Security and shoplifting policies may undergo evaluation at Big Spring and other West Texas 7/Eleven stores, according to an official of Cousins Stores Inc., which purchased the local stores.

Ray Hawkins, chief executive officer of Cousins, San Angelo, announced in late November that the convenience store company had signed a letter of intent to acquire 89 existing stores in Big Spring, Lubbock, Odessa and Midland.

Ray Bravnec, Loss Prevention Manager of the Southland Corp./Austin, said company policy dictates that employees are advised to call the police if they witness

Police have not yet made an arrest in connection with the theft of numerous cartons of cigarettes at local 7/Eleven stores.

There have also been several armed robberies at local convenience stores in recent months.

Students across the state are preparing for the TEAMS test and Big Spring students are no exception. Teachers, like College Heights Elementary School fifth grade teacher Ruby Pike in the photo above, review areas that students will find on the exams. ## Suit blames INS policy; refugees are ordered out

By JOEL WILLIAMS Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE - Hundreds of Central Americans ordered to vacate a primitive tent city say they have nowhere else to go, as attorneys sought to block a new U.S. policy blamed for the immigrants' desperate conditions.

'Leave for where? That's the dilemma," said Bonniy Campos of Nicaragua.

Campos, 30, and his wife have been sleeping under sheets of plastic supported by tree limbs for the past week in a field across the street from the Casa Oscar Romero shelter for Central American refugees operated by the Roman Catholic Church.

About 300 people have set up camp in the field because Casa Romero is filled to its courtrestricted capacity of 200, and a new U.S. policy all but prevents them from leaving the area while their applications for political asylum are being processed.

The policy, which was effective Dec. 16, also limits their ability to work during the waiting period, at Previously, aliens who entered the country illegally in southern Texas were allowed to pursue their asylum applications in other cities, often Miami or Los Angeles.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials say the change was adopted to reduce huge case backlogs in those cities and curb frivolous refugee claims. The INS maintains that most of the 300,000 asylum applicants who passed through the Harlingen District last year were ineligible for political asylum because they merely wanted to better themselves economically.

A lawsuit filed Friday in U.S. District Court seeks to reverse the policy and a hearing was scheduled for today on a temporary restraining order.

Link to chemical-nuclear bans is urged

The attorneys suing INS Commissioner Alan Nelson and U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh blame the 3-week-old procedure for an increase in the number of Central Americans sleeping in condemned buildings and camping with little or no shelter.

"In essence, south Texas has been turned into a de facto detention area and asylum applicants are trapped there," says the suit filed on behalf of asylum-seekers by immigration attorney Linda Reyna Yanez, Robert Rubin of the San Francisco Lawyers' Committee for Urban Affairs and the Harlingen-based Proyecto Liber- has no sanitary facilities.

with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees visited the tent city southeast of Brownsville last Tuesday and said she witnessed "difficulty and hardship."

On Sunday, sheriff's deputies told those living on the litterstrewn campsite that they had 24 hours to vacate the private property or face trespassing charges.

Cameron County Sheriff Alex Perez said authorities gave the order to vacate after the property owner posted "No Trespassing" signs in English and Spanish on Sunday afternoon.

"Maybe I'll sleep in some other field," said Gerardo Enrique Perez, 19, of Honduras, as a rainy cold front blew into the area Sunday night.

The campers have been helped by area residents who have provided food and clothing, but the field

Engines fail; 44 die in Brit crash

KEGWORTH, England — Both engines on a brand-new Boeing 737 apparently failed before the plane crashed along a highway, killing at least 44 people, officials said today. Aviation experts said the chances of double-engine failure were about 10 million to one

"So far the evidence, although by no means conclusive, is consistent with the right engine having stopped before impact and there are also signs of fire in the left engine," Transport Minister Paul Channon said in an interview on British Broadcasting Corp. television.

Officials raised the number of confirmed dead to 44 late today. Eighty-two people were injured in Investigators recovered the flight recorders from the wreckage today, hoping they might shed light on what caused the accident. Firefighters pumped foam onto the crumpled jet to prevent seeping aviation fuel from catching fire.

The Belfast-bound British Midland Airways jet carrying 126 people broke into three pieces on the edge of Britain's main northsouth highway, the M1, in central England on Sunday night.

The twin-engine Boeing 737-400 narrowly missed the small town of Kegworth and plowed into an embankment just a few hundred yards short of the runway as the pilot struggled to make an emergency landing at East Midland Airport, 100 miles north of London.

Ham radio operator Mervyn Solloway said he heard "not a shouted message, but a bit of a frantic one to say, 'We've got problems with the other engine.' That was the last I heard from the aircraft.

British Midland Airways said sabotage was not suspected in the crash, which came less than three weeks after a bomb blew apart Pan Am Flight 103 over the Scottish village of Lockerbie, killing all 259 people on board and 11 on the Britain's Air Accident Investigation Board, said the odds against both engines failing on a Boeing 737 were 10 million to one.

"I would look for some inadvertent technical mistake such as something incorrect being done to the engines during turnaround, either inadvertently or deliberately," Tench said.

British Midland, which grounded its other 737-400 for inspection, said the jet was delivered just 12 weeks ago and had flown less than 500

Pilot Kevin Hunt, a 25-year veteran, was among the badly injured cut from the wreckage. The last survivor, a woman, was pulled from a tangle of metal and crushed seats more than seven hours after the crash.

Nigel Clifton, manager of the Queen's Medical Center in Nottingham, said many of the injured suffered head injuries and broken limbs. He said most of the victims were Irish.

The plane's two giant wings, heavily loaded with fuel, remained virtually intact. The severed tail section of Flight BD92 loomed from woodland alongside the highway, surrounded by wreckage from the severed center and nose sections.

American investigators from Boeing and General Electric Co., which helped make the plane's new CFM-56 engines, were to join British investigators at the crash

Legislature convenes Tuesday

AUSTIN (AP) - The 71st regular session of the Texas Legislature was scheduled to open Tuesday with lawmakers preparing to consider a variety of issues from money to prisons.

The 150 House members and 31 senators will convene at noon for the 140-day session.

Heading the agenda, as usual, will be negotiations over the 1990-91 state budget. Comptroller Bob Bullock has estimated that lawmakers will have a total of $45 billion to spend for the two-year budget period, an increase of about $1.6 billion in spendable cash.

But the Legislative Budget Board last month estimated it would cost an additional $1 billion to continue funding all state services at their current level for the new biennium.

Gov. Bill Clements, entering what he says will be his last regular legislative session, has vowed to veto any tax increase.

Although the state escaped - at least temporarily — a district judge's order to reform education spending, many legislators agree that changes are needed. The judge had ruled in a lawsuit filed by property-poor school districts which contend that they should receive more money to provide an education equal to that offered students in property-wealthy districts.

"In the 16 years I've been here, there's been a school finance bill every other session as regularly as clockwork," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. The last such measure was the massive education reform of 1984.

The prison overcrowding problem remains. Gov. Clements has called for construction of about 10,000 additional prison beds, with funding to come through the safe of state bonds.

Other issues legislative leaders say should get attention include reform in the workers' compensation system; the question of whether Texas judges - particularly in appeals courts should continue to be elected or whether they should be appointed, and improvements in the state's group of youths who call themselves "Skinheads" is trying to bolster its numbers locally by recruiting new members through business cards and at youthoriented nightclubs, its leader said.

'Skinheads' recruiting youths in Houston area

Toby Whitehead, a 17-year-old unemployed high school dropout from Huffman, said he heads a Houston-area group of about 15 people called the National Socialist Skinheads of Houston.

"We're not violent, but we will respond to violence with violence," Whitehead said. "We're training in hand-to-hand combat.'

A Houston police spokesman said there are some people in the Houston area who try to look like Skinheads, but there are no reports that classify them as Skinheads who are involved in illegal activities.

Officials estimate there are about 2,000 Skinheads in the United States, that they range in age from 14 to 27, and that their number is increasing. Members have been linked to racial violence against Jews, blacks and homosexuals

"These kids have developed a sub-cultural style which has a great deal of meaning to them as street warriors trying to clean up what they see as the unwanted elements in American society," said Eric Anderson, a Yakima, Wash., anthropologist who wrote a

Generally, Skinheads are young and impressionable people who are guided by older, more experienced racist groups such as the Ku Klux Klan, the White Aryan Resistance or the Aryan Nations.

Whitehead said he decided to form a Skinhead movement because of the "large number of non-whites moving to Houston," and that he contacted the Aryan Nations about it.

"The Fuehrer told me not to give any interviews and not to have any photographs made," Whitehead told the Houston Chronicle in an article published Sunday. He declined to identify the "Fuehrer."

Whitehead confirmed his group uses the Skinhead recruiting method of distributing business cards with the group's name, post office box number, telephone number and a racist motto. Members also are going to clubs frequented by young people, he said.

"We're not hate-mongers, Whitehead said. "We're dedicating our lives to the white race."

Prison AIDS deaths increase

HUNTSVILLE (AP) - The director Charles Alexander atnumber of AIDS deaths in the Texas Department of Corrections rose to 29 last year — a year in which more than twice the number of convicts were tested for the deadly disease than in 1987, officials said.

AIDS tests, which are mainly voluntary, were administered to 7,839 convicts during 1988, compared with 3,031 in 1987 and 301 the previous year, prison spokesman David Nunnelee said.

tributed the increase in part to the prison system's AIDS education and training program, which has made inmates increasingly cautious about acquired immune deficiency syndrome, for which there is no known cure.

Nunnelee said 28 male prisoners and one female inmate have died since the first prison AIDS death occurred in 1984. As of Dec. 31, out of a prison population close to 39,000, 122 Nunnelee said prison medical prisoners tested positive.

Kleckner, an Iowa farmer and hog producer, said American farmers face a changing environment that is very different from a decade ago.

"I do not see a conflict between a healthy environment and a healthy agriculture,' he told reporters Sunday. "I do see problems in some people's perception of a healthy environment.

"The key word is balance." he said.

Farm program spending has been declining since 1986 when it was at $25.8 billion and fell to $22 billion. In 1988, that figure went to $14 billion and would have been lower except for a massive drought aid package, Kleckner said.

Kleckner also said that farmers and environmentalists will have to work together in the future. "I don't think we have the privilege or luxury any more of saying, 'We're not going to change. We're not going to talk to these people,' '' he said.

"I think all farmers want is to be shown a better way. I think that's where the environmentalists can help us," he said.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and U.S. Reps. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee; and Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., a member of the Senate Committee on Agriculture will be the main speakers today.

The five-day conference, which ends Wednesday, is aimed at giving new political impetus to a 1925 Geneva Protocol that prohibits the use of such toxic chemical and biological agents.

A final statement is to be adopted by consensus, meaning differences could block an accord or leave it grossly weakened.

Another foreign minister scheduled to address the conference today was Jadalla Azouz Ettalhi of Libya, which Washington accuses of building a factory to manufacture poison gas.

Shevardnadze said in a speech to the conference Sunday that the Soviet Union will not wait for disarmament negotiators in Geneva to reach an accord banning use, production and stockpiling of chemical arms. He said a new Soviet facility to destroy chemical weapons will go into operation this year.

The envoy said his country has stopped production of chemical weapons, an announcement first made in April 1987.

'What they are doing is playing catch-up ball," said a senior official of the U.S. delegation, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Delegation members said the United States has been destroying limited quantities of aging chemical weapons since the early 1980s, while continuing to manufacture modern chemical arms.

It was not immediately clear whether the Soviet announcement signaled a program to systematically destroy all chemical weapons, but U.S. officials appeared doubtful.

Lynn Hansen, director of the bureau of multilateral affairs at the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said the Soviet position "now corresponds to our own position. . . . We simply don't get the press, because for us it's more routine.

'When they do it, all of a sudden it's news," Hansen told reporters. The United States and the Soviet Union are the only two countries to admit possessing chemical weapons. According to U.S. estimates, about 20 countries possess or have the ability to manufacture chemical weapons.

Highland Council also provides other services for deaf persons such as an interpreter service, interpreting workshops, and drug and alcohol counseling sessions, Harper said.

The council's interpreter service provides a licensed interpreter for hearing-impaired people who need to communicate in person with a hearing individual.

However, the phone message relay system is the most frequently used council service, said Linda Marino, service provider. Hearing-impaired persons regularly use the service to communicate with businesses, governmental agencies and medical offices, she said. Anyone can use the service free of charge, Harper said, adding that the council serves Howard County and surrounding areas. Frequent users are asked to pay a $5 yearly membership fee, but the fee is not required to use the service, Harper said.

Highland Council is funded primarily by the Texas Commission for the Deaf, user fees, and fund raisers such as a casino night sponsored by the council, Harper said.

Callers using the service can expect the process to take slightly longer than a normal phone conversation. But the process is usually trouble-free, said council officials, and certainly an improvement over the alternative.

Without the service, hearingimpaired persons "would have to drive over to meet with whomever they need to contact,' Harper said.

Bob Coltrane, admissions counselor at SWCID, said students at the college use the service "almost everyday." Said Coltrane, "The service is very helpful; it fills a void that was not filled before (the council) was established.' For more information about

Court agrees to review abortion law

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court, acting in an appeal urging reversal of its landmark 1973 decision that legalized abortion nationwide, today agreed to review a Missouri law regulating abortions.

The justices said they will study a federal appeals court ruling that struck down key provisions of the state law. Even before today's action in the appeal filed by Missouri officials, the case had become the most-watched battleground in the continuing political war over ibortion. Justice Department lawyers also are urging the high court to use the case as a means of undoing its 1973 ruling, called Roe vs. Wade.

But nothing in the brief order issued today suggested that the justices will reconsider Roe vs. Wade.

The court's eventual decision, expected by July, could resolve the Missouri controversy without significantly changing the 1973 decision or other past rulings on abortion.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last July 13 struck down, among other aspects of the Missouri abortion law, these five provisions

—A ban on using public hospitals or other governmentrun facilities for abortions not necessary to save a woman's life.

-A ban prohibiting any public employee from performing or assisting an abortion.

-A ban on using taxpayer money for "encouraging or counseling" women to have abortions.

+A requirement that doctors planning to abort a fetus believed to be older than 19 weeks test for weight and lung capacity to determine whether the fetus is capable of surviving outside the womb.

—A declaration that "the life of each human being begins at conception.

The appeals court upheld a provision in the state law that bans the use of taxpayer money for performing or assisting an abortion. But it said use of a public facility or the services of a public employee cannot be banned if all such costs are reimbursed by a patient.

In the apppeal acted on today, Missouri Attorney General William L. Webster said the 8th Circuit court's ruling "expands (Supreme Court) precedents in favor of abortion on demand, further contracts the state's compelling interest in the life of viable, unborn children and disregards this court's holdings that abortion is a private matter which government need in no way

The 1973 decision "should itself be reconsidered" if it cannot be squared with the disputed Missouri law, Webster said. William Bradford Reynolds then chief of the Justice Department's civil rights division, wrote to Missouri officials last summer urging them to include a challenge of Roe vs. Wade in the state's appeal.

In a brief filed two days after the presidential election last Nov. 8, Justice Department lawyers supported Missouri's appeal.

That sparked Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, to accuse the Justice Department of "declaring war on the women of this country.'

In its 1973 ruling, the Supreme Court said women have a constitutional right of abortion.

The case is Webster vs Reproductive Health Services.

Crime Stoppers of Big Spring is seeking the public's help in apprehending the person responsible for burglarizing two vehicles that were parked in the west parking lot of Scenic Mountain Medical Center

The burglaries occurred between 7 and 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 4. The suspect entered the first vehicle by breaking the driver's side window and gained entry to the second vehicle through an unlocked driver's side door.

Two Pioneer speakers in white wooden boxes, one Realistic equalizer, a flashlight and timing light were taken during the burglaries. The suspect is being described by police as an Hispanic male, 5-feet, 6-inches tall, with black, shoulderlength hair who was wearing white tennis shoes and a white T-shirt.

Anyone with information regarding this or any felony crime is asked to call the Crime Stoppers line 24 hours a day at 263-1151.

Opinions from across the U.S. Term is one of honor

It may not catch on, but describing Americans of African descent as "African Americans" is a good idea. The new term has been coming into favor among some black writers and civil rights leaders for several years

Jesse Jackson called attention to the trend — and endorsed it wholeheartedly — at a recent civil rights conference in Chicago. "Every ethnic group in this country has a reference to some land base, some historical cultural base," he said. "African Americans have hit that level of maturity.". . .

More importantly, the term "African American" avoids any reference to skin pigmentation, which ought to be irrelevant in today's America. Far more relevant are the culture and experience shared by a people.

In the case of black Americans, that experience has been shaped by centuries of oppression, beginning with the forcible abduction and enslavement of their African ancestors. Blacks hung on to their African heritage in the face of slavery and racism, creating a rich and distinctive new culture. That culture can't be understood without taking into account its African roots.

"African American" reflects those roots. It also reflects a pride in being both African AND American the kind of pride felt by Greek Americans, Polish Americans and others whose ancestors came to America by choice and suffered less in the new land. If most blacks now choose to call themselves African Americans, the rest of the country should oblige them and feel honored.

A war against the poor

That the United States deperately needs to become George Bush's "kinder, gentler America" is seen in President Reagan's incredibly callous remarks about the nation's homeless.

In a recent end-of-administration interview . . . Reagan denied any responsibility for the hundreds of thousands of Americans who wander the country's streets and roads searching for a job or a place to

Throughout his presidency . . . Reagan has been blind to the reality of poverty in America. Instead, he tends to blame the poor themselves, and those who try to help them, for the problem.

The record, however, is clear. Rather than a war against poverty, the Reagan administration has waged a war against the poor.

The Wichita (Kan.) Eagle-Beacon

Tough stance welcome

With a trade deficit running at $136 billion a year and eliminating millions of jobs, the United States must take determined action to restore its competitiveness in world

That means improving the business climate at home and taking tough stances, when necessary, in dealing with trading partners.

Both sides of the strategy were in evidence (last) week. Two Cabinet officers proposed antitrust law changes to encourage joint manufacturing ventures, and the Reagan administration threatened retaliation for a European ban on most U.S. beef imports. .

Meanwhile, foreign firms facing fewer restrictions and often receiving government help are making strides in fields such as computer-assisted manufacturing and superconductivity. .

Meanwhile, the Reagan administration has sent a strong signal that it is prepared to fight back when it suspects other countries of setting up unfair export barriers.

In this case, the European Community has banned meat treated with growth hormones, claiming it is unhealthy. U.S. officials say the ban is really part of an effort by the Europeans to protect their small farmers, and the Reagan administration has threatened to retaliate with $100 million in import duties. .

Skillful negotiations can and should avert a trade war. But the administration's spirit — developed in the school of hard knocks where trade barriers are often disguised as health, safety or other issues — was welcome.

Contra Costa Times, Walnut Creek, Calif.

Base closings needed

Many of the communities near the 86 bases under recommendation by a government commission for closure will feel the economic pinch if the recommendations are approved.

But the nation's economy has to be taken into consideration as well. Right now, the nation has a large deficit to deal with.

Consolidating bases and closing down inefficient bases makes a lot of sense. The recommendations made by the commission seemed to be good ones.

This country has too many problem areas such as the homeless, AIDS and education to be wasting taxpavers' money needlessly.

Alamogordo (N.M.) Daily News

Reagan kept promise of change

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Eight years have passed since Ronald Reagan arrived in Washington promising many things, but with one common dominator: change.

"We may not run this like a quarter mile, but we're going to run it," Reagan said on his first full day in the job of president.

"We're going to make some changes, if for no other reason than that they have to be made. The people are waiting for us to do it."

He exits this month, that promise kept. With his era over and his presidency a matter for the historians, what can be said of the rest of Reagan's promises? On what did he deliver, and on what did he fail?

There are plenty of partisan opinions. The Democrats even published a book cataloging their view of Reagan's broken promises four years ago when he faced re-

Carter from office in 1980 with a pledge to improve the economy at home and to improve America's standing abroad. Central to this goal was a trio of promises: he would cut taxes, build up the military, and balance the budget.

So how is two out of three? Reagan won from the Democratic Congress a 25 percent reduction in federal income tax rates. He later engineered a broad rewrite of the tax laws that eliminated many deductions in exchange for reduced tax rates — all in the name of simplification.

Yet he supported tax increases too, and followed the 1981 tax cuts a year later with a $98 billion tax increase.

The nation's military defenses grew with infusions of new money for sophisticated weapons systems, and his administration will be remembered for what is often called the Reagan military buildup.

It was a buildup, in fact, that leaves Reagan's successor with crushing demands for more money to continue — so much so that the ability to prune Pentagon wish lists was a central factor in Presidentelect George Bush's search for a defense secretary.

But it was the federal budget

Guest column

deficit where Reagan clearly failed: Not only did it not go lower, it mushroomed. The nation, it turned out, could not generate growth as a result of the tax cuts sufficient to balance the budget. And there were no budget cuts sufficient to do the job either

Reagan's targets for a balanced federal budget kept getting put off. He never submitted a balanced budget to Congress, and the annual deficit grew to nearly $200 billion a year before starting to head down in his last years.

Democrats love to point out that the nation's total debt under Reagan was more than that sustained under all the presidents before him. Federal debt was under $1 trillion when he took office in 1981; today it is more than $2.6

But Reagan delivered on much of his economic promise. Inflation abated. After an early recession that helped wring spiraling prices from the economy, growth was steady. Indeed, peace and prosperity was a powerful argument for his vice president's campaign to succeed him last fall.

Reagan also came into office promising to prune the thickening vines of the federal bureaucracy. His first official act was to impose a freeze on the hiring of most civilian federal employees.

He pledged to eliminate the two Cabinet-level creations of the Carter administration Education and Energy departments. Both survived.

What's more, the size of Cabinet government grew. In his final year Reagan endorsed, then signed into law the creation of the Department of Veterans Affairs, out of what was the independent agency known as the Veterans Administration.

Yet the Reagan years were characterized by annual attempts to trim government by cutting the federal budget. He succeeded in his

THINK OF IT

AS A HOSTILE

stated goal of reducing the rate by which federal spending grows each Cries against the "Reagan budget cuts" were an annual occurrence. Domestic programs fell victim. Gone now are many programs that were aimed at helping urban America: revenue sharing, the embattled CETA job-training program, Urban Development Action Grants. Federal housing assistance was cut dramatically, drawing protests from the nation's mayors.

Ironically, some of these had Republican, not Democratic, origins. Revenue sharing, stringfree payments to local governments, was a pet project of Richard Nixon.

Cutting government regulations was another promise Reagan brought to Washington, and one he pursued while here.

The airline industry, for one, has government regulation. Although exist, are supposed to be used the foundation was laid for that by the Carter administration, Reagan pulled deregulation levers where he could.

The results remain a matter of debate. Many rules are gone, but many remain in place, too.

Reagan had plenty of other aims. Call them promises or not, many fell short. His plan for "new federalism," returning food stamps to state and local governments, and swapping some other welfare programs along with the means for paying for them, never got off the ground

He kept promises to back vouchers or tax credits that would help students attend private schools, but he didn't win them from Congress.

No one expected a perfect record, however. And in his inaugural address eight years ago, Reagan stated what may have been his priority promises.

"It is time to reawaken this industrial giant, to get government back within its means, and to lighten our punitive tax burden," Reagan said. "These will be our first priorities, and on these principles there will be no

Thank the Lord another terrible air tragedy didn't occur when a hole blew open in the fuselage of an Eastern 727 during a flight from Rochester to Atlanta

The pilot acted quickly and put his plane into a steep dive, back down to 10,000 feet where he, his crew and the passengers could get oxygen again.

The incident did, however, add to my fears concerning those oxygen masks that are supposed to fall down in front of you in - as a flight attendant always says - "the unlikely event of cabin depressurization."

I'm told about those masks every time I climb aboard an airplane. Then, one day, I was on a plane and the flight attendant was telling me about the masks, and I thought to myself, are those things really up there somewhere above my seat?

I'd never seen one fall and I didn't know anybody else who had seen one fall.

I used to believe in things that fell out of nowhere. When I was a child my mother read me the story of Chicken Little.

Chicken Little thought the sky was falling. That was good enough for me. I was 11 years old before I'd go out of the house without wearing my genuine Doak Walker football

But back to the oxygen masks. I've looked above my seat in 100 airplanes trying to figure out exactly where the masks are located. I've also tried to look and see what was going to open above my seat and allow them to fall.

But I still can't figure out any of that. Then there is something else that bothers me

The flight attendant has her mask. It's the one she uses while been remade as a result of reduced demonstrating how ours, if they do

Do you think she's going to be all that concerned about me if my mask doesn't fall during the unlikely event of cabin depressurization?

Of course not. She'll lock herself in the restroom with her mask while I'm outside turning blue.

And let me continue. Recall how you are always told to breathe normally after you put on your mask.

I'm at 30,000 feet in a large piece of machinery that manages to fly by some magic I still don't understand and suddenly I've got this mask over my face that may or may not save my life and I'm supposed to breathe normally? If that ever happens to me, rest assured I will not breathe normally. I will breathe as I please, like Secretariat down the stretch.

Anyway, all this to say that the oxygen masks did fall down for the passengers in the damaged Eastern 727. But a number of the passengers said theirs didn't work. Didn't work? I'd never even considered I'll be on a plane and a hole will blow open in the fuselage, and my mask will fall down but it won't Or worse. Mine will work, but not the one for the guy sitting next to me, and he'll be Mike Tyson with a On the other hand, if we are to believe Mr. Tyson's wife, maybe he'll leave my mask alone and go into the restroom and beat up the selfish flight attendant for her That's one thing I really like about myself. Even while considering such horrid, frightening circumstances, I can still look on the bright side.

BOSTON (AP) — The number of students entering nursing school jumped 11 percent last year because of higher salaries and a healthy job market, according to the magazine that surveyed more than 220 schools.

The increase follows a nearly a 13,970 in 1987. "Probably the most important thing is that there has been so much publicity about the national shortage of nurses," Publisher Richard A. DeVito, said Friday.

But a more troubling factor, DeVito said, is that many schools have reduced entry level grade point averages to attract more applicants. Perhaps as a result, he said, graduate nurses failed their licensing exams at a record rate of 16 percent in 1988, four times the 1987 level.

The journal said it sent its survey to 1,491 U.S. nursing schools and received responses from 227 institutions in 44 states

Official apology for body mix-up

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - ABritish investigator offered "a wholehearted apology" for sending the wrong body to a family whose daughter died aboard the Pan Am jet crash in Lockerbie, Scotland, the young woman's father says.

Robert Hunt said he met with a Scotland Yard official Sunday afternoon at the Hunts' home in the Rochester suburb of Webster. His 20-year-old daughter, Karen, was among the 259 people killed aboard Flight 103 when it exploded over Lockerbie last month.

The British police official and an FBI agent spoke to the Hunts after the Monroe County Medical Examiner's Office determined percent sure.'

Ms. Hunt, a student at Syracuse University, would have celebrated her 21st birthday Saturday.

"The British official just wanted to apologize," Hunt said. 'He offered a wholehearted apology and promised they were doing everything possible to rectify the situation.

"They really wouldn't commit to anything else," he said. "I got the feeling they don't want to tell us anything unless they're 100

Sedition trial costs government millions

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A trial of avowed revolutionaries that has already cost the government millions of dollars moved toward opening arguments almost a year after lawyers began selec-

The three remaining defendants of eight who were captured in one of the largest manhunts in U.S. history are accused of sedition, or conspiring to topple the government by force, under a rarely invoked law whose meaning has been the subject of much courtroom wrangling.

"It is a serious threat to fundamental liberties," said Peter Avenia, one of six defense lawyers.

Prosecutors contend, however, that the charge of sedition fits the group they describe as a dangerous band of terrorists. A Boston courthouse worker lost a leg and 21 other people were wounded in one of the score of bombings the group allegedly plotted from 1976 to 1985.

Jury selection began last March with a vast pool of jurors. The final few jurors in the U.S. District Court trial were scheduled to be picked today. Opening arguments are expected Tuesday.

Up to 350 witnesses could be called. A closed-circuit camera has been installed with monitors in another room in case defendants are ejected for unruliness. Observers must pass through two metal detectors to reach the courtroom, which an estimated 40 marshals take turns guarding. The defendants each face up to 60 years in prison and $60,000 in fines if convicted on the charges of seditious conspiracy, racketeering conspiracy and racketeering enterprise.

Their attorneys argue that the trial is a waste of money because their clients already have been convicted on bombing and bank robbery charges and all but one are serving prison sentences. The cost so far is estimated at well over $3 million.

The defense attorneys say the seditious conspiracy statute is so broad that it could be used against protesters blocking streets. "If people engage in political dissent and think this can't happen to them, they should read the statute," said Avenia. The statute makes it a crime for "two or more persons in any state or territory to conspire to overthrow or put down or destroy by force the government of the United States.

The government has used the statute only a few times since it was first invoked to punish Confederates during the Civil War. said Arthur D. Wolf, a professor at Western New England College in Springfield.

It was used to keep protesters from hindering the draft during World War I and to prosecute Puerto Rican nationalists accused in an assassination attempt against then-President Harry Truman. Last April, nine white supremacists were acquitted of seditious conspiracy charges in

The federal trial was moved to Springfield in 1987 so that defendants could be housed together at a iail in nearby Hartford, Conn.

The only defendants, however, are Williams and the Levasseurs. The five others either have changed their pleas to guilty or been dropped from the case. Mrs. Levasseur is out on bail, having finished a five-year term for possessing false identification and harboring her fugitive husband.

Political parties emerge slowly

HONG KONG (AP) — Political parties are struggling to emerge in this British colony but face the formidable hurdles of apathy, public distrust and a wary Communist China, which gains sovereignty over the territory in Attempts to form the groups comes as Britain prepares to hold Hong Kong's first general legislative elections and China appears to have reluctantly dropped its opposition to such activity.

The organizations will be different from Western-style political parties because they will not be able to form a sovereign government. Instead, they will be limited to trying to influence the outgoing British rulers and pursuing whatever local power Beijing permits under the "high degree of autonomy" it promises for this capitalist enclave after 1997.

The new parties are expected to participate in general elections to be held in 1991 for 10 of 56 seats on the council, which is primarily a forum to debate policy made by the British governor and his advisers. The council now consists of government officials, government appointees and representatives of interest groups and local advisory boards.

Guerrillas break off talks

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) - Afghan guerrilla leaders refused today to resume direct talks with the Soviets, accusing Moscow of playing political games aimed at securing its communist proteges in Kabul a place in a post-war government.

The guerrillas promised not to attack departing Red Army troops but said their decision to break off negotiations means fighting is likely to continue after Feb. 15, when the 50,000 Soviet troops remaining in Afghanistan are to withdraw under a U.N.-brokered accord.

The Pakistan-based guerrilla leaders ended talks with Soviet government.

Deputy Foreign Minsiter Yuli Vorontsov Saturday, deadlocked over the composition of a postwar government but saying they were ready to meet again.

But Vorontsov later told reporters that Moscow would find a way to support its Marxist allies in Kabul if a broad-based government that includes communists is not in place Feb. 15.

Moslem insurgents, who have been fighting the Soviet-backed communist regime in Kabul for a decade, have unanimously rejected the participation of any of its members in a post-war

Emperor vows to work for peace

TOKYO (AP) - Emperor Akihito set the tone for his reign by pledging to work for peace and preserve Japanese democracy, but said he faced "awesome responsibilities" after the death of his father, Hirohito.

The four-minute speech Akihito's first public statement since he ascended the Chrysanthemum Throne when Hirohito died of cancer Saturday at age 87. It was delivered at the Imperial Palace during a simple ceremony attended by Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita and 237 other dignitaries.

"Shrouded in sorrow and overwhelmed by the awesome responsibilities I undertake, I stand humble before you," said Akihito.

Japan's post-war constitution, which bans the emperor from any role in government and limits him to ceremonial functions, formed the basis for the country's democracy. It limits the emperor's role to signing bills into law and serving as "symbol of the state and the unity of the people.'

Remarriage rate declines

every three men and women walking down the aisle in the United States has been married before, but the remarriage rate for divorced Americans has been declining, according to a National Center for Health Statistics report.

The government report also shows that most divorced men marry divorced women and that of those divorced Americans remarrying in 1983, the women were on the average 34 years old and the men, an average 37 years old.

The report is based on samples of records from states that compile marriage and divorce statistics. It studies data collected from 1970 to 1983, the latest year for which most of the figures were available.

The number of remarriages increased during the period studied, rising from 404,000 in 1970 to 736,000 in 1983 for divorced women and from 423,000 to 773,000 over the 14-year period for divorced men.

But although the number of remarriages was growing over those years, the pool of divorced men and women was growing faster, the report said.

In 1983, the remarriage rate for divorced women was 91.6 per 1,000 compared with 123.3 per 1,000 in 1970. The rate for divorced men was 142.1 per 1,000 compared with 204.5 per 1,000 in 1970, the report

"Thus, only 9 percent of divorced women and 14 percent of divorced men remarried in 1983, compared with 12 percent of divorced women and 20 percent of divorced men in 1970," the report said.

The figures also show that most women marry men of the same

WASHINGTON (AP) - One of marital status. In 1983, the report said, 55 percent of all women and men who married were both single, 19 percent were both divorced and 2 percent were both widowed. Men traditionally are older than the women they marry, and this generally holds true for remarriages as well as first marriages, according to the study. The only combinations in which that trend is broken is for divorced and widowed women who marry single men. In 1983, widowed women were an average 2 years older and divorced women were an average 1 year older than the single men they married.

Many of the patterns for first marriages don't hold up for second and subsequent marriages, the report noted.

While more than three-quarters of first marriages are performed in religious settings, the proportion drops to about 60 percent for marriages involving divorced men and

Also, first marriages have a typical seasonal pattern - many more are performed in the summer than in the winter, the report said.

DREW BARRYMORE

NEW YORK (AP) - Thirteenyear-old Drew Barrymore, the lovable little girl in the movie "E.T.," said agents hired by her mother put her in handcuffs to take her back to the hospital after her binge of substance abuse.

In September, she said, she took a break from her initial hospital stay for drug and alcohol use to audition for a play in New York, and broke her 88-day string of sobriety when she snorted cocaine in a nightclub restroom.

She said she then stole her mother's credit card, flew to Los Angeles, snorting more cocaine, and went on a shopping spree.

Her mother hired private agents who handcuffed her and sent her back to the hospital, according to her first-person account in this week's People magazine. She said her descent into drug and alcohol abuse began with her rise in fame. "From the time I became famous in 'E.T.,' my life got really weird," Miss Barrymore said. Miss Barrymore was released from her second stay at a drugand-alcohol rehabilitation hospital shortly before Christmas. She said she drank at age 9, smoked marijuana at 10 and snorted cocaine at 12.

"It was frightening. I was this 7-year-old who was expected to be going on a mature 29," she said. By the time I was 81/2, I felt like I was some abnormal, crazy girl. I could walk up to the door of any nightclub and they'd say, 'Hi, you're that little girl. Come in." Last June, after a beer binge,

Best help may not be at home Academia

DEAR ABBY: In response to 'Judy in West Virginia" who cared for Maria, her 10-year-old blind and retarded child at home, Judy, is to be commended for having lasted so long. She needs to recognize that she is not equipped to spend every waking hour caring for her child however well-loved.

Her decision concerning whether or not to place Maria in a facility should not depend on what her relatives think. Such critics are ignorant of the toll caring for a multihandicapped child at home takes on the child and the entire family.

Facilities for the mentally retarded are able to give 24-hour supervision and care, help the child socialize at her own pace and level, and train her in some basic skills. However much Judy tries, her closeness to her child as well as the guilt trip imposed by the relatives renders her unable to do these things effectively. The federal government sponsors a program to enable the mentally retarded person to reach his/her maximum potential. The ICF/MR program (Intermediary Care Facility for the Mentally Retarded) is usually supervised and sometimes managed by the state. There is some governmental subsidy, which varies from state to state. Information is usually available from the regional mental health center. If not, Judy should write to the Department of Health and Human Services in Washington, D.C.

Judy has done all she can. Now it's time for her to give that responsibility to the specialists. At first it may be very hard and leave a terrible void, but for the child's sake, it's better at 10, rather than 20 years later when health or other problems occur.

My husband and I placed Sherry, our retarded teen-ager, in such a facility after much deliberation by us, and criticism from relatives. I thought I would not survive the experience. I found fault with everything and everyone until I realized that after the initial shock of separation, Sherry was better controlled and, believe it or not, happier there than she had been at home. Now, eight years later, I could kick myself for having waited so long because of my own pride and the interference of relatives.

Good luck to Judy! - RELIEV-ED IN TEXAS

Well, he wasn't as "good for it" as I thought he was. He left town because of a job change, and believe it or not, that's the last I heard from him. He has a brother in town, so I called him and asked where I could find Buddy. He told me he didn't know. I wrote to Buddy's last address, hoping my letter would be forwarded to him, but it was returned to me.

Abby, Buddy's brother is a very rich man. Wouldn't you think he would offer to pay the $300 his brother owes me just to protect the family honor? It's chicken feed to him, and I could use the money. So what should I do? - TOO TRUSTING

CINCINNATI - Boomer was bound for a mountaintop, Sam thought he might be headed for the unemployment line and Ickey wasn't even a dancer yet.

That was a year ago, when the Cincinnati Bengals occupied the depths of the AFC. They had gone 4-11 and generally messed up their 1987 season with poor play and disastrous decisions.

Today, the Bengals are AFC champions and headed for the Super Bowl for the second time. They got there with a 21-10 victory over the Buffalo Bills built on staunch defense, strong special teams and the Ickey Express.

"It's been a great trip so far," quarterback Boomer Esiason said. 'It's a great story, and it's an unfinished one.'

The final chapter will be written in Miami on Jan. 22 against the San Francisco 49ers, who won the NFC Championship 28-3 over Chicago on Sunday. The rematch of the 1982 Super Bowl is not quite what Esiason envisioned last January.

"I'll tell you, a year ago I was on a plane heading for a mountain in Lake Tahoe," he said. "Now, we're on a plane heading for a beach down in Miami. It's just incredible the turnaround we've experienced."

Montana burned the Chicago secondary for 288 yards and three touchdowns and San Francisco's defense stopped Jim McMahon and the Bears cold as the 49ers took a surprisingly lopsided 28-3 victory in Sunday's NFC championship game.

The 49ers' sixth victory in seven games earned them a third Super Bowl trip in the 1980s and left even usually reserved Coach Bill Walsh giddy with success.

"This has been the 49ers' year in the NFL," Walsh said. "We may be the team of the decade.

Loyola Marymount coach Paul Westhead, who had just watched his team explode for 162 points, insisted on talking about defense.

His team presented the former coach of the Los Angeles Lakers with a record-shattering 162-144 victory over U.S. International Saturday night, the total of 306 points breaking the NCAA record of 302 set in the Lions' seasonopening 164-138 victory over Azusa Pacific on Nov. 28.

'We are obviously capable of Westhead understated.

The Lions led 93-68 at halftime, setting an NCAA mark for most points in a half. The previous record was 87, set by Oklahoma earlier this season in the second half of the Sooners' 152-122 victory over Oral Roberts.

U.S. International set a Division I record for most points by a losing team in regulation. The previous mark was 127 by Pepperdine against Loyola Marymount on Feb.

Another of the options Cincinnati used was grabbing Woods in last spring's draft. Although he led the nation in rushing at Nevada-Las Vegas, Woods didn't go until the 40th pick.

"I was watching it on TV," Woods said of the draft. "I turned it off after the first round. I was disappointed.'

And he was determined to prove that he should have been selected earlier. Fifteen touchdowns, 1,066 yards and a dance craze later, Woods helped his team to the AFC Central crown.

With a pair of 100-yard games and three more touchdowns in the playoffs, he has catapulted it to Miami.

"The Super Bowl in my first year," he said in the jubilant locker room as he donned a T-shirt that features his smiling face and the words, "Super Bowl Shuffle on Down to Miami.

"I'm hyped, I'm ready to go," Woods said. "But first, it's time to party.' And, certainly, to dance. Woods performed the Ickey Shuffle twice Sunday after 1-yard scoring runs. This time, he and several teammates added a hip-gyrating, finger-pointing variation.

Montana said the 49ers hadn't planned on beating the Bears in the air, but stayed with the passing game because it worked.

"You have to go with whatever's working, and today we were throwing the ball well," he said.

Montana had performed superbly in cold weather before. quarterbacking Notre Dame to a dramatic come-from-behind victory over Houston in an icy 1979 Cotton Bowl. ### NCAA convention to face questions

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -After spending several hundred recruiting and maintenance of thousand dollars studying college athletes, the NCAA has two ques-

What does it all mean? And what should be done about it? More than 1,800 delegates will tackle that broad subject today in a two-part panel discussion on the opening day of the NCAA's 87th annual convention. The morning session will be devoted to interpreting the mass

In the afternoon, panelists will discuss the long-range implications of the research and what influence it could have on NCAA policy. "I think you'll find that information extremely interesting," NCAA executive director Dick Schultz told delegates Sunday night in remarks opening the convention. "It's probably the most conclusive and massive amount of information that has ever been athletics. Over 4,000 individuals were interviewed."

Panelists include Joe McGuff, vice-president and editor of the Kansas City Star and Times and former sports editor of the newspapers; Will Bailey, outgoing president of the NCAA; Gail Fullerton, president of San Jose State University, and Edward F. Fort, chancellor of North Carolina A&T University.

Schultz also told delegates that the NCAA, for the first time in its history, was "turning the corner" in the war against illegal athletes.

"I've talked with our enforcment staff, and with coaches and athletic directors, and there is a firm feeling that we're getting on top of the integrity issues, Schultz said.

Fear of the death penalty - instituted at a special 1985 convention and levied in 1987 against SMU football — is a major factor, Schultz said.

'It's also because of the programs you've installed in your own institutions and because of the renewed attitude of having integrity in intercollegiate programs," he told delegates. Ninety-nine percent of everything that's going on in intercollegiate athletics today is exceptionally positive. We have to be sure we don't get mired down in that one percent that's negative."

Schultz, who took over for the retired waiter Byers in September 1987, told delegates morale has never been higher on the enforcement staff.

"We've improved working conditions. We've addressed the salary question. The morale of the enforcemnt staff is better than it has been for a long time.'

Heavy probations levied recently against football programs at Houston, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State have given the public a misleading picture, he

But Carter officials, after said Edwards' failing grade was due to a miscalculation. They said he actually passed the class.

The case was argued for almost a week in state district court, and

Texas Education Agency Commissioner William Kirby said the judge's decision essentially "gutted" the state's no-pass, no-play rule

Meanwhile, Carter's football State investigators, acting on an team marched through the ed its final opponent on the gridiron

Carter could be stripped of that trial, scheduled for March.

The legal battle brought into focus statewide differences in how students are graded. Grading systems can differ from school to school within an individual district.

It also showed the lack of a central authority to quickly and decisively handle allegations of whether a school is eligible to compete.

And some lawmakers are complaining that after a bitter fight to institute education reforms designed to place education ahead of 'King Football," the ball has taken a funny bounce.

"I'm a little chagrined at the court fight," said state Sen. Carl Parker, a Port Arthur Democrat who heads the Senate Education Committee. "I'm chagrined most of all that people would spend that much time and effort on something that's secondary to the main purpose of public education."

Parker said one of his main con-title if it loses the court case at cerns is whether Carter's experimental grading system may be too easy. Carter, an inner-city school of approximately 1,650 students, is about 98 percent black.

according to Russeau. "People who engage in playlike education for minorities — lower the standards, let them go through the curriculum, give them a diploma, give them a college degree, give it to them, don't make them earn it - it's almost criminal," Parker said.

Parker said he wouldn't judge Carter's system without knowing more about it, but he added he would be interested to see how Carter graduates do on a skills test for college freshmen.

Carter officials argue they are not lowering standards, but trying to boost students — many of whom come from poor backgrounds - into academic competition.

After the state appealed Carter's state district court victory, two black lawmakers said the grading state wouldn't have pursued the case as vigorously if it did not involve a black school.

"TEA and UIL would not have focused the finances and the tremendous bureaucratic investigatory powers they had on Carter had it not been a black school," said State Rep. Fred Blair, a Democrat whose House district includes Carter.

The agencies said the charges of racism had no basis.

At Carter, a student is graded on homework, class participation, weekly tests and six weeks' tests. Each category is worth 25 percent of their grade. A student cannot receive a numerical grade of less than 50 on any particular assignment.

According to TEA spokesman Joey Lozano, the education commissioner believes an investigation of Carter's plan will find it contains appropriate components — including frequent homework system there works and that the assignments, testing and parental involvement. Kirby's concern is over administration of the plan, Lozano said.

Carter principal Russeau said the system has increased student achievement at middle and elementary schools.

Attorneys for Plano East High School, one of the schools that fell to Carter in the playoffs, said a Carter student could fail all tests and still pass a course.

Carter's attorneys said although that situation was mathematically possible, it was not probable and has never happened. If a student completes homework assignments and participates in class, it is almost impossible for the student to fail the tests, they said.

Educators acknowledge differences among district grading policies, but they are hesitant to change the system, citing the need for local control

If New York Supreme Court Judge Carmen B. Ciparick orders the Cup forfeited to Mercury Bay Boating Club, of which Fay is a member, the next regatta will be in April 1991 off Auckland, New Zealand.

Ciparick is expected to rule in the next few weeks on the suit, which contends SDYC acted unfairly by racing a multi-hull against New Zealand's slower, 133-foot

Both potential defenders expressed approval of the course, format and dates chosen for the next regatta, while tentatively accepting the design-formula boat proposed as the new America's Cup

Though approximately 75 feet in overall length, the new class boats would measure about 57 feet at the waterline and have a mast height of about 102 feet with a maximum sail area of 4,500 square feet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec 21): Avoid making promises you might not be able to honor. Keep your imagination under control. A medical or dental appointment should not be postponed. Correct a situation before it worsens.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone influential may be testing you. Do not put faith in this person's promises. Continue to straighten out your private affairs. Use tact and kindness with a teen-AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Expect some mixups today. The morning goes well. Encounters with influential people are happy. A friend could cause you some problems. Do not allow them to interfere with your business.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone you have had problems tracking down can be contacted now. Be sure to keep receipts for tax purposes. A teen-ager comes to you with a perplexing problem. Be a sounding board.

OFFICES HAVE JUST RECEIVED, AUTHORIZATION TO ACCEPT APPLICA-TIONS FOR THE CLERK-CARRIER EXAM IN FEBRUARY.

A recent issue of Newsweek magazine noted that the average Postal worker earns $27,500 in salary and benefits. Men and women, regardless of age or experience are eligible to apply. Courses to help you prepare for the above exams will be offered by Postal Exam Workshops. Instructors Marge Anderson and Bill Harold are considered by many to be the most qualified on how to gain employment with the Postal Service. These exams do not test general knowledge. Proper preparation is the key to getting hired, because people are hired for these positions based on their exam score. The easy-to-learn techniques taught in these courses were designed by Mr. Harold. He is a former Postal emplo the author of three postal exam guides, and has repeatedly scored 100% on Postal tests. 3 HOUR WORKSHOP: SCORE 95-100%

GUARANTEE: The time-saving and accuracy-increasing methods taught in this course are

Student turns family garage into laser studio

By MARCO R. DELLA CAVA El Paso Times

EL PASO - For most mortals, holography is mind-bending magic. For 23-year-old Eric Chesak, it's an afternoon in the family garage.

In an area crowded with garantuan power tools and a dusty dune buggy, the University of Texas at El Paso junior has constructed his own holography studio.

"I guess I'm sort of a low-budget holographer," Chesak says in a humble tone that never deserts him. "Most of this stuff I get from discount places - junk stores, really. Take this beam-splitter over here. New they cost around $85, but Chesak's studio consists of a slab of concrete the size of a desk top, upon which are fastened a series of lens-cradling mounts. It is, in essence, a maze through which a red laser beam is guided from light source to photographic plate via strategically placed mirrors.

Chesak says he gleaned information on the science of holography mostly through books. In October, he was one of a handful of students attending an international symposium on industrial aplications of holography. He describes the gathering — staged at New Mexico State University, which boasts two courses on the subject and about $1 million of holography equipment — as "three days of sheer ecstacy." Chesak shows a guest his prize hologram: a chess set with a large magnifying glass poised in front of it. The lights go dark in the cool garage. Suddenly, pawns, knights and kings come alive amid the mad-scientist glow of the red laser.

A hologram differs from a photograph in one startling way. A photograph shows you the same image regardless of the angle from which it is viewed, but a hologram is like a window. When you move from side to side, you see parts of the image that you would not see looking head-on.

"I'd love to go into laser research. That would be too awsome," the sandy-haired student says. "Ideally I'd like to open my own small shop to do holographic heat and stress Holography's biggest contribution to practical science is in testing objects for stress fractures and similar structural deficiencies. Tire companies use the process for quality control, as do automobile manufacturers and producers of high-quality optics. Even the bar code reading devices in supermarket check-out lines feature holographic elements.

be cumbersome and now it's easy," says Larry Mathews, who teaches a class in holography at NMSU. "The potential for using holography for quality assurance and for reducing construction expenses is going to grow. As a tool, I think it will soon reach the same level of esteem as ultrasonic waves and X-rays."

And when that comes to pass there will be Eric Chesak, long poised on the cutting edge of laser science. But that doesn't surprise his mom

"He's been interested in the mechanics of things since an early age," Selma Chesak says about "Holography is a tool. It used to Eric, the third of four children.

"At 10 months, he wanted to play with a screwdriver, and the next thing we knew, all ther doorknobs were hanging loose. Then, in grade school, when kids would tear apart broken radios, he'd end up making his work. And now, well, most of the household is kept running by

Students accepting disabled teachers

PLAINVIEW (AP) - When it comes to accepting the disabled, students probably could teach their parents a thing or two.

Plainview teachers Sam Kendall and Dan Brown say young people are more willing to accept handicaps than their parents. And the educators should know. Despite crippling disabilities, they are in their classrooms every day teaching students.

"Generally students are very receptive," he said. "They forget about my physical problems, so I forget about them.

Born with cerebral palsy, Kendall has had to learn how to live with his disability. He has adjusted his lifestyle to make the most of his physical problems.

While Kendall has been teaching at Estacado for 23 years, Brown is "I nearly burst into tears. One in his first year at Plainview High little girl said, 'Did you put all those sticks together?' She'd never there haven't been any problems at all," Brown said. "You have less acknowledgment of a handicap among kids than you do adults. Kids come forward quicker than adults and they can see through things better.'

Brown contracted polio when he was less than 2 years old. With the assistance of a brace on his left leg, the technology systems teacher walks with a limp down the halls of Plainview High School.

Brown, who moved here from southwest Oklahoma, believes local students are more tolerant of all kinds of differences including disabilities, ethnic backgrounds and income levels.

"One thing that I think may have problems with my handicap, but helped is the amount of racial tolerance among the kids," Brown said. "They seem to accept differences in people here better than in some places.

Both men say their disabilities have given them an advantage in their classrooms. By overcoming handicaps to lead normal lives, the educators have become role models for students who may be disadvantaged physically, emotionally, economically or academically.

"I think it gives me an advantage in working with kids that may not have everything some of the other kids have," Brown said. "There are all kinds of handicaps. Students see that even if they don't have all the breaks they can still make it."

"I think we are role models for handicapped kids," Kendall said. "These kids are self-conscious of their handicaps whether they be physical or speech or whatever. If they see a handicapped adult functioning within the community as a positive role model, hopefully this has a positive effect on their outlook

The teachers also are role models for advantaged students, according to the administrators who work with them.

"Sam Kendall has a very warm feeling for the kids and they in turn have that same feeling for him,' said Wendell Dunlap, principal at Estacado Junior High School. He has worked with Kendall for nine "He's one of the good ones," Dunlap said. "He is a very fine individual and an excellent teacher. His rapport with the students is Brown draws the same kind of

Almost 70 students benefit from local dyslexia instruction

By JEAN WARREN

How knowledgeable are you about dyslexia? This true-false test will tell you.

1. Careful tracing of family trees suggests dyslexia may often be a matter of heredity. 2. Twice as many girls as boys have dyslexia. 3. It is possible for children to outgrow dyslexia.

4. The dyslexic student has two mortal enemies: A rapid work rate and pressure for quantity. 5. The dyslexic child is unable to ignore irrelevant stimuli; he/she cannot edit his environment to identify what is relevant. 6. If dyslexia is diagnosed before the child enters third grade, there child can overcome his confusion with language symbols. 7. Most of the dyslexic population can be treated within the usual classroom structure if teachers can make certain adjustments in assignments and learning procedures.

8. Dyslexics respond well to a reading program which utilizes the whole-word (or total language)

9. The best approach to teaching dyslexic students to read is that of a highly structured phonetic, multi-sensory curriculum.

Dyslexia probably kept inventor Thomas Edison, Gen. George Patton, and President Woodrow is about an 80 percent chance the Wilson from coping with ordinary schoolwork when they were young. Dyslexia made Hans Christian Anderson an atrocious speller all his life, even though he became a magnificent storyteller.

The word dyslexia is from the Greek roots "des," meaning difficulty and "lexia," pertaining to words. It was identified late in the nineteenth century by German and British ophthalmologists; it still remains an unsolved problem. Some subtle peculiarity in the brain's organizational pattern blocks out an otherwise bright child's ability to learn to read, write legibly, spell, or perhaps use numbers. However, techniques have been developed to help the dyslexic child. The state of Texas has mandated a program to serve dyslexic students in grades 1-3, with expansion of the program as soon as A program — in grades 1-5 — for about 69 students suspected of suffering from the learning disorder is provided locally, according to dinator for Big Spring Schools. Not all youngsters in the program have severe dyslexia but all have characteristics of dyslexia. Some children diagnosed by physicians as having Attention Deficit Disorder syndrome also benefit from the curriculum, which is highly structured phonetic and multi-sensory in appraoch.

Janelle Clark works full-time with the program; Shirley Ezell and Gloria Coffee work half-days. All have received special training over a two-year period. The answers to the true-false test, which was authored by Gladden, are: 1. true; 2,3. false; 4, 5, 6, 7. true; 8. false; 9. true. How did you score?

Jan. 10 is the deadline for the Kentwood PTA Cultural Arts contest. The theme of the Nationial "Proud Experiences." Purpose of the contest is to provide an opportunity for students to use their creative talents by expressing themselves through their own original works. Contest categories are visual arts, music, literature, and photography.

A Math-A-Thon at Goliad Middle School has raised more than $1,000 for St. Jude's Research Hospital for Children in Memphis, Tenn. Fifty-three sixth and seventh graders volunteered to work problems in a booklet provided by the hospital and then to secure sponsors, who paid a certain amount for each problem correctly solved.
