North faces trial

By JAMES ROWLEY Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Former presidential aide Oliver L. North goes on trial this week on 12 felony charges that have survived months of legal maneuvering after his indictment in connection with the Iran-Contra affair.

Since his indictment last March. North's lawyers won dismissal of four of the original 16 counts - including the key charges arising from the diversion of U.S.-Iran arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

But the retired Marine lieutenant colonel still faces a host of imum possible sentence of 60 vears imprisonment and fines totaling $3 million. His trial is set to begin Tuesday.

The dismissal earlier this month of charges that North conspired with former national security adviser John M Poindexter and two arms dealers to finance the "secret war" in Nicaragua with armssale proceeds basically leaves allegations that he covered up his activities by lying.

The former National Security Council aide is charged with making false statements to congressional committees in 1985 that were investigating reports he and others were helping the rebels in violation of a ban on such assistance.

Three false-statement and obstruction charges allege that North prepared false responses to written queries from congressional committees. The letters denying that North or other NSC staffers were improperly assisting the Contras were signed by Robert C. McFarlane, then national security adviser.

McFarlane pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges of withholding information from Congress and is expected to testify against North as a witness for Iran-Contra prosecutors.

North also is charged with obstructing an August 1986 inquiry by the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. He is accused of falsely denying, during a meeting with panel members at the White House, that he helped the Contras.

Four other obstruction and false statement charges stem from actions North allegedly took after the Iran-Contra affair became public in November

He is charged with obstruc-ting the presidential inquiry ordered by President Reagan by making false statements to then-Attorney General Edwin Meese III and by destroying National Security Council documents while Justice Department investigators were conducting the probe.

The false statements included North's denial that the NSC staff was involved in the diversion of arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras, the indictment charges

Some judges: No work, more pay

By RICHARD CARELLI and MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON — A fifth of all senior federal judges including former Chief Justice Warren E. Burger stand to collect their largest pay raises in a decade even though they no longer handle any court cases, The Associated Press has learned.

This windfall - increasing Burger's salary by $60,000 to $175,000 a year, for example stems from a complex retirement system that allows federal judges to reduce their caseloads sharply while still qualifying for activeduty pay increases. Judges who retire through resignation — the other option provided by Congress — keep for life the same salary they received on their last day of work. In Burger's case, it would have been $108,400.

Visitor learns U.S. farm practices

By SARAH LUMAN Staff Writer

From Honduras to Texas is a long journey. On his way home, Jaime Nunez Lanza has come here to the first of eight Texas counties he will visit to learn about agriculture - knowledge he plans to take home to benefit Honduran farmers.

Born in Guinope, Honduras, Lanza has been a student at Texas A&M University for the past year, studying under a sponsorsip from U.S. AID. Before that he worked for CARE, Inc.

Lanza has been the guest of County Home Economics Extension Agent Naomi Hunt for almost two weeks and left Big Spring Sunday. Hunt, has said she believes she was chosen to host Lanza at least partially because of her visit to Honduras in 1987.

His spring study tour will take Travis, Dallas, Blanco, and Hidalgo, between January and May. Afterward he will audit a course in international agriculture at Texas A&M before returning to Honduras.

"Actually I am shadowing professionals and volunteers such as rural people to observe how the United States' systems work, for example educational programs and interaction with different audiences.

"In June I have to leave the United States and return to my country and begin work for the government or a non-profit organization; give my knowledge in the best way I can with efficiency and quality.

He spent Wednesday morning observing agricultural education at Howard College — firsthand, by attending a class; then the Extension Homemakers' Program Council gave him an opportunity to see "how they're planning all the programs, and how they're trying to coordinate activities in the office and the field."

allowed. "You have to know we are a developing country, first, and the traditions are not the same.'

About two-thirds of his country's population is directly employed in agriculture, he said, with 3 million of Honduras' 4.5 million population actually living in rural areas.

The second-largest Central American nation, it is surrounded by Guatemala, El Salvador, and Nicaragua; it borders the Atlantic on the north coast and the Pacific in the south. Some three-fourths of its land is mountainous; its visited a cotton gin and traveled to temperatures range from 79-82 and on the coasts there is an average of 70-100 inches of precipitation annually. Almost half the populace is 15 years old or younger, Lanza said, and much of the culture is based on Spanish and Indian roots.

"Here, the government is very interested in trying to put good programs in the field, to help the people in the field. They try to give, not only collect taxes. They collect taxes, but they try to provide a service for the farmers and the community.

"In Honduras, the campesinos, the small farmers, have small parcels (of land) — one to five hectares," he said. A hectare is 10,000 than two acres. "They spend most and his cat." of their time doing (farmwork) in the traditional way.

"Here you have the big farmers the high technology and the flat land. In Honduras much of the territory is mountains," he said.

Another difference between U.S. farming and Honduran farming is in export crops. Honduran agricultural exports include bananas — the most important export crop, Lanza said — and coffee, cotton, sugar cane, tobacco, timber and beef.

But most Honduran farmers raise their crops for consumption: rice, beans, some vegetables, and domestic livestock. "All the campesinos have some chickens. He has a pig, a horse, some burros for carrying and transport, and square metes — or slightly more one cow, two cows — and his dog

Moffatt's: Arson not suspected

By MICHAEL DUFFY

Investigators — unsure what caused a Friday night blaze that destroyed Moffatt Carpet Inc. — do not currently suspect arson.

"At this time arson is not suspected as the cause of this fire," Fire Marshal Burr Lea Settles said this morning. "If at a later date I become aware of information, say, through an informant, that leads me to suspect that possibly did occur, I will pursue that angle.'

It was 18 months ago that Moffatt Carpet at a nearby location was destroyed by fire. Estimated loss on that blaze was $255,000, according to published reports.

A Sand Springs man — charged with arson in connection with the June 21, 1987 fire at Moffatt Carpet, 200 Main St. — was acquitted by a Howard County jury in January

Five units of the Big Spring Fire Department, and an estimated 25 firefighters battled the fire for more than three hours Friday after being notified shortly before 7 p.m.

Fire Chief Frank Anderson said this morning the structure was totally engulfed in flames when firemen arrived only moments after receiving the call.

"There really wasn't anything we we could do for that building (Moffatt), so we concentrated on extinguishing the fire and saving the adjoining structures," Anderson explained. The blaze was confined to the carpet company and no other downtown businesses sustained damage, the fire chief said.

After conducting an initial investigation Saturday, Settles said he determined the source of the blaze occurred in the northwest, or rear, of the carpet company located at 212 Main St

He estimated damage at $100,000, but added that figure is subject to revision pending an insurance company adjustor's

Biggest spender pushes contribution reform

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements - the state's all-time champion political spender says he is endorsing a proposal to place unprecedented limits on contributions to candidates.

Texas has no limit on individual contributions, so the proposed limit of $25,000 annually to any combination of candidates, officeholders or political action committees would force dramatic changes in fund-raising practices. Several political operatives estimated that more than 200 Texans now spread around more than $100,000 a year each in political

The proposed $25,000 cap would apply only to state races. Congress regulates federal races.

The proposal, to be aired Wednesday at a meeting of Clements' task force on campaign finance reform, also recommends a $10,000 limit on the amount a PAC can give an individual candidate per year, The Houston Post reported Sunday.

There is no limit now. In addition, the draft recommends ending the ban on corporate and labor group contributions to candidates. Ten states prohibit labor contributions, and corporate giving is outlawed in 20

Criticism already is mounting on the proposed campaign limits and on Clements' decision to appoint Secretary of State Jack Rains - a former major contributor to Republican campaigns who has said he is 95 percent certain he will run for governor in 1990 — as task force chairman.

"This is all just a bunch a political bull," Houston attorney Joe Jamail said.

Speech will be blueprint

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements, scheduled to deliver his final State of the State address to lawmakers on Tuesday, will offer a blueprint for the future rather than any sort of swan song,

"He's a charge-ahead individual. He moves forward, always looking to meet the next challenge. The speech will reflect the energy and enthusiasm he has," said Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary.

Clements, 71, is in the last half of what he says will be his last

First elected in 1978, Clements was ousted in 1982 by Democrat Mark White. Clements then defeated White in 1986 and moved back into the Governor's Mansion two years ago

His address, scheduled for a joint House-Senate session at 10 a.m. Tuesday, is "going to reflect the governor's vision of Texas. It's very upbeat, very op-timistic," Bashur told The Associated Press

"He's going to talk in terms of economic development, education, reforms in criminal justice and about budgetary concerns,' Bashur said.

"The speech recognizes that we've been through some difficult times, that the state is still in a period of historic transition. We're making progress, we're making headway, but this is a period in the history of the state in which the decisions made now will reflect on the people of Texas well into the 21st century.'

Bashur said the governor likely would call attention to the economic transition Texas is undergoing.

DENTON, Texas (AP) - An alert neighbor provided authorities with a break that led to the identities of two abandoned toddlers, now determined to be related to at least one of two women found fatally bludgeoned in Wise County.

Authorities said Sunday a man they identified only as Pablo believed he knew the women and, children. Pablo told police he had seen the women the night before their bodies were found beaten to death in a rural Wise County culvert near Decatur. The two women's bodies were found early Thursday and the children were found wandering separately a few hours later in neighboring Denton County locations, about 30 miles away. Denton County Sheriff Kirby

The identity of the second woman had yet to be established Sunday night, but officials were checking to see if she is Erlinda Martinez Gamez, 27, the missing mother of Silvia Gamez.

Investigators from the Texas Rangers and the Wise County and Denton County sheriff's departments spent most of Sunday night talking with the children's fathers, who are brothers.

First private space rocket launch planned

HOUSTON (AP) — It's later than expected, but a local company expects to become the first privately funded firm to launch a commercial rocket into space for a paying customer. Space Services Inc. says it is launching a suborbital, or sounding rocket, for the University of Alabama-Huntsville's Consortium for Materials Development in The purpose of the March flight is to deliver six materials processing experiments to about seven minutes worth of microgravity near the apogee, or highest point, of the trajectory. The experiments will investigate the effects of near-weightlessness on electroplating, separation of polymers, production of polyurethane foam, and molecular dispersion of other materials. A parachute will lower the ex-

1-800-592-ROAD

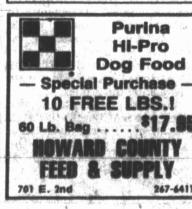

The tab for lofting 625 pounds worth of science experiment materials on a 15-minute, 200-mile high dip into space is $1 million. The cost can be considered a bargain, since it will cost Space Services about $1.2 million to buy the components of the two-stage, solid-fuel rocket and assemble them into a package. But Space Services needs the business, because so far there's been no business for fledgling private enterprise launch companies. Now that a first shot has come its way, Space Services has no plans to run off future business with heavy-handed prices.

The company, headed by former Mercury astronaut Donald K. "Deke" Slayton, thought business would be lively in 1985, when it announced plans to begin the age of private space ventures by launching human ashes into orbit on behalf of Florida funeral home. Those plans have gone belly up.

Crimestoppers

Crime Stoppers of Big Spring is seeking the public's help in locating a suspect or suspects in a Jan. 11 break-in at The Box, 2301 S. Scurry St.

The perpetrator gained entry into the business by breaking two front glass windows with a cinder block. The suspect then removed about 125 cartons, valued at approximately $1,600, of various name-brand cigarettes.

Anyone with information regarding this or any felony crime is urged to call the Crime Stoppers line at 263-1151, 24 hours a day.

Crime Stoppers is authorized to pay up to $1,000 cash for information leading to the arrest, conviction or indictment of any person involved in criminal activity. Information is confidential and all calls will remain anonymous.

The Defense Department spent $3.1 million to develop the program and to conduct the tests from June through September, and expects to spend another $4.8 million in fiscal

The Pentagon opposed recruit testing all recruit applicants. testing from the beginning because of the expense and because once in uniform, all servicemen face periodic, random urinalysis tests. Those tests are credited with helping drive drug use within the military to record low levels. Military officials also objected to the testing of recruit applicants because the tests would not be random or a surprise; all recruits are tested when they show up at a Military Entrance Processing Command station.

Despite those arguments, Congress embraced legislation sponsored by Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., in 1987 and ordered the Defense Department to begin

James Brady retires as Reagan press secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — James S. Brady, who remained on the government payroll as Ronald Reagan's press secretary for nearly eight years after being severely wounded in an assassination attempt, is retiring.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said this week that President Bush talked with Brady's wife, Sarah, about the former press secretary's retirement plans before his inauguration.

"At the end of the (Reagan) administration he and Sarah had put together a retirement program...from a number of various outlets," Fitzwater said.

Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes became the chief White House spokesman with the title of principal deputy press secretary. When Speakes resigned in 1987, Fitzwater was named spokesman with the title of assistant to the president for press relations.

In announcing on Nov. 29 that he would retain Fitzwater as his spokesman, then-Vice President Bush restored to him the traditional title of press secretary.

Asked at that time whether Brady would have a role in the new administration, Fitzwater said, "I know the vice president is very interested in Jim and concerned about his well-being" and that Bush and his advisers "have some ideas of things they would like him

When asked about this again on Monday, Fitzwater said that before his inauguration Bush "talked to Sarah about it, and so did I, and a number of people are interested in putting together whatever they ould like to do."

"Six children and his wife is the average family," Lanza said, describing campesinos as living in simple huts or crude adobe homes forming scattered small villages or clustered small towns. "He spent all his time working in small parcels of land in the same manner as his ancestor, using primitive tools and wasteful methods of cultivation. Generally his crops are corn, beans and few public services. Normally he is isolated in his own locality, because of his poverty and his nation's inadequate transportation and communication services.

"In this traditional way, the Honduran campesino is proud of his past, looking forward to the future with confidence and hope." Some machinery — such as tractors made by U.S. manufacturers — is in use, but most of the campesinos don't use the large, sophisticated machinery common in U.S. farming, he said.

However, the cooperative system is very advanced in Honduras, with a co-op concentrating on each of the major crops bananas, coffee, citrus, fishing, rice — and each co-op also serving in the federation of co-ops, or national agricultural organization, Lanza said.

"We are very advanced in this way," Lanza said. "The people believe (cooperation) is a good way to put effort together and to help each another.

"Then, the co-op will put in a small store, so (the small farmer) can buy fertilizer or food at a lower price than in the bigger villages."

The system divides its profits annually, returning a share to members based on participation, keeping some for capital, and using another portion for education, 'obeying the seven principles of a co-op," Lanza said.

once he claims senior status. Some, like 91-year-old Elbert P. Tuttle of Atlanta, are on the bench almost as often as their 750 active colleagues. Tuttle does about 70 percent as much work as the active judges in the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, according to circuit executive Norman Zoller.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of the only public report on the subject of senior judge workloads, compiled by the Administrative Office of the Courts. Identifying each senior judge only by a code number, with no names listed, the report showed that in the year ending June 30, 1987, 56 of 271 senior judges, or 21 percent, handled no cases. Forty nine of the 56 were over 75 years old.

David Cook, who keeps track of such statistics for the office, said office policy bars him from releasing information on individual judges by name or more recent coded data. But he said, "If you did the survey today, I don't think things would be much different."

Senior status is available to any judge who is at least 65 with 15 years experience or 70 with 10 vears. There are now a total of 306, including Burger, and Cook said the patterns found in 1987 are "not out of date.'

For those senior judges who do not work, reasons can differ dramatically. James Noel Jr., a senior judge in Houston, performed his last judicial duty in 1978 when his annual salary was $54,500 — $80,500 a year less than the salary he stands to begin receiving next month.

Noel, 79, took senior status in 1976 when he was 66, after 15 years as a federal trial judge. Asked why he chose senior status and not resignation, Noel told AP, "It was just a matter of choice.

Noel regularly travels to his downtown office to manage his "extensive investments." When asked about his impending pay raise, Noel said, "I was expecting Owen Cox, appointed as a federal trial judge in Texas by President Nixon in 1970, took senior status in 1981. Jesse Clark, the district court's clerk, said Cox did substantial work for most of a year until 'his health failed and he had difficulty getting to the office."

"He's been hospitalized for three years. He's on a life-support system," Clark said.

Cox's salary would rise to $135,000 next month. Had he resigned in 1981 his salary would have been frozen at $67,100.

Burger left the Supreme Court bench in September 1986 to serve as unpaid chairman of the commission celebrating the bicentennials of the Constitution and Bill of Rights. He declined to answer questions about his impending pay increase and his judicial workload other than to pass along that, "I'm too busy to sit." When he retired, his salary was $108,400. Had he resigned, Burger's annual salary would have been frozen for life at that figure. But Burger, who has spent much of his career campaigning for higher salaries for judges, chose senior status. As a result, he qualifies for whatever pay raises are extended to his successors as chief justice.

In 1987, the chief justice's salary was raised to $115,000, and Burger got the increase along with Chief Justice William Rehnquist. Under the new proposal, Rehnquist and Burger each would be paid

Supreme Court spokeswoman Toni House said Burger has not been asked to hear any cases because, she presumed, Rehnquist is aware that Burger works fulltime as chairman of the bicentennial commission.

By contrast, Rehnquist assigned former Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell to serve on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.. Powell also will sit next month on the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Florida. "As a lawyer and law teacher I would be troubled if judges were being paid for doing nothing and getting increments for doing nothing unless Congress made a conscious decision that even judges in total retirement should get pay raises," Professor Gillers said. He said nothing in law or judicial standards makes it unethical for a senior judge to do no work and collect pay raises.

"I can't speak to the personal propriety," he said. "Every judge has to make that decision for himself.' Coffin, the federal appeals court judge, said, "It's a good theoretical question" whether the system is fair. "If there were more frequent pay raises for judges I'd be more

Reconsider withdrawal

In the musical "Oliver!" there is a number in which that charming villain, Fagin, sings, "I'm reviewing, the situation. . ." and, after considering the possible consequences, concludes, "I think I'd better think it out.

This would be a good approach for the Bush administration to take toward the U.S. policy of pressing for Vietnamese withdrawal from Cambodia.

An oversimplified foreign policy would call for all Communist forces to withdraw from countries where they don't belong. .

What we may not have thought through is the new agony which may be imposed on the Cambodians if the Vietnamese withdraw.

Our long war in Vietnam conditioned us to consider that country's Communist regime the worst of all possible alternatives. But a good case can be made for the proposition that the Cambodians were considerably worse off under the bloody Khmer Rouge regime, 1975-79, than they have since been under Vietnamese

George Bush and his adviser would do well to think it out again.

All of us share the blame

Our gun-crazed society has claimed five more victims. Five more innocent lives. Five more children. . .

The violent, gut-wrenching, purposeless plot seems always the same: A maniac with a gun goes berserk and opens fire on unsuspecting and innocent victims.

Sometimes it's in a restaurant; sometimes its on the freeway. On (Jan. 17), it happened to take place at a California elementary school during recess. . . We all share the blame, some of us more than others but none of us more than the National Rifle Association. The NRA has consistently and effectively thwarted or resisted every attempt to enact even the barest restraints on gun ownership.

And the NRA, skilled in guerrilla intimidation, has done so by transforming state and federal politicians intospineless jellyfish while most of the rest of us just stand by counting victims in massacre stories. . .

We urge each and every one of you to call and-or write our lawmakers and demand that they put an end to this senseless violence.

Insist, at the very least, on a seven-day waiting period before guns are sold. Demand tough screening procedures. Require a ban of such killing machines as the AK-47 and other weapons that serve no purpose other than to slaughter people.

Like it or not, the blood of those five innocent children is on our hands, too.

Kinder nation not cheap

The phrase "kinder, gentler," endlessly repeated as it has already been, is now functioning as a key expectation of the Bush administration. . .

Part of (President) Bush's program could cause him trouble. He wants a kinder nation without more spending on domestic programs, and, of course, "no new taxes."

Rather, like (Ronald) Reagan, though a bit more plausibly, he lauds the "thousand points of light," the volunteer groups fighting poverty, homelessness and

The trouble is, charity has never fulfilled the role Reagan, and now Bush, have assigned it. "Relief," as it was called during the Great Depression, gave people a free meal but did not cure the lack of schooling and jobs which produced often hopeless conditions of poverty.

Only a full scale commitment by government to, yes, the welfare state, can ever truly be expected to cure

Social Security is the most successful anti-poverty program ever devised. Before it began, nearly 7 in 10 older Americans lived in poverty. Now fewer than 1 in 10 do. But such solutions aren't cheap: Social Security pays out $200 billion in retirement benefits every year.

Don't expect any such radical move in Bush's first year. But if he takes his own advice seriously, eventually he will have to change his mind, and his policies.

I've got a lump in my throat.

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I was against Ronald Reagan when he ran for president in 1980. Actually it wasn't so much that I was against Reagan. It was more that I was steadfastly on the side of Jimmy Carter.

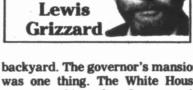

In 1976 when Carter was trying to become the first Georgian to win the presidency, I was being held prison of war in Chicago. It was more like being held prisoner to a job, but regardless, I was one homesick cowboy when Carter emerged as the Democratic front-

I'd met Jimmy Carter before. He had invited me to his home when he was governor of Georgia. I knew little, and cared little, for politics at the time, but getting invited to the governor's mansion put me solidly behind him in all future endeavors.

So in 1976 there I was in Chicago and a guy I knew from back home was running for president and he talked like I did and I was proud of him and for him and he may have even help douse a bit of my homesickness I got out of Chicago in 1977 and backyard. The governor's mansion was one thing. The White House was something else. I was a pig wearing perfume. Cinderlewis. Then 1980 came and Carter's troubles and misfortunes cost him the election. I was embittered. 'There goes my name right off the White House Christmas card list," I growled. But Ronald Reagan - Willie Nelson in the backyard or no Willie Nelson in the backyard — grew on

He grew on most of the nation. Those he didn't grow on - those who have been writing and speaking of his failures as he leaves office — probably don't like barbecue and beer either, so we'll simply dismiss them and go onward. That old man was something, wasn't he? He inherited malaise. He turned it into the nation feeling good about itself for the first time since the horrors of Vietnam and Richard Nixon.

I remember a lot of Reagan's "Precious Memories" in the mannerisms. There was the way he'd shake his head and wrinkle his brow when asked a tough question. His reply might not have had a great deal of substance, but it would normally be optimistic, and I like that in a guy who's running

So he slept a lot. You would need your rest at his age, too. He's older than some of our states. And so he used 3-by-5 cards to remember what he wanted to say. If it weren't for the newspapers, I would occasionally forget which day it is myself. And Ronald Reagan's got 30-plus years on me.

Ronald Reagan got shot while he was president. A lot of people have probably forgotten that. And he walked into the emergency room to have the bullet removed — cracking jokes. John Wayne couldn't have shown more bravado.

When Ronald Reagan was elected president in 1980, I wrote, 'If we were going to elect an actorpresident, why don't we go for somebody like Clint Eastwood?"

We elected the right guy. A good man who smiled a lot and never let us forget we're the chosen ones to be living in America. The Great Communicator took "patriotism" off the bad word list.

And his faults? Tell me about them later. Right now, I'm busy missing my president.

Copyright 1989 by Cowles Syndicate,

AP Special Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP) - It's seminar season, time for experts and unemployed candidates to talk about overhauling the way Americans nominate and elect their presidents. They'll get scant encouragement from President Bush, who won once and lost once under the current system, said he will "play by the rules until some better ones come along."

"I'm not going to spend any time trying to redo it," he said in an interview prior to his inauguration.

Campaigns grow longer and more costly every time, presidential primary elections multiply, and for a while after each election, there is talk of change in the name of reform. It's been that way since the Democrats began changing the system nearly 20 years ago. That changed the process for Republicans, too, because the primary election laws enacted by state legislatures usually cover both sides.

So far, efforts at change have only made campaigns more complex, more expensive and more time-consuming.

Long before Bush has been in the White House a year, prospective challengers will be making their first moves toward the 1992 campaign, most of which will have to do with raising money. Step one these days is to set up a political action committee, to bankroll preliminary operations.

All told, there were 38 presidential primary elections in 1988. On a single night, Super Tuesday, 20 states - a dozen of them in the South - chose nominating delegates by primary or caucus. Democratic re-reformers tried to put more political savvy in their nominating process by

But that was scaled back at last summer's convention under pressure from Jesse Jackson, who got almost no support from those ex-officio delegates. That was part of a peacemaking package with Gov. Michael Dukakis, the Democratic nominee against Bush, and it il-guaranteeing party elders and officeholders seats at the Democratic National Convention.

lustrates the reality the reformers can't alter. The nominating system in both parties bends to accommodate the candidates who master it to gain

Southern Democrats devised the Super Tuesday notion, which was supposed to give their more conservative constituencies an early and influential voice in the contest for the 1988 Democratic nomination. It sent the party no clear signal — the path was left open for Dukakis. But it was a turning point for the Republicans as Bush came close to a sweep.

Bush said early this month that "the regional concept was...something new this time . . . and it proved to be a tremendous boon for me."

He said other regions will start looking at alliances that would cluster their primaries to increase their influence. "The Western states some day are going to get together and say, 'Why should we be left out all the time? Why shouldn't we get in there and

That's occurred to some other regions, too. New England made a stab at it, but wound up as an adjunct to Super Tuesday, in part because New Hampshire was not about to give up its premier primary to enter into a group.

There are other proposals for restricting primaries to certain dates so there would be a limited number of election days during the primary season, and by a combination of date and region so that candidates wouldn't spend so much time traipsing between distant campaign states.

Bush doubts the revisionists will get far. His skepticism is founded on experience. It happens every fourth year. Bush said he'd seen it coming -"Everybody's going to go up to Harvard . . . and try to figure out what's wrong with the system.

"I don't think you're going to redesign it," he said. And he certainly isn't going to try. "Why should I go out and say Iowa's a lousy idea?" he asked. "I'm here because of Iowa. . . Not Iowa in '88, Iowa in '80."

In 1980, Bush upset an absentee Ronald Reagan in the Iowa precinct caucuses, first event on the presidential campaign calendar. That vaulted him out of the field and ultimately led to his nomination for vice president. In 1988, Iowa was his most severe setback — Bush ran third. But as vice president he was able to come back quickly.

"You want to get that broad perspective," he said, looking back. That perspective comes most readily to winners.

"Oh the last goodbye's the hardest one to say . . .this is where the cowboy rides away." - George

It's been something else, this last 15 months. I met so many people and I learned so much. But now it's over. Beginning today, I'll be working for the Stanton Herald, as

So it's time for me to saddle up and ride away. I thank you all for helping me find out what the news in Big Spring and Howard County has been for the past 15 months.

To Robert Wernsman, Steve

Belvin, Steve Reagan and Alicia

Goldman, - my teachers and patient editors — my thanks. Looking back, there are so many stories I can't forget — Howard College Coach Don Stevens' depleted Hawk Queens playing nearly all season with a two-girl bench, Stefanie Massie earning All-America honors, the injuries that left them but four players as the season wound down; Coach C.E. Carmichael's phenomenal 27-2 Lady Steers; the Howard College ball, road trips and home stands. Thanks, especially, to the coaches who took time to help a fledgling sportswriter — Don Stevens, C.E. Carmichael, Quinn Eudy, Jan East — and the teams who made the games fun to watch; thanks, too, to Massie and Katrina Thompson, the Lady Steers All-State guard.

and Big Spring PRCA rodeos; Hawk baseball and six-man foot-

It was like being back in school, only better: I didn't have to study. Well, I can go back to keeping up with the teams — only now they'll be the Wildcats and the Buffaloes.

There were other stories, too were some of them were tough stuff. Cameo workers' paychecks were rumored to be bouncing - months before the curtain finally fell; after months of rumor; Rep. Larry Don Shaw resigning to take a better-paying, Austin job; the Rainbow Project becoming instead a Buckner Baptist children's shelter. Some of them were fun stuff -Christmas in April; the C.R. Wing Cogeneration plant officially opening, the Downtown Steering Committee pulling funds and talent together to build the Tubb Pocket Park and start the Railroad Plaza; Roger Staubach coming to town, mostly to plug Republican candidates in the fall election; Coy Mc-Cann's downtown mural; the federal prison camp expansion

Thanks to the people who knew all the answers I needed: — Mrs. Pat Porter, Betty Schoenfield, Johnnie Lou Avery, Troy Fraser, Clyde McMahon Jr.,; Roger Marshall; Bob Noyes; Hooper Sanders; Bob Lieb; Cecilia McKenzie; Victor Sedinger; and Whayne Moore, Joe Wallis, Phil Spears and Rudy Franco.

My new job will still send me prowling courthouse hallways and pestering peace officers for details - it'll just be the Martin County Courthouse, instead.

I've been especially grateful to the folks who've been there, day after day, to help tell the whole story — even the parts that never made the paper.

I appreciate the help from Sheriff A.N. Standard, Justices of the Peace Judge Bill Shankles and Judge China Long; County Judge Milton Kirby, and Commissioners Paul Allen, David Barr, O.L. Brown and Bill Crooker, who were always willing to help me find out the facts and report them correctly; County Auditor Jackie Olson and County Engineer Bill Mims, and County Clerk Margaret Ray were always patient and willing to say something for the record, too. I'm obliged.

Also, a special thanks to District Court Judge James Gregg for his help in understanding the law, Hardy Wilkerson and Bob Moore for their help in translating it, and to Buster McCartney and Rick Hamby, Dale Dupree and Cheryl Cahill for letting me know where the schedule and the reality differed; thanks, Bill Tune, for keeping me from jumping several guns.

For keeping me out of trouble, thanks to David Harman, Bernice Nail, Ben Lockhart, Barney Edens, Jack Howard and Marvin Keenan. I won't forget your kindness; I couldn't have done my job without your help. I will miss you all.

So long, y'all - take it easy.

Military crash kills eight

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) -A C-130 crashed into a snowbank and split in two during a landing in a thick, icy fog, killing eight Canadian soldiers heading to a major U.S.-Canadian military exercise, officials said.

The Canadian Hercules C-130 was carrying eight crewmen and 10 special service paratroopers from Edmonton, Alberta, when it crashed just short of the runway at Fort Wainwright's airfield, said U.S. Army Capt. Jim Rodgers.
"The weather was quite bad," said Rodgers. At the time of the crash, he said, a thick, icy fog blanketed the runway and the temperature registered around 60 degrees below zero.

After the crash, Mock said, Canadian officials canceled their forces' participation in the exercise, Brim Frost '89, and recalled remaining Canadian aircraft and U.S. and Canadian investigators had not determined whether weather caused the crash, Mock said.

'Night stalker' trial begins today

RICHARD RAMIREZ

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Security has been tightened for the trial of Richard Ramirez, the drifter accused of 13 Satanic slayings in the "Night Stalker" serial murder case that terrorized California four years ago.

Deputy District Attorney Philip Halpin was scheduled to give the prosecution's opening statement today, six months after jury selection began.

Superior Court Judge Michael Tynan told the 12-member jury to anticipate two years of testimony.

When the courtroom opens, spectators will have to pass through metal detectors, similar to the devices used in airports. Ramirez will be restrained by leg shackles while seated in court.

Ramirez, 28, a pale, shaggyhaired drifter from El Paso, Texas who was arrested after an angry mob chased him down, is charged with 13 counts of murder

They were faceless to each other on the battlefield, each a possible statistic on the other's casualty report. Now they met, at the Tay Ninh Rehabilitation Center, and spoke of pain and sorrow.

The Americans looked at the Viet Cong guerrillas they had feared and hated, who had killed their buddies. They saw men and women, in or near middle age, learning to live without lost arms, legs, hands or eyes.

"I wanted to shake people's hands and there weren't hands to shake," said Kevin Bowen of Boston.

"Vietnam so deeply affected the conscience of America," said William R. Kimball of South Lake Tahoe, Calif., founder of Vets With a Mission, which brings groups of veterans back to Vietnam.

Amnesty reports on executions

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International today urged the international community to persuade Iran to stop a six-month cam-paign of political executions and other "cruel, inhuman or degrading" punishments including torture.

The London-based human rights group said in a statement submitted to the United Nations Human Rights Commission that it had received reports of more than 1,000 executions of political prisoners since July.

The commission begins its annual meeting today in Geneva. Amnesty International said other human rights violations that have persisted in Iran include detention without trial and amputation, usually of the four fingers of the right hand, of which it said 21 instances had been recorded.

Gorbachev scores high in poll

NEW YORK (AP) - Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has overwhelming support among Muscovites, but many aren't sure where perestroika is headed and are worried, according to a published report.

The Daily News in its Sunday editions reported that a poll of 1,000 Moscow residents indicated that a majority of Muscovites believe the Soviet war in Afghanistan was a mistake and that former leader Leonid Brezhnev had been bad for the country.

The poll also indicated that Gorbachev's economic reforms enjoy a 93 percent approval rating. But when pressed, 51 per-cent of those polled said that the reforms have had no real impact on their lives. Seventeen percent said the reforms were having a negative impact, the Daily News

In addition, the newspaper said that Communist Party members are among the most leery of Gorbachev's reforms, fearing job losses or that the party will lose its influence in the Soviet Union.

U.S. closes embassy in Kabul

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) -U.S. diplomats lowered the Stars and Stripes and closed their mission in embattled Kabul today as departing Soviet troops headed north in what one Moscow envoy said could be the last truck convoy home.

Soviet diplomats in Kabul say the remaining 15,000 to 20,000 Red Army troops could be gone by the end of the week, about 10 days before the U.N. deadline of Feb.

The guerrillas are not a party to the U.N. agreement and have vowed to overthrow the government of President Najib once the Soviets are gone.

"Today we leave at a moment that is both happy and sad," said the charge d'affaires, Jon D. Glassman, after a flag-lowering ceremony in the embassy's snowcovered compound.

West Germans remain silent on plans for weapons modernization

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) - NATO troops and arms are increasingly unpopular among West Germans, so it was no surprise when Bonn officials carefully ducked the issue of modernizing shortrange nuclear missiles at a NATO defense strategy session.

Government sources said privately that Chancellor Helmut Kohl had instructed senior West German officials attending the annual conference to stay mum on whether Bonn supports extending the range of battlefield nuclear missiles.

Most of the defense experts taking part in the weekend conference strongly support the 1983 plan adopted by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to improve the missiles, chief among them the Lance, which was first introduced in 1972 and has a range of just over 60 miles

They also appeared to support U.S. calls for a cautious response to Kremlin disarmament initiatives, though the conference did not produce a statement.

The issue is extremely sensitive for the Bonn government, which is unlikely to shirk its commitments within the 16-nation alliance by openly opposing modernization despite strong public opposition. But by remaining silent on the issue, the Bonn leadership may be encouraging unrealistic hopes among West German voters that the modernization question is still open. It was left to left-wing West German politicians to speak out on the issue at the conference, and they voiced resistance.

Members of the opposition Social Democratic Party told the group of 171 NATO defense experts that West Germans oppose modernization and have serious problems with the size of the NATO force posted in their country.

As Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev gains in popularity among West Germans - 71 percent give him a favorable rating public support for defense spending and the NATO troop presence has waned.

Most conference delegates attacked what they saw as a dangerous complacency that could weaken defenses.

U.S. Defense Secretarydesignate John Tower told the conference that NATO should maintain a "healthy skepticism" about Kremlin disarmament overtures. and keep the West's nuclear options open.

The Texas Republican said the alliance runs the risk of mortgaging its security if it fails to modernize its nuclear forces because of perceived improvements in relations with Moscow.

Tower said the Soviet Union remains a powerful adversary with superior military capability and the West must not lose sight of that imbalance in its euphoria over disarmament prospects.

"If we fail to consider that capability, or if we fail to consider its relevance in terms of their intentions, then we do so at our peril," he said.

Social Democrats like Egon Bahr, the party's arms control expert, and Karsten Voigt drew fire from American participants when they explained many West Germans are increasingly critical of NATO doctrine.

Even Defense Minister Rupert Scholz mentioned his country's concerns about the possibility of having to share a greater burden of the NATO budget, though he avoided mentioning modernization.

Tower met privately with Scholz on Sunday morning but apparently accomplished little in the way of persuading his allied counterpart to show stronger support for NATO

"We just illuminated some problems. We didn't come to any solutions," Tower told The Associated Press after the meeting.

He declined to say what particular issues were covered or whether he was able to get an assurance from the West German minister that Bonn would support modernization.

The West Germans also were taken to task for their response to U.S. intelligence reports alleging that West German companies helped Libya develop a chemical weapons potential.

CHIROPRACTOR

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., accused Bonn of "benign neglect" in the Libyan scandal and suggested senior West German officials have been lying to cover up their culpability.

On Sunday, the conference focused on the new and mounting threats to alliance unity posed by Gorbachev's "charm offensive" in the NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner raised the concern voiced by many other influential defense strategists that Gorbachev could fail and be replaced by a far more conservative leader.

"We cannot entrust our security to one person alone or to intentions," Woerner said. "Both can change overnight."

Diamonds aren't forever if giver proves unfaithful

I'd see the day when I'd be writing to Dear Abby, but here goes: I am a 34-year-old, single working mother who fell in love with a man I met last August. The day before Thanksgiving, he asked me to marry him. I accepted, and he gave me a beautiful diamond ring. I had never been married or had a diamond ring before.

Right after he gave me the ring, he went back to his hometown to tell his family about us, and also to comfort his ex-girlfriend, who had been calling him at all hours, crying and begging to have him back. (He told me when we first met it had been over between the two of them for some time, and I believed

Well, when he came back, he informed me that instead of telling his ex-girlfriend that he was engaged to marry me, he ended up in bed with her and now he wanted to end our relationship!

I was in shock. We had already taken the diamond ring and wedding band to the jeweler to be sized. After he gave me the ax, he picked up the rings at the jeweler's and kept them!

I want my rings back. Aren't they legally mine? Please advise me. — DUMPED the rings and the man, and accept the fact that you've lost both. I think you're lucky to be rid of him. He appears to be unreliable, mercurial, and neither ready nor willing to honor a commitment.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a 3-year-old boy. He is going through a stage now where he runs around the house without underpants. My husband and I are comfortable with this, as we have taught our son to be proud of his body and to feel good about himself. My in-laws, however, seem to make an issue of this whenever they visit. The last time they were here, they said to our son: "We're not speaking to you until you put on underpants.'

I became upset, and told them what I thought about their comment. Was I wrong? What are others' thoughts concerning this? - STILL FUMING

DEAR FUMING: Simmer down. have to consult a local lawyer for I'm all for teaching children to feel legal advice. My advice: Forget good about their bodies, but I'm included.

also for teaching them appropriate modesty. Your in-laws should not have given the boy such a harsh ultimatum, but I agree with their objections to his running around the house without underpants when guests are on the premises.

DEAR ABBY: Please explain the difference between "making love" and "having sex." A lot of people confuse these two very different acts. Will you please define each one? - JUST PLAIN BILL

DEAR BILL: In "having sex," the name of the game is sexual gratification. It's a selfish, physical exercise in which the partner can be a faceless object. (Anyone will do.)

In "making love," one is motivated by a desire to give pleasure, express deep affection and communicate one's feelings of caring. It's the ultimate in sharing. In "making love," the partner must be a very special person. (No one else will do.)

Love is a metropolis. Sex is a whistle-stop.

That issue arose when it was revealed that U.S. officials had been warned before the Pan Am attack that a bombing was imminent, but did not publicly reveal the threat. Officials said later that announcing the threats could cripple the airline industry because warnings virtually are received daily.

Respondents were split evenly on the question. Asked if the government should announce all terrorist threats it receives against airlines, even if it gets them daily and cannot tell if they are legitimate, 45 percent said yes, 45 percent said no. The rest weren't sure.

However, 57 percent said the airlines should be required to announce all terrorist threats they receive. Thirty-eight percent opposed such a requirement; the rest

"I've always respected junior college basketball in Texas," said Oklahoma assistant coach Jim Kerwin, a former juco coach at Seminole Junior College. "I feel that without a doubt this year the junior college basketball in Texas is by far the best in the country."

Odessa's program got a lift both from Helms, in his third year with the Wranglers, and NJCAA player of the year Larry Johnson, who's headed to UNLV next season.

WJCAC coaches say the NCAA's Proposition 48, which set stricter eligibility requirements on athletes entering four-year schools, has given juco programs a boost. Another boost is likely to come from the proposed Proposition 42, which would deny athletic scholarships to players who don't meet the standards.

OU vaults into first

By The Associated Press Oklahoma earned its firstever No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press college basketball poll today, capping a week that saw the top three teams all lose one game.

The Sooners, 17-2, jumped from fourth to the top spot after victories last week over Colordao and Nevada-Las Vegas and became the third team to be ranked No. 1 this season.

They received 32 of the 66 first-place votes cast by the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters and finished with 1,272 points to edge Illinois in the balloting.

"We're honored and delighted to be ranked first in the poll,' Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs said Sunday night. "I think every team wants to do two things, one, win a national ehampionship and second be ranked first in the AP poll. This is certainly a milestone for our program and our hard work and persistence have finally paid

Illinois, which became No. 1 for the first time in 37 years, held the top spot for just one week as the Fighting Illini lost to Minnesota 69-62 before rebounding for a victory over

When Illinois lost on Thursday night, it appeared Georgetown would move up one place to the top spot, but the Hoyas were upset by Louisiana State 82-80 on Saturday.

These guys have made a tradition in Coahoma

By STEVE BELVIN Sports Editor

COAHOMA — In one way or another, most communitives have some type of sports tradition.

In Coahoma, the most visible one is high school girls' basketball, at which the Bulldogettes make the state playoffs most every year and pack a gymnasium full of ectators

Cunningham completed nine of 14 passes for 83 yards and picked up 49 yards on two rushes to help the NFC to an easy 34-3 victory over the AFC All-Stars.

Ditka said he figured his main job in coaching the NFC All-Stars, who collected $10,000 each to the losers' $5,000 cut, was not to mess

Bernard King leads Bullets over Cavs

By The Associated Press Once again, Bernard King was unstoppable and the Cleveland Cavaliers were the kind of team that blows 20-point leads.

King scored 38 points, his biggest game since suffering a serious knee injury almost four years ago, as the Washington Bullets rallied for a 122-117 win Sunday over Cleveland, once an NBA doormat but now the league's winningest team.

King, a former scoring champion for New York who missed two full seasons after injuring his knee, joined the Bullets as a free agent at the start of last season.

On Sunday, he scored 10 points in overtime, eight of them from the foul line, including two free throws with 2:14 left to give the Bullets a three-point lead 'In the clutch I like to see the ball, and fortunately today we were able to put the ball in the hole when we needed to," King said.

The Cavaliers, now 31-9, lost despite a career-high 33 points from Mark Price.

Cleveland center Brad Daugherty missed the game with a suspension for his fight with Detroit's Bill Laimbeer on Friday night. Starting forward Larry Nance sprained an ankle in the first half, and did not return.

Lakers 118, Mavericks 93 The Lakers won outside Los Angeles for the first time since Dec. 13, handing Dallas its worst home loss ever.

A.C. Green scored 25 points and Magic Johnson added 20 for the Lakers, who were never threatened after outscoring the Mavericks 37-25 in the second quarter. Los Angeles shot 71 percent from the field in the period to take a 67-43 halftime lead, and stretched the margin to 30 in the second half.

The Lakers, who beat the Los Angeles Clippers on Jan. 15, hadn't won another road game since Dec. 13 at Cleveland.

Dallas' previous worst loss at home was a 126-102 defeat by the Lakers in November 1980, its first NBA season

The Mavericks, who were led by Mark Aguirre with 16 points, cut the deficit to 15 in the fourth period before the Lakers pulled away

Celtics 121, Heat 103 Boston handed Miami its 20th loss in 21 road games as Kevin McHale led six Celtics in double figures with 21 points.

Robert Parish had 10 of his 14 points and six rebounds in the first quarter as Boston took to a 31-17 lead, then widened the advantage to 67-43 at halftime.

Parish sat down with four fouls 31/2 minutes into the second half, but wasn't needed as the Celtics reached the three-quarter mark ahead 93-70.

The Heat was led by Rony Seikaly with 22 points and Kevin Edwards with 21.

Pistons 122, Kings 97 Detroit routed Sacramento thanks to a 20-0 second-quarter spree that gave the Pistons a 29-point lead.

Vinnie Johnson scored nine of his 23 points during the spurt, which gave Detroit a 55-26 lead with 4:07 left in the first half. Six different Pistons scored during the streak while Sacramento went scoreless for a span of 6:33.

Dennis Rodman came off the bench to lead Detroit with a seasonhigh 24 points, including 10 straight for his club in the fourth quarter; Rodman also had 16 rebounds.

OC's star shining bright

By WENDY E. LANE AP Sports Writer

ODESSA (AP) — He was the only junior college player invited to the Olympic trials, picked as last year's top college freshman and leads the nation's No. 1 juco team with an average 32 points a game.

So you'd think Odessa College coach Dennis Helms wouldn't have to bench his sophomore star, Larry Johnson, for passing off too often. But it's happened before.

'He's sometime too unselfish," said Helms, "and we have to get after him to do something more in some situations.' Seems like Johnson, 6-foot-7 and 235 pounds, could hardly do more than what he's done already: score more than 40 points in four games this season, lead the nation's luco players in scoring, be named 1988's NJCAA player of the year and shine in the U.S. Olympic trials despite being one of the youngest to

"He may be the best player we've ever recruited," said Nevada-Las Vegas coach Jerry Tarkanian, who signed Johnson in November. "For what it takes to have a great team, I think he's the best you can find anywhere."

With so much talent, is the phenomenal Johnson a Ferrari among Toyotas while in the junior college ranks? Not in his eyes. "I thought coming to a junior college meant the talent wouldn't be that great," he said. "But that wasn't the case. You've got to go out every night and play. Every time you get on the floor, you're against a guy that can play. That really surprised me.'

As a standout at Dallas' Skyline High School, he hadn't intended to go the juco route at all.

Johnson wanted to stay close to home and signed with Southern Methodist. But the school asked him to retake the Scholastic Aptitude Test, although his score qualified him for enrollment, because his score had improved so dramatically from an early administering of the test.

Johnson declined rather than risk getting a lower score and becoming a Proposition 48 casualty "I didn't want to sit out, so I starting looking at junior colleges," anyone on the floor. He knows said Johnson, who chose Odessa over Navarro College and McLennan Community College because several Dallas friends were there. "I think it turned out for the better because I've been working on my academics.'

He also says playing under Helms has expanded his shooting range and given him maturity.

Helms says Johnson's presence has drawn a flood of attention to a school traditionally known for its vomen's program. 'When someone said Odessa College, it meant women's basket-ball," said the Wranglers' thirdyear coach whose only previous prodigy was Alvin Robertson at Crowder College. "Larry has helped change that." Johnson's dominance, says Helms, stems from superb physical traits and an attitude that allows him to capitalize on those "He's probably got the greatest hands (of anyone) 5-foot-10 to 7-foot-6," he said. "Those hands are phenomenal.

"He has more instinct than what's going on in every situation out there."

His only weakness may be that Johnson, the Wranglers' team captain, is too nice a guy, too willing to give credit to others and too reluctant to criticize his teammates.

Odessa's coaching staff recently decided they would name a cocaptain, in addition to Johnson, to provide stronger leadership for the Wranglers, 23-0 overall and 8-0 in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

In his bid to be likable and humble, Johnson "just does not feel comfortable in speaking out to others when they need to get in gear," says Helms.

Johnson has been in high gear this season, shooting about 62 percent from the floor and 84 from the line. He shattered a school scoring record with 51 point College and averages 18 rebounds a

His humility, Johnson says, comes from his high school coach. J.D. Mayo, who "taught me right from wrong

Lendl routs Mecir

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) - For Ivan Lendl, it's on to Wimbledon.

Twelve months of hard work paid off for Lendl on Sunday when he finally captured one of the two Grand Slam tennis titles to elude him. Lendl routed fellow Czech Miloslav Mecir 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 to win the Australian Open title, making good a pledge he had made a year before.

Lendl was devastated by his loss to Australian Pat Cash in the semifinals of the Australian Open last year and vowed to make amends, said his coach, Australian Tony Roche

"He really expected to win last year and was devastated," Roche said. "This time Ivan was in peak physical shape and was a far more relaxed person. "He deserved the title because he worked so hard in his build-up and served so well for the whole fortnight." Lendl gave former Wimbledon doubles champion Roche, his coach for the past five years, much of the credit for his victory 'Tony knows when I'm tired and he knows when to push me a little more," he said. "It's great to work with someone who has me feeling fit and good." Lendl now has won the U.S. Open three times, the French Open three times and the Australian Open Showers and some thunderstorms extended along a cold front from southeast Texas to northern Louisiana, middle Tennessee and West Virginia.

Rain fell in southern New England, while freezing rain and snow fell in parts of northern New England. Drizzle and fog extended across much of the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley.

A high-pressure system with clear skies, stinging cold and wind heading southeast from Alaska's interior, and another high-pressure system moving toward Alaska from Siberia threatened to prolong the cold snap.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1989

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Norman Mailer, comedienne Carol Channing, Dodgers great Jackie Robinson, tenor Mario Lanza, actress Suzanne Pleshette.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are in top form today, turning in an almost-perfect performance. Do not get overly confident, however. Domestic matters require a firm but diplomatic touch. Stand up for your rights.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Impulsive buying can strain both your budget and your relationship with partner. Changes are inevitable and will prove to be a step forward. A platonic friendship deepens into love.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Business affairs may not go according to plan. Your ability to shift gears successfully impresses an influential person. A surprise is part of the picture. Someone repays a favor in a meaningful way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Secret agreements are best avoided now. You will liberate yourself from a negative person or situation. Contact with overseas clients brings welcome financial news. Romance cools. Keep your chin up. Adventure beckons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New sales techniques meet with a degree of success. Turn to relatives before friends if an emergency arises. A short business trip could prove lucrative. You enjoy meeting new faces.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Straight answers from an authority figure help you make an important decision. You are ready to move ahead. Choose your words carefully when addressing delicate matters. Romance blossoms. Nurture it with tenderness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Acting footloose and fancy free could lead to domestic problems. Grow up! A youngster looks up to you as a role model. Romance may be rocky but fun. Avoid jeopardizing your relationship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Influential person asks a huge favor. Expect to be rewarded in tangible ways. Be alert to changes. You need to be more flexible with work associates and family members. Romance is sweet.

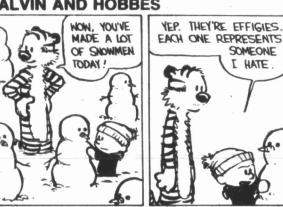

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An older person will try your patience. Bite your tongue. Cooperation and more TLC will prevent bruised feelings. Continue to keep a close eye on spending. New investment opportunities will present themselves.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may want to run away from everything today. Work is excellent therapy. Many of your wishes will come true when you develop your potential. Learn new technology to boost your earning power.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A much more relaxed atmosphere helps you accomplish a lot at work or home. Get better organized, too, and you will become more productive. A social engagement adds cheer this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You feel more secure now that you are on better financial footing. An important change is just ahead. Your timing could not be better! Keep up with your professional reading.

National Geographic launches student geography contest

WASHINGTON (AP) -Youngsters in some 25,000 schools across the nation are boning up on the "where" of the world, in hopes of winning the first National Geography Bee, a contest emulating the popular annual spelling bee.

Recent studies have shown that young Americans lack geographic knowledge, and the National Geographic Society chose a contest as one means of battling that

"We hope that the National Here are some examples of ques-

Texas A&M heading to the top of its class

COLLEGE STATION (AP) -Texas A&M University, once known as just a training ground for farmers and soldiers, has worked its way into the elite of the nation's top universities.

As one of Texas' two public higher education heavyweights, A&M has joined the University of Texas at Austin in punching out several top 10 national rankings.

For the first time, the school's research spending pushed A&M into the National Science Foundation's preliminary top 10 list of research universities this fall.

The eighth-place Aggies, who spent almost $220 million on 2,100 funded research projects last year, also are the university research champs of the South and Southwest.

The school's other top 10 national rankings are in enrollment and endowment, which tops $1 billion.

A&M now ranks 11th nationally in the number of merit scholars on campus, but Aggie officials predict 113 new merit scholars this year will boost that ranking.

That's not bad, considering A&M's humble start in 1876 when 48 male students, five professors and an Aggie president showed up for the debut of the state's first public university. With women now accounting for more than 40 percent of the student body, A&M this fall is the nation's seventh-largest college with 39,176 students, up from 12,733 in 1968. "Texas A&M is among the fastest, if not the fastest-growing university in the nation," said U.S. Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, past president of Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

'They have made tremendous strides and are doing a great job for the state of Texas and the nation," he said.

The number of endowed academic positions at A&M rose to 198 this fall, up from only 28 six years ago, and the average A&M freshman's Scholastic Aptitude Test score is almost 140 points above the national average. Several cooperative projects between the Aggies, other schools and government agencies have resulted in big research projects. Among them:

 The National Science Foundation picked A&M and UT scientists in August to receive as much as $28 million in federal support for a deep ocean drilling program over the next five years. The program, to be based at A&M, will be the Southwest's first federally funded engineering research center.

• The Aggies have bagged the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service National Training Center, set to open next year. USDA faculty will train as many as 3,000 inspectors, food technologists and veterinarians each year.

 The NSF has designated A&M to run a $300 million, 10-year global Ocean Drilling Program. The school also operates one of the nation's largest oceangraphic research fleets. Twelve research vessels range from a two-person submarine to a 470-foot deep ocean drilling ship.

• In August, the Department of Transportation chose A&M, UT-Austin and Texas Southern University to run a $10 million, five-year transportation institute based at A&M to concentrate on future transportation issues.

 As the state's sea- and landgrant university, A&M works with several state agencies, including two for agriculture and two for engineering, plus those for forestry, transportation and a veterinary medical diagnostic laboratory.

A&M's own research projects range from the Institute of Nautical Archaeology's search for one of Columbus' lost ships to development of a new onion, credited with helping prop up South Texas' beleaguered agriculture industry.

The Aggies are looking at bringing into the A&M system schools from the University System of South Texas in Laredo, Corpus Christi and Kingsville.

Millions to spend just for fun

CHICAGO (AP) - It's tough work deciding how to spend $2.75 million on fun, but students at Roosevelt University think they're up to the task.

"They should have parties at nice hotels and get a DJ who knows how to play really good music," said Beatrice Franklin, a junior.

Marvin Moss, a Hollywood agent who died in 1986, willed the money to his alma mater on condition that the money be spent on fun because "as a city-type school, I never felt students socialized as much as they might have."

"We need better food," Daryl McLaurine, a junior, said Wednesday. "I like food."

The administration has some different ideas. President Theodore Gross said the school will use the money to build a gymnasium and renovate student lounges.

About $400,000 will be set aside to create a fund for student activities, Gross said.

"They should use it to hold cheap concerts with good groups. Nothing big — a reunion of (rock group) Led Zeppelin or something like that," said Jeff Rosenberg, a senior.

Book selection is lengthy process

By JEAN WARREN

Herald correspondent A number of Big Spring teachers and administrators are involved in selecting new textbooks to be used in the local schools. Serving as chairman in the selection of literature books for grades 7 and 8 is Kathy McFarland, while Ed Loveless heads the group studying literature texts for high school. Other chairmen include Sheila Abusaab, Spanish; Denise Gandy, theatre arts and debate; Kristy Jaske, choral music; Terry Robertson, calculus and fundamentals of math; Neil Potts, art; Joe Reed, environmental science; Virginia Miller, sociology and world geography; Ralph Matteson, accounting; and Loren Spencer, cosmetology.

Helen Gladden heads the group studying art, vocal music, and physical education in the grades. Janice Rosson is in charge of selecting materials for English as a Second Language.

Also serving on the textbook committee are W.A. McQueary, superintendent; Murray L. Murphy, assistant superintendent; and Kent Bowerman, BSHS principal.

Recommendations of textbook committee members are due in the central office Feb. 3; a public hearing is scheduled Feb. 22 to provide any interested citizen an opportunity to meet with the members of the textbook committee

The state textbook selection process itself is an interesting one. The state textbook committee is composed of one professional public school employee from each congressional district in Texas. In 1983 Lynn Hise, superintendent of schools in Big Spring, was appointed for District 17.

Because books in various subject areas were to be selected, Mr. Hise appointed subcommittees of BSISD personnel to advise him on selections. The law mandates that a maximum of five books or series of books can be chosen by the state textbook committee. Each school district then chooses from among the five for local use.

The process of elimination of texts submitted by various publishers is time-consuming. Janice Rosson, principal of College Heights, was an advisor to Mr. Hise in language arts. She studied texts from 17 publishers, meeting with their representatives to consider the rationale for and the organization of text contents.

After careful study of each text, committee members rated them according to state-mandated and locally-developed criteria. They compiled the rating results and agreed on a rank ordering of the books submitted for each subject area. Mr. Hise met with the rest of the state textbook committee in Austin and voted the subcommittees' recommendations.
