Boy's plan for better life ends in tragedy

By MICHAEL DUFFY Staff Writer

The dream of a better future ended tragically early Wednesday along a stretch of Union Pacific Railroad tracks in Big Spring for a 16-year-old Mexican National. Raul Marcian and three other men apparently had decided to seek work — and a better life — by clinging to the bars of an empty railroad car destined for Dallas.

Big Spring Police Capt. Melvin Fowler said a dispatcher received a "man down" call shortly after 10 a.m. and discovered two men about 80 feet east of the Owen Street viaduct.

"We found a man down and it ap-taken to the hospital (Scenic Mountain Medical Center)," Fowler explained.

He added that when police arrived another Mexican National told him that when Marcian attempted to jump off the train, his foot became entangled and he suffered other injuries.

"The man told us he dragged the boy across another set of railroad tracks and they had been there for nine hours," Fowler said.

Marfa Assistant Center Patrol Officer Don Barnfield said this morning he was contacted by Big Spring police about returning a man to the Mexican border.

The 27-year-old Mexican Na-called an ambulance and he was tional told Border Patrol officers he, Marcian and two other men hid themselves on a railroad car in Mexico for a trip to Dallas to seek better-paying jobs.

"When the boy got his foot caught, the man told us he jumped off to help his friend, but the other men just kept riding," Barnfield

Marcian was eventually transferred from Big Spring to Lubbock Methodist Hospital where surgeons amoutated his right foot, according to a nursing supervisor. He also sustained other undisclosed injuries and his condition was listed as serious in the hospital's surgical Intensive Care

Tower: Never surrender

By DAVID ESPO Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Republicans are promising a vigorous and lengthy Senate debate over John Tower's nomination as defense secretary, even as his chances of confirmation fade under the mounting weight of Democratic opposition. Tower's GOP allies made their fighting intentions clear late Wednesday while the man at the center of the storm said he has no intention of giving up. "Never sur-render or retreat," the former Texas senator said, quoting the commander of the Texas forces at the Alamo.

The full Senate arranged to begin debate shortly after noon today, although no vote was expected until next week at the earliest, and there were fresh Democratic pleadings that Tower withdraw his nomination.

Tower on Wednesday renewed his vow to abstain from drinking if he is confirmed. Asked during a National Press Club appearance if he had ever broken any previous pledges, including wedding vows, the twice-divorced Tower said he had broken marital vows.

"I think I probably am not alone in that connection," he added.

Tower also said he would not return to the defense consulting industry even if his confirmation fails.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, said there would be a "vigorous" debate on the Senate floor, adding that the issue involved is more important than a single nomination.

leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "We hope the door is not closed on the other side.' But not a single Democrat has thus far supported Tower, and two Democrats announced their opposition in speeches on the Senate Senate Majority Leader George

Mitchell had been expected to vote no, but the decision of Sen. David Boren of Oklahoma to oppose Tower was a blow to the Republicans.

By day's end Wednesday, an Associated Press survey showed 36 Republicans in favor, 36 Democrats against and the remainder undecided or not answering. Democrats hold a 55-45 majority in the Senate.

Boren is one of the most conservative Democrats in the Senate. He met privately with Bush at the White House on Tuesday and said he looked forward to supporting the Republican president on numerous issues in the future.

But he said the nation needs a defense secretary for whom "there is broad support, a person about whom there is not deep division of opinion or strong debate about his qualifications to hold office.

WASHINGTON - Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady is blaming newspaper headlines and television reports for causing billions of dollars in withdrawals at savings and loan associations so far this year.

Federal savings and loan regulators on Wednesday revealed that depositors withdrew at least $1 billion last month after publication of a list of institutions targeted for government takeover.

Brady, appearing before the Senate Budget Committee, said, "It's our conviction that the outflow is due to the stories on the nightly news and the black headlines on the front of the business pages or page 1 almost every day for the past two months. He said S&Ls have been forced to increase interest rates on savings by an average of three-fourths of a percentage point to hold deposits following the increase in public attention to the industry's problems. He predicted that the rates would drop once President Bush's plan to • WITHDRAWAL page 3-A bail out the industry is approved and public confidence is restored. 'We feel growth (in deposits) will be strong in the future," he Locally, Charles Beil, manager of Consolidated Federal, termed the rise in withdrawals "rather extraordinary.

Interest rates at Consolidated Federal — which acquired the former Big Spring Savings and First Federal in a merger plan — have risen "moderately," Beil said, adding that the trend in rates would "depend on the Federal Reserve (Board), which is able to manipulate interest rates with a considerable degree of effectiveness.

M. Danny Wall, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. said the nation's 2,950 S&Ls suffered net withdrawals of $4 billion to $5 billion in February, $1 billion to $2 billion of it at the 220 institutions earmarked for takeover by the Federal Deposit Insurance

BROWN DEER, Wis. (AP) Sherry Wall wants to become the Jane Fonda of the canine set.

Wall said she has received about 20 calls from prospective customers since she started speaking on the radio and distributing fliers last month, promoting her aerobic exercise course for dogs.

"Dogs are very social animals, and many of them are alone eight, 10, 12 hours a day," she said. "They turn into real couch potatoes."

Wall, a veterinary technician and dog groomer, plans to begin teaching exercise classes for dogs and their owners at a shopping center in this Milwuakee suburb in late March.

The exercises, she said, are takeoffs on common calisthenics for humans and should be easily mastered by any dog that has had basic obedience training.

"A sit-up goes from a sit-down position to a jump," she said. "And a push-up is sit to lie-down.'

spilling over into a tent city at the Immigration and Naturalization Service's detention center, where dormitories have filled to capacity with detainees facing deportation.

Twenty-eight men slept in a tent Tuesday night, after the Immigration and Naturalization Service ran out of dorm space for male detainees at the minimum-security Port Isabel Service Processing Center, said INS spokeswoman Virginia Kice.

This is the first time the tents have been deployed," Ms. Kice said. "We've reached our capacity."

On Feb. 21 the INS began immediate arrest and detention of asylum-seekers whose cases are denied. Asylum applicants previously were allowed to travel to their U.S. destinations after checking in with the INS in southern Texas.

Of 370 applications for asylum in the INS Harlingen District of southern Texas since Feb. 21, as of the close of business Wednesday, the INS granted asylum in 16 cases, all Nicaraguans. It denied 329 and issued "intents to deny" for the remaining 25. An intent-to-deny notice means applicants have 15 days to present documentation to bolster their borderline cases that Political asylum is granted to those fleeing persecution. The INS contends that most of the Central Americans seeking asylum are submit asylum cases before an imhere for economic reasons and do not qualify for political refugee status.

INS Commissioner Alan Nelson said the new procedure was designed to discourage "frivolous" asylum applications. The number of applications already has dropped dramatically in the Harlingen District, where 2,000 weekly were applying for asylum until last

Those apprehended by the Border Patrol have the right to migration judge. Those rejected for asylum also may resubmit their cases in the immigration court.

The INS says it could house as many as 5,000 adults in tents at the detention facility near Bayview, about 20 miles northeast of the border city of Brownsville. Seven large, brightly colored, striped tents so far have been erected at the detention center.

The total number of detainees here Wednesday was 1,011, 697 men and 314 women, including the 28 men in the tents. Space remained available in the women's fixed dormitory area, Ms. Kice said.

Family groups are sent to an American Red Cross shelter in Brownsville, where 711 slept Tuesday night, double the number there a month ago. The shelter's capacity is 800.

Red Cross spokeswoman Patty Garner said the organization was looking for additional space to house the families pending deportation. The INS is funding the Red Cross shelter, where the Justice Department's Community Relations Service is overseeing opera-

AUSTIN (AP) — Poor parents, whose children often fall off the educational ladder, don't have a choice between "beans or Newsweek" magazine, a state senator said in illustrating how poverty contributes to dropout

Sen. Carl Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said Wednesday the Legislature cannot cure all the problems associated with dropping out of school - "we can't provide substitute parents.'

But Parker, D-Port Arthur, said, 'We can give them prekindergarten programs so that the children are not so intimidated when they get to kindergarten.

"We can give them parenting programs that teach them, even with the means available, how to help educate their own children."

The remarks came at a meeting of Parker's committee on 18 bills and resolutions by another senator, Gonzalo Barrientos, to slow the dropout rate

The committee heard Lt. Gov.

Bill Hobby testify in favor of five of the measures, which track Hobby anti-crime proposals.

Hobby said more than 85 percent of Texas prison inmates are high school dropouts, and their average educational achievement is the seventh grade.

He said education and support services for pregnant teen-agers and school-age parents; preschool for disadvantaged 3-year-olds; programs for children without supervision, as well as parent training; and identification of effective dropout prevention programs for "at-risk" youths "can begin to break the cycle of failure that many children experience in our public schools.

"These programs will not solve the problem in a day, a year, or maybe even a decade, but it's time to make a start," Hobby said.

Barrientos said the 11 bills and seven resolutions would cost less than $50 million in state funds over the next two years, and none requires local school districts to implement untested, untried vote is taken.

If Texas can reduce its dropout rate, Barrientos said, the state also can move on a course "to reduce crime and remove the necessity for constantly having to spend more and more money on prosecution and incarceration."

The proposals also would authorize on-site day care for elementary students; expand social services for at-risk youths and their families; allow dropouts to return to school and earn back credit for absences; and establish a statewide media task force to explore ways to use the mass media to encourage students to remain in school.

"It's time we look for ways to spend . . . money on kids at the dawn of their lives rather than spending money on them in an endless succession of prosecutions and incarcerations throughout their lives," Barrientos said.

Parker said the bills would be held for study before a committee

Critics attack Juarez tourist attraction plan

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) - In an effort to draw familyoriented tourists, this border city might be erasing some of its charm, critics of a rejuvenation plan say.

Mayor Jaime Bermudez' Nuestro Centro" plan calls for, among other things, banning vendors from downtown and setting up a 14-square-block pedestrian mall a half-mile from the downtown bridges. Last month, authorities began driving vendors out of central Juarez and destroying their stalls and pushcarts.

unorganized markets are part of rejuvenation is complete. the border ambiance that draws some tourists, point out critics such as urban planner David Fuentes of the University of Baja California in Mexicali.

He said city officials "are being a little irresponsible and highhanded" in blaming vendors partly for the tourism stagnation that has hit Juarez.

Part of that downturn has occurred in the past three months in the wake of Gov. Fernando Baeza's executive order that forced bars to close by midnight or 2 a.m., depending on the day of the week and type of establishment.

Before the order, which Baeza issued in an effort to reduce crime and attract a different class of tourists, nightclubs and bars stayed open all night. Street vendors sold trinkets, flowers, cigarettes and food. Traffic jams abounded, especially on main drag Avenida Juarez.

Much of that activity has quited down since the order. Now, under the "Our Center" project, traffic will be banned on Avenida Juarez and rerouted to an adjacent street, where cars would drive down the left lane, as in England. The project is expected to cost $700,000 and take about four months to complete. Roberto Gomez, the eity's new municipal planning director, couldn't say Tuesday exactly what Ironically, street vendors and those tourists can expect when the "That's what we're working on deciding what sort of at-

Javier Sandoval, a Juarez architect for 30 years.

"You can't just say let's put lights on one street, flowers on another and fountains on yet another," he said, adding City Hall is taking "a small-town approach to planning. They're saying let's have a fair and hang out some pinatas and flower baskets. This kind of project has to be done on a grand scale or not at all.'

The newspaper Diario de Juarez has criticized the project as "untimely and unfortunate," pointing out Bermudez' three-year term ends in October.

Attorney General sues airline over fare offer fare offer started last week is "classic bait and switch advertising," says state Attorney General Jim Mattox, who is suing the airline for deceptive trade practices.

In the ads, "Pan Am baits the consumer with one price but then switches to another when the consumer takes the bait and telephones or comes to an agent to buy a ticket," Mattox said in a Tuesday statement.

The ads offer a $149 fare to Europe, the Caribbean, Central America and Venezuela, but hidden costs and time restrictions make the actual fare higher, Mattox said.

The lawsuit, filed in state district court in Dallas, alleges the ad by Pan Am Airways Inc. violates the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act.

The suit seeks to stop the ads, and could result in civil penalties against the airline, Mattox said.

Also Tuesday, Mattox said he received a federal appeals court opinion saying the U.S. Department of Transportation acted illegally when it adopted rules in 1988 on air fare advertising.

The U.S. Court of Appeals at the District of Columbia agreed with an appeal filed by Mattox and New York Attorney General Robert Abrams, who acted as lead counsels for 27 states, a news release by Mattox said.

The decision says the DOT should have given the states a chance to respond before changing the longstanding advertising rules, Mattox said. He said the rules have permitted airlines to hide up to $23 per ticket in "surcharges" in their

State pay raise bill proposed

AUSTIN (AP) — A lawmaker says his $520 million plan for a state employee pay raise is a new concept that would give lower-paid workers the biggest percentage

"What makes this plan unique is that it provides a graduated scale for pay raises, where the lowestpaid employees will get the biggest-percentage raises. We will be trying to sell a new concept here," Rep. Nicolas Perez said of the plan.

Wednesday's announcement of the pay raise proposal coincided with a union-organized protest in which state workers were urged to wear black to show support for a pay increase.

Perez, D-El Paso, said his plan would cover some 151,000 employees, who would receive raises of between 3 percent and 14.2 percent during the next two years.

Perez said the bill would cover only those workers in classified jobs, not 8,000 administrators in higher-paid, exempt posts. Those salaries are set by the Legislature in its appropriations bills.

State employees have complained that recent state budget problems have prevented them from receiving raises that keep pace with inflation.

They also have said that decreasing state insurance benefits, meaning workers must pay more for insurance, have resulted in reductions in take-home pay over the past five years.

Perez said 80 percent of the state employees covered by his proposed pay increase earn less than $25,000

The legislation is the second measure this session aimed at worker pay.

before the Senate Banking Committee, said the bulk of the withdrawals were a normal response to rising interest rates. Other investments offering a better return, such as money market mutual funds, lure bank and S&L customers away, he said. Also, shaky and rescued S&Ls. under orders from regulators to scale back their operations, represented another substantial portion, he said. Roger Martin, another member of the bank board, told reporters that withdrawals throughout the thrift industry totaled $7 billion in January. That represents a continuation of the so-called "silent run" that began gathering steam with a $7 billion outflow in November and a record withdrawal of $8.1 billion in December. The withdrawals add up to $20 billion to $27 billion over the four months. All S&L deposits at the end of 1988 totaled $970 billion.

In January, public attention to the industry's problem soared after the administration revealed it was considering a controversial proposal, since dropped, to charge depositors a fee. The industry's problems received another dose of publicity in early February, when the president proposed his rescue plan. The FDIC, which regulates commercial banks, has been assuming control of the worst-off savings institutions as a preliminary step before enactment of Bush's plan.

So far, the agency has taken over only 36 of the targeted institutions in a legal arrangement called a conservatorship.

Views of other Texas papers Aid changes needed

A just-released government report calling for sweeping changes in the way Washington allocates and distributes foreign aid is almost certainly going to rattle the crockery in foreign ministries the world over — but considering the present sorry state of many aid programs, a little crockery-rattling just may be in order.

The document, issued by Alan Woods, administrator of the Agency for International Development, poses a stark question: "Is today's U.S. foreign aid fostering healthy development toward independent prosperity — or simply postponing the day of reckoning for governments unwilling or unable to take the politically painful steps needed for their own development?"

The report provides its own answer: "All too often, dependency seems to have won out over development."

.In one Third World state after another, wellintentioned U.S. aid programs are used either to line the pockets of petty despots or to serve as stopgaps in place of urgently needed economic and political reforms. These programs serve as impromptu bandages for societies that are candidates for major surgery. . . Corpus Christi Caller-Times

Prison building urgent

Most Texans think so, as does an increasingly frustrated Gov. Bill Clements. But not all members of the Legislature have gotten the message.

When lawmakers convened Jan. 10, Clements proposed $340 million bond issue that, if passed by the voters, would fund the construction of almost 11,000 additional cells. He had hoped the plan would be approved in time to appear on the May election ballot.

Unfortunately, that has not happened. Lawmakers have stalled, procrastinated, and pondered and pontificated the time away.

There has been a lot of talk about fighting drug abuse, alcoholism and illiteracy instead of building more cells as a means to relieve prison crowding. Some want to try special "boot camps" for first offenders, others see home arrest" as the solution, and a few even want more parole and probation.

... The proposed prison alternatives, (Clements) reminded lawmakers, "are new . . . and experimental programs." Indeed.

The Texas Department of Corrections had 39,144 beds in fiscal 1988, according to the Dallas-based group Associated Texans Against Crime. The TDC received 33,816 new prisoners (leaving 17,000 additional prisoners in county jails) and released 33,428.

Drug abuse and illiteracy prevention programs should be pursued because they very well might, in the long run, stem the flow of first-time offenders into the penal system.

But law-abiding Texans need more protection against the hardened criminals who already are on the street. And only prisons would provide that.

Amarillo Globe-News

Put inmates on old bases

The U.S. military is now under instructions to begin dismantling 86 bases around the nation. Meantime. prison overcrowding is plaguing many states. This includes Texas, where one solution has been to send first offenders to so-called "boot camps" where tough discipline and rigorous physical exercise will be used in hopes of scaring the youthful offenders straight.

Why not do the obvious and turn the old bases into these boot camps? And hire retired drill instructors to run them? While there are no open bases slated for closing in Texas yet, there may be later on. There are certainly several candidates.

But we have a problem. In the early 1980s Texas tried a stopgap method to alleviate prison overcrowding by putting some inmates in military tents. But TDC officials phased the camps out and they were ultimately banned forever by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice. Oh, well. It's still a good idea.

Reform gains steam

Momentum appears to be building for legislation aimed at taking politics out of the Texas high courts, and the movement is toward what has become known as the "Texas Plan."

A bipartisan group of lawmakers . . . introduced legislation that would reform the selection process for all statewide and appellate level judges in Texas, as well as jurists in the state's six largest urban areas.

A lot of debate no doubt is still to come on this issue, both in the legislative process and, if it gets approval there, in the campaign period prior to a vote of approval or disapproval by the people.

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR. The Rushdie-Ayatollah affair will not go away in part because Khomeini continues to attach to the publication of "The Satanic Verses" the very first priority, in part because there is genuine confusion over just how secondechelon participants in the controversy are expected to behave.

The literary critic Hugh Kenner reminds us of a fearful precedent. In 1915, D.H. Lawrence's novel "The Rainbow" was prosecuted in a British court. It was, said the King's Counsel, "indecent." It happens that the judgment had little practical effect on "The Rainbow," which a few years later was back in print. The damage was in the ripple effect: Because the court held not only the author guilty and liable, but also the publisher; and also the printer who had set type for the book

In so ruling, the court acted out a common law tradition of culpability that we smile at as an occasionally indulged anachronism. Under one legal school, a libel initiated by a newspaper endangers newspaper and the vendor who sells you a copy on the street corner. These baroque fancies are not seriously distracting anymore, but in 1915 it was otherwise.

"For decades," Professor Kenner writes, "England had a de facto censorship. Publishers could always claim that, however broadminded they themselves were, they must safeguard an all-important relationship with a printer. And for years the publication of anything vital of James Joyce's 'Ulysses' notably happened in Paris. The victim wasn't Joyce. The victim was the mind of England.'

They put their case rather simply, as Harry Hoffman of Waldenbooks did after removing Rushdie's book from his chain: They don't want their stores bombed or their salesmen endangered.

There was talk by the avatars of a free press charging cowardice and betrayal of common responsibilities to defend the First Amendment. But the charges have not deterred. Last Sunday's (London) Times reveals that the publishers Viking Penguin, who brought out Mr. Rushdie's novel, the truck driver that transports the are negotiating with Britain's Moslem leaders. The story by correspondent Amit Roy goes: "Penguin also appears prepared to discuss other demands of the Moslem leaders. such as the inclusion of a 'health warning' in the remaining unsold copies of the hardback edition. Now I belong to the school that believes that in order to have heroes, you absolutely need to have non-heroes, and that the former are far rarer than the latter. Most people who see danger ahead run away. That is the way the world works. A Harry Hoffman can say in his defense: Look, I am 'a resourceful man and I am amply well-equipped to protect myself. But as much cannot be said for my employees, and if there is in Boston or in New York or in San Francisco an unemployed Moslem terrorist who has mastered the art of making up a Molotov cocktail (there are books around that will tell you what the simple formula is) and is drawn by the divine mandate of the ayatollah to a branch of Waldenbooks, who is to stop him from carnage at Waldenbooks?

A kinder, gentler AK-47

President George Bush, who wants to make this a kinder, gentler nation, moved in the right direction recently when he said that he was not interested in banning the importation of kinder, gentler semiautomatic weapons.

This declaration could not have come at a better time for the kinder, gentler National Rifle Association, which lists the president as a lifetime member. Not only are the anti-NRA forces determined to stop the automatic weapons from being sold, but the police around the country are complaining that they can't maintain a benevolent and humane society when there are so many machine guns available to the citizens.

It came as no surprise that Adolf Trigger, a gun dealer, was celebrating the Bush decision. He told me, "The president has sent a message in his kind and gentle way that as long as he is in office, Americans can buy any kind of gun they want to, be it Czech, Chinese or Israeli.'

I was glad to share in Adolf's happiness. "If I were leader of the Free World, I would want to have a completely armed America, too. Only an unkind and ungentle president would try to keep semiautomatic weapons out of the hands of hunters and sportsmen. Bush doesn't want the weapons to be used against schoolchildren, does he?'

"Of course not. Nobody wants children to be shot by semiautomatic weapons. The president feels that we have to stop being so soft and lenient with our criminals. Guns should only be available to law-abiding citizens who won't use them to shoot each other in the back."

"The president has a warm and benign heart, but how can he stop sales if the NRA fights any law requiring background information on a person buying a gun?'

'No one ever said that separating the good gun buyers from the bad ones was easy,' Adolf explained.

"Maybe the president will come up with a happy and sympathetic solution to the problem. I'm sure he feels awful every time there's a massacre with a firearm.

"Mr. Bush would like to do something about it, but he feels that gun control is an issue for individual states.

"Why? "That way he can devote all his time to talking about disarmament with the Russians. If a person is working for a kinder, gentler world, he doesn't want to be distracted with gang wars in his own back yard.

"Do you think that Mr. Bush really agrees with the semiautomatic gun supporters, or is he just trying to placate them so that they won't get mad and go out and mow down a nursing home?

"George believes every word he says. He was a hunter long before he was a president. When he was running for office, he promised the NRA that he would never support any kind of gun registration because crime cannot be stopped by finding out who owns a gun and who doesn't. I'm not saying that the NRA elected him president of the United States, but we like to think that we were responsible for his tender and merciful landslide.'

"When Bush says that he will never do anything to prevent foreign hunting machine guns from flooding the United States, is he threatening the domestic gun industry?

"No," replied Adolf, "because we don't manufacture semiautomatic guns in this country. So, by importing the semiautomatics, we're not taking jobs away from the American worker. All the president wants is to make sure that they are available to the people who need them. That's why he will go down in history as the kindest, gentlest president the NRA ever had."

Center would not have fallen by the way side. TRISHA CAUBLE

NASA plans to land robot probes

 $\mathbf{WASHINGTON} \ (\mathbf{AP}) - \mathbf{NASA}$ plans to land robot probes on a comet and on a moon of Saturn early next century in new programs that would cost \$1.6 billion over the next seven years.

In testimony prepared for a budget hearing before the House committee on science, space and technology, National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientist Lennard A. Fisk said Wednesday that the unmanned spacecraft would allow the United States to maintain world leadership in exploration of the Fisk, the associate NASA administrator for space science and applications, said a mission called Comet Rendezvous Asteroid Flyby, or CRAF, would be launched in 1995 and would streak through space for five years before meeting in space with the comet Kopff and dropping a probe to its surface.

A second mission, called Cassini, would be launched in 1996 and arrive in an orbit of the planet Saturn in the year 2002.

Taxpayers filing early returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Less than 30 percent of taxpayers have filed their returns halfway into the filing season, but the pace is still ahead of last year's.

The Internal Revenue Service said Wednesday that through Feb. 24, it had received 30.8 million returns, up 2 percent over the comparable period of 1988, when 30.2 million were received.

The number of taxpayers filing the long Form 1040 — most of whom itemize deductions — dropped 4.2 percent, the IRS said. But the number filing the "short" Form 1040A and the one-page 1040EZ rose 7.5 percent and 6.8 percent. This year's figures include 13.1 million long forms, 8.5 million Form 1040A and 9.1 million Form 1040EZ

The IRS read the figures as suggesting "that many taxpayers who filed Form 1040 in the past may be switching to the simpler, shorter forms."

Arkansas agrees to settle case

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) The state has agreed to settle the largest desegregation case in its history by paying out $118 million, including NAACP attorneys' fees dating back to the landmark court-ordered integration of 1957.

The proposed settlement, which ends six years of litigation involving the state and the three school districts in Pulaski County, was signed by attorneys for all the parties before U.S. District Judge Henry Woods on Wednesday.

The Little Rock School District, which is mostly black, had sued the state and the neighboring, mostly white North Little Rock and Pulaski County school districts in federal court, alleging the defendants caused illegal segregation in Little Rock,

Art school reopens flag display

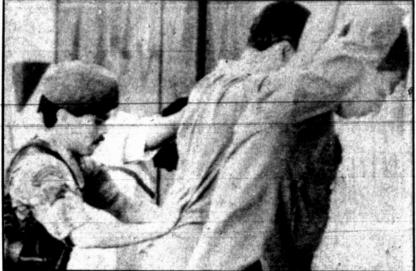

CHICAGO (AP) — An exhibit that appears to invite people to step on the American flag was resuming on a limited basis despite a lawsuit by veterans' groups seeking to prevent the flag's alleged desecration. After closing a gallery at the School of the Art Institute following protests by veterans, school officials announced Wednesday the student show would reopen with access limited to students, faculty and staff.

The school cited the students' right of free expression in announcing it would reopen the show today.

The work by student Scott Tyler titled "What Is the Proper Way to Display a U.S. Flag?" features a flag spread on the floor in front of a montage. Depicted in the photographs are flag-draped coffins, South Koreans burning the U.S. flag and other scenes.

CARACAS, Venezuela — A Venezuelan national guardsman searches citizens for weapons in Caracas Wednesday as rioting broke out for a third day despite the imposition of martial law. More than 100 people have been reported killed this week.

City calm after days Of violence

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) -More than 20,000 soldiers and police officers patrolled the capital today to maintain order after three days of rioting over price increases. A newspaper said at least 200 people have been killed.

Sporadic gunfire died down at daybreak in the capital, and officials urged workers to return to their jobs.

The government of this oil-rich country has blamed the rioting and looting — the country's worst unrest in 31 years of democratic rule — on "minuscule" groups of leftist extremists it did not name.

But the scope of the disturbances prompted it to impose martial law and an overnight curfew beginning Tuesday, a day after increases in gasoline prices and transit fares touched off the violence. El Nacional newspaper said at least nine people were killed

Wednesday by snipers shooting at troops in the shantytowns east and west of Caracas. In today's editions, the paper said the dead included an elderly woman hit by a stray bullet while in her apartment. An estimated 15,000 troops and 7,000 police maintined order in the capital today. Some patrolled in armored vehicles; others manned roadblocks.

Interior Minister Alejandro Izaguirre said Wednesday night that "small anarchistic groups" were bent on prolonging the unrest that has "shaken the country." President Carlos Andres Perez has been in office for just a month.

The opposition has blamed the riots on government austerity measures mandated by the International Monetary Fund as a condition for new credits.

Venezuela, affluent during of the 1970s thanks to its rich oil reserves, saw its fortunes slide along with petroleum prices in 1981.

Real wages have since fallen by one-third, inflation is expected to hit 70 percent this year — double the 1988 figure — and the foreign debt is $33 billion, fourth largest in Latin America after Brazil, Mexico and Argentina.

At least 200 people have died, 1,000 people have been injured and 2,000 arrested in violence, El Nacional said, citing official sources.

The paper listed the names of 159 people whose bodies it said were in Caracas morgues "congested with corpses.

Food shortages were reported and the army began to airlift food from the interior to supply residents of Caracas, a city of 4 million people and the country's financial center.

PUNTA ARENAS, Chile (AP) - An oil slick from a ship grounded 'ntarctica is more serious than originally thought and has spread in stormy weather, the Chilean navy says.

Search for agent's killer continues

NEW YORK (AP) — An under cover federal drug agent was shot out of "cold-bloodedness" by a man who probably was unaware he was dealing with a law enforcement officer, authorities said.

The slaying of Special Agent Everette Hatcher on Tuesday was the first killing of a Drug Enforcement Administration officer in the New York area since 1972, said DEA spokesman Robert Strang.

Investigators do not believe Hatcher's cover had been blown, said William Y. Doran, special agent in

Club president explains local Prospector's Club

What is the Big Spring Prospector's Club?

This question has been asked so many times by so many Big Spring residents — a surprising fact when one considers the length of time the club has been in existence. Perhaps it is time to publicly clarify the issue.

It all began about 1964 when four men who owned metal detectors decided to persue their favorite hobby together. By 1967 it became an organized club with Bobby West as the first president. At that time it was a treasure hunting pasttime, and things ranging from old coins, barbed wire, old military artifacts, relics, bottles and glassware were collected. Likely that is the reason for the name "Prospector'S Club."

With the passage of time, the club grew and evolved into an cupations. The roster includes electricians, salesmen, carpenters, doctors, teachers, ministers, housewives, artists, photographers and so many others too numerous to mention.

Since it is family oriented, members range in ages from toddiers to senior citizens. The tie that binds so diversified a group together is the common interest in gems, minerals, earth sciences, creativity, development of skills, especially lapidary ones, friendship and community pride.

A format of by-laws was adopted, and the club became incorporated in 1982. It is non-political, nonsectarian, and non-profit. Membership is open to anyone of good moral character who has interest in gems, minerals, earth sciences, creativity, development of skills, lapidary or ecology, and who is willing to abide by the constitution and by-laws of the club.

The Prospector's Club is affiliated with both the National and South Central Federations of Mineral Societies. It won national recognition as the "All American

Club' in 1984 from the Federation, a coveted award. The club publishes a monthly bulletin which won first place in the South Central Federation (Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana) competition in 1988. It sponsors regular classes and learning programs, maintains a lapidary shop for club members, has speakers who are available to speak to other groups or schools, sponsors field trips and rock hunting expeditions, provides recreation and fellowship for members, and donates to scholarships and various charities when funds are Those metal detector fans still enjoy their hobby within the organization. Hopefully this article answers the question, "What is the Prospector's Club?"

Strawberry threatens walkout over contract

Rickey Henderson says he's sorry. Darryl Strawberry says he may leave. And the Boston Red Sox just have a lot to say about everything.

The Grapefruit League starts today as Boston is scheduled to play the Chicago White Sox in Sarasota, Fla. But most of the baseball news is being made off the field. Strawberry said Wednesday he Dwight Gooden as examples. Meanwhile, Henderson said he made a mistake when he claimed that excessive drinking hurt the Yankees' chances last season and his teammates said Wednesday they would forgive and forget.

"Now I can say I stuck a foot in my mouth. Whatever we do as a team we should keep to ourselves," Henderson said at the Yankees' camp in Fort Lauderdale.

"Maybe I didn't do it right," he them to get upset.' Henderson specified that drinking by some players — he named ex-Yankees Bob Shirley, Neil Allen and Tim Stoddard -

Neil Simon's comedy. Barefoot in the Park, offers a lighthearted look at what happens to a newly married couple when the rosecolored glasses are broken.

The play, presented by Spring City Theatre, is set in a fifth-floor walk-up apartment. The lack of an elevator is cause for much of the play's humor as we see the characters staggering in the door after climbing the stairs. Corrie, played appropriately by Donna Fields, is a bride who obviously expects the excitment of the honeymoon to last forever. Greg Smith is well cast as the more pragmatic Paul, who responds with droll one-liners to Corie's bursts of enthusiasm.

Reality sets in almost immediately as the newlyweds cope with a problem apartment, Paul's need to prepare for his first court

The technical rehearsal Wednesday evening was obviously needed, but even with the stage managing and the lighting not quite under control the play was funny and the acting good. The cast was obviously having fun putting the play together and it showed in the way they worked together on stage.
