More than $100,000 spent for 69th seat

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

How much is a $600 per month state representative's seat worth to the 69th District?

Apparently nearly $150,000 for the candidates and their supporters in this year's race, according to a list of financial contributions through Oct. 29 released today.

Republican Troy Fraser has raised $94,476.53 in contributions and spent $82,309.36. He said $500 of those monies was received after the last filing period ended.

Democrat Johnnie Lou Avery has raised $47,002.37 and spent $22,842.86. Campaign Manager Sandy Burrows estimated that $6,450 was received after the last filing period.

Fraser is quick to point out that he has been campaigning for the state representative's seat for nearly one year and he had the additional burden of running in a primary election, which Avery did not because incumbent Larry Don Shaw, D-Knot, had not vacated his seat until after the primary.

Burrows confirmed today that Avery did not have access to any funds raised by Shaw.

Fraser received contributions from 296 organizations and individuals according to his figures, the great majority of which have come from within the 69th District.

He has received $12,887.50 from Political Action Committees, including a $300 contribution from the State Rifle Association, an affiliate of the National Rifle Association.

Fraser said 13.8 percent of his contributions have come from PAC's, and the rest from supporters within the district and state and national Republican organizations, he said.

The following is a list of the total amount of contributions and expenditures to Fraser for the three filing periods (the first figure is contributions and the second is expenditures for each period):

• Jan. 1 through June 30 — $18,484.62; $18,321.19.

• July 1 through Sept. 29 — $33,201.24; $31,177.08.

• Sept. 30 through Oct. 29 — $42,290.67; $32,799.89.

Fraser disputes an Avery Election Committee flyer that claims he said he would never accept PAC contributions.

"I never at any time made that claim," Fraser noted, and advised that he also must pay full-time campaign staffers.

Avery said because she did not enter the race until late August, she had no other choice but to accept campaign contributions from individuals and organizations outside the 69th District and says she

Hernandez testimony begins

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

A dozen county residents — evenly divided between men and women — heard testimony and saw exhibits of evidence in the murder trial of Frankie Salazar Hernandez following 118th Judicial District Attorney Rick Hamby's opening statement early today.

Hernandez is accused of slaying Noe Perez, 39, of Grand Prairie "on or about April 3, 1987," according to the indictment for murder read aloud by Hamby, who told the jurors Perez was strangled, kicked, "jumped on and beaten with a gun."

After Hamby's statement, defense attorney Tom Morgan, appointed by the court to represent Hernandez, delayed his opening statement until the state rests its case.

Hamby's first witness, former Big Spring Police Department detective Tony Chavez, told the jury he was assigned to investigate crimes against persons and against property in April 1987.

On April 1, he testified, Jeannie Hernandez Fonseca and her brother Joe Hernandez (Frankie is a brother of both) were present at a morning meeting with Chavez and other police officials, including captain Lonnie Smith and chief Joe Cook, during which a trap for Noe Perez was planned.

Fonseca and Hernandez had volunteered to help in an undercover operation designed to catch Perez in the act of selling marijuana, and Chavez had been assigned to make the purchase, the former detective testified. He told the court he was given $10,000 in bills recorded by photocopy to buy marijuana.

He was also given $50 to pay for a room at the Ponderosa Motel, a sandwich, chips and something to drink, Chavez testified.

He rented two adjoining rooms, he said, and set about making one appear inhabited. Chavez said the Hernandez brothers visited him in the room that morning and told him they were planning to meet Perez in their motel room — Room 12 of Motel 9 — and bring him to make the sale. They then left, Chavez said, and did not return until about 2 p.m.

At that time they told him Perez would not sell them any more marijuana until he was repaid for a $1,500 debt the brothers owed from

The sounds of dropping pins, and spontaneous shouts of triumph and encouragement could be heard throughout Highland Lanes Saturday as participants competed in the Area 18 Special Olympics Bowling Tournament.

After picking up a difficult spare, and receiving congratulations from teammates and supporters, Shelly Dumas, a member of the Midland bowling team, expressed what seemed to be a universal feeling among the Special Olympians.

"Everybody out here has been wonderful," Dumas said excitedly. "I just love it out here."

Special Olympic bowling teams from Midland, Odessa, Stanton and Big Spring competed in the event hosted by Highland Lanes the Big Spring Optimist Club and Special Olympics Area 18; and sponsored by the Big Spring Civitans, Highland Lanes Youth Bowling Alliance and several local businesses.

While the athletes were obviously enjoying themselves, the volunteers were perhaps benefiting more from the experience, said Steve Pocsik, president of the local Optimist Club.

"The event has been a complete success," said Pocsik. "The athletes are having a good time, the volunteers are having a good time. Sometimes I wonder who gets more out of it — the athletes or the volunteers."

Donella Oliver, Texas Special Olympics Area 18 coordinator, said the athletes attending the regional competition Sunday — all of whom suffer from some sort of mental retardation — will have the option to compete in the state tournament in Dallas.

Competing in athletic tournaments give the Special Olympians a "positive feeling when they succeed," Oliver said. "It gives them self-esteem."

The organization's motto is: "Let me win and if I can not win, let me be brave in the attempt," she added.

The members of the Highland Lanes Young American Bowling Alliance, who kept score for the athletes, were again available at the tournament to aid the athletes in their efforts.

"This is the third year our kids have helped out," said Karen Hyden, YBA coach. "They enjoyed it so much last year they were asking if they could help again this year."

Aside from keeping score, YBA members also helped the athletes practice for the event, Hyden said.

"They're learning to work with Special Olympic children and making many new friends also," she said.

Maury Smith, an Optimist and chairman of the event, was also making new friends as he provided help and instruction to bowlers.

"There are some really good bowlers out here, and everybody is having a good time," said Smith.

"This is where the kids can really shine," he added. "When they're out here they're just like anyone else, they're athletes. This is their day."

Politicos pursuing Hispanics

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO — Democrats and Republicans courted the Hispanic vote in weekend swings through El Paso.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen, appearing before about 800 Democrats at El Paso's downtown train station, predicted a come-from-behind victory Tuesday for the Democratic ticket, headed by Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

"Those Republicans are dropping like a rock in these polls," Bentsen said in a speech laced with snippets of Spanish.

Republicans brought the first Hispanic member of the Cabinet to El Paso. Former Texas Tech president and current Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos told a gathering of about 200 Republicans that a George Bush administration would make education a high priority.

"Let us educate every person to their fullest potential," Cavazos said. "What we will do is take the highly motivated student and help this person through the system. Let us find that dropout and say, 'Son, daughter, queremos que tu vuelves' — we want you to return." Bentsen referred to Republican Spanish-language radio advertisements that were aired in the Rio Grande Valley and in El Paso in which an announcer intones that officials "will be watching" to discourage vote fraud or voting by non-U.S. citizens.

He condemned the ads as a tactic to scare Hispanics from the polls. "Now they're running radio ads in Spanish to scare Hispanics from voting, but we're not going to be frightened away," Bentsen said.

The radio spots aired only a few times in El Paso and at least one station, KVIV-AM, is no longer airing them.

Also attending the Republican meeting in a cramped banquet room at a hotel were former Sen. John Tower and Roy Barrera, a former candidate for Texas attorney general.

Tower began his speech by saying: "I'm sure the Dukakis camp is trying to convince our Mexican-American citizens that he cares about them. But let's look at the record." He cited a Hispanic high-school dropout rate of 66 percent in Massachusetts, and said Dukakis has no Hispanics in his cabinet.

"The Reagan-Bush team has been providing the climate for upward mobility among the Hispanic community," Tower said.

His words might have been largely lost on the 25-percent Hispanic audience. By contrast, about 75 percent of the crowd at the Bentsen rally was Hispanic.

Bentsen stuck closely to his standard stump speech, promising more jobs, affordable housing, easier college loans and protection of Social Security.

The senator even decried what he called the exportation of American jobs abroad, a touchy subject in a border city that relies heavily on maquiladoras.

Maquiladoras, also called twin plants, are factories in which components are shipped to Mexico for assembly, then brought back to the United States for distribution.

Many labor leaders have criticized the existence of maquiladoras and say they take jobs from Americans. Twin plants are a major source of income and employment to El Paso and its sister city, Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Bush, Dukakis both expressing confidence

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

George Bush and Michael Dukakis voiced confidence today as they crossed paths in battleground states on the final day of campaigning before Americans choose the next president.

Underdog Dukakis urged voters "to send a message that can be heard from California to Kennebunkport" while Bush declared he was finishing "not in a power walk but in a sprint."

The latest polls bolstered the vice president's optimism as he followed his Democratic rival into Ohio and roared toward St. Louis.

At a sunrise rally in a steelworkers union hall outside Cleveland, Dukakis was in high spirits after snatching a two-hour nap on an overnight flight from the West Coast.

"Good Morning, Ohio," he said. "We took the red-eye to be with the Buckeyes."

"I don't need sleep, I'm charging," he said. "We're going to win."

Bush began his day in the Detroit suburb of Southfield, Mich., and took a job at Dukakis' fondness for exercising by walking rapidly while carrying weights.

The vice president said the race in Michigan was close and "it's a very important place to be as we run right down to the finish line, not in a power walk but in a sprint."

Bush said that when Americans vote they should ask themselves this question: "Is the country headed in the right direction? The answer is, yes it is."

From Michigan, Bush was headed for rallies in Ohio, Missouri and Texas, where he maintains his voting residence.

Dukakis preceded Bush into St. Louis by a couple of hours and told his audience. "This is the 'show me' state, and I'm here to show you how much I want your support," he said. Then, in a reference to Bush's summer home in Maine, Dukakis asked, "Are you going to let the pollsters and pundits decide this election, or are you going to send a message that can be heard from California to Kennebunkport?"

"They're getting so worried Bush is following me around — can you believe it?" Dukakis told a rally in Portland, Ore., Sunday night.

The Democratic nominee was on a non-stop campaign swing with no time to see a bed until he arrives home in Massachusetts Election Day.

President Reagan was spending the day campaigning for Bush in California.

Both camps bombarded voters with 30-second commercials and the two candidates were the stars of 30-minute prime time election eve programs running back-to-back on the three major commercial networks — ABC, CBS and

NBC. A rush of late national polls said the Republican vice president was leading by margins ranging from five to 12 percentage points.

A 50-state, ABC News-Washington Post poll of 7,777 likely voters said Bush was solidly favored or leading in states with enough electoral votes to assure his election.

An Associated Press state-by-state survey said Bush was leading in states with 356 electoral votes — 86 more than the 270 needed for a majority — while Dukakis was ahead in states with a total of 101 electoral votes. Another 81 were in tossup states that included Pennsylvania, Illinois and Missouri.

Among the new polls, Gallup put Bush ahead by 12 percentage points, while USA Today-CNN made it 11. ABC set the margin at 10 and CBS said the difference was nine points. An NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll and another by Louis Harris and Associates said the margin for the vice president was five points with enough people undecided or wavering to allow for dramatic last-minute changes.

The presidential candidates weren't the only ones winding up their campaigns.

There were 33 Senate seats and the entire House being filled on Tuesday and 12 states were electing governors.

Democratic control of the Senate and House appeared secure and the Democrats appeared likely to add to the 27 to 23 edge they now have among governors.

Thousands of other offices were being filled and scores of initiatives also were on ballots, including 39 in California on which opposing sides spent more than $100 million.

Dukakis began a marathon race around the country late Sunday flying from Spokane, Wash., to Cleveland, with a dawn arrival in Florida crackdown leaves Texas a probable drug corridor

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — Drug smugglers are looking at the Texas coast as an alternate drug-trafficking corridor because of a crackdown along the Florida coast, officials said.

Officials along the Gulf Coast from Port Aransas to the Mexico border have begun gearing up for the anticipated increase in smuggling activity with joint operations involving both federal and state agencies.

Among the newest soldiers in the battle are park rangers assigned to the Padre Island National Seashore who now are armed with automatic weapons.

"We consider this a major problem," Chief Park Ranger Max Hancock told the San Antonio Express-News. "Padre Island is an ideal route for smuggling drugs into the country," he said.

"The smugglers are well organized and know what they are doing. It has just been in the past year that we have received additional funding so we can undertake a serious effort to stop the drug trafficking."

Hancock said the eight full-time rangers he has assigned to the 67-mile stretch of seashore have been authorized to carry automatic weapons as fears of the mounting drug war increase.

"The concept of law enforcement in the National Park Service is a relatively new idea," Ranger Don Carnes said. "We still want the public to see us as rangers and not just law enforcement officers, but that aspect of our job is increasing."

There are increasing indications of new drug smuggling activity — aircraft landing sites, four-wheel drive vehicle tracks and bales of marijuana that have washed up on the beach, Carnes said.

"A lot of the information we receive is based on observations from park visitors and other agencies," he said. "Once we hear about something going on, we set up a checkpoint to try to catch the smugglers in the act."

"But these people know what they are doing. For every one we catch, there are probably 10 that get away," Carnes added.

"Drugs in the national parks is not a new thing, but there is a new awareness. You have a vast amount of land with a very small amount of patrol. We're short on manpower with dozens of access points, so the criminals see (the parks) as a place to go."

Chief Petty Officer Don Gordon, officer in charge of the Coast Guard operation at Port Aransas, Texas, said $25 million has been added to the Coast Guard budget specifically for law enforcement.

"We know we have already missed a couple of big loads based on intelligence from other agencies,"

Gordon said. "The crackdown in Florida started gearing up in 1974 and the drug traffickers are working their way to other parts of the country."

Petty Officer 1st Class David Mroz of the Coast Guard station at Port Isabel said the size of the area to be covered complicates the job of controlling drug trafficking along the Texas Gulf Coast.

"There have been a lot of aircraft drops and land drops, but we don't think there have been that many by water," Mroz said. "With all the heat being put on Florida, we are expecting (drug trafficking) to start picking up."

Singer apologizes to San Antonio police

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio police canceled a boycott of a Willie Nelson concert after the country-western singer apologized to them for staging a benefit that raised funds for a man later convicted of killing two FBI agents.

Sgt. Harold Flammia, president of the San Antonio Police Officers Association two weeks ago asked officers not to work as security officials at the concert Thursday because Nelson sang at a California benefit for Leonard Peltier, an American Indian convicted of killing two FBI agents 13 years ago. The proceeds of the concert went toward Peltier's legal defense.

Nelson again issued an apology Friday night from his home in Austin.

"I accept that apology and if he indeed does not support cop killers, then the matter is closed," Flammia said Saturday. "If any police officer wants to work security, I will have no problems with that. I'll let their conscience be their guide."

"I deeply regret that so many police officers and police organizations were offended by the Indian concert. In the future, I will certainly consider all aspects of any benefit concert so as not to offend anyone. I have nothing but respect for all lawmen and under no circumstances do I support cop killers," Nelson told the San Antonio Express-News.

Earlier this year, Nelson had met with the American Federation of Police Officers and the Fraternal Order of the Police and issued a blanket apology for the concert.

But Flammia said Nelson never specifically apologized in his home state of Texas, explaining the state's umbrella police organization, Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas, is not affiliated with the other groups.

"That (apology) was to other parts of the country. Willie Nelson is from Texas and he should have made it a point to get the apology out everywhere through the media," Flammia said.

Although Flammia called off the San Antonio boycott, he said he will not attend the concert, even though he has nothing against Nelson's music.

Police officers boycotted a July 4th Nelson concert in Warwick, R.I., a promoter said earlier, but Nelson later met with officers and a compromise was worked out.

Interviews begin for amnesty applicants

AUSTIN (AP) — In the second phase of the 18-month-old amnesty program, local immigration officials were to begin interviewing applicants today for permanent residency in the United States.

Almost 18,000 immigrants filed for amnesty at the Austin Immigration and Naturalization Service office before the legalization program ended in May, said Lynn Consentine, head of the Austin legalization office.

More than 1.7 million people who entered the United States illegally before 1982 applied for amnesty nationwide, and about 30,000 claims have been denied, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Last month, the INS regional office in Dallas began mailing applications for permanent residency to aliens whose 18-month temporary legal status is drawing to a close, Ms. Consentine said.

Immigrants have one year to return the completed forms, along with three identification photographs and a money order to cover filing fees, she said. Under federal regulations, each applicant must pay $80, but families will not be charged more than $240.

Officials in Dallas process the forms and schedule interviews for applicants at the legalization office nearest them, Ms. Consentine said.

During the interviews, immigrants will be tested for English competence and on U.S. civics. Applicants can take the examination again six months later if they fail the first time, Ms. Consentine said.

Applicants may avoid the test by showing they have completed at least 40 hours of an approved 60-hour course, she said. The exam also is not required of applicants who are 65 or older, 16 or younger, have earned a high school equivalency degree or could not study due to blindness or another physical handicap, she said.

Farm laborers have until Nov. 30 to apply for special agricultural work permits.

Propane truck overturns

BRYAN (AP) — A truck carrying 7,000 gallons of liquid propane turned over at a major intersection causing traffic to be re-routed during an eight-hour cleanup process.

The Koch Service Inc. truck had been westbound on Texas Highway 21, and was attempting to make a left turn onto the access road entry ramp for the West Loop at 8:45 a.m. Saturday when it turned over, sliding into the ditch on the west side of the highway, Texas Department of Public Safety officials said.

The truck's driver was not injured and none of the propane leaked.

Twenty-five firefighters were called to the scene in case the gas ignited.

Teen suicide attempts prompt concern

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Attempted suicides are becoming more frequent in this West Texas town and some experts believe they signal a trend of more stressful lifestyles creeping into smaller communities.

In the last two weeks, at least nine young residents of this community of 22,400 have tried to kill themselves.

"For some reason in the last six months the number of teen suicide attempts has gone through the roof," said Paul McKenzie, a psychologist with Central Plains Mental Health-Mental Retardation, which handles suicide referrals for the area. "I cannot remember a time in the four years I have been here when we have ever had this kind of situation arise."

"It's scary," McKenzie told the Plainview Daily Herald. "I am amazed that we have as many as we have. I've worked at centers in big cities like Chicago and Los Angeles and I don't ever remember nine in a period of two weeks."

Since the beginning of the year, two young people have committed suicide in Plainview.

"It's not like we're having a teenager commit suicide every week, but what we do have is kids cutting their wrists, taking too many pills or talking about wanting to kill themselves," said Bobby Chandler, juvenile officer of the Plainview Police Department.

Suicide is the third-leading cause of American deaths in the 15 to 24 age group. But attempts far outweigh the number of successful suicides.

"It's a real pressing problem," agreed Chesna Sullivan, a psychologist with Lone Tree Center. "We have a lot of attempts here. There have been more attempts in Plainview recently than there have been in the 10 years I've been in practice."

"Kids are always under pressure," Ms. Sullivan said. "A

Chamber applicant interviewed

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

The Howard County Commissioners met with one of the finalists for the executive director position of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce today during a 45-minute special session.

Wayne R. Moore, currently the owner of The Heart O' the Hills Camp in Hunt is one of two finalists for the position vacated by the resignation of LeRoy Tillery, according to Clyde McMahon Jr. of the Chamber. The other finalist is Craig J. Rozvan of Austin.

The executive board of the chamber may make a decision on Tillery's replacement as early as today, McMahon said. "The Chamber of Commerce has made a decision to take more responsibility for recruiting industries into the Big Spring area," McMahon told the commissioners. "We feel (Moore) has the experience needed in this area."

For his part, Moore told the commissioners he appreciated having the chance to meet with them beforehand to answer any questions they may have had. "There is a need to have a solid working relationship with all government agencies... to get an idea what kind of economic development or job development the county needs to have," he said.

Responding to a question from County Judge Milton Kirby, Moore outlined his past experience, which includes several Chamber of Commerce positions throughout the United States.

He began with the Denton Chamber of Commerce as a staff member while still a student at North Texas State University in 1961, before serving a three-year stint in the Air Force as a Provost Marshall at Bunkerhill Air Force Base in Indiana.

After leaving the Air Force, he worked for two years as director of economic development for the Kansas City, Kansas Chamber of Commerce, before working with the Denver, Colo. Chamber as finance and membership director.

He served as a district manager for the national Chamber in South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska and Pennsylvania before becoming the executive vice president of the Beaumont Chamber of Commerce in 1970. He left that position in 1976 to go into private business at Heart O' the Hills, he said.

Commissioner William Crooker asked Moore if he had a specific economic development plan in mind for the Big Spring area.

Moore responded that he did not at this time, but was exploring the possibility of conducting an economic study of the area to determine what kind of industry would be best suited for the county. O.L. "Louis" Brown then noted that attracting conventions would be good for the local economy, and asked Moore what could be done in that area.

"Conventions are hard work, because the host does all work... but it's fun if you have the right kind of people involved," Moore replied, adding that Howard College could be useful in recruiting conventions.

Commissioners questioned after the meeting said they were favorably impressed with Moore. "He made a good impression," Crooker said. "He has a good background in industrial development... he looks good to me."

"I think the commissioners feel the need to help in industrial development, and I appreciate the fact that (the chamber) brought Mr. Moore over to talk to us before they made a decision," Crooker said.

"He appears to be very knowledgeable. He impressed me," commissioner Paul Allen said.

Inmate killed during prison escape attempt

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Harris County sheriff's detectives were suspended with pay pending an investigation of a volley of shots they fired during the fatal shooting of an unarmed prisoner during a weekend escape attempt as he was being transferred to county jail, officials said.

Roland Brothers Jr., 28, was killed Saturday evening by a shot in the back from about 50 feet away after he escaped from his handcuffs and a knee brace, left the detectives' unmarked car and started running along a driveway, Capt. Ken Stadler said.

The detectives fired 12 shots at Brothers, hitting him three times, officials told reporters. Stadler said the two detectives grabbed their pistols at an entrance to the jail, warned Brothers to stop and then started shooting.

Bystanders who said they saw the shooting claimed at least one officer fired at Brothers even after the prisoner fell to the ground from the first shot fired. Eleven more shots were fired at Brothers, who was hit three times, officials said.

The fatal wound was in the back, and Brothers also was shot twice in the chest, officials said. "They didn't have to keep shooting that man," said Elaine White, who claimed to have seen the shooting.

"Hey man, I'm not going anywhere," Ms. White quoted Brothers as saying after he had been shot once in the leg and again in the torso.

Major Eddie Macaluso of the sheriff's department identified the two detectives as Barry Rizk, 29, an employee of the department since 1981, and Robert Nichols, 34, who joined the department in 1983.

The detectives were relieved of duty with pay, Chief Deputy Tommy Thomas said. The detectives fired with a .357-Magnum revolver and a 45-caliber automatic, Thomas said.

The shooting is being investigated by the sheriff department's homicide division, the sheriff's internal affairs division and the civil rights division of the Harris County district attorney's office.

"The reason the officers shot was (that) they feared for their lives," Stadler said.

Thomas said department policy allows officers to shoot suspects if they "feel their lives are in danger or if they are threatened — that's the policy; it depends on the individual."

the Ohio city. From Cleveland he was heading for St. Louis and then, on to San Francisco.

Aides were considering another 1,000-mile detour from San Francisco before addressing a rally in Los Angeles. Then it was on to a pre-dawn Election Day rally in Des Moines, Iowa, and a stop in New Jersey or Ohio before ending the campaign home in Boston.

Whatever sleep he got would be in a tourist class seat on his campaign plane. Bush told a celebrity-studded rally in Southern California that Dukakis was putting up "a last minute smokescreen... So now all that's left is this daily whining about a negative campaign... Don't listen to the crying on the far left."

Sharing the platform with Bush were Charlton Heston, Chuck Norris, singer Andy Williams and comedians Joan Rivers and Rich Little. "This election will be decided on the basis of the issues not the ads," said Bush.

In the closing weeks of the campaign, Dukakis railed against the "lies and distortions" in Bush campaign ads that attacked the Dukakis record as governor.

Interviewed on the ABC-TV show, "This Week with David Brinkley," Bush campaign chairman James A. Baker III said, "I don't think it's a dirty campaign, I think it's a tough campaign... What we've been doing — and we candidly admit it — is painting him (Dukakis) for the liberal that he is."

Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, said on the NBC show "Meet the Press," that the Bush attacks have "had an effect and they've hurt and they demean the process."

Predicting an upset victory on Tuesday, Bentsen said that Dukakis "will not have as much as a mandate as he deserves because it was difficult to get the issues across with all the clutter of negative advertising."

Republican vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle heatedly denied Sunday the suggestion that he had a light schedule designed to keep him out of the limelight and in safely Republican areas.

"Yeah, we're in safe states for the Republicans, like West Virginia and Maryland, and states like that," he cracked sarcastically. "They're very traditional Republican (territory) and that's why we went there." Maryland and West Virginia traditionally have been strongly Democratic.

"We're very versatile, very flexible," he said. "We go to good ones (GOP strongholds), bad ones (Democratic strongholds), in between... wherever they say."

Quayle spent the day in safely Republican Virginia, much of it touring Berkeley Plantation, a picturesque historic site in the eastern part of the state.

House fire kills four people

DALLAS (AP) — Four people, including a teen-ager and two infants, died and another person was injured when a late night fire filled their home with smoke.

The fire broke out shortly after 11 p.m. in the one-story home that was not equipped with smoke alarms, officials said. But fire officials said the one-alarm blaze was extinguished quickly. "The fire itself didn't amount to a whole lot," said a dispatcher who declined to give his name. "It's smoke inhalation that gets most people."

Hospital officials believe all the victims suffered smoke inhalation. "The call came in from a neighbor who said there was some smoke coming out from the house next door and they tried to raise some people, but got no response," the fire department dispatcher said.

Witness Willie Wallace said smoke was not immediately visible, but when firefighters broke into the home to rescue the victims, the smoke poured out of the wooden frame home.

a previous buy, Chavez testified. He said he told the brothers they could not use any of the department's money to repay the debt, and they told him Perez would be back in Big Spring April 3 "so we can try again."

Chavez testified his captain told him to go back to his normal duties and if the Hernandez brothers called the police again, authorities would pursue the matter. He then explained that to his knowledge the Hernandez brothers never called back.

Hamy also elicited from Chavez the information that one photograph admitted into evidence matched the description the defendant and his brother had given Chavez of Perez's car — but Chavez, under questioning by Morgan, told the court he never saw Perez in person.

Morgan also ascertained that Chavez never saw Morgan driving the car in question. However, Hamby's second witness, Robert Alvarado of San Angelo, identified the car in the photo as belonging to Perez.

Alvarado, whose wife is Perez's aunt, also identified a black bag in a photograph admitted into evidence as looking like one Perez carried. He said he did not know what was in the bag.

Alvarado told the court that Perez left San Angelo about 9:45 a.m. Friday, April 3, 1987, after saying he would be back that afternoon "about three o'clock — but he never came back."

Court recessed at 11:45 a.m. and was to reconvene at 1 p.m.

Election losses force changes

A losing prizefighter often undergoes more intense post-battle training than does the victor. The loser must return to the gym to improve his punching, speed, defense and other ring skills.

So it is with Britain's Labor Party, soundly beaten by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives in the three last general elections. Finally getting the message, Labor at long last has backed away from one of the central policy plans it has pushed since World War II — nationalizing industry.

In its place and in reply to Thatcher's privatization of state-owned industries, Labor will now promote "social ownership" of selected companies. It's goal is to give workers and consumers a more direct say in how public utilities are run.

Labor's changed strategy results from Thatcher's well documented successes. In 1979 she vowed to uproot socialism in England by turning average Britons into property owners and stockholders.

"We will restore the balance in favor of the individual against the state," she promised. She's done it.

More than 1 million former tenants of public housing now own their own homes; 20 percent of British adults own stocks, up from 6 percent in 1979; income tax rates are down sharply from pre-Thatcher days; inflation is down and productivity up. Freed from foreign-exchange controls in 1979, London has had a rebirth as a world financial center, now channeling more money into the economy than does North Sea oil.

So now Labor leader Neil Kinnock, a moderate compared to some others in the Labor Party, wants to soften Labor's image of stubborn obstructionism to free enterprise programs — a policy that has lost elections. Like the vanquished fighter, he's back in the political gym, training for the next general election.

Boxing coaches promote safety

To the editor:

People have many views of boxing. It is dangerous only if you are willing to take chances. Now there are so many things that have helped to make the sport safer, like gloves, headgear, handwraps, body protectors and people in the ring whose job is to keep the boxer from getting hurt!

It all starts with the coaches when a young man or boy comes to learn to box. The coaches should always have safety in mind in practice and when boxing with other clubs.

Here in Big Spring we have had some terrific coaches, starting around 1980 with Danny Morales and A. Gonzales of the Howard County Boxing Club.

Danny Morales is a coach of the Big Spring Boxing Club now and works for the Federal Prison System. He is married to Frances and has two children. He serves also as the club's treasurer.

Another coach is Mr. Zeke Valles who works at Richardson Sid Carbon Company. He is married to Anita and has two children at home and several grandchildren. His son Lito was also a coach for the club. Zeke is a resident of Big Spring and has given many hours also to the sport of baseball for several years. He has coached the girls' softball teams. He is the vice president of the Boxing Club. He has been responsible for raising the club's donations and has done a good job!

Jose V. Martinez of the Big Spring Boxing Club is also a coach. He works for the Federal Prison Camp and has worked for the system for 13 years. He was a champion boxer of the USMC in the 1950s. He brings that experience and tries to pass on his own skills to any boxer he comes in contact with in his capacity as a coach. His interest in the boxers is non-profit, but he hopes to help some boxer develop his skills to the best of his natural ability.

Winning is not everything, it is how you win or lose that counts. Either way it is an experience that the young man will benefit from for the rest of his life.

Safety is always the main concern, not how many trophies are obtained. Learning self discipline is also at the top of the list! Some people put petty things first, always setting out to hurt people. That is not a good thing for anyone to do.

Anyone interested in boxing can contact any coach: Zeke Valles, 263-6023; Manuel Villa, 267-2021 or Danny Morales, 267-8733.

The last coach to join the Big Spring Boxing Club is Manuel Villa who has been in boxing for about six years himself. He is married to Lupe and has three boys and two girls.

Thanks to all the boxing fans and the supporters of boxing here in Big Spring.

In the end, excuses can't save you

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

It's a terrible thing to admit I suppose but one of my favorite pastimes is seeing what people say when they've been caught messin' where they shouldn't have been messin', to borrow a phrase from Nancy Sinatra's immortal, "These Boots Are Made for Walkin'."

A major league baseball player once missed a pop fly during a night game and said, "The moon got in my eyes."

Another major leaguer, having caused quite a stir because of comments he made to the media, said, "I was misquoted."

The problem was he made his comment on live television.

When Ronald Reagan got in too deep over Iran-Contra, I thought he handled it well. He said, "I forgot."

Which brings me to the college football player who was asked recently whether or not he took $5,000 from an agent.

He said, "I don't recall."

You might not recall the capital of Utah, but if you're a college football player, I've got to believe you know whether or not somebody gave you 5,000 bucks.

That brings us to the case of Congressman Pat Swindall, R-Ga., whose trial for perjury was halted by a U.S. district judge when his order on pretrial publicity was violated by Swindall's circulating campaign literature. (Swindall, who is locked in, a reelection fight with Democrat Ben Jones, had mailed the literature to prospective jurors.)

Lewis Grizzard

Swindall is charged with lying to a grand jury, which is looking into a massive money-laundering scheme in which Rep. Swindall attempted to negotiate a $850,000 home loan.

So far, Rep. Swindall has compared himself to Superman, noting that when he was a child, Superman was one of his heroes and Superman always won out over the odds in the end.

After that, he compared himself to Joe Namath, the former New York Jets quarterback who predicted his team would win the 1969 Super Bowl despite the odds against them.

Pat Swindall says you just wait and see if he doesn't beat this rap.

Then, Rep. Swindall compared himself to Little David, having to fight the Goliath of the federal government.

That's Superman.

What Rep. Swindall forgot was Superman was too much involved in truth, justice and the American Way to get himself indicted for perjury. Joe Namath may have hung around a few shady characters, but I roadway Joe never held public office.

The Little David comparison doesn't fit here, either. Little David was fighting for his life, not fighting to stay out of the slammer.

Many public officials do something else when they find themselves cornered. They get God involved.

Rep. Swindall says if he goes to jail it's because God really needs a prison ministry.

If you go to prison then, Pat, it won't be because God had anything to do with it. It will be because you're a crook.

It's like my high school English teacher, Miss Maryella Camp, said while addressing my senior class in 1964.

"Everybody is going to get to graduate except Frankie Garfield, who didn't make it."

At which time Frankie, in a loud voice, swore a rather common oath.

"Don't blame God, Sugar," said Miss Maryella. "He's not the one who flunked senior English."

Abortions, if legal, should be safe

By William F. Buckley Jr.

The fuss over RU 486 is reminding everyone of everything save possibly what more time should be given to thinking about, namely that abortion is a heavy act of moral egotism. It isn't unhealthy, but healthy that members of the community should express their disapproval of abortion in some way. The same people who believe it is not only natural but ennobling to refuse to buy grapefruit juice if it was made in South Africa are appalled at the threatened exercise of sanctions against the manufacturers of a French abortifacient.

How come? How are people supposed to express their indignation? Everybody is legally free to smoke cigarettes even though we know that cigarettes kill every year five times as many Americans as died in nine years of fighting in Vietnam. Suppose that a tobacco company came out with a brand of aspirin. Would it be offensive, by those who oppose tobacco as a killer, to organize a boycott of the tobacco company's aspirin, in protest against its merchandising of lung-killers?

One wonders at the eternal naivete of the pro-abortionists. The drug in question, one dispatch states, "has no damaging side effects" on the user. The only damaging side effect is the snuffing out of a human life. Which reminds me of the question recently put to his class by a college teacher. "The father is suffering from syphilis, the mother from consumption. Two of the children are diseased and will in due course die from it. A third child was stillborn. The mother becomes pregnant again: What do you recommend?" The class was unanimous in recommending abortion. "Congratulations," said the teacher. "You have just aborted Beethoven."

Now, that having been said to attempt a human context for the controversy, my own judgment is that RU 486 is welcome and ought to be made welcome in any society in which abortions are free and are the alternative means of achieving the desired end. On one technical point one should be absolutely clear. The RU 486 pill is an "abortifacient," not to be confused with a contraceptive. The idea is to kill the fetus, not to prevent its materialization.

Still, if abortions are to be permitted, their mission accomplished through a pill taken up to 49 days after fertilization would appear to be a genuine form of medical progress. I write in ignorance of the extent to which RU 486 causes acute pain to the fetus. But presumably if taken very early after pregnancy, i.e., before the development of a sensitive nervous system, the pain is reduced. Taken as a "day after" pill, presumably its work would be relatively simple. If a pill were developed that would cause an appendix to dematerialize, one would rejoice in the elimination of an entire surgical process, and medical conferences having to do with the question, Should that appendix be taken out or should it not? would become moot.

The RU 486 pill, it is argued, has the additional advantage of being more effective than some surgical abortions. Anti-abortionists should guard against any temptation to believe that it would be pleasant for abortions to be as painful as possible. That kind of thinking is related to the thought that those who commit certain sexual acts with other males ought not to complain if they contract AIDS. No, the decision to abort having been made, the laws of society granting the mother the right to abort, all relevant medical technology is appropriately harnessed to the effective doing of the job.

One of these days (one hopes) something will be invented which can act as a continuing contraceptive, preventing the union of sperm and egg. Something that a household seeking to avoid accidental pregnancy might put in its own tapwater, to be set aside when conception is desired. If that development came along on a truly general scale — a substance that might be put in the common drinking water, requiring those who wish to procreate to take a pill that would neutralize its effects — then there would never be any abortions, as these would be unnecessary. The right-to-lifers correctly point out that, at least in the United States, people who visit abortion clinics are for the most part women who know that there has been available, for over a generation, something called The Pill. Which, if regularly imbibed, would make abortions unnecessary.

So then: Applaud the impulses of those angered by the development of an abortifacient. But, having cooled down, welcome its development as a form of medical progress.

Working poor need some relief

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

I voted already. Seemed easier to go to the county clerk's office and do this thing than try to figure out which box I vote in normally. Also seemed like a way to earn some blessed relief from the frenzied rhetoric of campaigns, presidential and otherwise, as they approached Bloody Tuesday.

I figured I ought to vote before I got too disgusted to care.

Plus, I had time — and heaven knows, reporters have no time on election day to think, let alone carefully and rationally consider how to vote.

All that aside, you should know — if you don't already — that despite my foaming at the mouth in the cause of archconservatism, to paraphrase my colleagues, I voted for what I considered the most careful, thoughtful and enlightened leadership offered to our country.

I split my ticket — but most of my votes went to Democrats.

I like Mike.

He doesn't promise miracles without explaining how to pay for them. He doesn't deride the need for affordable daycare, health insurance and housing for people — many of us employed in the Republicans' vaunted "17 million new jobs" — who aren't among the country's wealthiest 20 percent.

The rich have gotten richer, the truly poor — including the working poor — have actually lost buying power, and a whole new class of needy Americans has arisen under the Republicans.

Many single parent families cannot afford certain basic amenities — health insurance for their children, for example — on the wages paid by those 17 million new jobs.

Daycare is an issue for me, politically. Most of the time it's a personal problem — but God bless a certain wonderful woman who babysits my small son and a family who've taken in my big boy after school — but I see it as an important issue.

"You can tell most about a nation by how they treat their children," someone once announced. We don't treat American children terribly well.

Besides outright abuse, neglect and the horrors of the drug culture, we have another problem — the numbers of "latchkey kids" are growing by leaps and bounds as more and more Americans are forced to augment their income by having both parents work.

I'd rather have someone who at least listens to men like Jesse Jackson — men who have seen what it's like not to be filthy rich in America — than someone who doesn't believe hunger and homelessness exist in this country as President.

I'd rather have the son of immigrants leading my country than the scion of wealth and power, a man whose idea of earning a living by the sweat of his brow is running the Central Intelligence Agency.

The Iranians want Bush for President. They know they can continue to hold the reins over the terrorists who kidnapped Terry Anderson and a dozen other Americans, with a Republican in that office, with no real fear of reprisal.

After all, it was "Just Say No Deal" Reagan who sold arms to them during Irangate.

There are real issues out there, folks. Issues like refusing to admit that you can't have Star Wars, a strong defense, an adequate educational program, genuine help for the needy, and Social Security untouched unless you raise more money somehow and from somewhere.

Never mind that Oliver North and Jesse Jackson are my idea of the dream ticket — one man to care enough about this country to dream for it such glories as liberty, justice and equality regardless of one's tax bracket, and one man with the savvy to make the dream come true — I just couldn't bring myself to vote for someone whose favorite song is "Don't Worry, Be Happy," in the face of AIDS, the educational crisis that is putting us behind the Asians and Europeans today and tomorrow, and a $160-billion trade deficit.

Suspect tried to reverse damage

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — A student suspected of unleashing a "virus" into an estimated 6,000 computers nationwide tried frantically to warn operators after discovering his experiment had gone awry, associates said.

Robert T. Morris Jr., 23, a first-year student in Cornell University's doctorate computer science program, is suspected of creating the computer virus that last week clogged the computers tied to a military network.

He has been unavailable since discovery of the virus Thursday.

His father, Robert T. Morris Sr., a government computer-security expert, said his son left the university Thursday to avoid reporters.

The senior Morris has refused to say whether his son created the virus.

The electronic virus, so named because it multiplies after invading a computer, jammed computers across the country linked to the Pentagon-supported Arpanet network, slowing computers by reproducing itself over and over.

Hit-and-run driver surrenders

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A man has surrendered after more than two years of keeping his identity a privileged secret and has given an unapologetic confession to fatally running down a drunken man on a dark beach road.

"I didn't know what I had hit," William D. Morser, a Delray Beach restaurateur, said Sunday after he was charged with leaving the scene of the March 9, 1986, accident in which Mark Baltes was dragged 60 feet to his death.

night. Baltes, 28, had a blood alcohol level of 0.26 percent, more than 2½ times Florida's legal intoxication level.

"If there is a jury that won't agree with that, then I'm living in the wrong country," Morser said. "I feel like I have been the one taken advantage of, not the one lying on the ground."

The hit-and-run accident in posh Palm Beach gained national attention because Morser's identity had remained a secret behind the attorney-client privilege of confidentiality.

The day after the accident, the driver contacted attorney Barry Krischer and asked him to keep his identity secret and negotiate a plea deal, which fell through.

"I realized I had run over something that was not a garbage bag or not a bag of rags," Morser said. "It all happened very quickly. What could I do at that point?"

Morser blamed Baltes for being in the road in the middle of the

Sakharov arrives for U.S. visit

ANDREI SAKHAROV

BOSTON (AP) — Andrei D. Sakharov arrived here Sunday to visit with relatives and undergo medical tests on his first visit outside the Soviet Union after years of agitation over Soviet human rights policies.

Speaking through a translator, the tall, balding physicist and Nobel laureate called himself a free man but said others remain in prison who helped him through his years in internal exile in a Soviet city closed to Westerners.

"Two years ago, I became a free man when I returned from Gorky to Moscow. Now I have become even freer because I have been granted the right to travel around the world," Sakharov told reporters during a brief meeting.

Central America hazardous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Central America has become one of the most hazardous areas for U.S. government personnel because of widespread anti-American sentiment that has produced incidents ranging from harassment to diplomatic expulsions.

sentries at Howard Air Force Base exchanged gunfire with unidentified intruders on four occasions last month.

Diplomats stationed there also face the potential risk of losing out on career promotions because of their identification with the Reagan administration's highly controversial policies in the region.

Between February and October, 240 cases of harassment of American servicemen in Panama were reported, according to the U.S. Southern Command. The U.S. diplomatic presence in Panama is being reduced because of what one official called "the potentially confrontational situation" resulting from continued U.S.-Panamanian hostility.

Promotions proposed for two senior diplomats stationed in Central America have been blocked by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., an outspoken critic of administration policy.

In El Salvador, concern over personal security has heightened with stepped up leftist rebel activity in San Salvador, the capital. In late October, the offices of the U.S. Agency for International Development were struck by a projectile that cracked several windows and caused minor damage.

Perry Shankle, president of the American Foreign Service Association, the union of career diplomats, said, "As a career officer you do put your career on the line in these highly charged situations. There are a lot of dangers involved." He said the association has asked Dodd to reconsider his action.

In previous years, the U.S. Embassy has been the target of rebel attacks on several occasions but without serious incident. Diplomats posted in El Salvador long have been security conscious, never taking the same route twice in a row when commuting.

Publisher issues book on security

LONDON (AP) — Jane's defense publishers today expanded its series with a new volume on riot control, counter-insurgency weapons and equipment to detect and protect against terrorist action.

Operational equipment includes land, sea and air vehicles, surveillance aids such as night vision goggles, thermal imagers, explosives detectors and robots to set off discovered bombs.

"The amount of effort and research being put into the defense of every realm against traditional threats is dwarfed by that going into the defense of the realm and the populace against the terrorist, the insurgent, the freedom fighter or the guerrilla under whatever color of ideological cloak," editor Ian Hogg says in his foreword to "Jane's Security and Counter-Insurgency Equipment."

The riot control section lists a wide range of tear gas devices, stun grenades, plastic bullets and fragmentation grenades.

The new book by the respected defense information publisher lists equipment in five categories. The firearms section includes standard infantry weapons as well as guns for specialized security tasks.

Armor and protection includes bulletproof vests, flak jackets and even a bulletproof undershirt that won't be conspicuous under a business executive's shirt.

The fifth section covers transmitters, receivers, a fingerprint identification system, security fences and laser barriers.

The new book was produced by Jane's Publishing Co. Ltd., which publishes "Jane's Fighting Ships," "Jane's All The World's Aircraft" and a variety of other yearly volumes.

Earthquake kills 18, injures 54

BEIJING (AP) — A powerful earthquake toppled homes and scarred roads in a remote mountainous region of southern China, killing at least 18 people and injuring 54, the State Seismology Bureau said today.

reports from the scene put the casualty toll at 18 dead and 54 injured.

The quake, which measured 7.6 on the Richter scale, hit Yunnan province's Lancang County on Sunday night. The area, near the Burmese border, is sparsely settled by the Lahu minority group.

He said he did not have details of how the 18 were killed. Many homes in and around Lancang were destroyed, as was at least one road, Liu said.

Telephone lines to Lancang were cut by the quake, but Liu Xiaowei of the State Seismology Bureau in Beijing said sketchy

At about the same time, a smaller quake was reported in northern Thailand near the Burmese border. The quake caused minor damage to buildings and swayed high-rise buildings hundreds of miles to the south, in Bangkok.

Four sisters commit suicide

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Fearing their father could not raise enough money for their dowries, four sisters in southern India committed suicide, Indian news agencies said.

Friday while their father was away on duty and their mother was working in the family's rice paddy, according to the reports.

The sisters hanged themselves with their saris from the ceiling of their house at Alappulli in Kerala state, United News of India and Press Trust of India reported Sunday.

Last February, three sisters between the ages of 18 and 22 hanged themselves over dowry problems in the northern state of Uttar Pradesh.

The four young women were concerned about the financial problems their father, a police constable, had after providing a dowry for their eldest sister, the news agencies said.

Although India outlawed dowry in 1962, the practice of paying the groom's family is still widespread.

The sisters — Santha, 25, Sumati, 23, Anaka, 21 and Sasikala, 18 — took their lives

Many marriages are still arranged by families before the bride and groom ever meet, and there are frequent reports of young women being set on fire by in-laws in dowry disputes that continue after the weddings.

Col. Jean-Claude Paul, who was forcibly retired Sept. 30 as commander of the Dessalines Battalion, died about 3 p.m. Sunday of a heart attack in his home in suburban Ferme, Radio Haiti-Inter said. He was 49.

Company fulfills singing dreams

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Williams once sang professionally. Tara Drzal has never sung in front of an audience before and Mike Sternberg has been singing for months with a voice described as fingernails scraped over a chalkboard.

Even so, the three were among the would-be Sinatras, Madonnas and Elvises living out fantasies of being a singing star at a recent Record-A-Hit show at Choice's.

Tuesday night patrons of the saloon can get up on stage, grab the microphone and sing along with tapes of hit songs recorded without the lead vocal.

"It makes you feel like a rock star once you loosen up," said Jennifer Nicoll, a college student.

Larry Corcoran, a bartender at another tavern, said, "You can be anybody you want to be up there. It's a fantasy."

The singers get a free tape of their performance, said Rob Broms, a former sales manager who saw a similar audience participation show in San Francisco 2½ years ago and founded Record-A-Hit in Chicago.

Record-A-Hit sets up shop at five different Chicago-area nightclubs each week. The company also does private functions, special video tapings and even goes on band tours.

The concept is big business in Japan, where it is known as "karaoke," or "empty orchestra."

"Everything is free for the customer except the beer," said Rick Asta, Choice's owner. "This really helps my place's Tuesday blahs, with bigger crowds."

Steve Morse, left, and Dave Sternberg are two would-be Sinatras who are living out their fantasies as saloon singers, while Monica McCarthy, center, provides back-up at a recent Record-A-Hit night in Chicago.

Record-A-Hit offers over 600 selections — songs from the 1930s to the 1980s.

"I pick songs whose words I'm familiar with," said Ms. Drzal, a computer programming trainee.

Singers get plenty of help — copies of lyrics, tips on vocalizing, echoes and other electronic effects, backup singers and props like sunglasses and cowboy hats.

Master of ceremonies Steve Morse coaxes people on stage like a carnival barker.

"Make a tape. They're great little stocking stuffers for Christmas," he implored.

The show attracts an occasional Elvis or Michael Jackson impersonator.

At Choice's one Tuesday, Dave

Fanning, who works for Record-A-Hit, did Presley's "I Can't Help Falling In Love With You."

"Than' you, you're boo-ful," he kept telling the crowd, a la Elvis.

"Gee, Elvis lives," yelled Williams, a former professional singer and current AT&T supervisor who had done Sinatra's "Summer Wind" earlier.

Dave Sternberg did a rousing "Hello Dolly" in a raspy Louis Armstrong voice.

Some are kidded for their performances. When J.R. Rainey finished singing "Boardwalk," his brother, Henry, told the audience, "J.R.'s supposed to be at a church meeting tonight. I want to see how he's going to take this tape home and play it for his wife."

Although the crowd of about 50 people heard some less-than-tuneful crooners, there weren't any catcalls.

Particularly off pitch was Sternberg, a 35-year-old lawyer who sang Sinatra's "My Way."

"His voice is like fingernails on a chalk board," offered Joy Bouton, a college student.

Sternberg's own brother, Mike, agreed.

"He can't carry a tune in a suitcase," he said.

But the crowd gave him an ovation when he finished.

"You can be as lousy as the day is long but everybody is very supportive," Sternberg said.

Tibbs discusses jujube tree

Adel Tibbs spoke to the Planters Garden Club members. Her topic was the jujube tree.

The trees, which can be found growing throughout Texas, look best in July, as the fruit ripens, Tibbs noted.

She has several trees growing in her own yard, including saplings that she shares with her friends.

Using the fruit, Tibbs made sweet pickles, bringing samples to taste.

The golfball-size fruit looks like a small green apple.

The trees, which thrive on dry soil, compare favorably to date palms, Tibbs added.

Blooms make beautiful table decorations, she noted.

Cold weather doesn't bother the jujube. During the summer, the dark, shiny leaves cast a welcome shade, said Tibbs.

Mrs. Sweatt conducted the business meeting. Nadine Hodnett was hostess.

Christmas dinner will be in the home of Mrs. Gladys Sanderson.

Words of wisdom help

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 20-year-old woman. Several years ago I came across this piece in your column, and it has helped me a great deal to understand relationships and to grow emotionally.

Every time I put another "Mr. Right" behind me, I go through my hope chest and read this piece. It gives me an odd sense of strength. I'd really love for others to read it and realize what I've realized from reading it. Please run it again. Thank you.

B.K. MEEHAN,
DEAR B.K.: I'm happy to — here it is:

After a while, you learn the subtle difference between holding a hand and chaining a soul. And you learn that love doesn't mean leaning and company doesn't mean security. And you begin to understand that kisses aren't contracts and presents aren't promises. And you begin to accept your defeats with your head held high and your eyes open, with the grace of a woman, not the grief of a child. You learn to build your roads on today, because tomorrow's ground is too uncertain and futures have a way of falling down in mid-flight. After a while you learn that even sunshine burns if you get too much. So you plant your own garden and decorate your own soul, instead of waiting for someone to bring you flowers. And you learn that you really can endure, that you really are strong. And that you really do have worth and that you keep learning. With every goodbye you learn.

NRA Endorses Troy Fraser

On Tuesday, November 8, you have the opportunity to cast your vote for a supporter of your right to keep and bear arms.

His name is Troy Fraser.

Troy Fraser has earned an "A" rating from the NRA and Texas State Rifle Association based on his responses to a candidate questionnaire on sportsmen's issues.

His opponent, Mrs. Avery, refused to answer the questionnaire. This is often an indication of indifference, if not outright opposition, to sportsmen's issues.

Troy Fraser has pledged to actively support pro-gun/pro-hunting legislation and oppose measures which would further restrict Texas's firearms owners.

The NRA urges you to vote for Troy Fraser on November 8th and take at least three sportsmen to the polls with you.

Every vote is critical.

Remember, the legislators you elect on November 8th will have a direct impact on your firearms freedom for the next two years. It is critical that we elect a committed supporter like Troy Fraser to office.

Nuclear plant workers criticize government for wall of secrecy

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Mitchell Maulfair claimed he got bladder cancer because he handled plutonium during the 26 years he worked at the Rocky Flats nuclear plant near Denver.

Maulfair, who retired about two years before the cancer was diagnosed, filed suit against the Energy Department contractors who operate the nuclear weapons facility. As part of a 1986 out-of-court settlement, Maulfair agreed not to discuss any payments he might receive or make any further charges that the cancer, which was removed surgically and has not recurred, was caused by exposure to the plutonium processed at Rocky Flats.

"If I disclose anything about the agreement, they can come back and sue me," said the 71-year-old Maulfair, who now lives in Fort Laramie, Wyo. "They have people like me pretty well shut up."

Maulfair's case is symptomatic of the problems faced by the 90,000 workers at the Energy Department's nuclear weapons production complex in documenting any relation between exposure to radiation and cancer or other diseases.

Four of the 17 major facilities operated by the department in 13 states have been wholly or partially closed down for safety reasons, bringing nuclear weapons production to a virtual halt. And Energy Secretary John S. Herrington has informed Congress that it could cost as much as $110 billion to clean up radioactive contamination at the sites and make them safe.

However, present and past workers in the nuclear weapons complex say they still face a wall of secrecy around the effects of radiation on their health.

Safety concerns have prompted unions and individuals to file dozens of lawsuits across the country.

Additionally, some unions and other critics are demanding that the Energy Department provide independent researchers or another federal agency with data who collected on 600,000 people who worked in the nuclear weapons production complex, starting with the top secret Manhattan Project in 1942.

The research is being con-

The Fernald Feed Materials Production Center, where uranium is processed, actually had higher emissions than previously reported, Department of Energy officials told a congressional subcommittee. The plant is located near Cincinnati.

ducted by Oak Ridge Associated Universities, a consortium of 49 colleges, universities and other institutions analyzing the data under contract with the Energy Department.

Critics, and they are legion, have accused the Energy Department of suppressing and distorting data and delaying the research, and failing to inform workers at nuclear weapons plants of the practical implications of scientific findings.

Dr. Anthony Robbins, director of the federal government's National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health from 1978 to 1981, said "there is a potentially great risk" to workers in the nuclear weapons complex.

"The real issue is that the Energy Department has chosen not to look too closely at the problem," said Robbins.

The criticism had prompted senior officials in the department to review their health policies, said C. Anson Franklin, assistant energy secretary for public affairs.

"There are two issues we are looking at. One is the narrow issue of access to the data, for people who claim they have attempted to see it and have been denied," said Franklin. That issue might be resolved within the month, he said.

The department also is reviewing "the wider issue of what we are doing with epidemiological studies," and that officials might decide that major changes were needed in the way scientific analysis is conducted and how the results are presented to workers.

The department has spent $42 million since 1964 analyzing the health and death records of 300,000 of the 600,000 workers who have worked in the federal nuclear weapons complex.

That research has been turned over to the Oak Ridge group, and its published findings are ambiguous. An Oak Ridge research team headed by Donna L. Cragle, under contract from the Energy Department, found in a study released last month that a "statistically significant" number of a sample of 1,274 male workers at the Savannah River Plant died from leukemia, a cancer of the blood system.

However, the study also said the incidence of leukemia was "unexplained," meaning that researchers were unable to establish a direct link between cancer and possible exposure to radiation at the plant, which produces plutonium and tritium for nuclear weapons.

The three working reactors at the plant, near Aiken, S.C., have been closed down for safety reasons and the first will not be restarted until next month at the earliest, according to Energy Department officials.

After the election, then what?

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — "Well, what do we do now?" George Bush asked Ronald Reagan the morning after they were elected eight years ago. Either Bush or Michael Dukakis will face that question come Wednesday, and the answer is not as evident now as it was in 1980.

The long campaign between Republican Bush and Democrat Dukakis has been filled with political symbols, such as the flag and the Pledge of Allegiance, but short on specifics about what either candidate actually would do in the White House.

There have been no overriding issues, such as a faltering economy or a threat to peace that have compelled Bush or Dukakis to come forward with bold ideas. For example, neither candidate has been willing to offer a concrete program for shrinking the huge budget deficit.

Reagan's election was viewed as a mandate for a change in course from the Carter administration. He pledged to cut taxes, build up the Pentagon and cut down the government.

Bush, ahead in the polls a few days before the election, promises to stay the course set by Reagan. "When you have to change horses in midstream, doesn't it make sense to switch to the one who's going the same way?" Bush asked.

On the other hand, if Dukakis managed an upset, there would be a major upheaval in policy and personnel. "The best America is yet to come," he promises. But again, few specifics.

With the now familiar invitation to "read my lips," Bush says he will not raise taxes and, indeed, will try to cut capital gains taxes. He says he will oppose new spending by Congress and personally negotiate with lawmakers for a "flexible freeze" on the budget.

There have been no overriding issues, such as a faltering economy or a threat to peace that have compelled Bush or Dukakis to come forward with bold ideas. For example, neither candidate has been willing to offer a concrete program for shrinking the huge budget deficit.

He promises to keep America's military strong, pressing ahead with research and eventual development of the Star Wars missile defense shield, while at the same time seeking progress with the Soviet Union. And he says he will clean up the environment and strive to improve education.

Bush also promises more money for child care, including a toddler tax credit of up to $1,000 per child under age 4 for poor families.

He has proposed no less than five summits, including an early meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to "size each other up correctly."

Bush has pledged to convene a NATO summit "as one of my first acts as president." He says there will be a global conference on the environment at the White House within the first year in office and a summit of Western hemisphere nations to chart strategy for a war against drugs.

Dukakis promises a crackdown on tax cheats who he says beat the Treasury out of $110 billion a year. He says he'll hire more tax inspectors — which Bush seized on as a promise that Dukakis would put an IRS agent in every kitchen.

On taxes, Dukakis says no responsible candidate can rule out the possibility of new taxes, but that he'd ask an increase only as a last resort.

To fight drugs, Dukakis said he would double the number of agents at the Drug Enforcement Agency within five years and hire 800 more federal prosecutors to handle drug cases.

He says he will wipe out the trade deficit in four years and put the country on the course toward a balanced budget.

On defense, he calls Star Wars a fantasy but still would put $1 billion in the budget for it, about 25 percent of what it gets now. Dukakis promises to find a "sensible, affordable" way to modernize the land-based nuclear missile arsenal but opposes the MX missile.

Dukakis also would scrap two planned aircraft carrier task forces, but said he would bolster military readiness with a "conventional defense initiative." He says he would lay out the prospect of better economic ties to the Soviet Union as a way of achieving concessions on arms control, human rights and other problems.

A strong voice for West Texas

"Troy Fraser has the traits that are rare in a candidate - he has common sense and business sense. He'll use his business sense to create more jobs, and he'll treat your tax money with the respect it deserves. West Texas needs Troy Fraser in Austin."

Vice President George Bush

Fraser is opposed to a state income tax, and will work to control state spending. He demands tougher penalties for drug dealers, and supports more local control for schools.

Fraser was one of the few state legislative candidates to receive President Reagan's endorsement.

"Troy Fraser knows that the voice of the district is in West Texas, not in the lobbies and hallways of the Texas Capitol. Send Troy to Austin."

Business specializes in providing revenge

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Nan Berman has a suggestion for all spurned lovers, tyrannized employees and anyone who's had an especially bad day: don't get mad, get even. And she'd be glad to help.

Her month-old business "Enough is Enough," billed as "creative revenge for today's world," has already mailed a three-foot dead bluefish to a philandering husband in California and delivered a "burned and messy suit to a lawyer who implied his girlfriend was 'unsuitable' for him.

More common requests among those wronged, however, are the 13 dead roses, sent in a ribboned black box ($25), or 13 black balloons tied together by a single dead red rose ($30).

Other "insults to suit the occasion" include a real stuffed shirt ($25) for pompous bosses and drinking glasses with cigarette butts on the bottom for obnoxious smokers.

"Twenty years ago, people didn't speak up the way they do now," said Berman. "But since the '60s, people have expressed themselves. And with me, you really have a way to vent things out."

Berman, 43, was inspired to start "Enough is Enough" after a year spent driving a florist delivery truck for a boss she said was the "grumpiest, most unpleasant person ever born."

"She never smiled, she was just miserable," said Berman. "I hung in there for a year but I was so sick of it. I thought — I can get this same atmosphere by making a business out of it."

Berman financed her venture with $30,000, some of it from her husband, a businessman. She provided bargain-basement department stores and gift shows for ideas. She brought back artifacts such as a cloth witch on a stick (for "those witchy people on brooms"), porcelain pigs ("for people on a diet") and real kites (to send those for whom you want to tell "go fly a kite").

She buys her dead roses for $5 for several dozens at the Boston Flower Exchange and purchases other items in bulk. Her material is a combination of specialty store items from joke shops and objects she finds herself.

Berman is happiest fielding phone calls in her small office behind a florist, surrounded by boxes of wilting roses, black balloons, and buttons reading "First of All — We Kill All the Lawyers."

She jumps up enthusiastically to point out another gag, like the cactus she recently bought. She plans to deliver it to an insufferable boor with the words "sit on it," she said, laughing uproariously.

"Maybe after a while it won't seem so funny but now I can't help laughing all the time," she said.

Since she opened her business, Berman has received more than 100 calls and 30 people have paid for her services. She promises her customers that she won't reveal their names.

"I want to stress that we'll do anything, as long as it's legal," she said.

Berman is most eager to coordinate more elaborate schemes. For people who want to play a prank on a boss, she has a plan in the works to move the boss's office furniture and to another part of the building.

"But we'll move it back during the day," she said. "Most people we get are doing this stuff for a joke. They're not malicious."

Berman's part-time staff consists of her 23-year-old son, her cousin and a friend.

Election 100 years ago was an odd one

WASHINGTON (AP) — The election of 100 years ago Sunday was one of the strangest in U.S. history: the candidate who won the popular vote lost the election.

Grover Cleveland, the incumbent president, won a narrow popular victory against challenger Benjamin Harrison. Cleveland had 5,540,309 votes and Harrison 5,439,853.

But Harrison took New York, Ohio and Indiana by narrow margins for an electoral vote total of 233 to the president's 168. That has not happened since, but New York and Ohio are among the pivotal states this time, too.

Both Cleveland and his wife took the defeat as a temporary setback. On leaving the White House, Frances Cleveland told the staff: "I want you to take good care of all the furniture and ornaments in the house, for I want to find everything just as it is now when we come back again ... four years from today."

They did come back, too. In 1892, Cleveland defeated Harrison, winning both the popular and electoral vote to become the only president who ever served two terms that were not consecutive.

Unknown practitioners of dirty tricks started a rumor in the 1888 campaign that Cleveland abused his young wife, whom he married in 1886. There apparently were no grounds for the rumor, which seemed to have done him little harm — any more than the story that he was supporting an illegitimate child. That one was true and he admitted it at once. The story gave rise to a celebrated street song:

"Maw, Maw, where's my paw?
"Gone to the White House
"Haw, haw, haw."
There was some doubt whether the child was his. He had known the mother, a widow named Maria Halpin, during his early political career in Buffalo, N.Y. She named her son Oscar Folsom Cleveland.

In the 1884 election, which Cleveland won over James G. Blaine, a supporter suggested:

"We are told that Mr. Blaine has been delinquent in office but blameless in private life, while Mr. Cleveland has been a model of official integrity but culpable in his personal relations. We should therefore elect Mr. Cleveland to the public office which he is so well qualified to fill and remand Mr. Blaine to the private station he is admirably fitted to adorn."

Indifference to scandal was not the only thing that made campaigns different then. Cleveland ran into trouble in 1888 because he had a budget surplus — the federal government's revenue amounted to $371 million, $103 million more than its spending.

Much of the embarrassing surplus came from tariffs on imported goods. Cleveland, a Democrat, wanted lower tariffs. That was partly because he wanted to import more cheap manufactured goods for the benefit of farmers who were important supporters of his party.

Harrison, a Republican, got support from industrialists who wanted a high tariff to protect their products from foreign competition.

After the 1888 election, Harrison and the 51st Congress got rid of the surplus. It was called the "billion-dollar Congress" because it was the first that ever spent that much. There was some help from Harrison. A Civil War hero himself, he appointed as commissioner of pensions "Corporal" James Tanner, whose policy was to help "every old comrade that needs it."

Clergy hold prayer meet for hostages

WAUWATOSA, Wis. (AP) — A pastor appealed Sunday for spiritual understanding of the terrorists holding nine Americans hostage in the Middle East as an interdenominational service pondered news from Lebanon.

"Oh, God of all people, teach us how to pray now for those we identify as enemies in our lives," said the Rev. Thomas Kojis, who was aboard a jetliner in Greece that was damaged by a terrorist bomb in 1986.

Kojis, pastor of the Wauwatosa Avenue United Methodist Church, was among seven clergy of several denominations participating in a prayer service for the hostages at the Underwood Memorial Baptist Church in Wauwatosa, a Milwaukee suburb.

Kojis said he wanted to discuss the captors as well and what might have motivated them to take Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was captured March 16, 1985, and is the longest-held U.S. hostage.

A videotape in which Anderson says President Reagan and Vice President George Bush have not done enough to secure his release surfaced last Monday.

TROY FRASER ★ FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE ★

An Open Letter to the Voters of the 69th District:

I take great pride in the way I have conducted my campaign for state representative. I have sent a strong message to the voters by taking clear stands against a state income tax, and for more funding for education and rural health care.

My message has been positive, and the voters of the district have responded with tremendous support and enthusiasm. Not once have I attacked my opponent on a personal level, or questioned the integrity of private citizens as she has done. All of you have seen my radio and T.V. ads and know I have addressed only the issues.

I am disappointed that my opponent has stooped to personal smear tactics as a desperate, last minute attempt to win votes. The voters are offended by the untruths she has chosen to use.

Mrs. Avery made a serious mistake early in her campaign by stating that she "would not rule out voting for tax increase," and "would consider voting for a state income tax." The rest of her campaign has been spent developing a smoke screen to avoid addressing the real issues.

The bulk of our fund raising came from friends and supporters in this district, and the party I represent. The small percentage of PAC money received came from groups with a vested interest in West Texas — the Texas Farm Bureau, Texas Cotton Growers Association, and National Rifle Association.

I commend all my supporters for helping me run an upbeat campaign. Let's continue on the same positive path that we have been on, and finish with a victory we can be proud of this Tuesday.

Sincerely,

Troy Fraser

BIG SPRING HERALD, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1988

Giants squash Cowboys, 29-21

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New York Giants put together their best half of the season, and their 26-0 halftime lead was sufficient to hand the Dallas Cowboys their sixth straight defeat — the first time that's happened since their inaugural season in 1960.

Cowboys coach Tom Landry replaced ineffective starting quarterback Steve Pelluer with Kevin Sweeney in the second half, and the 1986 Super Bowl champions held off a Sweeney-led comeback Sunday to post a 29-21 NFL victory over Dallas.

"We're starting to get that Super Bowl ego back even though there still is a long way to go," defensive end Eric Dorsey said. "We're starting to show signs of breaking away (from the rest of the division). You don't see Dallas blown out like that in the first half."

One point to be made is that this is not the Cowboys of old. In losing, Dallas, 2-8, dropped its sixth straight, marking the first time since 1960 that the Cowboys have lost six in a row in the same season and virtually assuring them of a third straight losing season.

However, almost every one of the Giants said the game was something special. The Giants dominated the opening 30 minutes as they scored on five straight possessions, including three touchdowns set up by Dallas turnovers. Lawrence Taylor personally set up two touchdowns with sacks that resulted in fumbles by Pelluer deep in Cowboy territory, while the other TD came after New York drove 85 yards following a Herschel Walker fumble.

Ottis Anderson cashed in on the first turnover with a 1-yard run, while quarterback Phil Simms hit wide receiver Stephen Baker on TD passes of 22 and 6 yards following the other fumbles.

Paul McFadden added field goals of 37, 47 and 50 yards as the Giants, 7-3, won their fourth straight game to remain in first place in the NFC East, a game ahead of both Washington and Phoenix, who both rallied to win Sunday.

"At times today, I felt we were playing the kind of football that we have to play," Simms said. "We got very good defense and our offense took advantage of the opportunities."

And it was something the Cowboys noticed.

"All this stuff they have been writing (about the Giants) about them not playing well," cornerback Everson Walls said. "They certainly picked a good time to step up and do what they are capable of doing."

However, the Giants got just three first downs in the second half and had to sit back and watch in ad-

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Kevin Sweeney wriggles away from New York Giants Johnnie Cooks to throw an incomplete pass in the second half after Sweeney substituted for Steve Pelluer. Sweeney threw three touchdowns, but was unable to make up the deficit and the Giants won 29-21 Sunday at Giants Stadium.

miration as Sweeney replaced Peffner and picked them apart.

The former Fresno State star hit 19 of 37 passes for 189 yards for three touchdowns. The last one came on a fourth-down, 2-yard TD toss to Ray Alexander with 1:59 remaining.

Dallas recovered the onside kick and reached the New York 29 before linebacker Gary Reasons knocked down a fourth-down Sweeney pass.

"I felt pretty good," Sweeney said. "I had a lot of fun. It was nice to get an opportunity to go out and play. That's all I've ever asked for. This isn't the way it was drawn up on the chalkboard but sometimes you have to go out there and wing it."

Landry said it's too early for him to say which quarterback he will go with next week against Minnesota. Sweeney and Pelluer also deflected questions about who should start.

New York played the final quarter without Taylor, who suffered a bruised pectoral muscle late in the third-quarter tackling Sweeney. The injury is not believed to be serious, teammates said.

The Giants will travel to Phoenix for a first-place showdown with the Cardinals.

Oilers, Browns brace for key divisional clash

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers and Cleveland Browns are survivors in the year of the injured quarterbacks.

While other teams around the league faltered as their quarterbacks fell, the Oilers and Browns kept winning. Both take 6-3 records into tonight's nationally televised game in the Astrodome.

"I don't know of any place but Cleveland and Houston where you could keep on winning without a quarterback," Oilers coach Jerry Glanville said. "They did the same thing we did."

Houston's Warren Moon and Cleveland's Bernie Kosar were both injured on opening day.

Moon missed five games after suffering a broken shoulder blade against Indianapolis and returned on Oct. 16, leading the Oilers to a 34-14 victory over Pittsburgh.

Kosar suffered an elbow injury against Kansas City and missed six games, returning Oct. 23 against Phoenix in a 29-21 victory.

The surrounding talent on both teams has helped the Browns and Oilers to continue winning, according to Glanville.

After Kosar went down, the Browns then lost Gary Danielson with a broken ankle, Mike Pagel with a separated shoulder and had Don Strock in the starting role when Kosar returned with the team at 3-3.

The Oilers went 2-2 under Cody Peffner and Moon was injured and when Carlson suffered a broken thumb against Kansas City, Brent Pease came on and scored the winning touchdown in a 7-6 victory.

Defense has picked up the slack for both teams, especially for the Browns, who lead the NFL in pass defense and rank second in total defense.

The Browns have allowed two touchdowns passes this season and are yielding 136 yards per game in the air.

The Oilers, with the AFC's No. 2 rushing attack led by Mike Rozier, may have more success against the Browns rush defense, ranked 20th among the 28 NFL teams.

Kosar will face off against Houston's defense, ranked sixth in the NFL in total defense and eighth against the pass.

It will be a pressure game for the Oilers secondary of cornerbacks Steve Brown and Patrick Allen and safeties Jeff Donaldson and Keith Bostic.

Glanville knows it will be hard to get a good pass rush on Kosar. Kosar is 5-0 against the Oilers and Moon is 0-7 against the Browns but the Oilers have harassed Kosar despite losing the games.

Moon must contend with Browns cornerbacks Hanford Dixon and Frank Minnifield. Minnifield had three interceptions last year in the Browns' 40-7 victory in the Astrodome.

The Browns, traditionally a strong team in the second half of the season, have a three-game winning streak since Kosar's return.

Marathon rough and tumble affair

NEW YORK (AP) — For Steve Jones and Grete Waitz, the 19th New York City Marathon was vindication. For Joan Benoit Samuelson, it was a crashing, but not smashing, return to marathoning.

Jones and Waitz, recent disappointments after years of glory, were the men's and women's first-place finishers in Sunday's race, the largest marathon in history with 22,912 starters.

Samuelson, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist who was running her first marathon in three years, was victimized by two collisions, one of which sent her sprawling to the ground, and an unexpected "pit stop," which she attributed to nervousness over her inactivity.

Although Samuelson, who had been unbeaten in five marathons since 1981, finished third among the women, she provided the most spectacular action in the heavily congested field, which at times resembled roller derby.

Near the 11-mile mark, she bumped into Laura Fogli of Italy as the two were chasing Waitz, but neither fell nor was injured.

At the 14-mile point, Samuelson left the course briefly to relieve herself after suffering "stomach cramps."

And just past 21 miles, she was upended by a volunteer who came onto the course with a cup of water for another runner.

"I did a complete somersault,

NEW YORK — Norway's Grete Waitz (left) women's first place finisher in the New York Marathon and Steve Jones of Wales, who finished first in the men's division, hold up the Samuel Rudin trophy. Flanked by the winners are Mary Rudin, wife of Samuel, and New York Mayor Edward I. Koch.

but I got right up," the stunned Samuelson said. "I was so dazed I don't think I was helped up. I think I got up on my own."

At that juncture, she was running third behind Waitz and Fogli.

Waitz had no difficulty with the course, one that she's run every year since 1978, except last year, when she was injured. She has won every time she started except in 1981, when she did not finish because of stomach cramps.

Sunday's victory was her ninth in

New York, and her time of 2 hours, 28 minutes, 7 seconds was only one second slower than her 1986 clocking. No other marathoner has won the same marathon nine times. Waitz had been tied for the record with Johnny Kelley, an eight-time winner of the Yonkers Marathon.

Waitz had said after the frustration of watching last year's New York City Marathon, she was thinking seriously about retiring. She was talked out of it by her husband, Jack.

Winning the $26,385 first prize, plus a new Mercedes-Benz, made her thankful she did not quit.

Jones, who received the same first prize and a similar car, also has been frustrated in recent years.

After winning the Chicago Marathon in 1984 in 2:08:05, then a world best, winning the 1985 London Marathon in 2:08:16 and defending his Chicago title in 1985 in 2:07:13, one second short of the world best and now No. 4 on the all-time list, his marathon performances dipped.

Sunday, he showed his old form, winning in 2:08:20, only seven seconds off the course record set by Alberto Salazar in 1981.

Jones was ecstatic over his victory. As he neared the finish line in Central Park, he waved to the hordes of fans and thrust his right fist into the air in a triumphant gesture.

Frost wins by five

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — South African David Frost, unchallenged by ailing Mark Wiebe, compiled a 5-under-par 67 and coasted to a five-stroke victory Sunday in the Tucson Open Golf tournament.

Frost earned his second title of the season with a 266 total, 22 shots under par on the TPC course at StarPass.

Wiebe, with a final-round 73, really wasn't a factor. He had severe stomach troubles overnight and sought medical attention when he arrived at the course. He finished tied for fourth at 272.

Mark Calcavecchia and Mark O'Meara came on to share second at 271.

Running club does well

MIDLAND — The Big Spring Running Club fared well in a half-marathon race (13.1 miles) here Saturday. Competing for Big Spring were Glenn Fillingim, Vic Keyes, Teri Quinones and Sherill Easterling, formerly of Coahoma, now of Hico.

Fillingim completed the race in 1:35:42. Keyes finished third in his age division (40-49), running a 1:30:02 and Easterling finished first in her age division (30-39) and also won the women's overall division in a time of 1:28:26.

Quinones won her age division (20-29) and finished third overall. She ran a 1:42:47.

The race was a certified Texas State Championship race within the Permian Basin Road Runners race series.

Lady Wolves beaten in bi-district

SNYDER — The Colorado City Lady Wolves' volleyball season came to a halt Saturday as they were defeated by Brownfield in bi-district action.

Brownfield won the match 15-13, 15-5. Colorado City ends the season with a 11-12 season.

Howard hoopsters in home debut

The Howard College Hawks and Hawk-Queens will make their home basketball debut Monday night when they host Cisco Junior College at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The Queens' game will begin at 6 p.m. The Queens enter the contest with a 1-6 mark. The Hawks' game starts at 8. They take a 2-3 record into the contest.

Sheehan ends season with win

HANNO, Japan (AP) — American Patty Sheehan defeated Swedish rookie Liselotte Neumann in a sudden-death playoff Sunday to win the Mazda Japan classic, the season's final U.S. LPGA event.

Sheehan started Sunday's round three shots behind Neumann, and caught her with a long 35-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole.

Sheehan posted six birdies and one bogey, on the fourth hole, en route to a round of 67. Neumann carded a 70, with birdies on the 12th and 15th holes.

McEnroe gets easy victory

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — John McEnroe won the $1-million European Community Championship Sunday, easily beating injured Soviet Andrei Chesnokov 6-1, 7-5, 6-2.

McEnroe, who had played sparkling tennis all week, had little difficulty with Chesnokov, who was limping on an injured right ankle for most of the match.

Thompson's Time

The Big Spring Steers ran their district record to 3-3 with a 14-6 win over the Snyder Tigers Friday night. Here is what Steers coach David Thompson had to say about the win and this Friday's season finale against Fort Stockton.

"After looking at the films, we had a good effort just like we thought we did Friday night. The only deal is we should have scored more, but we didn't, but we still won. The defense came through with the big play when we had to.

"Our running game was good but our passing game was terrible. We did a good job of blocking but we just didn't throw the ball well. We had the screen wide open all night and we just couldn't get it. It was just one of those nights.

"Neal Mayfield did a fine job of punting the football. He's been punting well lately. I think it's a sign of him maturing and not worrying about the rush.

"Fort Stockton is one of the better teams in the district. The best thing you can say about them is they're real aggressive, they get after you. They do a pretty good job of throwing the football. We need to go out, have some fun and get after it."

Cards' second half rally stuns 49ers

By The Associated Press
The Phoenix Cardinals left their game in the locker room for one half. They left the San Francisco 49ers searching for answers in the second half.

The Cardinals stormed back from a 23-0 deficit to beat the 49ers 24-23 Sunday when Neil Lomax hit Rey Green for a 9-yard touchdown.

He found Green on a 35-yard scoring pass with 3:39 left in the third quarter. Al Del Greco's 24-yard field goal and Lomax's 5-yard TD pass to rookie Ernie Jones with 2:19 left brought the Cardinals within 23-17.

San Francisco was forced to punt and Phoenix, with no timeouts remaining, took over at its 34 with 1:27 left. It took seven plays before Green scored and Del Greco kicked the decisive extra point.

Bears 28, Buccaneers 10
With Coach Mike Ditka watching from his hospital room while recovering from a heart attack, Vince Tobin coached the Bears to their eighth victory in 10 games, the best record in the NFC.

Tobin's defense clamped down on Tampa Bay quarterback Vinny Testaverde with two interceptions and two sacks.

Tomczak completed 18 of 26 passes for 269 yards and upped his record to 12-2 as a replacement starter for McMahon, including 5-0 against the Bucs.

Bills 13, Seahawks 3
At Seattle, the Bills beat former coach Chuck Knox for the first time and upped their league-best record to 9-1 with their fifth consecutive win. Buffalo's defense didn't allow a touchdown for the second straight week and yielded just 145 total yards. Bruce Smith had two of Buffalo's four sacks.

Robb Riddick scored on a 1-yard run and Scott Norwood, the NFL's leading scorer, kicked 23- and 27-yard field goals.

Raiders 13, Chargers 3
Los Angeles held San Diego to 63 yards on the ground — Marcus Allen, with 67, and Bo Jackson, with 64, each had more rushing yardage than the Chargers.

The game's only touchdown came when the Raiders capped a nine-play, 58-yard drive with a 7-yard scoring pass from Steve Beuerlein to Trey Junkin. Chris Bahr had field goals of 36 and 29 yards, while Vince Abbott's 40-yarder provided San Diego's points.

Redskins 27, Saints 24
New Orleans, 7-3, has lost by a total of six points in its defeats. When Washington rallied from a 24-17 hole with 8½ minutes left, the Saints failed to tie the league record of consecutive road victories. New Orleans, tied for the NFC West lead with the Rams, had won 10 straight away from home.

But the Redskins, 6-4, drove 94 yards for the tying touchdown, an 8-yard pass from Doug Williams to Ricky Sanders. After a punt, Washington moved 64 yards to set up Chip Lohmiller's winning 23-yard field goal with 47 seconds to go.

Eagles 30, Rams 24
The Eagles had the lowest-rated pass defense in the league, but it befuddled Jim Everett and the Rams. Everett had thrown just five interceptions before being picked off four times by Philadelphia, 5-5. Still, Everett nearly led his team back to a sixth straight road win. But Frizzell stole a pass deep in Philadelphia territory with 24 seconds remaining.

Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham threw three touchdown passes, two to rookie tight end Keith Jackson.

Falcons 20, Packers 0
Green Bay suffered a second straight shutout for the first time since 1932 — the Packers lost 28-0 to Buffalo last weekend.

For Atlanta, it was its first win at home after eight straight defeats and the Falcons' first shutout since a 35-0 whipping of New Orleans in 1982.

Chris Miller hit 15 of 25 passes for 177 yards, including a 45-yard scoring strike to Gene Lang, and the defense forced seven turnovers.

Bengals 42, Steelers 7
Eddie Brown needed only seven catches to compile a club-record 216 yards receiving. He teamed with Boomer Esiason for an 86-yard scoring pass on the Bengals' second play from scrimmage and Cincinnati, leading the AFC Central at 6-2, never looked back.

Esiason, the league's top passer, had no TD passes in the past two games, but threw against the Steelers as Cincinnati rolled up more than 500 yards of offense.

The Steelers, 2-8, have their worst record since 1969, when they went 1-13 in Chuck Noll's first year as coach.

Patriots 21, Dolphins 10
Host New England ran and ran and ran some more. Miami couldn't stop rookie John Stephens from gaining 104 yards, giving him more than 100 yards in three consecutive games; the last Patriot to do that was Don Calhoun in 1976. The Patriots had 203 yards on the ground.

NFL Roundup

with three seconds to go. That capped a 17-point fourth-quarter comeback that had the Cardinals bubbling and the 49ers confused.

Lomax made most of them. He was 9-for-16 for 141 yards after three quarters, then connected on 16 of 25 in the fourth period. He had 323 yards passing despite being sacked seven times.

Sugar Ray seeks another title

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, 32 years old and at his heaviest weight ever, tries once again to summon up his special brand of boxing magic tonight when he faces Donny Lalonde, Canada's "Golden Boy."

Leonard, whose flashy ring skills and deep determination have enabled him to meet every challenge he's faced so far, now faces a more vague test.

Will he be as motivated as he was for his much-heralded fights against such well-known champions as Marvelous Marvin Hagler, Thomas Hearns and Roberto Duran?

Will his ability be eroded by the added weight and the fact he has fought just three times in almost seven years?

And, how good is Lalonde?

Leonard, coming out of retirement for the third time, will bring a 34-1 record with 24 knockouts into the 12-round bout at Caesars Palace's outdoor arena.

He is rated a 3½-1 favorite as he tries to collect the fourth and fifth titles of his career.

Lalonde will carry a 31-2 record, with 26 knockouts, into the fight, scheduled to begin at approximately 11 p.m. EST.

The contractual top weight is 168 pounds, but Lalonde's World Boxing Council light heavyweight title (175 pounds) will be at stake, along with the WBC's newly created super middleweight (168-pound) crown.

Leonard says he has plenty of motivation.

"I know he wants to win for himself and for the people in Canada and I respect that," Leonard said of his foe from Winnipeg, Manitoba. "And I want to win for myself and to keep the title in the States...."

"My motivation is that I enjoy winning more than losing."

Leonard added that he's worked harder for this fight than he did for the meeting with Hagler in April, 1987, when Leonard won a split decision.

"The Hagler fight, for some reason, I procrastinated," he said. "I kept putting it (training) off and off."

"With Lalonde, I know subconsciously that if I don't train hard, that something could happen to me like it did in the Kevin Howard fight."

The lightly regarded Howard knocked Leonard down in the ninth round of their May 1984 fight in Leonard's first comeback.

Leonard won a decision in the fight, the only other bout besides the Hagler fight that he has had since February 1982.

Leonard, whom many believe was at his best as a 147-pound welterweight, believes neither the added weight nor the fact he has fought infrequently will take any edge off his ability.

"Some people say I've slowed a step," Leonard said. "They're the same people who said Michael Spinks would beat Mike Tyson."

While there are many questions about Leonard at this stage of his career, there are perhaps even more surrounding Lalonde.

In a number of obvious ways, he would seem to have an edge over Leonard. At 28, he's four years younger. Lalonde also will be five pounds heavier, 168 to 163, and, at 6-foot-1¾, he is about three inches taller.

Lalonde has a powerful right hand, but a suspect left, since he has a pin in his left shoulder because of a recurring injury he first suffered while playing hockey as a youth.

SCOREBOARD
After the first 12-game night in league history Saturday, action ceases until Tuesday, when nine games are scheduled.

AIR APPARENTS?
Chicago's Michael Jordan has 57 points in his first two games, a 28.5 average. However, the two-time scoring champion is 8.5 points behind Denver's Alex English, who has a 37.0 average after two games. Houston center Akeem Olatunji is averaging 36 points per game, while Seattle guard Dale Ellis, who scored 46 points in the SuperSonics' opener Friday, is scoring at a 34-point clip.

day. However, Warriors center Ralph Sampson scored just four points on 2-for-9 from the field in 17 minutes.

CLANG!
Boston swingman Reggie Lewis was 1-for-8 from the floor in the Celtics' 122-115 overtime victory over New York, while Knicks forward Gerald Wilkins shot 7-for-19 in the same game. One of Wilkins' misses was a dunk with less than a minute left in regulation, allowing the Celtics to come back and force the extra session. Saturday, Charlotte shot .347 (33-for-95) from the field and lost to Detroit 94-85. Forward Kelly Tripucka was 2-for-12 against his former teammates.

TRIVIA ANSWER
The Atlanta Hawks.

30 SOMETHING
Saturday, English scored 35 points on 15-for-24 shooting and Walter Davis came off the bench to add 33 in just 28 minutes, but Denver lost at Seattle 142-141 in overtime. Lafayette Lever added 26 for Denver. Only once in league history has a team with three players scoring 30 or more points lost the game. On March 2, 1962, Richie Guerin scored 39 points, Cleveland Butler had 33 and Willie Naulls added 31, but the New York Knicks lost to the Philadelphia 169-147. The Warriors had only one player over 30 that night — Wilt Chamberlain led the way with 100 points.

RUDE AWAKENING
Charlotte and Miami, the two expansion teams, are a combined 0-3. They have been outscored 338-269, shooting just .392 (109 of 278) from the field. No player on either team has scored more than 16 points in a game.

KU center heads to JC

LXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Center Shawn Kemp, who has been embroiled in controversy since arriving at the University of Kentucky this fall, has left Lexington and indicated he will enroll in a Texas junior college, according to a statement from Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton.

"We are sorry to see him go, but we wish him the best of luck in junior college and in all his future endeavors," said Sutton's statement, issued by UK Sunday night.

The statement said Kemp had indicated he would enroll at Trinity Valley Community College in Athens, Texas.

It had been reported earlier that the 6-foot-11 player would enroll at Brevard Community College in Cocoa, Fla.

UK athletic director Cliff Hagan said Saturday that Kemp had not been comfortable at Kentucky and apparently wasn't making the necessary effort in his studies.

Hagan said Kemp's decision was something of a relief for the athletic department, given the athlete's recent problems. "I think it's for the best," he said.

Local honor students receive their honors

By JEAN WARREN
Herald correspondent

Big Spring High School students were commended for excelling in scholarship during an honor roll assembly Tuesday. Certificates were presented to 46 students who earned A's in every subject the first six weeks of the school year. Also receiving certificates were 212 students who earned A's and B's and four who earned B's. Faculty members are planning an event each six weeks to recognize honor roll students.

Forty new members were inducted into the National Honor Society at Big Spring High School Oct. 27. Admission to this prestigious organization is by invitation; it is based upon class rank cumulative from the freshman year. Juniors inducted into the National Honor Society must be in the top 10 percent of their class; seniors must be in the top 15 percent.

Qualities of character, service and leadership are also considered. Officers for the National Honor Society include Rex Tucker, president; Christy Alexander, vice president; Jamie Hinojos, secretary; and Jeff O'Brien, treasurer. Faculty sponsor is Kathy Terrazas.

Four new members will be inducted into the Forsan chapter of the National Honor Society Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Forsan auditorium. They are Ginger Harrison, Charley Newton, Lauri Roberson and Tera Sims. Officers of the Forsan chapter are Shasta Hollingshead, president; Patrick George, vice president; Trent Baird, secretary; and Russell Roberts, treasurer. Family and guests are invited to stay for refreshments after the induction.

At Runnels Junior High 33 eighth graders qualified for the Gold Honor Roll by making all A's; 53 students attained the right to be on the Silver Honor Roll by making more A's than B's; 30 students made the Bronze Honor Roll by making no grade lower than a B.

A total of 56 sixth graders and 38 seventh graders at Goliad Middle School achieved the distinction of the Maverick Honor Roll by making all A's. Making A's and B's for the Merit Honor Roll were 90 sixth graders and 118 seventh graders.

Students at Goliad Middle School recently had the opportunity to learn how to vote in a state or national election. They registered to vote Monday through Wednesday, filling out the same application required of Texas voters. This was done voluntarily; students had the chance to register during lunch, but like their adult counterparts, they were not required to do so. On Thursday voter registration cards were issued to each student who filled out an application. On Friday the election for United States president and vice president and state representative was held in the school library. Students were required to bring their voter registration cards in order to vote.

The election process was sponsored by history teachers Dewayne Wallace, Tammi Newsom and Julie Hall.

As a preparation for handling sometimes confusing amendments presented to Texas voters, Wallace authored an amendment for students to vote upon. It reads:

Whereas the current educational process is now antiquated; whereas there is a technological resurgence; whereas the current number of instructional days is insufficient to accommodate such a resurgence, it is proposed by amendment that the instructional time to be decreased by not less than one hour and not more than two hours and that the number of instructional days to be no more than 75 days but no less than 60 days greater than the presently constituted number.

Anyone who can figure that out is definitely prepared to be an intelligent voter!

Also teaching the privilege of voting and the responsibility of the voter are history teachers Vicki Broadrick, Ed Gauer and Bill Williams at Runnels Junior High. Eighth graders will cast their ballots in history classes on election day. The history classes of Susann Damron and Lois Cunningham will also participate in the election.

Results of another election, on the lighter side, were revealed at the Goliad pep rally Thursday afternoon. Baby pictures of football team members were posted during the week and the students voted with cash donations for their favorites. Winning the title of "Most Beautiful Baby" and ten dollars was Andy Carmichael, while Lonnie Jackson received $5 for second place. Other finalists were: Jimmy Johnson, third; Ruben Hilario, fourth; and Randy Morales, fifth.

A SMILE: It was the first week of school. The first grade teacher had just stepped out of the room when the principal called, "Mrs. Jones," on the public address system. Receiving no response the principal again said, "Mrs. Jones." This time a tiny voice replied tremulously, "She's not here, Jesus."

Youths' concerns mirror adults'

NEW YORK (AP) — Drug abuse, the quality of education, the economy, the homeless, nuclear war.

All are on the minds of voters in this presidential election year. They are also on the minds of those too young to vote — the nation's children.

The concerns were voiced by boys ages 7 to 11 who, as readers of G.I. Joe magazine, were asked what their No. 1 question would be if they could address George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

But some of the boys, rather than asking what the candidates would do to combat these problems, wanted to get a fix on the candidates' motives.

Bobby Mercer, of Borger, and Matthew P. Tobias of Watertown, Wis., came right to the point: "Why do you want to be president?"

Ray Anthony Quiambao of El Paso was likewise forthright: "Dear Candidates," he wrote, "Do you trust the Soviet Union?"

Danny Lane of Fort Meade, Fla., wrote: "I am 10 years old... What do you plan to do to make our country a better and safer place to live when I am an adult?"

Chris Coffman of Topeka, Kan., wanted to know the future of space exploration. Matt Pak of Glendale, Calif., asked, "What are your plans for the gang populated areas in America?"

Lance A. Murray of Bridgeton, N.J., is worried about the ecology. "If you become president, please make a law that you can't litter in any parts of New Jersey."

One youngster, whose letter had no return address and an illegible signature, asked a question covering both education and the economy:

"Why do you think that the teachers should get paid?"

College plans operator training

A motorcycle operator training class will be conducted at Howard College of Big Spring Saturday and Sunday. It is designed primarily to teach basic motorcycle riding skills to novices. In addition, advanced skills are taught for beginner and experienced riders.

The class is required for all riders under the age of 18, in order to get their motorcycle license. Classroom driver's education is required in order to take the class.

Motorcycles and helmets are provided to students. Students who complete the course will receive a decal and patch, and a certificate.

The class will run from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days. For more information or to register, contact Tommy Tune of Howard College Continuing Education Department at 267-6311, ext. 315.

Report: Lots of sex on TV for teens

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The average young teen-age American girl views 1,500 sexual acts or references to sexual acts on television annually, according to a study at Michigan State University.

The study was based on girls 14 to 15 years old who watch television four to five hours each school day. In addition, the study found, that same girl sees at least 25 R-rated movies in theaters each year.

In comparison, boys of that age view an average of nearly 1,300 sexual acts or references to sexual acts on television and attend 17 R-rated movies annually.

The data was compiled by Bradley S. Greenberg, head of MSU's telecommunication department, and Renato Linsangan, an MSU graduate student. The study was funded by the Office of Adolescent Pregnancy Programs of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

According to the teens studied, parents "never" or "not often" limit their television viewing.

"There's little indication that parents exercise any control, positive or negative, over TV viewing by teens," Greenberg says.

Research was based on interviews with 1,200 high school students, half of them black and half of them white, in urban public schools in the United States.

"The combination of sex on TV and in the movies provides a tantalizing aura of a sexually oriented society that's difficult for teen girls to resist or demean," Greenberg says. "At 14 or 15, they are a vulnerable group, particularly intrigued with what's ahead for their own sexual experiences."

SHAME ON YOU, FRASER, FOR DECEPTIVE CAMPAIGNING BY HALF-TRUTHS & INNUENDOS

FULL Statement by AVERY on GUN CONTROL: I am AGAINST gun control. Something needs to be done about assault weapons used by criminals, but legislation can't cure that. The answer is stronger penalties against those who use weapons in crimes.

FULL Statement by AVERY on STATE INCOME TAX: I am AGAINST a state income tax and for across the board spending cuts that will not endanger services required for basic programs. Our state constitution requires a balanced state budget and it is irresponsible for a politician to give a simplistic answer on this, BUT I don't believe a state income tax is the answer...

FRASER'S stand on the issues is simplistic and tells the voters what they want to hear. AVERY'S stand is that the issues are complex and require the legislature to face the reality of these serious problems and look for practical answers.

Do the voters of District 69 want common sense and courageous leadership in tough, complex times? Do they want a representative that will listen to them?

VOTE JOHNNIE LOU AVERY NOVEMBER 8!
