Cheering Soviets cross border

By JOHN THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

TERMEZ, U.S.S.R. — The Red Army commander for Afghanistan today led the last contingent of his troops across a border bridge, ending for the Soviets a nine-year war that claimed the lives of 15,000 of their countrymen.

"That is it — this war has come to an end," a Moscow Radio correspondent said from the scene.

About 200 cheering, windburned soldiers, clutching automatic rifles and riding mud-spattered armored personnel carriers, roared across the steel bridge spanning the Amu Darya River just 40 minutes before the noon withdrawal deadline set by an accord signed in April.

"I wasn't looking back," said Lt. Gen. Boris Gromov, the commander, after the Red Army officially left Afghanistan's army alone to face Moslem guerrillas in a 10-year-old civil war.

He rode in the last armored personnel carrier and was met halfway across the bridge by his 14-year-old son, Maxim, who carried a bouquet of flowers.

Together, they walked the final yards to Termez.

The 45-year-old general, at times appearing near tears, was kissed by a soldier, then climbed atop an armored personnel carrier to be taken to a dusty hillside for the official welcoming ceremony.

Some at the ceremony said getting involved in a neighbor's civil war was a mistake.

"It was a clear error, so many died," said senior Sgt. Asgat Itusayinov, 22. He said Afghanistan was "a hell after which you fear nothing, except maybe yourself." The soldiers at the ceremony received watches sent on the orders of Defense Minister Dmitri T. Yazov.

Lt. Col. Igor Azarenok of the Defense Ministry said Gromov's group was the last to leave, ending what many Soviets have come to view as their Vietnam.

In Moscow, the Communist Party daily Pravda said Leonid Brezhnev's decision in 1979 to send troops to Afghanistan may have been an error. It suggested future commitments of Soviet forces abroad should be sanctioned by Parliament.

It called the withdrawal "the first step" toward peace in Afghanistan.

With Gromov and his troops gone, guerrilla leaders have predicted that major cities held by the Soviet-backed government will fall in a matter of weeks, if not days.

Autopsy report released: Tammy's death ruled homicide

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Eight months after her death, a final autopsy report on Tammy Lynn Gray, whose body was pulled from Lake Colorado City June 23, revealed that the 27-year-old Big Spring woman died from the combined effects of drowning and strangulation.

The manner of death is listed as homicide (injury by another).

The Big Spring Herald obtained a copy of the final autopsy report from Mitchell County Justice of the Peace Joan Merkett Tuesday afternoon in Colorado City.

Autopsy findings confirmed large areas hemorrhaging to the rear portion of Gray's vocal cords and to the esophagus and trachea.

There were 28 wounds on Gray's body — some measuring 1-to-1½ by five-eighths-inch in diameter, according to the autopsy report.

"Circumstances were initially suspicious . . . even so, the findings are sufficient to warrant classification as homicide," Dr. Peter E. Besant-Matthews, the pathologist who performed the autopsy, concluded in his report.

Besant-Matthews was unavailable for comment today, however, he said Monday that a man impersonating a Herald reporter contacted him last week about the status of the autopsy report.

The pathologist said he refused to speak to the caller. Mitchell County Assistant

TAMMY LYNN GRAY

District Attorney Glen Harrison said he has reviewed the autopsy report, but declined comment on a possible suspect.

He did say that a Mitchell County grand jury has already been convened and probably will be called later this month to hear evidence on Gray's death.

The Mitchell County sheriff's department has investigated Gray's death and Harrison said deputies could make an arrest "if they feel they have probable cause."

Asked Tuesday afternoon if an arrest was imminent, Mitchell

Proposed ordinance draws cries of 'fowl'

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council rejected a proposed new ordinance Tuesday night that would have allowed residents to keep an unlimited number of fowl in the city limits.

The vote ended in a 3-3 tie and the rejection means all fowl will be prohibited within the city limits — an ordinance that "has been on the books since the city kept records," City Attorney Jean Shotts said.

Council members Chuck Condray, Pat Deanda and D.W. Overman opposed the new ordinance.

Responding to a September request by the council, Shotts had revised the ordinance and stipulated that chickens and other fowl could be kept inside the city provided coops were kept clean. He also proposed that permits increase in price from $5 to $50.

The new proposals drew opposition from Sharon Smith who told council members the fee increase was "pretty steep and unreasonable."

Asked by Councilwoman Gail Earls what she considered reasonable, Smith said $15.

Smith also opposed the proposed requirement that coops not be located closer than 50 feet from residences, a stipulation she termed "irrelevant."

The council held September and January work sessions on the fowl issue.

Deanda said it was "ridiculous" to hold the first work session on the issue.

Condray advised other council members that the majority of citizens he spoke with were opposed to the proposed ordinance.

Big Spring florists recovering from Valentine's Day activity

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

Less than twelve hours after the official end of Valentine's Day, local florists were recovering from the crush of last minute sales and deliveries.

As expected, local flower shops, were bustling with frenzied activity on Tuesday. But the last minute rush at Added Touch Florist was greater than in past years said owner Delores Currie.

"The shoppers were later than usual this year," said Currie. "It seemed as if it suddenly dawned on them that it was Valentine's Day."

Currie's shop was not alone in experiencing the rush of late afternoon orders for Valentine's Day gifts. Several local flower shop owners and managers reported serving customers until as late as 6 p.m., and delivering flowers late into the evening.

Typically, according to the florists, men rather than women were the ones scurrying to place last minute orders.

At Jane's Flowers and Gifts, the latest Valentine's Day order wasn't placed last night, but rather this morning from a man who purchas-

"All in all the customers were wonderful . . . there are always one or two who complain . . . We had people in the store all day, and the phone was ringing off the hook. It's really frantic trying to get everything out when everyone wants it." — Jane Pherigo, florist ed an arrangement of roses in an effort to make amends for overlooking the holiday.

"He said, 'I forgot all about it,'" said Jane Pherigo, owner.

"I showed him the supply of doghouse cards we have, and he went and got one and filled it out."

Roses were hot items at Jane's, with the supply selling out at mid-afternoon Tuesday. "After that we went with plants, stuffed animals and gift items," she said.

Faye's Flowers sold out of roses late yesterday also, said Bill Draper, owner. The shop's "Love and Kisses Bouquet," an arrangement of spring flowers, was also a popular selection, he said.

"We sold a lot of dozens of roses, and a lot of singles but not a lot of in between," he said.

At Jane's, five trucks delivered flowers until 9 p.m., Pherigo said. But because of late orders and people who were not home, a few arrangements were being delivered today.

"All in all the customers were wonderful and very understanding," she said. "But there are always one or two who complain."

For those who come in late and expect miracles, Pherigo said, "I would really like for them to come and work here and be a part of what goes on during a Valentine's Day or Mother's Day. If they did, I don't feel they'd ever complain again."

Pherigo said workers at shop were recovering today from what is one of the most hectic days of the year for florists.

"We had people in the store all day, and the phone was ringing off the hook. It's really frantic trying to get everything out when everyone wants it."

AIDS discrimination suit heading for trial

AUSTIN (AP) — A former paralegal who alleges he was fired because he tested positive for an AIDS-related virus will have his day in court, a state district judge has ruled.

Retired Travis County District Judge James Meyers Tuesday denied a motion to dismiss the lawsuit against the Austin law firm, Clark Thomas Winters and Newton, brought by Gilbert Nieto, a former employee.

The case is scheduled for a jury trial beginning Feb. 27.

Nieto, 39, said Meyer's decision to allow the trial to proceed would give hope to thousands of Texans suffering from AIDS.

"It establishes that the law is going to provide some protection," Nieto said. "It's very important to people struggling with this disease."

Nieto, a San Antonio native, claims he was fired in 1987 after he tested positive for a virus related to acquired immune deficiency syndrome. In the lawsuit filed last August, Nieto seeks reinstatement to his position and unspecified monetary damages.

Attorneys for the firm contend Nieto was fired for taking off work in violation of his supervisor's instructions. Further, the firm contends Nieto does not qualify for special handicapped considerations because of his ailment.

But Meyers disagreed. "I think it's very close, but I'm going to deny the motion," Meyers said after listening to the law firm's argument that cited a 1987 case based on a narrow interpretation of the Texas Human Rights Act.

Nieto's suit is based, in part, on a state attorney general's opinion that people who are discriminated against because of perceived handicaps are protected by the law, even if they are not actually disabled.

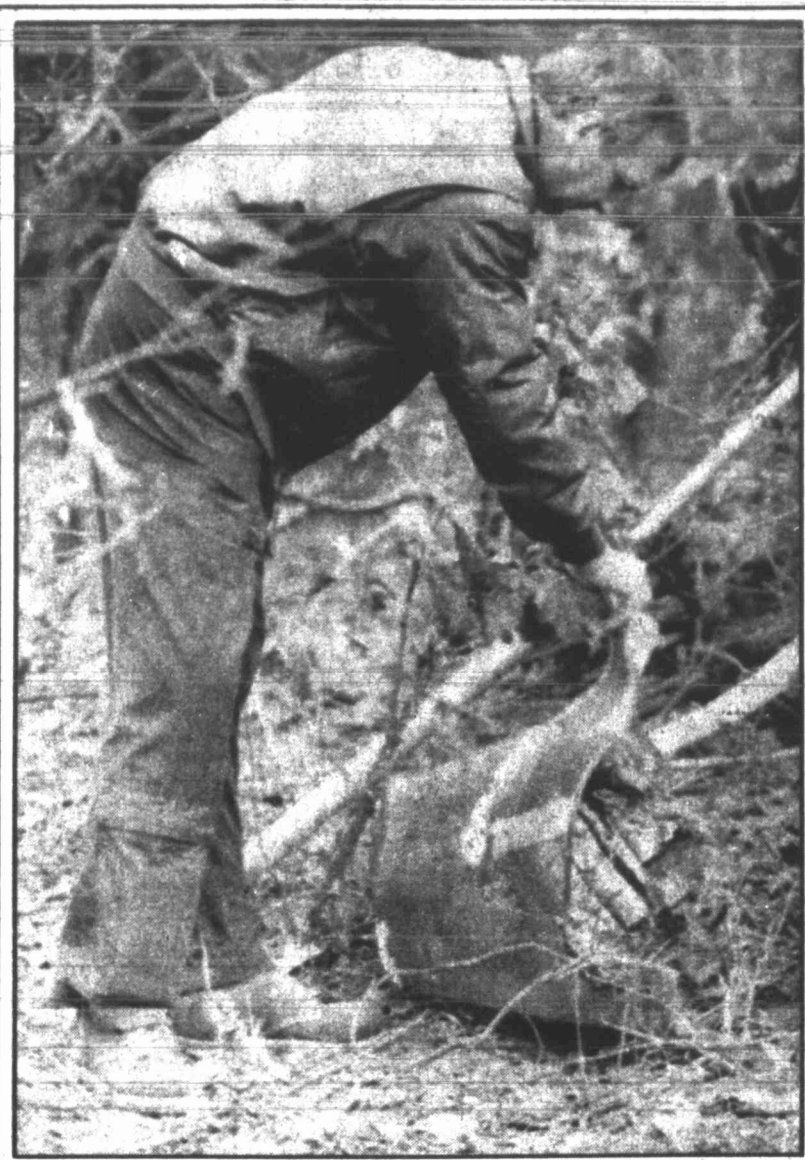

Austin attorney Charles Burton, representing the firm, had argued Nieto had no right to sue under state law. Burton based his motion to dismiss on a 1987 decision by the state Supreme Court, which narrowly interpreted the state human rights act to provide protection for the disabled only if they were so severely disabled they could not work anyway.

"He contends his affliction with the (AIDS) virus is a handicap," Burton said of Nieto. Yet "he had no impairment of an incapacitating nature."

Nieto's attorney, Phil Durst argued the fact that Nieto could have worked at least some of a normal workday "doesn't take us out of the statute but rather puts us within the four corners of it."

The case is expected to have important implications for thousands of Texans with AIDS-related conditions. The state Legislative Task Force on AIDS concluded last year that AIDS discrimination is common.

"This means you cannot fire someone for that reason," Durst said of the ruling.

Oil imports soar, production ebbs

Business

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. oil imports soared to more than 8 million barrels per day in January for the first time since 1980 as demand rose sharply and domestic production continued to dwindle, an industry trade group said today.

The American Petroleum Institute, which represents major oil producers and refiners, said U.S. oil production fell to 7.9 million barrels a day, a 3.4 percent drop from January 1988.

Production in Alaska, which had offset declines in other parts of the United States in recent years, slipped for the second straight month with no major new oil fields tapped, the Washington, D.C.-based group said in its monthly report.

Imports of oil surged to an average of 8.2 million barrels a day, an increase of 20.6 percent over the January 1988 level of 6.8 million barrels. It was the first month that imports averaged more than 8 million barrels since 1980, the API said.

The rise in imports and drop in domestic production has raised concerns about national security and other issues regarding U.S. dependence on foreign oil and many, mostly smaller, producers have called for some form of protective legislation.

Major oil companies, meanwhile, have been directing more of their exploration and production dollars overseas where they say oil is cheaper and easier to find. The API said the decline in Alaskan production is not evidence of a downward trend, although production in the area has stabilized in the last year with no major new fields coming on stream. About 25 percent of domestic production comes from Alaska.

The institute's latest report said demand for oil and oil products surged last month, with deliveries up more than 6 percent from the previous year for the third consecutive month. Approximately 18.3 million barrels a day of petroleum products were supplied in January, compared with 17.2 million barrels in January a year ago.

Despite the increase in imports, inventories fell 13 million barrels, or 2.3 percent, with part of the decline the result of higher refinery activity. Refinery utilization rose from a rate of 82.8 percent to 85.4 percent, the highest monthly level since 1979.

Gasoline deliveries jumped last month by 5.8 percent to a rate of 7 million barrels per day, compared with 6.68 million barrels in January 1988.

Home heating oil and diesel fuel, in the distillate category, rose 4.7 percent last month, while kerosene jet fuel rose 3.3 percent and residual oil was up 9.3 percent compared with the previous January.

Investigation ends in arrest of former narcotics officer

DALLAS (AP) — It took investigators four years to build a drug case against a retired Dallas Police narcotics officer because he was familiar with many investigative techniques, an investigator says.

Jackson Ray Martin, 47, who retired in 1982 after working four years in the narcotics division and also in the intelligence and tactical divisions, was arrested Tuesday on federal charges.

Martin was arrested at a construction site in Winnsboro, about 70 miles northeast of Dallas, where he was working. The charges against him include conspiracy to manufacture and distribute cocaine and interstate travel or transportation in aid of racketeering enterprises.

Deputy Dallas Police Chief Richard Hatler told the Dallas Morning News that Martin and other men allegedly supplied 110 pounds of cocaine to the Dallas area during the height of their operation several years ago.

The other man, Monte McCormick, was sent to prison in January 1987 following his conviction on drug charges. The investigation of his case led officers to evidence against Martin, Hatler said.

"When you work the business for a long time, you know how to get around the investigative techniques," said Sgt. Tom Wafer, who had investigated Martin since 1984.

"This is a guy who, because he was a narc, knew all the workings of the Police Department so well we had to work 10 times as hard. Wafer was selected to head the investigation, triggered by a telephone call to Crime Stoppers in 1984, because he was relatively unknown to Martin.

Although investigations by the narcotics division are highly secretive, special security procedures were required in the Martin investigation, Wafer said, because Martin still had friends in the division.

A federal grand jury in Fort Worth returned indictments against Martin last Thursday.

Wood County Sheriff Frank White said Martin did not offer any resistance when the large group of Dallas officers, DEA and Wood County officers arrived at the water-tower construction site Tuesday to arrest him.

"I just had a feeling you guys were after me," Martin was quoted as telling the officers upon their arrival.

After looking over the group of officers, White said, Martin said, "You didn't need them all."

"The last thing I would do is shoot down a cop (a gun) on another cop," Martin told the sheriff.

Officers said they found a hunting rifle and 69 marijuana plants 3 to 4 feet tall, nearly harvesting size, in a small rental home occupied by Martin in Winnsboro after they searched the home.

"The feds were searching for records and paperwork, so the plants were kind of gravy," the sheriff said.

White said state charges regarding the marijuana plants will likely be filed by Wood County authorities.

Report: Fire caused crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fire fed by a ruptured fuel line burned out critical control equipment of a B-1B jet that crashed in November in West Texas, Air Force investigators said.

The investigation, parts of which were made public Tuesday, also confirmed earlier reports from eyewitnesses that the pilot of the stricken plane probably saved several lives on the ground.

"But the in-flight fire and crash impact destroyed evidence necessary to further isolate the cause of the fire and the exact location of the fuel leak," the Air Force said.

A temporary grounding after the accident failed to locate any wing fuel line problems with the remainder of the B-1B fleet, but more frequent inspections will continue to be performed, the service added.

Capt. Michael E. Waters ordered his three crewmen to employ a manual ejection sequence — so that he would be left behind after they bailed out — and then flew the plane away from a populated area.

"Seeing that the aircraft was headed toward an inhabited area and observing an open field to the left, he pointed the aircraft in that direction, nosed the aircraft over 2 or 3 degrees and ejected," the report states.

The Air Force's Strategic Air Command, which is responsible for the manned bomber force, said its investigation of the Nov. 8 crash had ruled out any problem with the plane's General Electric Co. jet engines.

"A review of the maintenance personnel and supervision records, the remaining aircraft records and the testimony of maintenance personnel revealed no factors contributing to the mishap," the report adds.

The accident report does not explicitly address the question of whether an assembly-line problem could be responsible for the accident. But an Air Force official who declined to be identified said there was no evidence of any problem involving initial production.

The $280 million bomber went down last November in a field outside Abilene, Texas, while practicing "touch-and-go" landings at Dyess Air Force Base. While all four crewmen ejected safely, the plane was consumed by fire after crashing and declared a total loss.

All was normal on the flight until just after a touch-and-go landing around 3:20 p.m. CST. At this point, the plane's crew had been practicing such landings and approaches for almost two hours without incident.

As the bomber climbed skyward, though, ground observers clearly spotted flames and puffs of smoke on the left side of the plane. The report adds the crew didn't know there was a problem until the plane had flown about one-half mile from the runway and they suddenly heard a "loud bang coming from the back and left side of the aircraft."

Using data from the plane's computerized monitoring system, the investigators concluded the bang represented the start of a massive fuel leak, but they were unable to determine what caused the bang.

Hospital helicopter crashes; three killed

TYLER (AP) — As investigators searched the wreckage of a downed medical transport helicopter, Mother Frances Hospital officials today were expecting a replacement aircraft to arrive and keep the air ambulance program going.

The BK-117 twin-engine helicopter of the hospital's Flight for Life program crashed Monday night in rain and fog after striking a high-voltage power line and bursting into flames. A pilot and two nurses aboard were killed.

Dead are pilot Gerald Morgan, 46, of Houston, and nurses Kathryn Lea Ohnheiser, 31, of Haltom City, and Jeanne Lackey, 29, of Lindale, authorities said.

Mother Frances spokeswoman Bobbie Burks said Tuesday afternoon that the hospital had ordered another BK-117 to replace the one that crashed. The new aircraft could arrive as soon as today, she said.

"I like the philosophy," Ms. Burks said. "You get thrown off the horse. You get right back on."

The new helicopter will be leased from U.S. Jet Aviation of Washington, D.C., the same company that leased the hospital its previous helicopter, which went into service Nov. 29, 1988.

The Flight for Life program had made 700 flights between December 1985 and Nov. 29 without any accidents, Ms. Burks said.

The BK-117 had a 150-mile travel radius around Tyler. The majority of people it transported were heart patients, according to Ms. Burks.

When the air ambulance went down Monday night in muddy woodlands 1.5 miles south of Interstate 20, it was en route to Pittsburg, Texas, to pick up a cardiac patient. The patient later was brought to the hospital by ground transportation and was in stable condition Tuesday.

The helicopter team started its flight at 10:14 p.m. Five minutes later, the aircraft crashed after Morgan radioed back to the hospital that he was aborting the mission because of bad weather, authorities said.

Nothing further was heard from the crew, and it was confirmed shortly thereafter that it had gone down.

"We were laying in bed and about 10:18 we heard a helicopter come over and it was real low," said Tina McFarland. She and her husband, Tracy, were believed to be the first to contact authorities.

"To me it sounded funny. It sounded different," said Ms. McFarland. "A few minutes later — kaboom."

She said after she and her husband heard an explosion they looked out of their window and saw a red glow in the sky. Their home is located about one-quarter mile from the crash site.

Warren V. Wandel, air safety investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board, said his team of six, including a Federal Aviation Administration investigator, probably would remain at the crash site through today.

Trudging through the mud and woods, investigators photographed the wreckage, made diagrams of the site and recovered some of the helicopter's flight instruments.

Wandel said the helicopter was not equipped with a flight recorder as are some other types of aircraft.

Based on his initial investigation, Wandel said, the helicopter apparently struck the power line then hit the ground, causing the fuel cell beneath the aircraft to rupture, sparking a flash fire.

"I think it's safe to say they died instantly," Wandel said of the crew members aboard.

The wreckage was to be removed for storage late today or Thursday, investigators said. Another part of the investigation, which could take six months to a year, involves interviewing hospital officials and piecing together weather data.

Although the helicopter snapped a power line, causing damage to static arms atop three 125-foot-tall utility towers, electrical service was not disrupted, utility officials said.

News of the helicopter accident spread quickly through this East Texas city, as banks and savings and loans set up memorial funds for the victims' families and citizens sent memorial wreaths to the hospital.

Some of the wreaths were placed at the Flight for Life helipad, where lights were left on during the day in honor of the dead team members. Flags at the hospital flew at half-staff.

"The tough thing about this is this is a community. It's not just a hospital," Ms. Burks said. "It's just one of those things. You can't ask God questions."

City Finance Director Tom Ferguson received the "Certificate of Achievement" award presented by the U.S. Government General Finance Office for excellence in accounting.

Big Spring Attorney Drew Mouton informed the council that his accounting firm has hired a woman who is working five hours daily to collect delinquent property taxes.

Homicide

County Sheriff Wendell Bryant responded: "I'm not at liberty to say."

Bryant then said he would take action "when we feel like it" — and citing recent news articles on Gray's death — accused the newspaper of "interfering" with his department's investigation.

Gray was last seen alive leaving the Brass Nail II, located on U.S. 87, with her husband Travis Dale Gray early on the morning she died, according to Patsy Payne, Gray's mother.

Her blood alcohol level was .08 percent, according to toxicology reports. In Texas — as in most

He added that his office will be pursuing legal action against residents who have not complied with payment requests.

"By the end of February, we'll start moving with some lawsuits we've got going," Mouton explained.

In other business, Earls questioned the logic of approving the minutes of citizen advisory groups like the Traffic Commission if the council was not going to act on its recommendations.

"Why are they meeting and doing these things if we're not paying attention?" Earls inquired.

Ferguson explained that without council action, the recommendations made by citizen advisory commissions have no binding authority.

Evelyn Anderson, a member of the Traffic Commission, told the council she wanted action taken on three recommendations involving potential traffic-related hazards and the city staff was instructed to investigate the requests and report its findings for future consideration.

The council also approved the first reading of a resolution authorizing a "Lake Fest" to be held at Moss Creek Lake on Aug. 11 and 12, 1990.

The event — which features drag boat racing — will be sanctioned by the Southern Drag Boat Association.

Robbie Sanders, Big Spring, who is promoting the event, told the council he had originally planned to hold the event in late-July, but a scheduling conflict forced him to reconsider that date.

Councilman Sidney Clark — who underwent heart bypass surgery recently — was present last night after missing several meetings. D.D. Johnston was the only council member absent.

Bryant has previously said that Tammy Gray was pulled from a section of Lake Colorado City called Cooper's Cove and driven to Mitchell County Hospital where doctors unsuccessfully attempted to revive her.

She was pronounced dead by Dr. Dee Roach at 4:38 p.m., according to the death certificate.

Travis Dale Gray was briefly hospitalized for shock following the incident.

Tammy, an employee of First National Bank at the time of her death, filed for divorce from her husband in late April; however, she never completed the necessary legal requirements, according to Payne and Gray's attorney Hardy Wilkerson.

Tammy's two sons — Travis, 8, and Toby, 4 — are currently in their father's custody, Payne said.

"I'm stunned," she said Wednesday morning, after learning her daughter's death was ruled a homicide. She refused further comment until an arrest is made.

Allocations to mean 50 new West Texas jobs

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Federal funds totaling $8½ million have been allotted to build 1,000 communication and detector systems in Ward, Loving and Wink counties, 69th District State Rep. Troy Fraser (R-Big Spring) announced Tuesday night in Monahans.

The project will create 50 jobs and an unspecified number of construction-related positions, Fraser said.

Fraser, Dr. Hans Mark, chancellor of the University of Texas, made the announcement at a Monahans Chamber of Commerce event.

The project is being co-sponsored by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Mitre Corp., headquartered in Bedford, Mass.

Barry Horowitz, executive director of the Mitre Corp., was also present.

The company will begin installation of the systems immediately with completion scheduled for summer, 1990, Fraser said.

Fraser said the systems will be 20-foot high.

"The radar detectors can detect low-flying and military aircraft. It will also help to fight drug traffickers," Fraser noted.

"The West Texas counties were selected because they are totally flat and centrally located," Fraser said. "Besides the 50 jobs that will be created, we believe a number of construction jobs will also be created and the project will have a residual effect for all of West Texas."

Oil spill not insignificant

The oil spill off the coast of Antarctica is an event of staggering proportions. This is true not for the amount of oil lost from the sunken Argentine ship — by the standards of oil shippers, the spill of 250,000 gallons of diesel fuel in ocean waters is trivial — but for the devastating effects the oil will have on fish, birds and mammals. According to a spokesman for the first scientific research team to arrive on site since the Jan. 28 spill, "there is a consensus that the spill is going to have serious consequences."

The team counted nearly 30,000 penguins, 2,000 other birds and 230 mammals mainly seals, in the zone of the spill. Lichfield Island, declared a protected area in the 1975 Antarctic Treaty because of its unique species, is included in the zone. Within hours of the spill, oil had reached nearby bird-nesting areas. Perhaps most disturbing of all is the impact the spill is expected to have on krill, a shrimp-like crustacean that breeds in the area where the ship foundered and which forms a basic link in the Antarctic food chain.

Though one might be tempted to think that the animals and plants that live in such harsh climates are made of hardy stuff, nothing could be farther from the truth. In fact, the extreme cold of the region magnifies the impact of the oil spill; scientists say that wildlife and plants will need 100 times longer to recover from it than would species in more temperate areas.

As signers of the Antarctic Treaty consider a new draft agreement that would open the continent to mineral exploration, they should bear uppermost in mind the impact that the inevitable accidents attending such activity will have. Is the gain of a few days' or months' supply of oil or other resource worth risking Antarctica's fragile life forms? That may well be the trade-off — one the world would do well to avoid.

Rich richer, poor poorer is at core of raise dispute

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — When Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., stalked Manhattan as an FBI agent in 1940, he earned enough to afford a spacious downtown apartment overlooking Washington Square.

Today, most FBI agents in New York City commute to work from the suburbs. They can't afford to live in or near New York. And their clerks make about enough to rent a sidewalk steam vent in Manhattan.

The old maxim that the rich get richer and the poor get poorer is at the heart of the fight over pay raises for Congress and top government department heads.

While Congress was trying to coast to a 50 percent pay hike last week, the government's invisible force of secretaries, attorneys, chemists, engineers and other worker bees had special reason to be outraged. They will get a measly 4 percent pay boost this year.

The myopic side-effect of this disparity is that the U.S. government is finishing dead last in the nation's labor auction. Federal salaries are too low to attract top talent.

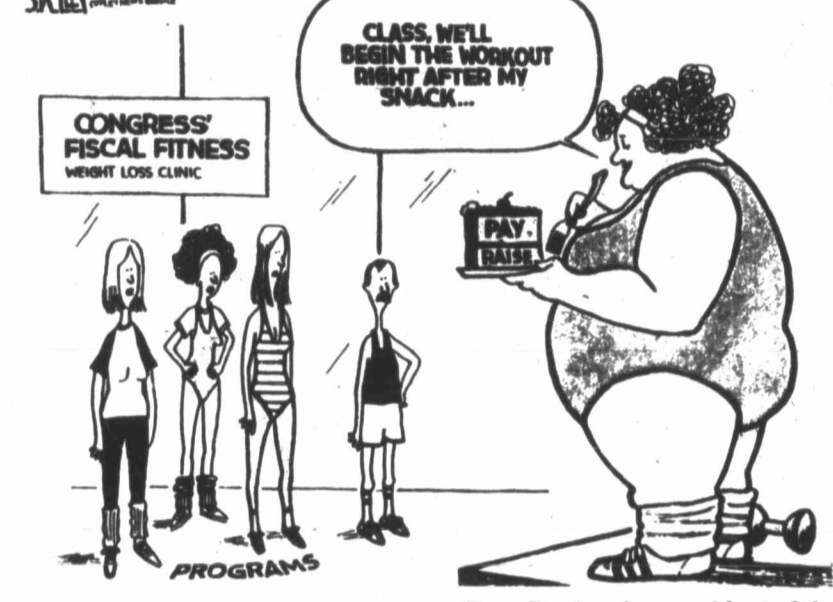

Government workers earn an average of 26 percent less than they would if they quit and took a comparable job in the private sector, according to a recent survey by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

For example, why would anyone aspire to be an FBI agent in California? A survey of 89 police departments in that state revealed that 83 of them pay a higher starting salary than the FBI. Edwards, the former agent who voted last week against the 50 percent pay raise for Congress, told our associate Jim Lynch that the low pay for FBI agents forces them either to moonlight or get out of the bureau.

Edwards chairs a House subcommittee that oversees FBI activities. He and other members of Congress have backed legislation to raise FBI salaries, especially in New York.

Clerks in the New York office start at about $13,500 a year — lunch money in the Big Apple. A congressional staffer, familiar with the problem, described how tough it is to find clerical help at that wage. "They go through 116 applicants to find one who can type, read and doesn't have a felony."

The pay gap between the public and private sectors continues to widen despite lip service from Congress, such as the Comparability Act of 1970 which mandated comparable salaries for government workers. For example:

— Starting attorneys working for Uncle Sam get $25,280 — 34 percent less than they would make in a private firm.
— A chemist starts at $15,737 for the government and more than $25,000 on the open market.
— The average Internal Revenue Service accountant makes 25 percent less than his or her private counterpart. Big Eight accounting firms only consider applicants who score in the top 14 percent of their Russ Davis, vice president of the union for Census Bureau employees in Washington, told us that about 25 percent of bureau employees come in at special pay rates. The bureau "had to offer special pay rates just to hope to lure them here at all," he said.

POST-STROESSNER STRESS — Paraguay without Gen. Alfredo Stroessner can't help but be a better place. But U.S. officials are withholding their judgement about Gen. Andres Rodriguez, who ousted Stroessner in a coup. Rodriguez has promised democratic reforms, but it will not be easy to restructure the government peacefully after 30 years of Stroessner's iron-fisted rule.

He was the most enduring of the Latin American dictators. We have exposed in the past how he corrupted his country by giving jobs to loyalists and jailing or exiling those who disagreed with him. Stroessner and his followers allowed Paraguay to be used as a haven for drug dealers, assassins and even Nazi war criminals. As if that weren't seamy enough, some top military and civilian officials were provided with pre-teen and teenage girls for sex.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Mikhail Gorbachev's annual salary was recently released by the Soviet press, and it's no mystery to us how the man lives on $28,000 a year: He gets free housing in Moscow, a little vacation place in the Crimea, breaks on food, free transportation, and he never has to stand in line to buy anything. The mystery is why George Bush gets similar perks, and more, and still needs a $200,000 salary.

Jack Anderson

class; the government settles for the top 46 percent. That means the person preparing a tax return is likely to be sharper than the person who checks to make sure that tax return is honest.

When Ronald Reagan took office in 1981, federal jobs paid about 13 percent less than their private equivalents. The gap doubled by the time Reagan left office. Instead of pay reform, the Reagan administration treated the problem with Band-aids. One patch-up measure is a special rate of pay when no one in their right mind would take the job at the regular pay scale.

Bush S&L financing looks nothing like a duck

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Bush's proposal to pay for a way out of the savings and loan crisis bears no resemblance to a duck, living or dead.

So it fits with his vow against new taxes, a campaign promise repeated as he sent his initial budget to Congress.

That doesn't mean that taxpayers won't wind up paying most of the S&L bill. One way or another they surely will. But it will be indirect, it probably won't hurt much, and they may not notice.

Bush said that reality has a plain fact: one way or another, the government has to get its money from the people. As individual taxpayers, as consumers, as shareholders, as savings depositors or as borrowers, the people wind up paying for any government spending.

Nevertheless, the S&L proposal gets past the duck test — budget director Richard Darman's guideline for determining whether a measure fits the promise that there will be no new taxes. If it looks like a duck, it's a duck. If it looks like a tax, it's a tax.

Debates about whether taxpayers or an industry are going to be assessed the cost of a program like the S&L bailout have more to do with semantics than with reality. There already is debate on that score about the Bush plan. At the same time, the president's proposal has gained applause because somebody, finally, has produced a plan to deal with the snowballing problem.

The S&L crisis was bequeathed to Bush by Ronald Reagan and his administration's deregulators, and to the new Democratic Congress by prior Democratic Congresses that let the issue ride rather than tangle with the powerful savings and loan lobby. Bush said he is more interested in solving the problem than in assessing blame for letting it happen.

He made his savings and loan proposal in advance of his nationally televised budget address to a joint session of Congress Thursday night, the equivalent of a first-year State of the Union message. Bush clearly wanted to isolate the S&L problem rather than see it packaged as a major feature of his domestic program.

Indeed, the president said that despite the huge price tag he would not let the savings and loan crisis "significantly alter our overall budget priorities."

"But nothing is without pain when you come to solve a problem of this magnitude," he said as he presented his plan on Tuesday. Nevertheless, the new administration crafted it to make it seem as painless as possible. That may have been overdone, as it already is prompting Democratic complaints about rigged accounting to make the price look lower and the budget look better.

When Bush personally presented his S&L formula, he said it would cost $90 billion. That grew in a hurry. The Office of Management and Budget disclosed a day later, without fanfare, that interest over the next decade would push the figure to at least $126 billion.

Over 30 years, the bailout is going to cost about $200 billion. But the Bush program is designed to minimize the impact on his revised budget. It actually would show about $200 million less for S&L rescues than the budget Reagan presented before leaving office. Actually, more money has to be spent, but it would be charged against the current budget instead of Bush's new one.

The Bush plan is to finance the rescue with a combination of general revenues — the taxpayer share of the cost — and higher fees on deposit insurance in all federally-insured savings institutions. For savings and loans, which already pay higher premiums, the increase would be 22 cents on each $1,000 in deposits. For banks, the increase would be 67 cents per $1,000.

While that's billed as a way to have the savings industry finance the plan, the cost could be passed on to customers.

"I believe that banks and thrifts should pay the real cost of providing the deposit insurance protection," Bush said. But he added "there's no guarantee" the added fees will not be passed along to consumers.

In fact, there is every prospect that they will be — although the prudent and politic course for an industry in such circumstances is to wait until the issue subsides and then add back the cost, gradually and quietly.

All this work is so tiring

By LEA WHITEHEAD
Staff Writer

I always show respect and reverence when in the presence of those with superior knowledge and skills.

I found myself in such a situation recently when I visited my son and his family in Houston and was exposed to their Vietnamese cleaning lady. This neatly groomed young woman arrived on the dot, and with hardly a word went about her duties.

She first gathered the laundry, sorted it and put in a load to wash. Next she removed the small area rugs (the house has hardwood floors) and rolled back the large Oriental rug under the dining table. Then, with a soft broom, she proceeded to sweep the floors, and followed this with a dust mop.

I observed that she moved furniture to clean beneath it. Furthermore, when cleaning the kitchen cabinet counter, she removed all the items on it, wiped the counter, then wiped each item before she put it back! This same unusual cleaning technique was used on dressers and end tables.

Then this female counterpart of Mr. Clean brought out the glass spray to attack mirrors, pictures and plate glass windows across the back of the house. I missed it, but somewhere along the way, another load of clothes found its way into the washing machine. And then she proceeded to vacuum those area rugs — but need I go on?

I am sure that the performance that I have just described came as quite a surprise to my son, who never learned anything like this at his mother's housemaid's knee. I had always favored a cleaning technique developed from my mother's system used when she heard unexpected company was coming. "I'll just hit the high places," she'd explain. This system so suited my time and temperament that I came to use it exclusively.

Another amazing thing about this cleaning lady's system is that she did not take any breaks. My system calls for coffee breaks on the hour, and frequent sitting breaks to observe my progress.

And to think she performs this same routine every week!

Well, about this time I had to retire to the guest room. Such a display of activity can be very tiring.

I've since wondered what Miss Vietnam would do if confronted with West Texas dust.

I suspect she'd throw in the dust towel on her cleaning career — or else we'd see the dust blowing back out the windows.

Computer ranked 30th top U.S. chess player

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Look to your pawns and pieces, human: The 30th-ranked chess player in the United States is a machine.

Deep Thought, a computer put together by graduate students "as a hobby kind of thing," came out of nowhere to beat Hitech, the world's top-rated chess-playing program at a computer chess tournament in November.

"Certainly a year ago, no one thought this was possible," Vince McCambridge, an international master and spokesman for the U.S. Chess Federation, said Friday.

"It brings the specter of a computer world chess champion by the end of the century closer to reality," said McCambridge, who has played Deep Thought to a draw.

Hitech, the erstwhile champion, was one of many formidable opponents Deep Thought beat at the Association of Computing Machinery Tournament in Orlando, Fla., winning its ranking as the 30th best chess player, human or mechanical, in the United States. Until that November tournament, Hitech, built by Carnegie Mellon University Professor Hans Berliner, had been the game's best electronic player.

Deep Thought, built by five Carnegie Mellon graduate students, lacks the chess knowledge that Berliner programmed into Hitech, but more than compensates by being almost six times faster at sorting through the myriad possibilities for moving pieces on the board.

Its speed allows it to look more moves ahead in the game.

Berliner was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

By achieving a rating of 2,551 under the U.S. Chess Federation system, Deep Thought also won the Fredkin Intermediate Prize for becoming the first machine to surpass the 2500 barrier. Hitech ranks just above 2,400; world champion Gary Kasparov of the Soviet Union, by comparison, ranks above 2,800.

The $10,000 prize money, to be awarded in Detroit in August, will be shared among Deep Thought's five creators.

Psychology professors: It's OK to count on your fingers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Schoolteachers have scolded children for counting with their fingers for decades, but some researchers say finger-counting can keep good students good and help not-so-good students become better.

Robert Siegler and Dennis Kerkman, Carnegie Mellon University psychology professors, say their studies show there's nothing wrong with finger-counting, and teachers probably should show their students how to do it correctly.

"They're going to do it anyway. Every teacher we've talked about this with has told us that telling children not to use their fingers doesn't work... We think children are right to do this because if you don't know the answer very well, then it's better to be right than to be wrong," Siegler said.

Good students rely on their memories more than not-so-good students or perfectionists to solve math and reading problems, according to a study of 80 children at an elementary school in suburban Monroeville.

When they couldn't remember an answer good students turn to backup methods, including sounding out words, using a dictionary, counting up from a number to add or down from a number to subtract — or using their fingers. Perfectionists used backup methods even when they could remember the answer, frequently taking longer to solve problems as a result, Siegler and Kerkman discovered.

Not-so-good students gave the most incorrect answers, as expected, but also displayed poor finger-counting skills. Poor students may do poor work because they are bad at backup strategies, including finger-counting, Siegler said.

"It's inefficient to be wrong, because you don't learn from it. If you do a problem and generate a wrong answer in arithmetic, there's nothing much to be learned. All that can happen is that you're going to connect that wrong answer to a problem, and that will harm the process of learning the right ones."

"The good students are the most efficient of the groups because they are able to proceed accurately and quickly. That's more efficient than performing accurately but slowly or inaccurately," Siegler said. "Perfectionists have to be very sure that an answer or data retrieved from memory is correct before they'll actually state it." Siegler has not studied why perfectionists don't have as much trust in their memories, but said anxiety may be a factor. There's nothing wrong with being a perfectionist, however.

Learn to be assertive

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the mother of a girl who had been taken advantage of by people for whom she baby-sat reminded me of a job I had in college.

A young couple got my name from a friend of mine and asked me to sit with their two children until midnight. They picked me up at my dorm, and when we got to their house I was informed that I was spending the night there so they wouldn't have to drive me home in the middle of the night!

Being the polite person I was taught to be, and needing the money, I slept in a nightgown the lady loaned me and spent the night there. The next morning the husband drove me back to my dorm where I found a dozen messages from my boyfriend back home. He was livid because I had been out all night. (He never did believe my story.) — ALSO TAKEN ADVANTAGE OF

DEAR ALSO: It may not help you much to be told now what you should have done, but for others who may find themselves in a similar predicament: Do not allow yourself to be manipulated. Speak up. Say, "I'm sorry, this isn't what I agreed to do, and I am unable to accommodate you." Period.

Learning assertiveness early in life may not be easy, but it will be a valuable lifelong asset.

DEAR ABBY: I have a beard, which I keep nicely trimmed and well-groomed. When I recently applied for a job as a salesperson in a large retail store, I was told that if I wanted to work there, I would have to shave off my beard. (I didn't like the idea, but I agreed to shave off my beard if they decided to hire me.)

Abby, this company is saying that bearded salesmen are not acceptable, but if bearded men want to shop there, they will be glad to take their money. I think companies that practice this kind of discrimination should be boycotted.

What is your opinion? — IRKED
DEAR IRKED: I think nicely trimmed, well-groomed beards are attractive, but I am not setting policy for employees in a place of business.

To refuse to hire a man because he has a beard is a form of discrimination, but it is the employer's right to hire salespeople who best represent the company's image.

The ball is in your court now. If you want the job, shave your beard. And if you don't want to shop there, it's your right to shop elsewhere.

DEAR ABBY: I must disagree with those who think applauding in a house of worship is disrespectful and unacceptable behavior. Hogwash! When my son was married, half an hour before the wedding we had a violent rainstorm that cut off all the electricity at our church. Of course, that meant there would be no organ music, so our priest instructed the guests to applaud the bride and groom as they entered and walked down the aisle. I don't believe God was offended.

'Rain Man' leads Oscar nominations

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Rain Man," a road movie featuring a scheming car salesman learning to love his autistic brother, topped nominations for the 61st Academy Awards today with eight nods, including best picture.

The movie also received nominations for Dustin Hoffman as best actor and best director for Barry Levinson.

Earning seven nominations each were "Dangerous Liaisons," a drama hinging on the bed-hopping seductions of the wealthy in pre-revolutionary France, and "Mississippi Burning," the controversial depiction of the FBI's investigation of the slaying of three civil rights workers in 1964.

Both were nominated for best picture, as were "The Accidental Tourist," an adaptation of Anne Tyler's acclaimed novel tracing the emotional journeys of a travel writer, and "Working Girl," a Cinderella tale of a secretary who battles her way up the corporate ladder.

Sigourney Weaver claimed a rare Oscar double nomination, for best actress for "Gorillas In The Mist: The Adventure of Dian Fossey" and best supporting actress for "Working Girl."

The nominations were announced in a pre-dawn news conference at the headquarters of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Oscar trophies will be presented March 29 at a 6 p.m. PST ceremony broadcast on ABC-TV.

Joining Weaver in the best actress competition were Glenn Close for "Dangerous Liaisons," Jodie Foster for "The Accused," Meryl Streep for "A Cry In The Dark," and, in her first Oscar nomination, Melanie Griffith for "Working Girl."

Their male counterparts, joining "Rain Man's" Hoffman were Gene Hackman, for "Mississippi Burning." He was joined by Oscar nominee newcomers Tom Hanks for "Big," Edward James Olmos for "Stand And Deliver," and veteran actor Max Von Sydow for Denmark's "Pelle The Conqueror."

In addition to Levinson's nomination for "Rain Man," best Pfeiffer for "Dangerous Liaisons," and "Working Girl's" Weaver.

Veteran actor Alec Guinness, co-star of "Little Dorrit," received a nomination for best supporting actor, as did Kevin Kline for "A Fish Called Wanda," Martin Landau for "Tucker: The Man And His Dream," River Phoenix for "Running On Empty," and Dean Stockwell for "Married To The Mob."

"Who Framed Roger Rabbit," the inventive comic blend of animation and live action, drew six nominations, but all of them for technical achievements. "Working Girl" also collected six nods, including best original song for Carly Simon's "Let The River Run."

Other multiple nominees included "Gorillas In The Mist," with five and "The Accidental Tourist" and "Die Hard," with four nominations.

Among the films and performers attracting little or no attention from the Academy were "A Cry In The Dark," and "Bull Durham," each collecting only one nomination.

"The Accidental Tourist's" William Hurt, nominated the last three years, was overlooked this year.

Also, there was no apparent backlash against "Mississippi Burning," widely criticized for rewriting the history of the civil rights movement.

Actress Weaver becomes the fifth performer named in two acting categories in the same year. Jessica Lange last performed the feat in 1982 with "Frances" and "Tootsie." The others were Fay Bainter in 1938, Teresa Wright in 1942, and Barry Fitzgerald in 1944.

Celebrate Canned Food Month

From the Canned Food Information Council

February is "Canned Food Month," and to celebrate, supermarkets across the country are offering special promotions and prices on canned foods. With the help of canned foods, dozens of elegant, delicious meals can be created quickly and easily. A wide variety of foods, including many seasonal items, are available year-round in cans.

Not only are canned foods convenient, but studies show them to be as nutritious as their fresh and frozen counterparts when prepared for the table. Unlike fresh produce, which can spoil before it's eaten, canned foods maintain excellent quality on the shelf for months after purchase. They are picked at the peak of ripeness and packed within hours of harvest to maintain their nutritional content.

CHICKEN JAMAICA

- 6-chicken breast halves, boned and skinned

- 1/2-cup water
- 1/2-cup sliced almonds, toasted
- Minced parsley

Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. Sprinkle both sides of chicken lightly with garlic powder and pepper; arrange in baking pan. Bake at 325 degrees F. until chicken is tender and juices run clear when chicken is pierced with a fork, 20 to 25 minutes. Heat pineapple, chili sauce, green pepper, onion, raisins and water to boiling in small saucepan; reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, until thickened, 15 to 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. ## On the road to equality

By JOSEPH REED

Tonight's menu is "PORK CHOP-VEGETABLE DELIGHT." We will be eating "high on the hog."

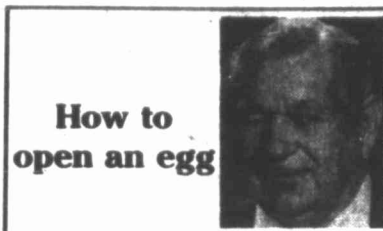

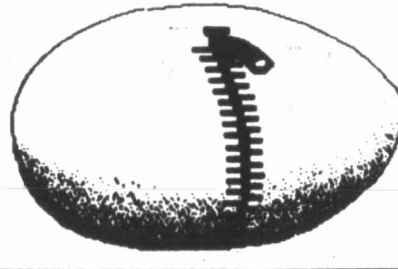

I know your wife has been saying you've lucked through breakfast and lunch and has been making snide remarks about the evening meal. Don't sweat it! I got you through two meals and I'll get you through dinner. By the time you've finished this cooking course, you'll be on the road to equality. Let's get busy.

I told you at the start, all meals could be prepared in an hour or less. I know most women will tell you that it can't be done. Trust me. I know what I'm talking about. For centuries, we men have fallen for that old propaganda about a hot stove. Don't you believe it! Cooking is delightful, fun and self satisfying. But, enough of the chit-chat. It's time to fix dinner.

Be sure to remember Cardinal Rule #1. Do not allow a female in the kitchen, even if you have to lock the doors.

Light the oven and set the thermostat on 350 degrees. While the oven is heating, assemble your ingredients. For this dinner you will need:

- Pork chops (4 one-inch thick)
- Carrots (four large)
- Brown gravy mix (dehydrated - 1 pkg.)
- Salt
- Onions (four medium)
- Pepper

How to open an egg

Now you begin. Preheat a large skillet over a medium flame. When the skillet is hot, grease lightly with meat fat, or cooking oil. Put in the chops and brown well on both sides. While the chops are browning, cut the carrots diagonally into about one inch slices. Peel and quarter the onions. After the chops are browned, sprinkle with about one teaspoon of salt. Put the carrot slices and onions on top. Mix the brown gravy mix with a cup of water. Pepper to suit taste. Personally, I like a lot of pepper. If it doesn't bite back, not enough pepper. Mix all this thoroughly together and pour over the chops. Cover the skillet and put into oven for approximately 50 minutes to one hour. That's all there is to it. You're going to serve a meal consisting of meat, vegetables and gravy. You couldn't ask for anything more.

Now, a warning to all you single men. Do not serve this dish to a girlfriend, unless you are very serious about the relationship. If you do, she will move heaven and earth to get you to the altar. If she tells her girlfriends, they will be tearing down your door. A word to the wise should be sufficient.

In the morning, breakfast will feature "Eggs D'Larripan." You will have the satisfaction of seeing the amazement on your wife's face when she realizes breakfast is probably better than the one's she's been fixing.

Food news

Q. How do you recommend stacking layers of cake before frosting?

A. Place first layer, rounded side down, on cake plate. Spread with about 1/2 cup frosting to within about 1/4-inch of the edge. Place second layer rounded side up so that flat sides are together.

Q. What's the best way to store oatmeal cookies?

A. For crisp oatmeal cookies, store in a loosely-covered container in a dry climate. Or in a damp, humid climate, store in tightly covered container. If your oatmeal cookies is soft and chewy, store in tightly-covered container to preserve moisture.

Q. What's the difference between baking powder and baking soda?

A. Baking powder has baking soda plus an acid - so when mixed with liquid produces carbon dioxide causing baked goods to rise.

Hawks almost a shoo-in; tough region for Steers

BY STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

With the Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball season winding down, the Howard College Hawks seem destined to make the regional tournament in Waco.

With their 95-89 win over New Mexico Military Institute, and Odessa College's win over Midland, Howard is a half game ahead of Midland. Howard is 9-5 with two games left and Midland is 8-5 with three games remaining.

The top four teams go to the regional playoffs and Odessa College and South Plains have the top two spots locked up, at 12-0 and 12-1 respectively. The two square off Thursday in Levelland.

Depending on their finish, the Hawks could go into the regional tournament as the No. 3 or 4 seed from the WJCAC. The Northern Junior College Athletic Conference also sends its top four teams to the tourney. If the Hawks finish third, they'll play the No. 2 seed from the NJCAC; if they finish fourth, they'll play the No. 1 seed.

Howard has two games left on the schedule: Western Texas at home Monday night; and South Plains on the road Thursday.

The Big Spring Steers are apparently headed toward their first district championship in 32 years, thanks to Pecos' 65-56 upset win over the No. 5 Andrews Mustangs last night. All the Steers have to do is beat lowly Fort Stockton Friday night. If that happens Big Spring will finish with a 13-1 record, and Andrews should finish at 12-2.

I've seen all the district teams play. I believe I'm as qualified as anybody to pick an all-district team, so here's my 4-4A All-District boys team.

First of all, the Player of the Year award goes to Big Spring's Abner Shellman for his overall consistent play. There may be some that get more rebounds and score more points, but none whose all-around ability rivals Shellman.

Steers coach Boyce Paxton gets the Coach of the Year award. Paxton took a team with less talent than he's had in the past three years and produced a district championship. It's not like Andrews' coach Frank Bice, who had an all-district player from Midland Lee transfer to his school this season.

Here is the starting lineup for the All-District team. Since there is no true center on this team, the three wing players are Tracey Brazier of Snyder, Carlton Clark of Monahans and Damon Clay of Andrews. One guard is Andrews' Gym Bice and Big Spring's Doug Young and Pecos' Bobby Ray Smith share the other guard spot.

And just think, Clark, an ex-Big Spring resident, almost transferred back to Big Spring this season. I can just imagine the versatile Clark in the Steers transition game. You remember Clark, don't you? He's the guy that hit 15 of 23 field goals and scored 42 points against Big Spring two weeks ago.

The Steers are in Region I, which is a tough 4-A region this year.

If Big Spring is the No. 1 seed, it will play District 1-4A runnerup Borger or Lubbock Dunbar. Andrews will play district champion Pampa, according to Steers coach Boyce Paxton.

In addition to his team, Paxton labels the other toughies in the region: Andrews; No. 2 Everman (27-3), from District 6-4A; No. 10 Brownwood (27-4) from 7-4A and Pflugerville (25-6) from 8-4A.

Speaking of tough regions, how about the one the Lady Steers are in? It features perennial powerhouse Levelland, and until this year, Canyon, before it dropped down to 3A.

With their win over Sweetwater Tuesday, the Lady Steers head into the state playoffs against 1-4A runnerup Dumas. It's a better draw than the past two seasons, when Big Spring faced No. 2 state-ranked Canyon in the opening round.

But the Lady Steers won't be able to avoid state-ranked teams for long. With a win over Dumas, Big Spring will probably play Pflugerville (29-1), currently ranked No. 2 in the state behind Levelland.

Looking futher into the future, a win over Pflugerville, would probably pit the Lady Steers against Levelland (30-1) for a trip to the state tournament.

Lady Steers take rubber match over 'Stangs

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

The third time definitely was the charm for Tami Wise — and the Big Spring Lady Steers.

Limited to 10 and 11 points in her two previous games against Sweetwater, Wise exploded for 25 points, with a 12-of-13 shooting performance, to lead the Lady Steers to a 50-41 victory over the Lady Mustangs Tuesday night in a district playoff game at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

With the win, Big Spring, now 26-3 for the season, clinched its third consecutive district 4-4A title and advances to play District 1-4A runner-up Dumas in the first round of the state playoffs at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Abernathy.

Sweetwater, led by Michelle McCain's 12 points, drops to 23-6 for the season. The Lady Mustangs will face District 1-4A champion Levelland — the state's top-ranked team — at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Garrett Coliseum.

Big Spring coach C.E. Carmichael was quick to admit that Wise's play made a difference in the game.

"I really thought privately that if Tami had a big game, we'd win," Carmichael said, "and that's exactly what happened. We ran two or three special plays designed to get the ball to her that we hadn't shown Sweetwater before."

For her part, Wise said she was determined to make amends for her previous sub-par showings against the Lady Mustangs.

"Mentally, I was just prepared and wanted to win," she said. "I think (Sweetwater didn't guard her as closely as before) a little. I think they payed closer attention to Peggy (Smith) this time... I just had it in my mind that I couldn't miss tonight."

Wise made her presence felt early in the game. With the score tied at 4-4, she keyed a 14-6 Big Spring run that gave the Lady Steers an 18-10 lead after one quarter.

The Lady Steers gradually stretched their lead early in the second, then two consecutive baskets from Wise gave them a 27-12 lead with 4:15 left in the half.

Sweetwater rallied, however, behind baskets by LaDawn

In earlier contests between the two teams, Big Spring had led at the half, only to watch the Lady Mustangs rally to tighten the gap — and the same thing happened in Coahoma Bulldogettes forward Paige Wilson (31) drives to the basket against Greenwood Rangerettes Shelly Mackey during first half action Tuesday night at Steer Gym.

Greenwood downs Bulldogettes

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
For the Herald

After spotting Greenwood a ten-point lead in the opening quarter, the Coahoma Bulldogettes came roaring back to take the lead at the end of three quarters. It was to no avail, however as the Rangerettes took home a 54-46 playoff win, capturing the district 7-3A title in Steer Gym Tuesday night.

Greenwood now advances to play Llano in the first round of the state playoffs, while Coahoma will take on Sonora. Both games are scheduled for Friday night in San Angelo.

With a large crowd in attendance, Rangerette Denise McMullan opened the scoring with 6:56 left in the opening quarter. Turnovers and early jitters hurt the Bulldogettes in the first stanza, and Greenwood took advantage of the miscues, building an early 10-0 with 2:45 left in the quarter. Senior Anne Dameron brought the Coahoma crowd back into the game, producing the Bulldogettes' only points of the quarter. Heading into the second period, Greenwood led, 10-4.

Coahoma jumped out with a 4-0 run early in the second quarter on a Kelly Williams' jumper and a Paula Clanton rebound and score. Clanton and Williams had eight and six points respectively in the period. Shelly Mackey countered with nine points and three rebounds for the Rangerettes. As the buzzer sounded ending the first half, the Rangerettes led Coahoma, 27-22.

The second half started with four early turnovers — two by each team — until Mackey hit for the Rangerettes. The Bulldogettes then rolled in 11 unanswered points before Greenwood could account another basket. Paige Wilson hit a three-pointer in the run that ended with the Bulldogettes leading, 33-31, entering the final quarter.

Greenwood closed the gap and regained the lead, however, as the Rangerettes, led by Tiffany Long, began chewing time off the clock and hitting insurance baskets.

The Rangerettes outscored Coahoma, 23-13, in the final quarter to earn the district championship.

water's comeback. Stephanie Smith responded to the threat by scoring consecutive field goals to put Big Spring back up by eight, 35-27, going into the fourth quarter.

Wise — who was whistled for her fourth foul late in the third quarter — scored Big Spring's first six points of the last quarter to give the Lady Steers a 41-33 lead with six minutes remaining — and then Big Spring's defense took control of the game.

Wise, Gisila Spears and Jennifer Hendleman did yeoman's work under the boards in the final minutes, and sisters Peggy and Stephanie Smith displayed fine perimeter defense to prevent any long-range Sweetwater goals.

Stephanie Smith and McCain traded baskets before Spears nailed a short jumper to give Big Spring a 45-35 lead with four minutes remaining.

From there, Hendleman scored four points and Peggy Smith added a free throw to ice the game for Big Spring.

After the game, Carmichael credited the large crowd — estimated by coliseum officials at 2,200 — for giving his team added impetus.

"I thought the turnout and support was super and made a difference," he said. "The girls saw that and responded."

Carmichael also praised his team's effort for the past month.

"The main thing is, the last month has been the difference for all us," he said. "First, we got beat down there (Sweetwater), then had to take it one game at a time. Then, we beat Sweetwater last week and again tonight... The girls did a good job of handling the pressure."

"If we can put a whole game together like we did in stretches tonight, we can play with anybody," Carmichael added.

SWEETWATER (41) — LaTanya Gatson 0 0 0; Leatha Atkins 1 0 2; Nikki Heath 4 2 10; LaDawn Puckett 2 0 5; Jennifer Ritchey 1 0 2; Michelle McCain 5 2 12; Pam McNary 3 2 8; Juanelle Saddler 1 0 2; totals 17 6 41. SCORE BY QUARTERS: Sweetwater 10 9 8 14—41; Big Spring 18 9 8 15—50. 3-point goals — Puckett, P. Smith; Total fouls — Sweetwater 14, Big Spring 8; Fouled out — Puckett.

Steers edge closer to 4-4A crown

SAN ANGELO — The Big Spring Steers are one win away from the outright District 4-4A basketball championship. Big Spring beat the San Angelo Lake View Chiefs 87-71, combined with Pecos' 65-56 win over Andrews, the Steers can win the district title outright with a win over Fort Stockton in the regular season finale Friday.

With the win, Big Spring pushes its season record to 19-11 for the season and 12-1, Andrews is one game back at 11-2.

The Chiefs gave the Steers all they wanted in the first half of play, Big Spring led 42-40 at the half. Lake View stayed close behind the scoring of guard Tony Allen, who scored all 20 of his points in the first half.

But Steer guard Doug Young took control of the contest at the start of the third quarter, and Chris Cole went to work on Allen. Young, who hit three three-pointers in the game, scored 13 of his game-high 31 points in the third quarter. Cole, a reserve guard, held Allen scoreless.

Queens hosting Frank Phillips

The Howard College Hawk-Queens will be in action Thursday night when they host the Frank Phillips Lady Plainswomen at 6 p.m. in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

This will be two team's second meeting in the last six days. Last Friday Frank Phillips edged the Queens 91-85 in overtime. In that game guard Stefanie Fetcher led Howard with 21 points. Forward Linda Waters scored 17.

Howard is 12-15 overall and 2-7 in league play. Frank Phillips is 5-3 in league play.

Mavs trade moody superstar

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks today traded forward Mark Aguirre to the Detroit Pistons in exchange for forward Adrian Dantley and the Pistons' first-round draft choice in 1991.

If the Mavericks take part in the 1989-90 Western Conference finals, the Pistons also would receive Cleveland's 1989 second-round draft pick, obtained by Dallas in June 1986 in exchange for Mark Price. The Pistons also would receive the Mavericks' 1991 second-round draft choice, according to a statement released by the Mavericks.

"The trade of Mark Aguirre from the Dallas Mavericks became inevitable," said Mavericks Chief Officer and General Manager Norm Sonju. "It was important to us to attempt to replace his scoring, because when Mark's game is on he's a very effective scorer, both from the low post and outside."

Coogs 16-A champs

GAIL — The Klondike Cougars made a furious fourth quarter rally and nipped the Sands Mustangs 66-65 in a thrilling 16-A district playoff game.

With the win, the Cougars, 18-11 for the season, advance to the state playoffs as the No. 1 seed from the district. Sands, 21-7 for the season, has to play O'Donnell Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Borden County gym to decide the district runnerup. Klondike beat O'Donnell 65-64 in an extra district playoff game Friday.

The Cougars made a remarkable comeback, trailing 56-38 going into the final quarter. But a relentless press and the hot shooting of Steve Cope got the Coogs back into the game. Cope tallied 14 of his 19 points in the quarter.

"If I could bottle it up and sell it,

"I'd be a millionaire," said Klondike coach Mark Styles of his team's fourth quarter comeback. "We went to the press just before the end of the third quarter. With five minutes left in the game we were still down by 17. This was the first time this has ever happened (made up as many points in as short of time)."

"We really didn't shoot bad in the first half (11-22) but they were knocking the eyes out of the basket. Johnston (Sands leading scorer Jay Johnston) hit six three-pointers in the first half."

Johnston led Sands to a 34-26 halftime lead, as Johnston had pumped in 24 points.

In the fourth quarter Klondike gradually battled back, tying the game at 64-64 on a three-pointer by Clint Kirkland with eight seconds remaining. Next Sands' Johnston was fouled with three seconds remaining. He made the first attempt, missed the second attempt, but Cope was fouled on the rebound with one second left.

The Klondike senior made both foul attempts, propelling the Coogs to the bi-district playoffs against the Wink Wildcats.

The Cougars will play the Wildcats either next Thursday, Friday or Saturday.

Wolves vault into playoffs

MIDLAND — The Colorado City Wolves made a complete turnaround from three days ago by defeating the Kermit Yellowjackets 63-60 in an extra District 7-3A playoff game here at Lee gym.

The extra game was forced when Kermit defeated Colorado City 69-53 Friday night in Colorado City, forcing a tie for second.

"Aggressiveness, that was the key," said Colorado City coach Cuick Claxton of his team's turnaround. "We had to get physical and we did. Everybody contributed, they had to because we got in foul trouble early."

The Wolves were paced by the hot shooting of senior guard Pat Ridge, who scored a season-high 24 points, including four three-pointers. Mark Russell followed Ridge with 14 points. Dane Hoover and Bubba Bailey got 10 rebounds while Paul Ausbie hauled down nine cars.

Leading by as much as 10 points, the Wolves had to hold off a late Kermit rally. Ridge made two foul shots, giving C-City a 63-60 lead with 34 seconds left. Kermit couldn't convert and Colorado City turned the ball over, the Yellowjackets got off a three-point attempt that bounced off the rim.

The Wolves are 12-14 for the season. They will play either Brady or Fredricksburg possibly Friday in San Angelo.

Auto racing notes

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Kyle Petty has more riding on the Daytona 500 than simply becoming the third generation of his family to win NASCAR's richest and most important race.

Lee Petty, Kyle's grandfather, won the inaugural Daytona 500 in 1959. Kyle's father Richard has won the race a record seven times. The younger Petty has two Winston Cup victories to his credit, but in eight Daytona 500 starts his best showing was 16th in 1986.

Kyle will be driving a Pontiac Grand Prix for the new SABCO team of North Carolina businessmen Felix Sabates and Ted Condar when the green flag falls Sunday at Daytona International Speedway.

If he should overcome the odds and win the $1.7 million race, Petty will find a 1988 blood red Ferrari Mondial Cabriolet parked in his High Point, N.C., driveway when he arrives home next week.

"First of all, any driver wants to win Daytona so bad he can't see straight," Petty said. "But, it's true that I've got a lot of special motivation this year."

The Ferrari deal came together after Petty met Sabates. "The first time I met Felix, he was driving it, and I said I've always wanted one. A couple of months later, after I signed ... Felix asked if I could win Daytona. With Gary Nelson doing our cars, the answer was easy. Felix said the Ferrari is mine if we do."

As if he didn't have enough incentive to race hard Sunday, his 3-year-old daughter Montgomery Leigh, has given him more.

"Almost every night when I was putting her to bed, she'd say, 'When are we going to Daytona to get that car Daddy?'"

Another Petty, Richard's brother Maurice, surfaced recently after keeping a very low profile since retiring from racing several years ago.

Maurice, called Chief by his family and friends, spent most of his racing career as Richard's car and engine-builder.

Several weeks ago, NASCAR announced the formation of a new Sportsman racing division.

Petty already has begun construction of a car for his son Ritchie to drive in the inaugural Sportsman race, a 150-mile event on May 24 at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"The Sportsman series will fill one of stock car racing's greatest needs," Petty said. "Now, many racers will have a previously unavailable opportunity to show their potential in an inexpensive way."

"Until now, the day was long past when a young ambitious racer could run his local short track on Saturday night, pull his engine, stick it in his Sportsman car and head off to run at Charlotte Motor Speedway. This new concept will give a lot of promising talent a chance they simply could not have afforded any other way."

No competitor with five or more Winston Cup and/or Grand National starts will be eligible to race in the new division.

H.A. "Humpty" Wheeler, president of the Charlotte track, said he expects it will cost drivers less than $20,000 to prepare a car for the first Sportsman race.

"With a lot of ingenuity, they could get there for even less," he said.

The entire 15-race CART-PPG Indy-car series will be aired on network television for the seventh consecutive year.

The Indy-car sanctioning body says ESPN will carry six races, ABC five, NBC three and CBS will cover the first Indy-car event in Detroit, which also will be the first

$1 million CART event.

The Indianapolis 500, which is televised live by ABC, has paid more than $1 million for a decade, but, even though the race counts in CART's season points, it is sanctioned by USAC.

Junior Johnson, a longtime NASCAR racing star and now one of the premier car-owners in the series, likes the way his current driver, Terry Labonte, thinks. Labonte replaced Darrell Waltrip in Johnson's driver's seat in 1987.

"When we was runnin' in Talladega the second race that year, Terry was sittin' there runnin' second behind Bill Elliott. All he had to do was sit there and he'd have finished second."

"But he tried to pass Bill and wound up sixth. All our (crew) guys got upset with Terry. They said, 'If he'd just sat there in second place, he had it sewed up.'"

"Well, I think Terry did the right thing because if you went to Talladega to finish second, you should never try to win it. And I told Terry that. I said, 'The time I see you runnin' second instead of trying to win, that's when I'm gonna be made at you.'" eight points in an 11-2 Big Spring run.

Shellman followed Young with 21 points. Junior post player Joe Downey added 17 points. Thane Russey scored nine points.

Allen was Lake View's, who falls to 13-17 and 4-9, leading scorer.

"The kids rose to occasion tonight," said Steers coach Boyce Paxton after the game. "Joe Downey came out smoking. I think he scored 10 points in the first quarter. Another big factor was the defensive play of Chris Cole. We put him on Allen the second half, and he shut him down. This game Friday against Fort Stockton is more meaningful because we can win the district championship.

"For anyone thinking we backed into a district championship, we split with Andrews and didn't lose to Pecos, and they (Andrews) did."

The junior varsity Steers downed Lake View 55-39 behind Neal Mayfield's 12 points. Chad Rudd and Wendell Smith scored nine points each. The Steer JV is 6-7 and 9-18.

Big Spring will play in Fort Stockton Friday at 6 and 7:30 p.m.

Weather

By The Associated Press
Moist air from the Gulf of Mexico spread heavy rains from Texas to West Virginia this morning, worsening floods in Illinois and Kentucky, and dropped freezing rain and snow on the central Plains.
Rain was heaviest in Kentucky, Arkansas and Missouri. Since Sunday night, extreme southern Illinois and western Kentucky have had as much as 7 inches of rain.
In six hours ending at 1 a.m. EST, Bowling Green, Ky., received more than an inch of rain and Jonesboro, Ark., recorded nearly an inch. In the preceding 24 hours, Nashville, Tenn., was deluged with nearly 4 1/2 inches.

Rain and thunderstorms were widespread from West Texas to central and northern Arkansas, and rain covered much of the lower Ohio Valley.
Flash flood watches remained in effect in northeast Texas, much of Arkansas and Missouri, eastern Tennessee, Kentucky, southern Illinois, southern Indiana, southern Ohio and northern West Virginia.
Further north, the moisture turned to freezing rain and snow, glazing highways from Kansas to Illinois. Winter weather advisories were posted in eastern and south central Kansas and central and northern Missouri, and a snow advisory was issued for southeast Iowa, where up to 3 inches was expected.

Light snow also fell in the northern Plains, northeast Minnesota and northwest Wisconsin, where a fresh wave of arctic air was expected to drop temperatures into single digits.
Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from northwest Texas to the lower Mississippi Valley; rain in the Tennessee and Ohio valleys, and from the central Appalachians to southern New England; and scattered snow in the northern Rockies, south central Kansas, northern Missouri and southeast Iowa, and from the upper Great Lakes to northern New England.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1989

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This is not the best time for a legal confrontation. Great rewards lie ahead if you exercise patience when making career choices. A mystery intrigues you. Probe deeper.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Money could become an obsession if you are not careful. Your public loves you. Allow greater give-and-take in a relationship and a rift will mend quickly. Avoid harsh criticisms.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Intense emotions may swamp you for the moment. Stay out of debt by limiting credit card use. Eagerly pursue a job that offers both travel and a large expense account.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): There is safety in numbers today.

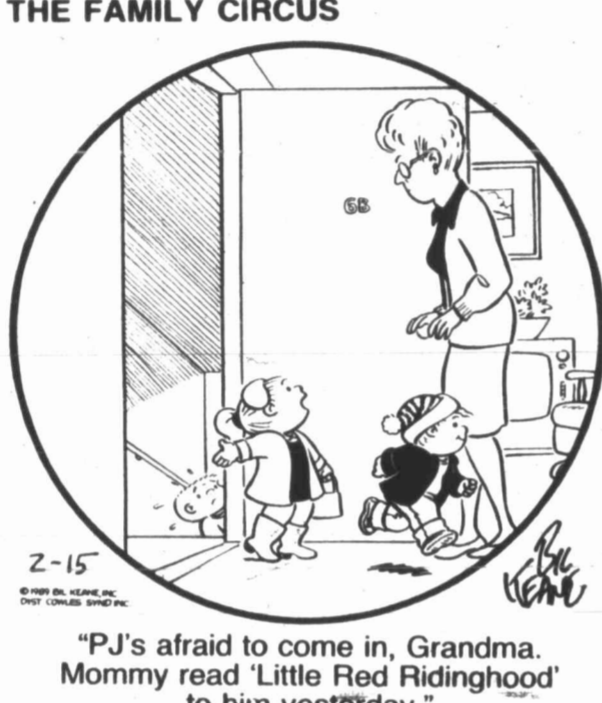

Your playful attitude toward romance takes the emotional pressure off a relationship. A serene environment helps you turn in top work performance. Show a becoming modesty.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Shared values are essential if a relationship is to last. Your performance on the job is related to the state of your personal life. Steer clear of gossiping people. Keep your own counsel.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance takes a backseat today; you are caught up in a whirlwind of other concerns related to your work. Be alert to hazards when making home repairs by yourself. Observe safety rules.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Overtures from partner make you purr today. If married, you may be thinking about expanding your family. Developing new intellectual interests will make you a more interesting conversationalist. Keep up with current affairs.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It may be time to end a relationship that is draining your energy. Your sense of humor returns following an emotional blow-up. The element of surprise helps you move in the right direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friends are great allies, but they also provide distractions you do not need right now. A close relationship takes a confusing turn. Curb an urge to act impulsively. Take a wait-and-see approach.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your life seems more settled now. A financial windfall reduces day-to-day pressures. You find a practical answer to a complex problem. Travel proves invigorating. Follow up on an important introduction.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not neglect the spiritual side of your life. Remember your roots. Self-improvement projects enjoy highly favorable influences. Show off your communication skills. Make this a time of learning.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your position at work looks safe, unless you do something really out of line. Plan a vacation near water. The more beauty there is around you, the happier you will be.

Federal report: Supercollider site selection fair

By PETER ROPER
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Three months after the Energy Department selected Texas to be the site for the $4.4 billion Superconducting Super Collider, a new federal study says the selection process was fair despite complaints of favoritism.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative agency for Congress, completed a study early this month that indicates federal officials tried to be objective in narrowing the list of 37 site applications to the very best.

After former Energy Secretary

John Herrington picked a Texas site near Dallas from a list of seven finalists, lawmakers in Congress — particularly Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill. — lashed out in protest, claiming Illinois and other finalists did not get a fair review of their applications.

GAO investigators, however, interviewed the 21 scientific advisers and reviewers who analyzed the site applications and concluded they "used the (Energy) department's site selection criteria in their order of importance and the process was fair."

The major complaint from the losing states was that Energy Department officials did not spell out what criteria would be considered most important when selecting the site for the 53-mile long, underground atomic particle accelerator.

Federal officials invited site proposals in early 1987 and said geology (for ease of tunneling and stability), research facilities, availability of utilities, and support services would be the major factors that determined the final selection.

The result was many states, including Colorado, Ohio, California, and Illinois, launched intensive task forces that cost between $700,000 and $2.4 million each to prepare site applications.

When the submission deadline arrived in December 1987, 42 proposals were submitted, and quickly reduced to 35 comprehensive applications. A 21-member panel of experts from the National Academies of Science and Engineering were selected to review the applications and pare them to a handful of finalists. The result was seven competing applications from Texas, Michigan, Illinois, Colorado, Arizona, North Carolina, and Tennessee.

GAO investigators said that interviews with the scientific advisers indicated they had a clear idea of the Energy Department's priorities in reviewing the applications. The only flaw in the process, according to the study, is that the review was made in less than a year and experts did not visit any of the sites, choosing to rely on staff analysis.

Reviewing the entire process, however, GAO officials said they had no reason "to disagree" with the selection process.

'Middle of nowhere museum'

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer

JENNINGS, La. — A Van Dyke self-portrait seems to be looking down his nose at his unlikely surroundings in a little-known museum tucked away in an old house in this rural south Louisiana town, not too far from grazing cows.

"A lot of people come in here with (a puzzled) expression," said Delores Spears, director of the Zigler Museum. "They want to know how all of this got to the middle of nowhere."

The Van Dyke is in good company, just down the wall from a Rembrandt, a Whistler, a Sir Joshua Reynolds and dozens of other works by noted artists dating from the 17th century.

Just off Interstate 10, 40 miles from the southeast Texas border, Jennings was the home of Fred and Ruth Zigler, who had a fortune and no heirs. They decided to leave a legacy to the area they loved.

Zigler's father had moved from the landlocked Dakotas at the turn of the century and made millions in shipbuilding, real estate, oil and gas and other interests.

The Zigler legacy included a museum foundation and a separate foundation that grants full college scholarships each year to deserving students — one from each high school in the area. That foundation also provides grants to charitable organizations, including the museum foundation, which has a smaller endowment.

Since 1960 when Fred Zigler died, the education foundation has granted $1 million in scholarships. Grants to other organizations total $3.5 million.

"That's really an economic boost when you take into account what has happened in this parish," said Richard Boisture, a member of the museum foundation. The parish — similar to other states' counties — once fat and sassy from oil, gas and shipbuilding, fell on hard times in 1980 with the decline of the oil patch. Unemployment exceeds 13 percent.

"The money helps the kids, the community and all I can say is 'Thank God for the Ziglers,'" said Boisture.

Before she died in 1974, Mrs. Zigler left the old family home to the museum foundation. Two wings have been added to the two-story columned mansion to handle the growing collection, which now totals more than 150 pieces of art.

Thanks to the education foundation, the museum was able to purchase the Van Dyke in 1984 for about $125,000.

"We took it out of the crate and it was almost an emotional thing," said Boisture. "His hair looks like you could touch it and feel the softness. He looks like he's almost glancing back with disdain at someone."

Judicial selection underscored by Texas chief justice

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Chief Justice Tom Phillips of the state Supreme Court says Texas judges should make more money. Apparently no argument there.

But changing the current system of partisan election of judges? Wait just a minute, some say.

Phillips, the first Republican elected chief justice this century, said Tuesday judicial selection is the most important issue facing the judiciary.

In his first state of the judiciary speech to the Legislature, Phillips said a system of appointing judges, who would then periodically stand unopposed before voters "is an idea whose time has come."

The so-called merit election plan would require a state constitutional amendment, approved by legislators and the voters at a statewide election. Phillips said a majority of the nine-member Supreme Court favors a retention election plan.

"Merit election is used by more states than any other method of judicial selection, and no state has ever abandoned the system after adopting it," he said.

The proposal was endorsed Tuesday by Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, but drew criticism from Supreme Court Justice Oscar Mauzy, who said Phillips was trying to "pull the gang-plank up behind him, protecting himself forever from any meaningful electoral challenge."

Hobby said, "His remarks about judicial selection — I'm in complete agreement with. However you want to put it. I think that's long overdue." Clements said, "I certainly applaud the chief justice's remarks — I think he's right on target. And hopefully this will be the beginning of a real strenuous campaign to change the way that we select our judges."

Mauzy, a former Democratic state senator from Dallas, said the selection system endorsed by Phillips is one "under which all judges would be appointed in a backroom process controlled by special interests and then, after the fact, those appointments would be submitted to the voters for meaningless rubber-stamping."

Mauzy told a news conference if the Legislature and voters can be persuaded to adopt "an appointment-retention election" system, Justice Phillips will have secured a lifetime appointment, never having to run an opposed election again.

The system proposed by Phillips "is also replete with built-in abuses, corruption and misconduct of various types," Mauzy said.

"Plainly, the appointive system does not take politics out of the system, it simply takes the voters out of the system," he said.

State Sen. Bob Glasgow, chairman of the Senate Jurisprudence Committee, agreed with Phillips that judges need a pay raise, but said retention elections could make the judiciary more political.

"We need to have an independent judiciary with judges that have the fortitude and the honesty and the courage to enforce the law," said Glasgow, D-Stephenville.

Sen. Frank Tejeda, a longtime proponent of judicial reform, said he favored the retention election plan outlined by Phillips, but doubted if the Legislature would place the issue on the ballot.

Such a proposal would have "a very tough row to hoe," said Tejeda, D-San Antonio.

Rail crossings Industry, union threatening to collide

By BOB MITCHELL
Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Motorists who pay close attention to lights and gates at railroad crossings may soon be joined by another interested party: Uncle Sam.

The federal government is considering whether to develop national standards for inspecting, testing and maintaining the signals that warn motorists of an approaching train on road-level tracks.

The issue pits the railroad industry, which opposes federal standards for signal inspection as unnecessary, against rail unions that argue the industry is not doing an adequate job maintaining crossing signals.

Twice before, most recently in 1984, the federal government rejected calls to issue regulations covering inspection and maintenance of crossing signals.

But Congress ordered the Federal Railroad Administration to review the matter again and issue regulations if necessary when it passed the Rail Safety Improvement Act last year.

The Association of American Railroads, the lobbying group for the nation's largest rail lines, argues that accidents at intersections with grade-crossing signals have dropped sharply since 1975.

Agency officials are studying comments received on the proposal but have made no decisions yet, spokesman Lou Brott said. The design and location of crossing signals is already regulated by the federal government.

All told, the industry is estimated to spend more than $100 million annually on signal maintenance. Unions take this as evidence of a need for federal regulation, while the industry says it means federal guidelines would add unnecessary costs given the low number of signal-related accidents.

Unions representing railroad workers presented federal officials with 12 volumes of testimony to back up their case during two days of hearings conducted by the FRA late last year.

"Clearly there is a problem, and there is a need to take swift and responsible action to correct an unacceptable trend of increased deaths and injuries caused by train-vehicle accidents at grade crossings," said V.M. Speakman Jr., president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen.

In his testimony, Speakman said accidents and deaths at grade crossings with signals are on the rise. Deaths at such intersections were projected to have increased

Unions representing railroad workers presented federal officials with 12 volumes of testimony to back up their case during two days of hearings conducted by the FRA late last year.

20 percent between 1985 and 1988, he said, while the number of accidents at such locations is also increasing.

Safety problems at such intersections are aggravated by a related problem, Speakman said: Malfunctions that lead motorists to ignore signals.

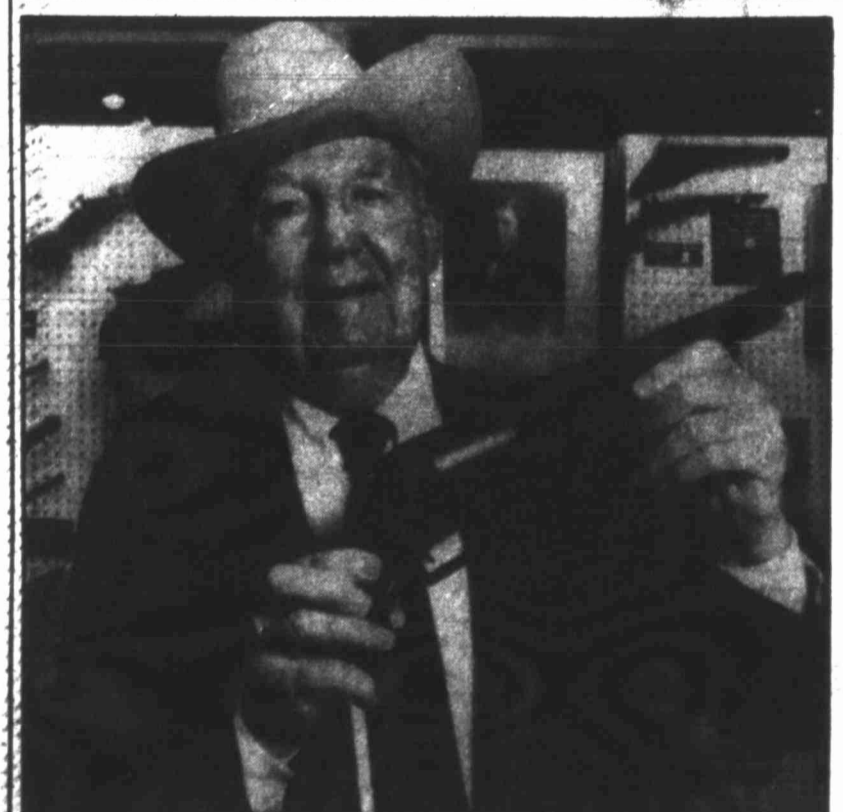

"Clearly, there is an integrity problem out there," he said. "The integrity of the crossing system has been compromised by repeated false alarms."

Speakman vehemently denied allegations that the union supports inspection regulations because they would produce additional work for his members, calling such charges a "smoke screen."

The Association of American Railroads, the lobbying group for the nation's largest rail lines, argues that accidents at intersections with grade-crossing signals have dropped sharply since 1975 and that virtually none of the collisions that have occurred can be blamed on faulty signals. Spokesmen for the railroad industry say information presented by the unions was riddled with distortions and errors.

In testimony prepared for hearings on the issue, Harvey Bradley of the AAR said: "regulations are not necessary, because there is no problem to be cured."

WACO — Curator Gaines de Graffenried displays a Walker Colt pistol valued at $65,000 at the Texas Ranger Hall of Fame and Museum in Waco.

Waco may buy guns that won the West

WACO (AP) — The city of Waco is negotiating to buy some of the most famous guns that won the West.

Former banker and cotton broker Gaines de Graffenried, the unpaid curator of the Texas Ranger Hall of Fame and Museum, is glad the collection may be kept intact.

"I knew I couldn't take it with me," de Graffenried told The Dallas Morning News.

About 75 percent to 80 percent of the 3,240 rare and historic guns and artifacts displayed in the city-owned Ranger museum are part of the collection owned by de Graffenried and his sons, Tommy and Flem, both of Houston.

Most of the other artifacts in the museum — including a Bowie knife and other treasures of Western weaponry — have been donated by people who fell victim to de Graffenried's good-ol'-boy charm, or his ability as a trader.

"I never found much stuff I wanted that I eventually didn't get a hold of," de Graffenried said, pointing to a 1920 saddle on display. "I stayed on that thing 20 years before I finally got it," he said.

"He's the only curator we've ever had, and we've never paid him anything," said former City Manager David Smith, who is negotiating the purchase. "He's acquired a lot of collections down there for the city."

"We started looking at what belonged to him down there, and looking at Gaines' age and we thought, 'Now what are we going to do when Gaines is gone?'"

De Graffenried won't reveal his age, but admits to being more than 80.

Smith approached de Graffenried about having the city buy the collection of guns, art and historical documents displayed in the museum. When the family agreed last summer to sell most — but not all — of their items in the museum, Smith took the proposal to Waco City Council.

Despite a murmur of dissent, the council voted to sell bonds to finance various capital improvements — and to provide up to $1 million for purchasing the artifacts of Graffenried was willing to sell.

All that remains is settling on a price, to be negotiated after two expert appraisals of the guns and another appraisal of the art and other memorabilia. The first appraisal was begun in early January; the sale is expected to be completed by March.

In a telephone interview from his Connecticut home, the collection's first appraiser, firearms authority Larry Wilson, described de Graffenried's collection as "most impressive" and "very important to the history of Texas and the Southwest."

Wilson had not totaled the itemized list he prepared for the sale, but he said the most valuable appraised piece is a $65,000 Colt revolver, one of the four 1847 Walker models now in the museum.

"It's the gun that Sam Colt designed with Texas in mind, you might say — the one developed for the (early) Texas Rangers," he said.

Two sawed-off shotguns owned by outlaws Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow are in the museum, along with the pistol Bonnie slipped to Clyde in 1930 to help him escape from the McLennan County Jail in Waco. Articles owned by the late Frank Hamer, the former Ranger who ended their spree in 1934, are there, too.

Wilson said he had been to the Texas Ranger Museum several times, "and you see Japanese visitors, and hear people speaking French or German. It's an international draw. After all, what represents America to the world more than the American West? And what was a cowboy or a Ranger or a frontiersman without a Colt revolver?"

The museum attracted about 76,000 paid visitors last year, according to the city.

Herald announces changes

Several staff changes have been announced at the Big Spring Herald by Publisher Robert Wernsman.

A new advertising sales manager, managing editor and reporter have been added to the newspaper staff and a former reporter has been named editor of the Stanton Herald.

"We've made positive gains for Big Spring with the addition of these members to our staff," Wernsman said.

Randi Smith, former advertising sales manager at the Atchison (Kansas) Globe has taken over the reins of the Herald's advertising department, effective this week.

Smith, who was employed at the Atchison newspaper for six years, attended Graceland College in Lamoni, Iowa.

"I'm real happy to be in Big Spring," Smith said. "I think it will be a real challenge. I am already impressed by the business community here, especially with their willingness to make me feel at home."

She was active in Atchison PRIDE, a community action group developed by the State of Kansas and was the organizer of Atchison Youth PRIDE.

She was also a member of the Atchison Chamber of Commerce retail division and is the mother of two children.

She replaces Cindy McGuire who resigned several months ago to enter private business.

Steve Ray, former editor at the Borger News-Herald, has been named as managing editor for the Herald, replacing Wernsman in that capacity.

RANDI SMITH

STEVE RAY

SARAH LUMAN

BRAD WORRELL

"I am really pleased to be in Big Spring, and be associated with a news staff as fine as the one at the Big Spring Herald," Ray said. "The Herald has a reputation for a strong commitment to the community and that is the type of newspaper where I like to work."

Ray comes to the Herald with more than 15 years of reporting and editing experience in newspapers in Texas and Oklahoma.

He is a graduate of Southern Nazarene University in Bethany, Oklahoma.

Ray has been active in the Kiwanis Club and Chamber of Commerce and is the father of two children.

Sarah Luman, former county reporter at the Big Spring Herald has been named as the editor of the weekly Stanton Herald, which is published by the Big Spring newspaper. She replaces Walt Finley in that capacity.

Replacing Luman as county reporter is Bradley Worrell.

Worrell is a 1988 graduate of Baylor University who majored in journalism.

Originally from Aurora, Colo., Worrell is an Eagle Scout and journalism scholarship winner.

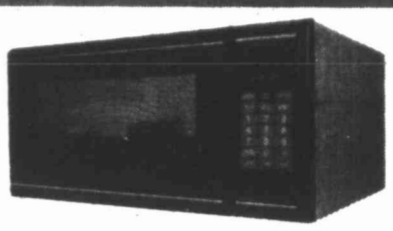

"The opportunity we have to continue to produce a quality, community newspaper has been enhanced with their addition. It's taken longer than I expected to assemble this staff," Wernsman said, "but there's no question that the wait has been worthwhile."

"Both new managers are experienced, proven performers in their field and I have no doubt they will contribute to a better Big Spring and a better Herald. Bradley Worrell has shown a great deal of potential and I expect his work to match the standard that readers of the Herald have come to expect."

"In addition, the change made at the Stanton newspaper has revitalized that newspaper. Sarah has a good feel for people and the residents of Stanton are discovering what a good job she can do covering their news — just as she did for more than 18 months in Howard County. I'm pleased she has the opportunity to edit a weekly newspaper and continue her career development," Wernsman said.

How to conserve water at home

By NAOMI HUNT County Extension Agent

The bathroom may be the smallest room in the house, but that's where 50 to 75 percent of a family's water use takes place. From 26 to 45 percent of a family's water use flushes the toilet, and 23 to 30 percent is used for bathing and grooming. There are several ways to save water in the bathroom.

A typical shower without a water-saving shower head uses five to 10 gallons of water each minute, so keep the length of your shower to around five minutes. A kitchen timer can be used to remind you when it's time to turn the water off. Turning the water off while you soap up or shampoo also saves water and energy. Some shower heads have a cutoff button so that you can shut off the water temporarily without turning off the water faucets. This allows you to maintain the preferred water temperature without keeping the water running while you shampoo. If your shower head does not have a cut-off button, you can purchase a flow cut-off valve which can easily be installed on most shower heads.

Some shower heads have water-saving flow restrictors built into them which limit the amount of water which can flow through the shower head. However, you can install a flow restrictor into any shower head easily and inexpensively. A faucet washer can be installed in place of a flow restrictor and will do the job for a two-cent investment.

If you prefer baths, don't fill the bathtub too full — one fourth of a tub should be enough. Every inch of water in the tub uses about 4 1/2 gallons of water, so a half-filled tub uses about 25 gallons of water. Put the stopper in the drain before turning on the water.

HOW TO LOVE APRIL 15 — Save yourself a few headaches at income tax time by keeping proper records. Noel Hull and Kenny Bennett look over a few record books from the complete selection at Hester's, including Household Budget Record

City Finance Company: loans from $10 to $330

"For those sudden unexpected cash shortages, we fill a real community need," says Debbie Walling, manager of City Finance, 206 1/2 Main Street.

Money to pay bills, take a vacation, pay for car repairs, buy new school clothes — and even to pay for college books and tuition — are among the reasons people turn to City Finance, according to Debbie and her associate, Pat Cypert.

"We've had record months recently," Debbie says. "We've been sending out mailings and doing a lot of phoning to let people know we want their business."

The loan limit has recently been raised by the State of Texas to $330, Debbie says. All that is required is for the customer to fill out an application, have a permanent job, and pass credit approval.

The business is state regulated, with the state setting the interest rate and payment schedule, and the state specifies that the borrower must have the means to pay back the loan. State auditors check the firm's books annually.

Debbie says they serve borrowers with loans that are smaller than those which banks can handle profitably.

Another important use of a small loan is to establish credit. For example, a customer will bring in a son or daughter and co-sign a loan. The borrower then makes regular payments and thus establishes a credit rating.

The staff tries to provide a friendly, comfortable atmosphere that puts customers at their ease. Borrowing is simply another alternative in personal or family finances — "Almost everybody needs a little extra cash once in awhile," Debbie maintains.

To improve services to customers, City Finance is presently undergoing refurbishing, with new customer service counter, newly furnished waiting area and new carpet.

Business hours are 8:30 to 5:30 Monday through Friday (including the lunch hour) and 8:30 to 12 noon Saturday.
