Slaying case goes to jury today

By SARAH LUMAN and STEVE GIESSEN Staff Writers

A Howard County jury was to begin deliberations at 2 p.m. today in the trial of a Big Spring man accused of an April 1987 murder.

District Judge James Gregg recessed 118th Judicial District Court at 11:10 a.m. today after both attorneys announced their cases were complete, including rebuttals. Judge Gregg said a charge to the jury against 28-year-old Frankie Salazar Hernandez, in the murder of Noe Perez, 39, Grand Prairie, would be presented today.

Defense attorney Thomas Morgan first called Lubbock private investigator Harry Leonard Jr., presenting a videotape and photographs Leonard made of Room 12 of Motel 9, the alleged scene of the murder. Leonard said he also took a sample of sheetrock with what appeared to be bloodstains during his May 18, 1987 visit. He told Morgan that a Lubbock forensic chemist, Jack Benton, reported to Leonard "yesterday" that the test results were "inconclusive."

After his release by both Morgan and Hamby, Leonard chose to remain in the courtroom as a spectator.

After introducing a 1972 felony conviction against Perez, Morgan rested his case. Hamby called two rebuttal witnesses: Dr. Robert Rember, forensic pathologist affiliated with Scenic Mountain Medical Center, and former Big Spring police detective Tony Chavez — now voluntarily retired — a Flagstaff, Ariz. resident.

Chavez told the jury an 8x17-inch piece of sheetrock contained a hole made by a shotgun blast. He said he and a handyman took it from the motel room ceiling

FRANKIE HERNANDEZ

Jan. 7. A hole in the motel roof corresponded to the sheetrock he took, Chavez testified, reinforcing Leonard's earlier answers to Hamby's questions.

Hamby then called Rember to the stand. After affirming that skulls "inevitably explode" when bodies burn in such intense heat as produced by firewood and gasoline, Rember testified he had seen victims of shotgun blasts and multiple shotgun blasts to the head.

Such blasts, he said, although resulting in "serious damage to the head," did not result in "the head being blown off the body."

Morgan then recalled Leonard — despite Hamby, who said "I vehemently object. This man was excused and has remained in the courtroom as a spectator and heard the testimony of my witnesses. (Morgan) invoked the rule, and all my witnesses have been forced to wait outside."

Morgan denied knowing

Rember would be called as a rebuttal witness and claimed he intended to call Leonard as a paramedic, an expert in the effects of shotgun wounds to the head.

Judge Gregg excused the jury. Hamby withdrew his objection "as long as the jury knows" about the taint to Leonard's testimony.

Leonard then testified that, as a Lubbock County paramedic, he had seen victims of sawed-off shotgun blasts to the head.

"The head is like a water balloon," Leonard told jurors. "When it's hit with that much force, it shatters."

As promised by Morgan, Jeanie Hernandez Fonseca presented "a totally different set of facts as to what happened in room number 12 (of Motel 9)" by testifying that she alone was responsible for killing and burning the body of a

SSC — Texas is selected

By JENNIFER DIXON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary John Herrington today announced the selection of Texas as the site for the eagerly sought $4.4 billion super collider atom smasher — if the giant research installation is ever built.

Seven states had vied for the project because of the economic benefits tied to the construction of the collider, a 53-mile underground ring of 10,000 magnets capable of whipping proton beams together with 20 times the force of the world's most powerful existing particle accelerator.

Herrington said the Texas site — some 16,000 farm acres in Ellis County south of Dallas — was "superior" to the others.

The decision, he said, was based in part on site geology, regional resources and environmental criteria.

"The Texas proposal clearly received the highest overall technical evaluation ratings of any proposal and exhibited no significant overall weaknesses," Herrington said.

The six other contenders were Illinois, Arizona, Colorado, Michigan, North Carolina and Tennessee. They were chosen from a field of 25 bidding states by an independent panel appointed by the Energy Department.

Officials of some of the losing states, however, linked Texas' selection to Tuesday's election of George Bush, who lives in Texas, as president. "The Department of Energy made a decision... based on politics rather than on merit and the good of the American taxpayer," said Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill. "I do not believe that the timing of this decision and its proximity to the election is a coincidence."

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said the decision "has a strong SSC page 3-A

Day after: All but Bush use 'T' word

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Just after winning a 40-state election victory on a vow of no new taxes, George Bush is giving some appearances of flexibility on that stand, at least on the topic of "revenue enhancers."

At his first press conference as president-elect on Wednesday, Bush was asked whether his oft-repeated opposition to tax increases was meant to cover only a boost in personal income tax rates.

While personal income taxes provide the bulk of the government's revenues, large sums of money are also raised by a variety of other taxes from gasoline levies to taxes on cigarettes and alcohol and from fees charged for government services.

Politicians who don't like to talk about raising taxes sometimes say they would accept "revenue enhancers."

Bush was asked whether he would also categorically rule out "revenue enhancements" of any kind as a way of reducing the federal budget deficit.

He essentially sidestepped the question, saying he would need a definition of a revenue enhancement before he could answer.

While Bush was dancing around the "T" word Wednesday, talk of higher taxes filled the air in Washington:

— Senate Republican leader Bob Dole suggested stripping away the tax deductions businesses now enjoy when they use borrowed money in corporate buyouts. Dole said the huge corporate takeovers do not benefit the economy. He said the tax deductions on buyout loans were loopholes in the tax code that should be closed.

— Former Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker told a conference sponsored by the American Stock Exchange that it will be politically impossible to balance the budget without tax increases. Volcker said he believed income tax rates could remain unchanged but he suggested boosting the gasoline tax by 60 cents a gallon over the next four years and hiking taxes on alcohol and tobacco.

— The National Economic Commission, the high-level advisory panel created by Congress to come up with solutions to the deficit problem, announced a day-long hearing next Wednesday to launch its post-election effort at coming up with a combination of spending cuts and tax increases acceptable to the White House and Congress. One of the leadoff witnesses will be Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, who has already gone on record in favor of increasing gasoline taxes.

Vice president George Bush, right, and his campaign chairman James Baker III work on the vice president's acceptance speech for the Republican presidential nomination in August of this year.

President-elect Bush appointed Baker, a long-time political ally, secretary of state Wednesday in the new Republican administration.

Officials of the commission said they are awaiting word from the Bush transition team on the names of the two individuals the president-elect will appoint to the panel. Many expect those appointments will tell much about Bush's intentions on grappling with the budget problem.

In his meeting with reporters, Bush noted that he had been attacked during the campaign for supporting higher taxes because of his endorsement of the catastrophic illness insurance legislation passed this year by Congress.

As he did during the campaign, Bush insisted that the measure was not a tax increase even though the TAX TALK page 3-A

Campaign foes part company

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG AP Political Writer

George Bush and Michael Dukakis, locked together in political combat for so many months, are going their separate ways: the Republican vice president to plan the next administration, his vanquished Democratic opponent to resume his duties as governor of Massachusetts.

After taking the first steps toward the transfer of power next January, Bush was leaving today on a brief vacation fishing off the coast of Florida.

The president-elect returned to Washington Wednesday and received a tumultuous welcome at Andrews Air Force Base from supporters that included his vice president-elect, Dan Quayle.

"He's going to be one of the great vice presidents," Bush said of the Indiana senator who stood smiling behind him on the platform. "You watch him closely, America."

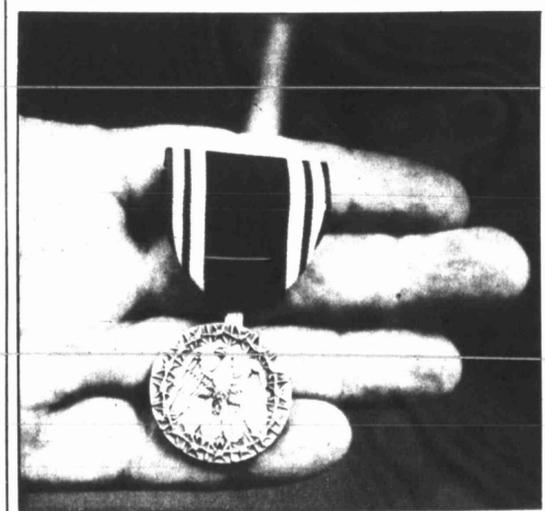

Back at the Massachusetts Statehouse, Dukakis told a news conference he was looking forward to resuming his duties as governor "vigorously and fully."

"I gave it my best shot," he said of the losing campaign.

Many of his fellow Democrats were complaining that his best shot was not good enough.

"The Dukakis campaign ran the worst campaign of this century."

POW's to be honored

The VA Medical Center will commemorate Veterans Day Friday with a special ceremony at 11 a.m. honoring all area former prisoners of war. Medical Center Director Conrad Alexander said the event will include formal presentation of medals Congress authorized for all men and women held prisoners of war while in U.S. service. Colonel Benton G. Dishman, vice commander of Technical Training Center, Goodfellow Air Force Base, will present the medal to each area POW. He will be assisted by Colonel Jerry Grimes, U.S. Air Force, retired and former Webb Air Force Base commander. There will be a color guard from Goodfellow, and the Runnels Junior High band will also perform. Amber Fannin, granddaughter of E.L. Fannin, a former World War II Japanese-held prisoner, will lead the pledge of allegiance. "Most of these veterans have waited more than 40 years for these medals," Alexander said, "and we are pleased the medical center has the opportunity to honor them in this way."

School board to consider plan for at-risk students

By STEVE REAGAN Staff Writer

A plan to assist students in the Big Spring school district who are considered "at risk" of dropping out will be submitted to the local school trustees for study at their regular meeting tonight at the high school.

The plan, devised by the BSISD At-Risk Task Force Committee, is a joint community-school district proposal aimed at reducing the district's drop-out rate below 5 percent before the state-imposed deadline of 1997.

The district's dropout rate at the end of the 1987-88 school year was approximately 6.5 percent, school officials said.

Once school board approval is granted, the proposal will be submitted to the Texas Education Agency as part of the district's annual performance report.

Murray Murphy, assistant superintendent for personnel and instruction for the district, as well as chairman of the task force committee, expressed optimism that the plan will be effective.

"The committee members might not have agreed on everything, but we agreed that the kids are the final product," he said. "I really think good things will come from this."

State education officials consider a student at risk if he or she:

"The committee members might not have agreed on everything, but we agreed that the kids are the final product." — Murray Murphy, assistant superintendent

- Is a dropout below the age of 21.
- In grades 7-12 and has not been promoted two or more occasions.
- Is two or more years below grade level in math or reading skills.
- Did not maintain an average equivalent to 70 during a semester or is currently not passing two or more courses.
- Is not expected to graduate within four years after entrance into the ninth grade.
- Has failed the most recent Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills test.

In addition, the local district considers the following students to be at risk: Students with chronic health problems, drug and alcohol abusers, handicapped students, employed students, migrant students, non-participants in school activities and students in the free/reduced lunch programs.

Also: Students in state or federal compensatory programs, pregnant students, school-age parents, slow learners, late enrollers, those with five or more unexcused absences during the school year, under-achievers and unmotivated students.

After identifying students it considers at risk, the district then will select from an option of strategies to deal with the problem, Murphy said.

The possible strategies are basically the same from kindergarten through grade 12 and include: Tutoring; summer school; school and peer counseling; retention; drug treatment hospitals; department of human resources; juvenile probation authorities and the Big Spring State Hospital.

Federal reading programs are available to elementary grade students only. Options unique to secondary students include drug-related strategies and the alternative school scheduled to open Nov. 28, Murphy said.

Murphy credited the task force with many of the ideas incorporated into the plan.

"The plan was put together as a cumulative effort on the part of the task force," he said.

Advocates anticipate spread of English only

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — With an overwhelming victory in Florida, a strong one in Colorado and a thin one in Arizona, activists who want to make English the nation's official language are heading to the next battleground, Congress.

"The victory is truly the expression of the people," Stanley Diamond, acting chairman of U.S. English, said in a telephone interview from his Washington office Wednesday.

"We want that message — and particularly the vote — to get to the Congress," he said. A proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution has been sitting before a House subcommittee for more than a year, he said.

Diamond said his organization also is considering helping state organizations in Texas, Massachusetts and New Jersey pass official English measures.

Voters in Florida, the nation's fourth-largest state, approved by an 84-16 percent margin Tuesday a constitutional amendment declaring English the state's official language and authorizing the Legislature to write laws enforcing that status.

Colorado voters endorsed a similar measure by a wide margin, but the vote was closer in Arizona, where the official English amendment passed 51-49 percent. Arizona's Proposition 106 requires state and county governments to conduct all business in English, with certain exceptions in education, public health and safety, the justice system and federal election law.

Fourteen other states have passed laws designating English their official language, but until Tuesday only California had a constitutional amendment, approved in 1986, giving English that status.

"There's no question that the victories of Florida and Colorado — and even the one in Arizona — were just stunning," Diamond said. "They're just smashing victories for us."

But the war may not be over, opponents warn.

In Florida, they say it's extremely likely they'll ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review a lawsuit that sought to remove Amendment 11 from the ballot because petitions in the citizens' initiative weren't circulated in Spanish in heavily Hispanic precincts.

A challenge also was promised in Arizona.

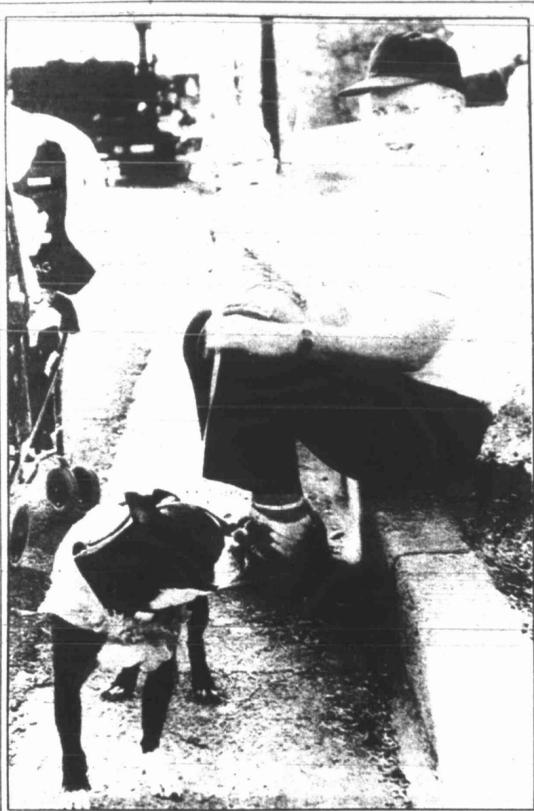

The Justice Department supported the unsuccessful challenge based on language provisions in the U.S. Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Diamond said U.S. English expected legal challenges, but the amendments had all been reviewed by the "finest legal scholars" so that they would stand firm.

"We do expect along the way to certainly have one of these reach the Supreme Court in the years ahead," he said.

The approval of Amendment 11 in Florida was decried by Arthur J. Kropp, president of People for the American Way, a Washington-based lobby that calls itself a "constitutional liberties organization."

"Amendment 11's victory will help the English-only movement achieve its hidden agenda: rights for some citizens, not all."

Officer shoots ex-convict

BROOKSHIRE (AP) — A Brookshire police officer fatally shot an ex-convict who had pulled a knife on the officer, the police chief says.

Tommy Morino Davila, 26, was shot once in the chest and died Wednesday about 45 minutes after the 4 p.m. shooting at his sister's home in Brookshire, a Waller County community just west of Katy.

"Certainly, these things are regrettable and unfortunate, but it was simply a case of a police officer put in the position of having to defend himself or get seriously hurt, maybe killed," Police Chief Joe Garcia said.

Officer Oscar Garcia, 33, the chief's brother and a member of the Brookshire force for three years, was taken off patrol and reassigned to administrative duties pending investigations by the Texas Rangers and the district attorney's office.

The victim's sister, Janie Villagomez, asked for an officer to come to her house to talk about problems the family had been having with Davila.

While Officer Garcia was talking to Villagomez, Davila arrived at the home and became upset, the chief said.

"He attempted to take the officer's gun from him, but the officer retained it," Chief Garcia said. The officer retreated and, as he stepped out the door to go to his patrol car, he stumbled on a step, the chief said.

"The officer was basically trying to get away from him," the chief said. "When he stumbled at the door, the officer thought the man was about to cut him, so he fired one shot with his service revolver, striking him in the chest."

Feds probe alien voter charges

McALLEN (AP) — A federal prosecutor said the U.S. Attorney's office here waited until after Election Day to explore reports that hundreds of non-citizens are registered to vote in South Texas, because the government wanted to avoid any appearance of taking sides.

"We waited because we don't want to be accused, one way or the other, of being involved in partisan politics and trying to influence the outcome of an election," said Jack Wolfe, assistant U.S. Attorney in McAllen.

He said federal prosecutors will coordinate the investigation with the FBI to look for "ghosts on the voting rolls," which he defined as people registered who do not intend to vote, and may not even know they are registered.

"What you can do, is you can now vote for them," Wolfe said. "You can request absentee ballots in their name. You can even appear at the polling place" with false identification.

"I don't think these aliens vote, but I think votes are cast for them," Wolfe added.

Republicans in Hidalgo County, on the Mexican border, approached the U.S. Attorney's office in McAllen after inadvertently finding hundreds of non-citizens while campaigning recently with telephone volunteers following the voter-registration list, said Tom Wingate, county GOP chairman.

"We've got several hundred names of people on the voter rolls of people who claim they are not U.S. citizens," Wingate said.

Citizenship is a requirement for voting eligibility. Those illegally registered include legal residents, as well as illegal aliens, Wingate said.

"In the past, we've had indications of the same type of activity going on," Wolfe said. "And we have arrested illegal aliens... who had voter registration cards on them, and obviously they have those cards to prove citizenship."

The courts, which use voter registration lists to obtain jurors, also have encountered non-citizens who were not aware they were registered to vote, Wolfe added.

Democrats charged the GOP was trying to intimidate Hispanics after local Republicans last month produced radio advertisements warning that non-citizens can be prosecuted for voting.

The dispute resulted in the Justice Department sending 32 observers to oversee Tuesday's election in Hidalgo County, the state's only county to receive such federal scrutiny.

"The federal observers were in the Lower Rio Grande Valley county to ensure against violations of the Voting Rights Act, which prohibits discrimination in the electoral process. They reported no such incidents Tuesday."

"There doesn't seem to be any desire on the part of the Democrats to protect the integrity of the voting process," Wingate said Wednesday.

County Democratic Chairman Richard Alamia responded, "That's a damn lie. The Democrats do care about abiding by the law." Wolfe said he asked the Republicans not to show him their evidence until after Election Day.

Polls blamed for lower voter turnout

AUSTIN (AP) — Voter turnout in Tuesday's election fell short of the record Secretary of State Jack Rains had predicted, and Rains on Wednesday blamed weekend opinion polls for keeping the total vote lower than he expected.

Near-final results showed a turnout of 5,315,037, or 64.8 percent of registered voters, Rains reported. That was short of the 5.98 million, or 73 percent, he had projected and slightly lower than the 1984 total of 5.38 million.

Rains said news reports over the weekend about polls projecting Republican George Bush the winner in Texas conveyed an impression that the presidential race was over.

"From a constitutional standpoint, I don't believe you can restrict the media's use of polls. But when the media's message to the voter is 'your vote won't count for anything,' then we have a problem with participation, and that, in turn, impacts down ballot races," Rains said.

Rains voiced disappointment with the turnout, but he said he was pleased with the registration drive that signed up 1.5 million Texans and with the new absentee voting law that allowed a record number of people to vote in advance of the general election.

Midland man asked to co-chair Bush inaugural

HOUSTON (AP) — A Midland resident who met president-elect George Bush when both were working in the oil patch was chosen Wednesday to co-chair the committee that will plan Bush's inaugural celebration.

"I've asked my friends Bobby Holt of Midland, Texas, and Penny Corth of Washington to co-chair the Inaugural Committee, and they've generously agreed to serve," Bush said Wednesday morning at a press conference in Houston.

Holt, who was in Houston when the announcement was made but later flew back to Midland, said he didn't have any specific ideas yet about what the celebration would involve.

"It's just 10 minutes old," he said of his new job. "I'm looking forward to it. But I just haven't had time to think about it, to put my thoughts together."

Holt said he and Ms. Corth will talk with Bush and his wife, Barbara, about what they would like for the inaugural celebration. He said he might have some plans to discuss in a couple of days.

The independent oil producer said he met Bush when the vice president moved to Midland to work in the oil business.

For Bush's 1988 campaign, Holt said he co-chaired the national finance committee with Bob Mosbacher of Houston.

Model of space station used to plan programs

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A life-size model of the planned Space Station Freedom has begun to take shape for the first time under one roof with the grand opening of $4.8 million building addition, NASA officials said.

The new facility will allow engineers to connect the mockups of individual space station modules, which previously have been kept separate because of space limitations, officials said.

Initially, the modules will be used by astronauts and engineers to help determine the best design for the permanent station, officials said.

"They're made in such a way that we can do our analysis and then arrange them different architectural layouts," Covington said. "We can then get our flight crews in to do a review of them, and take their comments and suggestions and redo it."

GTE plans reduction of employees by 1992

DALLAS (AP) — Officials of GTE Corp. says they will cut the number of employees in its telephone operations by 7,000 by 1992.

James L. "Rocky" Johnson, chairman and chief executive officer of the Stamford, Conn.-based company that is considering moving its telephone unit headquarters to the Dallas area, said in a prepared statement Wednesday the work force reductions will "generate substantial annual cost savings."

Dorea Akers, a spokeswoman for GTE, would not elaborate on the amount of the expected savings.

"It's too early to estimate what the savings will be," Ms. Akers said.

Officials say the cutbacks will be made in staff positions in GTE's telephone operations, which employ about 85,000 people. The telephone division includes GTE's seven domestic telephone companies and the division's dual headquarters complexes in Stamford and suburban Irving, Texas.

Ms. Akers said jobs will be lost at the Irving headquarters, but she said she couldn't estimate how many.

The cutbacks will not affect GTE's telephone directory publishing operation at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, which employs about 1,000.

GTE is expected to announce next week the site of its consolidated headquarters for its telephone operations.

The present split of management of the telecommunications unit between Irving and Stamford has led to criticism of redundancy and unneeded complexity in GTE's management structure.

The leading contenders for the new headquarters site are believed to be Dallas and Tampa, Fla. The headquarters move will bring about 4,000 jobs to the city that gets it.

The new round of staff reductions won't affect the number of people who will be employed at the new headquarters, Ms. Akers said.

The staff reductions are part of a general restructuring of the company's telephone operations, GTE officials say. Where possible, jobs will be eliminated through attrition or early retirement. However, at least some layoffs are expected.

United Way anticipates reaching goal

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

More than five weeks after the official end of its campaign, the United Way of Big Spring has received pledges totaling $158,307 — 77 percent of its goal — but its campaign director said he can account for additional donations that will raise the total by at least $22,000.

"At 180,000 we'll be well within reach of our goal of $205,000," said Scott McLaughlin, adding that campaign contributions have traditionally lagged past the end of the organization's stated deadline.

Last year, the local United Way campaign raised $183,000, failing to reach its goal of $215,000. As a result of the shortfall, the United Way's projected funding allotments to local non-profit organizations were cut equally across the board.

This year if the organization should fail to reach its goal, the projected allotments would be similarly cut. But officials remain confident the organization will meet its goal.

"There are still some big donations that are holding out," said McLaughlin. "They want to see how close we get to the goal, then they'll contribute."

The pledges received by the United Way divisions, followed by the division's goal are as follows:

- Out of Town — $4,150; $6,000.
- Pacesetters (donations of

- $500 from individuals or companies) — $53,800; $105,000.
- Commercial (businesses and employees) — $14,896; $20,000.
- Golden Age — (senior citizens) — $1,175; 3,000.
- Combined Federal Campaign (governmental employees) — $8,912.21; $10,000.
- Professional (doctors, lawyers, accountants, etc.) — $10,905; $8,000.
- Special Events — $175.75.
- Loaned Executive (employees of Big Spring's 15 largest employers) — $57,141.78; $60,000.
- Residential/Rural — $5,916; $8,000.
- Agency Board Members (board members receiving United Way funds) — $1,235.

Anyone who would like to donate to the United Way can call 267-5201, or mail donations to United Way, P.O. Box 24, Big Spring 79721.

Of each dollar donated to the United Way, 85 cents goes directly to local non-profit agencies, Bordofofske said.

Elementary student assaults teachers

An 11-year-old student at College Heights Elementary School is undergoing evaluation at the Big Spring State Hospital today after allegedly assaulting two teachers Wednesday afternoon, officials said.

Police were called to the school, 1801 Goliad St., about 1:50 p.m. and a 36-year-old woman instructor and 35-year-old male teacher filed formal Class C assault charges against the youth, whom they alleged assaulted them, according to reports.

Murray Murphy, assistant superintendent of Instruction and Personnel for the Big Spring Independent School District, said the boy had just returned to school from a previous suspension and refused to sit down in class.

Murphy said the boy "went bananas" as a teacher was escorting him to the principal's office.

In order to have the boy evaluated, the teachers were forced to file formal charges and he has been suspended from school until Tuesday, Murphy said.

"At that time we will decide whether further action will be taken," he said.

Lt. Juan Palacios said formal charges can be filed against a youth older than 10.

Howard County Juvenile Probation Officer Pat Dunham said today the boy was taken to the juvenile detention center Wednesday night and was transported to the Big Spring State Hospital Outpatient Clinic for evaluation this morning.

Assault on a school teacher is considered a "more serious" offense than simple assault, she said.

Dunham said the juvenile probation department will study the recommendation made by the hospital and the boy could be placed in a residential treatment facility or returned to his family.

Dunham said juvenile officials "have dealt" with the boy in the past.

Wall injured
Jackie Berry, a driver for Mitchem & Sons Wrecker Service, examines the front end of a car owned by Madge Reeves Vaughan, 82, Wednesday morning at First Federal Savings, 500 S. Main St. Vaughan, 1320 Mobile St., told police she accidentally placed the vehicle in drive and then mistakenly placed her foot on the gas pedal, causing it to crash into a retaining wall, reports stated. Vaughan was not injured, but the wall sustained $2,500-worth of damages.

Tax talk

new law hikes the monthly Medicare insurance fee paid by Social Security beneficiaries and imposes an income-tax surcharge on wealthier retirees to pay for the expanded health benefits.

"I'm talking about holding the line on taxes, and I don't plan to deviate, and I think the American people must have understood that when they voted in rather large numbers for my candidacy," Bush said.

Still, some private economists said they believed Bush's vague answer on revenue enhancers signalled a shifting position.

"Eventually Bush is going to have to back off of his commitment," said Lawrence Chimierne, president of the WEFA Group, an economic forecasting firm in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

"The deficit problem has not been resolved and there are enormous pressures building for increased spending" to fight the drug problem and bail out hundreds of insolvent savings and loan institutions, Chimierne said.

After dropping sharply in 1987, the budget deficit began rising again in the just-completed fiscal year, climbing to $155.1 billion, with many economists predicting it could climb above $160 billion this year.

C. Fred Bergsten, director of the Institute for International Economics in Washington, said foreign investors could lose confidence unless Bush acts quickly to get the federal deficit under control. Foreigners have grown in importance for the more than $100 billion a year they lend the U.S. economy.

A panic by foreign investors could send the dollar into a tailspin, pushing up interest rates in this country and toppling the U.S. economy into a recession, Bergsten warned in a new book published today, "America in the World Economy."

Without strong efforts to balance the budget, Bergsten forecast, there would be: "A sharp fall in the dollar — as much as 20 percent to 25 percent. Inflation, double-digit interest rates. Recession." He added that foreigners probably would not wait much beyond the first two months of the new administration to see action.

"By Easter (March 26) we'll be well on a good road — or in the soup," he said.

Harvard economist Martin Feldstein, one of Bush's economic advisers, also voiced concern Wednesday about the willingness of foreigners to continue financing U.S. deficits without significant progress on the budget deficit.

But unlike many economists, Feldstein said he believed Bush's plan for a "flexible freeze" on spending would be an effective way of reducing the budget deficit.

Feldstein said the Bush plan could reduce the budget gap to 1 percent of the overall economy, as measured by the gross national product, in four years, down from more than 3 percent currently.

Hsieh wins education seat

Republican Monte Hsieh defeated Democrat Dr. Paul Dunn in the State Board of Education District 15 race, according to unofficial results compiled by the Secretary of State's office.

Hsieh garnered 159,920 votes (53.4 percent) to Dunn's 139,618 (46.6 percent).

Hsieh, a financial consultant in Lubbock, was a member of the Lubbock Independent School District board of trustees for 8 years. Dunn, a dentist in Levelland, was a member of the State Board of Education appointed in 1984.

The State Board of Education exists to set education policy, name the state's education commissioner and make recommendations to the legislature on education matters. There are 15 members of the board. District 15 encompasses 50 counties in West Texas and the Panhandle.

Hsieh had been strongly supported by administrators within District 15 and throughout his campaign depicted Dunn as a pawn of Dallas billionaire Ross Perot.

In an interview with a Big Spring Herald reporter, Hsieh referred to the endorsement of Dunn by Texans for Education Excellence and Schools — a committee of business and civic leaders headed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Perot, saying: "I don't think the people of West Texas want someone representing them who is beholden to someone outside the school districts."

Dunn, who denied being influenced by Perot, was endorsed by the Texas State Teachers association.

Differences between Dunn and Hsieh included their views on the state-mandated 22-to-1 student-to-teacher ratio.

said Robert Slagle, chairman of the Texas Democratic Party. Slagle complained particularly about Dukakis' failure to respond quickly to attacks from the Bush campaign.

"You just don't let people do that sort of thing to you," said the Texas Democrat.

"This race was winnable," said James Ruvoilo, the Ohio Democratic Party chairman.

"Michael Dukakis will get a lot of blame, deserved and not deserved."

In the presidential race, Bush won 40 states with 426 electoral votes, while Dukakis carried 10 states and the District of Columbia for a total of 112 electoral votes.

But the new president will have to deal with a solidly Democratic Congress when he takes office on Jan. 20, a fact Bush obviously had in mind when he told the airport crowd that "I'm going to do everything I can to have a good and open and friendly relationship with the United States Congress."

With the outcome certain from all but one race, the Democrats stood to gain one and possibly two Senate seats. The unsettled race was the contest between Republican Rep. Connie Mack III and Democratic Rep. Buddy MackKay for the seat being vacated by Florida Sen. Lawton Chiles.

Mack had a slight lead as officials counted 100,000 absentee ballots.

If Mack wins that race, the Democratic majority in the Senate would be 55 to 45. If MackKay pulls it out, the Democrats would have a 56-44 margin.

Despite the Bush victory, Democrats were also adding to the House majority. With three races still too close to call, the Democrats had won 259 seats compared to 173 for the GOP.

But Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas and the unsuccessful Democratic vice presidential candidate, said today's announcement made this "a wonderful day for our country and our state."

He pledged as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee to do "everything in my power to guarantee (that) the funds for construction are appropriated on time. I am happy to have had a hand in bringing it about."

The Energy Department must now prepare a full-fledged environmental statement. Assuming nothing in the statement disqualifies the Texas site, Herrington will make its selection final in January.

Congress has not yet appropriated money to build the collider, but did provide $100 million in the current fiscal year for engineering design and certain research and development items. In all, Congress has appropriated only $205 million for the collider.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who announced his state's selection earlier in the day, called the collider "the most important scientific project that will be built anywhere in the world in the last quarter of the 20th century."

In an effort to attract the project, Texas voters approved a $1.1 billion bond package that would reduce the federal cost of building the atom smasher south of Dallas.

Pedestrian hit

A 72-year-old Big Spring woman suffered minor injuries Wednesday morning in a car-pedestrian accident on Moss Lake Road, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Pearl Iles, Route 3, Box 186, was injured when she was struck by a car driven by Donna Jones Henry, 35, Route 1, Box 334, about 8:15 a.m. on the south service road of Interstate-20 and Moss Lake Road, the DPS said.

Henry drove Iles to Scenic Mountain Medical Center where she was treated and released, according to a nursing supervisor.

Commissioners accept votes

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Howard County Commissioners met at 10 a.m. today and canvassed the votes in Tuesday's special election for the 69th District State Representative's seat in the Texas legislature and the general election. Commissioners confirmed the canvass and accepted the results of all races.

County Clerk Margaret Ray said a write-in candidate for county constable, received 19 votes in the race. No candidate formally filed for that position.

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Opinions from across the U.S.

Bush 'must move quickly, boldly'

George Bush has bashed and slugged his way into the White House. Now he faces the daunting task of pulling the nation together and getting on with the business of governing America. . . . Bush got to the presidency by doggedness and not a little nastiness, abetted by the ineptitude of Michael S. Dukakis' campaign.

Bush is dragging a whole lot of baggage, perhaps more than any other modern President-elect. . . . He must move quickly and boldly to assemble an Administration that exudes excellence, competence and experience. Bush must overcome the doubts about his selection of Dan Quayle with the appointment of a Cabinet and staff that contain the best that the nation can produce.

Bush must move on from the Reagan legacy. . . . Unfortunately, Bush's no-tax vow (not to raise taxes) makes it virtually impossible for him to deal effectively with the voting public's single apparent demand for action from the new Administration: to do something about the budget deficit.

Los Angeles Times

Production of a new George Bush

In winning Tuesday's election, Mr. Bush overcame many obstacles — the historic jinx on sitting vice presidents who have aspired to the presidency, the widespread perception of him as a perennial No. 2, the vague feeling of many Americans that the time had come for a change.

That he overcame these and other obstacles suggests that the weeks since the national convention have produced a new George Bush. He went into the fall campaign a man of presidential stature in his own right — a man with his own vision of what America needs and wants. That will be the George Bush who moves into the White House on Jan. 20.

The Cincinnati Enquirer

No mandate from Congress

If election-eve favorite George Bush is president this bright November morning, does he have a mandate? Yes, from the people he does, especially if he has won big.

But he won't have one from Congress if it is still Democratic-controlled, which it all but certainly still is. He has to get over that minefield by himself.

Besides, presidential mandates are general and apply only to landslides. . . .

All this goes to show that mandates are worth only what their holders can make of them.

Arkansas Democrat

Bush: Triumph of brutal politics

George Herbert Walker Bush: How can a preppe with four names ever hope to win, skeptics asked, especially one derided as a wimp? Some wimp. The Vice President trailed Michael Dukakis by 17 points in the summer polls. His is a transforming triumph of brutal, calculating politics.

He won the office, now, facing the Reagan deficits' steep cliffs, he'll have to manage it. The Democratic Congress won't soon forget the Republicans' exaggerations and smears against Governor Dukakis. When President Bush asks, as he will have to, for cooperation in managing the economy, more than one member will be tempted to recall his August sneer: "Read my lips."

The New York Times

Expect more from candidates?

Now that one of the most negative, shallow, disappointing presidential campaigns in recent history is over, perhaps hindsight can help us avoid another such blemish on American politics in the future. It is not too early for voters to put their collective foot down and demand more from candidates.

Our president-elect faces a myriad of pressing issues — the trillion-dollar debt, multi-billion-dollar deficit, U.S.-Soviet relations, foreign policy in Central America and the Middle East, housing, health care, education. . . . This campaign effectively added candidate credibility, accountability and integrity to that list.

Cry of help from an election hostage

By STEVE REAGAN Staff Writer

Ron Nessen, press secretary to former President Gerald Ford, wrote a book a few years ago titled, "It Sure Looks Different From the Inside." In it, he described the differences in perspective he underwent once he saw how — as an insider — the government was run.

The same could be said for my perspective after Tuesday night.

I have been an avid watcher of elections for many years. Except for the past few presidential contests, they have made for some of the most highly dramatic TV anywhere.

The first presidential election I remember with any degree of clarity was the 1968 contest pitting Hubert Humphrey against Richard Nixon. Their battle wasn't settled until the early morning hours — and I didn't miss a second.

The other elections since then — with the exception of 1976 — have not been as close, but they made interesting viewing, nonetheless.

Even during the landlides of Nixon and Reagan, the networks would provide expert commentators to explain to the great unwashed — you and me — what to expect for the next four years. All in all, elections made for good entertainment.

So, you might be able to understand the excitement I felt as the 1988 election — the first I would be covering as a reporter — approached.

Thoughts of tight races and possible recounts filled my head as I drove to the county courthouse at 7 p.m. However, a slight dampener would occur at 7:01 p.m. when the radio announced that Bush was the projected winner in Texas — one minute after the polls closed.

That was quick, I thought.

There were other things that happened that night to change my perspective on elections just a bit. They did not make Tuesday any less interesting, but definitely made it, well, different.

For those who have always wondered about the glamorous world of election reporting, please peruse the following tips from a novice insider.

● The first thing you do is sit — a great deal. Computers notwithstanding, election results will not be ready when you are. This means sitting around and engaging in sparkling political repartee, such as:

"Who do you think's gonna win?"

"I dunno."

Some of the candidates will likely appear at one time or another during the evening, but since you've already interviewed them about 600 times during the campaign they are the last people you want to talk with.

When the first results are finally posted, prepare for step number two:

● Run around a lot. It is four short blocks from the courthouse to the Herald, but I must have put about 10 miles on my car just driving back and forth between the two. If the reincarnationists are right, I want to come back in my next life as a toll taker on Scurry Street.

After running around like the proverbial chicken sans head, be ready to:

● Sit around some more. Tuesday night allowed me to devise a law to go with those of Mr. Murphy and others. To wit: No matter how rushed you are, there will always be one ballot box that has to be hand-counted, thus delaying you even more than originally planned.

This wasn't so bad Tuesday, because I was able to partake in some more scintillating conversation:

"Boy, Bush really whacked Dukakis, didn't he?"

"Yep."

But no matter how long, sooner or later the final results will be in your hot little hands. It will then be time to repeat steps two and three — in varying degrees, depending on what kind of deadline you're facing.

Of course, you'll have to interview the winners and losers and compile the vote totals. Even Dan Rather has to do this occasionally.

There is, however, one more useful tip I'll pass along to all you aspiring Tom Brokaws out there:

● Never, ever place any wagers on the outcome of the races. One of two things will happen; either you'll win and feel guilty, or you'll lose and feel hungry. This is a rule I followed without exception — which is a good thing, since I voted mostly Democratic.

Elections are special times in our republic, and nothing that happened Tuesday swayed me from my fascination with democracy's greatest tool.

But Mr. Nessen was right — it sure looked different from the inside.

Bi-lingual Perils of two-language argument

By William F. Buckley Jr.

When Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney came to the White House in 1986 and exchanged formal greetings with the president, he would glide from time to time into a sentence or two in French, back to English for a while, and maybe a final arabesque in French. This was done, of course, not for his audience either at the White House or on television. His target audience was in Canada, where the Quebecois ne sont pas du tout amuses when you speak only in English: Dammit, the country is officially bilingual.

In South Africa, government officials weave back and forth so readily from Afrikaans to English that they hardly know in which language they are conversing: The state is truly bilingual. Paradoxically, in Switzerland (where all the rules are broken), four languages are spoken, and the great majority of the people speak only one. It is not unusual to walk one kilometer from where everyone speaks in French to find yourself surrounded by pleasant people who speak not one word of French.

But such pockets of single-language isolation are insulated in Switzerland (and in the Low Countries) by long-standing traditions. What is distinctive about the culture is the demographic energy. Almost everyone, it sometimes seems, is on the move, and it is for this reason that the idea of the melting pot took hold.

It is extraordinary to reflect that although the whole of the Southwest spoke only Spanish 150 years ago, it was speaking only English 50 years ago. But when the most recent tidal wave brought in Mexicans and other Latin Americans, we pitched into one of those bouts of permissiveness, this one specifying that where other languages were densely used, the relevant language should appear on all federal forms. That was the same season, roughly, in which we decided that voters didn't have to prove they could read or write.

When these words are read, we will have heard from Florida, Arizona and Colorado whether the people there desire that English be the one official language. Even if these states vote as California did in 1986 in favor of the mother tongue, the feds could still get in the way of things by insisting that in federal matters, we become bilingual today, and perhaps tomorrow, when the Vietnamese consolidate, a trilingual state; and on and on.

Now both Mr. Bush and Mr. Dukakis declared themselves as opposed to the one-language state. With all due deference to the commonweal, one must suppose that they took the position they did because they feared to offend a minority. Toward the end of the campaign one suspected that when bedtime came at Brookline, the Duke would address Kitty along the lines of, "Darling, let's go to bed. Estoy agotado." "Of course, mi amor."

Their positions are shortsighted. Former Sen. S.I. Hayakawa of California struggled while in office, and continues to struggle, on behalf of a clean sweep. As a professional etymologist and literary sociologist, Mr. Hayakawa has stressed the benefits of, so to speak, total immersion in the language of the country into which you are being introduced.

The trouble with the idea of bilingual America is that it tends not to happen. What does happen is that people tend to concentrate on their own language to the exclusion of the other. The statistics are not at hand, but one's general sense of the situation confirms that as we encourage schools in which Spanish is spoken, the pressure to learn English lessens. And as this happens, so also do corollary pressures lessen to introduce the immigrant into a new culture.

Although it has never been a part of the American rite of passage to require new citizens to jettison traditions they brought from the old country, the objective has always been to induct them into a new country: the United States of America. And here the lingua franca has been English.

We are poised at this moment in history to go in either direction. Either toward a single language, in which we transact our business and our poetry, or else in two languages. If we go in the latter direction, we will encourage a cultural separatism that is distinctive in the American experience. To go in that direction merely to save the immigrant from the brief pains of total immersion is a mistake. Penny-wise, pound-foolish. We do not want a day ahead in which Gov. Dukakis' grandson will take the oath of office and feel obliged to recite bits and pieces of it in English, Spanish and Greek.

School board suspends dancing

PURDY, Mo. (AP) — The Purdy school board reluctantly agreed to break its century-old ban on school dances in time for a December homecoming, but members are still hoping an appeals court will reinstate the prohibition.

Carolyn Flummerfelt, a parent who has been fighting for students trying to stage their first school dance, said she has waited a long time to hear the board grant approval.

"It's finally happened," she said. "It's nice that our high school students get to do what other high school students do."

The six board members unanimously voted Wednesday to suspend the ban until an appeals court makes a ruling on U.S. District Judge Russell Clark's order.

Judge rules Falwell must pay

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell didn't figure to be picking up a tab for Larry Flynt. But that's what a judge has ordered him to do in the latest rebuff of his lawsuit against the Hustler magazine publisher.

First, the Lynchburg evangelist failed to prove he had been libeled by a Hustler ad parody that portrayed him as an incestuous drunkard; then, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned a $200,000 award he received for "intentional emotional distress."

Now, in a closed court session last week, U.S. District Judge James Turk ruled that Falwell must pay $20,258.55 in costs assessed from the lawsuit.

'None' collects votes in Nevada

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — The Nevada ballot choice "none of these candidates" collected 2 percent of the votes in the presidential and Senate races.

"None" did better in a state Supreme Court race, with 7 percent.

Nevada is the only state that gives voters this chance to sneer at the candidates. And voters have used it.

In the 1980 presidential primary, "none" outpolled Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts. Jimmy Carter narrowly beat "none."

In a 1976 primary, "none" got the most votes. The law says "none" can't actually win. The runner-up got the nomination.

Assemblyman Ken Haller said, "It's a cruel thing to do to people."

State Sen. Don Mello, who introduced the plan in 1975, said, "Why should you have to go to the polls and vote for the lesser of two evils?"

Quake shakes northern California

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A moderate earthquake shook a wide section of northern California, knocking items off grocery shelves but causing no injuries or major damage.

The quake Wednesday night had a magnitude of 4.7 on Richter scale, according to the University of California at Berkeley Seismographic Stations. The U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park gave a preliminary reading of 4.5, with an epicenter 11 miles northeast of San Jose on the Calaveras Fault.

Most who felt the quake described it as two sharp jolts, but said it was not frightening.

At the Alpha Beta supermarket in San Jose, kitchen items, jars lids and a can fell off the shelves, said clerk Mike Depiro.

"It was shaking, rattling and rumbling," he said. "I was bagging groceries and I heard things start rumbling and falling, so I paid attention. I just enjoyed it."

The 9:08 p.m. tremor occurred at about the same location as did a magnitude 5.0 quake June 12. That quake caused slight damage.

ABILENE — The crash of a second B-1B bomber near Abilene Tuesday has prompted the Air Force to ground the plane for inspections.

Air Force grounding B-1Bs for inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force is inspecting all of its B-1B bombers for electrical, hydraulic and fuel line problems following the crash of one of the costly new planes in Texas.

The inspections were prompted by Tuesday's crash during a routine training flight out of Dyess Air Force Base in west Texas. The four men aboard ejected safely after steering the flaming aircraft away from homes where it crashed west of Abilene.

Pentagon officials said Wednesday that the remaining B-1Bs, long-range bombers designed to be capable of carrying out nuclear strikes against the Soviet Union, would be grounded until the inspections were completed.

Col. Albert Jensen, wing commander at Dyess, said television footage of Tuesday's crash led Air Force officials to believe the plane was downed by a fire in or around its two left-wing engines.

Some training flights had resumed at Dyess by Wednesday afternoon. Officials said the planes flying had passed the inspection ordered by the Strategic Air Command.

The inspections take two to three hours per plane, according to the Air Force.

An Air Force official at the Pentagon, who asked not to be named, said the inspections generally focus on electrical, hydraulic and fuel lines. The official declined to be more specific, as did Lt. Col. George H. Peck, a spokesman at SAC headquarters in Omaha, Neb.

In Texas, the Air Force set up a roadblock to seal off the crash site Wednesday and sent in military investigators, who spent the day mapping the area and searching through debris.

The wreckage was scattered over an area seven miles by two miles, said Al Dostal, an Air Force spokesman.

Jensen said his speculation of a fire around the left wing engines was based on a video tape aired on a television newscast.

The Air Force has been criticized over the past two years for its handling of the B-1B program, primarily because of acknowledged problems in developing the bomber's radar-jamming gear. However, the service insists the plane is still the best long-range bomber in the world.

The Air Force has purchased 100 B-1Bs at a total cost of $27.3 billion, or about $273 million per plane. The last plane was delivered on April 30.

Tuesday's crash was the second involving a production-model B-1B in 14 months, leaving the Air Force with 98 of its original 100 planes.

The bomber, built by Rockwell International Corp., has a maximum speed of about 1,000 mph and a range of more than 7,000 miles.

Liberian tanker breaks in half

LONDON (AP) — A Liberian oil tanker with a crew of 27 broke in half in stormy weather in the north Atlantic today and burst into flames, spreading fire over the ocean surface, coast guard officials said.

A Soviet weather ship rushed from 25 miles away to help the 65,700-ton Odyssey but told Canadian rescue officials it was unable to get closer than a mile to the stricken vessel because of the fire, Canadian authorities said.

The Soviet ship said the Odyssey had broken in half but gave no information on the crew, said a spokesman for the British coast guard in Falmouth, England.

"It doesn't sound very good at all," the spokesman said, speaking on condition of anonymity in keeping with British official custom. "The Soviet vessel has lost radio contact with the tanker."

Arafat likely to get visa

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Over the objections of Secretary of State George P. Shultz, PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat is expected to visit the United States later this month to address the U.N. General Assembly.

Arab diplomats say Arafat, who along with two PLO diplomats applied Tuesday for a visa to come to the United Nations, is expected to announce formation of an independent Palestinian state on about Nov. 30 and request U.N. observer status for the new PLO government.

The Israeli government and Jewish groups already have protested a visit by the Palestine Liberation Organization chief, and Shultz in a letter made public Wednesday said he did not welcome a visit by Arafat.

Shultz in a Nov. 1 letter to 51 senators who protested any visa for Arafat wrote, "Like you, I have no desire whatever to see Arafat in the United States."

The PLO, which has no diplomatic relations with the United States, is the only organization that must apply for a visa through the General Assembly.

Parliament marks Kristallnacht

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany's parliament today commemorates the 50th anniversary of Kristallnacht, the famous night of Nazi terror against German and Austrian Jews.

West Germany and communist East Germany have held observances this week as a reminder of the death and destruction begun during Kristallnacht and carried on throughout the Holocaust.

On the night of Nov. 9-10, 1938, Nazi thugs ransacked 7,500 Jewish businesses, destroyed thousands of Jewish homes and sent 30,000 Jews to concentration camps. Ninety-one Jews were killed and 267 synagogues destroyed.

The rampage coordinated by Adolf Hitler's henchmen left city streets littered with glass — hence the name Kristallnacht, or "Night of Broken Glass" in German.

Historians say Kristallnacht was the start of the Nazis' campaign to wipe out European Jews, a campaign that eventually claimed 6 million Jewish lives.

Today, parliament President Philipp Jenninger and other lawmakers were to deliver speeches commemorating Kristallnacht during a special ceremony in Bonn.

In East Berlin, authorities also planned ceremonies.

Plans for the parliamentary observance in Bonn had been marred by a dispute over whether West German Jewish leader Heinz Galinski would address federal lawmakers.

Galinski said he would like to speak during the parliamentary observance, but other Jewish leaders accused him of trying to use the occasion for self-promotion.

Passage of Proposition 103 begins company withdrawal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nearly 50 insurance companies have swiftly answered a voter revolt against skyrocketing rates by announcing they will stop writing certain policies in California, an industry spokesman says.

At least six other insurance companies, including Aetna Life & Casualty and Fireman's Fund Insurance Cos., said they have withdrawn or intend to withdraw from the auto insurance business in California as a result of the passage of Proposition 103, which was backed by consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

On Wall Street, stocks of several companies handling large amounts of insurance in California were down Wednesday.

"We're finding exactly what we feared, and that is that there's no marketplace left as a result of the passage of Proposition 103," says Don Stewart, executive director of the Pasadena-based American Agents Alliance, a 600-member association of independent insurance brokers and agents.

Under Proposition 103, insurers must lower almost all insurance rates, including those on auto, home and business policies, by 20 percent below November 1987 levels. The reductions must be deferred when policies come due.

It also requires an additional 20 percent cut in auto rates for drivers with good records, gives control over most rate increases to an elected insurance commissioner, strictly limits the use of territorial rating to set auto rates, and subjects the industry to state antitrust and unfair business practice laws.

Proposition 103 was approved by a narrow margin Tuesday despite the insurance industry's $60 million campaign seeking its defeat. It was the nation's most costly state ballot question battle ever.

State Department of Insurance officials said consumers need not panic about whether they will be able to renew policies or obtain new ones.

"It's premature to say what is going to happen because there are 650 or 700 firms writing property-casualty business in California," said Insurance Commissioner Roxani Gillespie, who is appointed by the governor.

Insurance lawyers waited at dawn Wednesday at the doors of the state Supreme Court in San Francisco, where they filed legal challenges to the initiative.

Area briefs

BSJWC plans to meet Nov. 21

Big Spring Junior Woman's Club conducted its September meeting at the home of Peggy Wolfe. Claudia Patterson presented a program on weaving, discussing the many different looms and techniques of the craft.

The October meeting was conducted at the home of Kristal Cotton. Pam Kiggins presented a demonstration on "Meals in Minutes." She distributed recipes for all the dishes she prepared, and noted the importance of meal planning and the uses of leftovers.

Anyone who has not picked up their order of gift wrap, may contact Judi Johnston.

An election party was hosted Nov. 5 at the home of President Susan McLellan. Members were urged to represent their favorite candidate.

The next meeting will be Nov. 21 at the home of Sue Partee.

Homemakers discuss sewing

Center Point Extension Homemaker's Club hosted its last meeting of the year Nov. 8 at Kentwood Older Adults Activity Center. Jen Davidson and Fannie Kent were hostesses.

The program titled, "Building Sewing Skills," was presented by Ireba Griffith. She reviewed portions of "The Busy Woman's Sewing Book," by Nancy Ziemann. Griffith showed the group several sewing shortcut samples.

Members were given pamphlets of two other programs, "You and Your Doctor — A Partnership for Good Health," and "Cents Off Coupons — The Cost of Savings."

A Thanksgiving luncheon will be hosted Nov. 16 at Herman's Restaurant at 11:30 a.m.

Patterson presents program

The 1941 Study Club met Nov. 7 at the home of Virginia Allen, with Sue Tindol, vice president, presiding.

Jeannie Darden and Eloise Davis led the 15 members present in the pledge of allegiance and the club collect, respectively.

Bo Fryar, secretary/treasurer, introduced Winnie Patterson, who presented the program titled, "Noel — Reflecting on the Past in Creativity."

Patterson manufactures

Christmas ornaments with a Southwestern motif for whole sale distribution.

Using a small Christmas tree, she demonstrated the proper way to string mini-lights and offered suggestions on enhancing the family tree for the holiday season.

The next meeting will be a Thanksgiving dinner Nov. 21 at the home of Mrs. Fryar. Club member's husbands will be recognized as special guests.

Military

KEITH A. HEAD, son of Morris D. and Karen S. Head, Snyder, has been specially identified for early promotion to senior airman in the U.S. Air Force.

The airman was awarded the new rating ahead of other Air Force members by a "below-the-zone" promotion board which considered job performance, military knowledge, bearing and self-improvement efforts.

Head is a paralegal specialist at Ellsworth Air Force Base, SD, with the 812th Security Police Squadron.

His wife, Aurora, is the daughter of William Fletcher, Lampasas, and Nancy Ashley, Ackerly.

The airman is a 1980 graduate of Snyder High School.

Edyth Pedro, left, recalls her days as an RN in the U.S. Army Nurse Corp. as she visits with other women veterans during a barbecue luncheon at the VA's Women Veterans Wellness Day Wednesday.

Jean Williams, left, Odessa, who served in the Army Nurse Corp., visits with U.S. Navy veteran Myrtle Wilkerson, San Angelo.

VA hosts Women Veterans Wellness Day

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

More than 40 women veterans participated in the Women Veterans Wellness Day Wednesday sponsored by the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

As VA officials prepare to honor America's veterans Friday, Director Conrad Alexander reminded that, "Women are veterans too."

While women are entitled to the same benefits as their male counterparts, they are generally less aware of these benefits, according to the General Accounting Office and the VA Advisory Committee on Women Veterans.

According to a published report, the committee was established in April 1983 by the then Administrator of Veterans Affairs as an internal agency advisory group. In November of the same year, following its first meeting, the committee was mandated by Congress under Title III-Women Veterans, Public Law 98-160.

"The committee was created in response to deepening concerns expressed by veterans organizations, Congress, and women veterans themselves that the women who had served honorably in the nation's armed forces did not have equal access to the benefits and services administered by the VA," according to Jeanne Holm, major general USAF (ret.)

Women Veterans Wellness Day is designed to give women veterans an opportunity to speak to a physician, who will then determine if they need to make an appointment with one of the VA's physicians, said Mary Louise Traczky, special assistant to the chief of staff. In addition, women are offered the opportunity to have mammograms, pelvic examinations, and pap smears during their visit to the hospital.

Topics during the panel discussion included, nutrition, interacting over-the-counter drugs with prescription medications, exercise, and the aging process in women veterans.

The women recalled memories of their service years during the barbecue lunch.

Edyth Pedro, born in Big Spring 69 years ago, served in the U.S. Army Nurse Corp. during World War II. As a registered nurse, she cared for injured servicemen in the South Pacific from 1943-1945, serving in New Caledonia, Guadal Canal, and New Zealand.

"We cleaned wounds and prepared injured men for the doctors."

Serving her country was gratifying, however, she said, "It was hard because they (the injured men) were kids like I was."

"I saw some cases that really got to me."

While in service she met her husband Henry, who served in the Army Air Force as a fighter pilot. Although he wasn't injured seriously, he did lose most of his ability to hear. And, for a while the war memories affected his nerves, she said.

"It gets mighty scary flying over the dark Pacific ocean. If he'd gone down they would have never found him."

"Henry was actually in combat — so the war was much harder on him," Edyth recalled. "It didn't affect me like that because I served behind the lines."

She has fond memories as well. She attended a reunion in Memphis, Tenn., in 1976 and was reunited with 12 nurses with whom she had served.

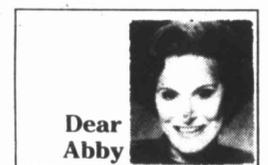

"I still correspond with one of my roommates, Major Ruby Hill, who lives in Hendersonville, Tenn."

Grandma gives birthday money to charity

DEAR ABBY: Please comment on a new idea about gift giving that my mother-in-law just came up with.

On her grandchildren's birthdays, Christmas, etc., she is planning to send money to one of her favorite charities and notify the grandchildren that a gift was made in their name in the amount of $10, rather than sending a personal gift to each of them as she has done in the past. It seems the reason for this new plan is because she has not received thank-you notes from them in the past, and hopes this "will teach them a lesson."

Abby, I agree that children should write thank-you notes for gifts, and I am all for giving money to charities, but I question her decision. What will this teach her grandchildren about giving? What is her motive for giving gifts in the first place? Whatever happened to the joy of Christian giving, and expecting nothing in return? And what about the golden rule? I probably should have expressed my opinion about her decision at the time it was made, but I was so surprised that I didn't know what to say.

DISAPPOINTED DAUGHTER-IN-LAW
DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Children cannot be expected to know what they have not been taught. Parents should teach children early that they may not play with, wear, eat or otherwise enjoy a gift until they have thanked the giver. I do not recommend continuing to give gifts to a child of any age who has not acknowledged previous gifts. Say what you will about "the golden rule" and the joy of "Christian giving," if Grandma chooses to teach thankless grandchildren "a lesson" by sending money to her favorite charity in their name rather than giving them gifts, I'm on her side.

True, one should give for the joy of giving, but when the receiver lacks the courtesy to say "thank you," the giving loses much of its joy.

George Herbert Bush

By LAWRENCE L. KNUXTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — George Bush finally won the biggest poker game in American politics, not so much following the gambler's shrewd instincts as trusting in the luck of the draw.

In 1980, Bush heard Kenny Rogers' hit song, "The Gambler," played incessantly on his campaign bus. "You've got to know when to hold 'em, know when to fold 'em," went the refrain.

That May, Bush folded his cards and ended his two-year quest for the presidency. But a couple of months later, he got lucky again. He was tapped as Ronald Reagan's running mate, and spent the next eight years as vice president.

This year, Bush played his hand according to a carefully scripted media campaign. He bested five Republican primary rivals and then trounced Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis to claim the jackpot.

"You get a good bounce in life, and then one event feeds on another," Bush once told a reporter.

George Herbert Walker Bush, the resume candidate: Ivy League education at Yale University, decorated Navy combat pilot in World War II, successful Texas oilman, two-term House member from Houston, unsuccessful Senate candidate, ambassador to the United Nations, chairman of the Republican National Committee, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, vice president, president-elect.

Son of a wealthy two-term senator from Connecticut, grandson of the man who donated the Walker Cup to golf, Bush has sought to conceal his Eastern Establishment heritage with humor, occasional annoyance and some good-ole-boy gestures that don't always ring true.

"There's a tendency to have you fit into a mold," Bush complained this year. "The mold for me is a kind of Ivy League elitist, and I resist it."

He resisted by climbing behind the wheel of a tractor-trailer in New Hampshire and announcing that he liked fried pork rinds. "This is the real me," he said. "This is my home turf."

But try as he might, Bush had a hard time disguising his preppy origins.

Just before his highly publicized truck ride, Bush loped into a cafe and asked the waitress to bring him "a splash of tea." He drew hoots when he was defeated in an Iowa GOP straw poll last year because his supporters were "off at the air show, they were off at their daughter's coming-out party, or they were off teeing off on the golf course."

Although Bush declared he was "not going to mess up" his campaign against Dukakis, and largely succeeded, he stirred controversy when he tapped Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana as his running mate. But Bush held his cards and rode out the storm over Quayle's military service and academic performance.

Bush was an intensely loyal vice president to Reagan. He made few waves, and submerged any political or personal differences they might have had.

"He's the dog that doesn't bark," said Richard Viguerie, the direct-mail fund-raiser for conservative causes. Viguerie said in 1983 there was little evidence of Bush's impact on White House policy decisions.

Bush insisted he was "out of the loop" and played no part in the Iran-Contra affair last year.

Later, he said he had some misgivings about the arms-for-hostages deal with Iran, in which weapons profits were diverted to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. But Bush refused to say precisely what advice, if any, he gave the president.

The vice president did not escape criticism so easily when he praised Ferdinand Marcos at a dinner in Manila, telling the repressive Philippine president before his ouster that "we love your commitment to democracy."

Bush also created a furor when, during a visit to NATO headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, he said Soviet tank mechanics could teach Detroit auto workers a thing or two.

GEORGE BUSH

DAN QUAYLE

Perhaps the most controversial entry on the lengthy Bush resume is his one-year hitch as CIA director beginning in 1976, at a time when Panama's military ruler, Gen. Manuel Noriega, was on the spy agency's payroll as an informant.

Bush has largely avoided questions about any relationship with Noriega, who was subsequently indicted by two federal grand juries in connection with his alleged involvement in drug trafficking.

Bush dismisses suggestions that his CIA tenure would be a liability as president.

"I led something at a very difficult time," he says. "I went in there when it had been demoralized by the attacks of a bunch of little, untutored squirts from Capitol Hill."

"And I stood up for the CIA then, and I stand up for it now. And defend it. So let the liberals wing their hands and consider it a liability. I consider it a strength."

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Dan Quayle was born into a life of privilege that took him from the golf course and fraternity row to the marble halls of Congress with wondrous ease.

At 41, the next vice president is an ardent conservative who is praised by some for his quickness and derided by others as a lightweight whose best assets are his blond good looks and capacity to charm.

His upbringing as the scion of a Midwestern publishing dynasty was a comfortable existence, one in which Quayle acknowledged "I never had to worry about where I was going to go."

James Danforth Quayle was born in Indianapolis, oldest son of James and Corinne Quayle. His maternal grandfather, Eugene C. Pulliam, was a self-made millionaire with newspapers in Indiana and elsewhere.

As a teen-ager in the small town of Huntington, Ind., Quayle attended Republican rallies and played golf, which his father called "his first love and his passion."

James Danforth Quayle

"In golf, what it gets down to is you're competing with yourself," his mother said. "He could be so hard on himself sometimes."

Quayle chose not to apply that competitiveness in the academic arena.

At DePauw University, a small private school heavily endowed by the family, Quayle was only a C student. Affordable and outgoing, he was often at his fraternity, Delta Kappa Epsilon, where he was vice president.

Although those years were stressful for many young people, Quayle apparently sailed through without confronting such burning issues of the times as drugs and Vietnam. He says he never used marijuana.

His graduation in 1969 would have made him eligible for the draft, but Quayle asked his parents to help him enter the National Guard. He insists he wasn't trying to avoid the draft but wanted to fulfill his military obligation while attending law school.

His grades weren't good enough, but Quayle convinced Indiana University Law School that he was qualified. He was accepted after meeting with the admissions dean, a Republican judge in Lebanon, Ind., where the family owns the local paper.

It was at law school that Quayle met Marilyn Tucker. Everything clicked, and they were married after a whirlwind 10-week courtship. They have three children, Tucker, Benjamin and Corinne.

It was also in law school that Quayle is said to have become enthralled with politics when he saw a bargain matinee of "The Candidate."

That is the Robert Redford movie about a handsome blond politician whose qualifications for office are little more than good looks and charm. Mrs. Quayle dismisses the story, saying he actually saw the movie years later.

Quayle says the size of his wealth also is exaggerated. While the Pulliam family trust is reported to approach $1 billion, Quayle receives no income from the trust's assets until after the deaths of his step-grandmother and his mother. The assets cannot be dissolved until 21 years after the death of his oldest son Tucker, now 14.

Quayle's meteoric rise in politics came after a desultory brush with the law practice he and Mrs. Quayle set up above his father's newspaper, The Huntington Herald-Press, where Quayle was also associate publisher.

He defeated an eight-term congressman in 1976 and in 1980 ousted Democratic Sen. Birch Bayh, with a little help from Ronald Reagan's long coattails. Quayle easily won re-election in 1986.

Orvas Beers, the GOP official who talked Quayle into running for the House, calls him "a real charmer."

"I thought he'd get a lot of the women's vote because of his friendliness, his personality and his good looks," Beers says.

Charm aside, many Republicans were stunned when George Bush plucked Quayle from relative obscurity over more senior lawmakers. On the campaign trail, signs taunted: "But can he type?" and "This Quayle Won't Fly."

In Congress, Quayle was never viewed as a heavy-hitter. But he touts his legislative accomplishments, co-sponsoring a jobs training act with Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and his work on arms control measures like the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces Treaty.

He also supported Contra aid, voted to sustain President Reagan's veto of a civil rights bill, supported the death penalty for drug kingpins and voted for the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Bork. He opposes abortion.

Bush's choice was widely seen as a move to appease conservatives and bring him a malleable vice president without his own political agenda.

During the campaign, Quayle demonstrated that he was eager to please, from his exhortation to Bush at the GOP convention to "go get 'em" to his travels to sometimes obscure rallies selected by Bush strategists.

Hernandez

reputed West Texas drug dealer.

Fonseca was the first witness for the defense in the third day of the murder trial of her brother, Frankie Hernandez, 28, accused of the April 3, 1987, murder of Noe Perez.

Hernandez, his brother Joe Hernandez; Fonseca; Arthur "Tootie" Islas Jr.; and Pete Salazar were all indicted on capital murder charges.

On a motion by 118th District Attorney Rick Hamby, Hernandez is being tried on the lesser charge of murder.

Fonseca — who is serving a life sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections for the murder of Mexican national Miguel Villereal Calixto — testified she shot Perez at close range because he was threatening to kill her brothers Joe and Frankie Hernandez, as well as Islas and Salazar.

Salazar — who testified for the prosecution on Tuesday and Wednesday — described a brutal murder in which Joe and Frankie Hernandez strangled Perez with a rope while he (Salazar) and Islas restrained the victim.

While Perez was being held, Fonseca beat him with the butt of a shotgun and the Hernandez brothers kicked him, Salazar testified, adding that he, Islas and the Hernandez brothers jumped on the victim's back until he "didn't move anymore."

Fonseca testified that she was an informant for the Big Spring police department at the time of Perez's death and that she and her brothers, Joe and Frankie, had attempted to lead Perez into an undercover sting operation.

Former Big Spring Police Department Detective Tony Chavez testified Monday that a trap for Noe Perez was planned April 1, 1987. Fonseca and Frankie Hernandez had volunteered to help in an undercover operation designed to catch Perez in the act of selling marijuana. However, the plan failed when Perez refused to sell drugs to the brothers since they owed him $1,500.

Fonseca said Perez had been harassing her brothers and confronted Joe outside the Big Spring Herald at gunpoint, despite her warnings to stay away from members of her family.

Fonseca testified plans were made for another "bust-buy" on April 3 at 11 a.m. at Motel 9, No. 12. When she arrived at the motel at 10:50 a.m., Joe, Frankie, Islas and Salazar were in the room, Fonseca said. Her brothers asked her to go next door to a convenience store to buy food and drink, she said.

Questioned by Hamby as to why Salazar and Islas, both of whom did not know Perez, were at the motel room during the alleged "bust-buy," Fonseca said. "They were with the boys when all this happened. That's all I can tell you."

Fonseca said she walked to the convenience store and first called her mother. When Hamby asked why police were not involved in this particular meeting, Fonseca said she also called Big Spring Police Detective Lonnie Smith while at the store to tell him "that the deal had gone sour because he (Perez) never showed up."

Asked by Hamby why she didn't mention calling Smith when questioned by Morgan, Fonseca said: "He never asked me. If he would have asked me, I would have told him."

Upon returning to the motel with her purchase, Fonseca said, she heard arguing and saw Perez's car. Upon walking closer, she said she could see into the room because the door was partially open.

Fonseca said she saw Perez holding a gun over Joe who was kneeling on the ground, pleading for his life. The other men, Frankie, Islas and Salazar, were on the "other side of the room," she said.

According to Fonseca, Perez then said he knew he was being led into an undercover drug bust by Fonseca. "She thinks she's real slick that she was going to set me up. I know because Tony Chavez told me."

Perez said he was going "to make an example out of" Joe, as well as the others in the room, Fonseca said, and refused Joe's repeated promises that he would pay the $1,500.

Fonseca said she got a sawed-off 12-gauge shotgun from her car and hearing Perez cock the trigger of his .357-caliber Magnum, kicked open the door.

When Perez turned towards her, "I told him, 'Shoot. Because if you don't shoot now, I'm going to shoot you.'"

Fonseca said she fired before Perez. "By the time I finished with him, he didn't have a head."

Questioned extensively by Hamby on how much of Perez's body was blown away by the shotgun blast, Fonseca became combative, saying, "All I know is he didn't have a head. That's all I can tell you."

Fonseca testified that she attempted to shoot Perez again, but her brother Joe thwarted her effort and the second shot hit the ceiling.

Incredulous, Hamby responded, "So you thought you might need to shoot again after you blew his head off?"

Fonseca said she dragged Perez's body into the bathtub and let the blood drain. She said she ordered all the men to help wrap the body in a blanket and trash bags and carry it to Frankie's car.

Disputing previous testimony by Salazar, Fonseca said she alone was responsible for transporting the body to Martin County, where she burned and buried it.

Fonseca attributed the conflicting testimony of Salazar to a "story about strangulation" that she created. Fonseca said she, Salazar, Islas, Joe, and Frankie agreed that if one person was arrested they would all admit participating in killing Perez and burning his body.

"If I got caught and one was going down we were all going down to go down together," she said.

"I told everybody that's the story," she testified. "If you don't keep it, you'll have to answer to me."

Once she was arrested by the police, Fonseca said she refused to sign a statement saying that all five suspects participated in killing Perez "because it wasn't true and I didn't want to bring Frankie and Joe into this... Why should I should they take the blame for something I did?"

Hamby attempted to discredit Fonseca's testimony by telling the jury that she agreed to a plea bargain in the Calixto case that stated she "would not be prosecuted for the murder of Noe Perez."

"I told you if I'm lying you can add more time to my sentence," Fonseca said.

"You know it doesn't work that way," Hamby responded.

Questioned by Hamby about the 12-gauge shotgun, Fonseca said it "was just a shotgun" and that she sold it to someone in Big Spring. Asked who she sold it to, Fonseca said, "I refuse to answer that."

In other testimony by defense witnesses:

• David Jones, a convicted felon serving a 25-year sentence in TDC, told jurors he first met Perez in 1977 and that Perez was heavily involved in drug dealing. Jones said Perez was a "quick tempered," full-time drug dealer who usually carried a gun. Perez "liked to sell to young people," said Jones, and would often threaten violence toward people who owed him money, Jones said.

"I've seen him throw a pistol in front of their face, and say, 'I want mine,'" Jones testified. Questioned by Hamby, Jones said he has corresponded with Fonseca while in prison on a "pen pal" basis, but had never seen her nor discussed the case with her.

• Dennis Heffington, 23, said he witnessed Pete Salazar talking to Frankie Hernandez in the Howard County jail. Heffington said Salazar "was apologizing to Frankie for getting him involved in this."

Asked by Hamby if Salazar was apologizing for confessing that Frankie was involved in murdering Perez, Heffington said, "he stated that Frankie didn't have anything to do with it. That's what he was apologizing for."

• Johnny Rios, currently serving time in the TDC for burglary, also said he heard Salazar apologizing to Hernandez in the Howard County jail. Asked by Hamby if Salazar was apologizing for confessing that Frankie was involved in murdering Perez, Rios said, "well that, too. That's what he was apologizing for."

But when Morgan asked Rios, "Did Pete acknowledge that Frankie was not involved?" Rios said, "Yes."

JOHN MITCHELL

Former AG John Mitchell dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Newton Mitchell, the gruff former attorney general who went to prison for conspiring to cover up the Watergate scandal in his friend Richard Nixon's White House, is dead at 75 after collapsing on a Washington street.

Mitchell was the highest ranking of the government officials who served time for the political scandal that brought about Nixon's resignation from the presidency in August 1974.

"I considered John Mitchell to be one of my few close personal friends," Nixon wrote in his memoirs. "I believed that I owed my election as president in 1968 largely to his strength as a counselor and his skill as a manager."

An ambulance crew, alerted by a 10-year-old boy who was skateboarding, found Mitchell unconscious on a street in the Georgetown section of Washington in early evening Wednesday. Mitchell had suffered a heart attack.

He stopped breathing as he was being taken to the hospital, and died despite cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

Mitchell was convicted Jan. 1, 1975, of conspiring with Nixon's chief lieutenants, chief of staff H.R. Haldeman and domestic counselor John D. Ehrlichman, to cover up White House involvement in the Watergate affair, of the cover-up itself and of perjury. He fought the conviction in vain to the Supreme Court.

All three were sentenced after a three-month trial to terms of 2½-to-8 years.

There was testimony at the Senate Watergate hearings, at the cover-up trial and in various published first-person accounts that Mitchell twice rejected plans for spying on Democrats because they were too expensive but that he accepted a third, less expensive, version. Mitchell always denied the allegation.

The Big Spring Sports Boosters Club will have a bus going to the Fort Stockton-Big Spring football game. Admission is $12 per person and the bus will leave the high school parking lot at 4:30 p.m.

For more information call Nan Buske at 267-2273.

All parents and Steer backers are urged to attend tonight's Steers junior varsity football game against Fort Stockton at 6 p.m. in Memorial Stadium.

This is the last game of the season for the JV Steers, who sport a 6-3 record. The Big Spring Sports Booster Club is planning something special for the team, and asks that all parents of players get there by 5:45.

*****
The Big Spring High School Fall Sports Banquet will be Nov. 28 at 6:30 p.m. in the Big Spring High School cafeteria.

All varsity, cross country, volleyball and football athletes will be honored.

Tickets are $5 per person, and they are on sale at the high school front office.

Tickets must be purchased by Nov. 23. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Local athlete Debbie Conaway has been named a runner-up for Texas' 1988 Golden Diamond Amateur Baseball Woman of the Year award.

The award is presented by the United States Baseball Federation and sponsored by Oscar Mayer as part of the company's one million dollar commitment to youth baseball.

Mrs. Conaway was honored for her outstanding involvement with organized amateur youth softball.

She was the coach of the United Girls Softball Association Division II All Stars last season.

Four runner-ups and one winner from each state are selected in three categories: Amateur Junior Baseball Player of the Year, Amateur Baseball Women of the Year and Volunteer Amateur Baseball Coach of the Year.

Sophomore linebacker Todd Coker had a banner game against Eureka College last Saturday as Greenville College defeated Eureka 29-0.

Coker and his Greenville College teammates, which includes former Steers Shawn Shellman, Danny Williams and Doug Walker, are hoping for a playoff berth, since they now field a 7-1 record. Coker made 15 tackles in the game, thus earning himself District XX Defensive Player of the Week honors.

Coker leads the district in tackles with 109. Saturday they play Lakeland College for Parent's Day.

Another former Steer isn't having such good luck this football season. Phillip Matheys, a sophomore running back at Friends University in Kansas, has been plagued by injuries all season.

Matheys was out early in the season with bruised ribs. As soon as he got over that, he injured a knee, and hasn't played in the past three weeks. Coach Bill Morgan said that Matheys is in a walking cast, but the knee was require surgery.

Coach Morgan said that injuries have hurt his team all season. "We've had way too many," he said. "last week was the first time this season that we've had the same starting backfield two weeks in-a-row."

Friends is currently 2-7 and plays Southwest Kansas Saturday.

*****
Former Big Spring Lady Steer hoopster Teresa Pruitt is off to a quick start this season at South Plains College.

Pruitt, a sophomore forward, is coming off a sparkling performance at the South Plains Invitational Tournament last week.

Pruitt averaged 24 points and six rebounds in four tournament games. She hit a game-winning three-pointer against Barton County, Kan. in a 60-58 victory. Also in the tournament South Plains defeated Tyler 64-61 and Northern Oklahoma, 76-55. In the championship game they defeated Western Oklahoma 79-70.

For her efforts Pruitt was named the Most Valuable Player of the tournament.

To top things off, Pruitt is also a candidate for homecoming queen. South Plains' homecoming is next weekend.

*****
Two local anglers did well in the Buchanan Bass Busters Open Fall Tournament last weekend.

Wayne Henry won first place out of 88 contestants, catching five fish, weighing 15.99 pounds. Henry won $1,000 for his catches.

B.J. Morrison finished 17th, catching four fish weighing 6.08 pounds. Morrison won $50.

Steers, Panthers to battle for pride

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Steers will be playing for little more than pride when they travel to Fort Stockton Friday for their season-ending battle against the Panthers, who have also had their troubles winning.

The Steers, assured of their first losing season since moving down to 4A in 1986, do have a chance to post a winning record in District 4-4A, however, if they win. Head coach David Thompson said this should be a motivating factor to his players.

"(A winning district record) is what we want to happen," Thompson said. "Since we're not playing for anything else, we want to win — but Fort Stockton does, too."

The Steers and the Panthers have been studies in opposites this season. Big Spring (3-5, 3-3), with the second-best offense in district, has been able to score points, but have been hampered by the last-ranked defense in the league.

Fort Stockton (3-6, 2-4), on the other hand, has had good effort from its defense, but has not been able to score many points, according to assistant coach Mel Gierhart.

"Our defense has given us good field position in several games, but the offense hasn't been able to do anything with it," he said of the Panthers, headed by former Odessa Permian coach Dan Henning.

The Panthers have the fourth-rated defense in the district, while the offense is ranked next-to-last.

Their offense will line up in a Wing T formation, and features senior quarterback Pete Martinez, who is ranked third in passing behind Big Spring's Rance Thompson. Gierhart said Martinez likes to mix the pass with the run as often as possible.

When Martinez passes, his target of choice this season has been split end Joe Parks. The 155-pound

Jordan, Bulls romp over Celtics

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

The Boston Celtic tradition of team play was no match for Michael Jordan's one-man show.

"We have to establish offense other than myself, but I got off to a good start and my jumper started falling," Jordan said after his 52 points led Chicago to a 110-104 victory Wednesday night, snapping the Bulls' 12-game losing streak at Boston Garden.

Jordan, last year's MVP, scoring champion and defensive player of the year, did it all again Wednesday night, blocking two shots and falling two short of the NBA record with nine steals.

"The guy is sensational," Chicago coach Doug Collins said. "I don't think people understand the energy he expends on defense. Forget offense, just watch him on defense. I feel like we're more diversified, but tonight Michael was the man."

Elsewhere, it was New York 117,

Washington 110; Cleveland 108, the Los Angeles Clippers 91; Detroit 101, Atlanta 95, in overtime; Milwaukee 114, Philadelphia 103; San Antonio 117, Miami 93; Utah 105, Sacramento 81; Phoenix 111, Dallas 103; Golden State 113, Seattle 108, and the Los Angeles Lakers 128, Denver 110.

The Celtics were hardly complacent. They battled back from a six-point deficit at halftime as rookie guard Brian Shaw helped give Boston a 79-78 lead after three quarters.

But then Jordan took over, hitting a baseline jumper with eight minutes left to put Chicago ahead for good and overwhelming the Celtics the rest of the way with 15 more points on a variety of shots.

"I've played well here many times and to finally come away with a win really makes me feel good," Jordan said.

The defeat also ended Boston's 45-game home winning streak against Central Division teams since 1986.

"Michael played a great game, but you shouldn't let one person beat you and that's what we did,"

Boston's Kevin McHale said.

Knicks 117, Bullets 110
Kenny Walker and Gerald Wilkins had six points apiece in a 14-4 third-quarter surge as New York won its second straight game.

The Bullets, who have lost three in a row, trailed 68-67 with 8:26 left in the third before Walker and Wilkins helped New York build an 11-point lead.

Patrick Ewing was the top scorer for the Knicks, finishing with 27 points, 22 in the first half.

The Bullets did stage a comeback at the start of the final quarter, trimming the margin to 94-89 but never got closer than four points.

Cavaliers 108, Clippers 91
Larry Nance scored 27 points and Cleveland used a strong defensive effort to build a 15-point halftime and win its home opener.

The Cavaliers' 3-0 start is their best since they won four straight to start the 1978-79 season. They have won their last nine regular-season home games, including an eight-game home winning streak to close last season.

Top Def. Players — Linebacker Salazar 105 tackles, linebacker Kelly Spill 100 tackles.

Injuries — None

Slaughter's Comments — "We were picked to finish fifth in a six team district. We have very good senior leadership though, we've got 13 seniors.

"One of our goals was to make it to the playoffs, once we get there we don't want to let down. Our team is playing well, we're peaking at the right time.

"Stanton's speed worries me. We must contain them on the punt and kickoff returns, we must control the ball offensively."

Manning's agent: Danny received loan while at Kansas

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The University of Kansas, already on probation, was faced with the possibility that the NCAA would again investigate its basketball program after Danny Manning's agent confirmed that the All-American received small loans from a former KU player.

"It is possible to reconsider matters if there is new information that is developed that increases the significance of the case or the nature of the violation," David Berst, NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement, said Wednesday.

Ron Grinker, the agent representing Manning in his contract negotiations with the Los Angeles Clippers of the NBA, confirmed Wednesday that Mike Marshall gave Manning "numerous" small loans while Manning was at Kansas.

Cedric Hunter, another former

KU player, said in a telephone interview Wednesday from Tulsa, Okla., that Marshall also lent him money during the summer of 1986 while Marshall was living in Kansas and working at former KU coach Larry Brown's basketball camp.

Berst said the alleged loans were not considered as a possible violation by the Committee on Infractions but that it would be reasonable to assume the NCAA would look into this new information.

A key issue would be when the loans were made, Berst said, adding that Marshall was identified as a representative of KU's athletic interests only after he worked as an employee at Brown's camp.

"For us that was the summer of 1986," Berst said. "I would assume this occurred after that, but I want to look at it first."

Marshall, 26, played one season at Kansas in 1983-84, then transferred to McNeese State, which also is on NCAA probation. Marshall said he received money from McNeese State boosters during his year there, Sports Illustrated said in its Nov. 14 issue, helping put that school on probation.

Marshall said the money used for the loans were part of the money he received at McNeese plus payments of $20 to $200 he received from Brown for running errands or watching Brown's house while the coach was out of town.

"He was my roommate, so I borrowed money from him," said Hunter, who is playing with the Tulsa Fastbreakers of the Continental Basketball Association. "But it was never more than a few dollars, nothing substantial."

Grinker made his comments after Marshall, identified last week as having a role in the KU program being placed on three years' probation, was quoted in the Sports Illustrated story as saying he made loans to KU players, including Manning.

Kansas, which won the NCAA championship last season, received a three-year probation that included other sanctions last week after the NCAA turned up what it called "major" violations in the recruiting of former Memphis State player Vincent Askew in the summer of 1986. NCAA rules would allow its Committee on Infractions to strengthen the sanctions if it determines that additional violations have been committed.

Berst said it was not yet clear if the NCAA would act on the developments.

"The question is, 'Is it something that would warrant our doing something else in the case?' That isn't something I feel I can discuss right now. I want to see what we have," he said.

Athletic Director Bob Frederick said he intends to contact the NCAA today before considering whether the university should start its own investigation.

"We had cooperated so fully with the NCAA," Frederick said of the previous investigation. "We worked with them for 1 1/2 years. Everything in the article is a total surprise to us. We'd like to talk to them first. You can imagine we'd like to get this over."

Brown, now coach of the NBA's San Antonio Spurs, questioned Marshall's credibility in comments Wednesday before the Spurs' game with the Miami Heat.

"It's ridiculous," Brown told a reporter for the San Antonio Light. "How do you react to something like that? We've already been investigated. Look at the credibility (of Marshall). I look at it, and it's all been addressed. I don't know where all this came from, but the NCAA has seen it, I'm sure."

Grinker said Manning paid the money back and that Manning never considered Marshall to be part of the Kansas basketball program.

"I'm sure if you ask Mike Marshall, he'll tell you Danny always paid him back," Grinker said. "Danny thought nothing of it. He didn't consider Mike Marshall to be a part of the basketball program."

Hunter, the former KU player, said the loans were small because Marshall didn't have much money.

"If he loaned money to Danny, it was only if Danny didn't have any when he went out to eat or something," Hunter said. "It was never like Mike Marshall had a big bank account going around loaning out money, because he didn't have any money to be loaning out in the first place."

They also went 8-0 during the preseason.

Cleveland, which never trailed, limited Los Angeles to 15 points in the first quarter.

Pistons 101, Hawks 95

Isiah Thomas and Dennis Rodman scored four points each in overtime as Detroit stayed unbeaten after four games.

Rodman gave the Pistons the lead for good, 97-95, after taking a pass from Thomas and sinking a short baseline jumper with 1:13 left in overtime.

Atlanta led 77-65 entering the fourth quarter, but the Pistons went on a 13-2 run to start the period and eventually tied it at 83 on two free throws by Rodman with 1:59 left.

Thomas made two free throws with 24 seconds left to tie it at 89 and force overtime.

Spurs 117, Heat 93

Rookie Willie Anderson scored 29 points and led a third-quarter surge as San Antonio beat Miami.

Anderson scored 14 points in the third quarter when San Antonio outscored Miami 34-16 to put the game away. The Heat stayed close throughout the first half, trailing 57-50.

San Antonio guard Johnny Dawkins, who finished with 21 points, dished out five assists in the third quarter while guard Alvin Robertson added four.

Bucks 114, 76ers 103

Terry Cummings scored 31 points and Ricky Pierce added 23 as Milwaukee beat Philadelphia for its first regular-season victory at the Bradley Center.

The Bucks, improving to 2-1, pulled away in the final period with the help of 10 points by Pierce as they outscored the 76ers 17-6 and led 103-91 with five minutes left.

Ben Coleman's three-point play in the opening minutes of the final period pulled Philadelphia to within 86-85.

Jazz 105, Kings 81

Karl Malone scored 35 points and John Stockton added 23 points and 14 assists as Utah downed Sacramento.

The Jazz led all the way, but Sacramento pulled to within 73-67 early in the fourth quarter. Malone then scored seven points and Stockton five during a 12-0 streak that put the game away.

Kenny Smith led the Kings, winless in three games, with 22 points and Derek Smith added 18. Rodney McCray was 0 for 15 from the field for Sacramento, which shot just 33 percent as a team.

Suns 111, Mavericks 103

Eddie Johnson scored 37 points and Armon Gilliam had 11 of his 19 in a pivotal third period as Phoenix overcame a shaky start to beat Dallas.

The Suns, now 1-2 under new coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, made just six of 22 shots from the field in the first quarter to fall behind 31-14.

They trailed 38-15 early in the second quarter before Johnson reeled off 17 points to bring Phoenix within 54-47 at halftime.

Gilliam capped a 25-16 run with a 10-foot jumper to put the Suns ahead to stay at 72-70 with 5:56 left in the third quarter.

Warriors 113, SuperSonics 108

Chris Mullin scored 10 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter and sparked a 23-4 surge that led Golden State over Seattle.

The Warrior defense held Seattle to one basket as Golden State turned a 96-87 deficit into a 110-100 lead with 1:29 remaining.

Mullin scored eight points and Winston Garland and Mitch Richmond added six each during the fourth-quarter rally.

Lakers 128, Nuggets 110

Byron Scott scored 33 points and James Worthy added 26 as defending NBA champion Los Angeles opened its home schedule with a victory over Denver.

Picking the pros

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

How many plot lines do you want when Chicago visits Washington this weekend?

Will Mike Ditka come charging back early from his heart attack to save his job from Vince Tobin, if Tobin wins his second straight game?

Will Dexter Manley spit on a Polish-American tackle for the second straight week, with John Wojciechowski the successor to Jim Dombrowski?

Will the Bears be flat because Ditka's not on the sidelines to yell at them? "Maybe we can get some tapes and play them back for the effect," Tobin said.

The Bears are a surprising 3 1/2-point underdog, perhaps because they've lost to Washington twice in a row at Soldier Field, both in playoff games. On the other hand, the Bears won the last time they were at RFK Stadium, in the 1984 playoffs — with Steve Fuller at quarterback.

This time the QB is Mike Tomczak. The other QB is Doug Williams. If Williams has time to throw, the Redskins should win. If not...

BEARS, 17-16.

Houston (pick 'em) at Seattle

The Oilers are only 2-3 on the road, but two of their losses were with Cody Carlson at quarterback. They're also 6-0 indoors. A happy homecoming for Warren Moon.

OILERS, 17-13.

Minnesota (minus 3) at Dallas, The Vikings can stumble at the most inopportune moments and this could be one of them, particularly if Kevin Sweeney befuddles them. Still, when you're down, you're down.

VIKINGS, 24-16.

New York Giants (plus 1) at Phoenix

New York is due to lose, having won four straight against teams with a combined record of 7-23 and played well for only 65 minutes, 13 seconds of the last 241:13 it has played. The question: Will the Cards' miracle comeback over the 49ers last week lift them another notch or lead to a letdown?

Law of averages says the Giants will win at home the next time, but this one is...

CARDS, 24-20.

Cleveland (minus 2 1/2) at Denver

The Browns would much rather have beaten the Broncos in the last two AFC tie games. Earnest Byner doesn't have to worry this time — even if he fumbles at the Denver 3.

BROWNS, 27-13.

Steers

senior is the district's top-ranked receiver with 27 catches for 544 yards and one touchdown.

Handling the running chores for the Panthers will be halfback Phillip Houston and fullback Cesar Fuentes. Fuentes has gained 417 yards on 113 carries this year, while Houston has rushed 55 times for 153 yards.

The major advantage the Steers defense will have against the Panthers is that of size. The Big Spring down lineman out-weigh their Fort Stockton counterparts by nearly 20 pounds per man, which concerns Gierhart.

"We'll probably have to try to run outside on them," he said. "Because when they outweigh you as much as they do, they'd squish us if we tried to run up the middle."

Although Big Spring has had defensive worries this season, Thompson said the group has been improving week-by-week.

"The kids are getting more confidence," he said. "They're getting used to us and us to them. They've given up yardage, but they've also played good along the way. The only stat that really counts is winning and losing. People get caught up in stats, but that's probably the least important part of the game."

The most exciting part of the game may well be when the Steers' offense takes the field against the Panther defense. Fort Stockton, which utilizes a 4-3 alignment, does not have any individual standouts, but has played well as a unit, Gierhart said.

"I feel like we've played pretty well on defense," he said. "I've been pleased with the overall defensive effort. They've pretty much played together as a unit; they pursue to the ball well."

The Steers will counter the Panther defense with an offensive unit that features Rance Thompson, the district's second-ranked passer, and a running corps that features Chris Cole and Dennis Hartfield at tailback and Rodney Brown at fullback.

"The running backs have been playing good lately; they've been running hard," coach Thompson said. "Rance has not been throwing the ball well lately; why, I have no earthly idea. He's just not completing enough of his passes."

"The offense is exciting, though — at least to me," he said. "I don't know what they're going to do, but they're getting better as they go along."

Game time is 8 p.m.

"We must stop Hernandez, that's the key. To do that, we must play good technique. The best way to stop him is for us to keep the ball on offense."

"This game could be a defensive struggle or it could be a wide open game. It just depends on the attitudes of the kids. It's up in the air."
"The kids are fired up and ready to play. We have to be careful so that we don't let them get too tight. We have to stay relaxed. When you reach the playoffs that's extra."

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: An eccentric newcomer will turn your life topsy-turvy. You enjoy every minute of it! Success comes from something you decide to do on impulse. Spending more time outdoors keeps you both mentally alert and physically fit. Others are attracted by your air of mystery. Continue to guard your privacy. A new business opportunity could be the chance of a lifetime. Pursue it. Family ties continue to influence everything you do.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Maude Adams, author Fyodor Dostoyevsky, golfer Fuzzy Zoeller.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You show your independence in a way that benefits you and your family. Gather up paperwork and take it to a quiet place where you can concentrate. Exercise regularly for better health.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are so enthusiastic about a work project that you want to tell the world. Travel helps you open doors closed to you in the past. Your social life accelerates. Update your wardrobe.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try not to force things on the home front — you will not win. A strong individual sees your problem and seeks to help you. Instant romance could result. Proceed with caution.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Handle joint financial endeavors in a sensitive manner. A serious upset could be caused by unexplained events. Avoid acting on impulse. You need a strategy. Rely on your inner feelings to guide you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An imaginative plan will work out nicely. You may have to proceed on sheer faith. A dramatic adventure is featured. Your love life could resemble a TV soap opera. Protect your reputation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A difficult decision may be preying on your mind. Go off alone to think if you must. A good evening to mix and mingle. Unwind and enjoy yourself. Romance beckons!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your uncanny intuition gives you a clear picture of future developments, perhaps via dreams. Do not ignore them. Creative teamwork can be highly lucrative; pursue it. Point out the benefits of joining forces.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Moderation has never been one of your strong points. Avoid going to extremes. Be willing to bend the rules in an emergency. Attractive member of the opposite sex notices you. Play it cool.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New business gains are possible if you take the lead. Do your homework diligently. Influential person is amazed at your zeal. Get ready to move up the ladder. All systems say "go."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You overhear some good advice. Use it in a practical way. New forms of entertainment hold appeal this evening. You can reduce your losses in business by cutting travel.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your hard work is a source of inspiration for others. Good luck helps you move past adversity. Manage your own finances for greater peace of mind. Make a relationship what you want it to be.
