads of himself talking simply into the camera about day care, education and America's economic status in the world. And he's run a series of "packaging of George Bush" ads designed to depict Bush as a creature of his handlers.

The disjointed nature of Dukakis' media campaign has reflected confusion and friction in his advertising ranks as well as the lack of a basic message for his candidacy. But his ads have become feistier and more focused as his poll standings fall, honing in on economic populism and championing middle-class causes.

"There is an overarching theme," maintains Dukakis ad chief David D'Alessandro. "Michael Dukakis is on the side of the majority of the people... His theme is that we must regain our stature and our ability to perform as a country."

Quotes

"I represent the mainstream, the mainstream views and values and these are your views and values and we are the change and we are the mainstream." — George Bush.

"The test of a good president isn't who comes up with the best commercial." — Michael Dukakis.

"I don't see how... a president has any kind of mandate if he wins by the amount of negative advertising." — Lloyd Bentsen, referring to a possible Bush win.

"If Mr. Dukakis can't fight drugs effectively in his own backyard, how can he make claims to do so for America?" — Dan Quayle

"The reason we have a drug problem in Massachusetts and 49 other states is because George Bush blew the one job Ronald Reagan gave him, and that was to spearhead the administration's war on drugs." — James Shannon, Massachusetts attorney general.

"I'll take my destiny, whatever that may be, but I'm going to fight for my dignity and my honor." — former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, in an interview with The Associated Press that was his first meeting with U.S. media since being indicted two weeks ago on racketeering charges.

Children need to be cared for

To the editor:

When I was a small child my mother often admonished me. "Eat all the food on your plate. Think of those starving children in China."

When I was in college my Sociology instructors often repeated this, "Every child that is born has the right to love, and care, and economic support that includes: food, clothing, shelter and an education."

Now, decades later the Chinese people have become so fed-up with watching their children hunger and starve that a law in that land allows one couple to produce only one child — with abortion for following pregnancies. Goal: reduce population until the land can support its population.

In the United States every child in the first 18 years of its life will now cost $50,000 to $80,000. Inflation is predicted to increase 7 percent per year. Women are lower wage earners, and many families with children are without homes and in the streets — even those with two parents.

About three decades ago the majority opinion of U.S. citizens caused a law to be passed legalizing abortions. Now a minority, anti-abortion group in our nation is trying to close legal abortion clinics. Such clinics give instruction on avoiding unwanted pregnancy. A group in Howard County with these same anti-beliefs is attacking a elicited from her the foolish statement that, she, a little representative of the 69th district, will try to alter the law of the whole U.S.A. to make it anti-abortion. The male candidate is not harassed to make impossible statements of intent to accomplish the impossible. This is an aim to punish women.

We will always have women who obtain abortions... women, not men, are the sex that undergo this surgery. Both parents may desire the abortion, but it is the woman's body that gets the actual treatment.

A sensible woman who knows she cannot provide the support a child requires should be able to obtain an end to an unwanted pregnancy in a medically safe clinic. This minority group seeks to re-establish the older order of ending a pregnancy at a hole-in-the-wall of an alley where a pregnancy can be ended under physically dangerous conditions. Be hard on women. Don't have safe abortion clinics.

This anti-abortion group may deny its intent until it is blue in its face; their actions speak louder than any of their words. They want women to get abortions only in the most punishing, unsatisfactory conditions. Be hard on women. Don't have legal abortion clinics.

This campaign is to become a representative of the 69th district, participating in decisions that concern all of the citizens almost every day. Our problems are not mainly pregnancies, either wanted or unwanted. Our problems are community wide with incomes for all of us and money to support the government for the services it provides to society.

Thirty years ago a statewide study in Texas disclosed that real estate taxes supported 50 percent of government costs, but the income from real estate was only one-fourth of the state income. The tax load on real estate is now more unfair than it was 30 years ago. When the oil incomes dropped, and the taxes from oil sales (real estate taxes) dropped, the legislature tried to get money to continue operating by sales taxes. These are now 7 percent. To families that must spend all income for food, clothing, shelter NECESSITIES this is 7 percent taken from that inadequate income. This is unfair taxation.

These are problems our representative should deal with.

Please, let's have no more of this ding-dong anti-abortion noise and clutter from minority interests.

Abortion flyer is debate topic

To the editor:

The Oct. 20 Herald attributed Mrs. Avery with making some very broad statements about a "flyer" written for the Family Issues Forum held downtown Oct. 6. Mrs. Avery did not deny anything in the flyer because she could not. It was interesting that not one word of the flyer was printed in the Herald article.

Clarifying Mrs. Avery's position on abortion with accuracy was the purpose of my conversation with her. We each came away from the discussion with very different perspectives on what had taken place and that is unfortunate — assuming she was accurately quoted.

The flyer, which I wrote, detailed Mrs. Avery's statements and ac-ivities that would give any pro-life citizen concern. The flyer stated: Avery believes abortion is not a state issue but a court issue; she has worked with Planned Parenthood; and, she is "personally against" abortion, but believes abortion is a "woman's right."

The Blue Blazer board chose Sarah Weddington for its 1988 Women's Conference keynote or kickoff speaker. The flyer stated that Mrs. Avery is a personal acquaintance of, and was the person who extended the speaking invitation to, Weddington. A "radical feminist", she is the attorney who won the controversial U.S. Supreme Court case, Roe vs. Wade, in 1973. Prior to 1973, there were no federal abortion laws, but all 50 states had regulations. In effect, Roe vs. Wade threw out all abortion laws in all 50 states.

The Texas legislature has passed abortion laws in the last two sessions. These include House Bill 410 — "restricting" but not prohibiting abortions during the last three months of pregnancy — and House Bill 486 — requiring record keeping.

As my conversation with Mrs. Avery ended, she encouraged me to attend the Women's Conference and said that Sarah Weddington would be able to answer my questions.

It appears that Mrs. Avery, at the very least, has pro-choice sympathies and that she may not be aware that the states still have primary jurisdiction over abortion. In either case, it is a pro-life issue of grave concern.

Radium threat disclosed by suit

CINCINNATI (AP) — U.S. Department of Energy documents filed in court show evidence of previously undisclosed releases of radioactive materials into groundwater from the Fernald uranium processing plant, state officials say.

More radioactive radium was released into an aquifer under the plant than had been realized, increasing the potential health threat to nearby residents, state officials said. The Great Miami aquifer provides water to some southwestern Ohio communities and businesses near Fernald, 18 miles northwest of Cincinnati.

Ohio Environmental Protection Agency officials said they learned of increased radium releases into the Great Miami River system and into waste pits at the plant from documents in a $300 million, class-action lawsuit that neighbors of the plant filed against its former operator, National Lead of Ohio Inc.

"We certainly know stuff. We're not aware of it," Ohio EPA spokesman Graham Mitchell said Wednesday.

Law to jail homeless rejected

MIAMI (AP) — An ordinance criticized as anti-homeless because it would have subjected those found sleeping on the sidewalk to jail or fines was unanimously rejected Thursday by the Miami City Commission.

Commissioners voted 5-0 to send the law back to their staff with orders to soften its wording, saying they would consider it again Dec. 15.

posed emergency measures can be passed without a public hearing.

Critics said the city was trying to clean up the streets near the Miami Arena before the city's new National Basketball Association team, the Miami Heat, makes its regular season debut there Saturday.

Commission members said the revision should not call for the arrest of homeless people for sleeping in public. The ordinance called for up to 10 days in jail and a $100 fine for violators.

The arena is only a few blocks from the city's only shelter for the homeless, Camillus House, whose director, Brother Paul Johnson, applauded the commission decision.

The commissioners said they plan to appoint a task force — to be headed by Commissioner Rosario Kennedy — to help Miami's street people.

Entrepreneur tries hunger strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Struck down by bad luck and last year's stock market crash, a once-rising star among entrepreneurs is trying desperately to save his business with a 12-day-old hunger strike in an illegally parked van opposite the New York Stock Exchange.

"I've come to the seat of capitalism, the New York Stock Exchange, to be heard," Jan Stuart said Thursday.

The 34-year-old owner of Jan Stuart Skin Care Co., who was once featured on the cover of Entrepreneur Magazine, was viewed skeptically at first as police ticketed the van for each of the first four days and passers-by told him he was crazy.

But dozens of people have since signed a petition, attached to his van, that Stuart hopes to present to the stock exchange to show that there is concern for the small business owner in America.

A military honor guard saluted solemnly as the remains, each in a metal casket covered with a folded U.S. flag, were loaded onto a U.S. Air Force C-141 transport plane on the sun-baked tarmac of Hanoi's Noi Bai Airport, said Maj. Dan Trout.

It was among the largest turnovers since the January 1973 Paris Peace Accords ended U.S. military involvement in the war, in which 58,000 Americans died before the communists defeated the U.S.-backed South Vietnam government in April 1975.

The caskets were flown out of the Vietnamese capital en route to the U.S. Central Identification Laboratory which will try to confirm preliminary analyses by the Vietnamese.

Trout, spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command, said Vietnam provided a list of some names and information on the remains, but he had no other details.

Remains of 23 MIAs returned by Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam returned Thursday what it believes to be remains of 23 Americans missing from the Vietnam War, a U.S. spokesman said.

A military honor guard saluted solemnly as the remains, each in a metal casket covered with a folded U.S. flag, were loaded onto a U.S. Air Force C-141 transport plane on the sun-baked tarmac of Hanoi's Noi Bai Airport, said Maj. Dan Trout.

It was among the largest turnovers since the January 1973 Paris Peace Accords ended U.S. military involvement in the war, in which 58,000 Americans died before the communists defeated the U.S.-backed South Vietnam government in April 1975.

The caskets were flown out of the Vietnamese capital en route to the U.S. Central Identification Laboratory which will try to confirm preliminary analyses by the Vietnamese.

Trout, spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command, said Vietnam provided a list of some names and information on the remains, but he had no other details.

Trout said among the remains are those of 21 troops the Vietnamese found in their own search ches and two soldiers recovered during the first joint field investigation near Hanoi Sept. 25-Oct. 5.

Another American military team returned to Bangkok on Thursday after completing the second joint field investigation with the Vietnamese to determine what happened to U.S. airmen lost in northern Vietnam.

Trout said since the Paris accords, the United States has received the identified remains of 196 missing people, including 168 from Vietnam, 26 from Laos and two from China. That leaves 2,387 Americans missing in action in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

Thursday's turnover brought to 90 the number of suspected remains Vietnam has provided since then. From them, the U.S. laboratory so far has identified 25 missing Americans.

Most American losses in northern Vietnam were airmen shot down during bombing runs.

Thach previously gave Americans until the end of November to complete such investigations and repeated hopes the United States will provide more help in resolving Vietnam's own humanitarian problems.

PLO document recognizes Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — The pro-PLO daily newspaper Al Fajr today published a draft declaration of independence for a Palestinian state.

The Arabic-language newspaper said speaker Abdul Hamid Al Sayeh would present the document for approval to the 453-member Palestine National Council, or PLO parliament in exile, on Nov. 14 in Algeria.

A map accompanying the document shows the land to be divided into two states, one Israeli and one Arab, on the basis of a 1947 U.N. partition resolution, the mainstream Palestine Liberation Organization newspaper said.

Israel rejects the 1947 partition plan, which awards key areas of what is now Israel to the Arabs as well as the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. It also calls for international control of Jerusalem, which Israel has proclaimed as its capital.

However, Palestinian commentators said the PLO's expected acceptance of two states would be a step toward peace because it implicitly recognized the right of a Jewish state to exist.

Two killed in hotel shootout

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A shootout between rival labor factions inside a luxury hotel sent guests fleeing to their rooms and left two people dead and 21 wounded, authorities said.

Identities of those killed Thursday night at the Hotel Presidente Capulpec were not immediately available. But Marta Ramirez, hotel shift supervisor, said today that all guests and employees were safe and accounted for.

Hotel spokesman Federico Gonzalez said factions of the Mexican Workers Federation and the Revolutionary Confederation of Workers and Campesinos clashed inside the lobby. The brawlers surged into the bar, attacking a group of Revolutionary Confederation-affiliated musicians.

The pro-government Workers Federation lost a bid to win the musicians' contract to the Revolutionary Confederation in an arbitration ruling earlier Thursday, the Excelsior news service reported.

The shootout was the second involving the Federation this week. On Monday, a fight between Federation activists and the Acapulco hotel workers union left two people dead, 18 injured and Acapulco's union headquarters in flames.

Thatcher in Poland for talks

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher flew to this Baltic port today on a symbolic pilgrimage to meet Lech Walesa at the doomed Lenin shipyard, birthplace of the banned Solidarity union.

City authorities greeted Mrs. Thatcher as she arrived from Warsaw, the state news agency PAP said. She then departed for a ceremony to honor Polish heroes at nearby Westerplatte, scene of the first shots of World War II.

Before leaving Warsaw, she dedicated a monument in the city's eastern Praga district to British flyers who died trying to ferry food and weapons to the Polish-resistance movement in the failed Warsaw uprising of 1944. The rebellion against the Nazi occupiers cost 200,000 Polish lives.

Thursday evening, Mrs. Thatcher told communist leaders that they must negotiate with Solidarity as the price for long-term Western aid.

President exercises pocket veto on Montana wilderness bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House today defended President Reagan's veto of a wilderness bill against Democratic charges that the action was politically motivated.

"In all these kinds of environmental questions, tradeoffs have to be considered, and this was a case where the administration felt that for a variety of economic and environmental reasons, it was best not to designate this area as wilderness," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

"The Department of Agriculture had recommended a veto from the beginning, so there wasn't much question of where we stood on it," the spokesman said.

The bill would have designated 1.43 million acres of Forest Service land in Montana as protected wilderness. The Forest Service is an agency of the Agriculture Department.

"This bill was vetoed for petty politics, and that's all," Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., said Wednesday night, shortly after the White House announced Reagan's pocket vetoes of the wilderness bill.

"This is an affront to the people of Montana," Baucus said in a statement read by press secretary Scott Williams. "Clearly, the Bush campaign had a hand in this. The vice president is still a member of the environmental wrecking crew."

Reagan said in a statement that enactment of the wilderness measure "would injure the economy of Montana. It could cost jobs and eliminate vast mineral development opportunities. It also would reduce the flexibility the federal government needs in managing the nation's natural heritage."

By exercising the pocket veto — refusing to sign the bill after Congress had adjourned for the year — Reagan ensured that lawmakers could not override his action.

The bill — co-sponsored by Sen. John Melcher, also D-Mont. — was passed by voice vote in both chambers of Congress, the Senate on Oct. 18 and the House on Oct. 20. It would have affected more than 6 million acres of Montana and was the result of a compromise worked out among competing interests, including conservationists and the timber and lumber industries.

The measure designated about 1.43 million acres of Forest Service land as wilderness; 360,400 acres as special management areas, meaning recreation; and 320,700 acres as federal study areas. It also released for non-wilderness uses — such as timber harvesting and mineral exploration — another 4 million acres in Montana's 10 national forests.

Conrad Burns, the Republican running against Melcher for a Senate seat, said the bill was vetoed not for political reasons, but because it would cost jobs in Montana.

"If there were any politics involved in this, it was John Melcher holding this bill up all year long and introducing it in the 11th hour, without holding hearings on it," Burns said in Montana.

Melcher criticized Burns as the one playing politics, saying, "We don't really need to make this political. We've had a hard enough time passing a bill with all the competing interests in Montana. To add another dimension with the White House... well, it's pretty tough."

Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., who introduced a similar bill last year, said he could not understand what political advantage Republicans hoped to gain.

"Montanans, by an overwhelming majority, want this issue ended," Williams said. "The want these lands opened up for a stable economic future. The Republicans are clearly on the side of wanting to prolong (the issue)."

Reagan said competing economic, environmental and cultural interests already are balanced by the administration's own plans for Montana.

Businessman focuses on 'healthy' food

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A multimillionaire who nearly died from a heart attack 22 years ago has spent $2 million on a crusade to pressure food industry giants into making healthier products, but the companies say his criticisms are misguided.

Phil Sokolof, 65, placed advertisements in newspapers this week depicting nine products he says are portrayed as healthy foods, but are "poisoning" Americans with saturated fats.

They include Nabisco's Triscuit crackers, Procter & Gamble's Crisco shortening, Kellogg's Cracklin' Oat Bran cereal, Pepperidge Farm's Goldfish crackers, Keebler's Club crackers, Sunshine's Hydrox cookies and non-dairy coffee creamers Coffee Swirl from Kraft, Carnation's Coffee-mate and Borden's Creamora.

Saturated fats have the effect of boosting the blood's cholesterol level, according to scientists. An excess of cholesterol, a waxy compound, can clog arteries, thereby contributing to heart attacks.

The American Heart Association recommends a daily diet with no more than 30 percent of calories from fats and no more than 10 percent from saturated fats.

Sokolof, the owner of a construction equipment company, blames high cholesterol for the near-fatal heart attack he suffered in 1966 at the age of 43. His father and a brother-in-law died of heart attacks.

"There were no warnings," he said. "I was thin. I exercised. I didn't smoke. The only thing wrong was I had high cholesterol."

In 1985, he wrote a $1 million check to establish the National Heart Savers Association. He has spent another $1 million to spread his warning about high cholesterol.

Heart Savers is registered in Nebraska as a non-profit organization. Sokolof has provided 99 percent of its funds and is the only staff member, he said.

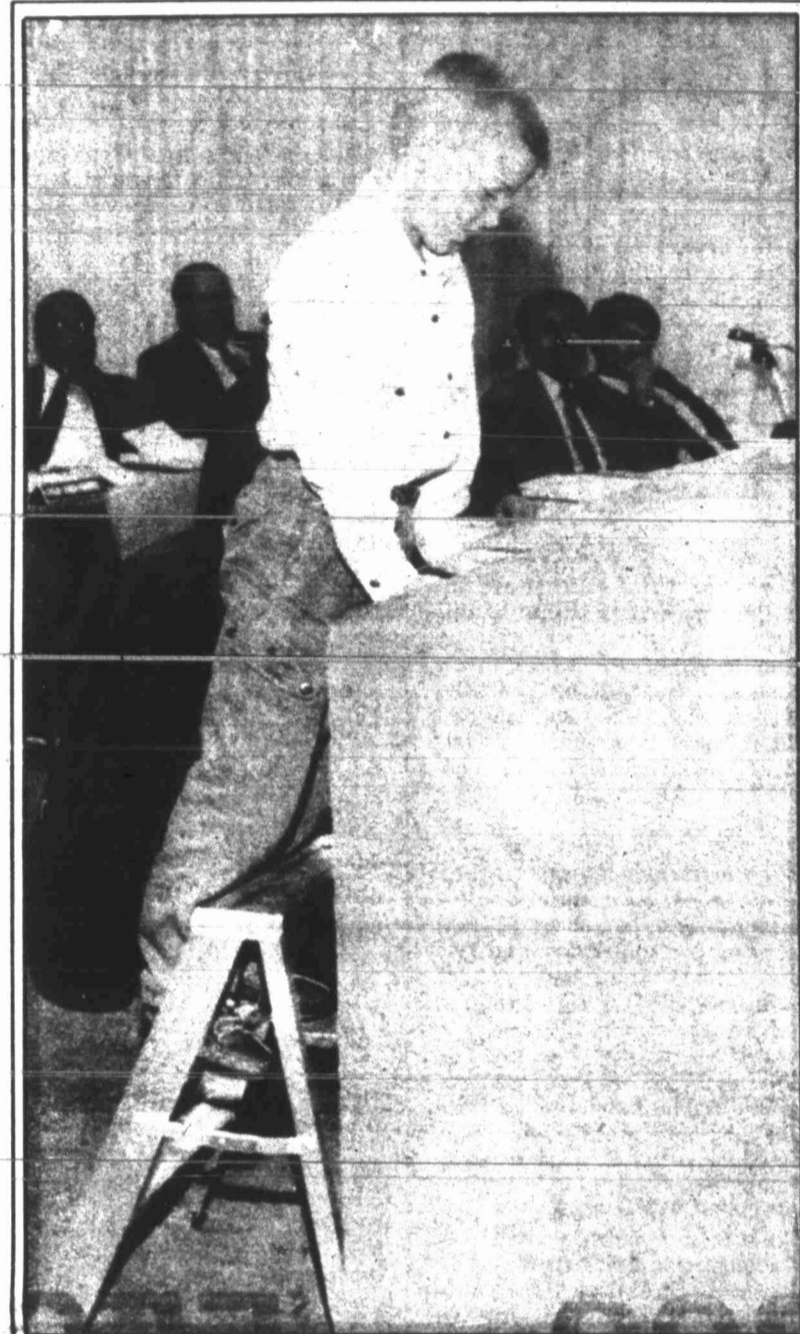

Sokolof said his brush with death, combined with a 1984 government study on cholesterol, prompted his effort.

"It is a crusade. It is from the heart," he said Thursday.

But the targeted companies said the advertisements that ran Tuesday in The New York Times and New York Post were unfair and misrepresented their products.

"It's irresponsible," Joseph Stewart, a senior vice president for Kellogg's in Battle Creek, Mich., said Thursday. "For someone to claim it is the poisoning of the American public is a gross exaggeration."

Cholesterol itself is only found in animal products, including meat and dairy items like cheese, whole milk and eggs.

Raw fish blamed for illness

BOSTON (AP) — Raw or undercooked fish such as sushi can cause a serious intestinal illness often mistaken for appendicitis, doctors warned today.

The disease, anisakiasis, is caused by eating fish infested with larvae of worms known as anisakid nematodes. Cooking kills the worms.

The doctors said about 50 cases of anisakiasis have been reported in the United States, but "this may be the tip of the iceberg."

Drs. James H. McKerron and Judy Sakanari of the University of California, San Francisco, and Thomas L. Deardorff of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration described the infection in a letter in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors said the emergence of the disease was partly due to the popularity of sushi and sashimi and lightly cooked fish. Salmon and Pacific snapper are most commonly implicated in the disease.

People who eat wormy fish sometimes cough up live worms or feel the worm in their throats, a condition known as "tingling throat syndrome."

In more serious cases, the worms burrow into the wall of the stomach or the intestines.

Suit demands census count adjustment

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City filed suit today on behalf of several big cities and minority groups to force the Census Bureau to make adjustments to avoid large-scale undercounting in the 1990 census.

"Some people are, in effect, being disenfranchised by an undercount," said Peter Zimroth, the city's lawyer. Congressional seats and some federal, state and city funds are allocated on the basis of population.

Zimroth said New York City was undercounted by about 500,000 in 1980, and he predicted the 1990 census as now planned would be even less accurate.

Undercounting often affects minorities and illegal aliens, because many do not respond to the mailed census forms, he said.

Joining in the action were Los Angeles and Chicago; Dade County, Fla., which includes Miami; the state of California; the U.S. Conference of Mayors; the National League of Cities; the League of United Latin American Citizens, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

NRA Endorses Troy Fraser

On Tuesday, November 8, you have the opportunity to cast your vote for a supporter of your right to keep and bear arms.

His name is Troy Fraser.

Troy Fraser has earned an "A" rating from the NRA and Texas State Rifle Association based on his responses to a candidate questionnaire on sportsmen's issues.

His opponent, Mrs. Avery, refused to answer the questionnaire. This is often an indication of indifference, if not outright opposition, to sportsmen's issues.

Troy Fraser has pledged to actively support pro-gun/pro-hunting legislation and oppose measures which would further restrict Texas's firearms owners.

The NRA urges you to vote for Troy Fraser on November 8th and take at least three sportsmen to the polls with you.

Every vote is critical.

Remember, the legislators you elect on November 8th will have a direct impact on your firearms freedom for the next two years. It is critical that we elect a committed supporter like Troy Fraser to office.

First home buyers may be too choosy

NEW YORK (AP) — Among the poor European immigrants to America's urban centers earlier in this century were many with the same goals: first a job, then some savings, and eventually a good place to live.

Several other goals were high on the list, but none was higher than getting the kids educated to be "real" Americans. At the other end were the dreams of success, and even of owning a few shares of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Their first homes usually were two- or three-family houses in poor areas. Single-family units were out of the question since they provided no rents and often cost just as much. Immigrants knew the value of rents.

They knew also how much they could afford, and while they saw many houses they would have loved to own, they settled for the rundown structure they could fix up with their own hands. They made do with what they had.

The rundown house was their financial foothold in the new country.

Many decades later, it is still the immigrants, now from other parts of the world as well, who follow this practice. Some of the offspring of the earlier immigrants follow it, too, but many others scorn it as beneath their status.

The negative attitude toward rundown multiple units is a significant factor in one of the most publicized of housing problems, the alleged inability of young, first-time buyers to afford a home of their own.

Many of them can, but many decline to seize the opportunity, the same one that makes immigrant eyes bulge with amazement.

Among arguments heard by real estate people is that such houses offer few amenities, require too much time-consuming labor and cause the landlords to live in areas not appropriate to their view of themselves.

A survey by ERA Real Estate, a national chain, found that 49 percent of first-time buyers would consider delaying a purchase if the home they could afford fell short of their ideal.

The irony of the attitude is that home prices seldom fall to accommodate the savings of would-be buyers. Whatever savings they are likely to accumulate are offset in the meantime by higher prices.

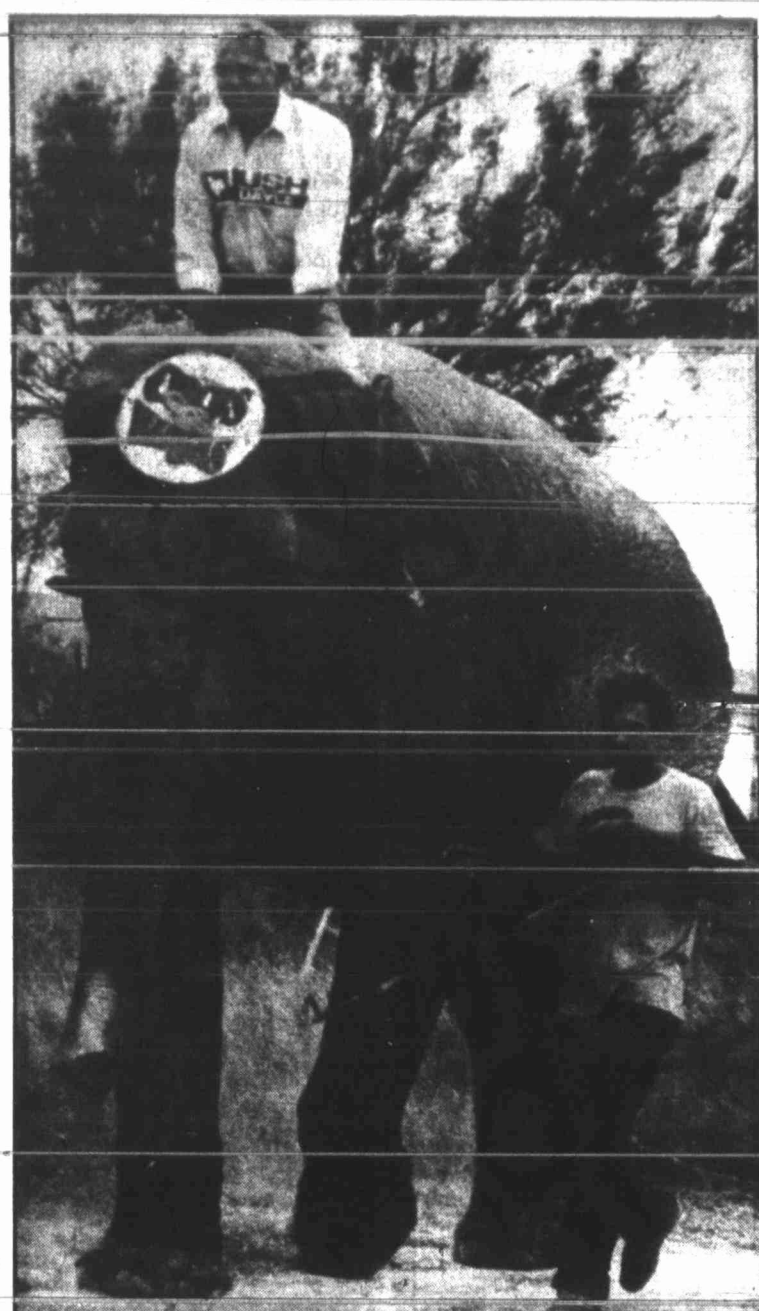

Meanwhile, the means to the home of their dreams is right before them if for the time being they can put up with something less. That is, the best way to the house of one's dreams is to settle for the house that is less than ideal.

"First-time homebuyers need to think about building equity with a home purchase now and then leveraging that later into the home of their dreams," says Ed Gresham, ERA president and chief executive officer.

It makes a lot of sense. The less than desirable home may grow in value at a rate faster than the market in general, thanks in part to the owner's fix-up efforts. The mortgage provides automatic savings. Tax benefits reduce the owner's federal income tax.

The first home might not have a swimming pool, a patio, a recreation room and a modern kitchen and baths, but it has been shown over and over again to be a great way of obtaining all that in just a few years.

Strangely, the immigrant with little knowledge of American economic ways spots the opportunity almost immediately. The country-born can stand right before the answer and not see it.

Restoration scheduled for Battleship Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission Thursday approved $6.9 million to restore the Battleship Texas, which will be taken into drydock from its slip at San Jacinto Battleground State Historical Park near Houston.

The money will be used for hull, deck and superstructure restoration, said Sue Moss, assistant to the director of the parks division.

It also will be spent on interior compartment restoration, she said, and lighting, electrical and ventilation system rehabilitation.

The battleship will be ready to tow to shipyard in December, according to information before the commission. Todd Shipyards Corp.

in Galveston was the low bidder for the shipyard work, at $5.1 million.

More than $5 million of the money will come from the U.S. Navy, Ms. Moss said. The Battleship Texas Advisory Board raised about $750,000, she said, and about another $1 million is coming from the state parks fund.

"We anticipate the money will carry us several years" in the restoration effort, she said.

The battleship was commissioned in 1914 and is the last survivor of the dreadnoughts of that naval era, according to the department. The ship's 14-inch guns and crew of 1,800 saw combat in World Wars I and II, and only suffered one battle fatality in the second war.

Waiting for fall

NEW ORLEANS — Two orangutans at the Audubon Zoo enjoy the warm sunshine recently. With temperatures in the '80s, fall seems quite distant as these two enjoy a sunny afternoon.

Clothes: A sign of the times

DEAR ABBY: Recently you told a 14-year-old girl whose mother wouldn't let her wear a strapless, wrap-around dress because it was too revealing that the rules for how a 14-year-old girl should dress haven't changed.

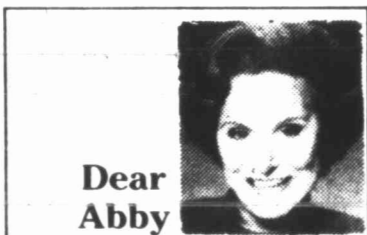

Well, I am a 14-year-old girl, and I say they have changed. Today, girls are compelled to show off their bodies because of the same social rules that forced their grandmothers to cover up theirs.

I'm a figure skater — not on ice, on roller skates, so you won't be seeing me in the Olympics unless they accept dancing on wheels instead of blades as an athletic competition.

But whether it's done on wheels or blades, one thing is the same — the boys are always fully dressed, but the girls are semi-nude. The same thing is true in many other sports. Just take a look at how the gymnasts are dressed when they perform. And it isn't only in sports; my sister has an after-school job that requires her to wear a uniform with short-shorts during the summer, so the customers can look at her legs while ordering pizza.

It's everywhere, Abby. Just take a look around you.

SCANTILY CLAD IN TENNESSEE

Dear Abby

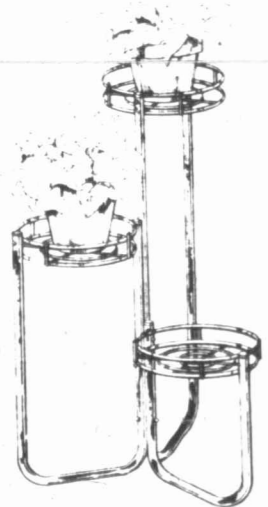

DEAR SCANTILY CLAD: Call me old-fashioned, but my perception of acceptable (modest) attire hasn't changed, although fashions have. Witness today's baseball and football uniforms. Gone are the baggy trousers — replaced with skin-tight stretch pants.

DEAR ABBY: I recently heard that you were opposed to using live animals for medical research. Surely you know that we never would have discovered vaccines for numerous diseases had they not been tested on animals first.

DISAPPOINTED IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: You heard wrong. I have clearly stated that I am NOT opposed to using live animals for medical and biomedical research if the animals are treated humanely. However, I do oppose using animals to test cosmetics and household products.

First Christian Church plans annual bazaar and luncheon

First Christian Church, 911 Goliad, will host its annual bazaar and luncheon Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Chicken spaghetti, salad, rolls and dessert will be served. Cost is $3.50 for adults and $2 for children. Meals can be delivered; call 267-7851 or 267-9597.

Pies, cakes, cookies, home-canned goods, and crafts also will be available.

The event, sponsored by Christian Women's Fellowship, helps pay for worthwhile projects, said Ann Fritzier, CWF president.

Projects include the Rainbow Project, Westside Community Center, missions, and Fritzier's special cause, Camp Friendship.

The Camp, for underprivileged children, is located at the State Park in Lake Brownwood. Some of the funds provide an opportunity for at least two children to enjoy a week at camp, Fritzier said.

Donations help provide meals, transportation, sheets, towels, and even toothbrushes.

All activities are adult-supervised and include swimming, basketball, volleyball, fishing, kayaking, art classes, and Bible classes which are taught without reference to any specific doctrine.

"There are no hassles. We don't try to persuade children to join our church. But, there is a minister available if they want to talk to someone," Fritzier added.

Children from low income families who have completed the fourth grade and who have not yet started seventh grade are eligible to attend. Should an accident occur, children are provided medical coverage while at camp.

The camp, surrounded by wildlife, provides children an opportunity to make new friends. "That's what camp is all about. We teach them to make friends and to be a friend," Fritzier added.

Children are encouraged to write their new friends when they return home.

Last year five Big Spring children were sponsored by CWF. "The more money we raise, the more children we can send to camp. As long as we get support, we can continue to have this," Fritzier said.

Church to host annual mission

Immaculate Heart of Mary Church will host the annual mission Nov. 7-10 at 7:30 p.m.

Father Lester Bach OFM, and Mrs. Tomi Bezdek will serve as preachers and facilitators.

The format to be used is new in Big Spring, said Father Stephen White.

A nursery will be provided. The public is invited.

Election prayer slated Monday

Wesley United Methodist Church will host an election prayer Monday from 7 to 8 p.m.

The public is invited to pray for the election of this country's future leaders.
