Site preparation for the construction of the Railroad Plaza at 100 Main St. is proceeding slightly p.m. at the construction site. behind schedule, with the pouring of concrete scheduled to begin late next week, according to project officials.

A public groundbreaking for the plaza will be held Feb. 9 from 5-6

A water main below Main Street will have to be relocated. And sidewalks extending from the corner of Main and First streets to the former Thomas office supply building on the east side of Main, and to the alley bordering Big Spring Furniture on the west side of Main will be removed and repayed.

During the construction of the plaza, Quinones expects that traffic will need to be closed off from the alley bordering Big Spring Furniture, 110 Main, to First Street three to four times for about three days each time.

Aside from work on the plaza, construction will include the installation of two brick crosswalks extending across Main Street to the sidewalk east of the project, as well as planters for trees along the sidewalks bordering the project.

"We plan to redo the sidewalks to make them consistent with the (improvements) occurring on the west side of the street," said Quinones.

The work on the sidewalks will pose a "temporary inconvenience for the merchants," she said, adding that the work would likely be done in sections to limit the disturbance.

Construction cost of the project, which excludes landscaping and furnishings such as park benches, is $175,237. The construction will be financed using private dona-RAILROAD page 3-A

Snow hits West, Midwest chills; locals prepared

A blast of cold air out of Alaska brought snowstorms and plunging temperatures to the West and Midwest, triggering hundreds of traffic accidents and closing schools, and threatened to end the East's record warm spell today.

"Today was it. It will get seasonal," National Weather Service meteorologist Bill Scura said at Atlantic City Airport in Pomona, N.J., where a balmy reading of 69 degrees was one of 51 high-temperature records broken or tied in the East and South Wednesday.

At least two people died in weather-related traffic accidents in Idaho and Oregon Wednesday. Authorities in Coleraine, Minn., blamed minus 20-degree temperatures for the hypothermia death of a 31-year-old woman whose frozen body was found on a sidewalk.

With temperatures also expected to plummet in West Texas, Big Spring Salvation Army Commander Lt. Tex Ellis said today the cold weather "will probably bring a lot of transients" to the shelter.

"You can bring them on, though, because we're ready for anything, friend," said Ellis, who noted the shelter was prepared for an influx of lodgers.

He added that last week the Salvation Army acquired a "self contained" mobile emergency especially for people who regularly sleep outdoors.

'They usually start coming in when they first hear about (the blankets and coats)," she said this morning.

Snow continued falling today from the Pacific Northwest on the Northern Rockies, Northern Plains, and upper Mississippi Valley, and was expected to spread to the Great Lakes. Freezing drizzle slickened roads from Missouri to Indiana.

The foul weather was accompanied by equally foul temperatures in many places. In the Dakotas and Montana, where Gov. Stan Stephens declared a state of emergency, winds up to 40 mph produced wind chills as low as minus 90 degrees Wednesday.

The storms caused traffic accidents in Washington state, Oregon, California and Utah, and knocked out power to thousands of people in Washington, Montana

Snow closed schools in Washington, Oregon and Idaho on Wednesday, and dangerously low temperatures shut them in Montana today and in North Dakota through Friday.

"Oh cool, this is rad!" said fifth-grader Michael Garbett of Corvallis, Ore., where schools closed for the first time since December 1987.

Local S&L closures 'highly unlikely'

By MICHAEL DUFFY Staff Writer

It is "highly unlikely" that two Big Spring savings and loan institutions - acquired in late December as part of a merger involving a Dallas bank — will be closed, officials said.

Senate Armed Services Committee chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said Wednesday he expected the panel to vote today to recommend that the Senate confirm Tower's nomination. Senator blasts regent nominees

AUSTIN (AP) — It is not right to set the University of Texas apart with an all-white, male board of regents, says a black senator who claims enough votes in the Senate to reject three recent regent appointees.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, said he had 14 votes to block nominees Robert Cruikshank of Houston, Tom Loeffler of Mason and Chester Upham Jr. of Mineral Wells.

Senate confirmation requires two-thirds approval of those senators present, or 21 votes, if all 31 members answer the roll call. "The issue is how can the University of Texas stand alone in this state as a white, male bastion? It has no right to be that,' Washington said Wednesday.

Air Force officials expect lenthy tanker crash probe

ABILENE (AP) - With limited to refuel F-16 fighter jets being clues, the investigation into the cause of a fiery explosion of an Air Force tanker that killed 19 people could take weeks, perhaps months, military officials said.

Unlike airliners, the $20 million KC-135A Stratotanker aircraft that crashed early Tuesday afternoon on takeoff from Dyess Air Force Base wasn't equipped with a flight data recorder or a cockpit voice recorder. The Michigan-based tanker was loaded with 30,000 gallons of fuel for a training flight to Hawaii when it crashed and burned in a mesquite pasture seconds after takeoff.

The KC-135A was from the 410th Bombardment Wing, stationed at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base near Marquette, Mich. It had flown Monday to Dyess, and was scheduled to fly Tuesday to Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii and then on to Guam, Air Force officials said.

Hightower wants hold on prison bonding bill

AUSTIN (AP) - The chairman of the House Corrections Commit-tee says he wants prison bonding legislation to remain in subcommittee until lawmakers and the governor's office agree to address the whole criminal justice issue "as one problem."

"A lack of coordination and planning exists within the criminal justice arena," said Rep. Allen Hightower, a Huntsville Democrat and sponsor of the legislation, on Wednesday.

Hightower said that in that arena, "The left hand builds to relieve overcrowding and the right hand enhances punishment and creates new courts to send more people for longer periods of time, thus overcrowding and exacerbating, not relieving, the system at hand, at the same time having little or no effect on crime.

That doesn't mean the committee won't support the proposed constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of general obligation bonds for corrections facilities,

Hightower said. But he said if so, it should be part of an overall solution. He predicted an agreement could be reached among lawmakers involved and the governor's office within two to three weeks

In other developments Wednesday, a Dallas-based anti-crime group said the "only solution" to problems in the Texas criminal justice system is increasing prison capacity by 40,000 beds at a cost of $1.2 billion.

"If we do anything less than 40,000 beds over the next several years, then we will be here again in two years, same problem, in four years with the same problem, and over and over," said Richard Collins, chairman of Associated Texans Against Crime.

Rep. Sam Johnson, R-Plano, also urged the expansion and added that he was considering filing legislation to allow the death penalty to be imposed on criminals who commit multiple felonies.

Gov. Bill Clements has called for nearly 11,000 new prison beds, with expansion to be financed with $343 million in bonds.

Bush budget likely won't reflect campaign promises

WASHINGTON (AP) - Several major campaign promises by President Bush are likely to be missing or significantly scaled back in the budget proposal he will make to Congress next week, administration officials say.

Campaign pledges for a major expansion of Medicaid and increased funding for several education programs are among those likely to fall victim to concern about the federal deficit, said the officials. who spoke Tuesday on condition of anonymity.

Bush does plan to propose several tax breaks, the officials said, but the scope of a proposed capital-gains rate cut remains

Bush has long advocated a reduction in the capital gains tax - the tax on profits from the sale of homes, stocks and other assets to a maximum of 15 percent. But senior aides said Treasury officials are having a hard time coming up with a formula, and the final proposal could call for lower rates for one category than for another.

Bush campaign promises on education including a $500 million National Merit scholarship program, an expansion of the Head Start program and a $50 million increase in school experimentation may be pruned back considerably, the officials said.

They also said Bush's campaign proposal to expand Medicaid budget, to be unveiled Feb. 9 when Housing and Urban Development coverage to more lower-income Americans and to allow low-paid workers to purchase it is being given a low priority in budget preparation talks.

Budget constraints make fulfillment of such promises unlikely, the officials said.

'The two have to be reconciled," said a senior White House official who insisted upon anonymity.

Bush has promised to propose a budget that does not contain a tax increase while meeting the Gramm-Rudman law requirement for reducing the deficit to $100 billion or less

The officials said that Bush's he addresses a joint session of Congress, will include these proposals:

-A child-care tax credit of up to $1,000 per child for low-income families, generally those earning less than $10,000 a year.

-New tax incentives for oil and gas exploration, likely coupled with a call for removal of all remaining price controls on natural gas, now affecting about 40 percent of production.

-A proposal for tax-free "enterprise zones" to be established in some inner city areas to promote commercial growth, a program championed by Bush's nominee for secretary, Jack Kemp.

Administration officials are still wrestling with terms of a package to help bail out troubled savings and loans, and it appeared likely that some variation on a proposal for an increased fee for deposit insurance would be part of the new Bush budget plan.

Bush himself has said that a proposal for a reduced capital-gains tax rate will be part of his Feb. 9 rewrite of the $1.15 trillion budget President Reagan submitted last month for fiscal 1990.

However, sources say there is still disagreement over exactly what form the tax cut should take.

Report: Pan Am bomb in CIA man's suitcase

LONDON (AP) - The bomb that blew up Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland was planted by Palestinian terrorists in the luggage of a CIA agent, a radio station said today.

David Johnson, head of the news department at Radio Forth, a commercial station in Edinburgh, reported the CIA officer was returning from Beirut with five colleagues after a mission to negotiate release of the nine American hostages in Lebanon.

In Lockerbie, Scotland, where the investigation into the Dec. 21 disaster is headquartered, chief inspector Gordon Ferrie said investigators had no comment on the report.

The report said its information came from Scottish police sources

It said investigators believe a three-pound charge of Semtex explosive and a timing device were slipped into the agent's luggage by Palestinian terrorists who infiltrated the secret Beirut

The report quoted sources as saying the bomb was placed in luggage that also carried "quite sensitive documents." Radio Forth speculated the perpetrators belonged to Ahmed Jibril's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command.

Last month, the Hamburg newspaper Bild reported that Jibril's organization was involved in the planning of the bombing.

Aguilar trial date set in April

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The trial for a Big Spring man charged with the deaths of two Mexican nationals has been set for the first week in April, District Attorney Rick Hamby said today.

Antonio Aguilar, 23, was arrested in October 1987 in connection with the deaths of Miguel Villareal Calixto and Noberto Gurrola Hernandez. Both men died of gunshot wounds to the head, according to an autopsy report. Their bodies were found in the debris of a burned farmhouse near Luther Oct. 10, Aguilar has remained in jail on $125,000 bond for each of murder charges since his arrest.

Aguilar's case prompted renewed attention in July after he escaped from a work detail. Aguilar and two other prisoners were taking out trash under the supervision of a sheriff's deputy on a routine work detail when Aguilar ran away, officials said.

He eluded law enforcement officials for nine days before being recaptured at a mobile home about three miles northeast of Big Spring. The owner of the mobile home was also taken into custody and was charged with aiding a fugitive.

The mobile home was one of two locations in state and three out of state that law enforcement officials had under surveillance, Sheriff A.N. Standard said at the suspension of the officer escorting Aguilar and the two other men, and a change in the sheriff's department regarding trusty inmates.

Aguilar's escape led to the 30-day

When Aguilar goes to trial in April he will also face a charge of felony escape. Bond for that charge is set at $15,000.

Aguilar is one of four defendants charged with the death of the two men. Also charged are Enrique Sabredo, 18 and Orlando Aguirre, 19, both of Knott. The two men are free on $50,000 bond.

The fourth defendant, Jeannie Fonseca, pleaded guilty to the murder of Noe Perez in an unrelated case and was given a life sentence last July; charges against her in the Calixto and Hernandez deaths were dropped.

A sheriff's deputy was dispatched to Scenic Mountain Medical Center this morning in reference to an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound. Robert Walker, 25, Snyder

Walker took himself to the hospital after a gun he was cleaning accidentally discharged, injuring his left leg according to a sheriff's report.

The downtown steering committee has funds totaling $181,000 -$150,000 of which came from private donations. The committee has also received a pledge of $50,000 from Fina Oil and Chemical Company that will be devoted to the project. Union Pacific has donated a caboose to the plaza.

The plan for the plaza was introduced to the community in April 1987. Because of the need to coordinate public and private actions, progress on the project was slow, Quinones said.

Johnston Contractors was awarded the construction contract in November 1988; and following a public hearing, the Big Spring City Council approved an ordinance vacating a public easement needed for the project Jan. 10.

The city ordinance allows the plaza to extend 64 feet into Main Street near First Street. Two-way traffic will continue on Main Street to the east of the plaza.

The Railroad Plaza is the initial step in a three-prong renovation plan, said Quinones. Following the construction of the plaza, the Downtown Steering Committee plans to initiate renovation of the Hotel Settles. and then implement a tax incentive plan to encourage owners of downtown businesses to restore their buildings.

Committee representatives have said the plaza will help improve the appearance of the downtown area, increase commerce, and attract new businesses

Motivation needed

The Chinese, capitalist fledglings though they may be, could teach Western industry something about motivation.

Recently, an 800-employee Xian, China, department store named its "40 worst shop assistants". . . The clerks bear the added humiliation of having a plaque, denoting the infamy and the offensive clerk's photo, hung at their sales counters.

Could such pressure-by-disgrace work in the United States? The courts would probably see it as a civil rights violation and reward the dishonored enough to buy their own department store.

On the other hand, is a 40-worst list needed? In retail and just about every other enterprise, the answer is yes. San Antonio Express-News

We don't do that here

State Rep. Al Edwards wants the state to cut off drug dealers' fingers, yet in recent weeks he wrote a letter seeking light treatment for a convicted cocaine pusher who is an acquaintance of his. This shows two things: 1) Edwards either has not read the U.S. Constitution (or, if he had read it, does not understand it) and 2) he is a hypocrite.

Edwards points out that certain Middle Eastern countries engage in similar punishments and worse. That doesn't mean the United States ought to stoop to it. The Houston Post bows to no one in its desire for harsh sentences for drug pushers, but we would be against such barbarism even if our Constitution did not prohibit cruel and unusual punishment. If systematic mutilation would not be viewed by our courts as cruel and unusual it is hard to envision what would.

The Legislature has plenty of work to do in helping curtail the drug trade, not the least of which is working out an economical and effective way of expanding our bulging prison system. He should divert his energies in some direction that might actually help.

The Houston Post

Reconsideration needed?

In his final presidential meeting with newspersons, Ronald Reagan, that old verbal bomb thrower, lobbed one into the new administration's Latin American stewpot. He suggested that Washington should reconsider its commitment to give up the Panama Canal in 10 years if Gen. Manuel Noriega stays in power.

The United States should, in almost all cases, carefully abide by its treaty commitments. However, the 1978 Panama Canal treaties were approved by a Senate thinking that the waterway would revert to a democratic government with decent relations with the United States.

That understanding proved wrong. Reagan's own 18-month campaign to try to force Noriega from power by imposing economic sanctions has failed. It has collapsed the Panamanian economy and caused pain to common people, but the general, who rules by the gun, is unmoved.

Noriega has clung to power against the will of most Panamanians by surrounding himself with military thugs. He buys their loyalty by sharing graft and drug money. Like the general, they are eagerly waiting to gain access to canal revenues.

By floating the idea that they might not get that lolly, Reagan has given Noriega's fellow thieves incentive to depose him and make their peace with Washington. It wouldn't be a pretty outcome, but one can imagine many worse.

El Paso Herald-Post

Good first performance

Ronald Reagan's press conferences were frequently looked at as performances, so George Bush's press conference Friday, his first as president, is subject to Reagan appeared at the infrequent press conferences well-briefed and with prepared answers to anticipated questions. He liked anecdotes. He sometimes strayed from the facts. He was always engaging.

Bush responded to the questions with apparent ease. He made an effort to respond directly to the issue. He was cautious, though, reflecting the bipartisan tone of his inaugural speech and not straying from previously stated policies. He was relaxed and joking.

The press jumped from issue to issue, from drugs to Iran to minimum wage to congressional salaries and back to drugs. But then, it was ever thus.

All new presidents promise frequent press conferences. Bush carried off his first well. May he have more of them.

Why Mom and Pop need help

Those of you who have been wondering if the Bush administration has a sense of humor should be delighted to find out that it does. Recently, Secretary of the Treasury Nicholas Brady suggested that savings and loan depositors be taxed with a levy of 25 or 30 cents per hundred dollars. When Brady sent up the trial balloon, everyone in America laughed all the way to the bank.

How on earth did the S&Ls get into such a mess? Here is a typical case of what happened:

Mom and Pop Parker ran a delicatessen in Hillside Park. When business got slow, the Parkers decided to sell all of their cold cuts and potato salad and open an S&L instead. It was called The First Bonnie and Clyde Savings & Loan.

Pop Parker had no sooner openboat-load of sauerkraut.

'Wait, Walter. I'm no longer in the delicatessen business. I'm in savings and loans."

'Why didn't you say so? I'll have a $10,000 note, $100,000 for a mortgage and line of credit from here to Oklahoma."

To the editor:

During the last three weeks of December, a Ragtime Doubles Tournament was held at the Big Spring Bowl-A-Rama for the Patrick Carnahan family, with all proceeds going to the Carnahan family. Carrie has leukemia and had for several years now. She is waiting for a donor for a bone marrow transplant at this time. She is a very sweet and loved young lady. The expenses have been tremendous, but the family has pulled together and they have given up the basic necessities for their love to Carrie and her future good health.

The Tournament grossed $710.00, with 65 doubles entries at $10,plus $70 in donations. The prize fund was donated by Betty Williams, the owner of Riley Drilling and Jane's Flowers of Big Spring. Mrs. Williams asked if she could donate the entire amount, which was $175. I told her yes, that she was a very gracious lady for doing this for such a wonderful cause.

Jane's Flowers donated $25. which gave us a total of $910. We were to give the Carnahan Family $710 and then the prize fund was to be split up into prizes.

The first place winners were: Jerrall Burgess & Jackie LeCroy with a score of 1,282. The second place winners were J.M. and Janie Ringener with a combination of scores of 1,274. And the third place winners were Leroy Headrick and Joyce Davis with a score of 1,271.

A very heart-warming part of this is that all six winners expressed their desire to return the entire prize fund as more donation to the Carnahan family, to make the grand total $910. The Carnahans are a very special family to the citizens of the Coahoma and Sand Springs communities, and we as citizens of Coahoma and Sand Springs would like to say "thank you" to the people who bowled in the tournament and who donated money, and to the winners that donated the money back. They appreciate you and we appreciate you. Most of all we thank and appreciate Betty Williams of Riley Drilling Company and to Jane's Flowers, owned by Coahoma residents for their most heart-filled love to donate this money to such a special family. Thank you and God bless each and every one of you.

Staff Writer

I was reading a recent issue of Reader's Digest, making sarcastic comments about great articles such as "Sex Secrets Wives Keep" and "The Unforgettable Glenn Cunningham," when I spotted a diamond glittering among the literary coals.

It was a condensed version of a July 1988 Forbes Magazine article titled "How to Argue With Your Boss." Since I am always in the market for novel ways to disagree with my editor, I thought I'd give the story a try.

The article, written by Richard Greene, notes several examples of the right and wrong way to argue with your boss. Foremost on the wrong way list is what Greene says is the cardinal rule of dealing with your boss: Never start a fight you can't win. I understood that to mean that I should never walk into my boss' office and say, "Hey, dude, I believe I deserve double the salary I'm getting." He may or may not agree with me (probably not) but it's a sure-fire bet that the only way my salary will ever be doubled is if I add the Social Security benefits I'll begin receiving around age 65.

So, I made a mental check-mark on "Never start a fight . . . I am among the countless numbers of people who have had a fight with my boss at one time or another. In fact, Greene advises that it's unhealthy to avoid a disagreement with higher-ups. The consequences of such action is the loss of sleep and self-image on the employees part and lack of information to do his job better on the employer's part. So, it's cool to argue with your boss (wait until Robert reads this). That is, it's cool as long as you follow these simple rules: Watch your timing wise course of action to determine your boss' mood before initiating a disagreement. If, for example, you start demanding a raise the moment Mr. Big returns from divorce court, you're liable to have your head handed to you - along with a pink slip.

 Don't go in angry — If you're mad, Greene counsels, it will serve only to make your boss mad, also. First, take a few deep breaths, think pleasant thoughts and then go Right example: "Hi, boss, can I talk with you?" Wrong example: "Listen here, you pencil-necked

• Clarify the issues — "The employee must get his point across clearly and succinctly, so the boss understands it," a source tells Greene, who adds it's important to focus the issues to avoid needless complications

In other words, if you go to the boss and say, "Sir, we need to talk about this and this and this," your chances for success are much better.

If, on the other hand, you tell "Er, uh, this is really important, but, uh, maybe we ought to talk about, well, you know . . ., your boss will probably order you to undergo drug testing. Propose solutions — Greene warns that people who present problems to their supervisors without proposing solutions "may soon find they can't get past the secretary.' What this means, I think, is that if you're going to present your boss with a problem, at least try to suggest a possible way to resolve it.

A classic example comes from Greek literature. An Athenian messenger approached the Spartan king with a problem: The Athenians were about to declare war on Sparta. But he also proposed a solution: Surrender immediately.

However, the trusty messenger was immediately killed, so maybe this isn't such a good example after

 Put yourself in your boss shoes - This is sound advice. Try to imagine how your boss might react to a certain situation. Not only will this help you formulate your presentation, it might make the boss more inclined to work with you, Greene states.

However, under no circumstances should you literally try to put yourself in your boss' shoes. Not only will the boss find this inconvenient, he quite possibly will wonder whatever possessed him to hire you in the first place.

Well, wasn't that interesting? I'm going to try these ideas on my boss right now. See you Sunday - I

Cracks delay shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. officials said. (AP) - The launch of the space shuttle Discovery has been delayed and may be scrubbed because of cracks first found in a high-speed turbopump of the spacecraft's counterpart,

NASA engineers said Wednesday that the delay of the Discovery flight until at least mid-March could force a postponement in a scheduled April launch of Atlantis. But the Atlantis flight has priority and could force the cancellation of the Discovery launch, space agency

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration made the announcement after shuttle managers reviewed an engineering analysis of cracks discovered in one of Atlantis' high-speed turbopumps after a December flight. Failure of the pumps could cause an explosion that could kill the Officials said Discovery will be moved to the launch pad early Friday and three suspect pumps are to be replaced in conjunction with other launch preparations.

Iranians take soap opera very seriously

Japanese soap opera is so much the rage in fundamentalist Iran that sacrilegious praise of its heroine during a live radio call-in program led to the brief imprisonment of four Tehran Radio executives.

An unidentified female caller had contended the series' persevering protagonist is a better role model for Iranian women than the daughter of Mohammed, the founder of Islam.

Those remarks in this predominantly Shiite Moslem land of 50 million people triggered an outcry similar to John Lennon's remark during a 1960s news conference that the Beatles were "more popular than Jesus Christ." Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini angrily demanded the radio executives be punished for offending Islam and his wish was heeded. Theology aside, the television show "Oshin," which depicts a girl's travails in devastated postwar Japan, is wildly popular among Iranians as they recover from their eight-year war with Traffic stops and blackouts are postponed during broadcasts of the serial, whose heroine, Oshin, suf-fers, every imaginable hardship and setback. The four executives were sentenced to prison terms by a NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - A Islamic ideology; Hamid Khunmeri, head of supervision; and Mohammad Rasekh, editor of ideological programs - received a four-year sentence and 50 lashes.

The drama, whose broadcasts began last year in Iran, was chosen by officials who thought Oshin an exemplary role model for Iranians suffering hardships that included Iraqi rocket attacks on Tehran and the loss of, by some estimates, a million of their countrymen.

It became an instant hit. Week after week, Oshin, struggles on despite food shortages and cruel relatives, loses her house in a fire, and faces trial after trial.

After Oshin's father died in one episode, an Iranian newspaper published a full-page obituary. Letters of condolence and telegrams poured in from all over the country

When the heroine couldn't find enough rice to feed herself, sympathizers sent the TV station some of their own precious rice rationing coupons for her.

Oshin has become a popular brand name for everything from shoes to electrical appliances. According to travelers from Tehran, it's also a favorite name for newborn baby-girls.....

Just before the hour-long episodes, TV announcers ask viewers to switch off all unnecessary electric lights and appliances so the power supply will not be overloaded while the show is

Rebels suspend attacks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas say the favorable U.S. response to their proposal to take part in elections has moved them to suspend attacks on U.S. institutions and personnel.

Wednesday's announcement reverses a rebel stand that held U.S. personnel or property as legitimate targets because Washington has given President Jose Napoleon Duarte's government about a million dollars a day economic and military aid.

The insurgents last week of fered to take part in presidential elections if the vote were postponed from March 19 to September and their security concerns were met. It was a major turnabout for the rebels, who had condemned all previous elections this decade as shams.

The government has reacted negatively to the proposal.

U.S. team to battle Antartic spill

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) - Tons of equipment left the United States on an Air Force transport with a team of clean-up experts headed for Antarctica today to tackle an oil spill that poses a major environmental threat. The huge C-5 plane was bound for the southern city of Punta Arenas, where its cargo and the 15-member team will be transferred to a U.S. research vessel, the Polar Duke, the U.S. Embassy in Santiago said.

In the Antarctic, U.S. scientists were trying to catch floating oil barrels and propane containers near the spill, which was four miles in diameter and moving to the southwest, the National Science

The agency said in Washington that the Argentine supply vessel that released the oil after it ran aground and sank had carried 250,000 gallons of diesel fuel. It said an "incurable disaster" would result if all the fuel leaks into the pristine region's unspoiled waters.

In Buenos Aires, an Argentine pose run by the foundation. navy spokesman insisted that the spill was not posing a serious ecological threat.

The Bahia Paraiso (Paradise Bay) ran aground on Saturday in the Bismarck Strait, about 600 miles south of the southern tip of South America and 1½ miles from the U.S. Palmer Research Station on the Antarctic Peninsula.

All passengers and crew were rescued, but the ship floated free in heavy seas and sank Tuesday, spilling barrels of oil and several hundred propane gas containers, said Jack Talmadge, a spokesman for the National Science Foundation. Another foundation spokesman in Washington, Jack Renerie, said most of the oil was in steel drums so the ecological threat may not be as big as originally

However, "There's a bunch of free (drifting) oil down there," he said. "The slick has arrived at Palmer Station," a scientific out-

Talmadge said he was not sure if the oil leak was continuing.

'The water surrounding the ship is covered with a couple of centimeters (about an inch) of oil. There is a sheen of oil in a much wider area around the ship, including evidence of oil on the coastline of the several islands

"Wildlife has already begun to be affected," including krill, the small crustaceans that form the basis of the Antarctic food chain, Talmadge said.

Birds which have eaten the krill are showing behavior differences,' he said. "One dead penguin had been found as of a few hours ago."

A foundation statement said about 12,000 pairs of penguins and other sea birds nested in the area last year: "In a few weeks, hatchling penguins will leave their nests and enter the now-fouled Antarctic waters, as will their parents.

"Descriptions of odors are basically through associations with something else," Orofino said. "There is a very meager vocabulary in terms of describing odors in a fundamental sense." Another problem is that even among humans, the ability to smell varies widely. About 2 percent of the population has no sense of smell at all, while other people are limited by an olfactory version of color blindness

And unlike sight and sound, it's difficult to measure smell.

"Things like audition and vision have a spectrum you can refer to, a rainbow of color, sound frequencies and so on. Smell does not," said Orofino, who hopes a couple of Wheeler Center projects can improve the situation.

Psychology professor Edward Green spent months examining how people associate odors with colors, hoping to find a link between the two. He found that women were more descriptive than men in connecting scents to colors, such as the smell of a lemon to yellow.

"It turns out men operate under a special handicap. Their noses aren't very good and they don't have very good color discrimination," Green said. But even women were limited to smells they knew and could not associate colors with unfamiliar scents, so any odorcolor connection appears to be learned.

Fantasy versions make dinosaur expert cringe

BALTIMORE (AP) - David co-opt dinosaurs and therein lies Weishampel started out to do a little research to advise Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions on buying dinosaur toys, and came away with some advice for the makers of books, toys and movies: Consult the experts.

Few dinosaurs dragged their tails and many had muscular legs with feet, "not just telephone poles with little blobs at the end," said Weishampel, 36, a Johns Hopkins School of Medicine anatomy professor and paleontologist.

And despite depictions of dinosaur-hunting cavemen, "the last dinosaur departed the earth 65 million years ago. The first prehistoric human existed roughly 4 million years ago. No way did cave men or women clobber dinosaurs."

Weishampel's role as protector of the saurian image hasn't come easily. After all, his 3-year-old daughter Amy collects dinosaurs and 8-year-old Sarah enjoys last year's dinosaur movie, "The Land Before Time." He doesn't want to be a spoilsport, even though the film portrays known plant-eating dinosaurs as "real killing machines" that attack babies, and shows them with ears.

"They stuck them on to add cuteness," he said. "Baby dinosaurs would have been rather cute. They don't need mammal heads to make them cute."

In the toy market, Weishampel said, "There are companies that put out dinosaur toys or books that try and demonstrate some educational value to their product, that say it's educational or museum quality. That just isn't true."

Tyco, a Moorestown, N.J.-based company that makes "Dino Riders," is a "pretty nifty example," he said. "They market mechanical dinosaurs that they claim are museum-quality and are scientifically accurate. The worst thing about them is they combine their products with alien life forms, laserguns, little saddles you can strap on.
"The narrative is bad guys from some planet arrived on earth, coopted dinosaurs, then the good guys fought off the bad guys, also the forum for kids to play with. "Where does the science stop and where does the fantasy begin?' Tyco senior vice president of marketing Jim Alley, creator of Dino Riders, defended the line as offering accurate models in a fantasy context. Alley isn't worried that weisnamper's g ipes will nurt sales - $40 million last year in the United States for the 15 different dinosaurs — or that they are misleading.

"There were absolutely no cavemen alive when there were dinosaurs, and every kid-knows that," Alley said. "Our purpose here was to make authentic dinosaurs kids could play with. I'm adding the fantasy to it.'

A comic book accompanying Dino Riders details the scenario of good and bad aliens passing through a space-time portal into the dinosaur world, and Alley said he figured historical models alone would bore most children.

"Why is sticking in humans or humanoids going to enhance play?" asked Weishampel. He called the explanation on the package merely "your 7-cent version of articulating some science to the Dinosaur popularity has been high before - in the 1930s, for example - and scientists now are in the midst of a "sort of dinosaur renaissance," he said. About 40 percent of all known dinosaurs have been discovered and named in the past two decades, including a small plant-eater Weishampel and a colleague discovered and named last summer in Montana -Urodromeus, or mountain runner.

With the field in a vigorous state, he said, "if dinosaurs really excite kids and it's a good way to get them educated, do it right.

However, Weishampel spares some portrayals. Fred and Wilma Flintstone, for example, and their pet dinosaur Dino. "In the Flintstones, the association of cavemen and women with dinosaurs certainly doesn't work in terms of what we know about in the fossil record.

"But it's not really purported to be educational.

The religion claims a following of 730 million people in India and Nepal and parts of Bangladesh, Indonesia, Thailand in Southeast Asia: Mauritius, in Africa and Fiji in the South Pacific.

An estimated 500,000 holy men and their followers started camping at Allahabad on Jan. 14, for a seven-week congregation, or fair, during which 30 million to 40 million pilgrims were expected to take dips at the "Sangam," the confluence of the three rivers most sacred to Hindus — the Ganges, the Jamuna and the Saraswathi.

The "Sangam," which takes it's name from a mythical fight between gods and demons over a pot of nectar, is held every 12 years when Jupiter enters Taurus and the Sun and the Moon are in Capricorn,

"You can't explain Hinduism," said M.P. Asthana, who has attended four earlier fairs. "It is a way of life, where karmas (the results of deeds) are most important. Even to an average Hindu, the faith is so confusing.

He added: "No one can explain how we got to acquire and where are our 330 million gods and Hinduism postulates that everyone goes through a series of rebirths, or reincarnations, that eventually lead to Moksha, the spiritual salvation that frees one from the cycle of rebirths.

'With each rebirth you can move closer to or further from eventual moksha," said Asthana, who is the spokesman for the state government of Uttar Pradesh, in which Allahabad is a major city.

"The deciding factor is one's karma. Bad actions result in bad karma, which leads one to lower incarnation and a step further from salvation.

"But if one's actions have been good he or she will reincarnate on a higher level and be a step closer to eventual freedom from rebirth."

Coming to Allahabad has special significance for Hindus and tens of thousands come daily to take holy dips at the Sangam, believing doing this during the auspicious planetary conjugation will wash away all the sins of a lifetime and release them from the cycle of births and rebirths.

Fifty-two different religious groups put up sprawling tent homes at the fair. Each has its own way to reach God. Most of them constantly smoke marijuana. They say it helps them meditate and become closer to God.

"This makes Hinduism unique," said Asthana. "There is no restriction on how you reach your goal salvation.'

United States praises U.N. while failing to pay arrears

UNITED NATIONS (AP) -After years of cold-shouldering the United Nations, the United States now sings its praises and increasingly suggests things for it to do. But U.S. dollars to match the tasks are not forthcoming and the United States remains the biggest U.N. debtor

The United States is urging the world body to take on more responsibilities - from monitoring the Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan and Cuban withdrawal from Angola to fighting terrorism and drug trafficking and investigating human rights abuses and chemical warfare.

It also is expected to monitor the eventual Vietnamese withdrawal from Cambodia and to play a role in a Middle East settlement.

But little money is forthcoming from the U.S. Congress to fund the burgeoning U.S. agenda for the 159-nation organization. The United States is the largest U.N. contributor, assessed one-quarter of the annual budget of $800

While the United Nations has registered a series of formidable peacemaking and peacekeeping successes that advance U.S. interests, Congress has been withholding U.S. dues.

The United States ended 1988 about $402 million in arrears in budget and peacekeeping dues -53.5 percent of the total U.N. arrears of more than $750 million.

Largely because of U.S. nonpayment, the United Nations periodically faces financial crises and is having trouble paying for new peackeeping operations.

President Bush, a former U.S.

ambassador here, praised the United Nations during his election campaign and called for the payment of U.S. dues.

Congress has been withholding a large part of the dues because of budget constraints and disaffection with the world body. The organization was seen as biased against the United States, bureaucratically

George P. Shultz said before leaving office as secretary of state said it is important for U.S. foreign policy "to fully fund our contributions to U.N. agencies . . . and to initiate a plan to pay ar-rearages...over a five-year period.

He said the request for nearly full payment of dues "is critical to our objectives of resolving regional conflicts. The U.N. can play an important role in this regard."

U.S. Undersecretary of State Richard S. Williamson, in charge of international organizations, said, "Up through last year, the Executive, State Department and White House sought full funding. Congress failed to appropriate the full amount."

In a telephone interview, Williamson said some people "hold the United Nations in disrepute when it does disreputable things. It rightfully is criticized, he said, for overspending and for political moves like a General Assembly resolution equating Zionism with

DEAR ABBY: I rented my spare room to a college student in the fall of '87. Last May she gave me one day's notice and moved out, leaving behind some clothing, books, a bookshelf and her washer and dryer. (She also left her dog with me, but that's another story.)

Any. wanted to rent the room to someone else, so I told her to get her stuff out by August. She came and took the stuff out of the room, but she left her washer and dryer in my basement. She said she was moving to an apartment, but she didn't give me an address or telephone number.

It is now January and I have no way of reaching this girl. Abby, I am not a storage company! Can I sell her washer and dryer? Or are they mine to keep? I want to make an office in my basement, but her washer and dryer are taking up space. I have no use for them as I have my own.

I should not have to place an ad in the paper to locate this girl. What are my legal rights? Going to a lawyer will cost me, and since she already owes me money, which I will probably never get, I don't want to spend any more. Although she paid me for keeping her dog, she still owes me for back rent. Her checks always bounce, and she is very irresponsible. What should I d o ? — S T U C K I N PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR STUCK: Call your state or county local bar association. Somehow they should be able to tell you what your "rights" are. You may also be referred to a low-cost attorney.

If the girl is still a student, you can locate her through the college. Then send her a registered letter advising her that if she doesn't remove her property from your basement within 30 days, you will dispose of it. That may jar her into action. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My husband drinks too much. I love this man, and hate to see him drink because I know what it's doing to him and I don't want to lose him. So, of course, I nag him.

He hates for me to nag him, so he tells me that he drinks because I am such a terrible nag.

Stereotyping and judging a person at first glance is a social barrier that we must learn to deal with and overcome. Are you interested in the results? — K.P. IN PORTLAND

DEAR K.P.: You bet I am. For example, if you're planning to dress like a punk rocker, you can expect people to assume that you are a punk rocker. One's appearance is the first statement that a person makes to the public. It's the one that "labels" you.

Now, please tell me why anyone would intentionally want to wear a misleading label.

DEAR ABBY: I fathered a child 42 years ago by a young girl I cared for. Soon after "Mary" became pregnant (unknown to me), I went into the armed services. Mary fell in love with another man and did not want me to know about the pregnancy, preferring to let her new husband think it was his child. He learned a year later that it was not his, as it looked exactly like me, so he divorced her. I found out about all this only after Mary had given up my son for adoption. I lost track of the boy and his mother. Abby, I would have married her in a minute and raised my son.

I wholeheartedly agree with you when you say, "It's a man's right to know that he has fathered a child," — HOW NICE IT WOULD HAVE BEEN

Dorothy Garrett Coliseum is quiet as Howard College assistant basketball coach Eddie McCarter explains what a quiet, shy person Terrence Lewis really is.

"Let me check and see if he's in the dressing room," McCarter says, exiting to search for the freshman forward. The coach is not gone 20 seconds when the calm of Garrett Coliseum is shattered by the opening of a door and a loud cry: "I'm not ready for practice!" followed by the chant, "I need sleep! I need sleep! . .

Who is this noisy intruder? That's right — none other than Mr. Shy, Quiet Person himself: Terrence Lewis.

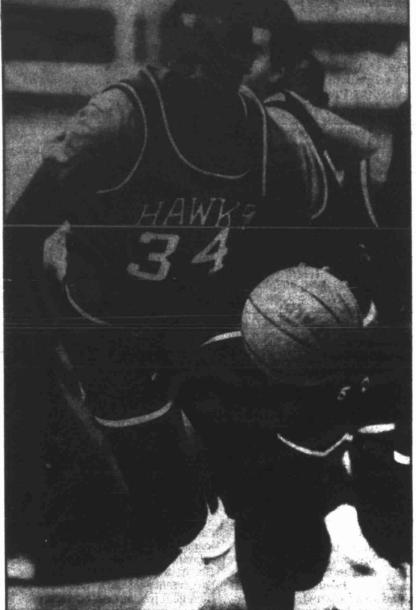

Dramatic entrances notwithstanding, Lewis in conversation is the soft-spoken person McCarter described earlier. More importantly - for the Hawks - he is one of the team's leaders and its most prolific scorer.

"He's been our most consistent offensive threat," Howard coach Steve Green says. "When his game is off, you definitely see a different team on the court. He's had some spectacular games for us."

Green's comments are reinforced by a look at Lewis' statistics. Through the Hawks' Jan. 26 game with Frank Phillips College, the Birmingham, Ala. native leads the team in scoring (24.3 points per game), three-point shooting (47 percent) and assists (76).

His scoring is second in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference only to Odessa College All-American Larry Johnson, Lewis is second in three-point percentage (47), and third in free throw percentage (75.3 percent).

But Lewis is important to Howard not only for his offensive

Howard College Hawks' forward Terrance Lewis is one of the major prowess. His defensive worth also reasons the Hawks are tied for third in Western Junior College is reflected in the stat sheet. He is Athletic Conference play. Lewis is second in the league in scoring.

the Hawks' leader in steals (53), is second in rebounding (7.3 per game) and third in blocked shots

"Terrence has the potential to lead us in every category; he has the potential to do so," Green says. "If he wanted to lead us in rebounding, he probably could. The sky's the limit for him.

Indeed, Lewis has concentrated on his defensive efforts.

"I take pride in playing defense," he says, "and things you take pride in, you work hardest

Lewis came to McCarter's attention when both were involved in Alabama high school basketball -Lewis as a player at Ramsay High School in Birmingham and Me-Carter as the coach at Troy.

"Terrence played class 5A ball at Ramsay, and I coached in that class," McCarter says. "I've known him since he was a sophomore. He was named the top player in Alabama his senior season, so it was kind of hard not to notice him."

After graduation, Lewis - named by one newspaper as "Mr. Basketball" in the state, signed with Providence University of the Big East Conference, but became ineligible for play his freshman year because of Proposition 48, the NCAA rule requiring freshmen to score above a certain level on their college-entrance exams.

"Providence wanted him to go to San Jac (San Jacinto Junior College, near Houston)," McCarter says. "So I visited him and talked to him (about coming to HC). I asked him to let me know what he

Proposition 42 helping junior colleges

By CHARLES EHRENFELD Lubbock Avalanche Journal

LUBBOCK (AP) - While Georgetown men's basketball coach John Thompson is fuming about Proposition 42, junior college coaches across the nation are licking their chops and foaming at the mouths as they ponder the possible windfall.

'There's going to be so many talented players out there going to play at a junior college," New Mexico Junior College men's basketball coach Ron Black said. "There's no question it's going to elevate the level of junior college basketball everywhere. Proposition 48 has already done that."

Though Proposition 42, which is scheduled to go into effect in August, 1990, may be a bane for NCAA Division I coaches, it would be quite a boon for junior college

The idea of a 7-footer loping down the court at Scurry County Coliseum in Snyder for a fast-break dunk or swatting an arcing jumper into the seats at Caster Activity Center in Hobbs, N.M., could become more commonplace than fantasy

'What you're going to see in this "Proposition 48 created a monster. There's better players playing in junior college than ever before. Now, with Proposition 42, you're going to have a Division I

Beck trying repeat as LA Open champ

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A victory here a year ago was much more than a simple win for Chip

"It was a turning point in my career," Beck said before opening defense of his title today in the $1 million Los Angeles Open.

Prior to winning the 1988 Los Angeles title, Beck was recognized by his peers as a good player; but just another good player among many on the PGA Tour.

"Now," said Curtis Strange, the 1988 Player of the Year and U.S. Open champion, "Chip Beck is the guy you have to look at every week. every time he starts.

"He's probably the favorite. If he isn't, he probably should be. He's not going to win every week, but you know he's going to be there," Strange said.

It all turned around in this tournament a year ago, when Beck broke through to his first victory in 10 seasons of PGA Tour activity. He went on to win another title a

I learn something every day. I'm still improving. I think I'm getting to be a better player all the time.

"I try not to get all wrapped up in winning or losing. I just try to play the best I can and have a good time. That's what I'll try to do this week, play my best and have a good time. Winning here was so important to me, that I hope I can give a good account of myself, and have a good time and make it fun for the spectators."

Agent says Clayton clean

MIAMI (AP) — Mark Clayton's agent says the Miami Dolphins' wide receiver has been irreparably harmed by "scurrilous, slanderous" allegations that an admitted drug dealer made in this week's Sports Illustrated magazine.

Clayton is accused in the magazine of obtaining and using cocaine frequently since at least 1983 and as recently as last season.

"He is as upset as you can be," Clayton's agent, David Ware, said Wednesday. "He vehemently denied this nonsense to Sports Illustrated and they ran it anyway, so he feels betrayed."

Astros, Davis to arbitration

HOUSTON (AP) - The Astros have apparently reached an impasse in contract negotiations with first baseman Glenn Davis, the teams's only unsigned player, and appear destined to go to arbitra-tion Friday, according to Davis' agent.

Both sides in the contract dispute have made several attempts to reach a compromise, but are probably too far apart to reach a settlement before Friday's hearing in Los Angeles. Davis reportedly is asking for $1.085 million - more than three times his 1988 salary of $340,000 — while the Astros are offering

"We've talked with the Astros several times," said Davis' agent, Robert Fraley.

Mullins overcomes problems

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) - Chris Mullin only knows the NBA All-Star game from television, his annual ticket to admire the world's top basketball talent ever since he was little.

But after overcoming alcoholism and related personal problems, the Golden State forward isn't likely to be overwhelmed by the prospect of guarding Charles Barkley or Dominique Wilkins in this year's spectacle in Houston on Feb. 12.

"This is a great, great honor," the fourth-year pro said Wednesday after being named a reserve to the NBA's Western Conference All-Star team by a vote of conference coaches. "It's the greatest players in the world, and I'm considered one of them. . .

"I would say it's the biggest honor for me, especially considering the circumstances," said Mullin, who won the John Wooden Award as the nation's top college

"But more important to me is that my life is together. If I didn't make the team I'd still be happy because I'm having a good year and the team is winning.

The Warriors staggered to a 20-62 record a year ago, and Mullin spent 47 days in an alcohol rehabilitation center at the age of 24.

The fortunes of both began the long climb back to respectability last summer when the 6-foot-7 Mullin went through a rigorous training routine that trimmed his weight from 230 pounds to a svelte career-best 27 points, sixth in the league, along with 5.9 assists, 5.9 rebounds and 2.2 steals per game. He is third in NBA free-throw percentage at .905, and 20th in field-goal percentage at .526.

Aside from statistics, Mullin has been the glue holding the Warriors together during what was supposed to be a rebuilding year. Playing the "point forward" position created by Coach Don Nelson at Milwaukee for Paul Pressley, he has sparked the team to a surprising 22-19 record. In better shape than ever, he is averaging 39 minutes per contest.

Nelson said that when he came to the Warriors he had no idea Mullin could be this good.

"I'm real proud of him," Nelson said. "He's playing above All-Star level — forget that. He's playing like an All-Pro.

"He's truly a miniature Larry ferently than Larry does because he's not 6-9. Passing skills, scoring abilities, quick hands — there really isn't anything he doesn't do on a basketball court.

Nelson saw a few things he didn't like from Mullin last year when he was overweight and alcoholdependent, especially on defense. But he has no complaints in that area now "Everybody told me we'd be hurt on defense because of lack of quickness, or whatever, but we haven't been hurt yet," the coach Mullin often states the alcoholic's credo of living one day at a time, and he tries to view the Warriors" and his own recent success the same way.

The biggest thing for me is just progress," he said. "I see progress from year to year. Who knows, maybe next year some more things

In 43 games, he is averaging a Bird. He does it a little bit dif-Downing Panhandle Geese

Fort Worth Star-Telegraph

DIMMIT (AP) — Jim Stieirt has a right to feel somewhat unique these days; he wasn't among the waterfowl hunting outfitters cited in the recent federal undercover project. And that makes him a member of a fairly small set. "I guess I might have had some undercover agent hunt with me," said Stieirt, a journalist-goose guide who had invited me to hug the mostly bare earth of a Panhandle winter wheat field with him one recent morning. "That's why everything is by-the-book here."

Stieirt, a sportsman who uses his goose hunting business to offset his personal sporting expenses, doesn't have to rely on some of the taboo props - bait, electronic callers, etc. — that some of his less legal-minded brethren endorse. For one thing, the goose hunting business in the Panhandle is not the competitive concern it is east and west of Houston. For another, he's good.

"I guess we run in the high 90 percent limits on dark geese on our hunts," Stieirt said. "We limit just about everybody on darks. I don't have any real figures to back that up - it's just a country boy guess." Stieirt says there's no secret to his success - "When I get that down I'll bottle it and sell," he said other than an old-fashioned American tradition: hard work. He spends plenty of time scouting the countryside for fields the birds are using, right up to the evening before the hunt.

"If I've got any doubts about a deal, I'll scout two times the day before, morning and afternoon," he said. "You've got to have an upto-the-minute idea of where they're working. If you try to shoot the same fields day after day, you're going to end up disappointed." Unlike the Coastal operators, Stieirt doesn't lease land. He roams the Casto-Deaf Smith Parmer County area, first finding birds, then seeking permission from landowners to hunt. He has a good success rate of attaining it. "The area I hunt in, I grew up in," Stieirt said. "A lot of these people I know either directly or through an association — working for a farm magazine like I do or working for a newspaper in that area like I did for a couple for years. But a lot of it is just good manners and good relations with them."

The work doesn't end with the scouting. Stieirt and his partner, Toby Tupen, usually spread more than 300 decoys about a field when they hunt. And they use all shells Rags, Stieirt said, don't get it in the Panhandle. There is precious little stubble upon which to hang them and the omnipresent West Texas wind makes it hard to keep them from blowing all over the countryside. Besides, dark geese, not light geese, are the mainstay of High Plains goose hunting.

Warning lights flashed and sirens sounded in Stieirt's mind and, in no time, he was in the truck, then in the next field, convincing the other hunters that they'd be better off joining us than competing.

Although Stieirt's diplomacy stretched to 12 the number of hunters mingled among the decoys, it didn't matter. The geese began arriving shortly after sunrise and fell into the blocks the way it always is described in the books.

Stieirt called shots for individual hunters or pairs of hunters when the birds came in, trying to make the hunt last. It hardly mattered. The limit-filling dark goose (No. 24, two per hunter) hit the ground at 9:03 a.m.

From then on we concentrated on white geese, hoping the less numerous snows and blues would prove as gullible as the Canadas. Only one fell to our guns. But the Canadas continued, dropping into the set and walking among the decoys, sometimes so close we could have killed them with sticks had we not already dusted 23 Canadas and a specklebelly. It was a spectacle that few hunters ever witness. It is, sadly, their loss.

Hunting Canada geese on the High Plains is some of the finest, albeit most unheralded, sport to be found in Texas.

"We winter up to a quarter of the Central Flyway population of short-grass Canadas when we've got the water for them," Stieirt said. "Some years are better than others, of course - about three or four years ago we had a terrible hatch and it was obvious by the success we had decoying birds. We had all adult birds and it was real tough that year.

'What's really important is that we have water for them. We're running short on water now and a lot of our birds have shifted around. We've got to move with the birds, to stay with the numbers and in the hot fields. I think the last couple of years we've been wintering more birds than usual, but we've had the water to disperse them so we didn't get the disease problem (avian cholera) like the Coast did this year.'

decided — and he called me a week

"I really didn't want to sit out a year," Lewis says. "Coach Mc-Carter found out and came to talk

"He told me that this was the top junior college conference in the nation," Lewis adds. "I wanted to play for the best, so I came out." Lewis, who is majoring in criminal justice, sees his role with the Hawks as two-fold: To provide scoring punch and to act as team leader on occasion. But, he is quick to point out that team harmony comes before any personal glory.

"I'm the type of player that's going to try to make everyone hap-' he says. "I'm a team player." McCarter agrees with that assessment, but adds that Lewis is sometimes "too unselfish. think he should do more on the court, what with the skills that he

Green, who rates Lewis as one of the five best players in the WJCAC, says he believes the best is yet to come for his star forward.

"I see Terrence being listed as one of the top two players in the league next year, along with (either) Darryl King (of Midland College) or Jeff Stern (of South Plains College)," Green says. "Terrence has a great shot (at All-American recognition).'

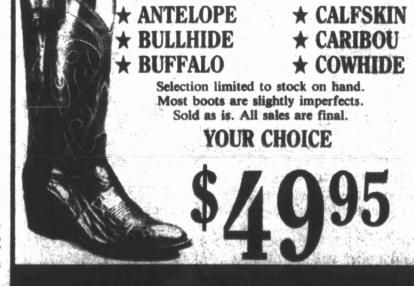

For the immediate future, however, Lewis says he is not looking past his sophomore year which he plans to spend at Howard.

"I'll be back," he says. "I have a chance to make something of myself, so I'll be back.'

standards and forcing them to sit out one season while limiting their athletic eligibility to three years. None of the Proposition 42 opponents have mentioned junior colleges, which has both Black and Western Texas College men's basketball coach Tony Mauldin frothing at the mouth.

"I think it's overplayed," Mauldin said. "They're making it sound like the kid's going to sit home in the gutters or in the ghettos and not go to school. Nobody's saying anything about junior

"The thing that no Division I coach will mention is that there are a lot of alternatives for a young man. A lot of people try to make junior colleges out as being bad, but I think it's a viable alternative. We feel like a young man is a lot better off going to a junior college where he can play than he is sitting out and losing a year of eligibility. Black, a 12-year veteran of junior college coaching, is also dissatisfied with the way Proposition 42 opponents are carrying on.

"I think it's a little hypocritical," Black said. "It (Proposition 42) is really not depriving a kid of getting an education. It's depriving a kid of going to a Division I school, but he can go to an NAIA school or a junior college, where he's going to get just as good an education.

'We're probably better equipped to deal with people that aren't strong students because we have developmental programs and other remedial-type programs specifically designed to deal with kids that aren't good students."

Lubbock Christian University men's basketball coach John Copeland said he doesn't expect the that much," Copeland said. NAIA (National Association of In-don't see that there's that much diftercollegiate Athletics) to derive a big advantage from Proposition 42. 'People used to think that if you couldn't make it somewhere (in the NCAA), you could always go NAIA," Copeland said. "But we're changing our entrance requirements."

According to the NAIA Official Handbook released in August, 1988, a first-time student entering an NAIA institution for the fall term of 1989 must meet two of three entrance requirements.

Those requirements are a score of 15 on the ACT or 700 on the SAT tests, an overall high school gradepoint average of 2.0 on a 4.0 scale and graduate in the top half of a graduating class. Those not fulfilling two of three requirements must sit out the first ference. I don't see us as being any more lenient. Despite the Thompson furor, Black said he expects Proposition 42 not to be repealed.

"I think it's the best thing for the kids," Black said. "I think kids do what you expect of them. I think if you set higher standards, the kids will do better.

"I don't think it will be repealed. They may bow to the pressure, but I think (college and university) presidents nationwide are serious about academics."

Death reveals musician's secret life

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Bil- been a very difficult thing to ly Tipton lived his life as a man, performing as a jazz musician, appearing to have a wife and adopting three sons. But his death at age 74 revealed to fans. friends and family that Billy Tipton was a woman.

Donald Ball, director of Ball & Dodd Funeral Home, said Tuesday that Tipton, who died this month of a bleeding ulcer, was a woman.

Ball said he privately informed Jon Clark, one of Tipton's adopted sons, that his "father" was really female so Clark would not have to learn it from the death certificate.

"I was just trying to break it to him gently," Ball told The Tipton doesn't have anything to Associated Press on Tuesday do with gender. He was a fannight. "I just didn't want him to tastic, almost marvelous, and find out in a public office. It's generous person," she said.

handle."

The Spokane County coroner was not available Tuesday for comment, the coroner's office

"I'm just lost," Clark told the Spokesman-Review newspaper. He said he learned the truth last Wednesday, four days after Tipton's death.

"No one knew," said Kitty Oakes, the woman that Tipton had said he married in 1960. Ms. Oakes, who separated from Tipton 10 years ago, refused to talk about her life with Tipton, saying he died with the secret and that should be respected.

"The real story about Billy

"He'll always be Dad," Clark said. "But I think that he should have left something behind for us, something that would have explained the truth."

Ms. Oakes told funeral directors that Tipton was born Dec. 29, 1914, in Oklahoma City and was raised in Kansas City, Mo.

The newspaper said Tipton apparently began appearing as a man to enhance his chances of success as a jazz musician.

"He gave up everything," Ms. Oakes said. "There were certain rules and regulations in those days if you were going to be a musician."

Tipton, a saxophone and piano player, performed with the Jack Teagarden, Russ Carlyle and Scott Cameron bands, then formed the Billy Tipton Trio in the 1950s and played nightclubs throughout the West.

Dick O'Neil, who played drums with the trio for 10 years, recalled some listeners made cracks that Tipton, with a baby face and a high singing voice, looked too feminine to be a man.

"But I would almost fight anybody who said that," O'Neil said. "I never suspected a thing."

Scott Miller, 27, Tipton's oldest adopted son, said his father died broke and tired.

"Now I know why I couldn't get him to a doctor." Miller said. "He had so much to protect and I think he was just tired . . . of keeping the secret."

"You can imagine the pressure he lived with," Clark said. "Who knows? Maybe that's what gave him the ulcer that ended up kill-

Pickers converge for Wills tribute

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -Frankie McWhorter tipped his pearl-gray cowboy hat back a bit farther on his head, squinted as though he was looking at the distance, and recalled his introduction to western swing.

The juke box was playing in the cafe where he ate while loading cattle down in Texas in 1949, he recalled Wednesday.

"Faded Love' was all that was played the whole time I was there," he said. "I asked somebody what that nice racket was and they told me it was Bob Wills' fiddle.

"I decided I was going to get me a fiddle and a couple of months later I was walking past a pawn shop and there was a fiddle in the

"My friend said that's what I'd been wanting, so I went in and bought it and I've been fiddling and scraping ever since."

McWhorter, 57, of Higgins, Texas, was one of dozens of fiddle players who showed up at the state Day, a tribute to the man credited with originating western swing.

The day also was in tribute to the late Leon McAuliffe, who played with Wills. McAuliffe died last Among all the fiddlers were a few guitar players — both acoustic and steel — as well as some piano players, drummers and singers, One group traveled for 20 hours from Indiana just to appear.

Several members of the old Bob Wills band, the Texas Playboys, were among those who entertained visitors and provided concerts in both the Senate and House chambers.

Over and over again, the strains of "Faded Love" were heard. One time when it was struck up in the Senate chamber, all the listeners rose in tribute, as befitting the song proclaimed by legislative edict the official country and western song of Oklahoma.

was with the Wills' band from 1960 to 1962. And he said he could still remember buying that first fiddle.

"It cost $27," he said. "I know, because I had to borrow $3 from my daddy to cover the check I wrote for it.

He said he "had worked for the Miller Brother Band" before joining the Texas Playboys.

After his two years with Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys, McWhorter said he went back to work on a ranch in Lipscomb County, Texas. But the music was still a strong draw.

"I have my own band now," he said. "It's called Frankie McWhorter And The Over The Hill Gang."

He said this was his first trip to Oklahoma City for the annual tribute to Bob Wills, and it was 'quite impressive . . . what they're doing to keep his music

Unhappy with suggested appraisal values, Martin County Commissioners will meet representatives of Pritchard and Abbott Co., and the district's other taxing entities, to discuss appraisals.

Chief appraiser Delbert Dickenson told the commissioners' court Tuesday that the firm has suggested setting a $16 per barrel rate on sweet crude oil and a $14.55 per barrel rate on sour crude oil.

'That was the posted price Jan. "Dickenson said. "But since then it has escalated and then dropped back down. That (figure) is not acceptable to me and I felt it wouldn't be acceptable to the other taxing

He said he would arrange a meeting with representatives from the firm and the various taxing entities - Martin County, the city of Stanton, the Stanton, Sands and Grady Independent School Districts, the Martin County Hospital District, the Martin County Fresh Water District and the Martin County Underground Water

Dickenson said he felt the appraisal price for the minerals should have been higher, particularly for sour crude, which he said is "most of our" production.

"Andrews (County) is real upset, they were upset at the area meeting two years ago and they're upset again," he said. "Midland and Ector Counties are saying this is not definite, they want to wait and see, but they don't like the $16 they will consider appraisal and $14.55. Dawson County is upset, too," he said.

The commissioners also decided that during their Feb. 13 session district cost allotments, since one of the appraisal district's entities County Judge Bob Deavenport has objected to the current "by parcel" system of cost allotment.

Commissioner E.D. Holcomb said he feels the appraisal district board should discuss the matter and make a decision, and suggested the district might need legal and for all.'

Commissioners also voted not to join Nueces County in a suit against the state, despite attorney general Jim Mattox's desire to combine all 254 counties in the County Attorney James McGilvray advised the commissioners to participate in a "friend of the court" brief being filed to prevent the state from forcing all counties to join the suit, saying that while such a move will cost the county "no more than $400," to be forced into the suit might prove more expensive.

Naming new members to the county historical committee has been tabled until the Feb. 13 session, after discussion of possible nominees resulted in a call for volunteers. Interested persons

The commissioners also approved a pipeline crossing in Precinct Four, voted to approve paying the county's bills, and voted to install a security light at the community

Approval was also given to releasing securities amounting to $500,000 and $250,000, on condition that the bank being released agrees in writing to supply shortterm securities as the county funds mature.

The panel discussed improvements and repairs to county property, including Roger Brooks work on the community center speaker system.

No timetable set: Martin 911 system

County emergency personnel met with representatives from the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission to discuss preliminary conditions for the Dial-911 emergency communications system Jan. 26.

County Judge Bob Deavenport said Tuesday that no timetable for putting the system into operation is available yet. "This is very very preliminary. "A timetable? I wouldn't even want to say," he told the Martin County Commissioners' Court. "But we are going to the 911 system.' PBRPC's Harley Reeves said the Awards highlight chamber banquet

Awards for outstanding service to youth, industry and culture in Martin County combined with a keynote address from a former rival to highlight the annual Chamber of Commerce Banquet Thursday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Smith, Myrl Mitchell and Mary Prudy Brown were recognized for their hard work and extensive involvement on behalf of Martin County. Newly-elected state representative Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, presented a keynote address laced with memories of the rivalry between Stanton and Coahoma in schoolboy athletics, and sprinkled with information from the early proceedings of the legislature.

Exiting chamber president Steve Herm briefly reviewed the chamber's achievements of the past year, including the Carson & Barnes Circus, the downtown games and street dance afterward, breakfasts for Stanton and Grady teachers during in-service, the Christmas-tree lighting with its attendant poster contest

"A lot of times we've come to y'all," Herm said, "and we've never had anybody say no. We appreciate that.'

In explaining the banquet theme, "Help keep Martin County Strong," Herm said he felt the two main ingredients in a recipe for continued strength in the county are the school systems and the local economy.

"When I became (chamber) president a year ago, I said I thought our greatest resource is our school systems," he said. "I still think so," he added, citing passage of the bond issue funding new construction in the Stanton school system. "The other thing we need is to keep Martin County dollars in Martin County."

Saying residents and businesses should try to help each other, he Herm said he felt none of the county's residents desired to leave, and challenged incoming president Rodger Burch to continue progressing.

"Even though we've taken great strides to better our community, I think we all agree there's a little more we can do.

Burch presented Herm with a plaque in honor of his service before introducing Nancy Broadway, Larry Elliott, Nancy Holt, and Georgeann Walton, who joined Burch and Herm as returning directors for the chamber. He also introduced incoming directors Larry Adams, Lester Baker, Frances Biggs, Loyd Cox, Joe Hodges, Lance Hopper, Georgia Welch and Gib Wheeler. He commended "the lady who keeps things going" at the chamber: "I can't say enough about . . . Dorothy Deavenport.

Promising to continue the progress begun in 1988, Burch concluded his speech by telling members, "Please bear in mind, we're here to serve you.'

mise that "a good bill" on workmen's compensation will come out of the state legislature. 'The governor has pledged not to let us out of session" until such a bill has been passed, Fraser said. He said he may be one of the cosponsors of the bill. He told the audience he enjoys being in Austin — so much so that

That's what he said at the banquet Thursday night, although Fraser had other things to say as Outgoing chamber president Steve Herm told the audience he had called on Fraser without considering one of those factors.

'When I asked him, it wasn't from the standpoint that he'd just been elected to the (Texas) house of representatives," Herm said, "but from the standpoint of his success in business.'

He explained that Fraser is president of a pallet-making firm grown from a backyard business to what may be the world's largest firm in its industry.

Fraser disarmed his audience by saying, "After having returned from Washington I'm taken by the words of the great statesman, Thomas Jefferson, that all men are created equal - but Steve tells me he's developing a handicapp-grow up in Coahoma.'

He recounted the history of Troy Fraser came to Stanton to Fraser Industries, which did inaddress the Martin County deed begin in his father's Chamber of Commerce from two backyard, when the elder Fraser was a mechanic for the Cosden refinery

A 50-item-per-day order for yard and storage shed, expanded into a business that today owns several construction plants and two sawmills, Herm pointed out.

Fraser said he believes, the secret to that success was, "that someone never told me everything wasn't possible." Describing himself as an optimist, he said he is convinced that smallcommunity chambers of commerce are "the heartbeat of America today.'

He said he's convinced that in order to change the economic situation of West Texas, "If someone's going to do something about it, it has to start right here, tapping himself on the chest.

He said the key to solving the West Texas economic situation is diversification — getting away from the agricultural and oilfield industries that have been the traditional backbone of the region's economy.

He promised that this legislative session will not end without a 'good bill'' on workers' compensation, complaining, "We've got a system that doesn't work, and doesn't compensate.'

Fraser said the system now charges employers the thirdhighest rate in the nation - a major drawback to bringing new industry to Texas - while it is "in the bottom 10 percent in getting the money to the workers.

He also promised to keep rural health care issues in front of the legislators, explaining that a coalition of state representatives and senators from both parties has formed in Austin and is dedicated to pushing the regional issues so often shunted aside by big-city

Stanton boys take battle of the Buffs

By MARCELLING CHAVEZ For the Heraid

FORSAN - The Stanton Buffalos went to Forsan for the battle of the Buffaloes Friday night in district 6-2A action. The visiting Buffs took a 72-68 win to record their first win of the second half in district play, while Forsan dropped to 0-1.

The tipoff went in the favor of Stanton, but Forsan's Charles Newton rebounded a visitors miscue taking the ball the length of the court, and found teammate Wade Salvato under the basket to put the home team up on the scoreboard.

With 5:01 left in the opening quarter the Forsan Buffs led the visiting Buffalos 6-4. The first quarter was a see-saw struggle as both tried to build on a lead. Leading 9-8 after Stanton's Brad Holland hit a three-pointer, Forsan made an 8-2 run, taking a 16-11 with 1:32 left in the first quarter. The quarter came to an end with Forsan ahead by a 17-15 margin.

The second quarter added more excitement as the Stanton team began to have problems with the fiesty Forsan bunch. Tied at 17-17, Robert Jones hit from the post position pushing the Stanton team ahead again. Salvato hit a threepoint shot as tug-of-war continued.

Following a Holland basket, Salvato found teammate Shay Howard at the end of a fast break, giving the home team a 22-21 lead with 4:51 left in the half. As the half came to a close, Stanton led 32-29.

Beginning the third quarter, the Forsan squad, playing like champions kept the game close until Howard fouled out. From there Stanton went to work with Jones rebounding missed shots and turning them into valuable points.

Holland found the range from the 25 points in the second half.

From that point, the Stanton Buffs outscored the home Buffs 14-4 as the third quarter came to a close, with Stanton holding a commanding 51-39 lead.

In the final quarter, Forsan came within seven with 1:09 left in the contest. Stanton Buffs' Jones went to work as he scored nine of his 24 points of the night, and the visiting Buffalos went on to defeat Forsan. Stanton goes to 14-7 overall, and Forsan drops to 9-14.

Martin County's insurance premiums for employee coverage are rising, according to a presentation county commissioners heard

Don Crawford of Insurance One outlined probable increases in rates the county will have to pay for its insurance premiums, and warned that an increase appears inevitable. He also said the county should plan for a test date to determine whether its insurance program meets federal and state guidelines for mandatory benefits.

Reporting on the likely increase in premiums, he said if the county continues purchasing insurance from its current supplier, Guardian, a guaranteed rate for the next 12 months is available.

He said he doubts whether bids would be submitted by more than one other carrier. "Blue Cross and Blue Shield did not bid last year because of the age factors in the group. They might bid this year because those factors are a little better -- but they might not."

Commissioner Donald Tollison commented. "I think it would be interesting to find out what percentage of increase in these policies are due to the bad investments insurance companies have made in office buildings and so on.

"I think there's a probability that those of us buying these premiums are paying for those bad investments," he said.

is available by checking the investcarrier, and that a percentage of premium money must, by law, be put in the state's guaranty fund.

He pointed out the recent call by state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, for an overhaul of the state insurance board; Tollison said he applauded Montford's action.

"I think there should have been action taken a lot earlier,' Crawford said, pointing out that insurance firms, like savings and loan institutions and banks, are financial institutions and that in recent years many financial institutions "have gotten out of hand."

Premium increases are figured

Crawford said such information on trend factors, he said, which are figures the company uses to ment portfolios of each insurance predict how much money would be required in a given year to pay claims equal to the previous year's Commissioners decided they would consider such testing during the Feb. 13 session.

"We're not large enough to justify doing (the testing) ourselves," according to County Treasurer H.D. Howard.

Crawford said his firm intends to do the testing for the 100 or so groups whose insurance it handles at a rate that will reimburse the firm's own costs for computer programs to perform the tests, plus separate disks for each group to be

"You will need to pick a date for the initial testing," he told the court, "and then that will be your annual test date.

Selective Service: 1989 to be special for men becoming 26

1989 wil be reaching an important milestone, according to the Selective Service System.

Beginning on Jan. 1, 1989, men who were required to register with Selective Service in 1981 will be turning 26. Selective Service does not have the authority to accept late registrations after a man reaches his 26th birthday.

For those men born in 1963 who have registered, 1989 also marks the year that ends their eligibility for selection for induction under

Selective Service State director Harold D. Doyle warned that, with few exceptions, a man who fails to register before turning 26 will permantly forfeit his eligibility for

Young men who turn 26 during certain federal benefits such as situtionalized or incarcerated at student aid, job training and most the time of their 18th birthday and

Many of the men who have not registered may be unaware of the requirement or do not understand the importance of the obligation to register. Some may even have served in the military but failed to register either before entering the armed forces of after leaving active duty. Others may have been in-

Failure to register is a felony punishable by a fine of up to $250,000, up to five years in prison, or both.

Over 21 million men have registered with Selective Service since registration was reinstitued in 1980. Currently, over one million Texas men age 18 through 25 are

Let's recognize their good work

It's not often we have the chance to recognize both outstanding community leaders and outstanding youngsters, but this week in Martin County we can.

Rodger Burch has taken the reins of the Martin County Chamber of Commerce for the next year. His task is not an easy one — he follows the very able outgoing president Steve Herm in office — but with the support of the community and the continued hard work evident during Thursday night's chamber banquet, it is an enviable one, for he does not shoulder this burden alone.

We wish him a strong year, a steady program and continued support from the chamber. The past year has been one of many achievements; the present year should not be

The board of directors has shown its confidence in Burch's ability to lead the chamber toward a better future for itself and the community. He deserves the support and assistance not only of the board, but the members, in his appointed

Along very similar lines, Martin County youngsters have embarked on the annual livestock show circuit with the fruits of their labors. We congratulate the winners of the county livestock show — and we wish them, too, continued success in their chosen endeavor.

Oftentimes, especially in a world of satellite sportscasts and microwave cuisine, the effort these youngsters expend on their animals and their showmanship efforts is overshadowed by the performance of intramural sports teams. No less work is involved in raising a show-champion steer than in perfecting a skyhook, a running offense or a phenomenal backhand.

But like the skills perfected in academic competition, the patience, hard work, self-discipline and perseverance these youngsters have chosen to pursue will be, if somewhat less heralded, no less valuable to them in the future.

Again, congratulations to the new president of the chamber of commerce and to the livestock show winners, and continued success.

NOW CUT THAT OUT! WE ALREADY SPEND TOO MUCH! YOU'RE GOING TO HAVE TO CHANGE

Let's saddle up and ride

That's a lot of horse for a short kid's saddle, my grandfather would have said - but since he's saddled, go ride him.

So to start with, my name is Sarah Luman and you can find me, most of the time, in the Stanton Herald office. Except when I'm working on the paper over at the Big Spring plant, which is where the Herald is printed, or when I'm underfoot in commissioners' court, a city council meeting or a school board session.

I'm going to be underfoot a lot. What I'm not going to be is a replacement for Walt Finley. In the first place, as one of my heroes once said, you can't replace a human being — much less a friend.

In the second place, I'm a completely different kind of reporter than Walt - and essentially, that's what I'm going to be: a reporter. Editor is a little more glorified — until you realize that the editor and the janitor are the same person and until it dawns on you that as an editor who is also the reporter, you can't blithely blame your misadventures on the other half of Another difference between me news. A Pulitzer Prize nomina- want to know about available.

Write from the heart tion's no easy thing to come by, and I respect that. I also respect the experiences that go with covering as many different beats as Walt Finley has - and I plan to listen carefully when he advises me.

I also plan to listen carefully to other voices; I've already learned a few things about Martin County, and Stanton, but I know I have many more to learn. And that's where you come in - because without readers, there's no reason for a newspaper, and there's no news. News is about you your anniversary, your child's making the honor roll, your taxes increasing, your city government enacting new rules.

Mostly, my job is to help you get that news — either by making sure the word's published about the and my predecessor is his years in events you're interested in, or by the field and his perspective on the making the details of an event you

And I can't do it without you. Write me - letters to the editor if there's something you're worried about in the community; notes about events you think need to be publicized; messages to let me know what matters to you.

Call me. Tell me about the absolutely fantastic game your daughter had for the school tennis team, or your son's chance to go to regional in a UIL academic event. Tell me your family has a wedding or a new baby to celebrate - or a loss to mourn.

But don't stop there. Keep calling or writing or dropping in to visit with me about anniversaries, baptisms, confirmations, graduations; keep telling me about record crops or unholy droughts. Particularly, let me know if something's amiss in the story we carry.

Sure, I want the story for the paper - but I want all of it, and I want it right, just as badly as I want to have it. That's the heart of the news business: to make correct information available in a timely fashion, so everyone can use it.

That's a lot of horse; it may be more horse than I can ride, or want to, in the long run. But if I can stay with it, and you'll stay with me, we can have a champion.

Working for a better newspaper

Welcome to what we hope you will consider another good edition of the Stanton Herald.

This newspaper has a short history in a community rich in tradition. Our challenge now is to connect with today's history as it is happening and report it for you as accurately and fairly as possible.

Walt Finley has helped Sarah in her transition to being in charge of the show for you readers. He spent many years in the position of city editor in Big Spring, the position I had upon arriving there. Now, Sarah can follow his lead in doing her best for the people who take the time to read this weekly account of Martin County.

She has plans to do exactly that and I think that you will be pleasantly surprised at how good

What can you expect, along with a few of the changes you may already have noticed? A desire to report the local news and what it means to the people living in Stanton and elsewhere in Martin

Sarah and others will be attending more meetings of those groups spending your tax dollars, because we believe it's important that you know just how that's being done; she will bring you a knack for getting a touching story and letting it tell itself; she'll cover sports and perhaps help a high school student or two interested in doing a little writing or taking a few pictures.

We have tried, during this change at the helm, to bring a few improvements and we look forward to hearing what you think about them. Among others is the expanded classified advertising listings. Classifieds are considered a strong readership tool of any newspaper and we hope that you find them useful in every way.

Additionally, we hope to see more and wider opinions on this page. Occasionally, a guest column from the Big Spring Herald and other newspapers from across the state will appear on these pages. But your thoughts and ideas are of more interest to the readers of this newspaper than are mine or most anybody else's who lives outside of Martin County, so you are encouraged to contribute: Letters, column-length statements or stories you think will be of interest to other readers.

I will occasionally contribute a column, and Walt Finley likely will do the same just to keep in touch. However, our chief interest is hear-ing from you and doing what we can to improve your newspaper.

Ft. Davis planning film series

A series of films depicting the history of Black Americans in the settlement of the western frontier will be shown free of charge to the public on consecutive Sunday afternoons at 2 p.m. in the auditorium at Fort Davis National Historic Site beginning Feb. 5.

The first film, "Buffalo Soldiers," is a documentary that includes visual re-enactments of black soldiers' experiences both in garrison and fighting Indians. the film is especially appropriate to Fort Davis since elements of all four black regiments, the 9th and 10th Calvary and the 24th and 25th Infantry, served at the post. Much of the film was photographed at Fort Davis National Historic Site in 1970. The movie lasts 54 minutes.

Other films:

Feb. 12: "New Americans" (60 minutes). Depicts the migration of Afro-American families into the lands west of the Mississsippi and their trials on the frontier.

Feb. 19: "Cow Herders" (58 minutes). Legends and stories of Black American cowboys in their struggle for justice and recognition.

Feb. 26: "Exodusters" (60 minutes). Depicts the numerous hardships facing black families who travelled westward to homestead on the western prairies in the 1880s.

Depression session set

A one-evening seminar on depression cosponsored by the Stanton Extension Homemakers' Club and Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital of Midland, is set for Feb. 16 at 6 p.m. in the Cap Rock Auditorium, with Dr. Esteban A. Gonzales, M.D.

According to extension club member Therese Kargl, the seminar can answer such questions as "Can children get depressed?" and "Does depression run in families," along with other causes and effects.

"We feel the need (for information about depression) is great here in the community," Kargl said. "It will help the school in diagnosing children. The more you know, the more you can help yourself."

Admission is free. Refreshments will be provided. A hospital representative will be on hand to provide more information. For details contact Ruby Haggard, (915) 756-2267.

Big Bend visitation declines

Jim Carrico, Park Superintendent, reports visitation is down 12 percent at Big Bend National Park for the calendar year: 241,959 visits during 1988 compared to 274,603 during 1987. Following the yearly trend, campground use of the calendar year showed a 15 percent decline — 101,497 campers in 1988 compared to 119,993 campers in 1987.

National Parks Concessions, Incorporated, the park concessioner, registered a 4 percent decrease in the numberiof lodge guests: 26,181 in 1988; 27,261 in 1987. On the other hand, the concession operated trailer park at Rio Grande Village showed an 11 percent increase: 13,531 over-night stays in 1988 compared to 12,055 in 1987.

Electronics nearing hi-tech achievement

The age of voice-activated appliances and child-proof electrical outlets is nearer than some may think. They are two of many unique features of the prototype Electric Smart House under construction in Maryland, according to Texas Utilities Electric Company, one of the sponsors of the project.

Advanced conservation and construction techniques introduced with the house will give consumers new convenience, comfort and safety, says Dal Frandsen, TU Electric's director of conservation and load management. He adds that efficient appliances and "super insulation" will provide economical and flexible energy use with no sacrifice in lifestyle.

"Computerized control of appliances will allow the homeowner to save on electricity costs while giving the electric utility better load management control," says Frandsen. "The homeowner could program energy-consuming appliances such as dishwashers and clothes dryers to operate at the most convenient times. The appliances also could be controlled by telephone when the homeowner is away."

Instead of using traditional separate wiring systems for electricity, telephones, cable television, security and computer systems, the Smart House will feature a single cable system for all wiring. This will allow new conveniences such as stereo speakers to work when plugged into any outlet in the house. A single sensor can do multiple security jobs, such as detecting intruders and turning off the lights when no one is home. When equipment is plugged into an outlet, a computer will provide the exact service requested.

The house can provide updated reports on energy use and cost to its owner by flashing the information on a television screen. Electric utilities also will receive useful information on energy consumption from the protype home. Safety is an integral part of the Electric Smart House, which will virtually eliminate the possibility of shock and electrical fire. The electrical outlets will provide power only when they receive a plug that is recognized by the home's computer system. If a child's finger or toy is inserted into the outlet, there will be no shock because there will be no electricity. Circuits, outlets or individual appliances will be designed to shut themselves off when they detect an electrical hazard such as damaged

Appliance repair also could be revolutionized by the Smart House. In case of a malfunction, a microprocessor on the appliance could communicate a diagnosis of the problem by telephone to a service center so that proper equipment and parts could be sent on the initial service call.

Concepts introduced in the Electric Smart House are expected to be available commercially by 1992 and will be applicable to homes at all price levels.

TEAMS tests set in Stanton ISD

District students in grades 3, 5, 7 and 9 will take the TEAMS test on Feb. 7 and 8, according to curriculum director Morris Williamson.
