man who was killed by snipers on a rafting trip down the Rio Grande says she hopes the suspects arrested Tuesday will face the death penalty if convicted.

Police said Tuesday they arrested two boys, ages 16 and 17, in the Nov. 19 shooting death of Michael Heffley, 40, of Eastland. They also are suspected of shooting and wounding Heffley's wife, Jamie, and rafting guide Jim Burr.

The 17-year-old, identified as Eduardo Pineda Rodriguez, was arrested about 8:30 a.m. Tuesday at his parents' home east of the Big Bend village of Redford, Presidio County Sheriff Rick Thompson said Tuesday. Pineda, a Mexican citizen and resident alien of the United States, was charged with murder in Heffley's death, the sheriff said

The 16-year-old was arrested a short time later by Chihuahua state judicial police in Ojinaga, Mexico, Thompson said. The boy, whose name was withheld because of his age, also was charged with murder, Thompson said.

The sheriff added that police are looking for two more teen-age suspects, both of whom are believed to be in hiding in Mexico.

The attackers opened up with rifle fire on the trio of rafters as they floated through Colorado Canyon, about 22 miles east of Redford. Mrs. Heffley and Burr have said

MARFA (AP) — The wife of a their assailants stalked them from a 300-foot-high canyon rim on the Mexican side of the river, which is about 75 feet wide as it flows through the red-walled canyon. Heffley was shot on a sandbar on the U.S. side of the river.

Both suspects gave statements, and Thompson said it appears the assailants began shooting at the victims on a whim

'We have no motive for the shootings," the sheriff said. "They saw them coming down the river and decided to shoot at them.

Mrs. Heffley, 32, told The Associated Press she was pleased to hear of the suspects' capture.

"I'm glad that they are being caught and I think this incident should be made a public example," she said. "I think they should be executed, because if they are not, relations will never get better across the border. Nobody should have to go through this kind of torture.

Mrs. Heffley's wishes probably will not be fulfilled because Pineda is not charged with capital murder, and Mexico does not have a death

Under international law, a person standing in one country who fatally shoots a person in another country can be tried in either nation.

Alien couple's saga continues

By MICHAEL DUFFY

Staff Writer The lives of a couple whom Big Spring police initially came in contact with last week have taken a dramatic turn during the past few days.

When police stopped a car driven by Jose Adam Rivera during the early morning hours of Nov. 23 for a suspected traffic violation, they were startled to discover a young woman who was seven months pregnant and who had just received a severe beating.

Rivera, 24, was arrested on a charge of unlawfully carrying a weapon and the woman, Bernice Garcia, 23, was transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center for treatment of her injuries.

Garcia — who insists on using the name Rivera — was transferred to St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock Nov. 25 where she is listed in stable condition, according to a nursing supervisor.

During a subsequent investigation conducted by police, it was learned that Rivera is in the United States illegally and the couple had recently moved to Big Spring from Phoenix, Ariz. where two charges of aggravated assault are pending against him. Police also learned that the couple had left four children under six years of age alone at 1301 Park Ave. while they were searching for a hospital.

Police officers and dispatchers abruptly became baby sitters until the children could be placed in the Rainbow Project - a temporary home for victims of domestic violence.

Art, McFatter, a Rainbow Project volunteer, said today that Junior, 6; Vanesa, 4; Carlos, 2; and Christine, 11 months are doing well.

They are eating up a storm and are playful. They're just like any other kids," said McFatter, who brought the children to Scenic Mountain Medical Center Tuesday night to visit their mother only to discover she had been transferred to Lubbock.

McFatter said that Bernice is being uncooperative will not reveal the names of relatives living in the United States and he needs the children's medical records in order to place them in school.

"She really wants to see him (Rivera)," he said.

McFatter said the Rainbow Project cares for children up to 30 days "and longer under certain circumstances.

"I think I will try to call her tonight so that she can talk to the children." he noted.

Rivera is scheduled to arrive in RIVERA page 3-A

Tornado lawsuit settled

PECOS (AP) — Reeves County and the survivors of the Saragosa tornado have agreed to a $15,000 settlement in a lawsuit the survivors filed to force the sheriff's office to account for unsolicited tornadorelief funds it received.

Under terms of the settlement, the county will take $15,000 from the sheriff's budget next fiscal year and give it to the Saragosa Finance Committee, County Attorney Scott Johnson said Tuesday.

The finance committee, which is run by the county but is separate from the sheriff's office, probably will give the money to the public Reeves County Hospital to pay unreimbursed expenses arising from the May 22, 1987, tornado, Johnson said.

The twister killed 30 people. injured 60 and destroyed 61 houses in the tiny cottonfarming town about 25 miles south of Pecos.

Thousands of dollars of unsolicited contributions poured in from around the country after the tornado. Most went to the Saragosa Finance Committee but some went to the sheriff's office, whose fund was completely separate from the finance committee

The legal trouble started when the tornado's survivors asked how much money the SARAGOSA page 3-A

Bush derided Jackson at one point during the presidential campaign as a "loose cannon," but on Tuesday an aide to the presidentelect said today's post-election meeting typified Bush's wish to talk to "interested and concerned" people.

Jackson said during the campaign that Bush was "not morally fit to lead this nation," but a source close to Jackson on Tuesday respectfully referred to Bush as the nation's "team captain." Bush agreed to the Jackson meeting after receiving a call from the longtime civil rights activist on Tuesday morning, said

Bush spokesman Steve Hart. "He expressed a desire to get together with the vice president. He said, 'Come in tomorrow, we'll have lunch," Hart related.

Bush also was meeting privately for breakfast with an environmental coalition representing some 20 organizations which prepared a 'blueprint for the environment' for the next president.

Both meetings are part of a fence-mending effort by Bush that has included a meeting with vanquished GOP rival Bob Dole and a planned meeting on Friday with Michael Dukakis, the defeated Democratic presidential nominee.

Sources close to Jackson said he wanted to talk about the "moral tone" of a Bush administration and the need for sensitivity to the concerns of minorities and poor people.

In another overture to a prominent Democrat, Bush called the Senate's newly chosen majority leader, George Mitchell of Maine, to congratulate him shortly after Tuesday's secret-ballot election among Senate Democrats.

Also on Tuesday, Bush told Senate Republican leaders that he will seek speedy confirmation of his Cabinet

Participants in a private meeting at the Capitol said Bush told the senators he hopes any "honeymoon period" with Congress can yield a federal budget compromise.

The meeting was seen as an effort by Bush to make a conciliatory gesture to blacks after a campaign in which he was criticized for rarely campaigning in black neighborhoods or on issues of concern to blacks. ## Local officials view center as major step in helping dropouts

By STEVE GEISSEN Staff Writer

Big Spring Independent School District officials view the opening of the Personalized Achievement Center as a major step toward 'recovering' Howard County school dropouts

The center - an alternative school designed to provide dropouts with the tutoring needed to pass the General Equivalency Degree - opened Monday on the fourth floor of the Permian

"I think (the center) is great," said Bill McQueary, superintendent. "I think we'll be meeting the educational needs of local dropouts who, without this, would have been unable to complete their education."

Today, 17 students were enrolled at the center. Approximately 45 other former students have expressed an interest in attending the school

The Big Spring Independent School District announced plans for the center in July and hired Jackie Henry, director, Martha Martinez, instructor, and Mary Morales, aide, in September.

Job Training Partnership Act, a federal job training program is providing the initial fund g for the program, but after one year the district will become primarily responsible for funding the school. All students must be approved by JTPA for participation in the program. Ninety percent of the students must meet JTPA income requirements.

Alternative schools represent a recent response to the growing student dropout problem. The schools have quickly become "very, very popular things among school districts around the state and the nation," McQueary said. 'We're real pleased that we're able to have one this early.

Alternative schools in West Texas include centers in Midland, For sockton

Richards fights for unclaimed monies

Richards said a legal battle between New York and Delaware over unclaimed money could make losers of the remaining 48 states, including Texas

Richards said on Tuesday that Texas has intervened in the New York-Delaware lawsuit in order to get what she calls Texas' share of unclaimed money leftover in brokerage houses. And she is urging other states to do the same.

The case concerns ownership of millions of dollars in dividends and interest that have no known owner, but originated in businesses and governmental entities nationwide.

Texas money is now being sent to the state of New York. Neither Delaware nor New York should benefit from Wall Street's accounting errors," she said.

We are talking about lots and lots of money," said Ms. Richards. She said the exact amount of money in question is unknown, but added that a report filed with the state of New York showed the amount of money remitted by one brokerage firm was $3 million, $300,000 of which was from Texas

How this money became unclaimed is a complicated

This money becomes unclaimed and its owner unknown.

New York claims the money is theirs, since the brokerage houses are in New York. Delaware says it is their money, since the brokerage firms are incorporated in Delaware.

Ms. Richards said the money should be returned to states based on where the original payments came from. Funds coming from Texas, she said, should be Texas-

"At every single juncture there is an amount of unclaimed property that comes out in that transaction. That results in a significant amount of money," said Richards.

'The only really known factor is that Texas, or Oklahoma, or whatever state is the one that originates the payment and that is the one known fact you have in all of these transactions. In other words it (the unclaimed funds) should come to the original issuer of the security," she said.

Ms. Richards, whose office administers Texas' unclaimed money program, said the state has filed a brief with the U.S. Supreme Court requesting that Texas be allowed to intervene in the suit between New York and Delaware.

DEA gives instructions for illegal drug making

Enforcement Administration agents confirmed the agency has supplied chemicals and even taught suspects to manufacture illegal drugs as an "investigative technique" designed to lead to arrests and seizures, the Houston Post reported today.

The agents said the DEA has provided the training and helped build laboratories for drug suspects as a way to keep tabs on the dealers' activities, according to the copyright report.

Although agents never intend to allow those drugs to reach the street, law enforcement officials say they cannot completely stop the flow of drugs from labs they helped set up. Phil Jordan, special-agent-in-charge of the DEA's Dallas district, acknowledged such tactics are routinely used by the DEA nationwide. "It's not an everyday type of occurrence. It's an investigative technique that we will use as a last resort," Jordan said. The DEA never supplies all ingredients needed by a suspect, according to Jordan and his assistant, Julius Beretta.

"The criminal himself already has the missing links necessary to complete the controlled substance," Jordan said.

A spokesman for the U.S. Justice Department said the department plans to investigate those tactics. however, along with previous Houston Chronicle reports that the DEA staged phony drug raids.

The committee also focused its recommendations on the problems gas suppliers face with stringent regulations that not only monitor the environmental effects of pipelines, but the financial effects as well.

It concluded that a free market could strengthen supplies, control prices and speed the construction of needed pipelines as demand

"What we have found, and we think that this committee has proven, is that it is possible . . . for various regions of this country to come together on an energy policy that uses natural gas as a cornerstone," Sharp said. Texas has lost a trillion cubic feet of the natural gas market since 1981, a figure that represents 150,000 of the estimated 300,000 jobs that have the energy industry, Sharp said.

New England will use the equivalent of a trillion cubic feet of natural gas in the next 14 months alone, and the need for gas in California and other states also is on the rise, he said.

Kennedy, who described his first visit to Houston a decade ago when he spied a bumper sticker declaring "Drive 70 - Freeze a Yankee," said the country and its energy needs have changed significantly in the years since.

"We have up in New England tremendous demands for new energy supplies. And at the same time it seems that we have to look north toward the Canadians for that supply while right here in Texas and throughout the supplies of natural gas," he said. 'It only makes sense that we allow that gas to get to the markets where it's needed."

They were hesitant, however, to estimate how long it would take to achieve their goals. 'These recommendations, if followed, would lead this country toward heavy utilization of natural gas, create jobs in Texas and make us much less dependent on foreign oil by displacing that foreign oil with natural gas,' Sharp said.

School will help dropouts become contributors

By STEVE GEISSEN

Since it opened in March 1987, the Midland Alternative School has enabled 60 school dropouts to either return to high school or pass the General Equivalency Degree

Jackie Henry, director of Big Spring's Personalized Achievement Center, expects the local alternative school to achieve similar success.

The purpose of the local center, which opened Monday on the fourth floor of the Permian Building, is identical to that of the Midland Alternative School: to educate 16to 18-year-old Howard County dropouts so they can acquire a GED and the skills necessary to Saragosans eventually enlisted Texas Rural Legal Aid's help in filing suit against the county to force Sheriff Raul Florez to answer its questions. After poring through a pile of loose receipts and jumbled records, an independent auditor determined that the sheriff's office had collected about $53,000 in donations, Legal Aid attorney David Horton said Tuesday.

About $22,000 of that money was used to buy building materials and otherwise help the tornado victims, Horton said. But the sheriff spent about $31,000 on overtime expenses, utilities, fuel and a sheet-metal shed where some sheriff's office vehicles are now stored, Horton said. He added that the Saragosa Finance Committee was never subject to legal scrutiny because its records were complete and all spending was aboveboard.

Johnson and Horton said the $31,000 was "negligently spent." Though spending the money for non-relief purposes was legal, it was bad judgment, Horton said.

On Monday, county commissioners approved the $15,000 settlement, essentially paying the Saragosa Finance Committee half the amount that had been negligently spent by the sheriff's office.

"I think the action was in everyone's self-interest," Johnson said.

After County Judge Bill Pigman broke a 2-2 tie to approve the settlement, the commissioners court adopted a unanimous resolution suggesting the Saragosa committee give the money to Reeves County Hospital. Johnson said the hospital has yet to be reimbursed for $20,000 to $30,000 in overtime and medical care expenses resulting from the tornado.

A fresh start for Mexico and U.S.

Six years ago, President Reagan met with Mexico's President-elect Miguel de la Madrid in Tijuana and in

The cordiality of that meeting should have presaged an era of good U.S.-Mexico relations. Unfortunately, the opposite occurred. During the de la Madrid years, U.S. officials frequently stung Mexico with criticism of its official corruption and tolerance for drug dealing. All this came at a time when Mexico was a virtual economic basket case, reeling from its $100 billion foreign debt.

Recently, the United States and Mexico had an opportunity to abandon past rancor and start afresh. George Bush, the American president-elect, met with Mexican President-elect Carlos Salinas de Gortari in Houston. Bush wisely understood that it's easier to get to know Salinas now rather than to wait until both assume the heavy mantles of their respective presidencies.

But judging from experience, it will take more than an occasional state visit for Bush and Salinas to restore bilateral confidence and heal wounded feelings.

Bush should assign his secretary of state, James Baker III, to give a high priority to Mexico and develop a keen awareness of its sensitivities and problems. That doesn't mean the United States can't discuss its grievances — drug trafficking, among others — with Mexico. But it does mean discussing them sotto voce rather than shrieking at Mexico through a Washington

Baker also might review some of the fine suggestions made by the Bilateral Commission on the Future of United States-Mexican Relations, an advisory panel with a distinguished membership from both countries.

For example, Bush and Salinas would do well to adopt the commission's recommendation to set up a Cabinetlevel binational panel in each government to discuss their economic and trade policies.

The continual dialogue should help the United States chart a course that will keep Mexico from sliding into bankruptcy and perhaps help the country jump-start its stalled economy.

And, as the saying goes, when the United States sneezes, Mexico gets a cold. So, as the Bush administration begins to deal with the U.S. deficit illness, it should give Mexico a thorough briefing on the kind of domesticpolicy medicine it plans to administer. The Mexican government may need to take steps to ward off any contagious spinoffs that might further damage its own ailing economy.

Mexico is suffering from the most profound political and economic crisis in its modern history. If it sinks much lower, its difficulties could be felt north of the border. We hope that's not the case. Improving binational relations would seem to diminish that possibility Salinas and Bush made a good beginning. But it was just a beginning. Let's not put Mexico on the foreign policy back burner until the next U.S-Mexican presidential summit.

I followed behind her and we came upon another door. I waited for her to go ahead.

But she just stood there. For a moment, I was puzzled at her delay. Then, it occurred to me. She was waiting for me to open the door own. for her again, which I promptly did. Again, she smiled and said, 'Thank you.

How refreshing. It had been a long time since I have run across a woman — and a fairly young one at that — who seemed to want and expect a bit of chivalry from the opposite sex

I think I can speak for most American men and say we are terribly confused in this day of liberated woman. We're not sure if women want us to treat them in the old mannerly way, or not.

If I open a door for a woman, will she take it to mean I think she's not strong enough to open it herself and knee me in the groin?

Judging from the incident I described above, there may be, in fact, a number of women out there who still do appreciate a bit of gallantry now and then. I realize I might be a bit rusty in this area, so what I did was ask around among my female acquaintances until I found one from the rold school who could reprogram me a bit on how to treat a lady.

"Do you know," she began, "how to handle it when you approach a revolving door with a woman by your side?

I had no clue

Bush positions were cushioned in cotton

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

 ${\bf WASHINGTON-We\ can't\ read}$ lips, so we took George Bush's second bit of advice and read his book the 347-page collection of his campaign speeches gleaned from two years on the stump.

Surprise. Bush did talk about the issues beyond prison furloughs and American flags and the Pledge of Allegiance. Had someone followed him around long enough, it was all there — the contras, drugs, NATO, Palestine, insider trading, Angola, gang wars, homeless shelters, offshore drilling, global warming, even tort reform.

Someone did follow him around thousands of reporters looking for the quote, the gesture, the gaff. The networks, news magazines, wire services and major newspapers will argue that they wrote enough and said enough on the issues to fill a fleet of dump-didn't talk about the issues." Translation: I didn't hear about zero tolerance, but drug the issues when I turned to my primary source of information – television

Ask the most intelligent and articulate of your friends why they voted the way they did. The answer is not likely to be: "Because Bush favors a two-year budget cycle for major weapons systems and an operational space station by 1996."

More often than not, the answer has something to do with gut feelings. The next president is the man who didn't give the majority a stomach ache. It's no wonder that Wall Street woke up on Nov. 9 and went into a tailspin.

Bush is not entirely blameless. He took positions, but they were cushioned in the language of cotton balls, so soft and warm that no one on either side of the issue could be alarmed. Bush promises to "encourage," "reduce," "make it "evolve," "pursue" and 'generate complimentary support." An English teacher waiting for a real action verb from candidate Bush would wait a long time. (Note: "No new taxes" has no verb at all.) Push the cotton aside, and the essential George Bush comes through as a man who is not as far to the right as his predecessor except on issues that were winners for Ronald Reagan — abortion, Star Wars, gun rights, the contras and, defense

When Bush ventures to be his own man, he occasionally hedges or offers solutions which are already in the works. He makes some firm promises and charts a few undeviating and innovative courses. But, on two crucial issues drugs and the economy - we read page after page of Bush verbiage and came up empty. He promised to make Dan

Quayle his captain in the war on drugs, but Congress may ace Quayle out of that assignment by refusing to confirm anyone other than a Cabinet-level drug czar. Bush's solutions for the drug crisis look like so much posturing. He wants drug summit meetings with world leaders ar ferences with the states. But his nitty-gritty law enforcement options are variations on old themes But the complaint on the lips of that did not work when he was nearly every voter was this: "The Reagan's drug czar. Bush throws in some "read-my-lips > kingpins are going to have to see more than rhetoric before they believe Bush. Ditto for the Wall Street investors. Their current jitters can be blamed directly on Bush's unwillingness to be specific during the campaign. His speeches are long on predictability and short on solutions. He favors "stability in exchange rates" and "free markets" and "great prosperity." The days following the election show that Wall Street isn't in the market for apple pie. Economists have pooh-poohed his attempt at specifics — the amorphous "flexible freeze." And Congress is likely to stand in the way of the two solutions Bush states with fervor - a balanced budget amendment and a line-item veto.

There has been much talk of a 'mandate' for President-elect Bush, the kind of mandate that usually comes from a respectable margin of victory after a clear debate on the issues. Americans didn't give Bush a mandate. They merely gave him a chance.

NUNN WARNING — Senator San Nunn, D-Ga., is already playing hardball with President-elect George Bush. Nunn has sent Bush a letter warning him not to appoint an amateur to be secretary of defense. Nunn chairs the Senate Armed Services Committee which can hold up Bush's selection in the confirmation process. Sources tell us that Nunn's blunt letter included a suggestion that Bush find a skilled manager, not a slick political operator. Nunn's letter is one more indicator that Congress won't give Bush any honeymoon.

Free trade won't cure trade deficit

Capitalism is an economic system in which all or most of the means of production and distribution are privately owned and operated under competitive conditions

Adam Smith, (The Wealth of Nations, 1776) proposed complete noninterference of government with business, or laissez faire, an ideal that seems to inspire many conservatives today

Like most non-Communist industrial nations, we have a mixed economy in the United States one in which both public and private institutions exercise control. In the U.S. we have child labor laws, wage and hour laws, food and drug regulations, antitrust legislation, pension laws, etc. - each passed to correct actual abuses in our economic system.

Still, conservatives say, the less government involvement in business, the better. They argue that the free market allows the laws of supply and demand to regulate economic conflicts more efficiently than an individual or a group could do. This is basically the argument for free trade between nations. Do away with protectionism for American industry and we restore competitiveness.

At one time, the United States was the leader in world trade. Now our trade deficit is around $170 billion and it is obvious that we can no longer compete adequately in the world market. Are we the victims of unfair foreign trade practices?

To some extent, yes. Some countries, and Japan is often accused of this, sell their goods to us at less than the cost of manufacture. Obviously this is not fair trade and we can't compete on equal terms. Trade barriers ought to be erected against any country caught 'dumping.

Some countries, and again Japan is an obvious example, erect barriers against imports, so that our goods are not allowed to compete in their marketplace. South Korea, West Germany and Brazil also restrict American imports while Moding our markets with their exports. At what point do we stop begging for entrance into their instead of the social sciences. markets? Protectionism is a legitimate way to fight for these fields and will be for many reciprocity.

High interest rates, due in large part to the federal deficit, tend to drive the value of the dollar up, making it more difficult for us to sell abroad. We may have no choice but to stabilize some vital industries with trade barriers and subsidies to protect them during the periods when they are the victims of a strong dollar.

Protective policies should not be used as a substitute for inefficiency, poor quality and lack of technological improvements. American car sales declined when U.S. automakers failed to produce the small, economical and often better quality cars that foreign manufacturers were selling. American electronics companies lost 95 percent of their U.S. market between 1970 and today. Japan could, and did, produce innovative and low-cost products better than our companies did and consumers chose Japanese products.

Twenty-one percent of Japan's gross national product is set aside for investment, compaired to 12 percent in the United States, according to the non-profit Council on Competitiveness. In addition. much of our technological research is done in the area of defense, a field with limited application in other areas if only because of the secrecy under which much of it is

Since many of the problems of the trade deficit can only be solved by a coherent national policy, what can the average American do to help reduce the balance of trade? Quite a bit, actually. It goes without saying that everytime we choose a foreign product over a homemade one, we increase the trade deficit. We can send a strong grass-roots message by refusing to buy products imported from any country that restricts our exports.

We can decrease our consumption and increase our personal savings, thereby freeing money for investments. This was one of President Reagan's "trickle-down" arguments when he advocated tax relief for the wealthy, who have the most surplus money. But very few of us in the middle and lowermiddle class make a practice of saving rather than spending. Americans saved only four percent of their disposable income in 1987, compared to nearly 17 percent in Japan. We can guide our children into engineering, science, and manufacturing and industrial research or management careers There is a shortage of talent in more years.

There are no easy solutions to the trade deficit. President Bush can be expected to follow his predecessor's policies, despite the fact that the trade deficit rose from $36.3 billion in 1980 to its current level under Reagan. The Democratic Congress will probably move toward more protectionism, but on a piecemeal basis. Neither branch of the government is in a position to plan, instigate and implement a national trade policy alone and the chances of compromising on such a policy are

The Economic Policy Institute estimated the trade deficit cost our country 5.1 million jobs last year. This is a strong motive for a grass roots movement to force the issue.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Shuttle launch officials today worried about advancing storms with winds and rain threatening Thursday's liftoff of the Atlantis and five astronauts on a secret military satellite

Air Force weather officers tracked the weather with radar, aircraft and satellites as the countdown advanced.

A cold front carrying thunderstorms stretched from the Great Lakes to the Texas Gulf Coast today and should reach the Cape Canaveral area early Thursday, the National Weather Service said.

Atlantis will be commanded by Navy Cmdr. Robert L. Gibson. The pilot is Air Force Lt. Col. Guy S. Gardner, and the mission specialists are Col. Richard M. Mullane and Lt. Col. Jerry L. Ross of the Air Force and Navy Cmdr. William M. Shepherd.

Strict weather limits have been imposed in the wake of the Challenger explosion that killed seven astronauts shortly after launch on Jan. 28, 1986.

The rules include winds of no more than 19 mph from the south or 28 mph from any direction, no rain at the pad or in the flight path and no thunderstorms within Detectives questioned four people to "evaluate their alibis" in Tuesday's pre-dawn fire that triggered the blast, but no arrests have been made, said Sgt. Gregory Mills, a police spokesman.

Fire bells tolled throughout the city for the six firefighters, who were killed when a construction trailer loaded with 30,000 pounds of ammonium nitrate exploded, ripping a large crater in the ground and virtually obliterating a fire truck.

Police said they had no motive for the arson, but did not rule out that the fires could have been set fire apparatus operator.

Two pumpers manned by the six firefighters had been called to the site by security guards who noticed two prowlers in the area and saw the pickup on fire, said fire department spokesman Harold Knabe.

"The remains of one fire truck is sitting very close to one crater," Knabe said. "There is another vehicle of some sort, a large red truck. The other fire truck — there is absolutely no evidence that it was ever there.'

The dead firefighters were identified as Capt. Gerald C. Halloran, 57; Capt. James Kilventon Jr., 54; firefighters Thomas M. Fry, 41, Luther E. Hurd, 31, and Michael R. Oldham, 32; and Robert D. McKarnin, 42, a

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Pee-Wee Herman, Elvis Presley and Mickey Mouse were among the many non-candidates who received write-in votes for president in Broward County, an election official says.

But the top vote-getter in writein ballots unsealed Monday was the more serious figure of Democrat Jesse Jackson, who got 90 votes, said county Supervisor of Elections Jane Carroll.

Voters also tapped Richard Nixon, Gary Hart and Oliver North for the White House, but less serious figures dominated. Cartoon characters Garfield, Bullwinkle the Moose, Goofy, Bill the Cat, Roger Rabbit, musicians Frank Zappa- and John Denver, actor Robert Redford, talk show host Morton Downey Jr., journalist Hunter S. Thompson and movie hero Indiana Jones also garnered votes

Ms. Carroll said the county does not officially count write-in votes for president.

However, she did say that four disgruntled voters opted for "none of the above."

Faked letters, long lines seen in farm amnesties

By PATRICIA BIBBY Associated Press Writer

Agricultural workers who are in the country illegally have until midnight to apply for immigration amnesty, a deadline that is passing quietly and is tainted with charges

Federal immigration offices around the country braced for a last-minute rush as the last call is made for the illegal aliens' applications for U.S. residency.

Under a special provision of the 1986 immigration law, foreign farmhands must prove they harvested fruits, vegetables or other perishable crops in the United States for at least 90 days in a oneyear period that ended May 1, 1986, to be eligible.

But in a last, desperate chance to become legal U.S. residents, many farmworkers are using fraudulent documents to prove they worked here to qualify.

More than half of the applications filed for the Special Agricultural Workers Program have come from California, followed by Florida with about 10 percent and Texas with about 8 percent. Significant numbers have also been filed in the Northwest, Arizona and New York

The Immigration and Naturalization Service had estimated that 600,000 farm workers would apply for the latest program. The figure topped 1 million by the first week of November, and up to 200,000 more are expected before the filing period ends, said Aaron Bodin, who heads the program in Washington,

Many farmhands unable to obtain the needed documents turn to labor contractors who hire illegal immigrants, many of whom write letters to anyone who asks, for a fee, Bodin said.

Mary Lopez, the Californiabased director of the Martin Luther King Jr. Farmworkers' Fund, said she's heard of people paying up to $800 for a phony letter In Denver, Donald H. Russell, INS district director, said more than 20 percent of the documents filed in Colorado, Wyoming and Utah were fraudulent. In the Western states in recent weeks, 70 percent of applications filed have been recommended for denial, officials said. Although it appears many will ultimately be approved, immigration officials say the final denial

Long lines have been reported in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, where there are more farms and rate may be as high as 50 percent.

Furor grows in 'petty apartheid'

JOHANNESBURG, South recent years. Africa (AP) — A nationwide furor over segregation intensified today after a right-wing town council voted to consider a curfew for blacks and another removed a portrait of President P.W. Botha from its chamber.

The Conservative Party, which depicts Botha's limited reforms as capitulation to the black majority, provoked the controversy by implementing strict segregationist policies this week in some of the dozens of municipalities it won in local elections Oct. 26.

Three towns in Transvaal Province — Carletonville, Boksburg and Brakpan - voted in recent days to ban blacks from public facilities that were integrated in

The Carletonville council went a step further Tuesday night, ordering a study of whether a curfew should be imposed barring blacks from the mining town at night.

In Springs, a small industrial city about 25 miles east of Johannesburg, the Conservativecontrolled council voted Tuesday to remove a portrait of Botha from its chamber because councilors did not regard him as their

The National Party has denounced the restoration of "petty apartheid," but it has made no moves to repeal the legislation allowing segregation of local

Cyclone's death toll likely to rise

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) - A severe cyclone battered low-lying coastal areas of southern Bangladesh and eastern India, killing at least 54 people, injuring dozens and razing hundreds of mud huts, officials and news reports said today.

The casualty toll was expected to rise after reports arrived from hundreds of tiny islands and remote villages cut off after communication lines snapped during Tuesday's storm.

At least 13 people died when the cyclone lashed Calcutta and coastal areas of West Bengal state in eastern India, the United News of India news agency said.

In Bangladesh, a boat caught in the storm on the river Teesta capsized near Bhairab, 45 miles northeast of Dhaka, and 20 of the 24 passengers were swept away and killed, an official said.

Abdul Muqtadir Ahmed, Deputy Commissioner for Khulna district in southwest Bangladesh, one of the areas hardest hit, said at least 21 people died there. Khulna district is about 110 miles southwest of Dhaka.

'Extensive damage has been done to the crop ready for harvesting. Most mud and straw houses and tin shed offices and school buildings have been leveled by the storm," said Ahmed.

Strike strands Paris commuters

PARIS (AP) - Commuters climbed aboard military trucks for an unusual ride to work today after the government called out the army to carry people stranded by a bitter transit strike.

Two out of four regional express train lines were paralyzed for a third straight day by a maintenance workers strike called by the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor.

More than 200 military vehicles were on hand to help get people to work, but even with up to 25 people crammed into a truck the fleet can only carry a fraction of the capacity of the express trains.

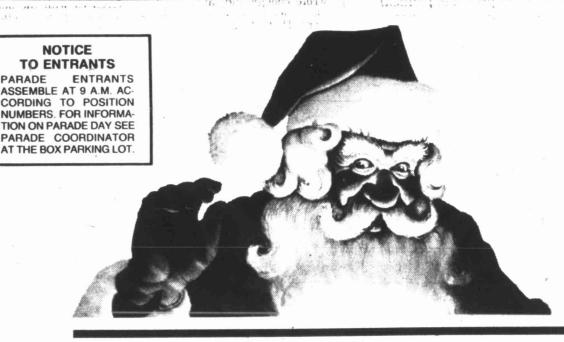

Commuters arriving in trucks at the Porte d'Orleans at the southern edge of Paris said it took 90 minutes on clogged highways for what is normally a 30-minute ride on the train.

At the Porte de Vincennes in eastern Paris, soldiers who just finished working the morning rush hour reported a cheerful atmosphere.

'People took it very, very well. There was joking and storytelling between the passengers and the soldiers," said Patrick, a soldier who refused to give his last name. "It lifted everybody's morale.'

Texas congressmen engage in globetrotting during recess

· WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas congressmen are fanning out across the globe on fact-finding missions during the end-of-theyear recess, their destinations from Senegal to Spain, their missions from meeting Irish sugarbeet growers to New Zealand sheep producers.

While some members of the delegation shy away from overseas jaunts, others will have taken more than one trip between Congress' adjournment this fall and the opening of the 101st Congress next year.

Destinations vary as widely as purposes for the trips: from inspecting U.S. military recreation centers in West Germany to the inauguration of Mexico's new president, from talks on "trade, economic and security issues" in the Far East to meeting Soviet dissidents in Israel.

The chairman of the House Rules Committee, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., decided to tour areas important to U.S. trade, security and the economy over the recess, and so will visit Turkey, Spain, Kenya and Senegal in mid-December, an aide said.

Rep. Martin Frost, a Dallas Democrat and a member of the committee, will be on the trip, his pokesman said.

More delays at Savannah River Plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The only U.S. plant which makes a critical component of nuclear weapons won't be able to resume production until at least next spring or summer because of persistent safety concerns, Energy Secretary John S. Herring said Monday.

Just last month, Energy Department officials said their Savannah River Plant, near Aiken, S. C., would begin a phased restart of its K reactor in December, and that it could resume production of tritium in January. None of the three reactors at Savannah River has produced weapons material since last April.

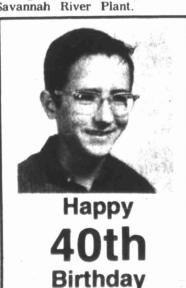

Since October, engineers with the Energy Department and the operating contractor, the E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., have been developing much more stringent operating and safety criteria.

The three reactors at Savannah River are the only operational facilities in the United States capable of producing two critical nuclear weapons materials, tritium and plutonium. Herrington has told Congress that the United States is "awash" in plutonium.

Tritium decays at the rate of 5.5 percent per year and administration and congressional sources say stockpiles will be depleted badly within six months to two years, although the exact numbers are classified. Tritium, a radioactive isotope of hydrogen, is used to boost the yield of nuclear weapons.

Asked when tritium would be in critical short supply, Herrington said: "I think we are OK with sprling and summer," but declined to give an exact date.

Both DuPont and the Energy Department are beefing up their management and oversight of the Savannah River Plant.

Woman who turns red is continually blue

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old single woman, and I still blush. This didn't really get bad until I was about 19 years old. I think maybe I'm afraid of people. Have you ever heard of anything so stupid?

When I'm with a crowd of people and a stranger comes up to talk to me. I get so red I could stand on a street corner and stop traffic. What is wrong with me?

If I have a couple of drinks, I get so relaxed, I can talk to anyone. I can't understand this. When I don't drink and a stranger approaches me. I get hot and sweaty and I can feel my cheeks burning, so I know I am beet-red.

I kept hoping I would outgrow this, but it seems to be getting worse. Is there any cure for blushing? — HATES THE COLOR

Tips for a prettier neck

By Ladies' Home Journal A Meredith Magazine

As double chins or crepey, saggy skin can detract from a pretty neckline, Ladies' Home Journal offers tips for proper care of the skin and muscle in the neck.

The neck is an extension of the face and it should be treated as gently. According to a leading dermatologist, body soaps are too harsh for sensitive neck skin, which needs a facial cleanser. After gentle cleaning, use a moisturizer and skin toner. Apply a sunscreen with a high SPF whenever exposure to the sun is anticipated.

Three neck-firming exercises can be done while sitting at a desk. First, without clenching the teeth, smile wide and tense muscles in the neck and jaw. Relax and repeat five times. Next, sit with elbows on a table, resting the chin on folded, interlaced fingers. Press down with the chin while pressing up with the fists. Hold for 20 seconds and relax. Finally, place one thumb directly under the chin, and curl the tongue back in the mouth until the muscle under the chin protrudes. Stretch neck as far left as possible with chin pointing upward and slowly rotate to the right, chin up. Return to center and repeat five times.

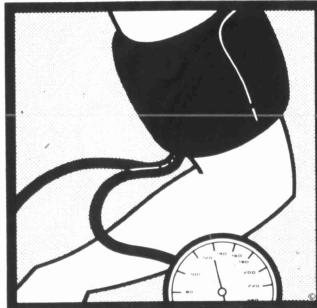

Sagging of neck skin is oftenhereditary, but can also be the result of yo-yo dieting and a tendency to slump. Stay away from crash weight-loss programs and practice good posture. Stand straight, holding the head high, as if it were being pulled up by an invisible string attached to the top of the head. Keep shoulders down and

When sleeping, if the head is too highly elevated and the neck sharply angled, the muscles can't extend properly, causing weakness and sagging. Using only one pillow is an easy solution to this problem

stuff

I've sat here and took about as much as I could stand. I'm tired of hearing people put down my Dallas Cowboys. So what if the Cowboys are tied with Green Bay for the worst record in the NFL (2-11)? So what if America's Team is on a nine-game losing streak, not owning a win since Sept. 25 when they beat Atlanta 26-20?

They are still my team and they will always be my team. Being a West Texan, I grew up a Dallas Cowboys fan. After all, you get to see them play every week — and still do, for that matter. When the Pokes were always winning, it seemed everybody loved them.

I can remember Dallas playing on the road, and the home team would have signs supporting the Cowboys.

But how soon we forget. Throw in a couple of losing seasons, and the faithful start jumping off the band wagon. I know people that have been Dallas Cowboys fans all their lives, who won't even watch them on the tube now. They're all Houston Oiler fans now. A few have even switched to the Broncos, Bears and 49ers.

I admit that I don't watch the Cowboys as closely. Now I don't feel as guilty when I do miss a game, or I don't get peeved when I have to run to the grocery store when the

And I admit I do bad-mouth my Cowboys. Losing frustrates everybody, especially us arm-chair quarterbacks. But dad-gum it, I won't desert the Cowboys. Now is the time they need support.

Critics say Tom Landry needs to get out — he's too old for the game. This same critics were singing Landry's praises five years ago when the Cowboys were consistent winners. It's usually the case, whatever type game plans coaches have, if they have the athletes to carry out that plan, they have a successful team.

Let's face it — when the Pokes were on top, they had some extraordinay players. There are no Stabauchs, Pearsons, Howleys, Refros or Wrights on this year's version of the Cowboys. You have young, inexperienced players like Steve Peuller, Thornton Chandler, Danny Noonan and It's going to take time, and unfortunately people aren't very patient if they're not getting the best of the deal.

It's like that old says — Everybody loves a winner, but when you lose, you lose alone.

Once a Cowboys' fan Hawks begin conference

By STEVE REAGAN Staff Writer

Having survived a 14-game nonconference schedule practically injury free, the Howard College Hawks now face the possibility of opening Western Conference action with not one, but two starters sidelined with injuries.

Hawk coach Steve Green said today that shooting guard Terrence Lewis may have a stress fracture in his foot and will be sidelined for an indefinite period of time. To make matters worse, forward Carlos Thunm, a 6'8" freshman from Sao Paulo, Brazil, turned his ankle in practice Tuesday and may miss the conference opener against Midland College Thursday

"It's a possibility (that Lewis has a stress fracture)," Green said. "It doesn't look like he'll be able to play Thursday . . . Carlos banged up his foot yesterday in practice, and it's a day-to-day thing with

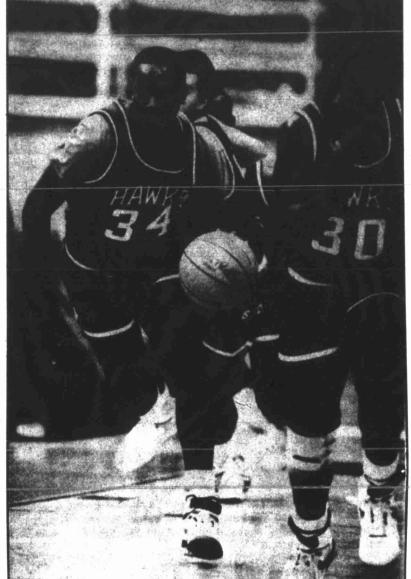

If Lewis and Thunm cannot play, Green will go with reserves Bryant Smith and Charles Moore at their respective positions. They will join regular starters Mark Lockhart, Michael New and Larry Pettigrew when the Hawks take the court Thursday against the Chaps.

Injuries aside, Green said he is pleased with the progress his team has shown on the eve of conference

"I think we're beginning to mature as a team," he said. "We're showing signs of really starting to come together. With the pace we play - up and down the court — it sometimes takes a little longer to come together

'We're moving in the right direction. Our practices have become more and more competitive — and that's a good sign this time of season," Green said. "With a lot of teams, the further you get into a season, the more lax the practices become, but that's not the case (with the Hawks).

If Lewis and Thunm cannot play Thursday, Green will insert Bryant Smith and Charles Moore in their respective places. The coach said he is confident his reserves can do an adequate job.

Howard College Hawks' guard Terrance Lewis (34), shown here leading the fast break with teammate Larry Pettigrew breaking downcourt, will miss the Midland College game with a foot injury. Lewis is the Hawks' leading scorer this season.

The main substitutes for the Hawks - guards Keith Gillespie, Frank Henderson and Smith, post player Moore and forwards Deon Robinson and Willie McCaster were singled out by Green for their superior pre-conference play — "so much that I don't know who to

Steers' rally comes up short against Cougars

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Editor

ABILENE - The Big Spring Steers made a frantic last-quarter run at the Abilene Cooper Cougars last night at Cougar Gym, but it wasn't enough as the Steers dropped a 74-68 decision non-district basketball game Tuesday night.

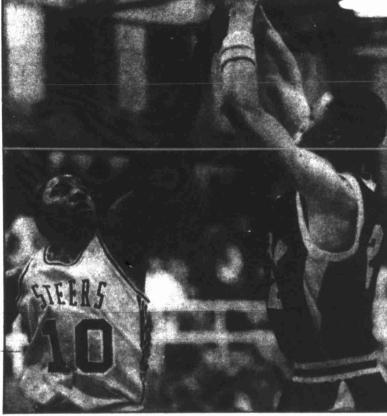

Big Spring had fallen behind by as much as 19 points late in the game. But the Steers pressing defense got them back into the game, the last 13 points of the game. But it was too little, too late. With the victory the Cougars ended a three-game losing streak, moving its record to 2-3. The Steers, who lost two of three games at the Tall City Invitational in Midland over the weekend, fall to 2-5 for the season

Another down factor in the game was an injury to starting guard Tony Lewis. Lewis hurt his knee in the contest and Steers coach Boyce Paxton is awaiting the extent of the injury. That makes three injured players for Big Spring. Starting post player Thane Russey is out with a bruised kidney and reserve guard Brandon Burnett refractured his hand.

"I don't know aht we're going to do to stay healthy," said a dejected Paxton. "Those injuries keep creeping up on us. But we're going to keep plugging away and try to $\label{eq:new YORK (AP) - Mike Moore} \quad \text{percentage.} \quad \text{We just wanted so}$ will be doing his pitching for the Oakland Athletics this coming baseball season, thanks to a nice contract and a special visit from Manager Tony LaRussa.

"Acquiring Mike Moore was the one that was our priority," Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson said after signing the Seattle free agent to a three-year, $3.95-million contract Tuesday. "It does deepen our pitching staff."

Alderson said he felt the key to the negotiations was last week when he and LaRussa visited Moore.

"It was important for Tony to have been there and confirm to him what expectations were in the way he would fit into the rest of our roster," Alderson said. "I think if you look at our club, it was easy for Mike to understand we weren't seasons. signing him to be our No. 1 starter.

Neither player will be allowed any contact with his team during the 30 days and have been told they are barred from the training facilities.

Former cager stabbed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Gus Bailey, a former National Basketball Association player with the New Orleans Jazz and Houston Rockets, was fatally stabbed in an argument, police say.

Bailey, 37, who played college basketball at the University of Texas-El Paso, was stabbed in the shoulder with a six-inch kitchen knife Monday afternoon and died that night, police said Tuesday. A preliminary autopsy report showed a major artery was severed.

Police spokesman John Bryson said Tammy Schexnayder, 25, who lived with Bailey, was booked Tuesday with murder.

Police said a fight started when Schexnayder told Bailey to leave the apartment and he refused. She told investigators that she tried to call police and Bailey punched her in the eye.

Bailey, a 6-foot-6, 185-pound guard, was Houston's second-round draft pick in 1974 and played there two seasons before being traded to the Atlanta Hawks and released. He was out of baskethall during the 1976-77 season but won a spot with the Jazz the following year.

He played 48 games for New Orleans in the 1977-78 season, averaging 3.2 points per game. The following year, the last year the Jazz were in New Orleans, he played two games, scoring four points, before he was waived.

Ramsey preserving pieces of Texas

By PEGGY LUXTON

Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc. Earl "Beaver" Ramsey, who farms north of Stanton, has spent much of his life collecting pieces of Texas; artifacts left by the first residents, the Texas Indian tribes who lived on this land many years before the first white man made his appearance.

Ramsey found his first arrowhead on his father's farm on the Sulphur Springs Draw. He says, "I think the draw starts somewhere around Loop, Texas, and runs through Lamesa and Big Spring." The Sulphur Springs Draw area must have been the site of many Indian campsites, as it has proved to be rich ground in which to find

When Ramsey was about 12, his arrowhead collection was mistakenly taken to the dump ground. Though he searched the area in earnest, he couldn't recover his collection. He lost interest in his hobby for several years after this, until his brother-in-law, Roger Fleckenstein of Stanton, became interested. Fleckenstein urged Beaver to join him on "arrowhead hunts" and he's been an avid collector since that time.

Of Ramsey's extensive collection. he says about half of it came from the general area in which he lives, and half came from the area around Alpine, where he attended college.

One of Ramsey's most unusual finds is a small grass pouch containing four seeds. He assumes this may have been the way the Indians planted their crops, by first placing the seeds inside the grass pouches. When the pouch disintegrated, the seeds grew. Ramsey found the grass pouch and many other unusual artifacts in a cave on a ranch near Hot Springs, Texas, about 60 miles southwest of Marfa. The cave, about half a mile from a spring, encompasses an area of about 1,400 square feet.

Ramsey, Kenneth Novak, Cotton books and talking with college pro-Barnes, and two of Ramsey's fessors, Ramsey believes the brothers-in-law dug out the cave to Indians who lived in the cave he a depth of approximately four feet years. They loaded the dirt they removed from the cave floor into wheelbarrows and moved it to the outside of the cave. There, they sifted each load of the dirt and ash floor through screens. It was necessary for the workers to wear masks during the work to keep the fine particles from entering their mouths and noses.

Sandals of various sizes were found in the cave, and bone sewing needles and bone awls, a pipe stem made of wood, and part of a human jawbone. Large pieces of woven net were also found. Ramsey surmises the net may have made up carrying pouches the Indians used to transport items from one place to another. The net and the sandals were made of cactus plants; the plant known as beargrass that grows abundantly in the wild in

They found a rabbit stick, which is a sort of boomerang, used to kill small game. Cuds made of the cactus plant were found, cuds chewed by the Indians. Some of the cuds still showed teeth marks. The group divided the arrowheads found in the cave, and Ramsey estimated his share to be approximately 400

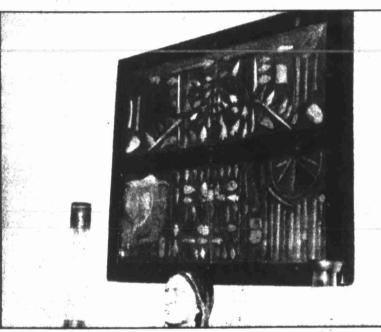

They also found a scraper used to scrape hides. It is a piece of wood about 10 inches long, with a sharp, flat piece of flint glued into a groove of the wood. The glue's ingredients included blood and ashes. They also found a big ball of yellow paint, used to paint pictures on cave walls. The paint had been packed together and rolled by hand to form a ball.

Some American Indian artifacts are as much as 30,000 years old. Ramsey knows that some of his collection is very old, such as a point fashioned with "blood grooves," grooves that made the prey more freely bleed. Some of the items in Ramsey's collection have been carbon-dated.

Even 100-year-old graffiti blemishes an archeological site like this. It's a modern insult to 4,000-year-old, multi-colored Indian pictographs or paintings.

When discussing the Lower Pecos Region, archeologists often forget to mention relatively recent rock paintings that date from the Spanish colonial period through 150 years ago. Among those are paintings that show vaqueros or cowboys roping Longhorn steers, a church steeple, and a soldier in four different battle scenes.

'It's a modern insult to 4,000-year-old, multicolored Indian pictographs or paintings.'

Prehistoric pictographs in the Lower Pecos range from the 18-foothigh red panther on the rock wall at Panther Cave by Lake Amistad to three-inch red stick men shown hunting bison on a rock shelter wall in Seminole Canyon State Historical

> But Labadie knows that 200 rock shelters around this manmade lake bear the largest, oldest, and most concentrated collection of pictographs in North America.

He's convinced that vandals will continue to deface the ancient art works and that thieves will continue stealing from the area's 500 archeological sites - if Congress doesn't give the National Park Service more authority and money to protect the sites.

Legislation was introduced to accomplish those purposes, but it died when Congress adjourned in October. Aides to U.S. Rep. Tourists don't need to wait for Congressional approval to see the ancient art work at Lake Amistad Historical Park nearby. While archeological sites by Lake Amistad are accessible only by boat, a commercial firm in Comstock, Tex., takes visitors on daily boat tours to Panther Cave, Parida Rock Shelter, and other sites.

At Seminole Canyon State Hisotrical Park, rangers regularly lead visitors on a one-hour hike to rock shelters with a variety of pictographs.

An interpretative center at the state park headquarters traces the prehistory and history of the area from the earliest known Indians to the advent of ranching and the arrival of the railroad.

"We have, without a doubt, the best collection of textiles and basketry from the Lower Pecos.' and in the Seminole Canyon State said Roberta McGregor, assistant curator for anthropology.

At the museum's "Ancient Texans" exhibit, visitors also can see everything from prehistoric drugs to baby cradles, weapons for hunting, nets, painted pebbles, and 7.000-year-old human faces.

The best way to start a tour of the exhibit is sitting down, watching a documentary film that tells the story of the prehistoric Indians.

A guided tour with the assistant curator adds another dimension. McGregor explains in detail the story behind each item and outlines the known facts about the prehistoric Lower Pecos Indians.

Indians were living in the Lower Pecos Region around 8300 B.C. the end of the Ice Age - or earlier,

The proof of that date came with the discovery of a "Folsom point" dart with the carbon-dated bones of an extinct species of giant bison at the Bonfire Rock Shelter, she said. Indians stampeded hundreds of bison over the cliff at the Bonfire Shelter and slaughtered some of the dead or dying animals for food, according to the book "Ancient Texans" by Harry J. Schafer.

By 7000 B.C., the Indians were living in rock shelters in the area, McGregor said.

One museum display shows 7,000-year-old human feces and how it was chemically reconstituted for analysis of the Indian's diet. Scientists gained information about the prehistoric environment from pollen found in the feces.

The diet of Lower Pecos Indians is also displayed: Prickly pear cactus, sotol and lechuguilla (two other desert plants), pecans, walnuts, collection. This collection was found by Ramsey in a pasture he was walk ing across. He noticed an abnormally high coverage of flint around one area in the pasture. This was more than enough incentive for him to dig in the area. When he dug, he found a hole that had been covered with dirt. The hole was approximately 8 inches in diameter and 7 inches

Inside this hole were flint points, tools, and knives - piled atop one another and packed so tightly that another point could not have been forced in. Ramsey said, "It was very obvious that some person had dug this hole for the purpose of hiding these things."

Ramsey says his collection is not for sale unless such sale would make him a millionaire. He has sold items that have been traded to him by other collectors, but he has never sold an artifact that he has found himself.

Ramsey admits that it is very hard to tell a genuine artifact from one that was made in relatively modern times. He says there are ways, short of carbon-dating, to discern if an article is genuine.

Many collectors like Ramsey have been criticized for hunting and collecting Indian artifacts. He feels that when a collector finds an artifact, it has been preserved.

Looking back at high paying news jobs

I think I need to take Barbara Walters' lessons. Nobody has ever offered me huge sums of money to take a job and no one has ever fought over my services.

I'VE CHANGED jobs several times while surviving 40 years in the newspaper "game" and my record for financial dealing is downright

My first full-time job as a professional newsman was with the Durant Daily Democrat. I was a senior in high school. I wrote a sports column in typing class called "Locker Room." I was paid the grand sum of $25 a week

After four years at the University of Oklahoma Journalism School I returned to the Democrat to write a sports gem labeled "Sport-O-Scope." I received $20 a week and a brand new pencil each and every Monday morning.

See, I told you education pays. After a brief stay at the Democrat, my home town newspaper, I told my boss "Uncle Bob" Story and my other bosses I was leaving for fame and fortune on the Littlefield Leader.

They bore up remarkably well. They didn't offer me more money to stay and they weren't at all crushed by my resignation.

Several months later, after covering a special session of the Missouri Legislature in Jefferson City, Mo., including the writing of a new constitution, Ed Pooley, editor of the El Paso Herald-Post offered me a job. The salary was $45 a week, about $5 a week less than I was making for the Associated Press.

Barbara Walters would have laughed but I took the job.

When I left the El Paso Herald-Post about six years later, I was making $110 a week after being nominated for the Pulitzer Prize. My replacement was started at $115

I could go on but it's so depressing.

MY ABILITY for driving a hard bargain can best be summed up by experience I once had on the Tulsa World after I nerved myself to ask for a raise.

I said to my boss, Executive editor Sid Steen, "I think I'm worth more money.

And he said to me, "I don't." I'd just like to know what Barbara Walters, TV's first $3 million a year 'news' baby, would have said then.

George Bush made a big hit with Texas Republicans. Take your pick: He is either the finest statesman to come down the pike or the greatest

My bashful aunt, Marie Chastain,

Women are an awful dilemma, Women are foolisly vain, Women fret over trifles, Their jealousy's almost insane.

Women cannot keep a secret, They repeat things again and They never forget an insult, Women are just like men.

Well, sort of, Aunt Rea, but as it has been said: "Vive le difference."

I don't know what that means in English, but I hope it's fit for a family newspaper.

MARVELOUS WANDA MOF-FETT, Sylvester, reports one of her neighbors has a five-year-old boy who takes orders only from headquarters.

"When I mildly told him to stop digging up my onions, he looked me right in the eye and said with haughty dismissal:

'You ain't my mama." It sounds as if one and all were satisfied with that statement.

Good ol' Jim Beal, wonders where I came up with the word "chughole," and cites the American Heritage Dictionary's spelling: "Chuckhole."

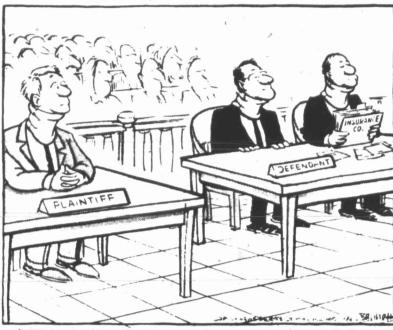

I don't know the answer. As an Okie I grew up calling them chuckholes. I even held off on chugholes for several years before realizing I'd never win.

Is there anyone in the audience who can explain the situation?

Items in the food display look real, but they aren't.

The bronze heads of a Lower Pecos man, woman, and child, however, are more authentic than you might guess.

They were aculpted by forensic artist Betty Pat Gatliff of Norman, Okla., who determined the facial characteristics from skulls of the ancient nomads.

The Witte Museum also exhibits pebbles painted by the prehistoric Indians, fine net bags made of plant fibers, a wooden comb, a woman's knife (a stick with flint blade), and atalatals - hooked throwing sticks used for hunting.

There's a water pouch that the orehistoric nomads made by cutting out the fleshy part from a prickly pear cactus.

A wooden cradle looks like it was made and broken yesterday, but McGregor said that the prehistoric Indians purposely broke it to release the soul of the cradle before burying it with a baby's body.

Another display holds artifacts from the most elaborate burial site found in the Lower Pecos region.

The skeleton of the 40 year old man isn't shown. Visitors can see coiled baskets, fiber and feather cords, a necklace made of rattlesnake vertebrae and woven plant fiber, and the rabbit-fur robe that was wrapped around the body.

A sharp bone awl found in the burial site may have been used for blood letting, she said. A bundle of grass wrapped with leather holds a cactus thorn that could have been used for tattooing.

McGregor calls the man who was buried with all these artifacts "the mystery of the Lower Pecos." She thinks that he was one of the shamans or medicine men who are often sown in Lower Pecos pictographs.

Arrayed nearby is some ancient peyote that was found in a rock shelter in the Lower Pecos. Peyote — a small green, spineless cactus - causes hallucinations. Archeologists theorize thta the Lower

'It's the oldest known peyote in the world.'

Pecos Indians used peyote, saw visions, and later depicted those visions in pictographs.

"We think that the paintings themselves were not done while the person was in a drugged state, because he would not have the coordination to draw those nice straight, crisp lines," McGregor said.

Carbon dating indicates that the peyote on display grew in 5000 B.C. It's the oldest known peyote in the world." McGregor said.

The museum contains large color photographs of pictographs in the Lower Pecos area. But to see the pictographs themselves, you must go to the state and federal parks near Del Rio, Tex

Glass cases don't protect the paintings in the parks, and security guards aren't present when visitors enter the rock shelters that were the homes of the ancient Lower Pecos Indians.

Legislation that would help the National Park Service preserve the archeological sites was introduced last summer by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Rep. Albert Bustamante, two Texas Democrats

Their bills died in committee when Congress adjourned in October, but similar legislation will be filed again next year, according to Bustamante's aides.

The bill would allow the government to acquire adjacent archeological sites from willing sellers and to establish cooperative agreements for protection of archeological sites on other private property.

If the bill becomes law, Lake Amistad will be upgraded to a "national recreation area," thus boosting funding for the park, Labadie, the archeologist, said. That's the least that Congress can do to preserve the outdoor museum of an ancient American civilization that predates the Egyptian pyramids, Labadie said. THE PARKS: The Amistad National Recreational Area is located on the Texas-Mexico border by U.S. Highway 90 a few miles west of Del Rio, Tex., and about 175 miles west of San Antonio, Tex. Lake Amistad, which has a surface area of 67,000 acres, is open for water skiing, fishing, and limited hunting. The Seminole Canyon State Historical Park is 45 miles west of Del Rio on U.S. Highway 90.

WITTE MUSEUM: The Witte Museum at 3801 Broadway St. in San Antonio is open daily. Admission costs $3 for adults, $1 for children, and $1.50 for the elderly, students, and military personnel.

TOURS OF THE LOWER PECOS ARCHEOLOGICAL SITES: Seminole Canyon State Historical Park offers guided tours to see pictographs in rock shelters. Visitors can walk through an interpretative center that explains the prehistoric and historic background of the Lower Pecos. The state park charges $2 per car for day visits.

High Bridge Adventures, a private business based in Cosmtock, Tex., takes visitors on daily boat tours of rock shelters and other sites around the lake. The fee is $20 for three hour tours and $25 for four hour tours. Write to High Bridge Adventures, Box 816, Comstock, TX

Camel Corps, a volunteer group associated with the Witte Museum in San Antonio, periodically conducts guided tours of Lower Pecos archeological sites. Write to Camel Corps, c/o The San Antonio Museum Association, Witte Museum, P.O. Box 2601, San Antonio, TX 78299.

The American Rock Art Association will send a group to see pictographs around Lake Amistad as part of its annual convention which will b eheld May 26-30, 1989, at the Witte Museum. Write to the association at Box 65, San Miguel, CA 93451.

CAMPING: The National Park Service permits free camping at primitive sites around Lake Amistad. Seminole Canyon State Historical Park charges campers $6 per night, but offers rest rooms, hot showers, picnic tables, and cooking grills. Write to the National Park Service, P.O. Box 420367, Del Rio,

USDA farm programs signups Dec. 19

Farmers who want to participate in the government's 1989 programs for wheat, feed grain and upland cotton can sign up Dec. 19 through April 14 at county offices.

The signup dates for 1989 rice and extra-long staple cotton programs will be announced later, Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng said.

Farmers also will be able to "declare their intentions" from Dec. 19 through Feb. 3 to plant 10 percent to 25 percent of each program crop's permitted acreage to soybeans or sunflowers and still proprogram crops, Lyng said.

In addition, the 1989 program allows a portion of a farm's acreage base to be used for oats, with certain stipulations affecting soybeans.

During the signup, wheat and feed grains producers may request 40 percent — upland cotton and rice producers 30 percent - of their estimated 1989 deficiency payments. These preliminary payments will be in cash.

Deficiency payments are direct subsidies to farmers to help bridge tect the acreage base history for the the gap between lower market prices and "target" prices set for each commodity.

For wheat and feed grains, farmers will be able to participate in an optional acreage "diversion" or landidling program called 0-92. Under it, a farmer can devote all or part of his crop's permitted acreage to soil-conserving uses and get deficiency payments on up to 92 percent

Rice and upland cotton farmers will be able to participate in a 50-92

Members gain master degrees

Preceptor Laureate members received Masters Degree Laureate. Alpha met Nov. 17 in the home of Mamie Roten. Members gathered around the table for a delicious turkey dinner. Afterwards they assembled around a candle-lit table to receive the master degree, the highest degree attained in Beta Sigma Phi. President, Mary Prudie Brown, conducted the ceremony, assisted by two officials, Mamie Roten and Pauline Wood.

During the business meeting. plans were discussed concerning the sales of the sequined butterfly cloth to be given away in the spring. Next meeting, members will go to Midland for dinner and to see the play, "Squabbles," by Midland Community Theatre.

Polly Talton gave an interesting discussion on animals of Australia with pictures representing each. Members not aforementioned were: Margaret Roueche, Mary Grace Latimer, and Helen Ruth Louder, and two guests, Magy Kathryn Howard and Dottie Turk.
