Mayoral, district two election set by council

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

The first reading of an ordinance calling for the election of the city mayor and one District Two council member on May 6 was approved at Tuesday night's council meeting.

The May 6 election date is required by the Texas Election Code. Candidates seeking either office may file beginning Monday, Feb. 20 through Wednesday, March 22.

A.C. "Cotton" Mize is completing his first three-year term as mayor, but would not make a formal commitment when asked last night if he will seek a second term.

District Two Councilman D.W. Overman — who is completing his first three-year term — was absent from last night's meeting and unavailable for comment on whether he will be seeking a second term.

The council also held an emergency reading of a resolution authorizing the submission of a Texas Community Development Program application to the Texas Department of Commerce for the Community Development Fund.

Public Works Director Tom Decell informed the council that TDC officials reviewed the city's application and ruled the plans to patch and seal coat San Antonio Way — one of four streets on the west side where street improvements will be completed — is "not an acceptable form of construction."

Elimination of plans to install the seal coat will result in a $14,000 reduction in matching funds by the city, Decell said.

The TDC approved a $300,000 grant application several months ago for street improvements that will require $135,460 in matching funds to be provided by the city. City officials will meet with the Permian Basin Planning Commission Jan. 31 to "present our case," Decell said.

The council also approved specifications and permission to advertise for bids for automatic sprinkler systems at the old and new Masonic areas at Mt. Olive Memorial Park Cemetery.

Masonic officials informed the council at the Jan. 10 meeting they have committed to donating $30,000 to the city for the purpose of installing the automatic sprinkler systems.

Sealed bids will be accepted at the office of the city's purchasing agent, located at the corner of East Fourth and Nolan Streets, until 10 a.m. on Feb. 13.

The council also authorized Mize to execute a quitclaim deed on Bush tries to avoid 'sleaze factor' with new panel

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush is naming a panel to recommend standards of conduct for government officials, in an attempt to ensure that he does not face the same allegations of an administration "sleaze factor" that dogged his predecessor.

Largely to counter such complaints about the Reagan administration, Bush during his campaign promised to create the panel as one of his first acts in office.

Bush today was scheduled to sign an executive order creating the advisory commission on ethics. It will be chaired by Griffin Bell, the former attorney general in the Carter administration, and Malcolm Wilkey, a senior judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, the White House said Tuesday.

Other panel members will include former White House counsels Fred Fielding and Lloyd Cutler, and Washington attorney Jan Baran, said White House spokeswoman Alixe Glen. She said she could not confirm the two remaining names.

On Tuesday, Bush asked the director of the Office of Government Ethics, Frank Nebeker, to brief all senior administration officials on ethical and conflict-of-interest standards required of them, said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Bush had proposed during his campaign that such briefings be held on an annual basis, and Nebeker wrote to him on the day after the Nov. 8 election offering to conduct the sessions, said

Fitzwater. Fitzwater said the 10-minute meeting with Nebeker on Tuesday was for "symbolic value" to emphasize the importance Bush attaches to ethical conduct.

More than 100 members of the Reagan administration, in which Bush served as vice president, were at various times accused of unethical or improper behavior. Two of President Reagan's closest advisers, Lynn Nofziger and Michael Deaver, were convicted of offenses associated with their lobbying after they left the administration, while a string of allegations against Reagan's longtime friend and attorney general, Edwin Meese III, battered the Justice Department.

An independent prosecutor declined to seek indictment of Meese, but the Justice Department's own ethics office concluded this month that he had engaged in conduct "that should not be tolerated of any government employee." Democrats assailed the "sleaze factor" and used it as ammunition in the fall campaigns. Bush responded by saying repeatedly that he intended to have an administration that hews to high ethical standards.

Bush supported President Reagan's veto of ethics legislation passed by Congress last year, but said he wants to introduce his own package. It is expected to contain the same standards, where applicable, for Congress as it sets for the executive branch employees. Last year's package set differing standards.

Settles appointed city fire marshal

HERALD STAFF REPORT

As expected, Burr Lea Settles was named Big Spring Fire Marshal Wednesday morning. Fire Chief Frank Anderson made the announcement during a press conference held at city hall.

Settles, who served as acting fire chief for eight months following the retirement of Carl Dorton, assumes the responsibilities of fire marshal immediately.

The second and final reading by the City Council Tuesday night amending an ordinance that creates the position of fire marshal/training captain, and eliminating the position of assistant chief, cleared the way for Settles' appointment, Anderson said.

Although Settles was the only applicant for fire marshal, Anderson was quick to point out that Settles was also the best qualified person for the position.

"After looking at Burr Lea's qualifications, I feel Big Spring is fortunate to have him," Anderson stated.

Settles said his new responsibilities will include:

- Speaking to schools, businesses and clubs about fire safety and prevention.

- Inspecting local buildings, including hospitals, retirement and childrens homes, for possible city code violations and potential fire hazards.

- Keeping daily fire department logs and records and submission of reports to the state fire marshal's office in Austin.

- Fire evaluation and arson detection which includes appropriate follow-up. If warranted, Settles will present arson cases to the Howard County district attorney for prosecution.

Settles, who has been employed with Big Spring fire department for 11 years, will earn an annual salary of $22,000.

Anderson said because of its size, the State Insurance Board requires Big Spring to employ a fulltime fire marshal.

As part of the new fire department classifications, Anderson said if he is "out of pocket," a designated captain will assume the "full responsibilities" of the chief.

There has not been a fulltime fire marshal in Big Spring since 1984.

Pup rescued after seven-hour ordeal

HOUSTON (AP) — It took city crews and volunteers more than seven hours to rescue a black puppy who fell into an access pipe leading into an apartment sewer system, officials said.

The puppy, Baby Bear, a six-week-old terrier, fell into the sewer Tuesday while playing in a yard with the three children of Jeri Robinson.

Mrs. Robinson and her children, Krystina, 6, Adolph, 5, and Krystal, 3, spent most of the day inside, listening to the roar of machinery and the shouts of people as holes were dug, pipes cut and tools pushed and pulled in the rescue operation.

Rescuers included a crew from the city Public Works Department's Southeast Quadrant Maintenance Branch, Citizens for Animal Protection, Houston Fire Department, city Animal Control Bureau and Spring Branch Volunteer Corps.

George Huebner and Cynthia Shaw of Citizens for Animal Protection spent a long afternoon with their arms and faces thrust into pipes flowing with raw sewage.

"I've been in a sewer before but not having to chew up a whole lawn," said Ms. Shaw, the Harris County Animal Rescue League's 1988 Volunteer of the Year.

The problem was that Baby Bear was a very frightened pup, and all the noise apparently caused him to creep even deeper, about five feet below ground.

Apartment maintenance workers had first tossed him bits of bread and hamburger in an effort to lure him out to where they could reach him. When this failed, they began to dig.

Using a backhoe, crews quickly ripped a huge hole in the lawn, exposing the six-inch, white plastic sewer line. But when the line was cut, and after much poking and careful probing with a towel-wrapped rod, Baby Bear still could not be seen. He had wiggled into another pipe.

Workers then ripped another hole in the yard and more sewer lines were found and cut. Through still another access opening, the Public Works crew began snaking in a long orange hose normally used to flush out blockages. Baby Bear was still not to be seen, but his cries were louder.

As a last resort, the crew turned on a pump, putting a blast of water through the hose. A second blast was called for, then a third. Then there was a cheer.

Huebner had his hands in the pipe and suddenly they were full of wet, shivering puppy.

Someone produced a towel, and Baby Bear was wrapped briefly in the arms of Krystina, Adolph and Krystal.

Public Works crews assured apartment manager Betsy Lowe they would fill the holes and repair the broken sewer lines. She said she would take care of the landscaping.

Tower might face tough questioning

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — John Tower faced serious questions about scaling back Pentagon spending and about his personal ties to defense contractors as the Senate Armed Services Committee prepared to open hearings today on his nomination to run the Defense Department.

The former Texas senator could expect to be treated with special courtesy by his former colleagues this afternoon in the historic Senate Caucus Room, site of the Watergate and Iran-Contra hearings.

But the 63-year-old Tower, who emerged as President Bush's nominee after an exhaustive background check, was certain to be quizzed on his consulting work for defense contractors and his private life, as well as on defense policy and overall Pentagon funding.

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Tuesday he expects the hearings to be marked by some controversy based on the reports that have already been raised in the media. "There's enough out there," Dixon said.

Confirmation hearings are under way for two other Bush appointees:

• Commerce Secretary-designate Robert Mosbacher was warmly received Tuesday before the Senate Commerce Committee. Lawmakers told the Texas oilman he should make the government a more aggressive advocate for American businesses in the world marketplace. His nomination is expected to win easy approval from the committee next week.

• Today marked the start of hearings on Samuel K. Skinner's appointment as transportation secretary. In written responses to questions from the Senate Commerce Committee, the 50-year-old Illinois transportation administrator said foreign airlines serving the United States should be forced to meet the same security requirements as U.S. carriers.

The Tower hearings are likely to focus in part on the issue of overall military spending. Former President Reagan asked in his final budget for fiscal 1990, which begins Oct. 1. The request represents a 2 percent increase after inflation.

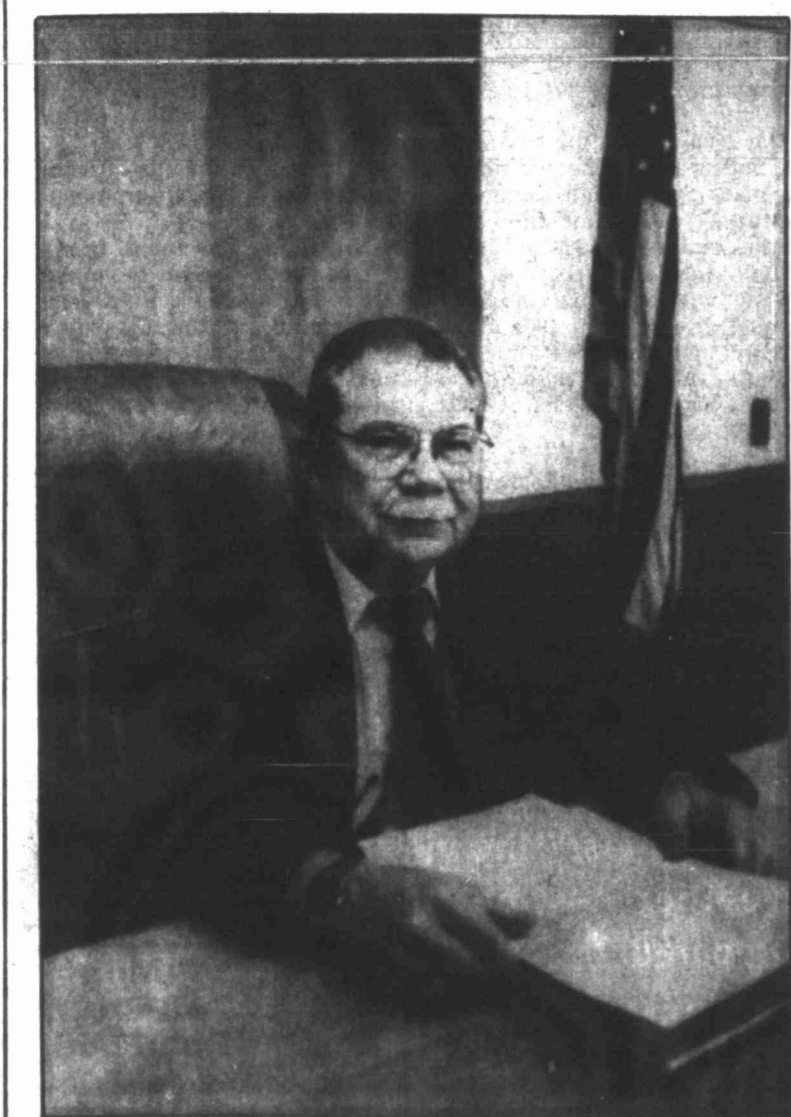

But Bush, according to testimony last week from Office of Management and Budget nominee Richard Darman, is expected to reduce Reagan's request by an unspecified amount.

If Bush fails to trim the request, Congress is likely to do so. In the past four years, Congress has cut military spending increases to levels below the rate of inflation.

"I think they're whistling Dixie if they think they'll get a 2 to 3 percent increase in spending," said Rep. Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss., a member of the House Armed Services Committee. "They'll be fortunate if they get the inflation factor."

Tower, a former chairman of the Armed Services Committee, also was certain to be quizzed about his connections to a number

Rape victim reluctant to testify

SAN DIEGO, Texas (AP) — An ambulance took the victim of an alleged kidnapping and gang rape away from the Duval County Courthouse this morning as the second day of prosecution testimony was about to begin.

The woman "has fallen ill so we're going to take other witnesses out of order until the last witness (the woman) can return," District Judge Gilberto Hinojosa told jurors this morning.

The woman was carried out of the courthouse on a stretcher about 9:30 a.m. but it could not be determined immediately what was wrong with her or where the ambulance took her.

The woman had testified Tuesday until about 3:15 p.m., when she reported fainting during a break in the defense's cross-examination of her.

Prosecution testimony continued this morning with district attorney's investigator Jerry Galvan taking the witness stand and describing the woman as "withdrawn, almost in shock" the morning after the alleged attack last March 26.

Felipe Chew, 29, is on trial on an aggravated kidnapping charge, and also faces a later sexual assault trial in the case. He was indicted last year along with nine other men after the woman reported being abducted and raped by as many as 20 men.

Defense attorney Jaime Garza in his opening statements to the jury Tuesday said the trial would include testimony about "women who have an insatiable desire for sex, women that just can't get enough, even with multiple men."

Chew has been in the Duval County Jail since last March in lieu of bonds totaling $70,000.

The woman's emotional testimony last September in the case's first trial helped bring a sexual assault conviction against 24-year-old Orlando Garza, who was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Testifying as the first prosecution witness Tuesday, the alleged victim said she was pulled into Chew's car with Chew and three other men while walking a short distance home from a relative's house the night of March 26.

She said Chew was a passenger in the front seat of the car when she was taken against her will to a ranch where an illegal cockfight was being held near this Duval County town, and that a number of men, including Chew, forced her to perform sex acts there.

Chew, she said, pulled her by the hair and forced her to perform oral sex. She said Chew later shined a flashlight on her while men took turns raping her on the hood of a car, and that he helped hold her down during some of the attacks.

The woman asked Hinojosa to excuse her from testifying in the 229th District Court trial, but the judge compelled her to testify or go to jail for contempt of court. Hinojosa also denied motions to dismiss the kidnapping charge against Chew.

She said previous publicity from the case disrupted her personal life, that the media had harassed her and that she did not want to continue the publicity by testifying again.

"To a certain extent, I sympathize with what you've been going through, or what you say you've been going through," said the visiting judge from Brownsville. "... But too much has happened for me to allow you to determine whether or not this case should proceed."

"You have to ask yourselves, 'Why?'" Garza told the jury. "Why didn't she want to testify?"

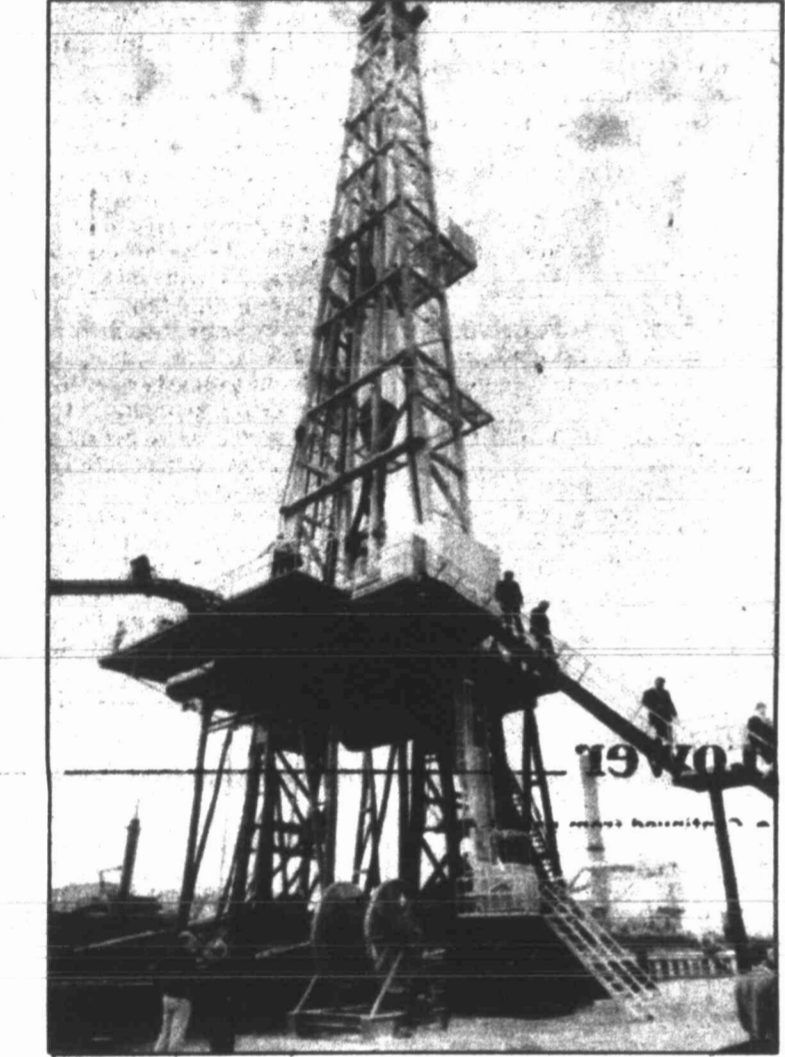

District Attorney Heriberto Silva, who originally had accepted the woman's request not to testify, said in his opening argument that the trial would show "that as a result of his (Chew's) actions in taking her out there with the intent to abuse her sexually, that she was abused sexually."

Silva said in addition to the alleged gang-rape and kidnapping victim, a co-defendant and a juvenile would be called as state's witnesses.

Defense attorney Garza said he would bring a witness who would testify that she saw the woman get into the car voluntarily that night.

Panel delayed action on failing insurance firms

EL PASO (AP) — State regulators told policyholders of two insurance companies that they were trying to save the companies as a "package deal," even though they knew one was insolvent and unsalvageable, two former state insurance officials say.

And while the state Board of Insurance was delaying action, it allowed $13 million to be withdrawn from the insolvent company, according to financial records.

The insurance board knew as early as February that First Service Life Insurance Co. could never be saved and was destined for receivership, said Edward Kubala and John Messengale, who both retired from the insurance board in October to run a consulting firm.

After months of delay, the insurance board took over First Service Life last June and was forced to disclose it had been operating its subsidiary, Knickerbocker Life. Both companies had been owned by El Paso car dealer Maury Kemp.

For five months after taking over First Service, the insurance board told worried policyholders the state was trying to save both companies at once, Kubala and Messengale said. But during the entire time, they said, state officials knew First Service Life was unsalvageable, and that only Knickerbocker could be saved.

First Service owes 150 policyholders more than $32 million. The largest policyholder is El Paso Electric Co., with $20 million invested. Nine Mexican families have millions tied into the company, and scores of El Pasoans have investments of less than $100,000. Records show creditors will get about 8 cents on the dollar when the company is liquidated.

Because First Service was not licensed to do business in Texas, and was selling insurance illegally, policies are not insured.

Knickerbocker has 970 annuity investors, mostly El Pasoans, whose policies total more than $29 million. Knickerbocker was licensed to operate in Texas.

Because Knickerbocker was licensed, the insurance board did not have to publicize its takeover of the financially troubled company in September 1987. But the state couldn't keep its takeover of First Service a secret because the company wasn't licensed.

"It was our belief that if a (takeover) order was issued on First Service Life, it would have to be public, and there was a very definite concern that it would kill Knickerbocker," Messengale told the El Paso Times in an interview Monday in Austin.

For that reason, he said, the board told investors it was trying to save both companies.

Grand jury to investigate allegations of test fixing

CLUTE (AP) — Brazoria County District Attorney Jim Mapel says a county grand jury will investigate allegations that Clute Police Chief Mark Wicker tampered with a government document when he fixed a failing score on a literacy test for a police applicant.

Wicker, 34, appointed chief of this community's 24-person department in November, has admitted correcting at least one answer on a test administered to Pete Soto, one of seven applicants for an opening in the patrol division.

Wicker said the additional grade allowed Soto to score in the passing range. Soto, hired by Wicker, originally scored a 48, while passing was 49, Wicker has said. A perfect score is 60.

The case most likely would be presented to the Feb. 7 grand jury, Mapel said Tuesday. Some department employees have given statements to prosecutors in connection with the test-fixing allegations, the prosecutor said.

Tampering with a government document is a Class A misdemeanor, which carries a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Soto was hired over six other applicants, four of whom passed the test.

Because Wicker did not report the revised test score, he didn't break any rules of the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officers Standards and Education, the agency that drafted the literacy test, David Boatright, the commission's general counsel, said.

Wicker has said he altered the test scores because the department needed Soto, who had previously been employed as a Clute patrolman.

Two months after being hired, Soto and another officer were accused of beating an inmate in the City Jail on Jan. 13. The incident, being investigated by the FBI and Mapel, was recorded on videotape by a department dispatcher.

Mapel said he is assisting the FBI, but plans to see what develops on the federal level before considering whether to pursue the case locally.

Wicker refused comment Tuesday. Department employees, he said, were prohibited from commenting.

New cement may doom potholes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hard-nosed highway engineers from across America watched as workmen in gray laboratory smocks smoothed out a fresh-laid bed of concrete on the floor of a hotel ballroom.

They may have been witnesses to the dawning of a new age of cement.

The product called Pyrament (cement that lasts as long as the Pyramids) will divide cement history into eras: "B.P. and A.P. — Before Pyrament and After Pyrament," proclaimed James E. Stewart, chairman of Lone Star Industries.

"It's a material as close to stone as anything can be without being stone," Stewart said.

Concrete is a mixture of cement powder, sand, water and gravel. Concrete made of Pyrament hardens in four hours. Some poured at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the ballroom of the Omni-Shoreham Hotel was hard as a rock at lunchtime.

That means fix a highway in the night and traffic can roll on it during the next morning's rush hour. By contrast, conventional concrete takes a week or two to cure.

Pyrament costs six to eight cents a pound, twice as much as ordinary cement. "But the cost of the cement is an insignificant part of the cost of construction," said Stewart.

Lone Star, which makes a tenth of the 90 million tons of cement consumed each year in the United States, has been losing business to cheap imported cement.

The company's cement and concrete profits fell in half in 1987. It thinks Pyrament, whose formula is secret, may be the answer to its prayers.

The company invited a thousand transportation research executives, attending a convention, to come kick its tires.

They tried to be skeptical.

"I've put down an awful lot of test pavement in my 33 years as a professor of civil engineering," said James M. Hoover of Iowa State University, who once worked for the Pottawattamie County Engineering Department in Iowa. "This shows excellent potential in terms of flexural and compressive strengths."

Not only can highways be repaired overnight, Lone Star said, but:

—Pyrament's extra strength will permit thinner concrete beams, allowing skyscrapers to have more floors in the same height as those built with run-of-the-mill concrete.

—Pyrament will cure in temperatures as low as 28 degrees Fahrenheit. Conventional concrete won't harden when the temperature falls below 35. So the construction season can be extended deeper into the winter.

—Pyrament can be used to repair emergency facilities in earthquakes or airport runways in combat.

Thirty-five senators work to prevent pay increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate opponents of a 50 percent congressional pay raise are preparing legislation to defeat the increase, and devising strategy to rescind it if it goes through.
The opponents were to unveil their strategy today, only two weeks before the proposed raise could become law due to congressional inaction.
Both houses must defeat the increase to stop it from becoming law on Feb. 8. While Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, has promised a vote, House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, has remained non-committal.

To cover the possibility of House inaction, senators discussed the strategy of passing legislation to rescind the congressional raise if it becomes law.
Former President Reagan, in his budget proposal, recommended that congressional salaries rise from $89,500 to $135,000 for rank-and-file lawmakers.
The presidential recommendation would allow the speaker to earn $175,000 instead of $115,000; and would pay $155,000 to the president pro tempore of the Senate and the majority and minority leaders of each house — all of whom now earn $99,500.

Reagan also recommended 50 percent increases for top political appointees in the executive branch and for judges.
On Tuesday, 35 House members wrote Wright to demand a vote "out of respect for the American taxpayer."
The letter, written by Rep. Robert C. Smith, R-N.H., was signed by 30 Republicans and five Democrats. Wright had no comment.
"The prospect of an increase in congressional salaries has prompted a broad range of comments, but there is one theme that is constant," the letter said. "The American people are firm in their conviction that regardless of the legislative form, there must be a vote on this enormous pay raise."

The letter said that "avoiding this issue is not the answer."
Signing the letter were Democrats Mike Synar, Okla.; G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, Miss.; W.J. "Billy" Tauzin, La.; Timothy J. Penny, Minn.; and Peter A. DeFazio, Ore.
Republicans: Thomas J. Tauke, Iowa; Robert F. Smith, Ore.; Cass Ballenger, N.C.; Howard C. Nielson, Utah; Jim Courter, N.J.; Robert C. Smith, N.H.; Jim Bunning, Ky.; Bob Stump, Ariz.; Peter

Smith, Vt.; Olympia J. Snow, Maine; Bill Emerson, Mo.; John J. Rhodes III, Ariz.; James M. Inhofe, Okla.;

Animal group considers moving shelter location

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

An eight-member committee composed of Big Spring Humane Society officials and Wasson Road-area homeowners met Tuesday night to discuss moving the society's shelter to a location east of U.S. 87 near Comanche Trail Park.

The committee has met seven times since Nov. 2, when several homeowners who live near the shelter, 4200 Wasson Road, complained about the shelter being too close to a residential area.

Residents had complained of excessive noise, foul odors and decreased property values because of the shelter's location.
The committee has since evaluated four potential non-residential sites where the shelter could be relocated.

The latest proposed site — owned by the City of Big Spring — is still being evaluated by the committee, said Bill Crooker, county commissioner, who has moderated each of the meetings.

"This property is the best we've looked at in terms of accessibility... and from the standpoint of being away from homes and businesses of any type," Crooker said.

If the site is deemed appropriate by the committee, the city would likely lease the land to the Humane Society at a nominal rate, Crooker said.

The committee is also in the process of determining the expense of moving the shelter, Crooker said.
Margaret Lloyd, a member of both the committee and Humane Society board, said the Wasson Road-area homeowners stated they would organize fund raisers to help defray moving costs.

Crooker has said the homeowners would also organize a labor force to help move the shelter.

"When we need the manpower we can get it from the neighborhood," he said.

The committee has not set a date for moving and will still consider other locations, Lloyd said.
"We feel like the process is moving along," Lloyd said. "But we don't have a time limit... It's going to take some time to make the move."

While the property near the park is still being evaluated, Crooker said, it seems to be acceptable to both Humane Society officials and the homeowners.

Said Crooker, "At this point in time, I think this piece of property looks very promising."

The committee's next meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Berea Baptist Church, 4204 Wasson Road.

Arab children imitate violent acts

JERUSALEM (AP) — During a kindergarten show-and-tell period in the occupied Gaza Strip, a pupil told of throwing a rock at an Israeli army jeep, causing it to overturn and kill the soldiers in it.
It was all in the child's imagination, of course, said kindergarten administrator Mary Khas in describing what Arab educators and psychologists say is a trend of violent fantasies of children growing up in the 13-month Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation of the Gaza Strip and West Bank.

The experts said Arab children who are 5 and 6 years old will become more aggressive as they become desensitized to the violence and predicted the Israeli-Palestinian conflict may become more brutal as the children grow up.

"All the children have these fantasies," said Khas, director of the American Friends Service Committee's kindergarten program in the Gaza Strip, which runs 14 schools for 1,500 pupils.

She said the violent behavior also shows up on the playground.
"When they're alone they play a game called Arabs and Jews," she said. "They bang on doors and arrest each other."

"I saw one child, who played an Israeli, holding another boy's head to the sand and screaming, 'Yamous, yamous, lick it, lick it, imitating the Hebrew-accented Arabic the soldiers speak,' she said.

Bethlehem University's Nadira Kvorikian said such hostile feelings are spilling over into family life.
"The children are learning how to deal with problems in a violent way and I'm seeing more family violence," Kvorikian said. From last May to August, she studied the effects of the uprising on 80 Palestinian children 11 to 14 years old.

"Children complain that the family can't solve their problems and parents are now afraid of their children."

"When they have an argument with their brothers the first thing they think of is fighting, of throwing stones," she said.

Kvorikian said the children also are becoming alienated from their families, which they see as incapable of protecting them from the Israeli army.

"Children complain that the family can't solve their problems and parents are now afraid of their children," Kvorikian said.

"They try to keep the kids inside so they don't throw stones, but the children want to act like men," she said. "They feel that their parents have been sitting in the refugee camps and doing nothing for 40 years."

Most of the refugees have been living in camps since fleeing from what is now Israel in the 1948 Middle East war. Others came to the camps after Israel captured the West Bank from Jordan and the Gaza Strip from Egypt during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

The generation gap was illustrated in another study in which the Arab father, the traditional role model in Palestinian society, was shown as virtually powerless in the dreams of 11-year-old children in refugee camps.

In 58 out of 75 dreams involving the Arab-Israeli conflict, the father was incapable of rescuing his family from the army, according to a study by Dr. Shafiq Masalha for Save the Children, an international relief organization.

Masalha said that in a typical dream a child will say: "The army entered our house and tied up my father in front of my eyes. I screamed, 'God help us, our lives are in danger.' Then I woke up."

Masalha and a research team of four interviewed 24 children in July 1988 for his clinical study.

He said 70 percent of the dreams he randomly collected centered on the Israeli-Arab struggle. In a similar study in 1982, the conflict appeared in 50 percent of the dreams.

"In dreams there are more confrontations with the Israeli army, and the children are afraid," Masalha said. "But in the dreams I analyzed before the uprising the children sometimes panicked in the confrontations and the dreams became nightmares."

"I see this much less now," he said.

Masalha said the children are growing less fearful of the military and increasingly identifying with the "shebab," the young, rock-throwing Palestinians who confront the Israeli army.

"It seems as though the children are relating to the shebab as a father figure," Masalha said.

"One of the consequences of this change is that there are more confrontations with the Israeli army," he said.

Khas said pre-schoolers have come to idolize the shebab.
"They are the heroes, the strong people," she said. "They are what kids want to be."

behalf of the city for a 5.37-acre tract of land at the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark.
City Finance Director Tom Ferguson said the property must be deeded back to the United States government and offered to other federal agencies, Ferguson explained.
The former NCO club sits on the acreage and is currently leased to Howard College for $1 annually. The property also houses the Southwest Collegiate Institute For the Deaf.

Ferguson said completion of the quitclaim deed process will take approximately one year.

Councilman Chuck Condray advised that the city recently authorized the payment of $1.1 million to businesses for goods and services and, of that figure, about $750,000 was paid to Big Spring merchants.
"The operation of city government is big business and the payments to local businesses is a real shot in the arm," Condray said.

City Manager Hal Boyd scheduled a work session for council members on Monday beginning at 5 p.m. in the McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark conference room.

Although Boyd didn't specify the topics of discussion, he said there will be five separate matters addressed.

According to public records and associates, Tower's consulting firm of Tower and Associates has been on annual retainer with Martin-Marietta, Textron, LTV Aerospace and Defense Co., Rockwell International and British Aerospace.

Tower's firm also received about $100,000 a year under a contract for consulting services to Hicks and Associates, a McLean, Va.-based aerospace consulting firm headed by Donald Hicks, a former undersecretary of defense.

A lengthy FBI background check of Tower pushed his personal life into the forefront, including his bitter divorce and reports of drinking and womanizing.

Bush, in announcing the appointment of Tower, dismissed "a lot of rumors that proved to be groundless," and said, "I am totally satisfied in that regard."

Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and John Warner, R-Va., ranking members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said they would read the FBI reports on all nominees before the hearings.

Expected to raise the question of Tower's private life is Paul Weyrich, chairman of Coalitions for America, a conservative think tank. Weyrich is scheduled to testify before the committee next Tuesday.

In an interview last week, Weyrich said he opposes the Tower nomination because the former senator fails to meet the ethical standards Bush envisioned for his administration.

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

The nest egg is mortgaged

When the baby boomers begin to retire in 2015, will Social Security be there to gild their golden years? That question, supposedly settled earlier in the decade, is once again on the table, as America's budget profligacy threatens the nest egg Social Security is building for next century's retirees.

In its first 50 years, Social Security could finance pensions simply by taxing workers at relatively low rates and transferring the money to retirees. But government recognized in 1983 that providing for the enormous baby-boom generation presented a new challenge. It saw that by 2020 the proportion of retirees to workers would grow so large that Social Security taxes would have to rise to extortionate levels. Instead, President Reagan and Congress decided to revise the pay-as-you-go system, increasing payroll taxes now to deliberately create a growing Social Security fund that could be drawn down in the next century to pay benefits to baby-boom retirees. Unlike their parents, members of the postwar generation would be asked to fund their own Social Security pensions, as well as those of their elders.

That nest egg is already accumulating. In this fiscal year, Social Security will collect $52 billion more in payroll taxes than it will pay out to current retirees. The surplus is deposited in the Social Security Trust Fund, which uses it to purchase government bonds. By current projections, the fund will grow to $12 trillion in the next century.

The problem for baby boomers is that the government is double-counting the Social Security surplus. On one set of books, the surplus is already committed to pay out future retirement benefits to baby boomers. But because Social Security is included as part of the unified federal budget, government also counts the surplus as revenue, offsetting federal spending.

This double-counting is convenient for presidents and lawmakers. It makes the deficit look smaller. But counting the surplus against the rest of the budget only conceals the fact that spending for non-Social Security activities is growing faster than non-Social Security revenues. It is the governmental equivalent of an individual who diligently puts aside money from his paycheck for retirement, then goes to the bank to borrow money to pay for food and medical care. What good is it to have a $200,000 nest egg if, at retirement, there are huge outstanding bills for past consumption?

As long as the surplus is used to mask current deficits, the nation will be faced with a stark choice when Social Security begins cashing those bonds to pay baby boomers' pensions: raise taxes, borrow from future generations or skip out on its pension promises. Thus accumulating a Social Security surplus is not enough. If the nation is not to break its commitment to workers who expect a lifetime of higher payroll taxes to be repaid in future retirement benefits, it must guarantee that the surplus is invested in building America's economic strength, not spent for current programs.

To that end, a number of groups, including the Business-University Council on Competitiveness and economists at the Brookings Institution, recommend that Social Security be taken out of the federal budget. That would expose the larger deficit that the Social Security Surplus hides. All of that deficit, they believe, must be eliminated. For baby boomers, the good news about that is that it would protect their nest egg and guarantee that the surplus would go to increasing U.S. investment. The bad news is that baby boomers, like everyone else, would have to pay higher taxes to eliminate the deficit. Such is the curse of a generation unlucky enough to have been born in such numbers.

A warning from God's Eye Patrol

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

Did anybody else who watched the inauguration on television notice that George Bush didn't close his eyes during Billy Graham's prayer?

Not closing your eyes during a prayer is a major gaffe as far as I'm concerned, and I will explain why later.

Ronald Reagan had his eyes closed during the prayer. He had probably simply dozed off but it still counts.

In fact, the only other person television caught on the inaugural platform who didn't have his or her eyes closed was Billy Graham.

That's because his prayer was so long (up to six minutes by some estimates — no wonder Reagan went to sleep) Dr. Graham had to keep his eyes open to read it.

It was my older cousin who explained to me the importance of keeping one's eyes closed during prayer.

"Not only is it disrespectful," she said, "but if you do it enough you'll go to hell."

My older cousin was forever explaining things like that to me. Among other things she listed as tickets to hell:

Snatching a few grapes as you walk by the fruit department at the grocery store.

Finding money on the ground and not returning it to the rightful owner, who always happened to be my older cousin when I found money on the ground.

Grabbing a couple of grapes out of the bank while your Monopoly opponent is in the bathroom. How did my older cousin always know when I had been pilfering in the Monopoly bank when she was in the bathroom?

When my older cousin was 18, incidentally, she ran away and joined a religious cult, led by Swami Leroy, who had run the fruit department at the grocery store.

After that, I appointed myself as a monitor of God's Eye Patrol.

I passed along my older cousin's warning about closing one's eyes during prayer to any infidel I came across.

In the sixth grade, decades before school prayer got into so much trouble, we opened each day of classes by reciting the Lord's Prayer.

One morning, we had reached the part about trespassing and I noticed Alvin Bates didn't have his eyes closed.

At the end of the prayer, I reported this transgression to our teacher, Mrs. Bohannon.

"Teacher," I said, filled with the spirit of the Lord, "Alvin Bates didn't have his eyes closed during the prayer. Not only was he disrespectful, but if he does it enough he'll go to hell."

"How," replied Mrs. Bohannon, "did you know Alvin didn't have his eyes closed if your eyes weren't open too?"

Without missing a beat, I said, "The Lord works in mysterious ways."

Anyway, I'm almost out of room here and I haven't really said all that much about President Bush not closing his eyes during Billy Graham's prayer. Anybody who is so in favor of the Pledge of Allegiance ought to know better than not closing his eyes during a prayer.

But the new president perhaps was so caught up in the moment he forgot to close his eyes, or maybe he was thinking about not blowing any of his lines while taking the oath of office.

I hope one of these instances was the case, and I hope the president always keeps his eyes closed during any and all future prayers.

Looking back through history there's probably enough of our presidents in hell as it is.

Quotes

"I don't want to die, I'm not going to kid you... (but) I deserve, certainly, the most extreme punishment society has. I think society deserves to be protected from me and from others like me." — serial killer Ted Bundy, in an interview hours before his execution for murdering a 12-year-old Florida girl.

"It was a nightmare. Death, once again death. The brutality, the barbarity." — Argentine President Raul Alfonsin, in a nationally broadcast speech, on his visit to the suburban army base where at least 36 people were killed in a battle between troops and besieged civilian commandos.

"I'm just overwhelmed by both the pork rinds and the Texas hot sauce. You talk about cooperation, ecumenical spirit, outreach. Just lovely." — President Bush, on a gift he received from House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, at a meeting with House and Senate leaders on the budget.

What future is blowing in the wind?

By DAVID HAWKINGS
Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — George Bush promised four times in his inaugural address that "a new breeze is blowing" in America and the world, but pinpointing its direction on the political compass seems to have been postponed.

Bush's first speech as the nation's 41st president was a departure from recent inaugural addresses in that it contained neither a laundry list of legislative specifics nor a grand rhetorical claim on the future of the free world.

Was he simply procrastinating, postponing for as long as possible the inevitable political rough and tumble over the course of the nation into the next decade?

It would seem so. After a lifetime in posts that gave him one of the best presidential resumes ever, Bush in his first week has seemed ill at ease with the power he has won — at long last — to use his experience as his own boss.

Having been reared politically in the Rockefeller wing of Republicans, he matured to the pinnacle of power by aligning himself with the conservative Reagan wing. Now he seems to be delaying the day when he will have to put his foot in one camp or the other.

Bush's uncomfortable feelings about the use of power and the identification with an ideology were clear to many who witnessed his inaugural address up close. The speech was brilliantly written, and its delivery seemed polished enough when viewed through the television tube. But from the third row below the podium at the Capitol, where newspaper reporters were seated, Bush seemed like many men do at their own weddings.

He obviously knew the litany because he had rehearsed it, but seemed oddly unfamiliar with the vows.

He had to know the magnitude of the moment because he had been seeking it for so many years, but his speech still lacked passion.

Part of the flatness of the moment may have been an unconscious result of Bush's upper class New England upbringing, which instilled the virtue of modesty even at the moment of greatest triumph.

And part of it as well may have been a deliberate decision by the disciplined and astute Bush to set small expectations, allowing him to put off the big presidential policy choices and grand pronouncements until he is more comfortable with his new surroundings and stature. Until then, the speech suggested

Bush will work on something with which he does feel comfortable. He will set a tone that is distinct from his predecessor, with an emphasis on bipartisan congressional consultation and on actually practicing the things he preaches by going to church, spending time with his family and demanding high ethical standards from subordinates.

As president, Bush said, he will lead by example in helping Americans to show their children "a sense of what it means to be a loyal friend, a loving parent, a citizen who leaves his home, his neighborhood and town better than he found it."

No consultation with Congress can produce that. But a start so deliberately slow in policy development must accelerate before too long, or else the federal government stands a chance of stagnating, the federal deficit stands a better chance of swelling, and the members of the House and Senate stand assured of reaping 50 percent more pay without doing 5 percent more work.

Bush's next big chance to begin talking specifics and taking sides will come Feb. 9, when he is scheduled to outline his own priorities for the coming budget in a speech to a joint session of Congress.

That would be a fine time for Bush to declare from where he believes the new breezes are blowing, and to position the weather-vane atop his White House with confidence.

Sanctity of life is not flexible

Right-to-lifers made news headlines yesterday as they proclaimed the sanctity of life, and prayed for the unborn.

A death made headlines, too. Theodore Bundy was executed in Starke, Fla. for the murder of a 12-year-old girl. He had been convicted of two other murders and suspected in the slayings of as many as 36 other young women.

Surely if any man deserved to die, Bundy probably did. But isn't his life, as evil as it seemed to be, as sanctified as that of an unborn fetus?

Who said a prayer for Bundy? Killing Bundy did not bring his victims back to life. Life imprisonment without parole would have prevented him from taking another life. Instead, society chose to legally kill him.

We'll never know what made Bundy, and others like him, what he was — a bad gene, a bad environment, a poor upbringing, a combination of all of these. Or what fortuitous circumstances allow the rest of us to live without the urge to do unspeakable things to others. Shouldn't society feel sorrow for Bundy because he was apparently incapable of living a normal life as we feel sorrow for the victims whose lives he cut short?

I wonder, too, about the man who pulled the switch, providing the electric power that executed Bundy. What does such cold-blooded, albeit legalized, murder do to the one who commits it? Does he go home and kiss his wife and children and settle down to dinner and the TV? Does his conscience conveniently excuse killing in cold blood because it is legal?

Most of all, I am appalled at the three-ring-circus atmosphere that surrounded Bundy's death. A killing, even a legal one, should be an act of sadness and horror. Instead, hundreds of people asked to be allowed to be present. T-shirts and souvenirs were sold outside the gate of the prison proclaiming "Tuesday is Fry Day" and "Burn, Bundy, Burn."

Sparklers and firecrackers were lighted and people cheered. A radio station advised its listeners to turn off all surplus appliances at the appointed hour so there would be plenty of electricity.

What kind of world do we live in if killing becomes a cause of celebration?

If we believe, as I do, that taking a life is wrong, then what justification do we offer for capital punishment? It is more convenient, and cheaper certainly, to kill a prisoner than to keep him behind bars. But we bear the shame of murder as surely as did Bundy.

As a civilized nation, it is time to put the death penalty behind us. To condone some murders while condemning others is to blur the line between right and wrong, good and evil. It cheapens our sense of justice and weakens our moral character. We need look no further than the celebration outside Starke prison to know that this is so.

I would hope that the same people who would condemn a woman for choosing abortion will take up the fight against legalized murder in the form of capital punishment.

Government plans four-mile ditch

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The federal government is planning to dig a 4-mile-long ditch at the border near San Diego to halt vehicles used to smuggle illegal aliens into the country, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

"This is going to work to the extent that it will keep vehicles out," a member of the Bush administration, who was not identified, was quoted as saying. "This is not intended to stop people from crossing on foot."

The ditch, to be 14 feet wide and 5 feet deep, would be constructed of soil and concrete near the port of entry at San Ysidro, the crossing point between Tijuana and San Diego.

It would be dug about four miles east of San Ysidro in the Otay Mesa area, a flat section where officials say vehicles can easily sneak across the border, particularly at night.

California postpones bond sales

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. George Deukmejian's administration is postponing until the mid-1990s the sale of more than $4 billion in bonds because the state can't afford the principal and interest, an aide says.

The bonds would have provided financing for school construction, earthquake safety, the homeless, safe drinking water and juvenile halls.

The decision to delay the bond sales helped Deukmejian balance his $47.8 billion 1989-90 budget proposal while rebuilding the emergency reserve to $1.1 billion, said Stan Stancell, his assistant finance director.

The postponement permits a delay in budgeting tens of millions of dollars for repayment, which must begin almost as soon as bonds are sold.

Failure to budget repayment could raise "big questions" on Wall Street that could weaken the state's credit rating, Stancell said.

Trek to reunify Eskimo cultures

NEW YORK (AP) — A Soviet-American dog sledding team plans to make a 1,200-mile good-will trek across the Bering Strait, the first officially sanctioned crossing since 1948.

Ten men and two women — six Soviets and six Americans — will depart March 1 from Anadyr, Siberia, on the two-month journey, visiting 30 native settlements along an old Arctic trade route.

"Some of the team members have relatives on the other side," so the visits could get emotional, said expedition co-leader Paul Schurke, 33, of Minneapolis.

The expedition is an effort to call attention to the common cultural heritage of the indigenous peoples of the Bering region, Schurke said at a news conference Tuesday at the swanky Russian Tea Room restaurant.

And since villagers in the remote region rarely get out-of-town visitors, he said, they are expecting big welcomes, especially from children who will probably get the day off from school to ski along with the team.

The Soviet co-leader is Dmitry Shparo, 47, of Moscow, who in 1979 won his country's highest honor, the Order of Lenin, for successfully leading a ski expedition to the North Pole. Last year, he was a member of a Soviet-Canadian trek across the polar ice cap from the USSR to Canada.

Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, called the Bering Bridge Expedition "another step toward melting the ice curtain."

Murkowski, who attended Tuesday's news conference, noted that the U.S. government is working on a treaty with the Soviets to permit American Eskimos to visit and trade with their counterparts in Siberia without visas.

In 1938, the two countries signed an agreement that enabled travel in the Bering region.

Arctic oil issue is test of Bush stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists are trying to enlist President Bush's support to keep oil companies out of a vast Arctic wildlife refuge, a battle they say will be a litmus test on how much he really wants to protect the environment.

For years there has been a fierce debate in Congress and between environmentalists and the oil companies over whether a 1.5 million-acre coastal strip of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in northeastern Alaska should be opened for oil drilling.

In the final days of the Reagan administration, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel formally urged Congress to clear the way for oil and gas development in the refuge and proposed a land swap deal as the best way to do it.

A dozen of the leading environmental and conservation groups including some of the movement's biggest names urged Bush in a letter Tuesday to review Interior's position with an eye toward reversing the department's recommendation to Congress.

"We have strenuously opposed this proposal as a shortsighted sacrifice of a national treasure for a few months of energy that is readily procurable elsewhere," the groups said.

Bush has said his administration intends to be a strong defender of the environment, but the president also has indicated in the past that he favors expanded oil drilling in the Arctic.

Congress must approve opening up any of the 19-million acre wildlife refuge in northeastern Alaska for drilling.

On the first day of the 101st Congress, legislation was introduced with 38 co-sponsors in the House to declare the 1.5 million acre coastal strip of the Arctic wildlife refuge a protected wilderness. On the same day, other legislation also was introduced in the House to open the same land for oil and gas development.

The oil industry "would like to move this fast" and "create a sense of national emergency" before environmental groups can mobilize, suggested George Frampton Jr., president of the Wilderness Society.

Death toll a quarter of estimate

SHARORA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Officials said today the death toll from an earthquake and mudslide in Soviet Central Asia was only about a quarter of the 1,000 originally estimated, and called off efforts to find more survivors.

"We will transform the settlement of Sharora into a common grave with a monument to commemorate the victims of this catastrophe," said Khusain Kasymov, Communist Party chief in the Tadjikistan republic's stricken Gissar region.

Tadjikistan Prime Minister

Izzatullo Khayoyev said 274 people were known to have died in Monday's pre-dawn quake, which toppled all 88 mud-brick dwellings in Okuli-Bolo and sent mudslides as high as 50 feet onto two other hillside villages, Okuli-Poyen and Sharora.

"There may be a difference of five or seven people in the casualties, but no more," Khayoyev said in an impromptu interview on a grassy hill overlooking Okuli-Bolo, about 20 miles southwest of the capital, Dushanbe.

Shiite militias agree to cease-fire

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Warring Shiite Moslem factions in south Lebanon agreed to a cease-fire early today after three days of mediation by Syria and Iran, a Syrian Foreign Ministry communique said.

The statement, issued after a night of talks at the ministry, said the Syrian-backed Amal militia and the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, had reached "preliminary agreement" on ending bloody clashes in south Lebanon.

The fighting, which began Dec. 31, was the latest flareup in a 9-month-old power struggle between the two factions for control of Lebanon's 1 million Shiites, the country's largest sect.

More than 500 people have been killed and 1,500 wounded in a series of battles that began in April. Several earlier cease-fires collapsed under the deep-rooted hostility between the rival militias.

Unit reportedly ignores order

LONDON (AP) — The Irish Republican Army is engulfed in a serious internal dispute because its most ruthless cross-border unit has apparently refused to obey the IRA leadership's order to disband, a newspaper reported today.

The Times of London based its report on unnamed IRA supporters, whom it quoted as saying the order to disband stemmed from a dispute over the unit's killing of Protestant civilians.

The paper said the unit was likely to continue as a renegade group.

Another London newspaper, The Independent, on Tuesday quoted unnamed IRA sources as saying the guerrilla organization had ordered the unit disbanded and disarmed because of the slayings.

The mainly Roman Catholic IRA is fighting to end British rule in predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland.

thern Ireland and unite the province with the Irish Republic under socialist rule.

The unit in question is reportedly based just across the border from Northern Ireland around the towns of Ballyshannon and Bundoran.

The Times said the unit had coordinated the bombing of an annual memorial service for the dead of two world wars at Enniskillen in County Fermanagh on Nov. 8, 1987. The attack, which killed 11 civilians, provoked worldwide condemnation of the guerrillas.

The IRA admitted it made a grave error and apologized.

The Independent reported Tuesday that one of the killings that angered IRA leaders was that of Harold Keyes, a 23-year-old Protestant from County Fermanagh in Northern Ireland.

Two gunmen killed Keyes Jan. 15.

Houston sewing circle stitches for the needy

HOUSTON — Johnnie Dale, left, and Odisa Smith enjoy visiting and stitching at the Hester House sewing circle. The circle makes toys for children in hospitals, warm slippers for the wheelchair-bound and baby clothing for newborns.

HOUSTON (AP) — The old-fashioned sewing circle lives at Hester House.

Over gossip and reminiscence, about a dozen women — make that ladies — meet weekly at the community center to stitch tiny garments and piece together tiny quilts for tiny babies they'll never know or see.

Volunteering their time for the Red Cross, these senior citizens make clothes for newborns at Jefferson Davis Hospital, slippers for patients at the Veterans Administration Hospital and other worthy projects.

Johnnie Dale and O.D. Scott sat at opposite ends of the long work table on a recent Monday as they worked the initial squares of a Bow Tie quilt. The bright red fabric was pieced with a cheery red print, and each square will eventually be bordered with solid red. The red stands out in the pastel palette of the other projects — the sea-foam green booties, the tiny yellow-checked bib, the pink bows on a baby sacque.

Velma Wells, leader of the group and a Red-Cross volunteer with 18 years experience, moves around the room, making sure that each seamstress has the notions she needs at the moment. If she doesn't have yellow seam binding, she asks if white will do.

"This is no sewing class," Wells said. "We do what the talent is. People need everything we make — quilts, sacques, bibs."

In one corner, Rosa Gaskin knitted with determination and within the hour completed two baby blue booties. She has been knitting and crocheting for 56 years with another group of craftswomen who got organized on her front porch.

"You name it, and I've made it," Gaskin said.

For an hour the room is alive with the whir of the sewing machine, soft laughter and flying fingers. The women are absorbed in their work but manage to catch up on the antics of grandchildren, the latest visit to the doctor (the women are all senior citizens) and what's doing at church.

O.D. Scott, 63, doesn't do too much sewing anymore. Her eyes are getting bad, she said, but she likes to sit with the group and remember the good old days. She took a trip with the Hester House seniors, including some of the sewing circle, and they still talk about what a thrill it was to visit the White House.

Scott has traveled a good deal and likes to tell about her trips to New York, Seattle and other points.

And Bennie Edwards is wearing a brooch with a portrait of two young boys that fairly begs friends, "Ask me about my grandchildren." She tells all about the two children "who look just like their father."

But conversation doesn't mean they aren't working away at various projects. Before Christmas the group completed more than 300 Christmas stockings that other Red Cross volunteers would fill with pencils, soap and other useful items for needy children.

Leading Jewish group backs values teaching

NEW YORK (AP) — A leading American Jewish civil rights organization is endorsing the movement to teach values in public schools, claiming "moral relativism" represents a greater danger than the possibility of church-state abuses.

The American Jewish Committee, overcoming fears that values education could be "a smokescreen for teaching religious precepts," has approved a report by a task force that encourages schools to define, teach "and put into action" values that are at the foundation of a democracy.

"I think what happened over the last 20 years... was a certain kind of moral relativism did enter in. There was confusion about right and wrong," said Irving M. Levine, the committee's director of national affairs. "What you have now is a reinsertion of the ethno-cultural-religious traditions and an attempt to develop a consensus around those traditional values."

The report, to be released next month, is considered significant because of the past reluctance of many groups representing minority religions to enter into the issue. A copy of the report was obtained by The Associated Press.

"The easiest thing to do is let's not touch it because it's too risky," said Arnold Gardner, vice president of the American Jewish Committee and chairman of the task force that wrote the report. "I think it's a natural evolution of our attitude and the ability to distinguish between matters of religious faith and shared values."

The role of the public school in teaching values is coming under increasing scrutiny as educators and others debate the effect of "value-free education." In a 1986 speech that focused national attention on the issue, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said, "When you get kids for eight years in an elementary school and you never say anything to them about values, I suspect what you're saying to them is there are no values."

A panel of educators brought together by the Association of Supervision and Curriculum Development recommended in its final report last year "that schools define and teach a morality of justice, altruism, diligence and respect for human dignity."

The National Council of Churches, representing main-line Protestant denominations, last year launched an experimental program to bring together churches, schools and teacher-education colleges to help communities establish a consensus on values that should be taught.

Churches and schools have "used the church-state separation principle as a reason to hide. That's turning around significantly," said Margaret L. Shafer of the council's Division on Church and Society.

The Jewish committee's report said that in many cases, religious and civic values are identical. Among these are compassion, a regard for human worth and dignity, integrity and justice. The report said a non-sectarian consensus can be reached on what values should be taught.

"You don't have enormous controversy over those values. You have enormous controversy over opening a foot in the door for sectarian religion," Levine said.

Methods the report suggests for introducing values in the classroom include a "conflict corner" where two students could work out their differences and a teacher-moderated "fairness committee" to propose solutions to classroom problems.

Marilyn Braveman, the committee's director of education, gave an example of how values can be taught. She told of a second-grade teacher whose class was incubating 20 chicken eggs for a science project, and suggested opening an egg each week to monitor the eggs' embryonic development.

When one student told the teacher privately that he thought it was cruel to kill the chicks, the teacher brought the issue to the class.

District Court filings

HERALD STAFF REPORT

A Big Spring family has been granted two separate settlements in a suit stemming from a 1987 collision between an automobile and a motorcycle.

Karen Crooker Proffitt filed suit Jan. 13 against Teresa Sue Mattesen, alleging that Mattesen struck a motorcycle driven by Proffitt's minor son, Jay Tilden Proffitt, after running a red light Dec. 23, 1987.

Jay Tilden Proffitt and his passenger Seth Proffitt were injured; the Honda Spree motorcycle and helmet Jay Tilden Proffitt was using were damaged, according to the suit. The settlement signed Jan. 13 by District Judge James Gregg orders $3,400 in damages for the injuries to Jay Tilden Proffitt and damages to the motorcycle, and $2,500 in damages to Seth Proffitt, who suffered a broken leg.

Medical expenses for both are included in the settlement, which also calls for an annuity to pay $4,000 annually for five years to Seth Proffitt and $350 per month from Sept. 1, 1986 through August 1, 2000.

In other District Court action: Three Big Spring residents have filed suit against J.C. Penney Co. Inc., alleging they were held against their wills, accused of theft and interrogated by store employees.

O.T. and Almonica Mitchell and Linda Fay Banks allege in their Jan. 10 suit that they sustained unspecified damages during the July 28 incident when other customers in the store saw them being led to other parts of the store and heard them being questioned by store employees.

They also claim they suffered mental anguish, embarrassment and humiliation and will continue to do so as a result of the incident. The three had been, with the assistance of a sales clerk, comparing curtains for prospective purchase, according to the suit, during a lengthy session.

When they carried their choices to the checkstand, they advised the clerk there to check with the sales clerk they had earlier consulted to determine whether the curtains had been repacked in the proper bags and with the proper prices, according to the suit.

After the checkout clerk left, the suit alleges, a store employee identified as the acting manager came to the checkstand, accused the three of theft, and ordered them to the store office, where they were held and questioned for about two hours concerning altered, defaced and damaged price tags on curtains in the store, according to the suit.

The three seek unspecified damages, exemplary damages, interest and costs of suit.

Jim and Connie Traylor filed suit against ERA Realtors, Lila Estes and Carla Bennett, alleging deceptive trade practices.

The suit claims the Traylor's signed a contract to have their home, located on Rt. 1, sold at 6 percent commission by ERA, which agreed in the contract to place a "For Sale" sign at the home, list it in the Multiple Listing Service publication with accurate information provided by the Traylor's and show it to prospective buyers and to other realtors using the MLS on "Caravan Day."

The suit alleges the contract was signed March 14; no sign was placed at the property until after July 4; the property was not advertised with a picture in the Multiple Listing Service publication; the MLS listing contained several errors, including the amount of land with the home, the size of several rooms, the type of heating and cooling system, the type of foundation under the home, and the erroneous information that a water well on the property was connected to city water.

The suit also claims the defendants did not return the Traylor's calls after the incorrect listing was published, and that the Traylor's have an "identifiable sale" lost because of the realtors' alleged misconduct.

The Traylor's requested a jury trial for their suit, seeking $65,000 damages for the lost sale, $30,000 damages for mental anguish, $500 for expenses and $1,500 for attorneys' fees, plus restitution, court costs and interest.

Cosden Employees Federal Credit Union filed suit against Henry Holguin and Ramon Holguin, alleging the two signed a promissory note for $11,267.52 on March 18 and defaulted Dec. 28 on a due balance of $4,934.97, with interest of $1.49 per day from Dec. 28.

The note was secured with a 1987 Nissan pickup, according to the suit, which seeks the unpaid balance, interest, court costs and attorneys' fees.

Two Howard County farmers, Donnie Reid and Jody Reid, have filed suit against PVS Industries and the Texas Plant and Soil Laboratory Service, alleging deceptive trade practices.

The Jan. 13 suit alleges that PVS, when the Reids consulted the business concerning fertilizer for some 2,900 acres contained in 10 tracts which they farm in Howard County, recommended soil testing by the laboratory.

The Reids sent samples for analysis by the laboratory prior to the 1987 planting season, according to the suit, which alleges that the lab recommended fertilizer be directly applied in the furrow prior to planting.

The amounts and percentages of fertilizer recommended were too strong for the Reids' land, according to the suit, and the resulting burned roots, poor growth and spotty emergence of the cotton required them to replant in less favorable conditions.

The Reids' crop that year was also affected by the improper fertilizer, resulting in losses of both quality and quantity of cotton, according to the suit, which seeks damages, interest, court costs and attorneys' fees.

A Sterling County man has filed suit against Chevron U.S.A., alleging he suffered serious injuries after he blacked out and fell 16 feet to the ground while checking on the fuel levels at the Chevron storage facility in Howard County.

The suit, filed in behalf of Donald Kariainen, alleges negligence on the part of Chevron for failing to warn him of the tank's escaping fumes and for unsafe working conditions. He claims in the suit that he suffered serious injuries to the head, neck, shoulders and back.

Kariainen is suing for past and future medical bills, physical pain and mental anguish, loss of income, physical impairment and court costs. The suit seeks unspecified damages and a jury trial.

William and Geraldine Hill filed suit against Jim Richard Hogg and Viola Denise Hill, alleging negligent driving on the part of Hogg and Viola Hill resulted in a collision, causing more than $3,000 damage to William and Geraldine Hill's car.

The suit alleges Hogg improperly changed lanes and cut off the Hills' car. The suit also alleges negligence on the part of Viola Hill, driver of the Hills' car, for failure to use the brakes or avoid the collision and passing when it was unsafe to do so.

Geraldine Hill — a backseat passenger in the car driven by Viola Hill — alleges her neck and back were injured in the collision. She and William Hill are suing for her medical bills, pharmacy bills, anguish and $3,127.15 in damages sustained to the car plus interest.

Hogg has filed a motion denying wrongdoing on his part and alleging damages mentioned by the Hills are not properly specified.

Majority votes against solicitations by phone

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest your columns about telephone solicitation, and agree it is sometimes a nuisance. But I am chairman of the fund-raising committee for a local symphony orchestra, and we could never survive without telephone solicitations. We write letters first, but most people ignore letters, so we resort to telephoning — and we do not give up until we have made five telephone calls.

Dear Abby

I do not like to call people, and I can understand their irritation if they are interrupted in lovemaking or some other pleasantries. However, lovemaking can be resumed later — a dead symphony orchestra is not easily revived, so I continue to call.

beg for money is welcome. — LARS B. LOFGREN, M.D., TALENT, ORE.

DEAR DR. LOFGREN: Believe me to understand your problem, but I still maintain that the telephone is in the home for the convenience of the person who pays for it.

Read on, please: DEAR ABBY: The problems created by aggressive telephone solicitation can be more than merely disturbing.

Not long ago, my wife, who is undergoing chemotherapy treatments for cancer, received a phone call from a local cemetery, telling her that she had "won" a cemetery lot worth $500!

She replied, "Thank you, but I am not ready to die yet!" She was visibly upset and wondered aloud if perhaps the American Cancer Society might have given them her name. Of course they had not, but it is apparent that some controls over telephoning people to solicit business are desperately needed.

— ANGRY IN MANSFIELD, OHIO
DEAR ANGRY: My stand on telephone solicitation for any reason, which includes consumer researchers who want only to ask busy homemakers what kind of soap or cleanser they use, met with some angry responses from professional researchers.

M.E.N. demands equality in kitchen

By JOE REED
Special to the Herald
As founder and president (self-elected) of M.E.N. (Men-Equality-Now), I dedicate this column to all men that are sick and tired of the sexist attitudes that prevail among women; a column whose purpose will be to stamp out that blatantly feminist saying, "keep them working and in debt."

JOE REED

I call upon men everywhere to take their rightful place in society. We men can no longer be looked upon as merely "bread winners." We demand the right to also be "bread makers." The just call of M.E.N. is for equal rights in the kitchen.

Why are men unequal in the kitchen? This question must be answered if we are to eliminate the discrimination that prevails among the women of this nation. Is it because men are not capable of understanding the mysteries of the kitchen? Is it because men do not have the mentality to comprehend the strange alchemy of the mixtures of meats and vegetables stewing over a flame? Is it because the principles of simmering and baking too complex for the male mind? The answer is a resounding no. Why, then, have men been denied equal rights in the kitchen?

The answer is obvious. It is the result of the way we were reared. Women were brought up to believe the kitchen as their sacred domain. Through the years, they have developed an "old girl net-work" that exists for one purpose only, to keep men out of the kitchen.

Why? Through diligent research, I have reached the conclusion that women are afraid. If men were to become their equals in the kitchen, they fear they would lose their femininity. They fear men will become independent and no longer have need of them.

To reach the goal of being a liberated man, I promise you that this column will carry no quiche recipes. We will not be concerned with nutrition, calories, or dieting. A liberated man believes in quality of life. He likes what is good, not what someone says is good for him.

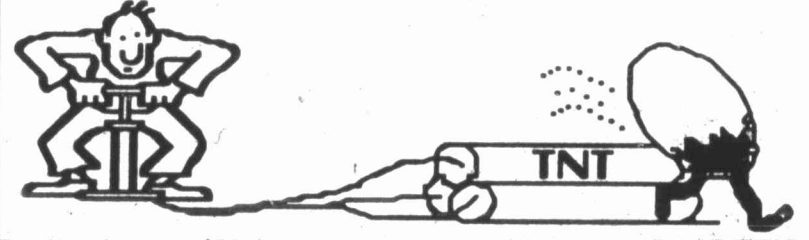

If you master the recipes I will teach you in future columns, I guarantee that you will become an accomplished cook and can be an equal with any woman in the kitchen.

Rule #1 - Never allow a female in the kitchen while you are cooking, even if you have to lock the door.

Rule #2 - Assemble all ingredients before you start cooking.

Rule #3 - Never, ever indicate doubts about your culinary abilities or ask questions.

The next column will feature your first meal as a liberated man. Breakfast: "Mock orange coffee cake."

Food Taste America Company offers recipe contest

If you happen to be one the millions of recipe testers who toil over a hot stove, or are thinking about entering your very first contest, you may be curious about your competition. The truth of the matter is that recipe contests attract all kinds of people from all over the country, all eager to cook their way to fame and fortune.

Swift-Eckrich, the sponsor of the "Taste America" Deli Recipe Contest, has received entries from as far away as Hawaii, from tiny town and big cities, from business executive and homemakers.

The "Taste America" entries are a good barometer of cooking trends. Specialty cheeses, fresh herbs and exotic produce were frequently used with the deli meats.

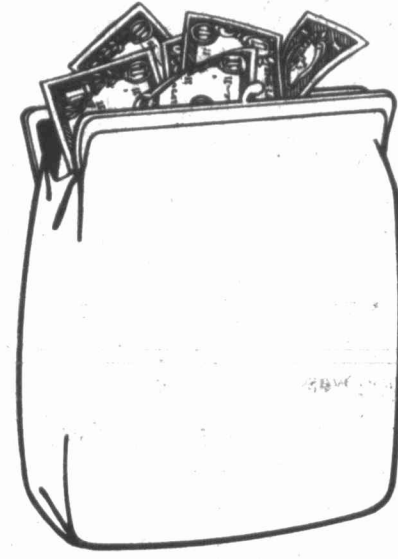

What will judges be looking for this year? "Recipes with regional American flavors and an imaginative twists that are short, simple and good tasting," responded a veteran judge. "A recipe with no more than eight ingredients that can be prepared in 30 minutes or less," said another.

Contestants will be competing for 16 cash prizes totaling $16,250. In addition to a $5,000 grand prize, there will be three $70 first prizes awarded nationally in each of three categories - entrees, sandwiches and appetizers/snacks - in each of five regions.

Recipes may use any of the Swift Premium, Peter Eckrich and Butterball deli meat found in the supermarket service deli (pre-packaged meats are not eligible), either alone or in combination. The meats may be sliced, shaved, cut into strips or cubed, but not ground or chopped.

Beginning Feb. 1, send your favorite deli sandwich, main dish and/or appetizer/snack recipe to: "Taste America" Deli Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 930, Barrington, Ill. 60011.

Entries must be postmarked by midnight May 3 and received no later than May 10 to qualify. For complete contest rules, stop by your supermarket service deli, or send a self-addressed, stamped #10 envelope to: TA Rules, P.O. Box 1370, Barrington, Ill. 60011.

This week's Recipe Exchange features the some of the 1988 grand prize-winning recipe.

TURKEY STEAKS WITH SAUSALITO SALSA
Priscilla Yee, Concord, Calif., grand prize winner
3 slices (1/2-inch thick) Turkey breast, about 1 1/2 pounds
3/4 cup diced, seeded tomato
1/2 cup peeled, diced orange
1 can (4 ounces) diced green chilies
1/2 cup thinly sliced green onions
3 tbs. fresh cilantro, chopped
2 to 3 tsp. pared, minced gingerroot
1/4 tsp. salt, optional
1 to 2 tbs. butter or margarine
Cilantro sprigs

Cut each turkey slice into 2 pieces; cover and set aside. Combine tomato, orange, chilies, onions, cilantro, gingerroot and salt in medium bowl; set aside. Melt butter in large skillet over medium-high heat. Saute turkey steaks, half at a time if necessary, until lightly browned on both sides, about 3 to 5 minutes. Transfer to serving platter; spoon salsa on top. Garnish with cilantro. Makes 6 servings.

CAJUN-LIMA BEANS
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 tbs. oil
1 can (17-ounce) lima beans, drained
1 can (8-ounce) stewed tomatoes
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup chopped red pepper
1/4 tsp. basil
1/4 tsp. hot pepper sauce
Dash allspice
Dash crushed bay leaf
Cook onion in oil until soft. Stir in remaining ingredients. Bring to boil; reduce heat. Simmer 5 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper, if desired. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

CREAM SPINACH TOPPED POTATOES
4 slices bacon, diced
1 can (15-ounce) spinach, well-drained
1/2 tsp. tarragon
1/2 cup sour cream
4 small baking potatoes, baked
Cook bacon until crisp. Drain all but 1 tbs. drippings. Stir in spinach and tarragon; heat through. Remove from heat; stir in sour cream. Season to taste with salt and pepper, if desired. Cut a lengthwise slice from each potato. Mash potatoes slightly with fork, leaving skins intact. Place approximately 1/2 cup spinach mixture on each potato. Garnish with additional bacon, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Mixed vegetables and bacon adds texture and flavor to a basic rice dish.

In medium saucepan, cook bacon until crisp; remove bacon. Drain, reserving 1 tsp. drippings. Saute onion and garlic in drippings until soft. Stir in rice, oregano, paprika and pepper; add broth. Bring to boil; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 20 minutes, or until liquid is absorbed. Gently stir in vegetables and bacon. Cover and cook 3 minutes or until heated through. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Chips aren't junk food

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Your hand slides into a bag of potato chips, but a twinge of guilt makes you hesitate.

Potato chips are junk food, right? Not necessarily, says a professor at the University of Rochester Medical School. "If you ask people what are junk foods, potato chips are probably one of the first things they will name," says Dr. Gilbert Forbes, who specializes in nutrition and body composition.

"But if you break down the composition of potato chips, you find that they have the same amount of protein as rice and wheat, more iron than milk, less sodium than cow's milk, and as much niacin as milk. They're low in thiamine and riboflavin, but they have a bit of Vitamin C. All in all, there's more nutritional value than in apples." So, we can lick the grease off our fingers, dig into the chips and cast aside that old apple-a-day adage?

Well, not quite, says Forbes. "The real point is that some of the foods that get labeled as 'junk' are perfectly wholesome — in moderation."

"There are two pitfalls in allowing our children to fall into the 'fast food' habit as a steady diet," he says. "One is that the hamburger-shake-and-fries diet has no variety — no green vegetables, no fruit — and it's the variety of nutrients that is essential to good health."

"The other problem is that the convenience and cheapness of fast food restaurants tend to result in over-eating and turn into obesity."

Create unexpected traditions with vegetables

Does your family balk at the thought of new foods? Do they decide they don't like a new dish before they've even tried it?

If that sounds like your family, don't despair. "New foods can be an unexpected surprise to what should be a pleasant end to a busy day," said Donna Higgins, home economist and director of Del Monte Kitchens.

New foods should be a treat the family looks forward to, she suggested.

"Instead of totally new dishes, consider introducing new varieties of foods, such as vegetables, into familiar recipes. The family will get the benefit of new flavors without feeling that they are experimenting."

The following recipes are traditional in format, easy for any family to try. Each recipe incorporates one or more vegetables, including lima beans, spinach, stewed tomatoes and mixed vegetables.

RICE WITH MIXED VEGETABLES
2 slices bacon, diced
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1 cup uncooked long-grain white rice
1/4 tsp. oregano
1/4 tsp. paprika
Dash pepper
1 can (13 1/4-ounce) chicken broth
1 can (8 1/2-ounce) mixed vegetables, drained

Keeping abreast with former local hoopsters

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

I was sitting here wondering about the whereabouts of some former local basketball players, so I made some phone calls and pursued the matter.

What about Stefanie Massie, last year's All-American for the Hawk-Queens? Stefanie was one of the most dominating post players in the history of the Queens. She was the lone bright spot for last year's Faithful Five, a squad that went 4-21.

Opponents knew Massie was the only legitimate threat, but she still averaged 25 points and 10 rebounds per game.

What a difference a year makes. Instead of playing 40 grueling minutes facing double and triple teams, Massie isn't even a full-fledged starter at San Diego State University.

But it's a good bet that she's a lot happier now, especially since the Aztecs are one of the top teams in major college basketball.

Currently, San Diego State is ranked 12th in the nation and is sporting a 15-1 record, according to SDSU Sports Information Director Linda Keek.

Massie, a 5-11 forward, has been a part-time starter this season, starting 13 games, said Keek. She's currently averaging eight points and five rebounds per game.

The Aztecs only loss this season came to Big West Conference foe Long Beach State. Long Beach State currently leads the league with a 6-0 record. SIDU is second at 6-1. The Aztecs play the University of Hawaii tonight.

This is a pretty decent basketball conference. Other teams in the league are University Nevada-Las Vegas, Cal State, University of California at Santa Barbara, University of California at Irvine, San Jose State and Fresno State.

Moving right along, what about former Lady Steer Katrina Thompson?

Thompson was an All-State guard last year that led Big Spring to the state playoffs for the second consecutive year. Thompson had a deadly shooting eye, averaging 22 points per game. She also was automatic at the foul line, making 80 percent of her foul shots.

Thompson has adjusted to Division II level play at University of Texas at Arlington well.

The 5-6 freshman has earned herself a starting job for the Lady Mavs, according to UTA Sports Information Director Jim Patterson.

The 5-6 frosh has been starting the last eight games for UTA. She began starting in the Midwest Women's Roundball Classic at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., where UTA won two of three games and Thompson scored a season-high 10 points in a 89-79 win over Oral Roberts. The other victory, which Patterson described as a 'big win', was a 70-54 triumph over SMU.

But since then, UTA has faltered, sporting a 5-11 overall mark and 0-3 Southland Conference record. Stephen F. Austin and Northwest Louisiana lead the league with 3-0 marks.

Thompson is currently averaging four points and two rebounds per game.

Other teams in the conference include McNeese State, Southwest Texas, Sam Houston, Northeast Louisiana and North Texas.

The Lady Mavs play Sam Houston Thursday.

What about Leslie Gooch, the shifty point guard that played one season for the Hawk-Queens three years ago?

Gooch and her Angelo State Rambelle teammates are currently 16-1, ranked No. 9 in the NCAA Division II poll. ASU is coming off an 81-63 win over Camerson University, moving its Lone Star Conference mark to 4-0.

Gooch, a 5-4 point guard in her third year as a starter, is the leader on the team, averaging 10 points per game. Her play has been smooth and consistent. She's shooting 47 percent from the floor and 82 percent from the foul line. The Big Lake native leads the team in assists (80) and steals (45).

Other teams in the league include Abilene Christian University, East Texas State, Eastern New Mexico University, West Texas State, Texas A&I and Central State Oklahoma.

Two Steelers will get their day in Canton

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Terry Bradshaw said he was certain that somewhere, Art Rooney, the late owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, was smiling.

"Art Rooney is in heaven looking down, saying, 'My boys! My boys! I told you you'd make it,'" Bradshaw said Tuesday after he and a Steelers teammate, Mel Blount, were named to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Blount and Bradshaw, mainstays of the Steelers teams that won an unprecedented four Super Bowl championships in the 1970s, were joined by two other members of teams that were dominant — offensive tackle Art Shell of the Oakland Raiders and defensive back Willie Wood of the Green Bay Packers.

"You've got representatives of the best teams of the '60s and '70s," Bradshaw said. "It speaks well for what athletes are taught. Athletes are told to win and they are judged on how many games they win. It's not personal accomplishments or statistics that matter most.

America loves winners." Bradshaw and Blount each gained entry in their first year of eligibility. It was Shell's second try and Wood's 13th.

Blount, a cornerback, and Bradshaw, a quarterback, each spent their 14 professional seasons with the Steelers.

Blount, 40, the director of player relations for the NFL, said induction meant even more since he was joined by a teammate.

"This is a particularly good feeling because Terry and I came in together, we retired together and now we go into the Hall of Fame together. The only thing I need now is to make the money that Terry's making" as a TV broadcaster for NFL games.

Blount, a graduate of Southern University, led the NFL in interceptions in 1975 with 11 and had 57 for his career, seventh all-time, for 911 yards. He also recovered 13 fumbles, returning two for touchdowns. The 6-foot-3, 205-pound third-round draft pick

Steers scalp Chiefs, 70-53

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Steers remained on top of the District 4-4A basketball race by downing the San Angelo Lake View Chiefs 70-53 Tuesday night at Steer Gym.

With the win, the Steers move their league record to 7-0, 14-10 overall. Lake View falls to 2-5 and 11-13.

The Steers got a strong team effort to gain the win. Leading the way was guard Abner Shellman who hit 12 of 22 from the floor, scoring 24 points. But his shining play didn't stop there. He also grabbed seven rebounds, had three assists, four steals and blocked two shots.

He especially got the crowd into the game when he blocked a Lake View player's shot attempt in the first half, swatting the ball back across the halfcourt line. Late in the game the 5-11 senior got the crowd on its feet when he got a feed from Jason Davis and slammed a one-hander home.

"Abner played his usual consistent game," said Steers coach Boyce Paxton. "I was really glad to see him get that dunk. A lot of people don't realize how well he jumps."

Also turning in strong performances were post players Thane Russey and Joe Downey, who completely dominated the boards against the Chiefs.

Russey was 7 of 9 from the floor, finishing with 15 points, nine rebounds and two blocked shots. Downey finished the contest with 12 points, eight rebounds and one block.

"Joe and Thane both played real well," said Paxton. "They were solid underneath. Tony Lewis played good, especially holding down (Lake View guard Tony) Allen. I think most of the points he scored were coming off picks."

Allen led the Chiefs with 17 points, but he found them hard to come by thanks to Lewis' harrassing defense. Allen was forced into taking numerous bad shots; he had 15 attempts from the three-point line, making only three.

The Steers jumped to an early 8-0 lead thanks to two turnovers-turned-into baskets off the press.

Big Spring led 17-8 at the end of the first quarter; Russey scored seven in the period and Shellman made two buckets.

Lake View battled back in the second quarter as Allen and Chris Fischer found the range, and Big Spring seemed to lose some of its intensity. Lake View pulled to within 23-22 and trailed 27-22 at the half.

But in the third quarter, Shellman went to work, scoring 10 points. During one stretch he scored three unanswered baskets, and the Steers led 45-26 midway through the quarter. After that, the Steers went cold and Lake View scored the last six points of the period.

But the Steers were well on their way to a win, leading 45-32 going into the final quarter.

Lady Steers romp

SAN ANGELO — The Big Spring Lady Steers spread the wealth around Tuesday night in routing the Lake View Maidens, 72-29, in District 4-4A girls basketball action here Tuesday night.

Gisila Spears tallied 20 points to lead the Lady Steers, and Tami Wise and Jennifer Hendleman added 16 apiece. Big Spring improved its record to 20-3 overall, 8-1 in district. Lake View, paced by Venetra Allen's 13 points, fell to 4-5 in district play.

Big Spring took the lead for good when point guard Peggy Smith hit a three-pointer with 2:21 left in the opening quarter, and gradually pulled away from the Maidens.

Spears and Wise were particularly effective from the inside. Wise shot 80 percent from the field and played in six conference title games, four Super Bowls and five Pro Bowls.

Blount is the third member of Pittsburgh's "Steel Curtain" defense to make the hall. Tackle Joe Greene, two years ago, and linebacker Jack Ham, last year, also made it in their first year of eligibility.

Bradshaw, a 6-foot-3,

210-pounder from Louisiana Tech, was the first player chosen in the 1970 NFL draft. He completed 2,025 of 3,901 passes for 27,989 yards and 212 touchdowns and ran for 32 scores. Bradshaw, MVP of the 1979 and 1980 Super Bowls, holds Super Bowl records with 932 yards passing and nine touchdowns passes.

He played in six AFC championship games and four Super Bowls, in addition to two Pro Bowls.

"It's like winning a Super Bowl," Bradshaw, 40, said. "That's because I know this is the last award and the last honor that I'll ever get as a player."

He said the Steelers' success was the product of the organization, the coaches, players and even the fans. "They're dancing in the streets in Pittsburgh because they were inducted, too," Bradshaw said. Wood spent 12 seasons as a defensive back with the Packers, who won five NFL titles and the first two Super Bowls, in 1967 and 1968. He also played in seven Pro Bowls. During his career, he had 48 interceptions for 699 yards, returning two for touchdowns.

Chiefs hire coach

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Marty Schottenheimer doesn't talk like the coach of a football team that has won only eight games in two years.

"I'm not interested in rebuilding programs," Schottenheimer said Tuesday when he was introduced as head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs. "My principal reason for selecting this opportunity was I believe we can win, and win very quickly. Our goal for 1989 is to become the champions of the National Football League."

Schottenheimer resigned as Cleveland Browns' coach at the end of the season in a dispute with owner Art Modell. He signed a four-year contract for undisclosed terms with the Chiefs, a powerhouse in the 1960s who have had six head coaches and only one playoff appearance since 1971.

Since winning the 1970 Super Bowl, the Chiefs have made only one playoff appearance since 1971 and have consistently been at or near the bottom of the AFC West.

"I come to Kansas City with great expectations," Schottenheimer said. "As I look back on the history of this franchise, while I know the past several years there has been some low times, I prefer to look back to the great tradition of Kansas City Chiefs football. There were a number of factors that entered into my decision, the least of which was not, certainly, the opportunity to once again approach with this current football team the great tradition that is the past of the Kansas City Chiefs."

Schottenheimer, 45, took the Browns to the playoffs in each of his four full seasons as coach and his 32-15 regular season record the past three years was best in the AFC, trailing only the Chicago Bears and San Francisco 49ers among all NFL teams. The Browns lost to the Denver Broncos in the 1986 and 1987 AFC championship games.

One of the first questions Schottenheimer was asked is whether he will hire an offensive coordinator.

Bulldogettes chew on Crane

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

COAHOMA — The Coahoma Bulldogettes, paced by the inside work of Kelly Williams, Anne Damron and Paige Wilson, broke open a tight game in the fourth quarter to down the Crane Ladybirds, 57-45, here Tuesday night.

Williams scored 25 points, and Wilson and Damron tallied 10 apiece to lead Coahoma, now 17-7 for the season, and 4-1 in district play.

Crane, led by Monica Allen's 13 points, falls to 11-9 and 1-3 with the loss.

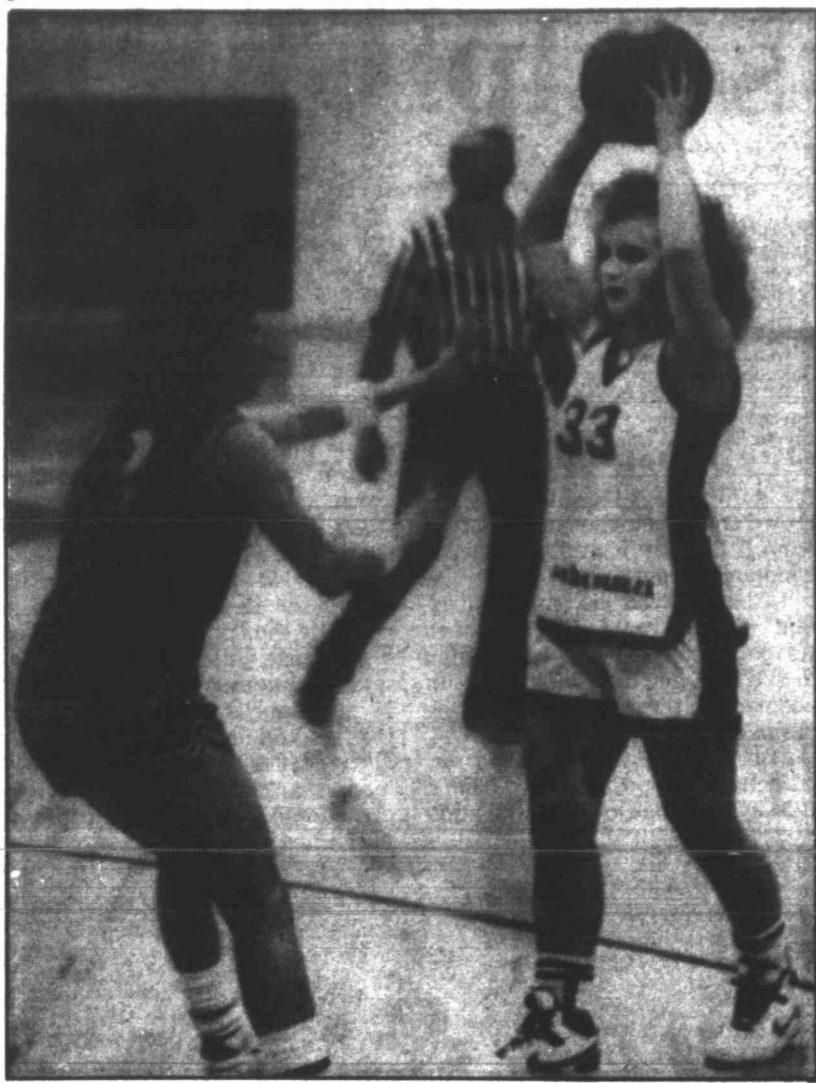

Clinging to a 40-34 lead after three quarters, the Bulldogettes went on a 16-2 run in the last period to ice the contest.

Though pleased with the win, Coahoma coach Truman Meissner was upset with his team's play in the third period, which saw the Ladybirds outscore Coahoma 10-6 to close within six points.

"We decided to play a little 'do what we want to do' on offense in the third, and that doesn't work well for us," Meissner said. "When we concentrate on the things we do well, we're pretty good — in fact, we're very good. But, when we go crazy, we're average or below."

Having dispensed with the bad news, however, Meissner had praise for the Bulldogettes' overall effort.

"Our outside people didn't shoot the ball very well, but they did a good job of working the ball inside and passing," he said. "Kelly, Anne and Paige did a good job inside for us." The inside trio were more than merely good in the game's opening stages. Williams was a force in the first quarter, scoring 16 points as the Bulldogettes raced to a 22-11 lead after eight minutes.

Coahoma's matchup zone defense also was effective in the first half, forcing 14 Crane turnovers.

The Bulldogettes increased their lead to 15 points in the second quarter, when Wilson scored at the 3:38 mark to give Coahoma a 31-16 lead. An 8-3 run by Crane, however, reduced its halftime deficit to 10 points, 34-24.

The Ladybirds made their most serious run in the third quarter, closing to within four on Allen's jumper with 3:05 left in the period.

The Crane comeback was aided by cold shooting on the part of the Bulldogettes. Coahoma temporarily abandoned their inside game for long-range jumpers, prompting a Meissner time-out where he urged his girls to work the ball to their teammates in the post area.

League owners against Gaylord

CHICAGO (AP) — American League owners have rejected Edward L. Gaylord's attempt to purchase majority interest in the Texas Rangers, the team's owner, Eddie Giles, said.

Gaylord owns about one-third of the Rangers' stock and wants to buy an additional 58 percent. Baseball owners reportedly have opposed Gaylord's bid because they do not want another team owned by a broadcasting company.

Gaylord is president of Oklahoma Publishing Co., the parent company for Gaylord Broadcasting Co., which owns Fort Worth's KTVT-TV.

KTVT broadcasts Rangers games.

Winfield, owner to mediate

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Winfield and George Steinbrenner are going to the arbitration table. Winfield's salary, however, is about the only thing not in dispute.

Rather than spend years in federal court determining who owes what to the Winfield Foundation, Steinbrenner and Winfield will let lawyer Michael Armstrong decide.

Earlier this month, Winfield sued Steinbrenner and the Yankees, claiming that they had not made $450,000 in payments to the foundation.

Two streaks stopped in NBA

By The Associated Press
Michael Adams' hot streak is over. Now, the Denver Nuggets would like to do something about their cold one.

Adams missed all six of his 3-point shots Tuesday night, ending his NBA record of 79 consecutive games with at least one 3-pointer.

The Nuggets could have used one, because they lost to New Jersey 117-115 as the Nets' Buck Williams scored a season-high 27 points. Denver, which has lost eight of its last nine games and nine straight on the road, wasted a season-high 43 points by Alex English.

Adams began his record streak on Jan. 28, 1988. During the 79-game run, he made 193 of 530 long-range shots, including a record eight (in 12 attempts) against Milwaukee on Saturday night. But he was just 1-for-7 against Indiana on Monday night.

Another streak came to an end when New York beat Los Angeles 122-117, handing the Lakers their first setback in 18 home games this season.

The Nets led 97-94 with 8:50 remaining when Williams scored five points to touch off a 14-4 spurt that gave New Jersey a 111-98 lead. The Nuggets came right back with a 13-2 burst and pulled within 113-111 with 56 seconds left. New Jersey's John Bagley preserved the victory with four free throws in the final 15 seconds.

Lafayette Lever scored 26 points for the injury-decimated Nuggets, who used only eight players.

Knicks 122, Lakers 117

Patrick Ewing's 25 points plus a tight defense down the stretch helped the Knicks win the battle of division leaders. The Knicks never led until Ewing's two free throws with 3:56 remaining put them ahead 114-113. Ewing was fouled by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, whose sixth personal made him the first Laker to foul of a game all season.

A jump shot by Ewing with 3:19 left put the Knicks ahead to stay 116-115 and Mark Jackson's two free throws with 2:46 to go made it 118-115 and proved to be the decisive points.

Charles Oakley scored 23 points for the Knicks. Magic Johnson and James Worthy led the Lakers with 26 points each. It was the ninth triple-double of the season for Johnson, who also missed two 3-point shots in the final 18 seconds.

Hawks 121, Cavaliers 105

At Atlanta, Dominique Wilkins scored 41 points, equaling his season high, and hit a key 3-point goal in the fourth period. The victory was Atlanta's fourth in a row and snapped a five-game winning streak by the Cavaliers, who have the best record in the NBA at 30-8. The Hawks led 89-88 in the fourth q Larry Nance led the Cavaliers with 28 points.

Bulls 109, Mavericks 91

At Chicago, Michael Jordan scored nine of his 24 points in the fourth quarter after sitting out seven minutes with a knee bruise and Chicago handed Dallas its 10th straight road defeat.

Dallas, which trailed by 13 points at the half, closed the gap to 65-59 a minute after Jordan fell to the floor attempting to block a shot by Mark Aguirre with 5:21 to go in the third quarter.

Bill Cartwright 23 points for Chicago, which has won seven of its last eight games. Aguirre and Rolando Blackman scored 22 points each for the Mavericks.

Rockets 118, Heat 93

At Houston, Otis Thorpe scored six points and Purvis Short had five during a 19-4 second-half run that enabled the Rockets to break open a 74-73 game and snap a four-game losing streak.

Miami, an expansion team which has the NBA's worst record at 4-34, is 1-19 on the road and suffered its 11th straight setback away from home.

Sleepy Floyd led the Rockets with 22 points and Akeem Oluajuwon had 20 points and 12 rebounds. Billy Thompson had 20 points for Miami. SuperSonics 103, Trail Blazers 100

At Portland, Derrick McKey scored 13 of his career-high 34 points in the final period to lead Seattle to its fourth straight victory.

Portland took its first lead of the game at 77-76 on a jumper by Terry Porter and the teams traded the lead until a layup and ensuing 3-point basket by McKey gave Seattle an 87-83 lead with 6:31 left.

Portland's Jerome Kersey made two free throws to tie the score 88-88 with 4:33 left, but McKey's layup at 4:17 put the Sonics ahead for good 90-88.

Clyde Drexler led Portland with 25 points. Dale Ellis and Xavier McDaniel paced Seattle with 24 and 23 points, respectively.

Suns 106, Hornets 103

At Phoenix, Eddie Johnson scored 11 of his 31 points in the fourth period and the Suns withstood a late Charlotte comeback. Charlotte, playing without flu-plagued Kelly Tripucka for the second straight game, trailed 102-92 with 3:36 remaining after two free throws by Phoenix's Tom Chambers, who had 25 points.

But a 9-2 run cut the Hornets' deficit to 104-101 before Kevin Johnson's jumper with seven seconds remaining wrapped it up. Phoenix, 16-3 at home, took the lead to stay 68-67 on Jeff Hornacek's jumper with 4:41 remaining in the third quarter.

Rex Chapman led Charlotte with 23 points.

Bucks 114, Kings 110

At Sacramento, Larry Krystkowiak scored four of his 21 points in the final 39 seconds as Milwaukee beat Sacramento for the 12th straight time. The Kings were based in Kansas City the last time they beat the Bucks on Nov. 2, 1982.

couple of years ago, but I wasn't chosen then. I started thinking that so many Green Bay Packers had gone in, maybe they might have used up their quota," joked Wood, 52, who runs a construction business in Washington, D.C.

He said the Hall of Fame certainly wasn't in the back of his mind when he began with the Packers.

"My size was against me — I only weighed 165 pounds. I can remember at the weigh-in, I got on the scales with two 10-pound weights on my ankles," Wood said.

But I gave it my best effort and

I really think that Coach (Vince Lombardi) saw my effort and realized I wanted to be there. I think that's the reason he kept me."

Shell played offensive tackle for the Raiders from 1968-1982, participating in eight AFL or AFC title games and two Super Bowls.

He recalled walking through the Hall of Fame a decade ago prior to a Raiders exhibition game in Canton.

"I had no idea I'd ever be in there," he said. "You never think in terms like that. I was in awe walking through that building and reading about the people enshrined. ... To walk through it was enough, but to be included in it is almost too much to believe."

Shell, 42, an assistant coach with the Los Angeles Raiders, spent all of his 15 pro seasons with the Raiders after being picked in the third round out of Maryland-Eastern Shore. He played in eight Pro Bowls and started 23 postseason games, including eight AFL-AFC championships and the 1977 and 1981 Super Bowls.

"This shows there were people watching the line play," Shell said. "This is proof that people recognized what a lineman was capable of doing."

The four were chosen from a list of seven finalists. Not selected were Miami Dolphins quarterback Bob Griese and linebacker Ted Hendricks, who played for the Baltimore Colts, Green Bay Packers and Raiders. They automatically will be included among the 15 finalists for induction next year. Also missing induction was the late Henry Jordan, a defensive tackle with the Packers and Cleveland Browns.

Shell, Wood, Blount and Bradshaw will be enshrined Aug. 5.

Orangemen back on winning track

AP Sports Writer

The first part of Boston College's game plan worked to perfection. The Eagles held No. 14 Syracuse to under 80 points.

"The score was kind of where we wanted it to be," Boston College coach Jim O'Brien said. "If it got up into the 80s and 90s, we knew we couldn't score enough points. I think we did the right thing."

It was the second half of the plan that went awry. The Eagles didn't score enough points themselves as Syracuse snapped a three-game Big East losing streak Tuesday night with a 72-60 victory.

"We don't care how it looks. We just care how we played," Syracuse senior guard Sherman Douglas said. "We couldn't afford any more losses."

The victory improved Syracuse's record to 16-4 overall and 2-4 in the Big East, and elevated the Orangemen out of the conference cellar, a spot now owned solely by the Eagles, 8-8 and 1-5. It was the fourth straight loss for Boston College, which has lost 10 in a row to Syracuse.

In its four conference defeats, Syracuse was held to 76 points by Pittsburgh, 73 by Villanova, 63 by St. John's and 62 by Connecticut.

"I don't think it's over," Douglas said of the way the Orangemen's opponents have been slowing down the tempo. "Teams are still going to play us the same way."

"Teams aren't going to now say 'Let's run with Syracuse' just because we won a game under 80 points."

Douglas led Syracuse with 19 points and nine assists.

Only two other ranked teams saw action Tuesday night. No. 5 Missouri defeated Maryland 87-73 and No. 20 Providence downed Miami of Florida 106-91.

Dana Barros, who finished with 17 points, gave Boston College its last lead at 28-27 with 7:31 to go in the first half. It was the Eagles' last field goal in the first half as Syracuse used a 10-2 spurt to build a 37-28 halftime lead.

Boston College pulled within 39-35 early in the second half, but Derrick Coleman scored a basket and a free throw and Matt Roe and Steve Thompson hit 3-point shots to push the Orangemen's lead to 48-37 with 15:06 to play.

Syracuse maintained a double-digit lead over the final 10 minutes.

"We had a lot of opportunities to win," Barros said. "In the last five minutes, we were still in the game. At the end, we just didn't make our free throws. That happened in the first half, too."

No. 5 Missouri 87, Maryland 73

Byron Irvin scored 20 of his 28 points in the second half, including a dozen during a 19-5 run that brought visiting Missouri from behind. It was the Tigers' eighth straight victory, while Maryland has now lost eight straight.

Maryland, down by as many as 13 points, scored the final six points of the half to pull within 37-32 at intermission. The Terrapins, 6-11, then opened the second half with a 17-6 run to take a 49-43 lead with 14:08 remaining in the game.

"I was worried a little, but I knew the way we've been playing we'd get it going," Irvin said.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

THURSDAY, JANUARY 26, 1989

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Talk over your objectives with friends who are professionals. You know exactly what to say in a difficult situation. Continue to pinch pennies. The mail brings good news. Romance flourishes.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New alliances will increase your earning power. Reach beyond today's limitations. Escape from your familiar routine by getting out more during the day. The evening definitely favors romance. Wear something elegant.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Vital information gives you the advantage in professional relationships or business negotiations. Welcome an out-of-towner who can bring you news about hometown folks. A domestic situation is on an even keel.

Squelch a rumor before it does further harm. The innocent victim will be grateful and you will have a new ally. Look for some hidden benefits at work during this period.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The effort you put forth today will produce bigger dividends tomorrow. Others are eager to jump on your bandwagon. Welcome their help and advice. A marital relationship is strengthened.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be more flexible. A moderate exercise program should be conscientiously followed. Pay attention to delicate nuances where romance is concerned. Become a better listener. Offer mate support, not suggestions.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day for socializing with older people. Entertaining is pleasurable if you keep the guest list short. Mate or business partner shares an important secret. Do not confide in outsiders.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A financial venture sounds too good to be true. Do not overestimate the profit potential. Dollars earned from your job are a more reliable source of wealth. Romance enters a new phase.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If asking for a raise, be prepared to state why you deserve one. Thoughts of romance could interfere with the flow of career success. Concentrate on essentials first. Establish yourself professionally.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Give in gracefully; eventually things will work out to your advantage. Be sensitive to the needs of your loved ones. Daydreams and travel occupy your thoughts. Plan that special vacation with mate.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Teamwork goes a long way toward getting things done at home. Visitors or neighbors may want to join in, too. Romantic partner will require extra attention. Show tenderness.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Joint ventures will have a beneficial effect on your income. You will need plenty of discipline and patience to make things work, however. Keep your social life completely separate from your job.

Lendl destroys McEnroe in straight sets

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Ivan Lendl, playing almost perfect tennis, beat long-time rival John McEnroe 7-6 (7-0), 6-2, 7-6 (7-2) Wednesday to reach the Australian Open semifinals for the fourth straight time.

Lendl, who has never won the tournament, didn't allow a single break point and frustrated his net-rushing opponent with an astonishing 40 passing shots. The victory, Lendl's fourth straight over McEnroe, gave him a 15-14 edge in their decade-long series.

"We bring out the best in each other," Lendl said. "He doesn't like losing and I hate losing myself."

McEnroe said he wasn't discouraged by the loss. "I played very well, but he played better," he said. "I kept thinking he was going to start missing a few shots, but he didn't."

Two-time champion Stefan Edberg withdrew from his match against Austria's Thomas Muster because of a back injury, moving Muster into the semifinals against Lendl.

Unseeded Jan Gunnarsson, who almost retired last year after a serious knee injury, reached his first Grand Slam semifinal with a 6-0, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 victory over fellow Swede Jonas Svensson. Gunnarsson meets the winner of the Miloslav Mecir-Goran Ivanisevic match on Friday.

"I can't believe I'm in the semifinals of a Grand Slam," a beaming Gunnarsson said while hugging his 5-year-old daughter, Anna, during a post-match interview.

"It's like a dream. Maybe in a few days I'll believe it."

Edberg, the fourth seed, hurt his back near the end of his fourth-round victory over Pat Cash on Tuesday. The 23-year-old Swede managed to finish the match after receiving treatment, but was bent over and wincing in pain as he left the court.

"I was so stiff this morning, I couldn't move," Edberg told a packed news conference Wednesday. "I couldn't even put my socks on."

Edberg, who was X-rayed at a hospital Wednesday morning, said the preliminary diagnosis is a strained ligament in his lower back.

"At least there's nothing wrong with my disc," he said. "That's the good thing about it."

Lendl, who can regain the No. 1 ranking by winning the title, hit seven straight winners to take the first-set tiebreaker. He broke McEnroe twice in the second set — the only breaks of the match — while losing only one point on his own serve, and blasted five more winners in the last tiebreaker.

"Maybe I should have mixed it up a little more, but that's easier said than done when balls are coming at you at that pace," said McEnroe, who hasn't won a Grand Slam title since beating Lendl in the 1984 U.S. Open final.

Edberg said he's not sure how long he will be out of action, but he will definitely miss Sweden's first-round Davis Cup match against Italy next week.

"It could take two weeks or four weeks or months," the 1988 Wimbledon champion said. "I've never had a back injury before, so I don't know what I'm coping with."

Edberg, the Australian Open winner in 1985 and 1987, suffered the injury while serving an ace to go up 30-15 in the final game.

"It felt like I had a knife in my back," he said. "It was hard to tell how it happened or why it happened. It was just a fluke."

Muster, who had never previously advanced beyond the third round of a Grand Slam tournament, said he had mixed feelings about the win.

"On one hand, I'm very happy to reach the semifinals," he said. "But I'm also sorry for Stefan. He had a good match against Cash and was in good shape."

Svensson, who played brilliantly in his fourth-round upset of Boris Becker, was plagued by a wild forehand Wednesday. The 14th seed appeared to be mounting a comeback after rallying from a 2-4 deficit to win the third set, but Gunnarsson broke him in the opening game of the fourth set and held serve the rest of the way.

"After I was up 4-2 in the third, I made a few mistakes and got a bit nervous," said Gunnarsson, ranked 85th in the world. "But I got a break early in the fourth and then I felt comfortable."

Svensson said he had no explanation for his poor performance.

"I felt good all the way up until the match, but suddenly my legs didn't move and my brain didn't work," he said.

Helena Sukova, who halted Martina Navratilova's 74-match winning streak in the 1984 Australian Open, knocked the three-time champion out of the Grand Slam tournament again Tuesday night.

The big-serving Czech eliminated Navratilova 6-2, 3-6, 9-7 in a dramatic quarterfinal before a packed center court crowd at the National Tennis Stadium.

"The last time I beat her here, I was just trying to win a set," Sukova said. "This time, I thought I had a chance to win."

Navratilova twice served for the match in the seesaw final set, but Sukova held her off with a series of sizzling backhand winners.

After Sukova saved two break points and held for an 8-7 lead, Navratilova appeared ready to even the match again, moving ahead 30-love with an ace.

However, Sukova quickly gained a match point and watched a shaky Navratilova hand her the victory on a double-fault.

"It was nerve-wracking out there," Sukova said. "I was trying very hard not to think about the score."

Navratilova, who hasn't won a Grand Slam title since the 1987 U.S. Open, was upset by her failure in the clutch.

"I gave her the match at the end," she said. "I wasn't outplayed. It was just a matter of a couple of points here and there."

The victory was Sukova's second in a row against Navratilova, but only her fourth in their 25-match series.

"I felt I won it. She didn't lose it," said Sukova, who received a pre-match pep talk from her boyfriend, Czech motorcycle racer Jaromir Jirik.

Sukova, the fifth seed, served seven aces and cracked 21 winning returns off Navratilova's serve.

"I watched her play yesterday against (Catherine) Tanvier and she had about two winners and 25,000 unforced errors," Navratilova said. "Then she comes out today and hits winner after winner because there's no pressure on her."

Sukova's semifinal opponent will be unseeded Belinda Cordwell of New Zealand, who beat Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist 6-2, 2-6, 6-1. The other semifinal pits defending champion Steffi Graf of West Germany against arch-rival Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina.

Graf, who hasn't lost a set in the tournament, breezed past eighth-seeded Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany 6-2, 6-3 in 55 minutes, while Sabatini rallied from 1-3 in the final set to beat sixth-seeded Zina Garrison of the United States 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

MELBOURNE, Australia — American tennis star John McEnroe seems to express his opinion of his game today as he went down to defeat in straight sets against Ivan Lendl in the Australian Open.

"It's going to be hard for anyone to beat me," said Graf, who is seeking her fifth straight Grand Slam title. "It's obvious. It's been like that for a year now."

Sabatini, who defeated Graf twice last year but trails their series 2-14, also sounded confident. "I won't be afraid when I go out and play her," she said. "I don't feel any pressure. I think I have a good chance to beat her."

Stone scores double win at stock show

The Martin County Junior Livestock Show Association completed another successful run this past weekend. Many long-time observers of the local show felt that this year's show as one of the classiest, with top entries in sheep, swine, and steers.

More than 70 County 4-H and FFA exhibitors participated in the three-day event, which was climaxed by the Championship Club's Awards Dinner on Saturday night. A total of $14,273 prize money was passed on to the contestants.

Chris Stone, Stanton 4-H and FFA participant, scored a rare double win. His Limousin steer took the Grand Champion spot on Saturday, following a Grand Championship win by his Duroc hog in Friday's swine contest. Stone also won the Senior Steer Showmanship award.

Stone, the son of Bill and Carolyn Stone, is a senior in Stanton High School. An honor student, Stone is president of the FFA Chapter, and a starter on the Buffalo basketball team. He plans to attend Midland College for two years before moving on to a major in Ag Economics.

Kyle McMorries showed the Reserve Champion Steer, a British breed. Kyle is a fifth grade FFA exhibitor from Grady.

In the lamb show, Angela Tubb, Grady 4-H sixth grader, took the Grand Championship with her medium wool lamb. Brian Tubb showed the Reserve Grand Cham-pio. Bobby Matthews, Lamb Show Chairman, said that several of the lambs should make an excellent showing in state-wide competition.

Tandi Peugh won the Reserve Grand Championship in the swine division with her crossbreed hog. A seventh grader at Grady, Tandi also won a Reserve Breed Championship with a Duroc. Tandi is in her third year of 4-H activities.

Showmanship Award Buckles were presented to:

ship, Rawley Mims.

Herdsmen Plaques were given to: Junior Lamb Herdsman, Stacy Cole; Senior Lamb Herdsman, Cade Robertson; Junior Swine Herdsman, Jody Brooks; Senior Swine Herdsman, Billy Lipps; Junior Beef Herdsman, Dale Nelson; and Senior Beef Herdsman, Coby McMorries.

In the judging contest, Katie Jo Yates won the 13 and under youth division while Billy Lipps took the 14 to 19 youth division. In the adult contest, Toby Romine was the winner.

The Bob Sale-Kendall Newman Scholarship Award was presented to Cheryl Stewart, daughter of Teddy and Clara Stewart. Miss Stewart, a Stanton High School senior, has been a very active 4-H participant for nine years. She plans to attend Tarleton State.

The recipient of the Cap Rock Electric Cooperative Scholarship was Cody Jones, son of Paul Allen and Carolyn Jones. Jones is a senior at Stanton High; he has been an active FFA member, and showed the Grand Champion swine in the 1988 show. Cody plans to enroll at Texas Tech with a major in mechanical engineering.

Jody Yates, president of the livestock group, praised the work of his fellow officer, Bobby Kelly, vice-president; and the Division Chairmen: Morgan Cox (beef), Bob Matthews (sheep), and Johnny Peugh (swine). Yates said that the group's work horse was Carla Brooks, who serves as secretary-treasurer.

Yates also gave great credit to the advisors who work with the contestants; they are: Grady Vo-ag teacher, Scott Robinson; Stanton Vo-ag teacher, Randal Redder; and County Agent, Greg Jones.

Greg Jones was pleased with the success of the show. Jones said an added feature this year was that Nancy Yates took pictures of the Champion and Reserve Champions. The county agent was also pleased that the County Show was covered by Rick Graff, with Stockshow Magazine. The County Show will be featured in next month's edition of the publication.

The Baze bank robbery, murder case in Stanton

By RAMSEY ABBOTT
(The following is an excerpt from a longer copyrighted article published in The Permian Historical Annual in 1987.)

Some crimes, like old movies, are revived again and again, and that crime in Martin County is the Baze case. For more than 50 years it has been discussed and talked about, and as recently as November 16, 1986, it was the subject of a feature article in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Bank robbery is a common crime and reached some kind of peak in the late twenties when the Texas Association of Bankers posted a $5000 reward for bank robbers, dead or alive. This was a large sum of money and more than the yearly income of most families. It was an open invitation for some people to shoot first and ask questions later and the incentive for worse crime, as happened in the Baze case when innocent victims were lured to the bank and then shot and killed as would-be robbers.

C.C. "Cal" Baze lived with his wife and six children on a farm south of Stanton. He was respected in the community and as well off as most of his neighbors. He had a fine voice and sang in the church choir and at gospel singings. Lee Smith, his partner in crime, came from outside the county and other than for being involved, has no local interest.

In the early morning of December 23, 1927, Baze and Smith reported to Sheriff Sadler that they had shot two Mexicans trying to break in and rob the Home National Bank. One of the dead men had a tow sack under his arm with a two-foot fuse, some powder, and other tools. It was an open and shut case, or so it seemed.

A little later, Baze was in a cafe, laughing and talking about the reward he was going to receive, but that was not the only excitement being discussed by coffee drinkers that morning. At about the same time as the shooting at the bank, the First Christian Church had caught fire and burned.

There are different versions as to what happened next, and none of them are precise as to the number of Hispanics involved, but according to the most popular version, one of the victims, who had only been wounded, played possum, and when the two white men left to get the sheriff, he escaped and made his way to the Catholic Rectory where he told his own version of what had happened.

A less dramatic but more plausible version, according to Sheriff Saunders, who talked to people still alive at the time, is that Victor Ramos, the Mexican survivor, got with Stanton Hispanics, who had been attracted by the excitement and told them his story.

Although it seems more plausible to people who only know the story from hear-say, we can rule out the second version because we know from reading the Big Spring Herald that Baze and Smith only told of killing two Hispanics, and when Sheriff Sadler arrived at the scene, Victor Ramos was not present.

In this case, the dramatic version is closest to the truth. In an oral interview of October 4, 1977, Mr. I.G. "Ick" Peters, a life long Catholic and resident of Martin County, mentions the Baze case and says that one of the Mexicans ran to the Catholic Church and told the priest what had happened. Catholics have always turned to the church for help, and it would be almost a certainty for a wounded and desperate man to seek sanctuary there.

However it happened, Victor Ramos did come forth and tell his story, and before the day was over, Baze and Smith had been arrested, the examining trial conducted, and the two men held over without bail for the next session of the Grand Jury. These are the basic facts, and there is no information about evidence or witness testimony in the examining trial report.

People were aroused, and feelings ran high in Stanton. Everyone thought the two men had set fire to the church to divert attention from the bank, but the statement of Victor Ramos, the only witness, clears the suspects of this additional crime. It has also been suggested that a third party was involved and set the fire, but there is no proof. It would be a real threat to read the Stanton Reporter for that week, but no copies have been saved. The main characters, C.C. Baze, Lee Smith, and Sheriff V.Y. Sadler are all deceased. Victor Ramos has long since disappeared. So we are indebted to the Big Spring Herald for the most authentic version of the crime that is available.

The following excerpts are taken from the Big Spring Herald, Friday, December 30, 1927.

"C.C. Baze and Lee Smith Held Without Bail for Killing Two Mexicans, Wounding Third. Two Mexicans, Norberto Diaz and Hilario Nunez were killed and a third Mexican shot four times at 3:30 o'clock Thursday morning of last week in front of the Home National Bank in Stanton by C.C. Baze, ex-deputy of Glasscock County and Lee Smith of Wink.

Baze is said to have made a confession that it was a frame-up to secure the reward for killing bank robbers."

This is confirmed by Baze's daughter, Mary Baze Herring, in an interview in the Midland Reporter-Telegram, November 16, 1986.

The news story continues with information obtained from the examining trial.

Ramos, who suffered four gun shot wounds plus head injuries, tells how he and his two companions were offered farm work. On their way to Stanton (from Midland) the five men, two white and three Hispanics, stopped by the side of the road and built a fire to get warm, and it was here that Baze passed a

Chamber banquet to attract crowd

Rodger Burch, local businessman, will assume the presidency of the Martin County Chamber of Commerce this Thursday night. Steve Herm, retiring Chamber president, said he expected a good turnout for the annual banquet, which is to start at 7 p.m. in the Stanton Junior High Cafeteria. Herm said tickets are available at the chamber office or from current directors — the price is $7.50.

Labor and Employee Relations committees.

Burch has been a resident of Stanton since he joined the Cap Rock REA in 1972. Burch served as manager from 1981 until 1987, when he acquired M&M Meter Service. M&M fabricates, sells, and services electrical metering equipment in Texas, New Mexico, and Oklahoma. He and his wife, Kathryn, have been very active in local civic activities.

In addition to Burch, Herm, and Elliott, are Nancy Broadway, Nancy Holt, and Georgeann Walton. Gwen Sawyer and Leslie Wood will be serving as associate directors.

New directors who will begin their terms are Larry Adams, Lester Baker, Frances Biggs, Loyd Cox, Joe Hodges, Lance Hopper, Georgia Welch, and Gib Wheeler.

Texas ginners seek change in state law

Legislation that would enable an independent ginning service to obtain a permit to haul cotton and cottonseed has been pre-filed by Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield.

The present law allows only cooperative gins to qualify for the permit. This is discriminating and should be changed, according to the Texas Independent Ginners Association.

The permit law was passed by the Texas Legislature in 1983 to benefit the state's farmers.

Under that law, anyone transporting eligible agricultural commodities for the original producer or grower or a farmer owned cooperative from the field to the first point of manufacture is not required to be certified by the Texas Railroad Commission or to comply with rates set by the commission.

Farmers and cooperatives can obtain an ag permit by paying a $25 annual fee and filing proof of insurance and an equipment report with the Railroad Commission.

But research done by Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance's staff has determined that the current law does not allow independent gins to qualify for the permit.

The law appears to be discriminatory," said Sharon Hull, a lobbyist for the independent ginners. "We're looking at this (Rudd's bill) as corrective language."

"Cooperative gins are classified differently than independent gins," Hull said. "Maybe years ago there was a vast difference between cooperative gins and independents, but that's not true anymore."

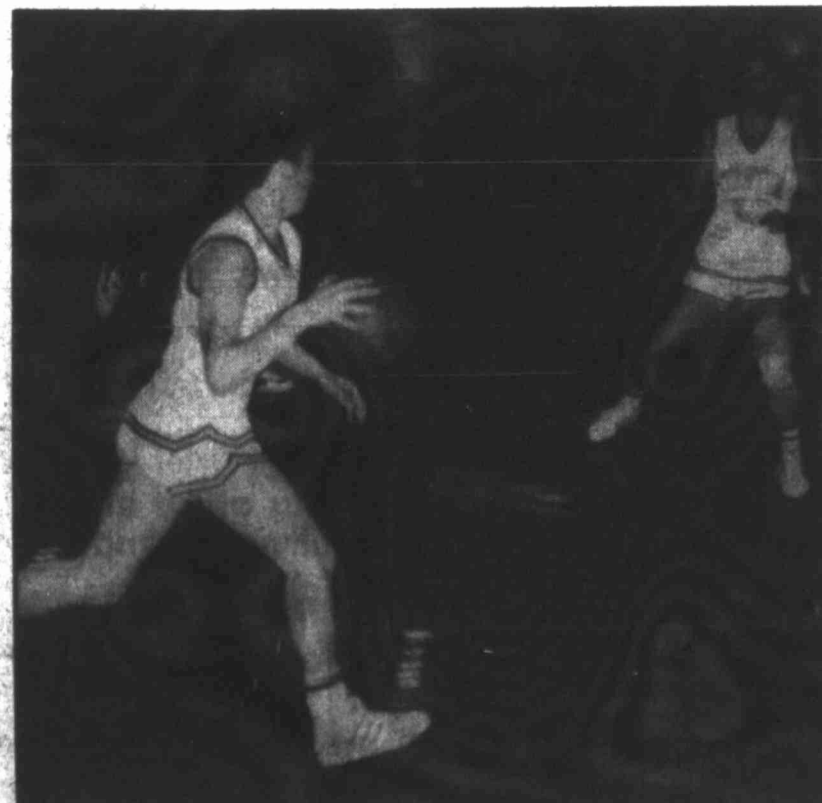

Hull noted that many farmers own stock in independent gins. She also said farmers never lose title to their cotton once it is brought to a gin.

"We're not asking for anything other than what the Railroad Commission would let cooperatives do. We're not asking for special treatment," Hull said.

Independent ginners who haul cotton for farmers now must either obtain a certificate of public convenience and necessity from the Railroad Commission or hire certified haulers whose rates are regulated by the commission.

According to some ginners, obtaining the necessary certification can involve a lengthy and often costly process.

If there are no protests, a ginner can expect to pay about $2,000 to acquire a certificate.

Stanton teams remain in playoffs contention

After two weeks of District 6-2A action the Stanton High School boys and girls basketball teams remain in strong contention for District honors. Both teams now have 3-1 records.

The boys are in a three-way tie for first place with Eldorado and Ozona. In girls play, Big Lake leads with a 4-0 record, while the Stanton and McCamey squads are tied for second.

On Tuesday night of last week at Big Lake, the boys unit took a 65-61 victory; while the girls fell by a score of 33-60 to the league leading Big Lake squad.

On Friday night, both units racked up victories over McCamey on the home court. The girls posted a 44-40 win, while the boys notched a 79-74 victory.

The first half of District play concluded on Tuesday night, with the Buffs playing in Eldorado. Second half action gets underway on Friday night with a battle of Buffalos vs. Buffaloes as the locals journey to Forsan.

The schedule for the balance of District play is as follows:

Tuesday, Jan. 31 — Ozona at Stanton.

Friday, Feb. 3 — Big Lake at Stanton.

Tuesday, Feb. 7 — Stanton at McCamey.

Friday, Feb. 10 — Eldorado at Stanton.

The Baze bank

bottle of whiskey urging them to drink and getting them drunk. After two hours, the party continued on to Stanton. As they drove into town, they saw the church fire and parked nearby. From here, the five men continued to the bank on foot where Baze and Smith told the Hispanics to wait and that they would return in a few minutes. They left, but as promised, came back a few minutes later and immediately opened fire on the unsuspecting men.

It is this testimony which clears the two suspects, Baze and Smith, of arson charges.

But the nagging question still remains. Why did Smith and Baze spend two hours by the fire on the side of the road? Were they waiting for a pre-arranged time to enter Stanton? Was passing the bottle a way of keeping the Hispanics from getting suspicious rather than getting them drunk?

There are times when instinct more than proof tells people the truth. Maybe this is one of those times.

Because the Stanton jail was considered unsafe, the prisoners were ordered to be transferred elsewhere for safe keeping. Baze was taken to Midland; Smith to Big Spring and Ramos to the Odessa jail to be held as a witness.

The Big Spring Herald gives a more concise account of the crime on February 17, 1928 when it reports on the habeas corpus hearing for Lee Smith.

"Judge Fritz R. Smith in District Court in Big Spring last Friday denied bond to Lee Smith after a habeas corpus hearing which lasted all day.

Lee Smith and C.C. Baze are charged with the murder of Norberto Diaz and Hilario Nunez who were shot down in front of the Home National Bank at Stanton, Texas, on the night of December 23rd. Smith and Baze, in statements made following the shooting, claimed the Mexicans were trying to rob the bank.

It was principally on account of the testimony of Victor Ramos, the third Mexican, fired on in front of the bank, surviving four bullets, that bail was refused Smith.

Ramos testified that he and the other two Mexicans were taken to Stanton by Smith and Baze on the pretext that they would give them work grubbing land near Stanton. Before getting into Stanton, Ramos said the two white men plied them with liquor and caused them to become intoxicated. Later they were left in front of the bank with instructions to wait for the return of Smith and Baze, he testified.

When the two Americans returned, Ramos testified, they came forward firing, killing his two companions and wounding him with four bullets. Baze caught him as he was fleeing and clubbed him over the head with a revolver, ordering him to leave and threatening him with death if he returned, the witness said.

Other States Witnesses testified that both Smith and Baze declared immediately after the killing that they 'had killed two bank robbers.' The defendant did not testify.

The State is contending that the killing of the Mexicans was a 'frame-up' designed to allow the perpetrators to collect the $5000 reward offered by the Texas Bankers' Association for dead bank robbers."

On March 18th, Baze broke out of the Midland jail and escaped. A search was launched, but to no avail, and when years had gone by with still no trace of him, most people assumed he was dead. The one person who never agreed, was Mrs. Baze, who insisted until her death in 1963 that her husband was still alive. Defense attorneys were deeded a large portion of the family ranchland as payment for their services and the one constant, which remains the same in all versions of the case and must be based on hard fact, established at the time, is that $3000 was paid for Baze's jail break.

He had already escaped but on March 28th, the Grand Jury in Stanton indicted Baze for the voluntary and with malice aforethought killing of Hilario Nunez and Norberto Diaz and for the assault with intent to murder of Victor Ramos.

Lee Smith was tried and sentenced to ten years in prison, but for thirty-three years starting in 1928, the case of the State of Texas versus C.C. Baze was bound over to the next session of District Court because the defendant was not in custody. Finally, on June 8, 1961, the case was dismissed for the following reason: that insufficient evidence existed to obtain a conviction and no good cause existed for continuing this prosecution. Criminal action was dismissed, and C.C. Baze discharged from any further liability.

From this time, it would be twenty-three years before there were any new developments in the case.

Mrs. Baze and her six children continued to live on the family farm where they struggled to survive, almost going hungry at times — innocent victims who suffered untold hardships because of their husband and father's crime.

Interest in the Baze case never seemed to diminish and speculation as to what his fate might have been continued until a certain day in 1984 when Sheriff Saunders picked up his phone to take a long distance call. Mallie Franklin "Mal" Calvin was calling to check out a bizarre story his father had told in his last illness in 1966 about a crime he had committed in Stanton, Texas in 1928. The family was shocked but considered it to be the feverish ramblings of a sick man.

"He told us that he got in trouble, that he had killed a Mexican. He was a deputy sheriff delivering a prisoner to Brown County, and two men jumped him and he killed one," Calvin said. "And the sheriff told him he had better leave Texas."

The killing of a Hispanic in 1927 plus other facts and questions enabled Sheriff Saunders to establish that C.C. Baze and the man's father were one and the same person. In their old age, the Baze children finally learned what had happened to their father and the Calvin's had solved the mystery of a death bed confession. During all these years, Calvin Sidney Baze who had changed his name to James Sidney Calvin, had been peacefully farming in the state of Washington. He had taken a new wife and raised five children to whom he had given the same names as his first children.

Through Sheriff Saunders, Mr. Calvin contacted his half sister in Midland, and, some time later, members of the two sets of children met each other for the first time in his office.

Case closed.

In our next story, a surprising secret will be revealed for the first time.

Low-income households may be eligible

Some low-income Texans may be eligible for help in paying heating bills this winter through the Home Energy Assistance Program, according to Texas Department of Human Services Acting Commissioner Charles Stevenson.

Stevenson said the one-time payment is available to many low-income households. Applications for energy assistance were mailed to households that received food stamps, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, or Supplemental Security Income in December. Other low-income individuals may request an application from local DHS offices during the enrollment period of Jan. 16 through Feb. 16.

Eligibility is limited by gross income and resources. Aid is available for a one-person household having less than $589.49 gross income per month. The gross income limits are $781.49 for households of two persons, $973.49 for three, $1,165.49 for four, $1,357.49 for five, and $1,549.49 for six.

Households are eligible if the cost for heating is included in the rent payment or if the household pays a portion of its home energy costs.

Energy assistance checks are sent directly to the people who are eligible for assistance. However, the checks are made payable to the energy provider.

People receiving one of these energy assistance checks should mail it or take it in person to the energy provider business office with their regular energy bill. The check can be cashed only by the energy provider. If the HEAP check is more than the energy bill, the additional amount will be credited to the person's account for the next month's bill. If the energy bill is higher than the check, the person is responsible for paying the difference.

'What goes up must come down'

By PEGGY LUXTON

Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc. Employees of Cap Rock Electric Cooperative who work on the distribution lines of the system always work in pairs. One reason for this is because the work often requires more than one pair of hands. Another reason is because of the inherent danger in the type of work they do.

Cap Rock Electric has almost 5,000 miles of line, ranging in size from tiny to large. On 3-phase lines, there are four strands of wire, three phase wires and a neutral. On single-phase lines, there are two wires, a phase line and a neutral. These lines can carry in excess of 20,000 volts. Should a lineman contact any of these lines, including the system neutrals, such contact can be lethal.

The aluminum wire used by the Cooperative is not insulated. Linemen wear rubber gloves, but a pin-sized hole in a glove can render them ineffective in their protection. Any downed or broken line is dangerous. If it is a phase line that is downed, the danger is from voltage. If it is a neutral line, the danger is from current. With either line, contact can be deadly.

In 1987, in the state of Texas, 4,819 persons were employed in the rural electric cooperative network. Those persons put in over 11 million man-hours of labor. There were 2,513 lost days due to injury to 165 persons. There were two fatalities.

The greatest danger in a lineman's job is his daily contact with lines. All of Cap Rock's linemen work out of bucket trucks whenever possible. Bucket trucks offer more protection to the lineman. But it is not always possible to use bucket trucks on every job and every lineman carries in his equipment a pair of climbing hooks, short, sharp-pointed spikes secured to the climber's feet by a sort of harness made of steel shafts and leather straps.

Should a lineman contact a power line while on top of a pole, or suffer any other injury or illness, it is up to his fellow workers to bring him down from the pole so life-saving techniques and medical attention can be administered. Removing an injured and/or unconscious person from the top of a pole is not an easy feat to accomplish.

Danny Williams, instructor in the Job Training and Safety Program of the Texas A&M University system, visits Cap Rock each month. The primary function of his visits is to instruct personnel in ways to perform their routine but dangerous tasks safely. One of the skills taught by Williams is pole-top rescue.

The training requires an employee to climb a pole that is not equipped with cross-arms or other paraphernalia and safely lower a dummy to the ground.

the pole with him. The dummy is tied to the pole. The climber must drive a screwdriver in the pole, tie his hand line around the dummy and loop it over the screwdriver, then cut the dummy loose from the pole and lower it with the hand line. All this must be accomplished while he, himself, is secured to the pole only by his safety belt and his climbing hooks.

Pole-top rescue is a skill that is taught periodically by the Job Training and Safety Program instructors. It is a part of an ongoing safety regimen that is taught to all field personnel. It is insurance for climbers who may get into trouble on top of a pole — an assurance that there will be someone nearby with the knowledge and skills to aid them in surviving a pole-top injury.

Cap Rock employees earn certification also in first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation and are kept familiar with the ever-changing technology of the equipment they rely on daily to perform their duties.

Cap Rock Electric Cooperative has an excellent safety record. It has earned a Certificate of Excellence from the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association and the Texas Job Training and Safety Program. This award is the highest such accreditation obtainable. The accreditation reads: "In recognition of accomplishments in accident prevention and dedication to the training and welfare of employees."

Instructor Williams says, "To qualify for such an award, a cooperative must have a low accident rate, and the management and board of directors of the cooperative must sanction and guide employees in safety practice." He further states that safety must be of highest priority to employees if a safety program is to have this high a degree of success.

Cap Rock is a member of the National Safety Council and has actively competed in the NSC awards program for a number of years. Participation in the NRECA's National Safety Accreditation Program compares Cap Rock's safety record with other cooperatives throughout the nation. The program proposes to recognize systems with outstanding accident prevention records.

So while apprentice linemen learn and first-class linemen practice the skill of pole-top rescue, they are

WALT FINLEY EDITOR

We can't all be perfect

WALT FINLEY

I have all the respect in the world for the Weather Bureau. I'm sure the Big Spring area is the toughest spot in the nation to forecast. And most of the time they hit it on the nose.

BUT WHEN snow is added to the forecast nearly an hour after the snow starts falling, you have to believe they booted one.

No, maybe that's unfair — let's make that read "you have to believe that conditions changed rapidly."

At any rate, it must be embarrassing to face one's family and friends after such a disturbance. So I have decided to lay down some guide lines for those of you who face the problem.

For heaven's sake, don't ever say "I'm sorry the weather doesn't agree with you." That's such an old joke that I won't even use it and, friends, that's old.

OTHER EVERYDAY clichés which should be avoided are:

"Into each life some rain must fall."

"Hot" (or cold) "enough for you?"

"Hope you didn't have any trouble driving through that frozen fair and warmer."

"Mickey Mantle only bats .325." Get the idea?

IT MIGHT be just as well, in fact, if you didn't even talk to the weatherman on weeks like this one.

REP. CHARLES Stenholm knows now it doesn't matter where his district is, so long as the people are discerning, discriminating and Democratic.

A man from Garden City who raises such wonderful tomatoes for a daughter who is going to raise lots of eyebrows.

MORE AND MORE "enlightened" university students are demanding the "right" to spend their nights with members of the opposite sex. Society long has had institutions for this kind of mingling. They are not, however, called universities.

Under modern etiquette, does the man step forward, put his toe on the automatic door open, then pause to let the fair lady precede him?

THE EDITOR of a West Texas newspaper queried the new applicant for the job of rewrite man. "Well," said the editor, "are you good?"

"Sure," was the reply. "All right, then fix this, and cut it short," instructed the editor, handing him the Ten Commandments. The applicant gave the copy a glance, seemed a little nonplused, then stepped over to the desk and wrote briefly, and handed it to the surprised editor, who studied the paper for only a moment, and said, "You're hired."

The rewrite on the paper was "Don't."

COMPLAINTS continue being made about TV showing lawmaker dozing at Austin. This is much ado about nodding.

The talkative Texan says it's not hard to put your country above politics, considering how low the politics get at times.

I've decided that just about the time you learn to make the most of life, the most of it is gone.

Overheard: "I wish I had a bad habit." "Have you thought of trying vanity?"

I repeat a remark by one of my share-the-fat foes: "Barge right ahead. You've got the build for it."

There is so much sports on television now, beginning at 10:30 a.m., that something is going to have to be done about church.

Could they have an instant rerun? I know one man who watched the 90-minute film highlights of Notre Dame's 1967 season, and he isn't even a Catholic.

I MAY MISS the Oklahoma-Texas football game — the third time since 1941 — for three reasons. I want to watch the Big Spring-Cooper game; I'm broke; and I hate to see tall Texans cry at the State Fair.

The office rambler left a note: "Walt is a four-letter word."

FAST AND flashy Roy Lee Barnhill reports:

A businessman on vacation reading his hometown newspaper was stunned to read his death notice. He called the editor and his anger rose with each passing second.

"I'm calling about the report of my death you reported in the newspaper Thursday," the man explained.

"Yes, sir," came back the unperturbed voice, "where are you calling from?"

The only nice thing I've heard about turtle-neck sweaters is that they help preserve family ties... Get it Sam? Ugh!

Show me an Indian with moss growing on his north side and I'll show you a stationary Injun.

My bashful aunt, Marie Chastain, suggests:

"Do not believe any politician who makes a promise upon a hillside. He is not on the level."

WE NOTICE that candidates who resolutely refuse to say anything bad about their opponents nearly always have friends who suffer from no such principle.

Elmore's 15 propel Lady Buffs over McCamey, 44-40

By STEVE BELVIN
 Big Spring Herald Sports Editor

STANTON — The Stanton Lady Buffs made a big move towards making the state basketball playoffs by defeating the McCamey Badgers 44-40 in thrilling District 6-2A basketball action Friday night.

With the win, coach Rob Young's Lady Buffs go to 3-1 in the first half of district play, with one game remaining in the half. With the loss, McCamey falls to 3-1 also. Stanton plays Eldorado Tuesday in Eldorado, and McCamey hosts league-leading Reagan County (4-0). Stanton lost to Reagan County last week.

If Reagan County beats McCamey and Stanton downs Eldorado, Reagan County and Stanton would finish 1-2 in the first half. If McCamey upsets Reagan County, there will be a three-way tie for first.

In Friday's win, Young credited his team's defensive effort and patient offense that led to victory.

"We really didn't play that well," said Young. "We didn't play well against Reagan County and we worked hard three days. But even tonight we missed a lot of opportunities, or it wouldn't have been that close.

"We played good halfcourt defense. We didn't light it up on offense, but the girls moved the ball around well, and worked for the open shot. We have a small team, so we have to be patient. But we're a better shooting free-throw team that we showed tonight (9-20)."

The Stanton victory was led by senior post player Kaki Elmore and senior point guard Kelli Glaspie, who scored 15 and 14 points respectively. Wings Stacy Tom and Karen Graves chipped in with a few timely outside baskets, and post Heather Colburn did the job rebounding against Mc-

Camey's taller front line.

Stanton began the game on a tear, taking a 8-0 lead with 1:48 remaining in the first quarter. But McCamey rallied as Wendy Smith hit an outside shot and Kathy Ramey hit a three-pointer just before the buzzer.

Stanton led 10-5 going into the second quarter.

The Lady Buffs pulled away late in the second quarter as Graves nailed a three-pointer and Graves passed to Elmore underneath for two more. Stanton led 19-9 with 2:03 left in the half.

But the Badgers scored the last six points of the half and went into intermission trailing 19-15.

The two teams battled on even terms for most of the third quarter. Smith hit a running jumper to leave McCamey trailing 26-24 going into the final period.

The ever-present Smith made two free throws, tying the game up at 28 apiece with 6:40 left. But Stanton rallied back on a jumper by Glaspie and a three-point play by Elmore, taking a 33-28 advantage. Elmore then scored from the corner, pushing the lead to 35-28 with five minutes left.

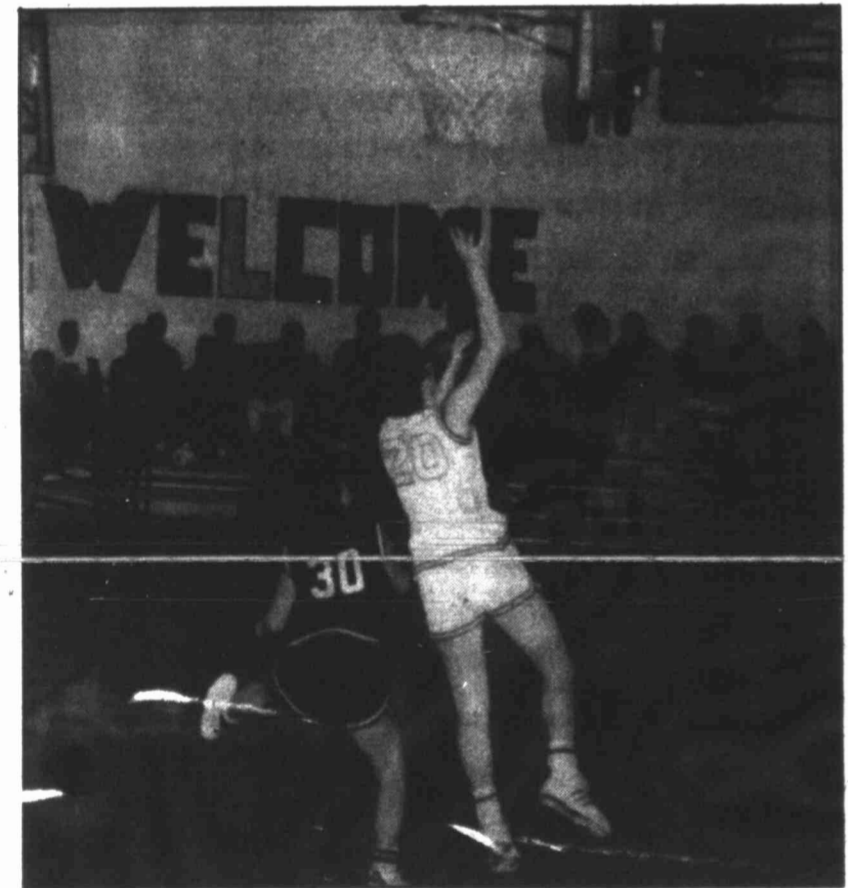

McCamey pulled to within 40-35 on a three-pointer by Smith. But Stanton pulled away on a bank shot by Graves and a steal and layup by Glaspie, giving the Lady Buffs an insurmountable 44-35 lead with 43 seconds left in the game.

With the win Stanton pushes its record to 3-1 in league play and 13-6 overall. McCamey falls to 9-12 and 1-3.

The Buffalos were led by the inside-outside scoring punch of Brad Holland and Robert Jones. Holland, a senior guard, bombed the Badgers for a game-high 25 points, including two three-pointers. Jones, a senior forward, added 19 points. Barry Cain chipped in 19 points in the winning effort.

Bullock has $1.3 million in bank for his campaign

Campaign reports filed this week by Bob Bullock show that he's raised more than $1.6 million since he announced for Lieutenant Governor and has $1.3 million in the bank for his campaign.

The reports show that Bullock has borrowed no money and is still the only announced candidate for the job.

Bullock's report, filed with the Secretary of State in Austin, went beyond the requirements of state election laws by showing the financial history of his campaign since he first announced for Lieutenant Governor.

Bullock, a Democrat, who is now State Comptroller, is running in the 1990 election to succeed Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who is retiring.

"We reported more than is required because I think that is the spirit of the campaign finance disclosure law," Bullock said.

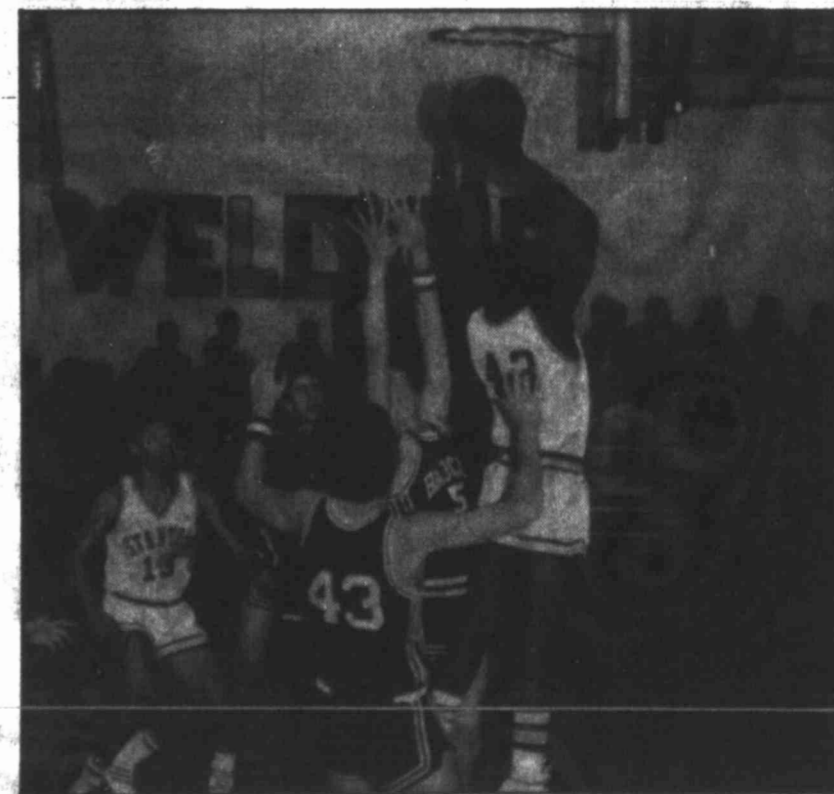

"Public financial disclosure and a secret ballot are the two prime ingredients of honest elections."

Bullock's report showed that more than 1,200 Texans and business, civic and labor groups contributed to his campaign in the last six months. More than 70 percent of the money raised came from individuals.

Bullock, a native of Hillsboro, attended Hill Junior College, Texas Tech and Baylor University Law School. He received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Texas Tech last October.

Bullock has served in the Texas House of Representatives, and has also been an Assistant Attorney General, an Administrative Assistant in the Governor's office, Texas Secretary of State and State Comptroller.

He is an attorney and an Air Force veteran.

Other members present, besides the ones already mentioned were: Helen Ruth Louder and Pauline Wood.

Presidential Museum notes inaugural history

Inauguration Day was not always held on January 20. Before 1937, the oath of office was given on March 4. FDR's second inauguration was the first to take place on Jan. 20, under terms of the 20th Amendment to the constitution. And what about those speeches? The shortest speech was given by our nation's first president, George Washington. His brief speech at Federal Hall in New York City lasted only two minutes. The longest speech was delivered by William Henry Harrison and contained over 8,000 words, lasting 1 hour and 10 minutes. The longest speech, however, began the shortest term of any president. William H. Harrison caught pneumonia during his inauguration ceremonies in 1841, and died a month later.

The nation's first two presidents were not inaugurated in Washington, but New York and Philadelphia. The first inauguration in the new capitol city of Washington was held on March 4, 1801, when Thomas Jefferson became our third president. Visit The Presidential Museum's EVERY FOUR YEARS GALLERY to find out which of our presidents was inaugurated more times than any other president!

Festive parades began with the very first inauguration as George Washington was escorted to Federal Hall to receive his oath of office. Loyal Americans lined the way and maidens scattered flowers along the path.

Inaugural balls began to assume the formality of state with the festivities of Dolly Madison. Until then, balls were often held for only the retiring president, as was the case with the Retiring President George Washington, when no one thought to invite the new President Adams. The first President's wife to see her husband inaugurated, Dolly Madison, hurried home to waiting guests and became known as our nation's first official hostess. After the death of his wife, Andrew Jackson decided to eliminate the ball from his celebrations. Instead, he invited the general public to an open house. The result was a disastrous mob scene that nearly destroyed the White House.

History has remembered the First Ladies traditionally dressed in their finest for these festivities. From Dolly Madison's plain cambric dress with a long train and purple bonnet to Jackie Kennedy's white silk sheath and cape, each is preserved for us to see at The Presidential Museum. THE DISHONG COLLECTIO OF FIRST LADY DOLLS, on permanent display at the Museum, recreates the splendor of the Presidential Inaugurations while detailing the personal side of each First Lady.

The Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee, Odessa, is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Tours are available and there is no admission charge.

Nominating committee for officers selected

Friends of the museum volunteers met on Jan. 17, at the Martin County Historical Museum, with Ramsay Abbott, chairman, presiding.

During the business meeting, reports of the Open House and Christmas Ball were given. Dorothy Deavenport, Old Jail Volunteer Coordinator gave her monthly report. She reported that 257 1/2 hours were logged by volunteers in December. She also reported that 1,416 1/2 hours were given by volunteers in 1988.

Ramsay Abbott appointed a nominating committee consisting of Dorothy Deavenport, Lora Bell Tom and Ramsay Abbott to have a new slate of officers to be presented in February.

Billie Flanagan and Doris Hull reported on the PBMI workshop that they attended along with Curator Ruby Payne at the Presidential Museum in December. They are preparing a workshop for the local volunteers to be presented in February.

Those in attendance: Ramsay Abbott, Mary Kathryn Bristow, Gerry Yardly, Dorothy Deavenport, Lela Hamilton, Lora Bell Tom, Karen Graves, Frances Biggs, Doris Hull and Billie Flanagan.

State Fair of Texas roller coaster faces demolition

Have you ever been to the State Fair of Texas? Did you ride the COMET roller coaster? Millions of Texans may never get that chance if enough money is not raised within 90 days to make necessary repairs to put it back on track.

This historic, wooden coaster has not run since 1985 when an insurance problem forced its closure.

Today experts say the COMET needs approximately $1.2 million in repairs before reopening. The State Fair says it put $1.5 million into the COMET between 1974 and 1984 (most after 1980) to bring it up to the proper safety standards, but it generated only $1.2 million in revenue from riders. Neglect from 1984 has caused the need for further restoration.

Unable to find an operator willing to underwrite the repairs, the State Fair has asked for a demolition permit. State Fair officials said that operators are interested in running a "restored" COMET and agreed to give COMET supporters 60 days to raise $600,000 and 30 days more to come up with the remaining $600,000 to repair the coaster before the next state fair.

Dallas-based Lovers of Landmarks and Preservation Texas! have agreed to take on this statewide campaign with the help of a national organization, American Coaster Enthusiasts.

The groups are asking everyone who has ever ridden the COMET to send a contribution to: SAVE THE COMET c/o Preservation Texas! P.O. Box 12832 Austin, Texas 78711

If the goal is not met, these organizations cannot return money, but contributions will be used for restoration projects within Fair Park, home of the State Fair. For further COMET information, call Linda Wallace, Lovers of Landmarks, 212/248-5910 or Rick Meyer, Preservation Texas!, 512/345-1160.

Emergency farm loan applicants accepted

Application for emergency farm loans for losses caused by adverse weather conditions are being accepted at the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) office located in Stanton, FmHA County Supervisor Ronnal E. Bruhn said today. Crane, Ector, Glasscock, Midland, Upton, Ward Counties were recently named by Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng as eligible for loans to cover part of actual production losses resulting from the adverse weather conditions. Bruton said farmers may be eligible for loans of up to 80 percent of their actual losses or the operating loan needed to continue in business or $500,000, whichever is less. For farmers unable to obtain credit from private commercial lenders, the interest rate is 4.5 percent. "As a general rule, a farmers must have suffered at least a 30 percent loss of production to be eligible for an FmHA emergency loan," Mr. Bruton said. Farmers participating in the PIK or Federal Crop Insurance programs will have to figure in proceeds from those programs in determining their loss. "Applications for loans under this emergency designation will be accepted until August 29, 1989 but farmers should apply as soon as possible. Delays in applying could create backlogs in processing and possibly over into the new farming season," Mr. Bruton said. FmHA is a credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It is authorized to provide disaster emergency loans to recognized farmers who work at and rely on farming for a substantial part of their living. Eligibility is extended to individual farmers who are U.S. citizens and to farming partnerships, corporations or cooperatives in which U.S. citizens hold a majority interest. The FmHA office in Stanton is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Prevention of financial discord

By KATHRYN BURCH
County Extension Agent/H.E.
Martin-Glasscock Counties

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of avoided problems." Well, that may not be exactly how that adage goes, but that is exactly what the Financial Management for Young Couples is aimed. Getting off on the right foot financially can go a long way in avoiding marital conflict.

Do you know where your money is going, how to manage credit or how to save for the future? These are a few of the things that will be covered in the class.

Classes will begin Monday, Jan. 30, 7 p.m. at the Days Inn Patio Room in Big Spring. There is a $20 charge per couple for the class. Ten dollars will be returned for those attending all classes.

Classes will be held Jan. 30, Feb. 6, Feb. 20, and the final class will be held around September.

During the February-September gap you will be receiving a newsletter with activities. The final session has been planned to include a graduation meal, door prizes and certificate.

Just to get a taste of one of the class activities, answer the following questions in writing. Then have your spouse answer the questions. Now, discuss your differences.

1. If your family had to cut down sharply, where would you first cut out expenses? Where would your spouse?

2. If you came into $10,000 suddenly, what would you do with it? Your spouse?

3. It really hurts you to spend money on.....

If you would like to enroll in the workshop series, or if you know of someone who would, call Kathryn Burch, County Extension Agent, 756-3316.

The Cap Rock Connection

By PEGGY LUXTON

Felipe Hernandez is service helper for Cap Rock Electric Cooperative. As such, he is assigned to assist a lineman in his duties in the cooperative service system. He is presently assigned as assistant to Donnie Thompson, Roving Service Lineman.

Born in Stanton, Felipe has lived here all his life. He is married to the former Zoila Reyna, from Tarzan. The couple has two children. Their daughter, Diana, is 29, and their son, Danny, is 25.

Felipe began work for Cap Rock on Aug. 19, 1974. He worked as trencher operator on the Co-op's underground crew for 11 years before being assigned to his present position.

As roving personnel, Felipe and Service Lineman Thompson work in whatever part of the service area they are most needed. Felipe says, "Having a roving lineman for the co-op is pretty new, started during 1988. I feel it is something the co-op has needed to do for some time."

Sometimes there are jobs in a lineman's territory that is too large for the lineman and helper assigned to that territory. The roving personnel assist in such situations. They also fill in when service linemen are sick or are on vacation.

"Since service reliability is our number one priority, there are times when preventive maintenance is needed in the service system. The roving lineman and service helper can help linemen to provide that kind of assistance," Felipe says.

Pat Gray Body Works: Quality collision repairs

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III, shown, is a revolutionary collision repairs system for unibody cars. This latest addition, plus an exclusive alignment machine and Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven enable Pat Gray Body Works to provide quality collision repairs, alignment and refinishing service.

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III. What does this mean to you?

"When your car is in a collision, it can mean a great deal," says Pat Gray, owner of Pat Gray Body Works, 700 N. Owens.

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III is a revolutionary collision repairs system for unibody cars that literally reverses the collision action by pulling it out the way it went in, then squares and aligns each section of your car in relation to the rest of the car — the way it was meant to be.

"When your car is out of commission, you're just thinking about one thing: get it fixed. You want it fixed right — the first time — and you want it fixed quickly. That's why we invested in the Kansas Jack," says Gray.

With its advanced gauging and analysis system the machine aligns each vehicle as a single unit. This means each section is aligned in correct relationship to the rest of the vehicle in conformance with the manufacturer's original specifications.

Unibody cars are built with more precise dimensions, explains Gray, because they're designed to be light, durable and reliable and at the same time roomy. The body parts may be asymmetrical to pack in the most features possible.

"There is little margin for error in unibody repairs," according to Gray; who says the Kansas Jack can achieve repair results that are correct within one or two millimeters.

Pat Gray Body Works features an exclusive alignment machine for front-wheel and four-wheel drive vehicles. This machine applies a sensor on each of the four wheels so they can be adjusted individually, especially important for independent suspension systems. Computerized analysis is printed out on a screen.

Customers don't have to wait till they've had a collision to utilize the alignment machine, said Gray. If your car has a non-adjustable suspension, and you notice excessive or uneven tire wear or "pulling" it would be a good idea to bring it in.

Castor and camber adjusting kits are now available for installation on Ford, Chevrolet and Dodge trucks, says Gray.

Pat Gray Body Works is the only body shop in the immediate area to feature the Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven for factory-perfect paint jobs on vehicles following body work.

"When you start shopping around for collision repair, alignment or refinishing service you have the right to demand the best," says Gray. "With our equipment, trained technicians and our commitment to quality, we believe we offer the best."

New Doctors Discovery

Weight Loss Pill Approved for U.S. Gov't. Patent

'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight
Already Sweeping U.S.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"
Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body
The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat
According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public
If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W842, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free 1(800) 527-9700, ext. W842.

Pat Gray Body Works: Quality collision repairs

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III, shown, is a revolutionary collision repairs system for unibody cars. This latest addition, plus an exclusive alignment machine and Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven enable Pat Gray Body Works to provide quality collision repairs, alignment and refinishing service.

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III. What does this mean to you? "When your car is in a collision, it can mean a great deal," says Pat Gray, owner of Pat Gray Body Works, 700 N. Owens.

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III is a revolutionary collision repairs system for unibody cars that literally reverses the collision action by pulling it out the way it went in, then squares and aligns each section of your car in relation to the rest of the car — the way it was meant to be.

"When your car is out of commission, you're just thinking about one thing: get it fixed. You want it fixed right — the first time — and you want it fixed quickly. That's why we invested in the Kansas Jack," says Gray.

With its advanced gauging and analysis system the machine aligns each vehicle as a single unit. This means each section is aligned in correct relationship to the rest of the vehicle in conformance with the manufacturer's original specifications.

Unibody cars are built with more precise dimensions, explains Gray, because they're designed to be light, durable and reliable and at the same time roomy. The body parts may be asymmetrical to pack in the most features possible. "There is little margin for error in unibody repairs," according to Gray, who says the Kansas Jack can achieve repair results that are correct within one or two millimeters.

Pat Gray Body Works features an exclusive alignment machine for front-wheel and four-wheel drive vehicles. This machine applies a sensor on each of the four wheels so they can be adjusted individually, especially important for independent suspension systems. Computerized analysis is printed out on a screen.

Customers don't have to wait till they've had a collision to utilize the alignment machine, said Gray. If your car has a non-adjustable suspension, and you notice excessive or uneven tire wear or "pulling" it would be a good idea to bring it in.

Castor and camber adjusting kits

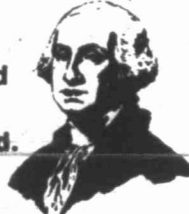

are now available for installation on Ford, Chevrolet and Dodge trucks, says Gray.

Pat Gray Body Works is the only body shop in the immediate area to feature the Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven for factory-perfect paint jobs on vehicles following body work.

"When you start shopping around for collision repair, alignment or refinishing service you have the right to demand the best," says Gray. "With our equipment, trained technicians and our commitment to quality, we believe we offer the best."
