Budget chief: Tax increases necessary

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The incoming chairman of the House Budget Committee says tax increases will be needed next year to make legally required cuts in the federal deficit, despite President-elect George Bush's anti-tax stance.

"Anybody who's dealt with budget issues knows the size of the challenge is too large to exempt any areas," Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said in an interview. "Once you say 'This area won't be considered,' you paint yourself into a corner."

Panetta: 'Bush anti-tax plan won't work'

Panetta said new revenues will have to be part of any package for the required reduction of red ink by tens of billions of dollars, regardless of Bush's oft-repeated campaign pledge "no new taxes."

Under the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law, the deficit for the 1990 fiscal year — which begins Oct. 1 — is not to exceed $100 billion.

Last week, just two days after Bush was elected, the Reagan administration's Office of Management and Budget raised its 1990 deficit estimate to $132 billion. Panetta said he believes the shortfall will be even higher — closer to $140 billion or $150 billion.

If the deficit target is exceeded, the law requires automatic spending cuts to pare the red ink to $100 billion.

Panetta said Bush's well-known "read my lips" promise to oppose tax increases "creates a potential for confrontation" between Democrats and Republicans.

"Republicans will feel a commitment was made that can't be breached in any way, and Democrats will say 'Why should we vote for a tax increase if he has made that commitment,'" Panetta said.

Panetta, who takes over the budget panel when lawmakers return in January, said he believes Bush's willingness to compromise will be apparent when he submits his first budget to Congress, perhaps in February or March. President Reagan will present his final budget to Congress on Jan. 9, but lame duck presidents' final budgets can be rewritten by their successors.

"If Reagan submits his budget proposal and if it reflects the same Reagan priorities that he's submitted," Panetta said.

Homeless treated to 5-star meal

DALLAS (AP) — A typical dinner menu at the Downtown Dallas Family Shelter consists of chicken-fried steak, mashed potatoes, canned corn and sheet cake.

On Sunday, the fare was more upscale: lima bean and black-eyed pea soup; green salad with basil-vinaigrette dressing; pecan- and bran-crusted boneless chicken halves; potato pancakes and praline-chocolate bread pudding.

The gourmet fare was prepared by the staff of Actuelle, a five-star restaurant in Oak Lawn.

Victor Gielisse and Clive O'Donoghue, co-owners of Actuelle, had decided to celebrate the restaurant's second anniversary by preparing 100 first-rate meals, which would cost about $45 each at Actuelle.

"We wanted to mark our anniversary in a way that really hits home," said the Dutch-born Gielisse. "It's really scary to think this is happening so close to home. We were there at the shelter last week, and it gives you goose bumps to see the kids, the babies."

The food was prepared by six members of Actuelle's kitchen staff and served by three of its waiters, all of whom came in on their day off. "I didn't even have to ask," Gielisse said.

Among the grateful diners were Sylvia Allen of Miami, Fla., and her 2-year-old son DeQuan, who have lived at the shelter four days. "The baby's father brought us here and just left us," explained Allen. The meal was "great," she said.

It wasn't the first time a Dallas restaurant had donated food to the shelter, which can house as many as 30 destitute families. Lawry's The Prime Rib prepared a meal last year, and The Mansion on Turtle Creek did so in 1986.

Progress slight in appeal by Lefflers against city

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

There has apparently been little progress on an appeal of a Zoning Board of Adjustment ruling involving a Big Spring garage owner, according to sources close to the case.

District Judge James Gregg disqualified himself July 6 from hearing an appeal by James W. Leffler, owner of J&W Garage, 706 W. 13th St.

Gregg said in July that he wanted to avoid any appearance of conflict of interest because he served as acting city manager and city attorney when Leffler was granted a permit to build a garage behind his residence.

Presiding Judge 7th Administrative Judicial Region Weldon Kirk, who also serves in an administrative capacity, said today he assigned the Lefflers' appeal to Senior 161st District Judge Ray McKim (Midland) the day after Gregg resigned.

McKim said Monday afternoon that he has been assigned "two or three cases in Big Spring," but couldn't recall anything about the Leffler case.

"I know one thing: it's not imminent. It's not a case that is coming before me in the next two or three weeks," he said.

Kirk said the 7th Administrative Judicial Region includes 40 Texas counties and that a senior judge means "they are no longer active on the bench," but can be assigned specific cases.

When contacted Wednesday night in Stanton and asked if there have been any developments in the Lefflers' appeal, the couple's attorney James McGilvray responded: "No. Nothing at all. Thank you."

He then hung up the telephone.

The snafu began when another Big Spring garage owner — George Leatham — filed a complaint with the city's public works department, Dottie Leffler has stated previously.

Dottie Leffler said Monday that she and her husband are concentrating their efforts on a $10-million investment deal with Los Angeles-based backers that would bring five kinds of auto racing to a raceway located in Howard County.

The Lefflers' told the Howard County Commissioners Court Monday that if the deal to bring the race track to Howard County is successful, a projected revenue of $9 million annually could be infused into the local economy.

Of the impending suit, Dottie Leffler said: "I'd really just like to play that down."

She has contended that Leatham went to her husband's garage and told him he should double the hourly rate he charges for repairs. Both Lefflers were unsuccessful candidates for city council in the May election.

In February, City Attorney Jean Shotts ruled that Leffler's garage did not qualify for "non-conforming status" under the guidelines of the municipal zoning ordinances.

Leffler's shop is located in an area zoned SF-2 for single family occupancy. His request to have the neighborhood rezoned to light commercial was denied by the City Council.

Shotts determined that the auto shop does not qualify for non-conforming use status because it does not meet any of the following criteria as established by zoning ordinances:

- In existence and operating before Sept. 29, 1969.
- Operating under a non-conforming use status in compliance with prior zoning ordinances.

Shotts said the Lefflers' main contention is that the city did not equally enforce zoning ordinances, choosing only to address complaints about specific ordinances.

Californians seek enforcement of insurance vote

By BOB EGELKO
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — A ballot question that cuts insurance rates 20 percent should take effect while the state Supreme Court considers insurance industry lawsuits seeking to void it, says state Attorney General John Van de Kamp.

California voters passed Proposition 103 last week, but lawsuits filed immediately by insurance companies claim the rate rollback for car, home and business insurance is unconstitutional.

Van de Kamp asked the court

Monday to withdraw the order it issued last Thursday blocking enforcement of the initiative. Residents who voted for the proposition believed they would see immediate insurance rate relief, he said in papers filed with the court.

"That expectation should not be frustrated without giving the initiative a fair chance to work," he said.

The attorney general's brief said insurers are unlikely to win their suits against the initiative and have not shown that they would suffer "irreparable injury" if Proposition 103 were allowed to take effect while the insurance suits were pending.

But if the court did not want to go as far as withdrawing its order, Van de Kamp said, it should let all Proposition 103's provisions take effect except for the rate rollback and require insurance companies to set aside enough money to lower their premiums if they lose their case.

Members of Voter Revolt, a group that backed Proposition 103, said Monday they didn't have enough money to enter the case now but were starting a fund-raising drive to pay for a later court intervention.

Proposition 103, which was fiercely opposed by insurers and passed by a narrow margin, requires insurance rates to be reduced to 20 percent below their November 1987 level. It also requires a freeze at that level until November 1989, when auto insurance rates would be cut an additional 20 percent for motorists with good driving records.

In addition, the measure includes an exemption from the rollback for insurers who could show a "substantial threat of insolvency," and conversion of the state insurance commissioner from an appointed to an elected office in 1990.

The measure allows the insurance commissioner to consider an insurer's financial situation in granting exemptions from the 20 percent rollback and in reviewing future rate increase applications.

Insurance companies argue that the rollback violates their constitutional property rights by denying LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Annette Thomas-Jones flashes a big smile as she holds up her son, Christopher Michael Jones, at a hospital news conference. Authorities returned the baby to his parents Monday, nearly two weeks after he was kidnapped from his mother's arms.

Parents, abducted child reunited

By MARY FREEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — A mother reunited with her premature baby says she forgives the woman who allegedly posed as a nurse and took the 3-day-old boy from her arms at a hospital two weeks ago.

"If she took the baby because of a loss in her own life, I hope that she will have the opportunity to get some help," 32-year-old Annette Thomas-Jones said Monday, minutes after police returned her son.

"I forgive her," Mrs. Thomas-Jones and her husband, Willie Jones, 39, showed off the child, Christopher Michael Jones, at a news conference at Doctors Hospital, where the baby was kidnapped Nov. 1.

Police retrieved the infant Monday and arrested Acquetta Rushon Smith, 32, at Ms. Smith's Hot Springs home, 50 miles away, following a tip to a hot line established after the kidnapping. Ms. Smith, an unemployed nurses' aide with four children, was charged with kidnapping, said Hot Springs Police Lt. Bobby Thomas. An arraignment was set for today.

The infant, who was wearing a tiny white T-shirt reading "Welcome Home" at the news conference, appeared no worse for the ordeal.

"The baby obviously was well taken care of," said Dr. Terry Jefferson, a pediatrician. He said Christopher weighed 5 pounds, 6 ounces Monday, up from 4 pounds when he was kidnapped.

"She took very good care of the baby," said Mrs. Thomas-Jones. Jefferson said he expected the child to go home today, assuming lab tests found no problems. The parents spent the night with the child at the hospital.

Mrs. Thomas-Jones, who has two daughters, said the prosecution of the kidnapper would not make the family feel any better, but that they would cooperate with authorities.

"I wouldn't feel better, because I have Christopher," said Mrs. Thomas-Jones, a secretary at the state teachers' union headquarters. "She (Ms. Smith) needs help. . . (She should) just ask the Lord to forgive her for what she's done."

The tip that led police and FBI agents to Ms. Jones came from "a concerned citizen" who said the baby might be at the woman's home, said Little Rock Detective Ronnie Smith.

Detectives continued to question Ms. Smith late Monday but released no details on a motive.

A positive identification of the infant was made through a footprint, said FBI agent Ron Wolfe.

Applause broke out from a crowd of about two dozen neighbors and reporters when Mrs. Thomas-Jones and her husband, a real estate agent, emerged from their house on their way to the hospital to be reunited with the infant Monday afternoon.

"Praise the Lord, praise the Lord, hallelujah!" Mrs. Thomas-Jones shouted.

"I just want to thank the media," she said, tears filling her eyes and her voice breaking.

Local broadcasts and newspapers carried repeated appeals by Mrs. Thomas-Jones, her minister and others for information leading to the baby's return. The reports noted that Christopher needed continued medical attention because he was six weeks premature when he was born.

Cavazos wants students to know the world

DALLAS — Lauro Cavazos, U.S. Secretary of Education, speaks to a Dallas high school class on the importance of geography.

DALLAS (AP) — Geography Awareness Week 1988 has begun with a personal endorsement from Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos and Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society.

"We are all neighbors... a global village," Grosvenor told a ninth-grade class at Thomas Jefferson High School.

Cavazos agreed, telling the students Monday, "We cannot live in a world we do not know." Cavazos, president of Texas Tech until he accepted President Reagan's nomination in August to be education secretary, stressed the interdependency of people. There is more to geography than just knowing where a country is located on a map, Cavazos said.

Grosvenor, whose organization is based in Washington, D.C., illustrated the idea by explaining how a pencil is made. He traced the path by which cedar, graphite, latex, copper, zinc and other components are obtained from different parts of the world.

During the discussion, Grosvenor asked the 27 students to find various countries on inflatable globes. "Can you find Vancouver?" he asked.

In rapid succession, the students hunted for Taiwan, Alaska, Sri Lanka, Japan, Liberia, the Mississippi Delta, Mexico, Equatorial African countries, the Soviet Union, Bolivia, Greece, Indonesia and Malaysia. Cavazos, at ease in the classroom, walked around to verify the students had found the right place.

Grosvenor ended his talk by telling the students that U.S. citizens must know geography if the United States is going to engage in trade with other nations.

"We must know who they are, where they live and we must know what their needs are," he said.

Cavazos then explained that interdependency is not only among countries.

"I am dependent on you, and you are dependent on me," he said.

When the students were invited to ask questions, Hector Diaz asked what waiting reporters wanted to know — would Cavazos remain in the cabinet in the Bush administration?

The education secretary laughed and said his commitment to the Reagan administration ends at noon, Jan. 20.

"I don't look beyond that time," Cavazos said.

Diaz, 14, said after class that he hopes Cavazos will remain in office.

"I think he's a nice man," Diaz said.

Cavazos and Grosvenor later addressed an assembly of the school's 1,325-member student body, and Grosvenor presented the secretary with a copy of the National Geographic Society's new "Historical Atlas."

Prison board revises state furlough policy

AUSTIN (AP) — With the general election behind, the Texas Board of Corrections retreated from a stricter state prison furlough policy, but board members denied politics influenced their decision.

The nine-member board on Monday adopted a policy that will allow murderers and other violent offenders to be considered for weeklong passes from prison.

On Oct. 27, amid a political uproar, a three-member prison board subcommittee approved an interim ban of furloughs for Texas prison inmates convicted as violent or habitual offenders.

The furlough program became an issue during the recent presidential campaign. President-elect George Bush criticized his Democratic opponent, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, for a prison furlough program in his home state.

But reports showed thousands of Texas inmates had been granted furloughs during Gov. Bill Clements' administration. Clements was state co-chairman of Bush's election effort and was himself a vocal critic of Dukakis.

Clements denied knowledge of the Texas prison furlough system and blamed it on the bureaucracy within the Texas Department of Corrections.

Prison Board Chairman Charles Terrell of Dallas said there was no political pressure to change the furlough program, but conceded that the national campaign brought it to the board's attention.

Terrell said he spoke with the governor about the furlough program, but added, "He (Clements) has not in any sense told us what he wanted us to do. He will be as surprised as you are about what's coming down."

Clements, who appoints the members of the prison board, was in Spain and unavailable for comment, but his press spokesman Jay Rosser said:

"The governor opposes furloughs except in emergency situations and he will review the board's action upon his return."

Clements is scheduled to return to Austin on Nov. 30. Although the policy approved Monday is less restrictive than the temporary measure, it is tighter than before the interim ban. Terrell said the furlough policy of last month needed to be revised.

The program will deny furloughs to those convicted of capital murder, sexual offenses, repeat drug offenses, habitual criminals and anyone with outstanding felony charges. Exceptions may be made for medical emergencies or family illness.

Furloughs will be considered for some charged with murder, manslaughter and homicides involving a crime of passion.

Committee wants tough child support enforcement

AUSTIN (AP) — Parents delinquent in paying child support would be unable to buy license plates or renew their driver's license under recommendations informally approved by a joint legislative committee.

Other recommendations in the final report of the House-Senate Committee on Child Support include:

Notifying credit bureaus of parents who are two months delinquent on their child support payments.

Allowing judges to appoint agencies or individuals to monitor child support and visitation orders.

Two controversial recommendations — a law making grandparents responsible for the upbringing of their minor-aged children, and a measure requiring payments toward college education — were dropped from the final report.

Due to a lack of a quorum — only 7 of the 16 committee members attended Monday's meeting — the panel reached an informal consensus on the report that will be passed to the Legislature when it convenes in January.

The committee recommended child support enforcement remain in Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox's office, and that the child support enforcement division keep federal matching funds earned by child support collections.

Currently the child support division is required to transfer some of the money it collects from the parents of children on welfare to the Texas Department of Human Service.

Loan program threatened

HOUSTON (AP) — A state commission's staff is recommending the Texas student loan program be shut down and its multimillion-dollar assets be sold to the highest bidder, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

Higher education officials are preparing to battle the recommendation by the Texas Sunset Advisory Commission staff that the Hinson-Hazlewood loan program — which has helped more than 160,000 needy Texas finance college — be abolished.

A hearing on the proposal is scheduled Friday in Austin.

A staff report recently released by the sunset commission, the state's oversight agency, recommends that the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board close out its student financial aid activities and that lending powers be handed over to the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corp.

The report said the state loan portfolio could be worth $102 million if sold by competitive bid.

Some college officials said it would be inappropriate to give lending authority to the TGSLOC, the non-profit entity that guarantees most student loans. The corporation, chartered by the Legislature in 1979, has a board appointed by the governor but operates outside of state controls.

Challenger article distresses wives

HOUSTON (AP) — The wives of Challenger astronauts Mike Smith and Ellison Onizuka said they weren't surprised to read speculation that crew members may have still been alive until the cabin hit the ocean, but that an article detailing the blast was distressing.

"I think I always felt that Mike was alive because his PEAP (personal emergency air pack) was found still attached to his seat... breathed down three-fourths of the way, which was the same amount of time that it would've taken to impact," Jane Smith said Monday.

"It was in the on position and it is used only on demand, so he had to be breathing in order to receive the air. I have known in my heart always, I felt strongly that he was alive until that time."

At a Monday news conference at a hotel across the street from the Johnson Space Center, Mrs. Smith and Lorna Onizuka discussed an article in Tropic, The Miami Herald's Sunday magazine, that told of the new revelations.

The article brought back painful memories of their loved ones, they said.

"It was very distressing to wake up and see that," Mrs. Smith said of the syndicated article, which appeared Sunday in Houston newspapers.

"There were only a few surprises, some very distasteful revelations I felt were not in good taste, things I would not want my family to read. It's just very difficult to open up these wounds that have never mended for us."

Mrs. Onizuka said she hid the article from her children.

"I find it a little distressing to have gotten up Sunday morning and gotten no hints that it was going to be in the paper — to have to hurry and confiscate the paper from my children — and a little mystified as to why the article came out at all — now, forcing us as families to have to revisit the entire incident again," she said.

Tropic quoted anonymous NASA investigators who said the seven Challenger astronauts survived the blast that occurred 73 seconds after liftoff and died only when the cabin, possibly still pressurized, slammed into the Atlantic Ocean at 200 mph.

Tropic editor Tom Schroder said the article, which was submitted to the magazine a couple of months ago, "was a story that should be told."

Schroder said there were a lot of lingering questions about what happened to the astronauts, and the article provided some answers.

"It was the first time this had ever come out, and this is our job (to report the news)," he said.

Mrs. Onizuka said until reading the article she hadn't known that an astronaut's helmet containing part of a head was recovered.

Both women said they believed NASA did a good job in helping their families through the ordeal — providing them with information and sometimes protecting them.

Business update

Fewer business trips with air fare increase

DALLAS (AP) — Jettisoning of most Dallas flights by Braniff Inc. has caused the types of air fares most often used by businesses to skyrocket, and travelers are complaining about the increases.

Travelers buying tickets a day or so before they have to fly, a common occurrence for business customers, said they are paying almost double what they paid only six months ago.

Rich Lantz, who flies from Dallas to Boston on business, sometimes takes an unwanted side trip to Houston. Although it adds at least three hours to his round trip, the detour saves Lantz's company $247 in fares.

"It's cheaper for me to fly to Houston and catch a flight there to Boston than it is to fly non-stop to Boston from Dallas," said Lantz, a district sales representative for a Boston-based company that makes electron microscopes.

"I'm under a budget, and I have to fly to Boston once a month," he said Monday. "I'm willing to change planes to save that much money."

Rivals American Airlines Inc. and Delta Air Lines Inc. until recently matched Braniff's unrestricted discount fares in major business markets, such as

New York, Washington, D.C., Chicago and Los Angeles.

An unrestricted fare has no advance purchase requirements, cancellation penalties or Saturday night stay requirement.

But after Braniff was acquired last summer by an East Coast investment group with financial aid from American, it dropped almost all of its routes out of Dallas. Soon, American and Delta discontinued their own unrestricted discount fares for business travelers.

Travel agents in the Dallas area say that their business clients are becoming so frustrated with mounting fares that they have cut back on their trips.

"I have a bunch of businessmen who are up in arms about American Airlines," said Kathy Thompson, manager of Park Central Travel Agency Inc. in Dallas. "I don't see why they're penalizing the segment of the population that supports them so strongly — the business traveler."

American spokesman Steve McGregor said the Fort Worth-based airline did not like Braniff's low fares "but we had to match them in many markets for competitive reasons. When Braniff left those markets, they took those fares with them."

T-bill rates hit three-year high Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction to the highest level in more than three years.

The Treasury Department sold $7.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.82 percent, up from 7.54 percent last week. Another $7.2 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.87 percent, up from 7.71 percent last week.

The rates were the highest since three-month bills sold for 7.87 percent on April 29, 1985 and six-month bills averaged 7.90 on May 13, 1985.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 8.09 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,802.30 and an 8.31 percent for six-month bills selling for $9,602.10.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate home mortgages, rose to 8.35 percent last week after averaging 8.10 percent the week before.

Millions of transportation workers subject to drug tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of transportation workers including pilots and truckers will be subject to random drug tests under a new federal directive that is likely to be challenged in court before it goes into effect in December 1989.

The Transportation Department announced the broad-ranging drug testing requirements Monday, and immediately the head of the airline pilots' union promised to fight the regulation both in Congress and in the courts.

The testing requirements cover all types of transportation, including airlines, long-distance trucks and urban transit systems. "The American people demand and expect a drug-free transportation system. These new rules will take us as far as practically possible toward that goal," Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley said at a news conference.

He acknowledged the tests likely will be challenged in the courts. The Supreme Court already has before it two separate drug-testing cases — including one involving post-accident testing of railroad workers — that are expected to be decided next year.

The series of federal regulations announced by Burnley call for transportation companies — airlines, trucking companies, railroads and commercial shipping companies — to have comprehensive testing programs in place by December 1989. Companies with 50 or fewer employees, including tens of thousands of over-the-road independent truckers, have another year to comply.

The Transportation Department estimated the testing will cost businesses more than $2.1 billion during the first 10 years, but Burnley said the testing will save the same companies about $8.7 billion in increased productivity, accident reductions and medical cost savings. In addition to random tests, the regulations call for drug testing before employment if there is reasonable cause to suspect drug use, periodically such as during annual physicals, and after an accident. The drugs covered by the tests are marijuana, cocaine, opiates, amphetamines and PCP. The random-testing provision, which requires that at least 50 percent of a given work force be tested during a single year, has attracted the strongest protests, especially from unions. They argue that such tests constitute an invasion of privacy, have minimal benefit and will subject thousands of workers to the consequences of "false positive" results. "Random testing is a counterproductive, shotgun strategy that is at the same time an unwarranted invasion of privacy and of no significant value in the battle against drug abuse," said Henry Duffy, president of the 40,000-member Air-Line Pilots Association. The required testing programs cover: • Nearly 3 million long-distance truckers, including independent drivers and those who work directly for large trucking companies.

Intercity bus drivers also must be tested. • More than 538,000 aviation employees, including 50,000 commercial pilots, 80,000 flight attendants and 300,000 airline mechanics. Air traffic controllers already are subject to similar testing requirements. • About 90,000 railroad industry workers, including engineers, brakemen and train dispatchers. • Nearly 200,000 urban transit workers, including subway and transit bus drivers and mechanics. • About 200,000 merchant seamen and other mariners on commercial vessels.

House burned

Firefighters gathered in front of a residence at 1500 Mesa Ave. about 8:30 p.m. after extinguishing a blaze where arson is suspected, Acting Fire Chief Burr Lea Settles said. Lt. Juan Palacios said there was an apparent break-in at the residence prior to the fire. Henry Franco is renting the home from owner Katy Alaya, an Odessa resident. The blaze was reported about 7:15 p.m. and caused an estimated $10,000 damage.

Forsan official resigns

The resignation of Forsan Independent School District's business manager was among items approved by the district's board of trustees Monday night. Robert Roberson, the district's business manager since January of 1982, resigned to accept the position of business manager with the Stanton Independent School District, said J.F. Poyner, superintendent. Roberson served as the district's tax assessor/collector, Poyner said, adding that Nova Scudday would be hired to assist in tax collection on a temporary basis. In other business, the board: • Approved its 1987-88 audit report and hired the firm Stallings and Herm of Stanton to conduct the 1988-89 audit. • Agreed to have an architect draw tentative plans to restore electricity to the district's football field. • Approved a proposal submitted by the senior class allowing the class to go on a cruise for its senior trip. • Adopted the district's 1987-88 Annual Performance Report.

Sheriff's log

Howard County Sheriff's Department officers reported the following incidents as of 8:15 a.m. today: • Ruth Ann Mobley, 26, 503 Abrams St., was released on bonds totaling $8,000. She had been arrested on two grand jury indictments for delivery of marijuana. • Johnny Rios, 22, 404 W. Seventh St., and David Earl Jones, 31, TDC Walls Unit, were transferred to Howard County jail on bench warrants from 118th District Court.

ted time and time again, that have been declared dead on arrival, and if Bush replays those same priorities, that will be a signal that we're in for more confrontation on the budget issue," Panetta said. Panetta said he hopes Bush will begin seeking congressional input early so his spending plan reflects agreements with Capitol Hill on taxes. "If not, I suspect we'll be fighting tooth and nail to see what can be done," he said. On the campaign trail, Bush proposed a "flexible freeze" plan for balancing the budget. Under the proposal, overall government spending would be allowed to keep up with inflation, with cuts in some programs and increases for others.

He never provided any specifics, however. Panetta said that with Bush insisting he will not slash large chunks of the budget — such as defense and Social Security — there simply will not be enough vulnerable programs left to yield sizable savings from spending cuts. "I've looked at that thing in a dozen different ways and don't see how it works," Panetta said of the flexible freeze plan. Panetta said he believes Bush has not yet made it politically impossible for himself to agree to tax increases. He said that just as Reagan agreed to several tax increases despite his anti-tax rhetoric, Bush could shift his position.

Insurance

them the ability to make a fair profit. Insurers spent at least $60 million fighting Proposition 103 and other rate reduction initiatives on the ballot and promoting an unsuccessful no-fault auto insurance initiative. It was the most costly state proposition fight in the nation's history. Since the election, several insurers said they would no longer do business in California. In the latest announcement, State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Co., the state's largest home and auto insurer, said it has stopped issuing new policies in the state. Meanwhile, in Massachusetts, Allstate Insurance Co. said Monday it would become the third major insurer in two years to stop writing new auto insurance policies in that state, where insurers say strict regulation of rates prevents them from making a profit. Allstate lost $115 million in Massachusetts over the past five years, largely as a result of the "unique regulatory environment" for auto insurance, said Kevin Sullivan, director of Allstate's Group Auto division.

Police beat

Big Spring police reported investigating the following incidents: • The manager of Gentleman's Corner, 223 Main St., reported unknown persons fired a gun at the store's plate glass window, shattering it and causing about $450 damage to the window and display clothing. • The manager of the Salvation Army Thrift Store, 503 N. Lamesa Drive, reported unknown persons took a handtruck valued at $60. • A woman who listed her address as HC61, Box 27, reported unknown persons caused $355 in damages to her home. • A woman who resides in the 300 block of N.W. 9th Street reported unknown persons took a color television valued at $200.

Herald opinion

Issues generate voter enthusiasm

Only 48 percent of Americans exercised their privilege of voting in last week's election. Analysts are blaming national apathy on the lack of enthusiasm for either Bush or Dukakis, a position that fails to recognize the other candidates and offices on the ballot.

Voter turnout in Howard County was 67.5 percent. If we assume the average level of antipathy toward the presidential candidates, what brought more Howard County voters to the polls?

Howard County had at least one hotly contested and highly publicized race where major issues and differences were brought to the forefront early in the campaign. This would suggest that people vote when they think their vote will have the positive effect of electing a candidate whose views reflect their own.

This year the Democratic Convention produced a platform that consisted of a general statement of goodwill and ignored specific issues almost entirely. The Republican platform addressed issues in a vague and generalized fashion. If we expect to have a strong two-party government, the parties need to stand for something specific. Voters need to know and understand what it means to be a Democrat or what it means to be a Republican.

Taxpayers bear a great deal of the expense of national campaigns. We have the right to expect our candidates to firmly state their position on issues instead of giving us emotionally-laden irrelevancies geared to the audience of the moment or to 30-second sound bites.

Voter apathy is not an effective form of protest at the way our elections are run. Saying no to the $1 campaign contribution box on our income tax forms might be. Letters of protest to our elected representatives might be.

Elected officials may be understandably adverse to making commitments in a campaign that they will be held responsible for after election. It is up to the taxpayers to insist that they do so.

Voters foot bill for campaign advisers

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — American taxpayers have paid the salary for at least one of George Bush's key campaign advisers, and several Massachusetts state officials have bailed out of their government jobs temporarily to campaign for Michael Dukakis. These arrangements aren't seemly but they are legal.

Candidates who drag their staff people along on the campaign trail step into a gray area. The Hatch Act is supposed to keep politics out of the federal workplace, but it has one big loophole. It does not apply to anyone paid out of the president's executive budget, and that includes the vice president's staff.

Lower-level bureaucrats, and state government functionaries walk a thin line when they campaign for their bosses. Some take unpaid leaves of absence, but then taxpayers are left to wonder who is minding the store. Staffers who are careful to decline a paycheck while on the campaign trail could still take advantage of public resources back at the office — secretarial time, postal privileges, supplies and telephone lines.

Craig Fuller, Bush's White House chief of staff, has made no secret of his work on the campaign. Fuller has traveled with the Bush entourage and has been featured in story after story as a campaign kingpin — all the while collecting his annual salary of $89,500.

Democrats are not innocent on this score either. At least a dozen Massachusetts officials took unpaid leaves from their state jobs to work on the Dukakis campaign. Only one, Department of Welfare Commissioner Charles Atkins, is still earning a state salary. He took six weeks of his vacation to work for Dukakis, the Quincy Patriot Ledger recently reported.

The last time the Democrats had the luxury of being the incumbents in the White House was 1980. Former Vice President Walter Mondale told our associate Stewart Harris that the Carter White House had guidelines to keep government employees out of the campaign.

But a small contingent of key White House aides traveled with Carter and Mondale, according to Mike Berman, a Carter White

Jack Anderson

House aide who now works on the Dukakis campaign. Berman was in charge of keeping the campaign expenses separate from government business. When it came to the White House staff, Berman said the line got fuzzy, and White House aides occasionally stuck their fingers into the campaign. Staying out of a national campaign is next to impossible for political animals, Berman explained.

In 1980, Richard Moe was Mondale's vice presidential chief of staff. He stayed back in Washington during the campaign.

Fuller, on the other hand, is rarely away from Bush. When we asked about Fuller's involvement in the campaign, a Bush spokesman at first claimed that Fuller limits his work on the road to White House business. Then the spokesman contradicted himself, saying Fuller's work on the campaign has been checked out by White House lawyers and is perfectly legal.

Fuller's duties have included advising Bush on speeches, polls and primary results. He also keeps in regular touch with campaign chief James Baker, strategist Lee Atwater and pollster Bob Teeter.

While it may be legitimate job for government workers to be at the beck and call of their bosses, working at taxpayer expense to get them elected leaves a bad taste.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Congress has bowed to election-year pressure and elevated the Veterans Administration to a Cabinet-level department. In signing the bill, President Reagan said the change would give the veterans "what they have deserved for so long, a seat at the table in our national affairs." We disagree. What the veterans have deserved for so long is a VA that is competently managed and responsive to their needs. Sitting at the Cabinet table doesn't guarantee that.

Japanese can't have everything

- By LEWIS GRIZZARD
 I thought I'd heard everything:
- Hosea Williams dropping a suit against the Ku Klux Klan.
  - Rock Hudson being gay.
  - Michael Dukakis admitting he's a liberal.
  - The Kremlin loosening up.
  - A pitcher of orange juice costing me $37.50 from room service in a New York hotel.
  - The Atlanta Falcons winning a game.

But that's nothing compared to the news Coca-Cola wants Georgia and Georgia Tech to go play each other in football in Tokyo.

It was in the papers. I read it with my own eyes. It's probably not going to happen because both schools say it's not feasible, but that the idea was even hatched is frightening.

What's going on here? Oft I have warned about the Japanese influence on our country. The Japanese even tried to buy Atlanta's Hartsfield Airport, and Mayor Andy Young even listened to the offer.

The Japanese have bought every American golf course that isn't nailed down, several tall buildings, and they'll probably do a deal and wind up owning Oregon and Lake Erie before it's over.

Georgia and Georgia Tech in Tokyo, indeed.

You think we were surprised at Pearl Harbor?

Can you imagine the Japanese reaction to ten or twenty thousand bulldozers barking at one another in a hotel lobby in Tokyo?

"Tora! Tora! Tora!" is one thing, but "How 'bout them Dawgs" is quite another.

And what on earth would fans do about the traditional tailgating parties before the game?

Is fried chicken that easy to find in Tokyo? And if it's not, if we cook our own and took it with us, would it spoil on the plane ride?

I talked to a few Georgia and Tech fans soon after the news of Coke's idea to switch the game. They were surprisingly warm to the idea.

Said Leroy Parsons, Georgia fan: "At least it would be a lot easier to get to Tokyo than it was to get to Starkville when we played Mississippi State."

Said Miles Purvis, Tech fan: "I'd rather go to Tokyo than back to Athens. Last time I was in Athens, a Georgia fan barked at me and bit my leg. It took me four hours to get home in all that traffic."

Offered Dorothy Sims, Georgia fan: "I'd rather go to Tokyo than back to Grant Field" (now Bobby Dodd Stadium).

"At least the rest rooms would probably be cleaner."

Countered Ruby Lesterfield, of a Tech persuasion: "I think it would be exciting. The only other time I've been overseas is when we took the kids to Canada."

Well, not me. We've tampered with enough traditions in this country as it is, and I'm damned proud of our two major state schools who would not budge and the Tech-Georgia game isn't going anywhere.

Move the game to Tokyo and the next thing you know, the Master's will move to Lisbon and Andy Young will uproot the dogwoods and replant them in Botswana.

Writing beats talking about it

"Children are unpredictable. You never know what inconsistency they're going to catch you in next."
 — Franklin P. Jones

By STEVE REAGAN
 Staff Writer

Can we say newspaper, boys and girls?

One of the lovely things about writing for the Herald — or any other paper, for that matter — is that it provides one the time to review what he or she has written and correct it if necessary.

The finished product, we're hopeful, then gives the reader the idea that the writer is indeed a possessor of great knowledge and wit. "Surely," our customers say in our dreams, "this person has been blessed by the gods, and we should be thankful he has taken the time to write for our benefit."

At least that's the theory.

I might be overstating the case just a wee bit here, but the point is apt. Writing — at least to me — is infinitely easier than reporting on TV, radio or — shudder — speaking in front of an audience.

This may be why my editor decided to give me the assignment of addressing a group of kindergarten students on what it's like working at a newspaper.

Maybe it was a payback for all those nasty things I wrote about him in past columns.

"OK, Reagan," he probably said to himself, "you're so good at making cute little comments about me; let's see how good you are at talking to a bunch of five-year-olds."

Devilish person, that editor.

Beyond the realm

Faced with the possibility of making a fool out of myself in front of those children, I did what any sane man in my position would do: I offered my boss a bribe.

It didn't work, though. My editor — managing to stifle a laugh and with a notable gleam in his eyes — assigned yours truly and the staff photographer the task of explaining the inner workings of a newspaper to a group of impressionable youngsters.

The kicker was that I had all of four hours to prepare for my presentation.

As the fateful hour approached, I mulled over different aspects of my talk. To be a good reporter, you'd have to be honest, patient, a good speller, knowledgeable of current events and be able to discern whether people were telling you the truth. I would tell my pre-school audience.

Sounds good, right? The only trouble was when the teacher introduced me, I forgot all those sterling qualities except patience — which I hoped with all my heart that the children had in abundance.

The teacher, though, helped me tremendously. "Do you think the children would have to be good spellers, Mr. Reagan?" she asked. After sending a telepathic thank-you in her direction, I proceeded to explain that yes, an ability to spell correctly is a much-desired trait in any newspaper.

Fortunately, the best thing I did was bring several copies of the paper with me to the school. The students were so enthralled with them that I hope they ignored most of my ramblings.

The questions I fielded were typical questions five-year-olds would ask about newspapers: Where do you get the comics? Do you have someone who draws them, or do you buy them? Why do you do sports? Did you know my uncle delivers newspapers? His name is Billy. Do carriers make a lot of money?

It could have been worse. At least no one asked why I am going bald — which began before I got into this business, incidentally.

After what seemed like about five hours, I yielded the floor to my esteemed colleague — and let him make a fool of himself. He was luckier than me, however, because he brought his camera bag, which the students found extremely fascinating.

Please don't get the wrong idea. It was a friendly audience, to say the least, and they seemed to think my mustache looked OK.

But upon leaving the school, I decided that the experience only served to reinforce my reluctance to ever try to make a living on the speaking circuit.

The presidency is safe — at least for now.

Law students help the homeless

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard Law School students are helping the homeless by making less expensive travel arrangements on job interview trips and asking prospective employers to donate the savings to shelters nationwide.

"We've got 125 (firms) going in on it, so I guess it's popular," school spokesman Michael Chmura said of the program called Firm Commitment. "We're talking to the business school, the Stanford Law School, and other schools to set up a similar thing for next year."

In the job interview season that started in October, students are booking trips through a Boston discount service, Filene's Travel Service, Chmura said. They are also staying at less expensive hotels than normal. The law firms interviewing the students are asked to donate the savings to a local homeless shelter.

Boy takes bus on four-accident ride

NEW YORK (AP) — An 11-year-old boy who took a city bus on a seven-block joy ride bailed out of the moving bus before it collided head-on with an automobile, injuring the driver, officials said.

The boy, who was charged with juvenile delinquency, was treated for head and eye bruises. The name of the boy was withheld because of his age.

The youth climbed inside the 40-foot-bus at a maintenance yard in the borough of Brooklyn on Monday morning, said Bob Slovak, a spokesman for the Transit Authority.

The boy pulled the bus into the street, where it smashed into the side of a parked fire engine, crashed into the side of a parked truck, collided head-on with a car and then careened into a pillar beneath elevated subway tracks.

Police expand search for bodies

DOROTHEA PUENTE

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Police were expanding a search for bodies beyond the yard of a rooming house after digging up the sixth and seventh elderly victims from shallow graves there.

A warrant charging the boarding home's missing landlady with one count of murder was issued late Monday, said police Capt. Sam Somers.

Investigators using shovels, steel probes and a tractor found the two bodies wrapped in cloth or clothes in the yard of the two-story Victorian house, said police Sgt. Bob Burns.

The bodies, one unearthed in the front yard under a flower bed and the other in the side yard under a shed, are unidentified, like the five others.

The landlady, Dorothea Montalvo Puente, 59, disappeared after police interviewed her Friday, the day they discovered the first body. Puente, who according to a social worker once said she took in elderly boarders as her way to repay society, was released for lack of evidence.

Radioactive material found

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Researchers have discovered small quantities of a radioactive substance in material dredged from Savannah Harbor about 100 miles downstream from the Savannah River Plant.

Cesium 137, a radioactive isotope, was found in material taken from the harbor and dumped on the South Carolina side of the Savannah River, which forms the border with Georgia. Tests found tiny amounts of the material, insufficient to create a health hazard, The Charleston News & Courier reported today.

The tests were done for the South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resources Department by researchers at the University of Georgia. The wildlife agency is sampling dredged material for pollutants because of water quality problems believed to be caused by industrial discharges into the river, agency officials said.

Leaders, activists outraged by death

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Community leaders and civil rights activists expressed outrage at the beating death of a black man by white youths believed to be "skinheads," and one group called on citizens to take direct action.

Sunday's slaying was the nation's third linked to the bands of young toughs who promote white supremacy. Skinheads, whose name is derived from their shaved heads, have been linked to numerous criminal acts against blacks, Asians, Jews and homosexuals nationwide.

Two other black men were injured in the attack by three young men, who had shaved heads and wore military jackets. The three victims were Ethiopian immigrants.

Mayor Bud Clark said in a statement Monday he was "saddened and disturbed" by the beatings, and urged citizens and public officials to find a constructive solution to racial violence.

"A cowardly act against any one of our citizens is a cowardly act against every one of our citizens," City Commissioner Bob Koch said at a news conference. "But let us not react out of hatred. Let us react with love and understanding."

The militant Jewish Defense Organization mailed letters to Portland synagogues asking them to arm their congregations.

"Violence will be met with violence," said Mordechai Levy, head of the 3,000-member group based in New York.

He said a $10,000 reward was being offered for information about the beatings, or to anyone who physically restrains a neo-Nazi from doing violence against a minority group.

Police spokesman Dave Simpson said Monday that investigators had no leads in finding the men who attacked Mulugeta Seraw, 27, Wondwosen Tesfaye, 24, and Tilahule Anteh, 31. He said they may be skinheads.

Seraw was pronounced dead at Emanuel Hospital & Health Center, where the two survivors were treated and released.

Judge orders ex-chairman's arrest

BHOPAL, India (AP) — Arrest warrants were issued today for former Union Carbide chairman Warren Anderson and two other officials of the U.S. multinational in connection with the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster.

On Dec. 3, 1984, more than 3,100 people were killed and at least 20,000 injured when toxic gas leaked out of a tank at a pesticide plant operated by Union Carbide's Indian subsidiary.

Chief judicial magistrate R.C. Mishra issued the arrest warrants today after Anderson and the two Carbide officials failed to honor summonses to appear in the Bhopal magistrate's court to answer murder charges.

West Bank, Gaza Strip closed

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank (AP) — The army sealed off the West Bank and Gaza Strip today to squelch celebrations of Palestinian independence, but youths defiantly shot off firecrackers and sang as nationalist anthem.

Underground leaders of the Palestinian uprising called a general strike in the occupied lands today to mark what the PLO's parliament-in-exile, meeting in Algeria, proclaimed as independence day.

In Bethlehem, under curfew for the first time since 1967, dozens of teen-agers ignored threats of fines and jail terms to run through streets lighting fireworks and singing the nationalist song, "My Homeland, My Homeland."

Army jeeps blocked town entrances and soldiers ordered residents to stay indoors. "Everybody who goes out will endanger his life," one soldier announced over a loudspeaker.

Shuttle's maiden flight perfect

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet space shuttle Buran orbited the Earth twice today and landed eight miles from its launch pad in Soviet Central Asia, ending with flawless precision its unmanned 3-hour, 25-minute maiden flight.

The successful flight puts the Soviets into the shuttle program alongside the United States. A major success for the Soviet space program, it comes after a series of problems including the near loss of cosmonauts on a joint Soviet-Afghan mission to the Mir space station in September.

The Buran, snowstorm in Russian, touched down on a 2.8-mile concrete runway with a puff of dust from its rear wheels and rolled to a halt as three parachutes opened at its rear.

"The U.S.S.R. has successfully tested its first reusable space craft Buran," official Radio Moscow said, interrupting regular programming two minutes after touchdown.

PCB-gobbling bacteria discovered on river's bottom

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Toxic PCB compounds someday could be gobbled up by bacteria during hazardous waste cleanup operations, according to new findings from the bottom of the Hudson River.

PCBs accumulated in sediment above Troy, N.Y., are being changed into less toxic forms by bacteria that work without oxygen, researchers from Michigan State University report. These less toxic forms do not accumulate in living tissue.

PCBs' tendency to accumulate in tissue has led several states to advise against eating PCB-contaminated fish. New York, for example, has banned fishing for striped bass below Troy all the way to the ocean.

The new findings raise hopes that highly toxic PCBs could be changed into the less toxic, non-accumulating forms in more locations.

"If it is true, it could have enormous significance," said Richard D. Morgenstern, head of the Office of Policy Analysis in the Environmental Protection Agency.

It's too early to start looking for PCB-free striped bass, said Darrell Banks, deputy commissioner of the state's Department of Environmental Conservation, which plans to dredge and remove 360,000 cubic yards of PCB-contaminated sediment from the river.

The state probably will go ahead with the dredging project, he said. But the Michigan State findings "cause us to hope for a system that might be useful for hot spots we can't deal with" by dredging.

"It could in some cases make dredging unnecessary," said environmental chemist Stephen A. Boyd, one of the Michigan State authors reporting on the work in the current issue of Science magazine published today.

He said that for dredging and other removal projects that do go forward, "it would certainly lessen the risk-to-benefit ratio," that is, make the work less risky than believed up to now.

The work of Boyd and co-authors James M. Tiedje and John F. Quensen confirms a theory advanced in 1987 by General Electric Corp., whose legal dumping of PCB waste at Fort Edward and Hudson Falls, N.Y., from 1951 to 1973 is the source of most Hudson River PCBs.

There are 209 possible PCB compounds. Each contains one to 10 chlorine atoms. GE noted that PCB sediments in the Hudson had lost chlorine, and the proportion with only one or two atoms had increased over what was put in the river.

GE theorized that oxygen-free bacteria probably were responsible, but New York government scientists said there could have been other causes, including the possibility that sediment containing the high-chlorine forms was washing away faster. An administrative law judge recommended rejection of GE's proposal to leave the sediments undisturbed in favor of a state proposal for dredging.

The Department of Environmental Conservation expects to decide in early January whether to go ahead with the dredging.

Steve Hamilton, organic chemist at GE's labs in Schenectady, N.Y., said, "We feel pretty good" about the confirmation of GE's theory by the Michigan State team. He noted that PCB-laden sediments in harbors at New Bedford, Mass., and Waukegan, Ill., have shown similar changes but have not been studied in detail.

The Gulf Coast is marching inland as beach disappears

SARGENT (AP) — Beverly Griggs remembers how the pelicans used to roost on the banks of the beach near her home — one of several dozen homes on stilts overlooking the Gulf of Mexico.

Now the pelicans are gone. So are all but five of the homes. And so is the beach.

"There were about two football fields between the house and the gulf," she says. "Now I've got beachfront property. It sure is scary."

A few poles stick out of the surf-tossed gulf — reminders that something used to stand where the waves now crash into a craggy and muddy shell-strewn beach that once was someone's lawn. Texas Farm Road 457 is broken and crumbled and now literally ends in the water.

The encroaching Gulf of Mexico is on the march inland, munching away like an unstoppable Pac-Man and threatening the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway, a busy canal that carries tens of millions of dollars worth of cargo from Texas to Florida.

At no point in Texas along the some 400-mile-long coast is the gulf so close to the Intracoastal Waterway and the navigating for tugs and barges so treacherous than at Sargent, about 20 miles southwest of Freeport.

The problem, accelerated by what officials believed would be a solution to inland flooding troubles, has engineers reaching for untried remedies, residents worried about losing homes and Intracoastal users cursing unpredictable currents.

In 1983, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers approved a permit to cut a channel 40 feet wide, 1,850 feet long and 4 feet deep from the Intracoastal to the Gulf of Mexico to relieve floodwaters inland. The channel became known as McCabe's Cut, named after the owner of a store on the edge of the cut.

"With the combination of the floodwaters eating it out and the erosion from the ocean, it has been enlarged," says Corps of Engineers spokesman Ken Bonham. "Landowners and homeowners are feeling a great deal of pressure because the sea is moving in."

The ocean always has been moving in. Long-time residents remember when the Intracoastal was more than a mile from the Gulf of Mexico and 12 to 15 rows of houses were planted on the island.

But ever since the cut was made, and especially in the last two years, the water's appetite for land has been voracious. In just the last nine months, 147 feet of beach has been lost, including 42 feet in four September days because of high waves from Hurricane Gilbert, which struck hundreds of miles to the south.

The cut is nearly 300 feet wide and more than 30 feet deep now.

"We had no idea it would turn into what it had, nor did the Corps or anyone else," says Jim Rother, manager of the Matagorda County drainage district.

Although the loss of homes and land is serious, the threat to the Intracoastal Waterway is much more critical.

The latest figures — for 1986 — show nearly $73 million in cargo moved along the Texas segment of the waterway, including almost $24 million worth that moved through Sargent between Galveston and Corpus Christi. Beyond Texas, the waterway goes another 874 miles through Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama and into Florida.

The gulf is now less than 600 feet from the waterway at Sargent. It would have to be closed to barge traffic if the gulf merges with the canal because barges and boats could not navigate the waves; silt washed ashore would clog the waterway.

The close proximity of the gulf already has led to problems for tow boat operators on the Intracoastal at Sargent.

"The real danger is that sooner or later we're going to have a terrible accident with a couple of chemical barges and we're going to have a chemical spill that's going to be much, much worse than anything we've already had," says King Fisher, whose Port Lavaca-based firm runs barges up and down the Intracoastal.

In September, Fisher sustained a nearly $500,000 loss when a supply barge with 2,000 feet of pipe, a derrick barge and pontoons were lost when the treacherous currents in the cut sucked barges from the Intracoastal into the Gulf of Mexico.

Other barges and shrimp boats and pleasure craft have been taken over by the strong tides and spun into the banks or pulled into the ocean.

"I watched a tow with two 800-horsepower engines who couldn't pull out," says Kenneth Hale, who operates a highway drawbridge next to the cut.

"I couldn't believe it went through that hole — 120 feet long, 3,000 feet of pontoons, 2,000 feet of floating line, a 75,000-gallon fuel barge — washed out," Fisher says of his loss. "You can't imagine."

"We're thinking of using a product used extensively in the North Sea," says Charles Kalkomey, the engineer in charge of closing the cut.

The plan is to deploy a plastic mat on the bottom of the cut to trap sediment and create an earthen bank that will grow in layers.

"It has an excellent chance of working," he says, while acknowledging the device never has been tried before on the Gulf Coast.

Everything ducky for the winner of Great Duck Race

EDITOR'S NOTE — It began as a small outing in Deming, N.M., in 1980 but the Great American Duck Race now draws thousands of spectators and pays out thousands of dollars in prize money. Usually collecting most of the money is an Albuquerque businessman who took up the sport because of his name: Robert Duck.

By TOM COYNE
Associated Press Writer

BOSQUE FARMS, N.M. — In Robert Duck's championship racing stable are birds with names like Michael DuQuackis and Here's George, neither of whom were winners in the recent olympics of waddling.

Duck races ducks. In fact, he usually dominates the annual Great American Duck Race in Deming. And don't start coining puns about his name: He's heard them all.

"Most of them are too fowl to repeat," he says.

Feathers fly when Duck begins his training routine at his farm here.

"Go, go, go," he yells as he chases a quacking mallard down a 24-foot-long training track.

"Eight-nine," his wife, Kathy, shouts, punching the stopwatch as Oliver South rushes past the 16-foot mark.

Oliver South is one of the most celebrated members of the Ducks' stable. He won the eighth annual Great American Duck Race last year, covering the 16-foot course at Deming Duck Downs in a record time of 1.23 seconds.

Another of Duck's flock, Pride of the 62nd Army Band, won the 1988 race in late August with a time of 1.08 seconds, shattering Oliver South's record. Duck's 28 entries won six of eight places in the finals and all three top positions in the final race.

Duck's ducks have won in seven of the eight years they've competed.

Duck racing has flourished in Deming since it started as an afternoon gathering in 1980. Hundreds of ducks from several states competed this year, cheered on by several thousand spectators.

"The original idea was to get maybe 50 ducks out to the park, maybe 150 people or so, have a barbecue, a good time and go home," Duck says. "Then the national news media picked it up and it has absolutely gone bonkers since."

Several trainers show up with 20 or more ducks at $10 an entry.

Rivalries have blossomed among the trainers with everyone shooting for Duck.

"We'd love to beat him. There's nothing friendly about it," says Everett Hassman of Deming's Hassman Racing Team. "I'd give anything to beat him."

Duck says he first entered the race because of his last name, and got serious about it because of the money. The 38-year-old president of an Albuquerque-based wholesale jewelry company says he has earned more than $30,000 racing ducks, taking home $5,450 this year alone.

"But once you're on top of the hill, and especially when your name is Duck and you're winning duck races, it's more than the money," he says. "It's the fun of the event."

Survey seeks farmer interest in pest management program

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

There is considerable interest in re-establishing the County Pest Management Program in Howard County. This program deals with regular scouting of cotton fields by trained personnel, followed up by weekly "turn-rows" meetings at key locations, usually area gins, to inform producers of the current insect situation in cotton crops in the county.

The scouts would be hired by the Extension Agent-Entomologist, Victor Lucero, from local applicants to work the entire critical insect infestation period. Four such scouts would be needed for a thorough coverage of the county. This would cost local producers about $8,000 for this service.

Discussions with local growers and gin managers have indicated that approximately 20 cents per bale assessment could adequately fund this program. To assist us in determining producer interest in this program, a survey is currently being sent out to all cotton producers, distributed by county growers, and local gins for producers to complete. We ask you to please complete the form and return it to one of these locations, whichever is most convenient for you: County Entomologist Office, Courthouse, Stanton, any area gin, or the Howard County Extension Office in the courthouse in Big Spring. Completing the survey obligates a producer in no way. This is just a survey to determine producer interest. We do request that these surveys be completed and returned no later than Dec. 15.

Your cooperation in assisting with this survey will be most appreciated. If you failed to get such a form please contact the Howard County Extension Office for a copy.

The Pest Management Program does not emphasize constant chemical control of insects but informs producers of the local insect situation, trains them in insect identification, both beneficial and harmful, what chemicals are available to control harmful insects if the need arises and the choices they have in management of cotton insects.

Dry-land cotton production differs greatly in insect management from irrigated situations and insect reports from such areas often can not be applied to our dry-land situation. Such local scouting surveys are very important to our own cotton programs. We encourage you to once again assist in the current survey of producers toward interest in a Pest Management Program.

Oil/markets

HOWARD COUNTY
Chevron USA of Midland has re-completed the No. 225 Dora Roberts in Howard County's Howard-Glasscock Field. The well is located two miles east of Forsan, in a 240-acre unit in the WS&NW Survey.
Daily potential of one barrel of oil was posted with the Railroad Commission. Production will be from perforations in the Yates Formation, 1,761 to 1,882 feet into the hole.
The same operator originally completed the well as an oil producer from the Gloria in April 1988. The original total depth was 3,152 feet, and the operator has plugged the hole back to 1,930 feet.

MARTIN COUNTY
Martin County's Spraberry Trend Field gained a new producer when Parker & Parsley Petroleum of Midland completed the No. 1 Mabey "P" ten miles southwest of Tarzan.
The well indicated ability to pump oil at the rate of 61 barrels per day, plus 71,000 CF casinghead gas and 160 barrels of water. It was taken to a 9,650-ft. bottom and plugged back to 9,558 feet. Production will be from perforations in the Spraberry Formation, 7,812 to 9,514 feet into the wellbore.
The operation is in a 160-acre unit in the G&M&B&A Survey.

A new producer has been brought on line in Martin County's Spraberry Trend Field with John L. Cox of Midland as the operator.
Located eight miles northeast of Stanton, the well is in a 160-acre unit in the T&P Survey. It is designated as the No. 2 Rowden.
It indicated ability to pump 52 barrels of oil per day, plus 60,000 CF casinghead gas and 45 barrels of water. The well bottomed at 10,965 feet and was plugged back to 8,500 feet. Production will be from perforations in the Spraberry Formation, 6,708 to 8,241 feet into the hole.
Rosewood Resources of Midland has given up on its efforts to make a producer out of the No. 1-3 Peters Estate. It was a wildcat try in the T&P Survey, Martin County. The location was two miles northwest of Stanton. Spudded July 19, the well had reached 11,800-ft. total depth.

MITCHELL COUNTY
Chevron USA of Midland has filed first production figures on two new oil wells in the Westbrook Field, Mitchell County.
The No. 711 North Westbrook showed potential to pump 43 barrels of oil and 4,000 CF casinghead gas per day along with 38 barrels of water.
The No. 907 North Westbrook indicated ability to pump 35 barrels of oil and 4,000

CF casinghead gas per day plus 79 barrels of water.
The wells will produce from perforations in the Clear Fork Formation, 2,915 to 3,998 and 3,023 to 3,095 feet into the wellbore, respectively. Total drilling depths were 3,200 feet, with plugbacks to 3,172 feet and 3,159 feet.
The operator has 7,979 acres leased with drillsites four and seven miles north of Westbrook in the T&P Survey.

BORDEN COUNTY
No. 1 Miller Ranch, WC, 8,600-ft. Proj. TD, 8 NE Gail 880-acre unit, H&C Survey, SEC. 524, Blk. 97, Statec Petroleum, Irving, oprtr.
MARTIN COUNTY
No. 8 Grisham & Greeman "A", WC, 11,450-ft. Proj. TD, 4 NW Stanton, 1,120-acre unit, T&P Survey, Sec. 37, Blk. 36, Conoco Inc. of Stanton, oprtr.
HOWARD COUNTY
No. 1 McCracy, BC, 9,400-ft. Proj. TD, 1 Fairview, 318-acre lease, T&P Survey, Sec. 1, Blk. 33, Terra Resources, Midland, oprtr.
No. 1 Hyatt "M", Spraberry Trend, 9,750-ft. Proj. TD, 16 N Tarzan, 82-acre lease, Ward C&L Survey, Parker & Parsley Petroleum, Midland, oprtr.

Hawks hold off Rangers, 90-88

Fort Sill Cannoneers' guard Clifford Reed tries to get off a shot over Howard Hawk defenders Terrence Lewis (34) and Carlos Thumm (44) in Saturday night action at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Monday the Hawks ran their record to 5-3, edging Ranger 90-88.

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Bryant Smith scored the eventual winning points on a jumper with 1:00 left, and the Howard College Hawks held on to take an exciting 90-88 win over the Ranger Junior College Rangers at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Monday night.

The Hawks rallied from a five-point deficit to take the win and raise their season record to 5-3. It was a case of Howard inside strength eventually overcoming the outside shooting of Ranger as Howard collected its second win of the season over the Rangers. HC defeated Ranger, 101-90, earlier this season.

"Ranger should be commended," Howard coach Steve Green said after the game. "We beat them earlier in the year by 11 and didn't have much trouble with them; then they come in here and give us the scare of our lives. They played well, they played hard and they were competitive."

Behind the outside shooting of guard Reginald Davis and forward Ken Austin, the Rangers raced to a 49-48 halftime lead. Davis finished with 31 points and Austin 19 to lead the Rangers.

Center Charles Moore scored eight points early in the contest to give HC a 13-6 lead with 16:11 left in the first half. The Hawks would increase the lead to 17-7 before a combination of Ranger outside shots and cold shooting by Howard would allow the Rangers to climb back into the contest.

Austin would can two three-point bombs and Davis would add another to bring Ranger to within two with 11 minutes left in the half. The Rangers would briefly gain the lead before a three-pointer by Terrence Lewis tied the game at 23-all at the 8:15 mark.

From there, Davis and Austin would lead a Ranger onslaught that would give the visitors a one-point cushion at halftime.

Ranger's James Bell scored two quick buckets at the onset of the second half to give the Rangers a 53-48 lead. A pair of free throws by Charles Moore and a two jumpers by Michael New, however, would tie the contest at 53-all at the 17:26 mark.

Davis and Austin would again contribute points to allow Ranger to regain its five-point lead before the Hawks began its rally that would turn the remainder of the contest into a dogfight.

In an attempt to cool the Ranger long-range bombs, Green went to a smaller, more guard-oriented defense. The attempt was successful, as attested by statistics. After scoring nine three-pointers in the first half, Ranger would only score two after intermission.

Howard would close to within one of the visitors four times before finally taking the lead on a New jumper with 7:17 left. Ranger would briefly regain the lead on a lay-in by Davis, but a pair of buckets by New and a free throw from Moore gave the Hawks a four-point lead with six minutes remaining.

The teams then traded buckets until Davis scored four points in a 31-second span to tie the game at 79 with 3:18 left in the game.

Lewis then went on a tear, giving the Hawks a lead they wouldn't relinquish. The Birmingham, Ala. native would score seven unanswered points — the last on a layup resulting from a Ranger turnover — to give Howard an 86-79 lead with less than two minutes remaining.

Moore would add two points on a tip-in and Davis would add his jumper to give the Hawks the win — but not before Davis canned another three-pointer with 16 seconds left to provide the final margin.

Green had complimentary words for the Hawks' defense that shut down the Rangers' three-point production.

"We decided to battle them quick for quick and took some of our big guys out," he said. "When the game was on the line, our man-to-man defense was about the best it's been all year; it probably won the game for us."

Green also praised the play of Lewis down the stretch.

"Terrence was struggling earlier; it seemed the bucket had a lid on it. But when the game is on the line, a great player — and I believe he is one — forgets about what's happened before and puts the ball in the basket."

Next for the Hawks is a trip to the Pratt, (Kan.) Junior College Classic Thursday through Saturday. Their next home game will be Nov. 26 when they host the St. Edward University's junior varsity at 6 p.m.

HOWARD (90) — B. Smith, 26-10; M. Lockhart, 0-1-1; L. Pettigrew, 6-0-12; T. Lewis, 8-5-22; M. New, 7-4-18; W. McCaster, 1-4-6; C. Moore, 8-3-19; totals, 34-23-90.

RANGER (88) — C. Walker, 2-0-5; D. Gould, 1-1-3; R. Davis, 11-3-31; R. Marshall, 3-0-6; K. Austin, 6-3-19; C. Irby, 1-0-2; M. Motley, 4-0-8; S. Daniels, 2-0-4; J. Bell, 4-2-10; totals, 34-9-88.

HALFTIME SCORE — Ranger 49, Howard 48.

3-POINT GOALS — Ranger: 11 (Walker, 1; Davis, 6; Austin, 4); Howard: 1 (Lewis).

Local high school teams begin season tonight

Steers will be in harmony

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

With four veteran players returning, coach Boyce Paxton is expecting a good season for this year's version of the Big Spring Steers basketball team.

"I'm excited. This program is coming along real well," said Paxton, entering his third season as the Steers' mentor. The Steers will be trying to improve on last year's 23-10 (11-4 district) record. They were beaten by the Snyder Tigers in an extra game playoff.

Paxton has had his troops practicing since school started, and got a few more players when the football season ended.

"The first group has looked real good, especially in our last scrimmage. We played Crane and Greenwood, two good AAA schools, we outscored them 226-117 in six, 15-minute quarters.

"The football players really picked things up real well. By the time we all fell together, we'll be pretty good. There are no weak sisters on this team. Everybody on the team can play."

The Steers will get a chance to "show their stuff" tonight when they begin regular season play in San Angelo against the Central Bobcats. Junior varsity play begins at 6 and varsity competition follows at 7:30.

The Steers return two starters in senior guards Doug Young and Abner Shellman. Both are two-year lettermen. Shellman was an all-district and all-area selection last year.

Two players who saw part-time starting duty last season were guard Tony Lewis and post player Thane Russey. Lewis just got out of football training.

The Bobcats are expected to be a stern test for Big Spring. Central is coming off a 21-9 season last year and are expected to finish in the top of 4-5A. CHS and Big Spring split two games last year.

Central returns one starter and eight lettermen from last year. Their top player — and lone returning starter — is 6-6 forward Tom Elglert.

The Texas High School Basketball preseason poll has the Steers picked to finish third behind Andrews and Snyder. Paxton said it's really too early to be thinking about that, but added — "I know Andrews and Snyder will be tough. But the district will be tougher from top to bottom. The teams that have been up are still there, but the teams that have been down are on their way up," Paxton said.

"We'll be running the ball because all 11 men can run. We'll be ready for any situation anybody can throw at us.

"I've got a good coaching staff. Coach Mike Ritchey is coaching the JV and coach Tim Tanehill is coaching the freshmen. They're really doing a good job. We've got 77 players in the high school level.

"I'm tickled to death with the varsity players' attitudes and work habits. They're not troublemakers and everyone is unselfish. My first year here we were just trying to win and get the kids hungry for more. Last year we won but we had some dissension on the team. This year we're hoping to put it all together."

Here is an outlook of each of the 1988-89 Steers:

Lady Steers seeking repeat

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

For the 1988-89 Big Spring High School Lady Steers' basketball team, the major goal this season is to win its third consecutive district crown, but head coach C.E. Carmichael knows it won't be easy.

"Winning the third (title) in a row is a goal of ours," Carmichael said. "I have no idea. It's hard for me to say how well they'll play together. If they play well together and can avoid getting hurt, they'll have a shot at winning district."

The local hoopsters will take the first step toward defending their crown when they open the 1988-89 season in Steer Gym tonight at 7:30 p.m. against the San Angelo Central Lady Bobcats, defending champions of District 4-5A. Junior varsity acts starts at 6.

But the Lady Steers — who have lost only one district game in two years — will have stiffer competition from District 4-4A foes this year. Carmichael said he expects Sweetwater, Andrews and Snyder to give Big Spring a run for its money.

"(Those three teams) basically have their teams back intact," he said. "I feel the district will be much more balanced this year."

Not only will the Lady Steers be facing the pressure of defending a title, they also have a tough act to follow. Last year's girls team went 28-2, including a spotless 15-0 district record.

"Last year's team surprised me — and everybody else," Carmichael said. "They won against (state 3A champion) Brownfield early in the season, and it was something that continued throughout the year.

C.E. CARMICHAEL

"That team was special because they played so well together," he said. "They didn't care who got the credit. Until we had two girls go down with knee injuries in January, I thought we were close to having one of the best teams in West Texas."

The two injured Lady Steers — junior forward Gisela Spears and junior guard Peggy Smith — return along with fellow starter Tami Wise and three lettermen to give Big Spring a good core of talent.

"That talent, however, is deep at guard and thin elsewhere. Of the six returning lettermen, four are guards, one a post and Wise will play the post position.

Other weaknesses that Carmichael noted are in team speed, leadership and getting Smith and Spears at full speed again.

"I'm not sure we're as quick overall as last year," he said. "Plus, we lost a great leader in Katrina Thompson. Someone will have to step forward and assume that load. Thirdly, can we get the two knee injuries back to full strength and full speed?"

To counter those weaknesses, the girls will rely on what Carmichael calls the team's strengths: A winning tradition and a good work ethic.

"A lot of these girls have been in big games together — they've lost only one home game and one district game in the last two years," he said. "They realize they have that winning tradition, and I believe that will help us. Plus, this group works very hard."

Carmichael said he expects Sweetwater and Andrews to give Big Spring the toughest competition.

Call starts Dolphins' downfall

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami player didn't think he had held, the Buffalo player didn't realize he had been held and Dolphins coach Don Shula said he had never seen such a call.

The penalty helped trigger a 21-point second-half outburst by the Bills in Monday night's 31-6 victory over Miami.

Dolphins defensive end Jackie Cline was called for holding fullback Jamie Mueller, negating a fumble recovery by Miami's Rick Graf at midfield early in the third period. Buffalo led 10-6 at the time.

After Mueller fumbled a handoff, Cline tackled him. Mueller vainly tried to escape Cline's grasp to retrieve the ball, and the flag flew.

"That was the first time I've ever seen it called, but it was called," Shula said. "You can push and shove and do those kind of things if you're going for a loose ball."

The five-yard penalty allowed the Bills to complete an 80-yard touchdown drive. Less than three minutes later they scored again following an interception and led 24-6.

"A big play," Shula said of the penalty. Line judge Boyce Smith made the call.

"During the fumble, he (Cline) grabbed the legs of the Buffalo player who was attempting to crawl to the loose ball and held him to prevent him from getting the ball," Smith said.

Cline said he had never heard of such a penalty.

"No, and I don't think anybody in this locker room has, either," Cline said. "I didn't even know they called the penalty on me. I just tackled him and I was laying on him after the tackle."

Mueller said he would have recovered the ball had Cline not tackled him. But the penalty confused the Bills' player.

"When they said holding, I didn't even realize that it was holding (of) me until a couple of plays later," he said.

Mueller said the call came at a critical time.

"You never know — with a turnover like that, if they would've gotten the ball, they could've taken it down and scored."

Cline said the call sent the defense reeling.

"There was a lot of confusion out there at that time," he said. "We had been playing fairly good defense, hanging tough in the game."

Carter may get to play

DALLAS (AP) — The University Interscholastic League today plans to review information on grades and grade-changing at Carter High School to determine whether its football team is eligible to continue in the state playoffs.

Among those scheduled to be questioned is Carter teacher Winfred Bates, whose grade book fueled the controversy because school officials said he had not followed the rules of the Carter Plan.

The system has undergone renewed scrutiny since a grade-changing controversy erupted at Carter last Thursday. Supt. Marvin Edwards ruled the school's football team was ineligible for the state football playoffs because a player had failed to meet no-pass, no-play requirements. He then reversed his decision the next morning.

Teachers must give equal weight in four areas: class participation, homework, weekly tests and an exam at the end of the six-week grading period. In other Dallas schools, teachers are free to determine what will be used as criteria.

District officials said Bates had not recorded the grades for homework and class participation when UIL investigators determined that Carter running back Gary Edwards, who is not related to the superintendent, had failed algebra in the first six-week grading period.

When the homework and class grades were included, the player's scores were high enough to earn him a passing grade. Edwards changed his mind and said the football team was eligible to play Plano East High School last Friday night. Carter won, 21-7, and its future in the playoffs will be decided by the UIL today.

tion once district play begins.
"I'm probably most concerned about Sweetwater and Andrews," he said. "Both schools have some really good athletes on their teams this year."

Carmichael, in his fourth year at the helm at Big Spring, stated three goals for his team this year: To maintain the home unbeaten streak, to win district, and to have more success in the state playoffs than in recent years.

Members of the 1988-89 Big Spring High School Lady Steers, and Carmichael's comments on each, are:

- Tami Wise, a 6'0" senior post player — "Tami's a fourth-year letterman. She's a bona-fide division I college prospect."
- Gisila Spears, a 5'9" junior forward — "This will be her second year to start. She's the best rebounder we have, and she gives us a lot of flexibility because she plays both inside and outside."
- Peggy Smith, a 5'5" junior guard — "If her knee heals properly, she can be as good as any point guard in West Texas."

Steers

Returning starter, perhaps the best all-around player on the team. A good shooter, passer, defensive player, he possesses great jumping ability, he's able to dunk the basketball. He was second on the team in scoring (11.9) and rebounds (6.9) last year. He also led the team in steals (3.8) and assists (4.5).

- Doug Young, 5-11, Sr. — Returning starter, has one of the best outside shots on the team; averaged 6.9 points per game last year.
- Thane Russey, 6-5, Sr. — Returning letterman who has improved more than anybody on the team. Has the chance to become a dominating force underneath. Was third on the team in blocked shots with 21 last year.
- Tony Lewis, 5-10, Sr. — Was a part-time starter last year. Possesses very quick hands and feet, won a lot of games with his defense alone last season; an excellent passer.
- Brandon Burnett, 5-8, Jr. — Played a few games on the varsity last year, but was one of the JV's leading scorers and assist men. Probably the best passer on the team. Will miss the Central game because of a broken little finger on his shooting hand.

Olney (9-2) vs. Celina (10-1) 8 p.m. Friday, TA Stadium, Arlington.
Kerens (7-3) vs. Lorena (10-1) 8 p.m. Friday, TA Stadium, Arlington.

• Kelley Knight, a 5'5" senior guard — "She will either start or play often at guard. She saw a lot of action last year, and is one of our best defensive players."

• Angie Dees, a 5'6" senior forward — "She has probably improved as much as anybody in the program. She'll play either forward or the wing position."

• Debbie Pulver, a 5'7" senior post player — "Debbie has surprised me. She came up from the junior varsity and caused herself to probably to win a starting position."

• Vicki Norwood, a 5'7" senior forward — "She's had injury problems this fall. We're hopeful she will eventually help us."

• Shana Brasel, a 5'5" senior guard — "Shana's also up from the junior varsity, and will probably be our backup at the guard position."

• Jennifer Hendleman, a 5'8" sophomore guard — "She's a transfer (from Highland). She has a lot of potential, and is one of our best outside shooters. She'll probably start at off-guard."

• Lana Dower, a 5'8" sophomore post player — "Also up from the junior varsity. She needs some experience, but someday, she'll be a fine post player."

• Traci Pierce will assist Carmichael with the varsity and will coach the junior varsity. Ninth-grade mentor is Deehona Minton.

• Chris Cole, 5-11 Jr. — One of the top scorers and rebounders on the junior varsity team last year. Although he doesn't have great height, he will play forward for the Steers.

• Jason Davis, 6-0, Jr. — Another one of the star players on last year's 14-11 JV team. A smart player who handles the guard position well. Not much of a scorer, mainly an assist man.

• Junior Lopez, 6-1, Jr. — Was one of the leading rebounders for the JV last season. Has adequate quickness and will be called on to hit the boards from his forward spot.

• Joe Downey, 6-4, Jr. — A big bruising forward, very aggressive. He runs the floor well. He led the junior varsity in rebounding and scoring last year.

• Mike Williams, 6-2, Soph. — One of only two sophomores on the team. A very versatile player, he can play any position on the team, but mainly will be used as forward. Doesn't have great jumping ability, but has excellent timing.

• Louis Soldan, 6-4, Soph. — The other sophomore on the team. He knows how to rebound and score inside. Will play forward for the Steers.

Tyson Field, Waco.
Pilot Point (8-2) vs. Farmersville (11-0) 8 p.m. Friday, Williams Stadium, Garland.

Sports Briefs

Runnels girls beat Snyder

In junior high girls basketball action Monday night, Runnels swept two games from Snyder.
The Runnels White team downed Snyder B 22-19. Melissa Neal and Syreeta Shellman scored eight and six points respectively. Shellman also pulled down eight rebounds. Skydra Terry added four points and four rebounds.

The Runnels Red team defeated the Snyder A team 23-15. Cassie Underwood led the way with 11 points and 13 rebounds. Amber Fannie scored five points and had four rebounds. Tammie Garcia collected seven steals in the win.

It was the season opener for both Runnels teams.

Angels hire new manager

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Doug Rader realizes his new job isn't going to be an easy one, saying the position wouldn't have been open if it were.

"If it wasn't a difficult job, I wouldn't be here. It's not that I have all the answers, but if it was an easy job, the manager would already be in place. He wouldn't have been fired," Rader said Monday after he was named to succeed the fired Cookie Rojas as manager of the California Angels.

Rader, the former Gold Glove-winning third baseman for the Houston Astros who went on to manage the Texas Rangers, said he believes the Angels have the players to be a contender in the American League West.

The 44-year-old Rader, who worked as a scout for the Angels last season, becomes the 12th manager in the club's 28-year history.

He said he has a one-year contract and that he will retain the Angel coaching staff.

Big Spring Fall Sports banquet

The Big Spring High School Fall Sports Banquet will be Nov. 28 at 6:30 p.m. in the Big Spring High School cafeteria.

All varsity cross country, volleyball and football athletes will be honored.

Tickets are $5 per person, and they are on sale at the high school front office.

Tickets must be purchased by Nov. 23. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Isn't it about time we gave Big Spring the business?

When you make a purchase, where does your dollar go? Grocers buy shoes, shoe sales people buy cars. Car salespeople buy newspapers. Newspaper salespeople buy clothes. Clothing salespeople buy jewelry. Jewelers need their cars fixed. Mechanics buy candy. Candy salespeople buy air conditioners... When you buy locally your dollars don't "go." They come back to you from customers, and from civic improvements paid for by taxes raised from the business you support.

Shop locally. It pays YOU.

Strange ends season with Nabisco victory

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — They were two good friends going head to head for most of the annual honors in golf's season-ending event.

"There are friends and there are friends you go to dinner with," Curtis Strange said.

Tom (Kite) and (his wife) Christy are friends Sarah (Strange) and I go to dinner with a lot," Strange said Monday. "He's a good friend, a close friend."

"But that ends on the golf course. On the golf course, he isn't my friend Tom Kite. He's just somebody standing in the way of me winning a golf tournament."

And it was a dead-serious, completely combative Curtis Strange who beat Tom Kite on Monday in the day-late sudden-death playoff finish to golf's season-ending, $3-million Nabisco Championships of Golf.

Strange's face was grim and determined, betraying no trace of friendship, when he snatched the tee from the ground after his 4-iron shot on the second playoff hole nestled two feet from the flag and left Kite with an impossible task.

Kite had to better that shot, match Strange's near-certain birdie, to stay alive on the 17th hole at Pebble Beach.

He couldn't do it. He put his tee shot in a bunker, got up and down for a par-3, but lost to Strange's birdie on the second hole of a playoff for most of golf's major seasonal honors.

Strange's two-foot birdie putt made him:

- The first man to go past $1 million in single-season earnings on the American tour.
- The 1988 Player of the Year.
- The only four-time winner on the American tour this year.

Strange, who has won five titles around the world this year, collected $535,000 from the total prize money of $3 million and pushed his season's earnings to a record $1,147,644 for the year.

Woman has no reason to feel guilty

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because I can't tell this to anyone else.

I am carrying a terrible load of guilt from my past that I can't forgive myself for, and I can't forget. I committed incest with my brother when I was 11 years old and he was only 3. This happened only once, but I can't get it out of my mind. I am 50 years old and he is 42, and I don't know whether he remembers it or not. I am too ashamed even to ask his forgiveness. We do not live close to each other. I live in the Midwest and he lives in California. He is happily married with a nice family.

Without making this a book, I'll try to fill you in on some of the details. Our mother was sick much of the time when we were growing up. She was hospitalized several times for what they called "nervous breakdowns." Our father was a devoted husband and a loving father. Both parents are gone now.

I have been married to a recovering alcoholic for 30 years. He is in A.A. and I am in Al-Anon—that's probably what brought all this to the surface. In trying to work the 12-step program, this guilt keeps he has, he has probably dismissed it as a childhood game. Almost all children have played "doctor," or a game of "You show me yours and I'll show you mine." Believe me, it is nothing to worry about, so put it out of your mind and don't give it another thought.

If you aren't able to unload the unearned guilt, please see a professional counselor.

coming up, and I don't know what to do with it.

Please help me, Abby. Most of the people who know me think I'm a nice person. Writing this has been one of the hardest things I've ever had to do. If you think printing my letter will help someone else, you may, but please, do not mention where it came from.

A TROUBLED WOMAN

DEAR TROUBLED: You are a nice person, and you have absolutely no reason to feel any guilt or shame. You did not commit "incest," my dear lady! You were a curious 11-year-old girl who went on a fact-finding expedition and did some preadolescent "exploring." Most children are curious about the opposite sex, and you merely satisfied your natural curiosity.

In all probability, your brother has no memory of this incident. If

DEAR ABBY: My son was recently married. I am a widow struggling to make ends meet, so I was not able to help finance the wedding.

I just saw the wedding announcement about to be mailed. It says, "The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith" (made-up name), but there is no mention of my name as the mother of the groom.

My son asked his mother-in-law why my name was not mentioned. She told him that I had not contributed anything toward the wedding.

Is this proper etiquette?

INVISIBLE MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your name should have been mentioned as the mother of the groom.

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your financial fortunes will leap forward from time to time. You score rich gains within your relationships. Partnerships formed in the year ahead will be more productive than any formed previously. Spiritual rewards are more important than material ones in your scheme of things. Travel will provide many learning experiences. You find more time to spend alone doing the things you like best. Share a favorite hobby or sport with a younger person. Your enthusiasm is contagious.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Lisa Bonet, pitcher Dwight Gooden, jazz great plans could be disrupted by a friend's illness. Call off a trip; distant conditions are somewhat deceptive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Postpone travel and focus on projects already under way. Influential people may not be helpful. Be more tactful around mate or siblings. Reading is a wonderful diversion. Cut spending.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Business activities are on the upswing and should be trouble-free. Close associates will cooperate with your efforts to increase profits. Loved one's health problems are easier to handle than expected.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Let nothing interfere with your plans. Financial negotiations can be handled most successfully. Family members will contribute; an agreement can be finalized. Formulate new business ventures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be on your guard today. People and circumstances can be deceptive. Postpone signing agreements. Romance is on the upswing, making the future look brighter. Relax tonight with mate. Share confidences.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Domestic problems can be solved fairly easily. Creative ideas developed with close associates could lead to a new financial venture. Romance has some very bright moments. Avoid extravagance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Distant affairs are not what they appear. Postpone travel. A past disagreement with influential people will be patched up, to your benefit. Reach out to those who admire you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A wonderful day for self-improvement projects. Seek expert advice regarding grooming, clothing. Trust your intuition in business negotiations. Handle joint finances with caution.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your concentration is good, interference minimal. Take care of paperwork. If job-hunting, update your resume. Negotiations can be brought to a conclusion. Higher-ups know that you have what it takes.
