Colorado City: Friday the 13th lingers

The Dallas County medical examiner who performed the autopsy on the body of Sammy Gomez — fatally shot May 13 by police attempting to arrest him for an alleged sexual assault — said the Colorado City man died from a single gunshot wound to the back of his head.

Dr. Patrick B. Besant-Matthews, the pathologist who performed the autopsy, said Gomez was first shot in left side of the chest with a small-caliber handgun and then in the back of the left shoulder. Neither wound was fatal.

The shot to the back of the head was the third of three shots.

Besant-Matthews said the gunshot wound to the left back side of the head severed the spinal cord — resulting in death.

A veteran West Texas pathologist, who requested anonymity after agreeing to analyze the autopsy report, also said the gunshot wound to the back of the head caused Gomez's death.

The Dallas County medical examiner's office completed the final autopsy report Nov. 22. The 11-page report is public record.

Although Besant-Matthews confirmed the shot to the back of the head killed Gomez, an informant close to the Mitchell County grand jury that considered the shooting and delivered no indictments said a state law enforcement officer who conducted an independent investigation testified the 27-year-old man was shot twice in the chest.

"The term 'shot in the back' was never mentioned (by witnesses who testified) before members of the grand jury," the source said.

"The term 'shot in the back' was never mentioned (by witnesses who testified) before members of the grand jury," said a source close to the Mitchell County grand jury that considered the shooting.

However, Texas Ranger John Billings said Saturday that he told members of the grand jury that Gomez suffered a gunshot wound to the back of the head.

The source said that there is a conflict between what Billings is revealing publicly and what the grand jury was told.

Besant-Matthews also affirmed that toxicology tests revealed there was neither drugs nor alcohol in Gomez's body at the time he was killed.

"We test for every conceivable drug known, so if he had taken something we would have found it. This laboratory (Southwestern Institute of Forensic Sciences/Dallas) employs very sophisticated procedures in testing for drugs," he said.

The absence of drugs in Gomez's body conflicts with information from the alleged rape victim, who told a Big Spring Herald reporter that she was positive it was Gomez who sexually assaulted her and he was under the influence of drugs.

In a story that appeared in the Herald June 13, the victim stated her attacker "was out of his head, stoned or something. He was

Grand jury stirs questions

The purpose of convening a grand jury is to determine if "probable cause" exists that a crime has been committed, according to officials.

Howard County Attorney Hardy Wilkerson said grand juries have broad powers — including the authority to subpoena anyone. However, district attorneys often rely on local police or sheriff departments to conduct investigations into alleged crimes.

Glen Harrison, Mitchell County assistant district attorney, said Saturday night he believes the witnesses who were subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury investigating the May 13 death of Sammy Gomez in Colorado City were the only ones necessary.

Several persons who were at the scene of the Gomez shooting have expressed surprise they were not subpoenaed to testify.

A source close to the Mitchell County grand jury proceeding told the Big Spring Herald that questions raised concerning the accuracy of statements by law enforcement officers were met with criticism by the majority of the jurors seated.

The source said: "I knew that (the majority) had already made up their mind before they went in."

Ruben Sandoval, a San Antonio attorney who specializes in civil rights cases and who has taken the case for the Gomez family, said grand juries were originally empaneled to inform the public about alleged criminal violations.

"In reality, grand juries have become the manipulative tool of district attorneys and law enforcement agencies to keep the truth from the public," Sandoval said.

COLORADO CITY — The only civilian eyewitness to the fatal wounding of a 27-year-old sexual assault suspect in May insists the man was unarmed when two Colorado City police officers fired three shots while attempting to arrest him.

Jessie Gomez, the aunt of shooting victim Sammy Gomez, said she never observed a knife prior to — or after — he was shot by police.

Jessie stated that the only occasion she did see a knife was when a third Colorado City police officer entered her home from outside moments after Sammy Gomez was shot.

Through an interpreter, Jessie stated in Spanish that the officer — whose identity she does not know — entered her home carrying a knife in a small plastic bag and asked her: "Have you ever seen this?"

Her statements conflict with the account of Colorado City Police Chief Bobby Sparks who has previously stated part-time officer Billy Ray Williamson fired three shots at Gomez because the suspect was attacking him with a knife.

The first person to arrive at the scene — other than law enforcement personnel — stated Jan. 8 that he never observed a knife near Gomez's body.

"I never saw a knife," he said, demanding anonymity.

The same man stated when he was later questioned about the shooting by Sparks and Texas Ranger John Billings that he was pointedly asked three times by the police chief if he saw a knife near Gomez's body; each time he responded he did not.

However, in a copy of a sworn statement obtained by the Big

Jessie Gomez, the aunt of shooting victim Sammy Gomez and the only civilian eyewitness to the event, said she never observed a knife prior to — or after — he was shot by police.

Spring Herald, witnessed by Billings, Sparks and Lt. Pat Taylor, there was no reference made about the man's comments regarding the knife.

The man did not testify before the grand jury convened to investigate Gomez's death one week later, a source close to the proceeding has confirmed.

During a Thursday night interview at her home — the site of the shooting — the shooting victim's aunt related the chronological chain of events May 13:

• Between 10 and 10:30 a.m. Sammy came to her home — entering through a side kitchen door.

"He said hello to my father (Frank Gomez) and then went to the rear bedroom and went to sleep on a couch," she said.

Jessie said she prepared lunch about 11 a.m. for her father, Frank Gomez who resides with her at the home, and went to the rear bedroom, where Sammy was asleep, to inquire if he wanted to eat.

Jessie stated that Sammy never left the rear bedroom.

She said she began watching soap operas on television after lunch, but about 2:50 p.m. her father entered the living room and inquired as to why police

Attorney: Gomez was executed, knife was planted

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

Having concluded their initial investigation into the Sammy Gomez shooting, attorneys representing the Gomez family contend the Colorado City police "executed" Gomez and planted a throwdown knife at the scene of the killing.

Describing the shooting incident shortly after it occurred on May 13, Bobby Sparks, Colorado City Police Chief, said officer Billy Ray Williamson shot and killed Gomez — a suspect in a sexual assault case — because he was attempting to attack Williamson and Lt. Pat Taylor with a knife.

However, Ruben Sandoval, a San Antonio-based civil rights attorney, and John Garcia, an El Paso attorney and the state director of LULAC, allege Gomez was unarmed at the time of the shooting.

Sparks said Tom Rees, Colorado City's city attorney, has recently advised him not to comment on the case.

Sandoval said he did not want to discuss specifics of his investigation "until the proper state and federal authorities are contacted and briefed."

But he told the Big Spring Herald: "We now know that Sammy Gomez was not the owner of the knife and never held it in his hands. . . Our investigation has led me to surmise that the knife came from some place other than Frank Gomez's home (the shooting scene), and from somewhere other than Sammy Gomez himself. I suspect it came from someone within the Colorado City Police Department."

He added, "It is our contention, from all that we have uncovered, that (Gomez) was executed."

Sandoval has contacted Jim Mattox, Texas Attorney General, requesting that he initiate a full investigation into the case.

Elna Christopher, press secretary for Attorney General Jim Mattox, said an open file is being kept on the Gomez shooting, but that the case is not being actively investigated.

On Saturday, Sandoval said he plans to either meet with Mattox or talk on the phone with him Monday to review the case.

He also said he will travel to Washington Wednesday, where he plans to meet with FBI Director William Sessions and representatives of the U.S. Attorney General's Civil Rights Division to push for a full-scale, federal investigation of the shooting.

Asked if he plans to initiate both criminal and civil litigation, Sandoval said he "would not preclude civil action at this point." But added that "a (monetary) judgment is not salutary to solving the problem."

He said his investigation has revealed a conspiracy to violate the civil rights of Sammy Gomez, and that he will push for the federal indictments of "the perpetrators of the execution as well as those involved in the obstruction of justice by impeding a proper, complete and impartial investigation."

The attorneys said they became actively involved in the case after receiving a copy of the Dallas County Medical Examiner's autopsy report released Nov. 22.

The autopsy report reveals that Gomez was first shot in the left side of the chest, then in the back of the left shoulder and finally in the back of the head.

"The autopsy report is what ultimately convinced us that something wrong had been done," Garcia said. "It is the completion of proof that Sammy Gomez was executed by the police officers."

The attorneys contend the findings of the autopsy report con-

John Coffee choice as temporary judge

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Local attorney John Richard Coffee will serve as special judge for Howard County for the next 90 days.

Coffee was appointed Friday afternoon in a special session of Howard County Commissioners' Court. Acting under section 30.03 of the Texas Code of Criminal Procedures, commissioners appointed Coffee to serve as judge in the county's criminal, civil and probate dockets in the absence of County Judge Milton Kirby.

Kirby is recovering from a December surgery.

According to the statute, Coffee will serve for the term of the appointment — drawn by County Attorney Hardy Wilkerson for a period of 90 days, according to commissioner William B. (Bill) Crooker Jr. — but will not serve beyond the length of Kirby's absence.

The statute requires, also, that such a special judge be an attorney. Coffee is a 32-year veteran of the practice of law in Texas, who said Friday an additional, sentimental reason he had sought the appointment was to return to the courthouse and see how county court matters had changed since his service as county attorney in 1957.

Commissioner O.L. (Louis) Brown asked for a statement from Coffee concerning his interest in the position prior to the commissioners' vote on Commissioner David Barr's motion to appoint Coffee.

"I was interested in the position first of all to carry on the work Judge Kirby has done. I believe he is an excellent judge," Coffee told the commissioners. "I've always been interested in the work, and I served 15, 16 years as city judge."

"I thought this would be an opportunity to gain experience on a somewhat different level, and I feel I'm qualified."

"I also want to serve the commissioners' court and the people of the county as best I can," Coffee said.

"That's all I wanted, to hear from him one time," Brown said, noting that he had been confronted with a letter calling for his signature endorsing Coffee's appointment.

'Saturday won't be the same'

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan delivered his 331st, and last, radio address as president on Saturday, telling his listeners he was grateful to have played a part in "the story of a people and a cause . . . the American saga."

"Believe me, Saturdays will never seem the same. I'll miss you," the president said as he read his five-minute address from the Oval Office.

"Over the years I've greatly enjoyed this opportunity to get together with you, and report on the week's events here in Washington," said the one-time radio sportscaster and Hollywood actor.

He began the Saturday series on April 3, 1962.

Reagan noted that he and his wife Nancy planned to return home to California after Friday's inauguration of President-elect Bush.

"We go with full hearts, with best wishes for George and Barbara and with gratitude to all of you. It's crazy." The bullet to the back of the head was "directed from above downward," according to the autopsy report, although Besant-Matthews refused to speculate where Gomez was positioned when the fatal shot was fired.

 "In order to make an informed statement on that I would have to be present at the place the shooting occurred," he noted.
 Colorado City Police Chief Bobby Sparks said Thursday that he would discuss the circumstances surrounding the Gomez shooting; however, City Attorney Tom Rees has advised him not to comment because of threatened litigation.
 In response to a Jan. 6 request for a copy of the initial Colorado City Police Department written report on the shooting, Rees said he would have to evaluate a written request before he made a decision.
 Rees said he considered it unnecessary for a reporter to review the police report because repeated independent investigations have consistently shown that Colorado City Police Department actions in the Gomez shooting were proper and justified.

 "Why do you want to see that report? That shooting occurred six or eight months ago and our community is trying to put that behind us," Rees stated.
 Pursuant to the Open Records Act, the Big Spring Herald made a formal request of Rees Jan. 7 asking him to provide a copy of the initial Colorado City Police Department report on the Gomez shooting.
 Rees confirmed Jan. 11 he has received the request; however, he said he is going to seek an attorney general's opinion on whether the initial police report is public information.
 Elra Christopher, press secretary for Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, said that according to state law, Rees must submit a written request to the attorney general's office by 5 p.m. Friday, Jan. 20, explaining his reasons for not wanting to release the report.

 "If the request is not made to our office by that time, and he refuses to provide the report, you can file a criminal (misdemeanor) complaint," she said. "This office has consistently maintained, however, that the initial police report is public record and there have been court cases to support that contention."
 The Herald received a written response from Rees Saturday stating that he will seek an attorney general's opinion.
 Sparks did say in a Jan. 6 telephone conversation that the Colorado City police department has "nothing to hide."
 "We've already withstood seven investigations, including the FBI, the attorney general's office and two insurance companies and they found nothing wrong," he said.

Tom Clark, an FBI agent who works in the Abilene office, said Thursday he did conduct an investigation into the shooting and filed a report with the Department of Justice in Washington.
 "We (FBI) make no recommendations and relate no opinion about the results of our investigation," Clark said.
 Attempts were unsuccessful to determine if any action will be taken by the Department of Justice because of that investigation.
 Christopher said Thursday that an "open file" is being kept on the Gomez shooting. However, she indicated the case isn't being actively investigated.
 "The state legislature passed a statute that gives the attorney general the authority to investigate custodial shootings; the only problem is they didn't provide the funding to back that authority," Christopher explained.
 She defined a custodial shooting as one involving a law enforcement officer and a suspect in custody, or one involving a law enforcement officer in the act of making an arrest.

 Sparks did state in a June 12 Herald story that part-time officer — and fulltime Colorado City fire marshal — Billy Ray Williamson "... did not shoot Mr. Gomez until he himself was in great danger — a reaction to aggression that took only seconds to occur."
 He said that Williamson shot Gomez, fired a second time within seconds, and once again "until the man quit coming at him."
 In the same story, Sparks said there is no question that Gomez had a knife when the shooting occurred.
 "Statements reflect that several officers did see the knife was in his hand beneath the body," Sparks stated in the June story.
 Besant-Matthews said a knife was not submitted with Gomez's body as evidence — an omission that is not necessarily unusual.
 "Some weapons suspects allegedly had on them at the time they were shot are submitted as evidence. It depends on the individual department," he said.

 When informed Saturday that the Herald was planning to print stories quoting witnesses at the scene who directly dispute his department's version of the Gomez shooting, Sparks said: "I don't think you can print anything that can hurt us."
 Colorado City Manager Brenda Hammond said Saturday that conflicting statements by witnesses will not alter her confidence in the police department.
 "The grand jury investigated this shooting and returned a no bill (refused to indict Williamson). Yes, I have every confidence in our police department," Hammond affirmed.
 Colorado City Mayor James Baum also stressed Saturday night that he has complete confidence in the police department.

 flict with testimony given to grand jurors hearing the case.
 Garcia contends the convening of the Mitchell County grand jury proceeding was rushed to serve the interests of the Colorado City Police Department.
 "We are outraged that only a week after the incident the officers involved were not billed," he said. "We believe this undue haste indicates the matter has not been fully investigated."
 Garcia said their investigation has revealed "the grand jury really did not have much evidence before it. The evidence presented was evidence to vindicate and justify the actions of the police."
 State LULAC officials have been following the case since the shooting occurred, Garcia said, and in September he and Sandoval agreed to represent Max and Minnie Gomez, parents of the dead man.
 Garcia described the Gomez shooting as "a leading case in police brutality that needs to be fully investigated so that the persons who perpetrated this wrong can be brought to justice."
 The attorneys said they will argue Gomez was repeatedly harassed by Williamson prior to the shooting, and that the shooting was premeditated.
 "We've been able to discover several facts that have shown that perhaps the Colorado City Police Department (members) were planning to kill Sammy Gomez," Garcia said.
 Both attorneys said they did not take the case based on "racial motives," and that they do not want their involvement in the case to "polarize the community."
 "We are not going to let this case degenerate into a thing where people are saying, 'they are bringing this on because Sammy Gomez is a minority,'" Sandoval said.
 "Before he was a minority he was an American. If his name had been Joe Black or Bobby Blue and if his pigmentation were white we'd still be looking for justice."
 "We don't consider our involvement as crusading for Hispanic rights. What has happened is an American boy has had his rights violated and has literally been executed."

 were coming to the home.
 As she began walking to the front door, two Colorado City policemen approached, and opened the screen door — while at the same time drawing guns from their holsters.
 "They asked 'where's Sammy?'" Jessie said.
 She explained that as she started to inform Sammy the police wanted him, she observed him walking toward them, but quickly he said in Spanish: "Get out of the way, they're going to shoot me."
 Jessie said she heard one shot as she rushed toward the telephone to call Minnie Gomez (Sammy's mother) and then heard two simultaneous shots.
 When she looked toward Sammy, Jessie said she saw he was laying face down.
 "The police (Williamson and Taylor) ran out the front door right after the shooting," Jessie said.
 The 55-year-old woman said she was "absolutely sure" that she did not see a knife near Sammy's body.
 Moments later, however, she said an officer she did not know entered her home carrying a knife in a small plastic bag.
 Expressions on Jessie's face while recalling events that occurred the day of the shooting make apparent the trauma she experienced.
 Just moments after the shooting, Jessie's home was besieged with people — one of whom was Mitchell County Justice of the Peace Ruby Claxton.
 Jessie said Claxton asked her if she had seen a knife at the shooting

This illustration comes from the report filed by the Southwestern Institute of Forensic Sciences at Dallas and depicts the direction and sequence of gunshots entering the body of Sammy Gomez, according to autopsy number 1524-88.

scene.
 "I said yes," Jessie confirmed referring to the knife she had been shown by police; however, she added that Claxton never asked her who was holding the knife.
 A source close to the grand jury investigation confirmed that Claxton testified Jessie told her she observed Sammy Gomez holding a knife at the shooting scene.
 Claxton said Friday that she believed Jessie told her she did see Sammy holding a knife.
 Asked why Mitchell County officials failed to provide an interpreter for Jessie when she testified before the grand jury, Claxton responded: "I don't know why, that's not my responsibility. I do think she knows more (English) than she leads on."

 Glen Harrison — who oversaw the grand jury empaneled to hear testimony about the shooting — said Friday he believes that the jurors who listened to Jessie Gomez's testimony understood what she related and that her lack of fluency with English was not a problem.
 Dr. Dee Roach — who unsuccessfully attempted to save Gomez's life at the Mitchell County Hospital — refused comment Saturday afternoon about whether he observed a bullet wound to the back of the head.

 "It's not that I don't want to answer that question... it's just that I could lose my (medical) license if I told you without the proper authorization," Roach said.
 Jazier Alvarez, the Lubbock attorney who represented Sammy Gomez in a felony trial eight years ago, confirmed Saturday that several Mitchell County law enforcement officers expressed concerns about why Gomez was shot in the back of the head.
 Alvarez also said he was told by a law enforcement officer at the shooting scene that Williamson and Taylor — not solely Williamson — shot Gomez.

It's Girl Scout cookie time again!

Local Girl Scouts will be knocking on doors the next two weeks in their annual cookie sale campaign, according to local officials.
 "Cookie sales provide a major amount of our funding annually," said Debbie Burrow, Service Unit Chairman.
 The funds, which are expected to amount to thousands of dollars, will be used in the local activities of the 19 troops in the area, Burrow said. About 226 girls are involved in the organization this year, with 86 adults coordinating their activities.
 Anyone interested in buying cookies should contact a Girl Scout to place an order, Burrow said. The cookies will arrive in March. Each box costs $2.
 Girl Scouts is a United Way agency.

Prisons to accept new inmates

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas prison officials said they again will begin accepting prisoners Monday from the state's county jails after crowding forced the Texas Department of Corrections to halt admissions for three days.
 The TDC, under court orders that prohibit prisons from exceeding 95 percent of capacity, had to lock its doors to further admissions after exceeding that mark Tuesday.

Death toll increases with 65 mph speed limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural interstate highway accidents killed 352 more people than a year earlier in states where the speed limit was raised to 65 mph, while death tolls on other roads decreased slightly, according to a government report.
 The 19 percent increase in deaths occurred over a period that varied for each state, depending on when drivers were allowed to go faster, said the report Friday by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Congress authorized the increased limit beginning April 2, 1987, and 38 states have adopted it for their rural interstates.
 Highway deaths in those states on urban interstates and other roads where the 55 mph limit remained totaled 21,366 for the same period in 1986 and 21,231 in 1987, the report said.
 Fatalities in states that raised the speed limit increased by an average nearly three times as high as in 10 states that kept the limit at 55 on all roads, the report showed.
 But the safety administration, in releasing the first of three planned annual reports, said there were "substantial variations" among the states and some such as California actually showed fewer deaths on rural interstates after new speeds were posted.

 The report also said there was not enough evidence to determine the speed limit's long-term impact on highway safety.
 Critics of the higher speed limit said the increased death toll was enough reason to return to the 55 mph limit nationwide.
 "This report can be summed up in two words: speed kills," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate Appropriations transportation subcommittee, who has opposed the increase.

 Overall, 373 more people died on rural interstates in 1987 than in 1986, the report said. Of those, 352 were in states that raise the speed limit and 21 in states that did not.
 The highway safety agency, in its 67-page report, said rural interstate fatalities account for only 5 percent of Americans killed in road accidents, and the increase had only a small impact on overall traffic fatalities which total about 46,000 a year.

 The report noted that 24,000 people are killed each year in crashes where alcohol is involved and 8,000 are pedestrians hit by vehicles.
 "NHTSA continues to believe that setting speed limits is a matter for state legislatures to decide based on their review of available fatality and injury data, actual experience and local conditions," the report said.

Fraser receives House committee assignment

By BRAD WORRELL
 Staff Writer

Two state representatives' committee positions were recently given to 69th district's first Republican representative.
 Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, was appointed Jan. 11 to serve on the committees on Business and Commerce, and Labor and Employment Relations by House Speaker Gib Lewis.
 "The Business and Commerce Committee is one of the most sought-after committees for legislators. I was real lucky. It's a vote of confidence by the Speaker," Fraser said.
 Fraser said, "The thing that is important about the business and commerce committee is that worker's compensation is going to be the number one issue that is facing the legislature this session. In fact, the governor has already placed it on emergency status."
 "We are losing potential new businesses because of our outdated system of handling work related injuries. A new system must be more equitable to workers and employers, as well as make Texas a more attractive place for businesses to locate," he said.
 Fraser said he will bring several West Texas concerns to the attention of the state congress: water rights, problems in the educational field that were not dealt with by House Bill 172 and problems in rural health care.

 "I hope to have an impact on rural health care. I think there's a real concern in West Texas about rural health care."
 Fraser noted that 75 rural hospitals closed last year, and 21 of those were located in Texas, he said.
 "A lot of the problems come with method of funding and reimbursement by federal and local (agencies) that discriminates against rural hospitals. Urban areas receive as much as 40 percent more in funding... than rural hospitals," he said.
 The freshman representative said he will also work against any new tax increases. "Last session we had a record tax increase, the largest in U.S. history. We've got to make sure we don't have the need for any further tax increases. We've got to make sure we don't spend more than we've got coming in. West Texans can't afford another tax increase," he said.
 He said the atmosphere in Austin is, "less partisan than you would expect." Fraser said he and other West Texas legislators have agreed to vote together as a block on issues facing west Texas. "They're not going to be Republican or Democratic issues. They're going to be issues that are important to West Texans."

TU Electric sued for negligence

HERALD STAFF REPORT

A seven-million dollar damage suit has been filed against Texas Utilities Electric Company in connection with the death of a Big Spring man.
 Jamie and Mary Baldwin, parents of Jamie Baldwin Jr., who drowned in Lake Colorado City May 20, filed suit Dec. 27 against the utility, alleging negligence in its design, building and operation of the Texas Electric plant discharge at Cooper's Cove, Lake Colorado City, Mitchell County.
 The suit alleges the low head dam at the discharge was improperly designed and constructed, creating a danger of turbulent waters for fishermen the company "knew or should have known" might enter the restricted area around the plant's hot-water discharge.
 The suit also alleges the company was negligent in not providing proper barriers around the danger area or maintaining a 24-hour security guard.
 The suit seeks funeral expenses of $2,612 in addition to damages of $7.1 million, plus interest from Nov. 1, 1988 through the date of judgment.

alleging improper installation of a water heater in her mobile home resulted in damages of $6,089.43 to the home and $3,193.88 to its contents.
 The suit alleges the damages resulted from a fire caused by the water heater, which the suit says was installed on particle board which had been wet.
 Land Sales and Investment Company sued Charles Poulter, individually and doing business as Charles Poulter and Sons, and Grady Walker, individually and doing business as Grady Walker LP Gas Company.
 The suit alleges that improper installation, inspection and pressure checks on gas lines, tanks and a furnace in a residence on Todd Road resulted in an explosion in a kitchen which destroyed the home. The suit seeks damages, court costs, attorneys' fees and interest.

have not been corrected despite Pollard's efforts to do so.
 • Hunt Oil Company filed suit against the unknown heirs of George F. King Jr., seeking to have a receiver appointed for an oil and gas lease on property in Howard County. William Dupree has been appointed to represent the unknown heirs in the matter.
 • Homer Tomerlin has filed suit against Aetna Life and Casualty, the Standard Fire Insurance Company and The Auto Insurance Company of Hartford Connecticut.
 The suit alleges the insurers' adjuster refused to allow a claim against Tomerlin's homeowners' policy resulting from windstorm and hail damage suffered Sept. 10, 1987, which "substantially destroyed" the roof of his residence. The suit seeks $2,988.86 plus attorneys' fees, court costs and interest.
 • The State of Texas filed a suit against Bobby Joseph McCracken and Bonnie Bennet Skeen regarding a debt.
 • Samuel R. Munoz sued The Continental Insurance Company, alleging deceptive trade practices, after the insurers refused to pay for $4,194.39 in hospitalization and treatment costs he incurred at Scenic Mountain Medical Center. The suit also seeks $503.33 in interest, attorneys' fees and court cost, plus unspecified damages.

In other filings:
 • Mary Fowler sued Aaron R. Combs, doing business as Tate Plumbing and Air Conditioning, alleging resisting arrest, failure to maintain single lane and failure to maintain financial responsibility.
 Neil Steven Morris, 40, P.O. Box 115, was arrested on charges of public intoxication, unlawfully carrying a weapon and failure to control speed to avoid accident after being involved in a one-vehicle collision.
 He was arraigned this morning by Municipal Court Judge Gwen Fair and later released after posting $1,160 bond.
 An accident report had not been completed at 11:30 a.m., according to a police department records clerk.

Police beat

Big Spring police reported investigating the following incidents:
 • Daniel Rodriguez, 39, address unavailable, was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated.

Inmate damages jail cell

By BRADLEY WORRELL
 Staff Writer

An inmate at the Howard County jail did damage, estimated to exceed $950 when water seeped into an office located below the jail after he tore his cell urinal from its foundation, according to county sources.
 Jesse Nunez Torres, 31, was responsible for the water damage that destroyed a telephone, several ceiling tiles, soiled an office carpet, and forced a secretary to abandon her office.
 "He's costing the city a lot of money," said one county employee on condition of anonymity.
 Torres ripped the urinal from its foundation after a day-long rage in which he pounded on the bars of his cell wall.
 County officials throughout the entire third floor of the courthouse, one floor below where county inmates are housed, reported hearing clanging for most of the day.

 "It started right at 8 o'clock, went until noon, stopped and then started again at one o'clock," said a district court staff member.
 Sheriff A.N. Standard said the damage to the cell itself is minimal. "This is not really worth mentioning, in my opinion," he said. "This is nothing new. This is just Jesse being Jesse."
 Standard said there are no plans to replace anything in the cell. He said the cell may be used in the future for other inmates who cannot maintain their composure.
 The sheriff, noting how long it has taken for the Torres case to reach trial, expressed concern Torres might use the incident to seek a change of venue for his trial on a robbery charge.

Coffee

 pointment without having had a chance to talk to Coffee beforehand, or to anyone else about the position.
 Former County Attorney Harvey Hooser had expressed interest in the post, Crooker said, but as Wilkerson and Kirby pointed out, Hooser's name appears on many of the filings in the criminal docket of the county court.
 Following an information-only discussion with Justice of the Peace China Long in which she told the commissioners that state liquor control agent James White's office is being threatened with closure, the commissioners voted to adjourn.

 Wilkerson told the commissioners during the discussion of Coffee's appointment that the special judge's salary will be divided to equal the regular county judge's salary for the same period.
 "It will be one three-hundred and sixty-fifth of the regular judge's salary, which is the requirement of the statute. You really don't have any choice" in the rate of pay, Wilkerson said.

A.J. Haines

Mr. A.J. (Jack) Haines, 80, Kerrville, died Thursday, Jan. 12, 1989 in Crosby.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday at the First United Methodist Church of Kerrville. Burial will follow in Garden of Memories, Kerrville, under the direction of Kerrville Funeral Home.
 He was born Oct. 28, 1908 in Gatesville and married Ethel Szenafi Nov. 5, 1933 in Corsicana. He was employed as a chemist at Couden Refinery for 15 years and later worked with Phillips Petroleum Company in Odessa. In 1969 he retired to Kerrville where he was a member of the First United Methodist Church, a song leader in the church and was a member of the Methodist Men.
 Survivors include his wife, Ethel, Kerrville; two daughters, La June Jackson, Crosby; and Betty Kay Haines, Houston; two sisters, Lola Belle Franklin, Newton, N.J.; and Nona Szenafi, Odessa; one brother, Rev. Lester Haines, Kerrville; two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

 Family suggests memorials be made to the First United Methodist Church of Kerrville.

The price of undoing Roe

The supporters of the right to abortion are justifiably concerned about the Supreme Court's decision to review lower federal court rulings overturning a Missouri law that severely restricts that right. The law, much of which was held unconstitutional by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, declares, among other things, that human life begins at conception. It also curtails the use of public funds and facilities for abortion counseling and imposes sharp restrictions on abortions after 20 weeks. The danger is that the court could use the occasion to uphold the Missouri law and thus sharply erode Roe vs. Wade, decided 16 years ago this month. Or it could overturn Roe vs. Wade altogether.

If the court does either, it will be far more than the right to abortion, important as it is, that will be adversely affected. Because such a course would leave abortion policy up for grabs in every Legislature in the nation, and to some extent in every city council and school board as well, it would set in motion perhaps the most divisive domestic fight since abolition. Because each side in that fight would be defending a position of uncompromising moral certainty, it would make the current abortion controversy look like a tea party by comparison. There would hardly be a political issue — from school curricula to state budgets — that would not be deeply affected, or a community not divided, by the abortion fight.

Nor would the fight necessarily end there. For if Roe vs. Wade were undercut, what of the hundreds of other decisions affecting personal privacy, going back at least as far as 1965, that have been derived from the same principle? What of the right of physicians and counselors freely to dispense birth control information, or the right of individuals to purchase contraceptives without undue state restrictions?

The court is now narrowly split, with Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, the court's newest member, said to be the uncertain (and very possibly decisive) element. When Kennedy went to the court, it was with a reputation as a thoughtful conservative, a judge who would not idly overturn precedent or use the bench to impose his own social agenda. If this is indeed the kind of justice he is, he will shudder at the prospects of overturning Roe, not necessarily because of abortion, but because of what such a decision will do to a nation that badly needs to be united to solve its debilitating social questions.

Blood donations appreciated

To the editor:
Once again the good people of Big Spring rallied when called upon.

Late Sunday night we had a call for blood to be given for Delbert Conway who had been in a real bad pickup wreck and was in ICU in a McAllen hospital.

Are the people here aware that Big Spring doesn't have a blood bank? We weren't; the hospital here put us in touch with the blood bank service in San Angelo. It just so happened they were having a blood drive in Big Spring Monday so we got the message out.

Thanks to all our radio stations and you great people and friends who responded, we got 17 units for Delbert. The valley had had a critical shortage of blood over last weekend so we want to thank each and every one who gave blood for Delbert.

It was received in time for the operation to stop his internal bleeding. However, he is in critical condition and still on life support. He will need much more surgery.

So thanks and remember next time you hear of a blood drive for Big Spring, just think that it could be you or one of your loved ones and respond.

The blood bank service will be here Jan. 18 at Southwestern Bell Telephone building from 9 to 11 a.m. and at Walls Industries from 1 to 4 p.m.

Thank you again for the help we needed during this emergency for Delbert. God bless you all.

Economic growth based on education

By JESSE TREVINO
During this session of the Texas Legislature, lawmakers will adopt a two-year budget that will carry the state well into 1991.

Thus, even though the calendar says 1989, the time for preparation is already past; Texas is now dealing with, or failing to deal with, the problems of the 1990s. If common sense were to guide the Legislature, perhaps Texans could take heart, not so much in promised solutions, but in the willingness to work toward solutions.

Unfortunately, common sense usually seems to conflict with cost, both financial and political.

Common sense, for example, says that a robust, diversified economy and a correspondingly healthy tax base require an educated work force. If one chooses to ignore common sense, one can turn to example.

The most productive state economy in the United States belongs to California. That state, almost immune to recession, rockets along with superlative growth rates that derive, in part, from education, a recognition of new economic realities and an unceasing belief in social progress, Orange County not included.

California is not without problems and does not have all the answers, but it is far ahead of Texas on the question of education. California has invested untold billions in education on a consistent basis since the 1940s, and it is now reaping the economic benefits of those investments.

In Texas, we are still debating whether a funding system that keeps half of the state's children in substandard schools is constitutional. People tend to view this as some type of moral crusade between haves and have nots. This is the mentality of the past.

Today education is an economic issue. With the collapse of oil, real estate, and now banking, what more incentive do Texans need? In the debate over school finance reform, the old question of whether we eventually will build more prisons or more factories has never been more pertinent.

The economic future of the state could well be decided by the action, or lack of action, taken by the Legislature on the issue of school finance in 1989.

here in this gloomy city leaves a lot to be desired. Looking ahead for my children's future here doesn't look too bright either.

The pride appears to be diminishing within a lot of Big Springers. Along with our so-called city ordinance code enforcements and most of our city leaders negative attitudes.

The citizens of Big Spring have the right to expect adequate upkeep in this town. At least for sanitation and health purposes. Cosden Lake needs attention. Expensive repair to the dam was made, but extensive clean up was never carried thru. All throughout Comanche Trail Park is long overdue to be cleaned out. Except for I believe the Cotton Mize Softball Field. Is that a nice and neat field or what?

I also believe that we could see this town cleaned up and some pride restored here, if we had lawful city standards enforced and had motivating leaders working together creating new ideas, thinking, saying and reacting upon good achievements. "We can" "We will" "We can do" "We will do" is a start. Practicing skills such as recruiting new jobs, aiming new businesses toward Big Spring. Getting another major discount store in here project. We the citizens of Legislators must do two things: Address the problem of school finance reform and institute methods by which taxpayers can gauge the effectiveness of increased expenditures. Perhaps this added caveat will persuade Texans to spend now for their economic future by assuring them that no one wants to throw money at the problem in a meaningless way.

More money is needed desperately; more waste is not.

The single most important thing that can be done is to increase teacher salaries, with certain conditions. The rewards that motivate a person to enter a field and to work hard in a given vocation are many and varied. But, clearly, the teaching profession has suffered from lack of status.

More, possibly better, and certainly more highly motivated individuals would lead our classrooms if all teachers were well-paid, worked in pleasant, air conditioned facilities, could afford stylish cars and clothes, and were accorded the same respect commonly given to lawyers and doctors, for example.

Teachers do not need to live in luxury, but the current starting base salary of $15,200 is ridiculous. A starting engineer can draw $25,000 a year with no problem, more in many cases.

Unfortunately, education professionals have created as many problems as they have solved. Even the best of teachers cannot escape or compensate for the incompetent interference of the overpaid counselors, consultants, coordinators, administrators and specialists that have seized control of our educational system.

These people inevitably have advanced degrees in education. Many revel in the procedural and disdain the substantive aspects of education, inventing fancy programs ad nauseum, but possessing little practical experience and little knowledge of subject matter. They justify their own jobs by devising mountains of paperwork to be completed by teachers, leaving less time and energy for tending to students.

One effective yet inexpensive education reform could be achieved by firing one half of all school administrators and redistributing their salaries to teachers, the people who really do the work.

Recently, some universities have abolished the major in education, forcing prospective teachers to master subject matter and, in the process, subjecting them to the intellectual discipline that a rigorous course of study entails. This welcome step should be duplicated universally.

Teachers, for their part, must accept competency testing if it is accompanied by greater financial reward and freedom from interfering administrators. Poor teachers who are worried about their jobs should be worried; they should not be teaching. Good teachers can only gain: as poor teachers are weeded out and increased salaries attract better people, the status of the teaching profession can only grow.

As important as education reform is, its equal application is more important. If half the people in a state have no education and therefore live in ignorance and poverty, the other half of the state ends up footing the bill through welfare, prisons, or lost economic growth. This brings us back to the question of finance.

Equal funding for every district in the state is a commendable goal, but it is financially and politically impossible under the current system. Therefore, lawmakers must enact a new system of public school finance, along with education reforms that will reduce ineffective waste and ensure the maximum result for every dollar spent.

Action on this front, now, could put future Texas budgets in the black.

It's just common sense.

Big Spring should not be undersold!!!

I'd assume most of the problems we face in this city lie in the laps of our City Fathers. I'd highly suggest you take a good look around in this low class dump town. Are we suppose to just grin and bare it? No! We should not! You have the availability to "Do". To be positive and not so damn negative. In my opinion, you have only managed to do very little to actually benefit Big Spring. So don't just sit there — do something. The future of Big Spring demands upon our City Council and Chamber of Commerce leaders to do more. Your attention please!

Survival award inappropriate

Editor's note: This letter was received after its publication was apparently refused in the Colorado City Record. It refers to a report about awards at a city function, including those to two officers involved in the fatal shooting of aggravated assault suspect Sammy Gomez.

To the editor:
After reading the Dec. 22 edition of the Colorado City Record, I was appalled of the happenings at the city awards banquet. It was bad enough that the two officers were never suspended. Now I read they were given a Survival Award. I guess the city never read the autopsy reports. It takes real brave men to shoot a person who is already on the floor. What's next? Running down people in wheelchairs?

I cannot believe the timing of this banquet. Does the city not care that it ripped the heart out of the Gomez family? I guess not. Now that it is Christmas, the city feels compelled to take that heart and stomp it in the ground.

I thought that the case concerning the shooting incident was still an open case. How can Colorado City justify giving awards to officers who are involved in a case still being investigated by the Attorney General's officers? It's like declaring Richard Nixon innocent of all charges because some of the tape was missing.

Planting your own legacies

By ROBERT WERNSMAN
The best time to plant a tree? Twenty years ago. The next best time? Today.

Those few lines carry a big message about our largest life forms. The time is upon us to consider a bit about trees, our need for them and what we can do about making this a better world through their development.

Thursday will mark the 100th anniversary of Arbor Day observance in Texas. The day, set aside originally in 1872, was a relatively simple gesture by a man named J. Sterling Morton for the planting of trees.

The fact the event initially began in Nebraska just makes it that much dearer to my heart, although no less meaningful for Texans who have picked up the banner and carried the message forward for the past century.

There's no doubt that the best time for planting and nurturing a tree was 20 years ago; the trees we may take for granted likely were planted a generation ago. That we enjoy and appreciate them is all the more reason to continue the tradition.

Besides a balanced budget and freedom from the threat of nuclear holocaust, there may not be a brighter legacy to leave our children and their children than a tree-strewn neighborhood.

How ironic that a native of Morton's native state should find himself in relatively tree-less West Texas, a fact bemoaned by many but a challenge that relatively few seem willing to assume. What trees mean to my own industry goes beyond words.

There is, obviously, more to Arbor Day than simply planting a tree. It is a day set aside not solely for the planting but a day on which the emphasis is also placed on the selection of the right tree in the proper location to improve the environment, commemorate an event or individual, and improve the economic and aesthetic value of both private and public property.

Efforts are being made by Texans in this regard. However, that is not to suggest that because others are doing something any one of us — who appreciates what a thriving tree represents — is relieved of the burden to do our share.

Texas Awareness Committee members, including state agency representatives and private organizations, have taken it upon themselves to help Texans better understand the planting and care of trees, as well as the many resulting benefits in their local communities.

They have established three primary goals:

- Show that sound tree planting and conservation policies can increase the chances that community environments will remain healthy and attractive, thus promoting growth and economic development;

- Increase the number of Texas communities involved in the Tree City U.S.A. program;

- Initiate various projects calling attention to and encouraging the planting of trees — including a statewide program to promote the celebration of Arbor Day in Texas beginning in 1990.

What can be done in West Texas? Are our options limited to mesquite trees, mesquite trees and more mesquite trees? I think not.

In fact, state landscape horticulturist William Welch has identified a dozen trees for this region considered best for adaptability, ease of culture and availability. They are: Bradford and Aristocrat Pear, Afghan Pine, Live Oak, Texas Red Oak, Bur Oak, Pecan, Honey Mesquite (of course), Desert Willow, Mexican Elderberry, Texas Mountain Laurel, Chinese Pistache and Soapberry.

Can expense stand in your way from making a difference? Hardly. Ten free Live Oak trees are yours for the asking with a $10 membership in the National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, Neb., 68410 by Jan. 31.

With proper planting and care procedures included, the six to 12-inch trees are guaranteed to grow or will be replaced free of charge.

You can't lose — and neither can your children, nor their children.

Skinheads meet to fight racism

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Dozens of Midwest skinheads converged here Saturday for a weekend of meetings, marches and partying, all with the goal of fighting the racism and violence espoused by rival skinhead groups.

They say the racist activities which have received widespread publicity are a perversion of the original philosophies of the skinhead movement, started by English working class youth who listened to Ska, a racially mixed music, and whose ranks included blacks.

Gang killings set new L.A. record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than one person died in a gang-related killing for every day of 1988 in Los Angeles County, said authorities who blamed the record number of deaths on turf and drug battles fought by well-armed street hoods.

Altogether, there were 452 gang-related slayings in the county, according to statistics compiled by all area law enforcement agencies and released by the sheriff's department on Friday. "There's more than one a day," said V.G. Guiness, a gang counselor. "That doesn't include kids on life support, or people handicapped or paralyzed" by bullet wounds.

Some authorities blamed the increased carnage on the more sophisticated weapons that gang members are purchasing with profits from illegal drug sales.

Consolidation of crash suits asked

CINCINNATI (AP) — An attorney has moved to consolidate all the lawsuits filed in the crash over Scotland of Pan Am Flight 103 for trial in U.S. District Court in Cincinnati.

Stanley M. Chesley's motion was filed Friday with the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation in Washington, which decides where to send cases after related lawsuits have been filed in two or more federal jurisdictions. "This court is set up to do it,"

Chesley said. "This court and its staff are accustomed to handling complex cases."

Pan Am's jet was en route to New York on Dec. 21 when a bomb exploded and the plane crashed, killing all 259 aboard and 11 people on the ground.

"It would be a challenge to prove that a court system designed in the 19th century to try one case at a time could adapt and handle something like this," Rubin said.

Anti-abortion group defies judge

PROTESTERS ARRESTED

NEW YORK (AP) — About 1,000 members of an anti-abortion group defied a federal judge's order and twice blocked the entrance to a Planned Parenthood clinic.

Police arrived and those Operation Rescue protesters not arrested Friday morning left, only to return en masse several hours later and lay down in front of the clinic.

One hundred seventy-six people were arrested, and all were charged with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. They refused to give their names and were held for arraignment, said Officer Edward Feeney.

U.S. District Judge Robert Ward issued a permanent injunction against the Binghamton-based group on Tuesday, forbidding members to obstruct access to abortion clinics in New York City.

YEREVAN, Soviet Armenia — Electrician Aikaz Akopyan, 50, rests after he and five other men were rescued after being trapped for 35 days in the basement of a Leninakan apartment building that collapsed in the Dec. 7 Armenian earthquake.

Miracle quake survival is apparently a hoax

MOSCOW (AP) — The sister of a man who claimed he and five companions survived 35 days in the rubble of the Armenian earthquake says the story was made up so her brother could get into a good hospital, Soviet media reported Saturday.

The Tass news agency said reporters had tracked down Aikaz Akopyan's sister, Julietta, who Akopyan said witnessed his rescue Jan. 11 from the ruins of his nine-story apartment building in the city of Leninakan.

Neither officials nor local journalists had been able to find his sister or the five other people reportedly rescued with Akopyan. They could find no witnesses to the reported rescue.

"At first the sister denied her kinship with Akopyan but later on acknowledged that it was she who had brought Aikaz to the Yerevan hospital and that he really was her brother," Tass said.

"According to her words, it appears that on Jan. 6 Aikaz requested her to drive him to a good Yerevan hospital and it was on the way to Yerevan that a story of rescue after 35 days was ostensibly invented," Tass said.

The government newspaper Izvestia said Akopyan's sister made up the rescue story "because she wanted to put her brother in a good hospital." It based its report on an interview with an unidentified Leninakan resident, who it said was present when Tass spoke to the woman. Tass quoted Lt. Col. V. Kozlov of the Armenian civil defense medical service as saying that according to data he had available, Akopyan was rescued five days after the Dec. 7 earthquake, and that on Jan. 6 he had sought drugs from Leninakan hospital for an allergy. But he added that there are many people with the last name Akopyan in Leninakan.

However, the news agency said Akopyan, now in a hospital in Yerevan, was sticking to his story and that doctors could not rule out the possibility it was true. It said reporters still had been unable to clarify all details of the case and that Akopyan had threatened to jump out of the window in his hospital room if reporters didn't leave him alone.

Doctors "regard the threat as quite realistic," Tass said. Tass reported Thursday the rescue from the ruins of the quake that killed about 25,000 people. That night, the 50-year-old electrician was shown in his hospital bed on Soviet television.

But the news agency cast doubt on the story the following day, saying that no witnesses had been found. "Everyone wanted to believe in the Leninakan miracle," it said.

Akopyan said he and the five others had gone to the basement of the apartment building to haul out two large kegs when the earthquake struck.

Plan proposed to save jungle

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — A team of visiting U.S. legislators has proposed that Brazil convert portions of its foreign debt payments to protect the Amazon jungle from deforestation, a foreign ministry spokesman said.

The spokesman, Ruy Nogueira, said the American commission made its proposals Friday to Brazilian President Jose Sarney during a private session at his official residence in Brasilia.

Nogueira said the American delegation made no official declarations, but sketched several proposals in which Brazil would use portions of its foreign debt payments to create environmental preservation.

Cypriot claims to be 135 years old

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — To live 135 years you need Islam, fresh food, mountain air and farming, according to an Iranian man who claims to be the oldest alive.

The Islamic Republic News Agency reported Saturday that Karam Ahmadi, of Kalan village in western Ilam province, is 135 years old and still working his farm.

Ahmadi claims never to have taken any modern medication, according to IRNA, which was monitored in Nicosia. It said that in addition to farming, Ahmadi still takes his sheep to pasture and collects wood for his winter fuel. He has five children and 65 grandchildren or great-grandchildren.

Millions seek mystical salvation

ALLAHABAD, India (AP) — Scarlet-robed holy men arrived on magnificent chariots and plunged into the confluence of three rivers on Saturday, the beginning of a mystical celebration of a rare planetary alignment.

Chanting hymns, the first bathers on Saturday offered milk and flowers as the seven-week holy fair known as "Kumbh Mela" began. Millions are expected to take part.

An estimated 30 million to 40 million people are expected to bathe at the confluence of the Ganga, Yamuna and mythical Saraswati rivers during the fair, which takes its name from a fight between gods and demons over a pot of nectar.

The most auspicious time to seek salvation, according to the Hindu faith, is when Jupiter is in Taurus and the sun and moon are in Capricorn, a configuration that occurs every 12 years.

Body of pilot returned to U.S.

ROME (AP) — A U.S. Air Force jet Saturday carried homeward the body of an American pilot killed three years ago in the bombing of Libya, which said it released the remains as a "humanitarian initiative."

Italian and American medical experts identified the body Friday as that of Air Force Maj. Fernando Ribas Dominici, 33, of Utuado, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Embassy said.

Salvador Ribas Dominici, a brother of the slain pilot, said the family does not trust Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi and wants the Pentagon to conduct another autopsy.

Libya had said the body it flew to Rome on Friday was that of Capt. Paul Lorence, 31, of San Francisco, who was in the plane with Ribas Dominici during the raid over Libya on April 15, 1986.

Television standards loosening

NEW YORK (AP) — When George Carlin's comedy routine on the "seven dirty words" was broadcast by a radio station in 1978, it prompted a U.S. Supreme Court ruling on indecency.

A decade later, a character on the hit network sitcom "Designing Women" used a derivative of one of those words in describing another character who was obsessed with enlarging her bosom.

No, it isn't just imagination. Network standards are loosening up.

"The networks are being more lenient, and I think the reason is a five-letter word — C-A-B-L-E," said Harry Thomason, executive producer of "Designing Women."

Sexually explicit language and situations on network television have produced occasional complaints, but audiences are apparently rather blasé after being presented a variety of R-rated cable fare, not to mention videocassettes. A.C. Nielsen Co. estimates that 62.2 percent of U.S. homes with televisions also have a VCR.

The networks, faced with remote-control "grazing," cable options and videocassettes, are having to loosen up or lose

"I get a lot of discussion on it, but really when you sit down and look at it and hear what's said, I don't really hear anybody complaining," said Art Chapman, president of the Television Critics Association.

Michaels complained about his battle with network censors over a sketch whose purpose was to see how often actors could say the word for the male sex organ on network TV. This season, the sketch got on the air.

"The average family in a major urban center can have access to 30-plus different television signals, not to mention home video, (where) they can see explicit language, full nudity and simulated sex in far more graphic and strong ways than you've ever seen on network television," says Alan Gerson, NBC vice president for program marketing and administration.

He says networks are loosening standards, but carefully keeping back from the "cutting edge" of change.

"We're not changing first," Gerson said. Do viewers mind?

"The average family in a major urban center can have access to 30-plus different television signals, not to mention home video, (where) they can see explicit language, full nudity and simulated sex in far more graphic and strong ways than you've ever seen on network television," says Alan Gerson, NBC vice president for program marketing and administration.

viewers. NBC, the No. 1 network, broadcast "Favorite Son," a political potboiler spiced up with scenes of sexual bondage.

In an episode of ABC's "thirtysomething," a wife crawled around on the floor in search of a fumbled diaphragm.

Last season, "Saturday Night Live" executive producer Lorne

"I get a lot of discussion on it, but really when you sit down and look at it and hear what's said, I don't really hear anybody complaining," said Art Chapman of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, president of the Television Critics Association.

"The fact is," he said, "whether you like it or not, it does produce ratings, which means that people are watching it." "There are three groups of viewers out there," said Dorothy Swanson, head of Virginia-based Viewers for Quality Television. "There's your group that would really like to see more (explicit material). They enjoy that. It's interesting, and it's entertaining, and it's fun."

"Then there's another group that are your prudes who really feel that there shouldn't be a single dirty word, no open-mouthed kissing, no bedroom scenes. Those people are going to always object, and they must be just screaming right about now."

"And then there's the group that just accepts it and keeps their eye on it and turns the dial if they don't like it."

When the radio station broadcast Carlin's "seven dirty words" routine — Carlin was explaining that there are seven words not allowed to be broadcast — a complaint to the Federal Communications Commission prompted a lawsuit that led to the Supreme Court ruling. The FCC does not get involved in network standards, but investigates complaints against the stations that it licenses.

A complaint about a network show would have to meet the FCC's definition of indecency before action would be taken. Indecency is described as "patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium."

For network censors, "community standards" apply to a global village, where a "community" can be a time period or a demographic group. The changing expectations of television audiences have changed the stereotypical scissor-wielding censor into something of ad hoc sociologist.

Judge says Goetz shows no remorse

By SAMUEL MAULL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Bernhard Goetz, who was sentenced to one year in jail for shooting four black men in a subway with an unlicensed gun, says the violence resulted from "the deterioration of society."

The 41-year-old electronics engineer was also ordered Friday to pay a $5,000 fine by state Judge Stephen Crane, who said Goetz had shown no remorse for his actions.

"I do feel this case is really more about the deterioration of society than it is about me," said Goetz, whose 1984 shootings of the men he said were trying to rob him prompted debates on racism, self-defense and vigilantism.

Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples "seemed, I'm sorry to say, to believe that society needs to be protected from me," Goetz said.

"Well, I don't believe that's the case," he said. "I believe society needs to be protected from criminals." Goetz fled to New Hampshire after the shootings and later surrendered. He told police he fired the .38-caliber revolver in self-defense because he felt he was about to be robbed; the men claimed they were panhandling.

Three of the four, all 19 at the time, recovered from the shooting. One, Darrell Cabey, was left brain-damaged and partially paralyzed.

Goetz was acquitted of attempted murder and other charges in his June 1987 trial. An appeals court upheld the gun possession conviction last year, but threw out the original six-month jail sentence, saying it did not meet the requirements under state law, which mandates a one-year sentence.

Under the one-year jail sentence, Goetz gets credit for the nine days he served immediately after his arrest, becoming eligible for parole in 51 days.

Goetz, who faced a new sentence of up to seven years, decided to go ahead with the sentencing — even though he has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to review the case — because he wants to get the jail time over with, said his attorney, Mark Baker.

His other attorney, Barry Slotnick, had asked the judge to limit Goetz's sentence to the nine days he already served, pleading, "Let him go home where he belongs. . . . He has lived in a fish bowl and he should not go to jail."

The prosecutor said Goetz "richly deserves to be punished" and called him "a potential danger to himself and New York society." Waples sought a one-year sentence with supervised parole so Goetz would be forced to undergo psychiatric treatment.

Crane said Goetz's failure to show remorse for the crime "gave me concern he might recidivate in possessing a firearm" and added that a jail term "would not be unduly harsh."

Goetz left immediately for the Rikers Island jail. The Correction Department agreed to a defense request that Goetz be kept in protective custody there, said Baker.

Two jurors from Goetz's trial attended Friday's sentencing: Catherine Brody, a college librarian, and Diana Serpe, an airline reservations clerk.

"We felt we were so intensely involved and we had to follow it through," said Brody. "The problem is, it is the law, and as it is the law, we feel it has to be followed or a signal is sent that the law doesn't mean anything."

Ron Kuby, a lawyer representing Cabey in a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against Goetz, called the sentence an outrage and said it "gives license to bigots and lunatics all over the city of New York to go out and blast people who they hate and fear."

"I have spoken to Mrs. Cabey (Darrell's mother)," Kuby said. "She expected this but she is disappointed. She was hoping a stiff sentence would prevent other people from going out and doing to black youth what Bernhard Goetz did to Darrell Cabey. Unfortunately, that's not going to happen."

Good timing for Alaska crunch

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — The letter couldn't have come at a better time for Alaska.

Just as legislators were preparing to cut the budget or impose new taxes in the wake of declining oil revenues, Money magazine came to the rescue.

"Let that alarm clock ring, State of Alaska. You're financially independent and don't ever have to work again!" the magazine proclaimed in a letter addressed to the state.

"Dear S. Alaska: What a thought! To be so rich that you could do whatever you want. Whenever you want. Virtually anywhere you please," the letter continued.

Alaska has won a chance at the magazine's $2 million "Double-Your-Million Sweepstakes" drawing, offered to attract new subscriptions.

Because computers know only what they're told, and because a state office in Juneau is on a mailing list under "State of Alaska" and the magazine used that list for its promotion, the contest letter ended up in the state mailroom.

"If we win this and every other sweepstakes, Alaska will be over its budget troubles," said David Ramseur, a spokesman for Gov. Steve Cowper.

The letter also includes a warning often heard in Alaska: "Remember, millionaires who handle their money badly aren't millionaires for long."

Commission reviews case of Judge Hampton

AUSTIN (AP) — Gay and lesbian groups say they will seek other ways to oust a judge who said he gave a lighter sentence to a killer partly because the victims were "queers" if a state commission doesn't take action.

The State Commission on Judicial Conduct began its inquiry into state District Court Judge Jack Hampton of Dallas on Friday. The 11-member commission of judges and private citizens meets behind closed doors and does not discuss pending cases.

"We, at this point are going to let the commission do its job," said Glen Maxey, executive director of the Lesbian Gay Rights Lobby of Texas. But he said the commission's secret deliberations were a "hideous situation."

About two dozen protesters gathered outside the building where the commission met and called for Hampton's removal from the bench, but said should that fail, they could always find other ways.

Hampton, a Republican, is up for re-election in 1990.

Last month, Hampton said he sentenced 18-year-old Richard Bednarski to 30 years in prison instead of a maximum life sentence because the two men he killed were homosexuals.

"These two guys that got killed wouldn't have been killed if they hadn't been cruising the streets picking up teen-age boys," Hampton told the Dallas Times Herald.

Bednarski was convicted of the murders of Tommy Lee Trimble, 34, and John Lloyd Griffin, 27, who were found shot to death in a Dallas park.

"I don't care much for queers cruising the streets picking up teen-age boys. I've got a teen-age boy," Hampton told the newspaper.

His remarks sparked continuing protests from homosexual and civil liberties groups.

"It's absolutely intolerable to have a bigot use that kind of language when he's supposed to be in the business of dispensing equal justice," said Tom Doyal, who heads one of several groups that have filed complaints against Hampton with the commission.

Judge considers a trustee for Hunt case

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge says he will appoint a trustee if necessary to oversee business affairs of William Herbert Hunt unless the businessman agrees to give information about his dealings to creditors in his bankruptcy case.

Bankruptcy Judge Harold Abramson said Friday a trustee, to be named "if appropriate," would monitor all transactions involving Hunt and the various businesses he controls.

Hunt's major creditors are concerned the recent purchase of a North-Dallas office building by a company controlled by Hunt from a company controlled by his son, Douglas, may have violated the court-approved operating plan.

Major creditors are the Internal Revenue Service, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and a Peruvian minerals company. Combined, they have more than $1 billion in claims against Hunt and his brother, Nelson Bunker Hunt, both of whom filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection

Officers killed in car chase

DALLAS (AP) — Police discovered the stolen car Saturday that three officers chased until slamming into a truck, killing two, but continued to search for the driver.

The officers were chasing the stolen vehicle on a rain-slickened major street on the city's south side Friday night when their car went out of control, crossed the median and collided nearly head-on with a pickup truck.

Officer Lisa Louise Sandel, 27, died about 11:22 p.m. Friday at Parkland Memorial Hospital. Her partner, Mark Fleming, 24, died after emergency surgery at Parkland about 5 a.m. Saturday.

An officer-trainee riding in the back of the police car was critically injured and the driver of the pickup was injured. Both remained hospitalized Saturday.

Wet highway surface conditions played a part in the crash that occurred on Ledbetter Road just east of Interstate 45, but police said there was no evidence of snow or ice on the road. The National Weather Service had issued a winter storm advisory for sleet and snow in North Texas Friday evening.

The driver of the car the officers chased remained at large Saturday, said police spokesman Ed Spencer. "We have no suspects," he said Saturday afternoon, but the stolen car was recovered Saturday morning.

A patrol squad discovered the Oldsmobile in a residential area in southeast Dallas, in "the general vicinity of the accident," Spencer said.

The driver of the stolen car faces charges in connection with the vehicle's theft and evading arrest, he said.

The officer-trainee, Nathaniel White, 25, was in critical condition at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas with head and internal injuries, a hospital spokeswoman said. White, who has a short time remaining in the police academy, was riding in the car to observe a night shift.

Willie Earl Henderson, 62, the driver of the pickup truck, underwent abdominal surgery at Chariton Methodist Hospital in Duncanville Saturday morning and was in fair condition, said nursing supervisor Kay Anderson.

Ms. Sandel and Fleming are the first two Dallas Police Department officers to die in the line of duty in 1989.

A new Dallas County sheriff's deputy was killed earlier this month while on duty at the county jail by a man who had been released a few hours earlier from the facility.

Last year, a record five Dallas officers died, all in shooting incidents.

"What occurred last year was just unprecedented," Spencer said. "This today coming so close behind the killing of the deputy sheriff is just shocking."

Ms. Sandel had joined the department in March 1987. Fleming also had been with the department less than two years. Both officers were assigned to the police department's Southwest Division. White joined the police academy in September 1988.

White's wife, Tammie, said the crash won't dissuade her husband from continuing in police work.

"He'll go back to it, I'm sure of that," she said. "And when he does, he'll be a damn good police officer. My husband is a person who wants to help anybody he can."

Aid targeted to low-income home buyers

DALLAS (AP) — Texans who earn as little as $15,000 a year could qualify for special federal loans for first-time homebuyers, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm was to announce today.

Gramm was scheduled to join Federal Housing Commissioner Thomas T. Demery, Texas Housing Agency Chairman Kenneth G. deJarnett, and Region 6 Housing and Urban Development Administrator Sam Moseley in an early morning press conference at a local HUD home to discuss a pilot housing program for low- to mid-income Texans.

If the pilot program is successful, authorities said it could be offered nationwide.

In a prepared statement issued Friday, Gramm said the program "can change the face of low-income housing in America. It helps the most deserving of low-income workers achieve the highest economic aspiration of Americans: home ownership."

The program, which includes an undisclosed amount of federal funds, is designed to reduce Texas' surplus of foreclosed properties by offering qualifying first-time homebuyers low-interest loans.

Some 4,000 of the homes, which will be made available through the Texas Housing Agency, are located in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Steers lead district after win

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
For the Herald

The Andrews Mustangs stamped into Big Spring Friday night sporting a number four ranking in the state, and a very impressive 19-2 season record, and with both they and the Big Spring Steers sporting identical records of 4-0 in the boys 4-4A action.

The Steers surprised the visitors on a fallaway jumper at the buzzer by junior Joe Downey and went on to defeat the Andrews Mustangs 74-73, taking sole possession of first place.

"We used the same play in the Caprock tournament against Wichita Falls and it worked there. I was hoping we could do the same tonight, and we did," said Big Spring Coach Boyce Paxton. "This team is really coming together; everybody played great tonight, we beat a great team."

Both teams went at one another as if determined to beat the other into the ground.

Andrews' Damon Clay opened the scoring as teammate Scot Collins rebounded a Steer miscue to put the fourth ranked Ponies on top early. Senior Thane Russey answered for Big Spring to tie the game at 2-2.

Throughout most of the quarter, neither team led by more than one point, as the seesaw battle continued. With 1:21 left, Andrews led 19-16 as Clay hit again.

Big Spring's Abner Shellman took the ball downcourt and put up a ten-footer, but the ball hit the rim of the goal. Shellman rebounded his missed shot and followed through to put the Steers within one.

After a costly Andrews turnover, the Steers brought the ball downcourt, led by Lewis. Doug Young popped a three-pointer at the buzzer to give the Steers a 21-19 lead, as the home crowd roared with approval.

only one turnover, the home team turned the ball over twice and Andrews' Gym Bice connected, keeping the Mustangs in the game. Andrews went on a 14-7 run, and with 2:58 left before halftime, the visiting team had a 33-30 lead.

Everytime the Ponies seemed to run away with the game, however, the Steers would fight back. The Big Spring five managed to outscore the Mustangs 8-5 in the final three minutes, acting on Paxton's reminder to have patience.

The half ended with the score 38-38, illustrating the rough battle both team were displaying on the court.

Andrews showed why they were rated in the top ten early in the third, as Clay broke on a fast break to score a basket. Russey retaliated as Shellman found his teammate under the basket all alone.

Bice scored with 5:23 left in the third quarter, and the Mustangs converted another turnover to garner their biggest lead of the night at six points.

After both teams miscued on passes, Bice hit the last of his three three-pointers. Russey and Shellman scored the Steers' next two baskets to keep the home team within range.

With 1:08 left in the third, and the score 53-50 in favor of the Ponies, Downey picked up a loose ball on the floor and put it through the hoop to score.

Freshmen grab tournament title

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Black team rode the scoring of forwards Rod White and Nick Roberson, and relied on a furious trapping press to defeat the Abilene Cooper Red team 64-56 in the finals of the Big Spring Freshmen Boys Invitational Tournament Saturday night at Steer Gym.

In winning the tournament, the Steers raised their record to 17-1 for the season. This was their second tournament championship in as many tries. Last week they won the Andrews tournament.

White poured in 25 points to lead all scorers, Roberson added 17, and they constantly battled the much taller Cooper front line. The Steer defense was keyed by the quick hands and feet of guards Gerald Cobos and Patrick Chavarria.

Big Spring led from the start, taking an 11-point lead after creating four Cooper turnovers. John Downey and Roberson scored easy baskets and Big Spring led 16-7 with 2:25 left in the first quarter.

Roberson hit a 10-foot jumper off an assist from Chavarria, and the Steers led 19-10 going into the second quarter.

In the second quarter the Steers slowly padded their lead. With 56 seconds remaining in the half, Big Spring ran the clock down to seven seconds before Cobos fed White inside for two. White was fouled on the play, and he made the foul shot, completing the three-point play and giving the Steers a 36-20 halftime cushion.

Cooper slowly made a run at Big Spring after intermission behind the scoring of John Baack and Mike Ferry. Ferry, who ended the game with 17 points, nailed a jumper and the Coogs pulled to within 43-34 with 3:07 left in the quarter. Cooper made two baskets at the end of the quarter, pulling to within 49-40 going into the final eight minutes of play.

Cooper quickly cut the lead to 49-42 on a basket by Chris Trumphour at the start of the fourth quarter. A few minutes later, Trumphour made a foul shot, pulling the Coogs to within 53-47 with 5:17 left in the game.

But that's as close as the visitors would get, as White and Roberson led the Steers on a 5-0 run in the next minutes, pushing the lead back to double digits, 58-47 with 4:15 left in the game.

Cooper will get a chance for revenge Thursday when they host the Steers in two freshmen games starting at 6 p.m.

Lady Steers regain winning ways by blasting Andrews

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

ANDREWS — The Big Spring High School Lady Steers overcame a sluggish start — and a troublesome Andrews defense — to swamp the Lady Mustangs, 67-40, in District 4-4A girls' basketball action here Friday night.

Tami Wise scored 26 points, Peggy Smith 14 and Debbie Pulver 10 to pace the Lady Steers, who improved their record to 18-3 overall, 6-1 in district play. Andrews, led by Paulette Jones' 15 points, fell to 4-3 in district action, 9-11 overall.

Big Spring coach C.E. Carmichael expressed satisfaction with his teams' win, especially coming on the heels of a disappointing loss to Sweetwater earlier in the week.

"I think we showed that we're not conceding anything to Sweetwater, or anybody else in district," Carmichael said. "We still have a goal of winning the district championship."

"We played hard," he said of Friday's game. "All the three-pointers (Andrews made late in the game) made the score closer, but I thought we controlled the game throughout."

TAMI WISE

Early in the game, however, it appeared that the Lady Steers would be in for a dogfight. Big Spring shot 25 percent from the field in the first quarter against the Lady Mustangs' 2-3 zone that featured a double-team against Wise.

DEBBIE PULVER

But if the Lady Steers were cold in the game's opening moments, Andrews was positively ice-bound. The Lady Mustangs managed just a field goal and a pair of free throws from Christia Rogers en route to a 9-4 first-quarter deficit.

Mataya Maxie canned a jumper and Jones a free throw to reduce the Big Spring lead to 11-7 early in the second quarter, but the Lady Steers — paced by Pulver, Wise and Jennifer Hendleman — responded with a 17-2 run to give the visitors control of the game.

Pulver scored six points and Wise and Hendleman four apiece during the stretch to give Big Spring a 28-8 halftime lead.

Wise took care of any Andrews' comeback hopes by erupting for 20 of her points during the second half. She scored 12 of those points during the third quarter to help stretch the Lady Steers' lead to 46-22 going into the final quarter.

Big Spring increased its lead to 32 points during the fourth quarter before Jones hit three three-point shots and Pulver Jones one in the late stages to close the margin.

"(Andrews) used a special defense on Tami early in the game," Carmichael said. "They finally had to come out of it, though, and Tami took over."

"That's a big compliment to her when teams put two or three people on her," Carmichael said. "She's just going to have to work hard, and the other (Lady Steers) are going to have to take up the slack."

Big Spring finished the first half of its district schedule in second place, one game behind Sweetwater in the standings. Carmichael warned that his team cannot afford to look ahead to its rematch with the league leaders.

"The old coach's cliché of taking them one at a time fits us right now," he said. "But our goals (winning district) remain the same."

The Lady Steers are off Tuesday for semester exams before they begin second-half play in San LADY STEERS page 3-B

SWC roundup

Arkansas 93, Southern Methodist 73

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Keith Wilson keyed a spurt late in the first half that helped the University of Arkansas hand Southern Methodist University its first Southwest Conference loss, 93-73 on Saturday.

Wilson, the Razorbacks' only senior, topped six Arkansas players in double figures with 15.

Arkansas was leading by one point with less than four minutes to go in the first half when Wilson stole the ball and converted a three-point play for 40-36. Kato Armstrong cut it to two, but Wilson drove for a basket and then made a 3-pointer for a 45-40 advantage. Wilson came up with a loose ball and got it to Larry Marks who made two free throws for a seven-point advantage. Wilson then fed the ball inside to Marks for a 49-41 lead.

Lenzie Howell, who scored all 12 of his points in the second half, got two quick baskets early and Arkansas was on top by 12. Two baskets by Howell and two 3-pointers by Arlyn Bowers contributed to a 12-0 run that put Arkansas in front 73-64. SMU never got closer than 13 the rest of the way.

Eric Longino, who led all scorers with 26 points, made six of nine from 3-point range for the Mustangs. He scored 16 in the first half. Kato Armstrong, who had been extremely successful in previous appearances against Arkansas, scored 12 in the first half, but managed only two free throws in the second half. Glenn Puddy scored 14 for the Mustangs.

Texas 88, Houston 86

HOUSTON (AP) — Joey Wright scored five of his 16 points in the final 2:53, including the winning shot at the buzzer, leading Texas to an 88-86 Southwest Conference victory over Houston Saturday night.

Houston's Craig Upchurch, who led the Cougars with 32 points, tied the game with 32 seconds left and the Longhorns played for the final shot.

Lance Blanks missed a shot followed by a miss by Wright and then Wright made good on his second shot for the game winner.

The Longhorns now are 12-3 for the season and 3-1 in SWC play. Houston dropped to 9-6 and 1-2.

Alvin Heggs led Texas with 25 points but played much of the second half with four fouls.

He hit four straight baskets to start the second half that boosted the Longhorns' 54-51 halftime lead to 64-55.

The Cougars then outscored the Longhorns 15-4 and knotted the score at 70-70 but a 3-point play by Travis Mays with 8:30 to play gave the lead back to Texas.

Houston tied the game at 81-81 on a basket by Upchurch and at 82-82 on a pair of free throws by Upchurch.

Swimmers blast Panthers in dual meet

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
For the Herald

The Big Spring Steers ran away with a 48-31 point win, as they had little trouble downing the Fort Stockton Panthers in a dual meet here Saturday afternoon.

In the boys first event — the 160-yard medley relay — the team of Shane Higgins, Bryan Gordon, Ricky Grimsley, and Russ Roten swam with first place timed to a 1:41:40, compared to the Panthers relay team with a 1:49:27.

In the 200 freestyle, Johnny Webb swept his competition despite a bout with the flu earlier in the week to record a 2:05:03. His nearest challenge was John Hayter of Ft. Stockton with a 2:11:45. In the 160-yard individual medley, Billy Diaz placed second with a 2:00:44, while teammate Bryan Gordon placed third with a 2:04:77.

Chris Fuqua finished second in the 60-yard freestyle with a 30:34, while teammate Chase Fraser clocked in at a 30:63 for third.

The diving competition pitted two Big Spring divers against each other, as no Panther entered the event. Bryan Gordon came in first with a 162.40 while teammate Bill Carey scored a 130.55. At this point the Steers led the Panthers, 23-13, with six events to go.

In the 100-yard butterfly, Fraser and Grimsley placed second and third respectively to increase the Steer lead in the dual meet. Fuqua won his first event — the 100-yard freestyle — with an impressive 53:92, while Ft. Stockton captured second and third.

Johnny Webb crushed everyone in the 500-yard freestyle with an 5:41:50, his closest competition coming from Panther Jose Castrejon with a 6:35:49. Billy Diaz increased the Steer lead with a first place 1:09:25 in the 100-yard backstroke.

The 100-yard breaststroke, Roten and Higgins placed second and third with a 1:17:09 and 1:22:42, respectively. In the boys final event, the 400 yard freestyle relay, Webb, Fraser, Fuqua, and Diaz demolished the competition with a 3:52:88.

In girls' action, the Lady Steers ran over the Lady Panthers with a 36-8 victory. Leading the way for the home team was Sally Lopez and teammates Erika Clarkson, Dena Perez, Debra McMillian and Michelle Hewitt.

Fort Stockton's only female swimmer was Christy Card, who won the 100 breaststroke and 60 freestyle.

Individually, Big Spring's Sally Lopez won the 100 butterfly (1:30:44) and 500 freestyle (7:48:34) and Erika Clarkson won the 100 freestyle (1:08:54) and 100 backstroke (1:21:70).

Big Spring will compete in the Monahans Invitational Saturday.

Gophers down Iowa on buzzer-beater

By The Associated Press

Minnesota got two points on Jim Shikenjanski's only basket of the game, a tip-in with two seconds left, and upset fifth-ranked Iowa 80-78 Saturday in what easily ranked as the biggest victory in Clem Haskins' three years as Gophers coach.

"I've coached in many big games, but this will go down as one of the best — if not the biggest — win in my career," Haskins said. "This game means a lot to us. This sent a message across the country that the Gophers have turned the corner."

With the score tied 78-78, Ray Gaffney missed a 7-foot jumper for the Gophers, and Walter Bond's tip missed. Shikenjanski got his hand on the rebound and the ball just crawled over the rim into the basket.

"I thought it was going to come out like all my other shots," Shikenjanski said. "It sat on the rim for a long time."

Iowa, 13-2 and 1-1 in the Big Ten, called a timeout with one second left, and Wade Lookingbill hit Roy Marble with a fullcourt pass. Marble sank an 18-footer, but basket was disallowed. Time had expired.

Minnesota outscored Iowa 16-7 at the start of the second half to take a 53-52 lead, the Gophers' first since going ahead 2-0.

Iowa coach Tom Davis said the Gophers "have been showing signs that they are a good team — and a very good team at home. I just want to congratulate Clem and Minnesota."

Willie Burton had 28 points for Minnesota, 9-4 and 1-2. Ed Horton led Iowa with 21.

TOP TEN

No. 1 Duke 82, Maryland 72
Danny Ferry had six of his 22 points in a 14-0 run in the second half that carried Duke past Maryland and, at 13-0, gave the Blue Devils their second best start ever. Quin Snyder added five points in the decisive run that gave Duke a 58-41 lead with 11:40 to play. Duke held Maryland scoreless over a 3:12 span.

The only season in which the Blue Devils had a better start was 1985-86 when they opened with 16 straight victories.

The Terps got within 74-70 with 1:28 left, but two free throws apiece by Robert Brickley, John Smith and Snyder put the game away.

Maryland has lost six in a row.
No. 2 Illinois 96, No. 4 Michigan 84
Kendall Gill scored 26 points, and Illinois got the better of a battle of second-half rallies as the Fighting Illini remained unbeaten with a Big Ten victory over Michigan.

Illinois led by 15 points before the Wolverines went on a 9-0 run that cut the lead to 78-74 with 6:03 to play. Rumeal Robinson had four points in the run. But the Illini then scored 10 straight points, five by Nick Anderson, to lead 84-74 with 4:13 left.

Illinois is 15-0, one victory short of the school's best start ever, and 3-0 in the Big Ten. Michigan, led by Glen Rice's 30 points, is 14-2 and 2-1.

St. John's 65, No. 4 Syracuse 63
Down by 13 points with 16 minutes left, St. John's rallied for an upset of 4 Syracuse and its third straight Big East Conference victory. The Orangemen, 14-3 and 1-3 in the conference, played most of the game without Sherman Douglas, their leading scorer, who pulled a lower back muscle with less than two minutes gone.

"St. John's took it away from us," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said, "and that was possible because of no Sherman."

Billy Singleton and Matt Brust each hit short jumpers in the final 1½ minutes for St. John's.

No. 10 Missouri 96, Iowa St. 71
Doug Smith had 20 points, and Missouri got off to an early lead against Iowa State in breezing to a Big Eight victory.

Missouri, 14-3, broke away from a 22-22 tie with a 15-7 run that put the Tigers ahead 37-29 with 3:36 left in the first half. The Tigers built the lead to 52-37 with 17:26 to play and never led by less than 11 points after that.

Byron Irvin had 19 for the Tigers.

SEVENTH

No. 12 Arizona 95, Oregon 71
Anthony Cook scored 23 points, including a slam dunk that gave Arizona a 62-37 lead, as the Wildcats beat Oregon in the Pacific-10 Conference. Oregon got within 62-47 after running off 10 straight puts, but the Wildcats, 11-2, outscored the Ducks 16-6 to lead 78-53 with 7:48 to play.

Sean Elliot, the Arizona All-American who has been struggling through a scoring drought, had his second straight 11-point game, but he did hit a 3-pointer during an 11-1 run that got Arizona off to an early lead.

No. 15 N.C. State 82, Ga. Tech 68
Rodney Moore scored 26 points, and Chris Corchiani helped hold Georgia Tech's high-scoring Tom Hammonds to just nine points in their ACC game as North Carolina State won its ninth straight. Hammonds had scored 100 points in his last three games, and the Yellow Jackets had won four straight.

At one point in the second half, the 6-foot-9 Hammonds became so frustrated that he pushed the 6-foot Corchiani to the floor. An intentional foul was called, Corchiani hit both free throws, and N.C. State led 55-37 with 16:05 to play. N.C. State is 11-1.

No. 16 Kansas 75, Kansas St. 74
Milt Newton hit two free throws with 30 seconds left in overtime, leading Kansas over Kansas State in the first Big Eight game played in the Wildcats' new Bramlage Coliseum. Newton finished with 21 points.

LaKeith Humphrey sent the game into overtime for Kansas State, hitting a 3-pointer from well beyond the line to make it 68-68 with one second to play.

Kansas, 8-4, led by as many as 10 before Kansas State rallied.

No. 18 Ohio St. 83, Michigan St. 81
Jay Burson's 13-footer with four seconds left snapped an 81-81 tie and boosted Ohio State over Michigan State in a Big Ten game that saw 29 ties or lead changes. Burson had 15 of his 19 points in the second half, while Perry Carter had 22 points for the Buckeyes, 12-3.

Kirk Manns hit a 15-foot jumper to tie the score for Michigan State after James Bradley of Ohio State missed the front end of a 1-and-1 with 44 seconds left and a chance to put it away.

UNRANKED

Indiana 92, Northwestern 76
Indiana coach Bob Knight led his 50th coaching victory as the Hoosiers scored 22 points and keyed a 14-point run in the second half that led Indiana over Northwestern in the Big Ten.

In his 24th year of coaching, the 48-year-old Knight now is 500-183. In 18 years at Indiana, his record is 398-133.

Coach boycotts academic proposal

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Georgetown coach John Thompson, deciding mere words were not enough to demonstrate his anger over a toughened NCAA rule on scholarships, felt that a dramatic gesture was better.

Thompson was to walk off the court following the tipoff of Saturday night's Big East game between his seventh-ranked Hoyas and Boston College. The move was to protest proposal No. 42, a rule that would impose harsher academic requirements for incoming freshmen.

After being defeated on Tuesday, the proposal passed on Wednesday by a 163-154 vote.

"In an effort to rekindle discussion in this proposal... I will not be on the bench in an NCAA-sanctioned Georgetown basketball game until I am satisfied that something has been done," Thompson said Friday. He said the protest would "bring attention to something I think is a tremendous tragedy."

He did not indicate how long he intended to continue his protest.

Proposal 42, which is to go into effect in 1990, would prevent high school students who meet only part of the NCAA's entrance criteria from receiving scholarships their first year in college. It applies to athletes who fail to score 700 (out of a possible 1,600) on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or a 15 (out of 36) on the American College Test, and a 2.0 grade-point average in a high school core curriculum of 11 subjects.

Thompson purposely refused to label the proposal as racist, but did call it "discriminatory."

He planned to have his assistant coaches, Mike Riley and Craig Esherrick, run the team in his place. He said whichever assistant prepares the scouting report for the game will act as head coach, and it was Riley who scouted Boston College.

Boston College coach Jim O'Brien applauded Thompson's action, saying his lofty stature among college coaches helps make it a very effective demonstration.

"John Thompson is clearly one of most recognizable coaches in America," O'Brien said. "He's in charge of one of premier teams in the country."

Lady Wranglers win battle of boards; down HC Queens

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

ODESSA — The Odessa College Lady Wranglers got the job done underneath.

The Lady Wranglers dominated the boards and powered their way to a 73-66 win over the Howard College Hawk-Queens in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play Friday night.

In gaining their first conference win in three tries, the Lady Wranglers outboarded the Queens 54-32. OC's trapping halfcourt press and tight man-to-man defense forced 27 Howard turnovers.

The loss leaves Howard winless in two conference tilts. The Queens fall to 9-10 overall. Odessa raises its record to 12-7.

"Rebounding was the big deal in this game," said Howard coach Don Stevens after the loss. "Odessa is not a strong outside shooting team. We had to stop them from taking two, three and four shots at the basket, and we didn't do it."

Pateria Riders and Lowanda Bonner led OC's rebounding barrage, combining for 21 boards. They had ample help from Janice Holiday, Stephanie Sanford, Lisa Dumas and Angela Meadough.

Howard forward Linda Waters was one of the few Queens who battled hard on the board, collecting a season-high 12 rebounds. Allana Cummings came on strong in the second half, and finished with eight boards.

OC did a good job of keeping HC's leading rebounder Shannon Lawson off the boards, limiting her to three rebounds. Lawson did come on strong offensively in the second half, scoring 16 of her game-high 20 points.

"Linda Waters is the only one I can brag on," said Stevens. "She worked hard on the boards and played a good overall game."

LINDA WATERS

Waters was four-of-eight from the field, finishing the game with 13 points, five assists and two steals, to go along with her 12 rebounds.

Odessa got a balanced scoring attack, led by guard Holiday's 17 points. Holiday sparked a 33-26 OC halftime lead, scoring 10 points. She hit five straight jumpers in the first half.

Forward Dumas and reserve forward Bonner scored 15 points each. Dumas scored 11 of her points in the second half.

OC led for most of the game, building a 17-10 lead midway through the first half. Howard rallied back, and took a 24-23 lead with 3:58 left on two Waters free throws. But OC scored the last seven points of the half, taking a 33-26 halftime advantage.

At the start of the second half, OC built up a 40-30 lead. The lead grew to 68-56 with 2:33 left in the game, but Howard battled back behind the scoring of Lawson and three-pointers by Waters and Monique Cook.

Waters' three-point shot cut the margin to 71-66 with 34 seconds left in the game. But that's as close as the Queens would get.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Edited by Lea Whitehead

THERE'S GOOD NEWS — Interest rates are low and home prices in Big Spring are lower than in many years. Let Home Realtors show you how to take advantage of the situation.

Many practical reasons for owning your own home

"There are many practical reasons for owning your own home, in addition to the personal satisfaction," says Kay Moore, owner of Home Realtors.

"Home mortgage interest is one of the few interest deductions we still have," she reminds. "At today's interest rates, approximately 95% of the principal and interest payment made by a homeowner during the first five years would be tax-deductible (according to a brochure from Realty Financial Services, Inc.)"

Another tax break is real estate taxes on personal residences; a significant portion of a homeowner's monthly payment goes toward payment of these taxes (which incidentally support local governments). Homestead exemption lowers the real estate taxes you pay on your principal residence. If you use your home as an office, there may be other tax deductions.

Homeowners over 55 who are thinking of selling may be encouraged to do so because they can sell their residence at a profit without paying capital gains tax.

This exemption often puts many attractive homes in well-established neighborhoods up for sale.

Let Kay Moore and her staff help you decide if this is the year for you to buy a home. They can help you determine what price home you can afford, help you find the home of your dreams, and help find a lender.

"By taking into account the tax breaks and other considerations," Kay says, "a family can often own their own home for less than they are now paying for rent."

Kay mentions other incentives: "Interest rates are low, there is a large selection of homes for sale in Big Spring, and home prices are lower here than they have been in many years."

Home Realtors is a member of HMS (Homeowners Marketing Services, Inc.). Through HMS, Home Realtors can now offer home warranties to its sellers and buyers which will eliminate the possibility of major costly repairs during the time the home is on the market and for the first year of occupancy for the buyer.

Home Realtors is exclusive local agent for RELO Relocation Service, the nation's referral network of independent real estate brokers, and can draw on RELO's expertise to provide tips and advice for buyers and sellers.

In addition to Kay, the staff includes Doris Milstead, and Doris Huijbregtse, brokers; Jo Hughes, Gail Meyers, Kay Bancroft, Carole Lawson, and Shirley Burgess, sales associates.

Home Realtors is located in Coronado Plaza, 2000 Gregg. Phone them at 263-1284.

IBM office complex combines innovative architecture with environmental features

WESTLAKE (AP) — Running northwest from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport is a lesser-traveled state highway to some of the metropolitan area's smallest bedroom communities and one of its biggest architectural show-stoppers.

The office complex called "Solana" tumbles across a valley like colorful, geometric blocks spilled from a giant child's toybox.

The Southwestern architecture of Solana — meaning "sunny place" — is slowing traffic on Texas 114 as well as drawing the attention of the design industry.

Three brightly colored obelisks and a long low-slung maroon wall that frames a cascading water pool mark the entry to the two sides of the development, bisected by the highway.

Rose and turquoise colors accent window frames along a tan building. A five-story, stand-alone wall of deep purple — intended as a sun shade — rises from a cluster of buildings.

Parking spaces are delineated with crushed, hand-laid stone rather than paint. Stylized sculpted animals, rather than traditional block-faced signs, point a visitor's way.

"Most of the people who stop and want to know about it say, 'It sure is colorful,'" said Barbara Austin, manager of nearby convenience store.

The 900-acre development, nine-tenths of which will remain Texas prairie and forest land, is a joint venture of IBM and Maguire Thomas Partners, the country's ninth-largest investment builder.

"We picked the site because it's a good location relative to the airport," said Ken Sayers, a Stamford, Conn.-based spokesman for IBM, which now has more than 2,000 people working at Solana. "We felt the Metroplex area is a growing area and that site afforded us the opportunity to grow."

But what makes Solana unique among the scores of IBM facilities and office parks nationwide is what the developers call its "amenity package."

That includes formal and informal gardens, miles of walkways and jogging trails, waterfalls, tree-lined parking lots, mist fountains and a Village Center, which soon will include a Marriott Hotel, community center, office buildings for small-lease clients, retail shops and a 40,000-square-foot athletic club.

"The main thing that we strive for, individually and as a partner, is the high quality environment that the very demanding professional and corporate clients are looking for," said Thomas Allen, regional vice president of Maguire Thomas Partners and project director for Solana.

The IBM-Maguire Thomas partners won't discuss Solana's cost, but they plan to retain ownership of property and guard its development carefully.

"One of the most important parts of the master plan is that, at complete development, only 10 percent of the land will be covered by buildings," Allen said.

IBM already plans to build two more campus-like clusters at Solana during the next ten years, and the partnership will seek other major tenants.

But architectural integrity will remain a priority, Solana's developers say.

With Solana, the developers wanted distinctive buildings that accented but didn't dominate the surrounding woodland.

For IBM and Maguire Thomas, a "human scale" workplace meant hiring architects who designed buildings that would give each employee — with a few steps from the office — a view of a courtyard, a mist fountain, a garden or the countryside.

The result, from the blue barrel vault entryway of the Southlake building to the expansive Versailles-like approach to the Westlake campus, surprised even the developers.

"There were periods when, as you'd go to the project and watch it evolve over time and see it actually come about," Allen said, "that no matter what you expected or how neat you knew it was going to be, it's almost unbelievable."

"I still feel my heart pound when I go out there," he said.

The communities of Westlake and Southlake are forecast to be some of the fastest growing in the Dallas-Fort Worth area during the next 20 years. One estimate places Southlake's population, now about WESTLAKE — Thomas Allen, regional vice president of Maguire Thomas Partners, poses with a model of Solana, an office and retail complex off Highway 114 between Dallas and Fort Worth.

6,000, at more than 25,000 in 2010. "Solana will be the cornerstone on which we will start and model future development," said William LeGrand, Southlake's director of public works.

He said residents are impressed with Solana and will make use of its amenities.

"We don't want people out there only to be blown away by the architecture, but to be excited about being out there and to feel that they have the ability, by occupying space there, to participate in things that other people can't and that they have the best of all worlds," Allen said. "And that extends to the communities as well."

Project spokesman Bruce Bakke said he has watched employees become protective of their unique workplace.

"People who drove out there that first day would say 'Omgosh — look at that wall.' Today, they'd fight you to keep that wall."

Leopard most recently served as a vice president of Dean Foods' Creamland Dairies plant in Albuquerque, N.M. A 1972 food science graduate of Texas Tech, the Big Spring native is a graduate of Coahoma High School and is married to the former Linda Shaw, daughter of Larry and Bertie Shaw of Knott.

A 16-year career veteran with Creamland, he was named to its top management post in 1984, Kenney said. "Larry and Bob bring tremendous backgrounds in both the milk and ice cream businesses to Flav-O-Rich."

Wrigley tests high-tech gum

CHICAGO (AP) — Quadruple your pleasure? Quintuple your fun?

The makers of Doublemint chewing gum say they're not ready to change the product's familiar jingle — not yet, anyway.

But the Wm. Wrigley Jr. Co. is working on a high-tech approach to ensuring that your chewing gum doesn't lose its flavor on the bedpost overnight. Or on the store shelf, where the oils that give gum its flavor can evaporate.

Chicago-based Wrigley, the world's largest gum producer, said Tuesday it had signed an agreement with Advanced Polymer Systems Inc., of Redwood City, Calif., to develop a chewing gum that encapsulates the flavor oils in microscopic, non-toxic sponges and releases them only when the gum is chewed.

The tiny sponges, patented by Advanced Polymer Systems, already are used in some ointments, shaving creams and cosmetics, and could be used to extend the life of food flavorings and preservatives, officials said. "By using these sponges, instead of gum releasing all the flavor at once, it will hold onto the flavor and release it in a sustained manner," said Sergio Nacht, Advanced Polymer's vice president of research and development.

Wrigley spokesman William Piet balked at discussing the company's flavor-extension goals, saying the product was in an early stage of development.

"The first challenge is to find out if it works," he said. Chewing gum flavor generally lasts about 10 to 12 minutes, but David Light, an Advanced Polymer spokesman, said the companies hope to keep a flavorful chew going up to 10 minutes more.

Nacht predicted it could be between 18 to 36 months before the product, which needs approval from the federal Food and Drug Administration, hits store shelves.

Wrigley, which holds a commanding 48 percent share of the U.S. chewing gum market, hoped to use the technology in all its gums. Wrigley makes Doublemint, Juicy Fruit, Wrigley's Spearmint and Big Red sugar-sweetened chewing gums; Hubba Bubba bubble gum; and Extra chewing gums, which are sweetened with Nutrasweet.

The company's main competitors include Warner-Lambert Co., which makes Dentyne, Trident, Freshen Up and Chiclets, and RJR Nabisco Inc., maker of Carefree, Beech Nut and Bubble Yum gums. Neither Nabisco nor Warner-Lambert immediately returned phone calls seeking comment.

Industry analyst Bonnie Rivers of Salomon Brothers Inc. in Atlanta said longer-lasting flavor was top priority of chewing-gum makers.

"If you can make the flavor last longer, that's a big positive," she said.

And even if it didn't work very well, the new technology still could give Wrigley a marketing edge, she said.

"Anything you can do to differentiate your product — whether it's a plus or not — gives you something to market."

Under the agreement, Advanced Polymer will receive a small royalty from the sale of Wrigley products.

Dallas fourth in popularity

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A survey of senior business leaders identified Atlanta as the most desirable city to locate a business, the Central Ohio Marketing Council reported.

In a nationwide survey of 502 chief executive officers, company presidents and business owners, Atlanta was mentioned by 27 percent as the ideal location. Los Angeles was second, mentioned by 14 percent of those surveyed, while Chicago was third with 13 percent and Dallas and Phoenix, Ariz., were tied for fourth with 11 percent.

San Francisco was sixth, with 10 percent of the responses, while San Diego was seventh with 9 percent. Boston and New York tied for eighth, with 8 percent apiece, and Seattle was tenth, with 6 percent.

Definitive rankings for most other cities were not available.

The marketing council said Columbus-based Market Group One, Inc., surveyed executives by phone. The survey has a margin of error of plus-or-minus five percent, the council said. The results were released this month.

The survey was designed to assist Columbus business leaders and city officials plan their "Discover Columbus" campaign promoting the city and region to national and international business leaders, the council said.

Columbus was tied for 16th on the list with Cincinnati; Orlando, Fla.; Indianapolis; Raleigh, N.C.; Baltimore; Nashville, Tenn.; Minneapolis; and Tacoma, Wash., the council said.

Dow Jones Industrial Average may be least reliable index

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine
 Television newscasters report its every move. So does virtually every daily newspaper, radio station and financial magazine. Millions want to know where it's going.
 Everyone, it seems, is glued to the Dow Jones Industrial Average, or, simply, the Dow, the world's most closely watched barometer of stock prices. Yet, the Dow is only one of several market averages and indexes and the least representative.
 Says one critic, Marshall E. Blume, professor of finance at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School: "It's price-weighted — a stock that has a higher price gets more weight. What a silly thing that is."
 The average is calculated by adding the closing prices of 30 stocks and dividing by a number adjusted for splits, spin-offs and dividends. Because of the weighting, says Blume, "It's not even a good measure of the return of those 30 stocks."

 The Dow comprises only 30 huge industrial and service stocks (such as General Motors, AT&T, American Express and General Electric) out of a universe of thousands of publicly held companies. Small companies are excluded.
 Activities of index arbitrageurs and program traders are more likely to affect Dow stocks than others. It's not uncommon for the Dow to go up while the market goes down or vice versa.
 Yet, the Dow makes the headlines. It is the oldest measure of stock prices in continuous use, dating to 1884. Although its composition has been changed over the years, it provides historical overview. And it gets top billing every weekday in the nation's leading business newspaper, the "Wall Street Journal." The publisher of the Journal and the developer of the average are the same — Dow Jones & Co.

(The Dow) is the oldest measure of stock prices in continuous use, dating to 1884. Although its composition has been changed over the years, it provides historical overview. And it gets top billing every weekday in the nation's leading business newspaper, the "Wall Street Journal." The publisher of the Journal and the developer of the average are the same — Dow Jones & Co.

 Despite complaints, and pressure from the New York Stock Exchange (which would prefer a less volatile indicator), Dow Jones has refused to make fundamental changes in its calculations. The Journal did introduce the new Dow Jones Equity Market Index last Oct. 3, which embraces nearly 700 stocks in 82 industrial groups. But it said its "market coverage will continue to emphasize the familiar Dow."

 Unlike the Dow, most other broad measures of stock-price changes are weighted by market value — price of each listing multiplied by shares outstanding — so bigger companies have greater impact than smaller ones on movements in the indexes. These indexes include the following:
 — Standard & Poor's 500. These are 400 industrial, 20 transportation, 40 utility and 40 financial companies whose prices of 1941-1943 are the base. Most of the stocks are listed on the NYSE.

 — New York Stock Exchange Composite. It follows all Big Board stocks and is pegged to prices on Dec. 31, 1965, with adjustments for capitalization changes. It was in part because of dissatisfaction with the Dow that the Exchange started the index in 1966.
 — AMEX Market Value Index. Formerly known as the American Stock Exchange Index, it measures the performance of more than 800 AMEX stocks in all major industries, plus warrants and American Depository Receipts. Unlike all the others, it is adjusted for reinvestment of dividends.

 — NASDAQ Composite. It represents about 3,500 over-the-counter stocks in the automated quotations system of the National Association of Securities Dealers. It was inaugurated Feb. 5, 1971, with a base value of 100.
 — Wilshire 5000 Equity Index. It's the broadest indicator, representing all 5,000 or so NYSE, AMEX and OTC issues for which prices are obtainable. You can take it as a proxy for the market value of all stocks, in billions of dollars. Thus, the recent level of about 2,700 translates to $2.7 trillion.
 — Value Line Composite. It takes in about 1,700 NYSE, AMEX and OTC stocks followed by "Value Line Investment Survey."

Foundation elects director

John H. Taylor was elected to a three-year term at the recent annual meeting of the stockholders of the Big Spring Industrial Foundation, at which time Jimmy Taylor, president, expressed appreciation of the stockholders to R.H. Weaver who completed his term as director.
 Election of officers resulted in the following selections: Taylor, president; J.D. Nelson, vice president; Sidney Clark, treasurer; and Wayne Moore, secretary.

 Other board members include: Don "Lefty" Reynolds, Clyde McMahon Jr., Hooper Sanders, Bob Brock and Hal Boyd, ex officio.
 Taylor gave a brief report on the history of the foundation since its organization in 1956, according to a report issued by Moore.

Madsen announces retirement

Gene Madsen will step down as manager of the local Bealls department store in Big Spring Monday, as he begins a 90-day medical leave of absence. It is the initial action prior to taking medical retirement, the longtime retailer said Saturday.

GENE MADSEN

Madsen, who opened the Bealls store in Big Spring seven years ago, came here with his family from Austin where he had been a manager of Bealls. He has been with the company for 14 years and has been in the retailing business for 40 years, he said.

"It's a bittersweet situation," Madsen said. "I really enjoy what I'm doing and I've had a fine association locally. I really have mixed emotions."
 He said that he has no immediate plans, other than "to take it easy for a while. I definitely plan to stay in Big Spring."
 Madsen and his wife Barbara have four daughters and eight grandchildren.

Bealls gets new president

Related to Bealls is Thursday's announcement that Frank Fietz, president and chief operations officer of Bealls since March 1988, has been named president and chief executive officer of the 152-store chain.

FRANK FIETZ

He assumes CEO duties from Rayce M. Bealls, who is retiring after more than 41 years with Bealls.
 Fietz, 54, has been with Bealls for 27 years. He has managed five different Bealls stores and was regional operations manager in 1982 and '83, when he was named director of field operations; June 1983 brought appointment as vice president of operations and he became executive vice president of operations in 1985, when he was also named to the firm's board of directors.

Economic advisor to speak

W. Michael Cox, vice president and economic advisor of the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas, will be available for questions about the state of the economy — and his projections for 1989 — during an 11 a.m. news conference Monday in the Midland International Airport conference room, second floor.
 He will be in Midland to speak to members of the Midland

Chamber of Commerce at a "Business Before Hours Breakfast" at 7 a.m. Tuesday at the Midland Hilton.
 Before joining the reserve bank in Dallas in 1984, Cox was a professor of economics at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, the University of Rochester and the University of Western Ontario.

Borrowing habits make a difference at tax time

NEW YORK (AP) — When they do their income tax returns this year, quite a few Americans might be prompted to think about changing their borrowing habits.
 Time was when just about every cent of interest you paid was a simple deductible expense, and the deduction helped reduce the cost of credit. But those days are gone.
 In the aftermath of tax reform, there are five distinct categories of interest expense, only one of which qualifies as fully deductible without limits.

And two people borrowing identical amounts of money at the same nominal interest rate can wind up paying substantially different after-tax amounts for their loans.
 Credit card payments, auto loans and other familiar types of credit used by individuals to buy goods and services come under the heading of consumer interest.
 For 1988, you can deduct 40 percent of the consumer interest you paid. That drops to 20 percent in 1989, 10 percent in 1990 and nothing in subsequent years.
 If you borrow to finance an investment, by contrast, the interest remains deductible in amounts that don't exceed your investment income by more than $2,000 for 1989.

If you borrow against your primary or a second residence, mortgage interest is still fully deductible up to the point where the amount of the loan reaches $1 million. Similarly, interest can be deducted on home equity loans of up to $100,000.
 Then there's category No. 4, "passive activity" interest, which arises when you borrow to finance an investment such as a limited partnership that operates a business in which you aren't an active participant.
 This kind of interest was a prime target in the legislative campaign against "tax shelters." Rather than a deduction, it is deemed part of the business's costs when its income or loss is calculated.

 The only type of interest still deductible without exception is interest paid by a trade or business.
 "Clearly the least attractive type of interest expense is consumer interest," says William Brennan, editor of the Financial Planning Reporter newsletter at the accounting firm of Ernst & Whinney in Washington.
 "If you have any spare cash, consider paying off consumer debt immediately."
 People who want or need to borrow, Brennan argues, should look first to home equity loans if they have access to them, since home equity loan interest still qualifies for a deduction.
 The main knock on home equity loans is that they expose a precious asset to the threat of foreclosure if you can't keep up timely payments on what you borrow. Also, all home equity loans are not created equal — some are loaded down with fees and charges that make them more costly than they look.
 Still, says Brennan, the deduction can mean a significant savings. On a consumer loan at 12 percent interest, a person in the 28 percent bracket pays an effective after-tax rate of 11.33 percent.
 With a home equity loan at the same 12 percent, that person pays an effective after-tax rate of 8.64 percent.
 Suppose you lead a fairly complicated financial life, and have interest payments that could conceivably fall into any one of several categories. How do you tell what is what?
 That's most easily accomplished if you keep borrowed funds in an account separate from your other money.

Rhocky rhetoric

By STEVE REAGAN Staff Writer

I thought I was gonna die. How many times have you heard the above phrase spoken? Sixteen, 17 million times? And how many times when you heard it, did you have a sneaking suspicion that the person didn't actually believe he or she was going to die?

Sixteen, 17 million times? I thought so. If there is anything nearly as constant as death, taxes and deadlines, it's those cutesy little rhetorical statements or questions, defying answers or logic.

I know; I've uttered a few from time to time. My favorite rhetorical statement, unfortunately, cannot be reprinted in this space, but it has something to do about doing a physically impossible task.

Needless to say, I would not want to perform such an act because it would be most uncomfortable and quite possibly dangerous even if it was possible for me to do so. But that hasn't stopped me from making the statement every now and then.

Over the years, I have come across many rhetorical comments; some have been quaint, some outrageous and all defy any semblance of a rational explanation. My all-time favorite list includes:

• "How many times have I told you to . . ." — This was one of Mom's most frequent utterances. It was usually followed by some task — which coincidentally, I had failed to accomplish — such as cleaning my room, emptying the garbage or washing the dishes.

Once, in my early teens, I had a smartaleck notion to provide an answer to her question. The next time she asked me that, I promised myself, I would stare placidly at her and say: "Oh, 17, I think."

Fortunately, I thought better of the idea, or else I might not be here today.

• "I was so hungry I could've eaten a . . ." — Another all-time fave. This saying is usually completed by inserting an entire animal, preferably large, such as a pig, cow or horse.

There have been days, especially when I was unemployed, when I was very hungry, but I have never, ever been so hungry that I could've eaten an entire horse — especially with those hooves and that mangy tail.

Besides, if a person exists that can digest one of the beasts, I for one don't want to mess with him/her:

• "He/she went through the roof." — This is probably what would have happened to my mother if I had given the smartaleck answer to her "how many times . . ." question.

It denotes someone who is in an extreme fit of rage. The person in question is more than likely red-faced, grimacing and appearing as if his veins would explode at any second.

They will not literally "go through the roof," but you might — if you do anything to upset them further.

Actually, there are instances when people do go through roofs, but those unhappy instances are usually reserved for skydivers and clumsy construction workers.

Blind not left in the dark

Judy and Mike Golden, who are affiliated with Christian Record Services, show one of the yellow wells that can be placed at places of business to raise money to help the blind. The Golden's travel through West Texas soliciting funds from merchants to help support the organization's free services to the blind.

A volunteer at the National Camp for Blind Children assists a blind child as she prepares to aim her bow at the target. There are 515 camps throughout the United States. The Texas camp is located in Leander near Dallas.

By LYNN HAYES Staff Writer

Helping the blind is not an easy task — even for a sighted person.

But, Judy Golden, who works to aid the blind, understands their frustrations — she is blind in one eye and has only partial vision in the other.

She and her husband, Mike, who are affiliated with Christian Record Services, travel through much of West Texas to raise funds to help the blind help themselves.

The totally blind and the legally blind (those who can't read normal print because of visual or physical impairment) are eligible to receive the organization's free study aids and reading and listening materials.

Judy explained that a legally blind person can only see at 20 feet whatever a sighted person can clearly see at 200 feet.

Other forms of blindness are tunnel vision, which means the person can only see what's straight ahead with no peripheral vision; and macular degeneration, in which a person can't see the center of a object but can see the edges.

Formerly known as Christian Record Braille Foundation, the organization began in Nebraska in 1989 and is headquartered in Lincoln, Neb.

Although the organization is non-denominational, it's designed with an inspirational, devotional and Christian emphasis.

The central location of Big Spring for the Golden's assigned territory prompted their move from Wichita Falls in October.

The Golden's believe there is a need for their services in West Texas, citing the figure of more than 36,000 blind in Texas and estimating at least 20 in Big Spring.

The non-profit organization relies solely on donations and the couple solicits money from merchants to make their services available to those in need.

"We don't want to pressure the merchants, but we want to raise funds to channel services to the blind in the community. Any amount of money is accepted," Judy said.

Citing skepticism from some businesses, Judy said their legitimacy can be verified through the Better Business Bureau.

Judy noted that 72 percent of all money raised goes to help the blind, with the rest being used for raising funds.

The Golden's typically visit blind people to confirm eligibility for the organization's free services. The tax-deductible donations assist in providing records, tapes, large-print reading material and Braille books for those in need.

Braille is a system of raised dots, representing letters and numerals that can be identified by touch.

Funds also are available for glaucoma screenings and for the 515 National Camps For Blind Children located throughout the United States. The Texas camp is in Leander near Dallas.

Since its inception in 1967, the camp has served more than 28,000 blind children, Judy noted.

The camp's objectives are to help the blind discover undeveloped potential, increase self-confidence, improve mental/physical vigor and to help develop an appreciation for God's love and care.

Campers are given the opportunity to participate in activities that the sighted take for granted, including archery, boating, crafts, horseback riding, sailing, rock climbing, swimming and water skiing.

The Golden's also have forms that can be completed for a blind person to allow that individual to obtain materials from the Texas State Library in Austin, which also loans tapes, records and players free of charge.

Judy noted that because blindness isn't always hereditary, the organization also provides Braille books, many with photos, for blind parents to enable them to read to their sighted children.

Judy and Mike are working to begin a support group for the blind, but added, "We need feedback from the community."

One service they envision is a phone-pal system to enable the blind to exchange phone numbers so they can "communicate with the rest of the world."

Before the Golden's began working for Christian Record Services, they worked for the Beacon Lighthouse for the Blind in Wichita Falls. Judy was a rehabilitation teacher, and Mike was a driver who assisted the blind with transportation.

Dedicated to helping the blind, Judy said, "I'm doing something I believe in. It's not just a job — I really care."

Quoting Helen Keller, Judy said, "The biggest problem facing the blind is the lack of vision of their sighted friends."

"It makes you think," she added.

CASSOPOLIS, Mich. — Ed Lowe, the man who invented and trademarked the brand Kitty Litter 42 years ago, isn't getting much respect from Tumble, one of the two cats that roam the company president's office retreat. Lowe, the leader in a $400 million industry, plans to introduce a brand of cat food in February or March.

'The man who brought the cat in from the cold'

CASSOPOLIS, Mich. (AP) — Forty-two years after giving a friend a bag of clay to try in her cat box, Ed Lowe has become a celebrity of sorts, his white-bearded, grandfatherly image recognized by millions of feline fanciers.

The inventor of cat box filler obtained a trademark for "Kitty Litter" back then, but only within the last two years has his face begun appearing on the packaging.

Now, people occasionally stop the 68-year-old Lowe on the street — but not always to ask about him.

"One day I was walking down the street and this guy walked by and looked at me and asked, 'How's Ugh?'" Lowe said, referring to his pet cat who appeared with him on television commercials. "So I guess they know Ugh better than they know me."

The self-made millionaire doesn't mind the attention. In fact, he relishes making the most of his caring image as "the man who brought the cat in from the cold."

A new cat food expected on supermarket shelves in February or March — the first for Edward Lowe Industries Inc. — also will bear his picture.

"We're going to promote the character of Ed Lowe a little more, because no one else can do that," Lowe said during an interview at the 3,000-acre farm in southwestern lower Michigan, where he lives and conducts business as chairman and chief executive officer of the company he founded.

Lowe, dressed in corduroys, a red sweater and matching bandana, drinks coffee from a cat coffee mug and is surrounded by a host of cat sculptures and paintings — even a stuffed toy cat that moves its head.

Despite appearances, Lowe says he has never been crazy about cats — especially when he gave out that first bag of clay.

"I didn't dislike them," Lowe said. "I wasn't and I'm still not a fanatic about any pet."

Chickens were on Lowe's mind in 1946 when he began trying to market granulated clay to poultry farmers as a nesting material. When Chicken Litter failed to catch on, Lowe returned to his father's sawdust business in Vandalia, Mich., which sold the absorbent clay to soak up oil and grease.

On a cold day in January 1947, a friend of Lowe's, Kay Draper, approached him for some sand for her cat box. Because all the sand at the sawdust business had frozen, Lowe instead gave her a bag of the clay.

Word spread, and before long Lowe was peddling his Kitty Litter from the trunk of his '43 Chevy to pet shops and at cat shows across the country.

"If I hadn't seen Kay that day, I'd still be shoveling sawdust," Lowe says with a laugh.

DEAR ABBY: You helped "Never Been Wed in Wisconsin," who had been invited to a bridal shower and was asked to bring 10 tips on how to be a good wife.

I thought they were real neat. Do you happen to have 10 tips on how to be a good husband? I'm getting married soon and need to know. — MARC

DEAR MARC: Try these:
1. Never forget her birthday, anniversary or Valentine's Day. A kiss, a card or a single rose could save the day.

2. Don't keep talking about the beautiful young chicks at work.
3. Don't turn on the radio or TV, or pick up something to read, when she's trying to talk to you.

4. Don't bring a friend home to dinner without advance notice.

Dear Abby

5. Don't use her car and return it with an empty gas tank.

6. If you know you're going to be late getting home, call and tell her.

7. Don't try to make her jealous.

8. Don't look like a slob all weekend — unless she looks worse.

9. When you know you're wrong, admit it.

10. Never criticize her in the presence of others.

DEAR ABBY: I must comment on the letter concerning two crimes and your evaluation of the punishments for each.

In the first example, a speeding driver had killed three people. Had the driver used a gun or knife to commit these murders, he would undoubtedly be on death row at this time. Juries should realize that an automobile can be a lethal weapon, and they should treat these crimes accordingly. I agree with you — the sentence of 28 months to seven years is indeed outrageously lenient.

The second example concerned a police officer in Lubbock, Texas, who had a portion of his ear bitten off. In fact, a third of his ear was bitten off, chewed and swallowed by his attacker! The prisoner, who was on probation at the time of his arrest, also attempted to bite another officer, and was successful in biting through a CB antenna cable. He also kicked at the police car repeatedly with such force that it became inoperable.

Not only did the jury find the defendant guilty, they sentenced him to 10 years in prison — the maximum allowed for assault on a police officer in the state of Texas.

I was an observer at that trial, but did not have an opportunity to thank the jury for their decision. You see, the officer who had a third of his ear bitten off was my son.

In view of all the facts, do you still believe the sentence was excessively harsh? — MAXINE McNEILL

DEAR MAXINE: No. And that should teach me not to shoot from the hip before learning all the facts.

Professional Grooming Advice:

Q. How often should permanent waves be given on a normal head of hair? Why are they called permanent?
A. A "permanent" or permanent wave is defined by Webster as: a long-lasting hair-wave produced by mechanical and chemical means. The key word in the definition is — chemical. Any time a chemical is used on normal (virgin) hair it alters the natural compounds. When your hair is being chemically altered it should be done by a professional.

How often?? That's really hard to answer — for the amount of curl desired, the length of hair, and the over-all condition make-up the final decision of how often. In the good-ole days we, (hair-dressers) had to wait until all of the curl was cut off before giving another wave. Today the average head of hair can receive a perm within eight (8) weeks; however consult your professional before making a decision.

Staff of La Contesa

HINT:
When hair becomes coated with hair spray or mousse, use a small amount of baking soda. Shampoo, rinse, use soda, rinse, all.

Anniversaries

The Earnest Richters

50 years ago

Earnest and Lucille Richters, Kaufman, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary Jan. 21 at a reception in the activity hall of First Baptist Church, Kaufman. Their children and grandchildren will host the event. Richters was born in Sultana. Mrs. Richters, the former Lucille Arnett, was born in Big Spring. The couple met at the home of Dorothy Branch Crawford, Midland, and were married Jan. 20, 1939 at the home of Bro. Bruce, who officiated. The Richters have eight children: Mrs. Veta Spears, Coahoma; Mrs. Ginger Davis, Blanket; Mrs. Shirlene Topping, Memphis, Tenn.; Dean Richters, Coahoma; Mrs. Madeline Raney, Kaufman; Dwayne Richters, Jourdanton; Mrs. Linda Coates, Coahoma; and Don Richters, Eldorado. They have 23 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren. During their marriage, the Richters have lived in Midland, Sterling City, Rankin, San Antonio, Odessa, Big Spring, Coahoma, New Mexico, and Kaufman. Richters retired from Webb Air Force Base where he was a sheet metal worker. They are Baptists, and are members of the Order of the Eastern Star, and Masons. When asked to comment about their marriage, Richters said, "I never had a home until we met and made a home together." Mrs. Richters commented, "If I had it to do over again, I would do it the same — without changing a thing." Hobbies and interests include stock farming, gardening, church work and family. In lieu of gifts, a scrap book is being prepared for cards or letters which will record fondest memories.

Staff Writer

It looks as though Maurice Smith is a man who will really know how to enjoy retirement!

Maurice, who has only been retired from the VA Hospital since Dec. 30, is already making plans with his brother, Calvin Smith, Brownfield, to go on a sailing adventure.

The two have purchased a sailboat, and are mapping out a six-week trip to the Bahamas — leaving from Galveston and sailing through the Florida Keys. Both have sailed for years on inland lakes, but this is the first time they will face an ocean, says Maurice.

His wife, Mary, won't be going with them. "She said she'd like to go when I learn more about it," Maurice said.

City Councilman Sid Clark was in a Lubbock hospital this week recovering from emergency heart by-pass surgery.

Doctors say he's doing well and expected him to be released this weekend.

Lawrence (Larry) Wheat, son of Walter and Francis Wheat, left last week for Sissach, Switzerland, outside Basel, where he has taken a position with an architectural firm. His first assignment is the design of station houses and support facilities for the four major rail routes where French and Swiss railways meet.

Larry had spent a few months in Big Spring visiting his parents. A week after he arrived he broke his leg helping out at the family's furniture store, and spent most of the time here hobbling on crutches.

Larry completed his master's degree in architecture at the University of Texas at Austin last August.

Margaret Lloyd thought everybody had forgotten her birthday. She even lamented to her office supervisor, Gene Adkins, "Today is my birthday, and nobody has mentioned it."

So Margaret was very surprised when she found more than 100 friends gathered at a party in her honor at St. Mary's Episcopal Church. Kay Burns had offered to take Margaret to dinner at the Country Club that night, and made up a story about needing to stop by the church. When Margaret saw the festive crowd, she turned to Kay and teased, "Does this mean we're not going to the Country Club?"

The party was hosted by Margaret's children, Lisa Emerson and husband Scott; Larson and Brenda Lloyd; and Les and Kim Lloyd.

Max and Barbara Webb, with son Aaron, and his friend, Paul Cline, spent a week's holiday in Ruidoso. "We didn't ski," Barbara said. "We just rested and visited the shops."

The Webbs were in Muncie, Ind. recently attending a surprise 75th birthday party for her father, David Somers. Also on hand were her sister, Nancy Somers,

Chicago; her brother, Paul and Lana Somers, Plantation, Fla.; her sister Janie Barnes (at whose house the party was held); and "relatives I hadn't seen in 20 years!"

The party was four months in the planning, with help from Barbara's mother, Katherine.

Kristi Grimes, a senior at Texas A & M, spent a week here recently observing in the classrooms of her former BSISD teachers, Joe Reed and Pat Lawrence. The exercise was part of the requirement for Kristi's teacher certification.

The Big Spring High School graduate, daughter of Jerry and Dorothy Grimes, is majoring in biology with a minor in chemistry.

Many of her friends from the 14th & Main Church of Christ dropped by Mountain View Lodge to wish Bess Power a happy birthday — her 97th.

Dorothy Swartz baked Bess' favorite cookie — "Sprite cookies," says Dorothy. "They're crisp and not too sweet."

Dorothy says Bess enjoys reading, and prefers Zane Grey's stories of the Old West.

Bess' family operated Sherman's Grocery Store here many years ago.

Volunteer Service needs cookie donations

The Volunteer Services at Big Spring State Hospital are now scheduling cookie donations.

The project is designed to fill requests for something "special" for the patients, said Kathy Higgins, coordinator.

If your group is willing to donate 12 dozen cookies once or twice during 1989, please call 267-8216, ext. 536.

Forsan Study Club meets

GFWC Forsan Study Club met Monday at the home of Susan Alexander.

Cecil Alexander presented a review of the book "Not Without My Daughter."

President Eunice Thixton called the meeting to order. Roll call was answered by sharing the name of a favorite book.

Guests Donna Lasater and Bo Fryar were welcomed.

The minutes were read, and the treasurer's report was presented.

Community volunteer hours and membership details were discussed.

Emily Munn and Alexander served refreshments.

Before adjourning the meeting, Thixton shared meditative thoughts.
