Discovery takes off safely

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Discovery and its five crewmen waited out bad weather and thundered into orbit today to deploy a $100 million satellite that completes a network giving astronauts almost unbroken radio contact with Earth.

The 113-ton winged spaceship, also carrying four crippled white rats and 32 chicken eggs among its scientific experiments, vaulted off its seaside launch pad into a cloudless sky at 8:57 a.m. Big Spring time. Liftoff was delayed one hour and 50 minutes to allow fog to burn off and NASA computers to adjust the shuttle's path to compensate for shifting high-altitude winds.

Students line up for measles shot

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

As students lined up to receive measles vaccinations at Big Spring High School, it was obvious many shared junior Brian Oliphant's attitude about the experience.

"I don't like shots, but I don't want to get the measles," said Oliphant as he waited in line, slowly advancing toward a table covered with disposable syringes.

Nearby, school district and Howard County Health Department nurses administered the vaccinations to grimacing male students, while approximately 40 students waited inside the Steer Gym to receive the shots.

The inoculation program at the high school was organized to combat what the health department termed a measles "outbreak" at the school.

Two BSHS students were confirmed last week as having rubella measles, also known as red measles, said Dr. Jack Woodall, acting director of the Big Spring-Howard County Health Department.

A measles outbreak, as defined by the Texas Department of Health, occurs when two or more students on any school campus are diagnosed as having measles.

Students at the high school who were vaccinated before they were 15 months old are considered at risk of contracting the disease, said Woodall.

"A few of (the male students) are screaming and hollering just to scare the others. But most of them are taking it very well." — nurse giving immunizations.

School officials determined that 335 to 350 high school students are at risk of contracting the measles and should receive immunizations.

However, the immunization program at the high school was voluntary, officials said. Students under the age of 18 were required to have their parents sign a release form before receiving the vaccinations, Woodall said.

As of this morning, high school officials did not know the total number of students scheduled to receive the vaccinations.

Male students at the high school received vaccinations in the Steer Gym, while female students were inoculated in the auditorium.

Sawyer Smith and Sarah Ziebell acknowledged they were not looking forward to receive the vaccinations, but viewed the experience as a necessary precaution.

Female students waiting in line were talkative and nervous, they said.

Settlement reached in Teamster lawsuit

By JOHN M. DOYLE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Prosecutors trying to seize the Teamsters union to rid it of alleged mob influence reached a tentative settlement with the union today that would allow its leaders to remain in office, a union lawyer said.

The agreement was reached hours before the Justice Department's civil racketeering lawsuit against the nation's biggest union was to go to trial.

The lawsuit, in which the government sought to oust the Teamsters' leadership and have a trustee or committee appointed to oversee elections, represents the first time the government has tried to seize an entire union.

Just before he was to give his opening statement today, Assistant U.S. Attorney Randy Mastro said the Teamsters had agreed to a settlement proposal at 1:30 a.m.

Mastro said that in addition to the 1.6 million-member union itself, the 11 individual defendants — the executive board of the union — had signed the agreement.

Outside the courtroom Mastro declined to give the terms of the agreement.

However, James T. Grady, the union's general counsel, said that no administrator would be appointed by the court to oversee the union and none of the 11 executive board members would be required to resign.

Grady said a three-member panel chosen by the government and the union would investigate alleged union misdeeds and review local elections, and reform amendments to the union constitution would be voted on at the Teamsters' 1991 convention.

U.S. District Judge David N. Edelstein, who was to preside over the non-jury trial, granted an adjournment to allow time for the settlement to be reviewed and approved by U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

Both sides indicated they expected the pact to meet with Washington's approval. Mastro was expected to report back to him later today.

On Sunday, the union ran a full page ad in The New York Times, condemning the government lawsuit. "Teamsters are not the only ones on trial," the ad asserted. "So is the American system of Justice."

"Our union is about to face its greatest challenge — a challenge that could set a dangerous precedent for the entire American labor movement," it said.

The government's move was roundly criticized by congressmen and labor leaders. The AFL-CIO, which allowed the Teamsters to rejoin in 1987 after a 30-year rift over corruption, called the lawsuit "a clear abuse of the government's prosecutorial power."

County attorney takes job seriously

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Hardy Wilkerson is enjoying his job as Howard County attorney — a position he believes is well suited for him and one he takes seriously.

A native of Big Spring, Wilkerson — whose great-grandfather worked in the road and bridge department for the county — is a graduate of Texas Tech University where he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in accounting in 1982 and a law degree three years later.

He joined Jones and Associates, a Big Spring law firm, and served as city attorney for just over a year.

Wilkerson married the former Stefanie Ausmus, also a Big Spring native and Texas Tech University graduate, who is employed by TU Electric. The couple have a 10½-month old son, Heath Lorin.

The experience of serving as city attorney whetted his appetite for public office.

In March 1988 Wilkerson ran against — and defeated — former county attorney Robert D. "Bob" Miller in a highly visible race. He captured more than 70 percent of the vote in the Democratic primary and ran unopposed in November.

"The position of county attorney was the next logical step — going from an appointed to an elected position," Wilkerson said.

Hardy Wilkerson takes his job seriously as county attorney.

"I have always had good relations with the various offices I deal with and I think the county was looking for a young man with energy to fill the position. I feel like I'm the man for the job."

Wilkerson, 29, is only serving in his third month on the job, and is devoting six to seven hours daily fulfilling his obligations and a campaign promise to be an active, aggressive county attorney.

Personality profile

"I've always had the philosophy that you can get much more accomplished, and be much more effective, by talking with people face to face," he explained, as the telephone rings and a woman asks advice on how to file statutory rape charges.

Wilkerson perceives his role as county attorney in two ways:

Advising the county commissioners on matters of law and representing the state of Texas.

"On a misdemeanor scale, I am the equivalent of the district attorney," Wilkerson said.

He serves as prosecutor for all misdemeanor and juvenile cases and represents the state in all state hospital commitment cases.

In fact, commitment cases from 30 counties are handled in Howard County Court.

"That's basically because the state hospital is located in Big Spring and we have a lot of experience in dealing with it," Wilkerson said.

Howard County is reimbursed by other counties for handling commitment proceedings.

Wilkerson said one day per week is devoted to commitment

Firefighters continue battling Big Bend blaze

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Helicopter crews prepared to dump water on hot spots of a forest fire in the Big Bend National Park as firefighters battled the blaze into a third day today.

Additional crews began arriving late Sunday to help fight the fire, which is the largest in the park's 45-year history.

More than 250 personnel were expected to be on hand today as three helicopters, including one from the U.S. Customs Service, joined the effort.

A helicopter flight over the fire Sunday evening revealed the blaze covered 615 acres, much smaller than the 1,200-acre figure officials first estimated Sunday.

"That actually puts us in better shape, but it's still the largest fire in the park's history and it probably will keep spreading for a couple of days before we get it under control," said park spokesman Jim Paxon.

"Unless winds pick up, we should get a good handle on this thing Monday. Then I'd say it should be a couple more days before it's under control. That's if we don't get any winds."

More than 100 firefighters battled the flames late Sunday in the

High Chisos mountains in southwest Texas.

No injuries were reported, and no structures were in danger, authorities said.

But fire officials were concerned about a pair of Peregrine falcon nests within 1 1/2 miles of the flames. Paxon said the nests, which shelter at least four of the endangered birds, weren't at risk from the flames but crews would be mobilized to protect the area if winds shifted.

"Fortunately, the nests are downhill from the fire and flames Sunday stopped along a trail more than a mile from the habitats," Paxon said.

Federal fire investigators were expected to arrive Monday. Fire officials have said they believe the blaze was started by human carelessness.

The National Weather Service said temperatures in the 90s with light winds and no precipitation were forecast for the area over the next several days.

About 100 campers, mostly college students on spring break, were evacuated from the High Chisos when the blaze was reported by hikers early Saturday afternoon. The area's seven hiking trails also were closed.

Paxon said about 160 additional personnel had been requested from the Inter-agency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho to fight the blaze.

Crews battling the fire Sunday included personnel from the U.S. Forest Service, the U.S. Park Service, the federal Bureau of Land Management and the New Mexico Department of Forestry.

The fire burned woodlands, mostly oak, pine and juniper and trails and campgrounds in the Chisos were closed, officials said.

The blaze has scorched more land than any other fire at Big Bend National Park, a desert area the size of Rhode Island that is studded with volcanic projections and cliffs along the Rio Grande.

The 1980 Laguna Meadows fire, which burned 500 acres, was the largest previous fire on record.

The fire started at the 5,500-foot level along the Blue Creek drainage, a remote natural run-off on the west side of the Chisos, said park ranger Karen Boucher. Fueled by brush, the fire ran along the peaks of the High Chisos, which are more than 7,000 feet above sea level.

Flames reached beyond the 7,400-foot level Sunday, and traveled toward the south rim of the High Chisos.

The blaze is the first in the 708,221-acre park this year, Ms. Boucher said. Last year there were 27 small brush fires.

The park's last rainfall occurred Feb. 17.

'Grim Reaper' visits snake roundup

SWEETWATER (AP) — The Grim Reaper visited the Sweetwater rattlesnake roundup this year: a protester costumed as death and carrying a sickle to symbolize the carnage taking place inside the Nolan County Coliseum.

Inside the coliseum over the weekend, Sweetwater Jaycees plucked snakes from plastic garbage cans and laid them on the block.

Before neck-craving crowds, the snakes were milked of their venom and beheaded, then hung headless end up and slit down the bellies.

Heads, and skins with rattles attached, were thrown into pinkinted water in separate ice chests, destined to become boots, key chains, plastic-encased paperweights or whatever else might sell.

Rattlesnake roundups are a rite of spring in Texas, and none is bigger or better-known than Sweetwater's, where an estimated 30,000 spectators showed up.

The show also lures animal-rights activists such as herpetologist Jim Seippel of Austin, who said: "If they were doing this with rabbits, this would have been stopped a long time ago."

There is no middle ground in the dispute between the hunters and the animal-rights advocates. The opposing sides cannot even agree on how many snakes are in Texas, whether the number is increasing or decreasing, or what danger the snakes pose to people and livestock.

What is clear is that rattlesnakes are lucrative: live snakes fetch $8.50 or more a pound from companies that make boots, wallets, belts, custom-wrapped pool cues and other gee-gaws from parts of the reptiles.

"We're going to ignore the protesters," snakeskin-seller John Shaddix told the Dallas Times Herald. Shaddix owns Hallettsville-based Rare Skins Inc., which won the bid to buy all the snakes collected at the Sweetwater roundup.

"There are sympathetic herpetologists that will side with these people. They themselves are not in contact with the thousands of people I am in contact with. This has been built up to a mountain when it's not even an antihill," Shaddix said.

Seippel, a herpetologist from Austin, responds, "I spend a lot of time in the field. I'm not just behind the desk."

What animal rights groups primarily object to is the way the snakes are flushed from their dens. Typically, hunters carry pesticide sprayers filled with gasoline. When they spot a crack or crevice that is a likely snake den, they spray gasoline mist into it. The fumes drive the snakes into the open, where they can be caught with tongs.

Environmentalists contend the gassing also kills the foxes, tortoises, burrowing owls, wildcats, rabbits, skunks and other species that take refuge underground in winter.

"Virtually every other kind of animal also takes refuge in these burrows, and we found the gasoline to be absolutely lethal," said Jonathon Campbell, an associate professor of biology at the University of Texas at Arlington, which was paid by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department several years ago to study the effects of gassing on underground dens.

The study found only diamond-backs are hardy enough to have a chance to flee the gas, and even they suffer damaged respiratory systems.

Shaddix, though, who operates 11 rattlesnake processing plants in Texas and says his company buys 80 percent of the rattlesnakes killed in Texas, maintains the gassing has little impact on wildlife.

He also contends snake roundups are a public service. City-dwellers do not understand the threat rattlesnakes pose to people and livestock, Shattix says, nor do they understand that the snake population is growing.

Heart donor/recipient feeling weak, but well

DALLAS (AP) — Lung-damaged Thomas Lee, who survived six years on bottled oxygen before a heart-lung transplant gave him a new shot at life and allowed him to donate his healthy heart to a Waxahachie man, says he is feeling weak but well.

"I'd rather not be here, ha!" Lee wrote Sunday in a note to reporters at Baylor University Medical Center, where the double transplant was performed Thursday night.

Lee, who suffered from chronic emphysema caused by a congenital enzyme deficiency, was given the heart and lungs from a brain-dead donor, hospital officials said.

Because complications from a combined transplant are less severe than from the transplant of lungs only, Lee's heart was also removed. It immediately was transplanted into Burl Hamilton, who was suffering from a coronary artery disease.

Lee remained in serious condition this morning, and Hamilton was in critical condition, the Baylor staff said.

On Sunday, Lee sat in a chair and signaled thumbs-up to visitors.

Bush backing for new Third World debt plan muted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President's Bush's backers have been eager to point to his administration's new plan for easing the Third World debt crisis as evidence to counter his new team's go-slow image.

Yet despite such promotion, the White House has yet to announce that the president himself has given final approval to the plan.

Asked about the president's involvement in the debt plan, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Friday that Bush "has not made final judgments on changes in the policy."

Recent debt-related riots in Venezuela that claimed 300 lives have increased pressure for a new approach to the $410 billion in debt run up by that country and other strategically key Latin American nations including Mexico and Brazil.

Belt-tightening attempts by nations strapped with the international debt have forced governments to cut salaries and subsidies, in many cases leading to sharply reduced standards of living.

The Bush administration plan, introduced on Friday by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, has received generally favorable reviews both at home and abroad. It moves from past policy by urging commercial banks to forgive part of the stinging debt owed by Third World nations. The Reagan administration had favored new lending instead of debt forgiveness.

Rep. James Leach of Iowa, a Republican member of the House Banking and Foreign Affairs committees, said the proposal "makes mincemeat of the gossip of the week — that the administration has no guiding vision."

"The fact of the matter is that our new president has inherited a rather barren plate from his predecessor," Leach said. "A domestic and international financial crisis has been in the making for some time; it has fallen on the Bush administration to act."

Leach also cited the administration's savings and loan rescue plan as evidence that Bush is moving swiftly on financial matters.

But caution remained the watchword at the White House, where Fitzwater said the president "has not made any final judgments."

He said it is proper for such ideas first to be "discussed in speeches and so forth by the various agencies and administrators."

Another White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said over the weekend that Fitzwater's comments still stood.

"It's true; it hasn't gone formally to the president. But that doesn't mean he isn't backing Brady all the way. The ideas Brady discussed are definitely the way the administration is going."

Since "all the ribbons and the bows hadn't been tied" by all of the bureaucrats involved, Bush's name wasn't formally placed on the plan, the official said.

Ship aground
HELL'S MOUTH, Cornwall, Eng. — As a rescue helicopter hovers overhead, high seas pound the wreck of the Panamanian-registered cargo ship, the "Secil Japan," against the rocks of a bay in southwest England early Monday morning. The 2,500 ton vessel, listing 20 degrees to starboard, was driven by high winds onto the rocky coastline Sunday night. Fifteen of the mainly Korean and Filipino 16-man crew were rescued.

hearings. "An individual can be placed in the state hospital for three days on an emergency basis and if the state feels this person still represents a danger to the community, he can be ordered for a 14-day commitment period," he explained.

Howard County Judge John Coffee can also order a person to be held for a 90-day period for evaluation, Wilkerson said.

The county does provide, however, court-appointed counsel for the individual undergoing a mental health hearing.

On Tuesdays and Fridays, individuals charged with Class A, B or C misdemeanors have their initial day in court.

"It is a time when someone can enter a guilty plea and punishment — in the form of a fine or jail time — can be assessed," Wilkerson explained. "They also have the option of pleading not guilty."

The amiable Wilkerson, who obviously believes in keeping professional relationships positive, said that his job as county attorney dictates that he assist people in legal matters.

"Sometimes I think this office is a clearing house for people who don't know what to do," Wilkerson quipped. "But basically, I try to point them in the right direction. If I can help them or if they need a lawyer, I'll tell them, or if they may need to file charges with the police department, I'll tell them, that, too."

Wilkerson must review each case brought before him on its merit — a time consuming process that must be researched thoroughly.

"I really act as a grand jury on the county court level because I make the decision about what case should be prosecuted," he noted.

Wilkerson is continuing a successful "hot check" program initiated by former county attorney Harvey Hoosier.

Merchants who receive checks returned for insufficient funds also turn them over to the county attorney's office.

Any check under $750 is prosecuted through the county attorney's office.

"We like for people to cooperate with our office and pay the amount of the check plus a fee for collecting it," Wilkerson advised. "That way, the merchants are happy. In some cases, it was an oversight, but there are some people who chronically write hot checks — and for them — putting them in jail may be the only solution."

The salary of one county employee — Karen Bynum — is paid exclusively by the collection fees that are charged.

Wilkerson is also committed to vigorously prosecuting perpetrators of domestic violence and those who don't follow existing court orders.

"One man I prosecuted was sentenced to 60 days in jail for putting his wife in the hospital," Wilkerson said. "I'll go so far as to say I will prosecute domestic violence cases if there is a third party witness."

He maintains he has enough time away from his duties as county attorney to successfully pursue a private practice. Wilkerson and law partner Mike Thomas share an office at 501 S. Gregg St.

The youthful and confident Wilkerson displayed courtroom savvy beyond his years while defending Arthur Clay McIntire in a highly publicized murder trial last October.

"There are times when I work very late at night, but it is a matter of putting in the hours to make sure the job gets done," Wilkerson said.

Liftoff

liftoff that Discovery had achieved a successful orbit 180 miles above the Earth.

"All systems are clean as a whistle," Mission Control commentator Brian Welch reported from Houston.

The flight, postponed for nearly a month by mechanical faults, is the third since the Challenger disaster more than three years ago and starts NASA on an ambitious schedule calling for seven shuttle launches in 1989.

"It's a great start to a long launch season," launch director Bob Sieck told a news conference. He said that except for the weather, the countdown was virtually fault-free.

A 700-foot geyser of flame trailed the $1.5 billion craft as it rolled onto its desired course and sped toward orbit.

More than 45,000 people jammed viewing areas along nearby beaches, roads and river banks to watch the blazing departure of the 28th space shuttle flight.

Two minutes and six seconds after liftoff, the flight passed a critical milestone when the two solid fuel booster rockets burned out and jettisoned on schedule into the Atlantic Ocean. The failure of a booster rocket joint led to the loss of Challenger and its seven-person crew.

Six hours into the flight, the astronauts were to perform the main task of the mission — deploying the 2½-ton Tracking and Data Relay Satellite. It then was to be carried by its own rocket to a 22,300-mile-high orbit to join two older satellites and complete an orbiting network essential for communicating with future space shuttles and with science and military satellites.

With the new satellite operational, Mission Control will be able to communicate with an orbiting shuttle 85 percent of the time, in contrast with the old system of ground stations which provided only 15 percent coverage. NASA plans to shut six of those ground stations at a monthly savings of $3 million.

Immediately on reaching orbit, commander Michael L. Coats pitched the shuttle's nose down so crewmate Dr. James M. Bagian could photograph the 154-foot-tall external tank as it drifted away toward a breakup over the Indian Ocean.

On the last shuttle mission, Atlantis' thermal tiles were severely damaged by insulation that was hit by debris that fell off one of the solid fuel booster rockets.

Modifications were made to correct the problem, and today's photographs should show if any more insulation came off.

"Jim got some real good pictures of the tank from the overhead" window, Coats reported. "We can see it real well."

Coats and his crew were awakened at 3:16 a.m. and, in a surprise, showed up for breakfast wearing business suits and ties. Fine china and candles adorned the table for the steak and eggs feast.

Wearing the suits instead of the normal casual wear apparently was a tongue-in-cheek response to word that NASA was trying to curb astronauts' penchant for fun. Officials reportedly were annoyed by a televised show two missions ago when the crew floated through the shuttle cabin wearing colorful Hawaiian shirts.

Flying with Coats, a 43-year-old Navy captain, are Air Force Col. John E. Blaha, 46, the pilot; Marine Col. James F. Buchli, 43, and Robert C. Springer, 46, and Bagian, 36, a physician. Coats and Buchli have flown on previous shuttle flights.

Discovery originally was set for liftoff Feb. 18, but the launch was postponed four times.

Trash burning starts fire

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Firefighters from four area volunteer departments battled a grass fire Sunday afternoon near Coahoma, officials said.

The fire apparently started on Paul Allen's ranch, located one mile east and one mile south of Coahoma, about 4 p.m. and was the result of burning trash that was blown by the wind, Silver Hills Fire Chief Larry Chandler said.

About 30 volunteer firefighters from the Silver Hills, Forsan, Jonesboro, Coahoma and Forsan departments battled the grass fire for approximately 2½ hours, Chandler said.

There were no injuries reported or structures damaged in the blaze.

Because of the unseasonably warm weather and low humidities, Chandler is advising area residents who burn trash to make sure there are no aerosol cans in it; check the wind direction; and cover trash cans with wire mesh.

holding their arms," said Smith. But for the most part, the students were "taking it pretty well," said a health department nurse, who asked not to be identified.

"A few of (the male students) are screaming and hollering just to scare the others," said the nurse. "But most of them are taking it very well."

Woodall said there have been no confirmed cases of measles at any of the other campuses within the Big Spring school district, and only one other possible case in Howard County.

A student in the Coahoma school district is believed to have contracted the measles, but it is not confirmed, he said.

The health department will not offer inoculations at other campuses unless a need arises, he said.

"We are advised not to go ahead and revaccinate in other schools unless they develop at least one case," Woodall said.

School nurses on each BSISD campus have identified students who received measles vaccinations before they were 15 months old in the event an outbreak should occur.

While Woodall said it is impossible to predict whether the outbreak will spread, he believes "the immunization program will take care of (the outbreak) real well."

The two students who contracted the rubella measles were exposed to the disease at a swim meet in Fort Stockton, officials have said.

The symptoms of rubella measles are fever, runny nose, cough, watery eyes and a rash which usually appears on the head and face and spreads to the body, according to the Texas Department of Health.

Persons born before 1957 are likely to have been exposed to measles and generally are not considered susceptible to the disease, according to the TDH.

Police beat

Two traffic accidents with minor injuries were reported within minutes of each other Saturday night, according to police reports.

About 7:50 p.m., a car driven by Kevin Brent Matteson, 28, HC Box 92C, was traveling southbound in the 2600 block of South Gregg Street when it was struck by car driven by Antonio Ibarra Sifeutes, 40, 709 Anna St., reports stated.

Sifeutes' vehicle was in the process of crossing the parking area of Highland Mall, although Matteson told police he didn't see the car because Sifeutes was driving without the headlights on, according to reports.

A passenger in Sifeutes' car suffered minor injuries and he was cited by police for failure to yield right of way.

About 8 p.m., a vehicle driven by Esther Busurto Cano, 17, Coahoma, was preparing to turn left in the 600 block of North Owens Street when it collided with a car driven by Carla Sabrina Long, 20, 4100 Parkway Drive, reports stated.

Cano, who was cited by police for failure to yield right of way/turning left, sustained minor injuries, according to reports.

Big Spring police also reported investigating the following incidents:

• A woman who resides in the 200 block of East 22nd Street reported unknown persons took items valued at $450.

• A man who resides in the 1500 block of West Second Street reported unknown persons took a video cassette recorder valued at $200.

• A clerk at the Radio Shack, 1705 E. FM 700, reported unknown persons took an AM/FM digital cassette stereo valued at $100.

• Jesus (Jessie) Parras, 33, 809 N.W. Sixth St., was arrested on a charge of burglary of habitation.

• A woman who listed her address as HC 61 reported someone she knows assaulted her.

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Opinions from across the U.S. Bush decision correct

There was no need for President Bush to enter the 17-month-old Eastern Airlines-machinists union battle. By refusing to get involved, the president rightfully left the resolution to this domestic dispute to the parties already involved.

The magnitude of the crisis hardly demands federal intervention. It's not as if the nation's steel mills are shutting down or the air traffic controllers have all walked off the job.

A 60-day cooling-off period, which the president could have called for, would not have made any difference.

This highly publicized disagreement is more a conflict of personalities than a management vs. labor battle. It is no secret that Eastern owner Frank Lorenzo wants to dump the ailing airline, particularly after he failed to bust the union as he did at Continental and was unable to turn around People Express and Frontier Airlines.

Lorenzo and Eastern appear headed toward Chapter 11 (bankruptcy reorganization) and/or a sale. Either way, both sides get what they deserve.

Planes have life spans

Those airline accidents are enough to make a person want to stay on the ground, but in this modern age that is impractical for many.

The questions that must be asked and answered now are these: Should airlines be forced to retire their old... airliners when they reach a certain age, rather than continue to repair them? What should be the criterion for an airliner's retirement? And does the aviation industry react quickly enough to correct the problems of aging aircraft once they become known?

For years, the industry has argued that age alone is no reason to ground a plane permanently, provided it is properly inspected and maintained. But now... airline engineers are correctly having second thoughts.

The awful reality is that the FAA's tardiness actively contributes to the fear — not to say the danger — of airline travelers already alarmed by these midair calamities involving older aircraft.

That has to change, and change quickly, before more lives are sacrificed to the truly worrisome combination of ignorance and procrastination.

Speaking fees still wrong

Many panic-stricken members of Congress who voted down a 51 percent raise now seem to think they no longer are obliged to ban the acceptance of hefty speaking fees paid to them by lobbying organizations.

They are dead wrong, from an ethical as well as a political standpoint.

One of the reasons for the huge proposed pay increase was to make it more palatable for lawmakers to stop padding their individual salaries with tens of thousands of dollars supplied to them by interest groups in the form of speaking fees.

Such payments — totaling more than $10 million a year — are an insidious form of legalized bribery and congressional leaders acknowledged as much when they initiated steps to abolish speaking fees in exchange for the raise.

The chairman of President Bush's new Commission on Federal Ethics Law Reform, retired federal judge Malcolm R. Wilkey, reflects the unsparing view of most voters: "The practice (of speaking fees) is evil."

Joining a host of other ethics-minded groups, the presidential panel has unanimously recommended that speaking fees and other outside payments from special interests be abolished, irrespective of the question of a congressional raise.

This is the only step that will quell the voters' justifiable wrath.

AIDS means new policies

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome has broken all the rules, and society is slowly reacting to the epidemic. The latest change is a recommendation from two federal health agencies to make methadone, a synthetic narcotic, more readily available to heroin addicts seeking treatment.

The goal is to fight the spread of AIDS through needle sharing by intravenous drug abusers.

In less than a decade, this fatal disease has claimed 49,976 lives, and has been diagnosed in 39,000 more people. After a halting start the medical community is in hot pursuit of vaccines, but the disease has proven an elusive target.

Weaning addicts from needles with methadone or reducing the reuse of needles by distributing clean needles takes a change of attitude for... professionals, lawmakers and citizens.

As the human and financial toll of the AIDS epidemic mounts, society will be reassessing many old values. These early public health adjustments may seem quaint.

Book misses real imponderables

By CHRIS SATULLO

I'm looking at a book called "Why Do Clocks Run Clockwise? — and Other Imponderables." It's a compendium of answers to mundane but baffling mysteries, compiled by one David Feldman.

For example: Why is the moon so much bigger when it's near the horizon? (That's an optical illusion.)

Why do ants congregate on sidewalks? (Sidewalks are warmer and we keep dropping food on them.)

Why is a ketchup bottle so narrow that you can't fit a spoon in it to help the ketchup along? (Because, back when Heinz first started putting ketchup in bottles, the condiment was much more watery. The narrow neck was intended to impede the flow.)

As for the conundrum in the book's title, early clocks were designed to follow the movement of shadows on a sundial. In the northern hemisphere, those shadows move... well, clockwise.

Browsing through this list of life's little riddles puts me in mind of a few that Feldman doesn't resolve in this book, such as:

- Why does Feldman call questions to which he's found answers "imponderables," since the word means something that can't be determined or evaluated.
- Why in the world did Bryant Gumbel leave that memo sitting where others could see it?
- How can anyone who has so much as watched a plane take off in the last few years call the deregulatory mania of the Reagan years a success?
- Nowadays, anyone who buys a plane ticket offers a litany of prayers.
- First prayer: Please, don't let the airline go on strike or out of business before my flight takes off.
- Second prayer: Please, don't let my flight be overbooked or cancelled.
- Third prayer: Please, don't let this plane be sideswiped at takeoff by some wandering Cessna that an undertrained or burnt-out controller forgot about.
- Fourth prayer: Please, don't let this plane be one of those creaky graybeards off of which various parts, including engines and chunks of fuselage, have a nasty habit of falling. (But what's that baling wire doing on the left wing?) Seventh prayer: Whoooooomphhh! Yikes! Please, let that just be normal turbulence. Eighth prayer: Let that person one row back with the white knuckles, pale face and chattering teeth be a congressman.

- How could anyone get that nasty about Willard Scott?
- Why do intelligent people who retain some capacity for moral outrage continue to watch and care about big-time college football?

Freely confessing that I remain part of this mystery, I ask how we can justify supporting even passively a sport that makes the likes of Barry Switzer its Number One.

At Oklahoma, Switzer has created a "program" (as college coaches insist on calling their fiefdoms) that allows young men to become pampered, amoral, steroid-crazed thugs and rapists. Occasionally, the players step so far over the line they get nabbed by the law, but Switzer never seems to be asked to pay for his laxness.

Oklahoma is only the most publicized of such situations; they seem to be the norm, not the anomaly, in the "sport" today. It becomes increasingly clear that the only effective goad to reform would be empty stadiums and unwatched game broadcasts. Until we stop cheering on Saturdays, many coaches and players will keep jeering at the law.

- Why do so many people seem to dislike "thirtysomething" so intensely?

OK, I admit, the lower-case title is annoying. And, yes, Hope sets my teeth on edge, too.

But "thirtysomething" is well-produced and well-acted. Its scripts are often clever and sometimes daring. The show occasionally achieves a depth and subtlety in its depiction of how folks behave that you will find very, very rarely on commercial television.

I've heard people ask: What are these rich and handsome people doing having all this angst and insecurity? Why should I care about these self-absorbed yuppies?

Well, the "thirtysomething" crowd is simply going through the same trials life poses for most of us: Letting go of our parents while holding on to them; controlling our egos enough to allow us to live life with a person we love; wanting but fearing the sweet imprisonment of parenthood.

These challenges make us crazy at times; they make these television characters crazy, too, in ways that strike me as authentic, interesting, funny and sad.

Why care about a bunch of yuppies? Why care about a bunch of dynasts in Denver or oilmen in Texas or winegrowers in California? Or about a New York City obstetrician and lawyer, and their four perfect kids? Television doesn't offer much in the way of gritty reality when it comes to presenting family life.

In this landscape, the crew on "thirtysomething" actually stands out as relatively real and solid. Most important, this show doesn't ask you to like all of its characters, or to like its most likable characters all of the time. Each has been a total ass at times, a flawed angel at others. Just like real people. Which makes "thirtysomething" — despite Hope and the lower-case t — a treasure to cherish on a medium that, instead of real people, more often brings you "Real People."

- What would Bryant Gumbel have done if, like "Today" pioneer Dave Garroway, he'd had to share the sound stage with a chimp?

Around the rim

Which good old days?

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

I've been told I'm not old enough to appreciate the way things used to be. My oldest brother says I can't appreciate the music of his day, my other brother tells me I can't appreciate the political demonstrations of his day and my parents tell me I can't appreciate the virtues of their day. (And these are the same people who supposedly took barefoot cross-country walks to school in the dead of winter.)

All of this nostalgia has puzzled me. It seems ironic that almost everyone wants to go back to the past, but almost no one knows exactly where they want to go back to. The '70s? The '50s? The '90s? The Middle Ages? What?

There is a definite tendency to avoid dates when referring to those better days. Instead, one hears a constant use of abstractions like "days when you could walk the streets," "when people cared" and "days before government red tape" (definitely going way way back). Most likely people use those terms because those days are more an idea than they ever were a specific time.

This is really a problem of selective perception — only seeing the part of the past we like to see and forgetting the rest. It's wanting to go back to the days when Japan bought American cars and forgetting about the carnage of two Asian "conflicts." It's wanting to go back to the days of "good Christian morals" of 40 years ago and forgetting there was a separate America for millions of minorities. It's wanting to go back to the "simple way of life" and forgetting that cholera and smallpox took a heavy toll on life when doctors were scarce and medicine was more like voodoo than science. It's wanting to go back to something that never really was.

The temptation to revel in the glory days is a normal one. The important thing to remember is that the good old days are — ultimately — a state of mind.

Two-thirds of marriages will fail

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only one in three of today's marriages can be expected to last, according to a new study that says divorce and separation have been under-reported.

The projection is contained in a study in the journal Demography, which says an apparent decline in divorces since 1980 is likely to have little effect on long-term prospects.

"This decline may indicate a return to a more stable family life; however, it would be foolish to jump to that conclusion from this brief deviation from the trend," said researchers Larry L. Bumpass and Teresa Castro Martin of the University of Wisconsin's Center for Demography.

With the marriage rate running about double that for divorces, they note that the basic data indicate "that 56 percent of recent first marriages would be likely to disrupt within 40 years of marriage." However, studies have found a "serious under-reporting" of divorce and separation in the government's Current Population Survey, according to their study: "Recent Trends in Marital Disruption."

Taking that into consideration "we conclude that the best estimate based on these data is that about two-thirds of all first marriages are likely to disrupt."

Population experts estimate that as many as 6 percent of marriages end in separation without a divorce, he said. That, added to the more than 50 percent that divorce, push the total near the two-thirds range, he said.

As divorces increase among first marriages more people are available to tie the knot a second time — and Bumpass and Martin found that second marriages were even less stable than first ones.

New game mocks TV evangelists

WESTON, Conn. (AP) — The shenanigans of television evangelists have spawned another player in America's multimillion-dollar board game industry, this one irreverently named "Fleece the Flock."

The game, developed by a writer, an inventor and an illustrator, is based loosely on "Monopoly," but instead of real-estate tycoons, players assume the roles of greedy evangelists.

"I came up with the idea when Jimmy Swaggart was caught in the motel," said Elizabeth Fuller, author of "My Search for the Ghost of Flight 401" and other books. "I thought, 'These guys belong on a board game.'"

Equipped with collection plates, players toss the dice and pursue ownership of theme parks, television stations and record companies while trying to bankrupt their unholy competitors and keep their own sexual escapades secret.

"Fleece the Flock" is only the latest board game to capitalize on people in the news. Milton Bradley, maker of the some of the country's most popular games, last month unveiled "Trump — The Game," based on the wheeling and dealing of billionaire real estate mogul Donald Trump.

Helicopter crashes over desert

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — An Air Force Reserve helicopter crashed and burned in an uninhabited stretch of desert about 20 miles north of here Sunday while on a night training mission, officials said.

The number of people aboard the helicopter and their conditions were not immediately known.

The CH-3 "Jolly Green Giant" helicopter was flying with another chopper from Davis-Monthan Air Force to the Air Force's Gila Bend Gunnery Range when it went down at about 7:45 p.m., according to a base spokesman, Capt. Mark Besch.

"I looked up and I seen a yellow ball, like flames, coming out of the back," eyewitness Mike Skreka told a Tucson television station. "About four seconds later it hit the ground."

Besch said the CH-3 helicopter usually carries a crew of four and has a capacity of 22 passengers. He said he knew nothing about the people aboard the helicopter that crashed.

Thousands of refugees flood southern border

TAPACHULA, Mexico (AP) — Pushed by hunger, civil wars and unemployment, thousands of Central American refugees are working their way through Mexico on an often dangerous trek to what they hope will be a better life in the United States.

"It's like a trail of ants," one Mexican official said of the Central Americans flooding across Mexico's southern border.

Mexican officials estimate that at any given moment at least 10,000 Central Americans are in Mexico, many of them heading toward Brownsville, Texas, the closest point in the United States to Central America.

Oscar Mauricio Torres Sosa, legal adviser to El Salvador's Migration Department, said at least 550,000 to 600,000 people — over 10 percent of the population — have left the country during its 9-year-old civil war, the vast majority for the United States.

As many as 100,000 Central Americans may enter, or try to enter, the United States this year, U.S. immigration officials say.

Many of the refugees say they are persecuted in their homelands by death squads, the army or guerrilla groups. Many take buses through other Central American nations and arrive in Tapachula, in the southernmost state of Chiapas.

On the 1,100-mile trail north to Matamoros, the refugees encounter extortion from officials and bus drivers, then find themselves cheated or stripped by smugglers who offer to take them past newly reinforced U.S. border patrols in the Matamoros-Brownsville region.

Once inside the United States, the refugees face arrest by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, which is jailing and deporting those who can't prove political persecution.

Mexican officials in Tapachula complain that Central Americans take jobs from Mexicans, don't pay taxes on their businesses and commit crimes.

"Our worry is the same as in the United States: What do we do with them? Here we have an economic recession," declared one official. Mexico is already struggling to provide jobs for one million new workers annually.

President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua summed up his attitude by saying that opponents can't find their democracy in Miami.

Queen urges environmental role

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II sent a message Monday to the 48 members of the British Commonwealth, saying they had a particular role in combating the global threat of pollution.

It was the queen's Commonwealth Day message to the organization of Britain and its colonies and followed speeches given last week by Prince Philip, her husband, and Prince Charles, her son, on damage to the Earth's resources.

She said nothing during the past year underlined world interdependence more forcefully than the growth in awareness of the serious dangers man's own activities pose to the environment. "The threat to the environment takes many forms, of which some are so far reaching that it is difficult to grasp them," she said.

"We hear, for example, of the possibility of radical changes in our climate leading, among other things, to a rise in the sea level, with all that would mean for small islands and low-lying regions."

Prince Charles, the heir to the throne, addressed an international conference in London last week and appealed for the elimination of chlorofluorocarbon gases, which are destroying the ozone layer that protects the Earth from harmful radiation from the sun.

'Raiders' among banned words

PARIS (AP) — It's getting tough in France these days for corporate raiders. They're banned. So, for that matter, are white knights, black knights, and traveler's checks.

Only from the vocabulary, of course.

In its latest battle against franglais, or anglicized French, the Finance Ministry has evicted the foreign intruders from the official language.

Now, companies won't be taken over by raiders — or "rai-dairs," as the French say — they'll be taken over by "attaquants," or attackers. Knights, black or white, are now "chevaliers." And at dinner, you'll have to pay with a "cheque-voyage."

The decree, signed by Finance Minister Pierre Berégovoy, was entered last week into the Official Journal where all official pronouncements are inscribed.

It states that the French designation be used in all administrative texts, documents or correspondence as well as "in information or presentations for radio or television."

The decree did not specify how authorities might deal with continued flagrant use of the outlawed English words.

The action was the latest in a more than decade-long battle by French officialdom against Franglais. The battle has been mainly uphill.

Israelis kill PLO guerillas

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops killed at least three Palestinian guerrillas in south Lebanon early today in a gunbattle illuminated by parachute flares after a chase through hills near Israel's border.

It was the second day in a row that Israeli troops had clashed with guerrillas in Israel's self-proclaimed security zone that were headed for attacks in northern Israel.

The Israeli army showed reporters the bodies of three slain guerrillas at a base in northern Israel, displaying identification papers showing the dead men belonged to a Syrian-based PLO faction and saying they intended to attack an Israeli settlement. The faction, the Palestine Liberation Front, said in a statement that the guerrillas were headed into Israel for a raid.

Today's was the fourth clash between PLO guerrillas and Israeli soldiers in less than three weeks. On Sunday, Israeli soldiers killed two Palestinian guerrillas who entered the security zone.

Israel has cited the clashes in asking the United States to call off its dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization. It maintains they prove that PLO chairman Yasser Arafat is violating his renunciation of terrorism.

Vets, students clash in flag art protests

CHICAGO (AP) — A hotly debated art exhibit that has a U.S. flag lying on a floor touched off a protest by about 2,500 veterans and supporters and a clash that led to the arrests of at least four, police said.

Before the scuffle, police arrested two men who described themselves as art students as they stenciled American flags on the sidewalks around the museum building. They were charged with criminal damage to property.

During Sunday's demonstration outside the Art Institute of Chicago, a group of veterans attacked about a dozen students who were holding a counter-demonstration. They swung fists, threw hot coffee and shouted at the students to leave the country. Police intervened, and no one was injured.

Police said at least one veteran was arrested on battery charges and three students were charged with disorderly conduct. The confrontation was broken up after police led the students to a corner about two blocks away from the veterans, and kept the groups apart.

In front of the institute, the veterans, who came from at least nine states, chanted, "One, two, three, four, get the flag off the floor."

"I just think it's a sin to have the flag on the floor," said Michael Boorsma, 38, a Vietnam veteran from suburban Batavia. "It bothers me tremendously."

Veterans also came from Wisconsin, West Virginia, Michigan, Indiana, Oklahoma, New York, Vermont, and Arkansas. They waved hundreds of flags, including some with the Revolutionary War motto "Don't tread on me."

The demonstration was the biggest in a series of protests over a student art exhibit titled "What is the Proper Way to Display a U.S. Flag?" The exhibit includes the flag lying on the floor beneath a shelf where visitors can write comments in two ledger books.

The versatile turtleneck

Turtleneck sweaters have gone from being an item of sportswear to becoming a masculine fashion statement a man can wear anywhere — almost. The turtleneck had been around since before the turn of the century, according to an article in the current issue of Esquire, but it took Noel Coward to bring it into style in 1924. "I took to wearing colored turtlenecked jerseys," Coward said in his memoirs, "actually more for comfort than for effect, and soon I was informed by my evening paper that I had started a fad."

What Coward had done was taken turtlenecks, that had been around for about 30 years as sports dress, and turned them into a substitute for a shirt and tie.

It was the opening salvo in what has since been a long-running struggle against the tyranny of neckties. The anti-necktie group has included people from chorus boys to artists and intellectuals. They went on to other substitutes for the shirt-and-tie — scarves, neckerchiefs and open-necked shirts. But the turtleneck was the boldest — the picture of masculine poise and arrogance, redolent of athletes, sportsmen, even U-boat commanders. It made neckties seem fussy and superfluous. Over the years, the battle seasawed back and forth. Turtlenecks had a major resurgence in the 1960s during the Peacock Revolution in menswear.

Some of the fiercest skirmishes were fought in the better restaurants. Maitre d's stood guard at the velvet rope and glared at patrons in turtlenecks worn under anything from sports jackets and blazers to two-piece suits. Most of them gave in. Walter Weiss of New York City's "21" was one maitre d' who stood firm.

"Forgive me," he would say politely, "but our dress code is jackets and ties. Do let me offer you one of these."

Readers urge cheater to face the music

DEAR READERS: I received a letter from a woman signed "Feeling Rotten," who was beside herself with guilt because while visiting her best friend in another city, her friend's live-in lover came to her bedroom in the middle of the night and she "let him" make love to her. She admitted that she responded positively, adding she "hopes" she's not pregnant because they used no protection. "Feeling Rotten" asked me if she should tell her friend what took place. I aired the pros and cons, then asked my readers how they would vote.

So far, it's a dead heat — and the letters are still coming in: Some responses from readers who say "Tell!"

DEAR ABBY: "Feeling Rotten" should feel rotten, because she is rotten to the core. She must have given her best friend's live-in lover some kind of encouragement — flirting, body language, eye signals to let him know she could be had — or he never would have had the chutzpah to come to her bed in the middle of the night. Yes, she should tell her friend what kind of bum she's living with. It will probably be the end of their friendship, but if she keeps quiet and her friend marries this heel, it could be the worst mistake of her life. — BEEN THERE IN WILMINGTON, DEL.

DEAR ABBY: "Feeling Rotten" should tell her friend immediately. Also, both she and her friend should be tested for AIDS. If they test negative, they should be tested again in six months. And it goes without saying that the sleepwalking boyfriend should also be tested. — AN M.D. IN THE BRONX

DEAR ABBY: "Feeling Rotten" should tell! How I wish someone had told me what a louse my husband was. He was in his last year of medical training and it was accepted that his hours were erratic and his schedule flexible. Finding out from a phone bill with a list of 15 of the same numbers from a different city was the most agonizing revelation I had to face. He swore he'd never do it again. But he did. If only a friend had told me, I later learned that everyone knew it but me. We are still married and are reasonably happy, but I'll never be able to trust him. We have two fine children, which is the cement that has held us together. — NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR ABBY: This happened to me. Only I was married at the time. My wife had a younger sister who spent the night with us. One night my wife went to bed early. Sister and I stayed up to watch television. She said her back ached, so I rubbed her back. One thing led to another, and we ended up in bed. We both felt so guilty, we went to my wife together and told her what had happened, and promised it would never happen again. She was hurt, but she forgave us, and we all put it behind us. Everything is better out in the open. Today, I have no desire for the sister — nor she for me. (She's married now.) Confessing took the "romance" out of it. — NO MORE GUILT IN VERMONT

Planting peonies

From MIDWEST LIVING
A Meredith Magazine

Even a gardener who has a black thumb can grow peonies, insist Tracey and Craig Colley of Klehm Nursery in South Barrington, Ill. The Colleys share some tricks in Midwest Living magazine to help gardeners' peonies reach their blossoming best:

- Where to plant: Peonies don't require full sun, but plant them where they'll get at least six hours of direct sunlight daily to strengthen stems.
- When to plant: Fall is the best time to plant or divide and transplant.
- Soil type: Mix a good, all-purpose garden fertilizer (one not too rich in nitrogen) with soil when planting peonies. After that, one application of fertilizer every third year is enough.
- Watering: Plant in a well-drained location. Don't over-water. For best flowers, peonies need four inches of rain from the time they sprout until budding.
- Pruning: For showy, big flowers, trim side buds and leave only one bud per stem. "This helps the stem support the big flower," Craig Colley adds. Cut back plants when they start to wither, either in late summer or early fall.
- To encourage flowering: Cover the "eyes" of the rootstock (from which the next year's plant will sprout) with approximately two inches of soil.

Easy travel pointers

Whether travelers are off on a two-week tour of the Southeast or a month-long jaunt through Europe, Mature Outlook magazine reports the basics of food and clothing make many wonder if they'll end up with extra pounds — from eating too much and from taking along too many clothes. Experienced travelers have discovered they can reduce both.

Try these pointers for keeping that excess baggage, in the calorie sense, to a real minimum.

- Start with the philosophy, "I'm not going to clean my plate."
- Eat a filling breakfast, then go lighter on lunch and dinner. Those breakfast calories will burn throughout the day and travelers will be less apt to feel famished and overeat at the end of the day.
- Eat five or six mini-meals rather than two or three big meals, especially when one of those meals is likely to be later in the evening.
- Try to eat food in the freshest and simplest forms available, rather than drenched in calorie-packed sauces and gravies. Many restaurant menus offer foods broiled, roasted, grilled, poached, steamed or stir-fried, so travelers can stay away from fried or sautéed foods. Also, order salad dressings on the side.

- Alcoholic beverages and non-diet soft drinks camouflage extra calories. These calories, with no nutritional value, really do add up. So try to limit them. Also, drink lots of water, tap water or bottled sparkling mineral water (depending on the safety of the local drinking water), and substitute low-calorie soft drinks whenever possible.
- If lodgings offer a kitchenette, great! Although travelers likely won't want to cook all their meals, occasionally preparing meals means they can cook what they want, when they want and save a little money, too.
- Plan a regular exercise program. Get up a few minutes earlier and walk 20 to 30 minutes. And walk whenever it's possible and practical.

Pack light, but right. That's about the simplest advice anyone can give travelers-to-be when they are trying to decide what clothes to take on a trip. To determine what is right, consider not just what clothes to take, but also how the clothes relate to each other in style, color and pattern.

Before the trip, make a list and put it in a prominent spot where items can be added or subtracted.

Porkers win SWC tourney

DALLAS (AP) — Arkansas won the Southwest Conference post-season tournament, but the NCAA put a damper on the Razorbacks' celebration.

The Razorbacks assumed they would be coming back to Dallas for the NCAA Midwest Regional first round after they drilled Texas 100-76 on Sunday in the Southwest Conference post-season tournament final.

But the NCAA Selection Committee made the Hogs only the number five seed in the Midwest and sent them to Indianapolis for a Thursday night game with run-and-gun Loyola-Marymount of Los Angeles.

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson doesn't like it.

"I'm disappointed for our fans who are the greatest in the world," Richardson said. "It's sad our fans can't come back to Dallas which has been so good to us. Reunion Arena is our Barnhill South. I thought we'd be in this bracket."

Richardson said it will be a new experience for his Hogs to meet a team that runs more than Arkansas does.

"We don't want to get into any 180-160 ballgame with them," Richardson said. "I think they put up a shot every five seconds. It will be a new thing for me to try to slow our kids down."

Arkansas, 24-6, the regular season champion, won its first tournament since 1982. It will be the Hogs' 11th NCAA appearance in the last 13 years.

Lenzie Howell scored 28 points and had 12 rebounds as the Razorbacks ran away from Texas which got its first NCAA bid since 1979.

The Longhorns also got a big favor from the NCAA. They will be coming back to Reunion Arena to play Georgia Tech of the Atlantic Coast Conference on Friday.

Texas coach Tom Penders said "that's a tremendous break for us and our fans."

Texas couldn't stop Howell, a transfer from San Jacinto Junior College. Howell, who was named the tourney's MVP, said he felt he had something to prove because he was left off SWC all-conference teams.

"I felt I had something to prove because I was overlooked," Howell said. "I wanted everybody in the league to know I could play. I thought I should have at least made the second team."

Richardson called Howell "one of those players who didn't draw a lot of national attention. We didn't have to fight very many teams off to get him."

Penders said the two overtime games the Longhorns had getting into the finals tired team. Southern Methodist and Texas Christian both extended Texas, 24-8.

"We just didn't have our legs," Penders said. "We just never got in the flow of the game. Arkansas was on fire from the start."

Penders said Arkansas was a great team.

"We just didn't have the ammunition to match them," Penders said. "Arkansas is a great team and I predict they'll go a long way in the NCAA tournament."

Penders said it was a break to get to play Georgia Tech in Dallas in a first round game on Friday.

"If we can play up to our ability we can beat them," Penders said. "It will help us to come back here to Reunion. It will be fun."

Richardson said he hopes both Arkansas and Texas go a long way.

Tigers drop Sooners in Big Eight finals

By The Associated Press Oklahoma, runner-up in last year's NCAA tournament, finished second again on Sunday.

Byron Irvin scored 29 points and Doug Smith had 22 points and 14 rebounds as 10th-ranked Missouri beat the second-ranked Sooners 98-86 to win the Big Eight tournament and an automatic NCAA bid.

Smith's mother, Kathryn, drove 14 hours to Kansas City to watch her son play for the first time.

"It was a special occasion," said Smith, who was named the tournament's most valuable player. "I just tried to go out and do what I've been doing all along. I just had a great game today."

Missouri, 27-7, is the No. 3 seed in the NCAA Midwest Regional and will play Creighton in the first round. Oklahoma, 28-5, is the top seed in the Southeast Regional and will meet East Tennessee State in the opening round.

Also winning conference tournaments and automatic NCAA bids Sunday were: top-ranked Arizona, No. 3 Georgetown, No. 9 North Carolina, No. 16 Louisville, Alabama, Arkansas and Ball State.

Arizona routed No. 12 Stanford 73-51 in the Pacific-10; Georgetown beat No. 5 Syracuse 88-79 in the Big East; North Carolina edged No. 7 Duke 77-74 in the Atlantic Coast Conference; Louisville downed No. 14 Florida State 87-80 in the Metro; Alabama topped Florida 72-60 in the Southeastern; Arkansas crushed Texas 100-76 in the Southwest; and No. 19 Ball State edged Kent State 67-65 in the Mid-American.

Oklahoma's Stacey King dominated inside against Missouri, scoring a tournament-record 38 points. But the Sooners' perimeter game produced only 19 points.

New Mexico again shunned from NCAA playoffs

NEW YORK (AP) — New Mexico is making its sixth straight trip to the National Invitation Tournament. For intra-state rival New Mexico State, the bid to the nation's oldest postseason tournament has been a little longer in coming.

"This renews our spirit," New Mexico State Coach Neil McCarthy said after the Aggies were selected for the 32-team NIT. "This is a great opportunity, and we're looking forward to playing. We're just happy to be going somewhere."

It's the first time in 50 years that New Mexico State is heading for the NIT, now in its 52nd year. The Aggies, 21-10 and second to Nevada-Las Vegas in the Big West Conference, will host Pepperdine, 19-12, on Thursday.

NMSU had its first 20-win season since 1979 and McCarthy felt losses by two and six points against the nationally ranked Runnin' Rebels might be enough to get the Aggies into NCAA Tournament.

"We were 12-4 our last 16 games," McCarthy said, "and two of our losses went down to the wire against UNLV."

New Mexico finished 20-10 this season, but a one-point loss to Hawaii on the final day of the Western Athletic Conference regular season cost the Lobos a share of the league title. Then the Lobos lost 89-57 to Texas-EI Paso in the WAC tournament.

"That's why I came here, so I could go to the NIT," said first-year New Mexico Coach Dave Bliss. "I've been to the NCAA."

The Lobos host Santa Clara, 20-10, in a first-round game Thursday.

Also invited to the tournament Sunday were defending NIT champion Connecticut, last year's runner-up, Ohio State, and three schools with 23 victories:

Georgia Southern, 23-5; Boise State, 23-6, and St. Louis, 23-9.

Other invitees include Arkansas State, 20-9; Kent State, 20-10; Akron, 21-7; Richmond, 20-9; St. Peter's, 22-8; UC Santa Barbara 21-8; Southern Illinois, 20-13; Temple, 18-11; Villanova, 16-15; Alabama-Birmingham, 18-11; Mississippi, 15-14; New Orleans, 19-10; St. John's, 15-13; Wichita State, 18-13; Wisconsin, 17-11; North Carolina-Charlotte, 17-11; Murray State, 19-10; Penn State, 19-11; Hawaii, 17-12; California, 19-11; Nebraska 16-15; Michigan State, 15-13; and Oklahoma State, 16-12.

Temple reached the NCAA final eight last year, where it lost to Duke. The Owls, who were ranked 19th in The Associated Press preseason poll, were upset in the Atlantic 10 conference tournament semifinals by Rutgers.

Villanova was 12th in the preseason poll, but in the tough Big East didn't fare well against Georgetown, Syracuse, Seton Hall and Pitt.

St. John's is in the NIT for a record 25th time and seeking a record fourth title. The last time the Redmen won the NIT was in 1965.

The tournament gets underway Wednesday with Mississippi at St. John's, Temple at Richmond, St. Peter's at Villanova, Akron at Ohio State, Southern Illinois at St. Louis, New Orleans at Wisconsin, Connecticut at North Carolina-Charlotte, and Murray State at Penn State.

Kite soars high above PGA competition

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Tom Kite planned to take the kids to nearby Walt Disney World. It was an appropriate place to go, the continuation of a theme, because Kite would be the first to tell you it was a Mickey Mouse finish that produced his playoff victory over Davis Love III in the Nestle Invitational golf tournament.

"Mind-boggling. That's an unbelievable chain of events; the most shocking result of a golf tournament I've ever seen in my life," the 39-year-old Kite said.

Love agreed: "It was a mess."

It was bizarre.

At one time or another over the final 18 holes:

- Love blew a two-shot lead.
- Kite blew a two-shot lead.
- Love took a one-shot lead, and gave it back with a bogey on the next hole.
- Love had a chance to win with a bogey on the final hole — and couldn't do it.

"Mind-boggling. That's an unbelievable chain of events; the most shocking result of a golf tournament I've ever seen in my life," — Tom Kite.

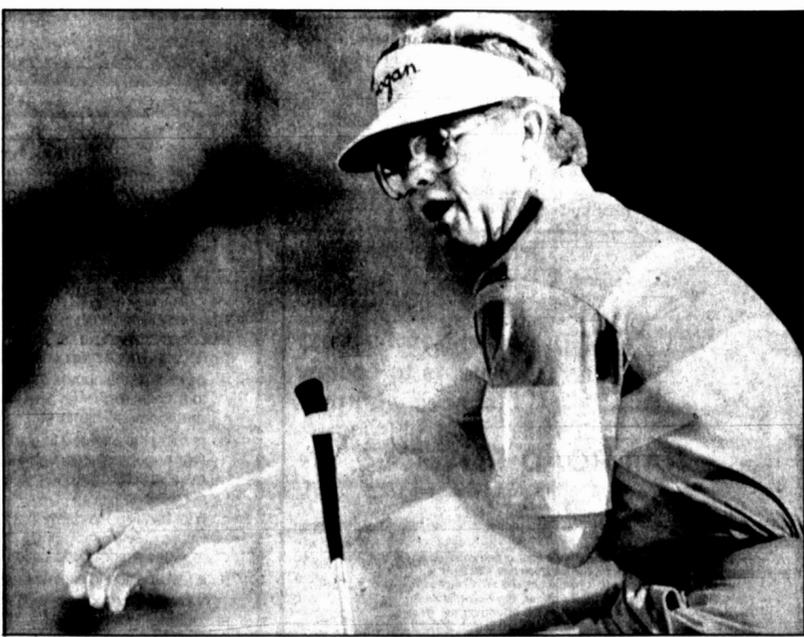

— Kite had a chance to win with a bogey on the final hole — and couldn't do it.

"It looked like a pro-am out there," Kite said, then reconsidered: "No, not that good."

It finally came to a close when Love three-putted for bogey on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff and let the stunned Kite escape with the 11th victory of his 18-year PGA Tour career.

"I won. I won the golf tournament," he said in something approaching disbelief. "But I have a very strange feeling about it."

Love, 24, held a 2-shot lead when they started. Kite caught him on the third hole after a birdie putt on Love's bogey. And Kite moved in front by two at the turn.

"Then we went to the 10th," he said. Everything changed. After playing the front in 32, he couldn't find a green. He one-putted for par on three consecutive holes, then dropped back into a tie with bogeys on the 13th and 14th.

Love solved that. He bogeyed the 15th, but regained a share of the lead with a 16th-hole birdie.

It was still tied when they went to the 18th at the Bay Hill Club, statistically the most difficult finishing hole on the Tour.

"It's tough," Kite said, "but not as tough as we made it look." He hit his second shot in the water, pitched on in 4 and missed a 15-foot putt. Double bogey.

Love flew his second into the gallery, failed to reach the green with his chip, got on in 4 and missed a three-foot putt. Double bogey.

"You don't hit in the water on the last hole and win golf tournaments," Kite protested.

But he did. He became a winner when Love missed an eight-foot second putt on the second playoff hole.

"A lot of crazy things happened," he said.

Kite, who won this event in 1982 when it was called the Bay Hill Classic, won this one with a closing round of par 71 and a 278 total, 6 under par. Love played the last round in 73.

For the third week in a row, U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange made a top-late move in the final round and finished third. His closing 65, the best round of the day, left him one stroke out of the playoff at 279.

Payne Stewart, Don Pooley and Loren Roberts were another stroke back at 280. Stewart and Pooley each had a closing 70, Roberts 72.

Crampton rallies for Senior win

PHOENIX (AP) — Bruce Crampton shot a 3-under-par 68 to overcome a two-stroke deficit Sunday and win the $300,000 Arizona Classic.

Crampton, who finished with a 16-under-par total of 200, won the 16th Senior Tour title of his career.

Bobby Nichols, who led after the first and second rounds, shot a 72 and finished one stroke back. Gene Littler, Bob Boldt and defending champion Al Geiberger were tied for third at 202.

Crampton took the lead when he birdied the 12th hole to go 17-under. But he bogeyed 14, 15 and 16 and fell one stroke behind Nichols, in a tie with Boldt, Littler and Geiberger.

He said despite his poor play, he couldn't afford to dwell on the negative.

"I've got to hit one shot at a time," Crampton said. "Those shots are gone. Sure I want to get through the tournament with as few mistakes as possible, but I make mistakes. I bogeyed two holes yesterday. You can't make it happen. You've got to let it happen. You have to trust your swing."

Crampton birdied 17 to tie Nichols, who parred the hole. Boldt, Littler and Geiberger all shot par on 17.

On the par-5 18th, Crampton reached the green in two and two-putted for a birdie. Nichols was on the green in three and two-putted for par.

Crampton's victory was his first this year. The $45,000 first prize increased his 1989 earnings to $112,624 and raised his Senior Tour career earnings to $1,352,004.

Yankee old-timers get job done

By The Associated Press
The New York Yankees decided to celebrate Old Timers Day in spring training.

Veteran left-handers Ron Guidry, 38, and Tommy John, who will turn 46 in May, are in camp only because owner George Steinbrenner overruled Manager Dallas Green. They each pitched four scoreless innings Sunday as the Yankees beat the Chicago White Sox 4-0 for their fifth consecutive victory.

"I think I've convinced myself that I still can (pitch)," Guidry said after yielding three singles and striking out three. "Now it's a matter of what capacity they want to use me."

Guidry has allowed one run and five hits in eight innings this spring. John scattered five singles in his four innings and also has given up one run — unearned — in eight innings.

Rickey Henderson had the Yankees' big hit, a two-run single in the second inning off Jerry Reuss.

Another group of Yankees beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-3 as Bob Brower had three hits for the second day in a row and drove in two runs with an eighth-inning double.

Meanwhile, there was good news and bad news for the St. Louis Cardinals. Left-hander Joe Magrane, who won the National League ERA crown last year despite missing almost two months with a pulled muscle in his right side, threw four shutout innings in a 6-2 victory over a White Sox split squad.

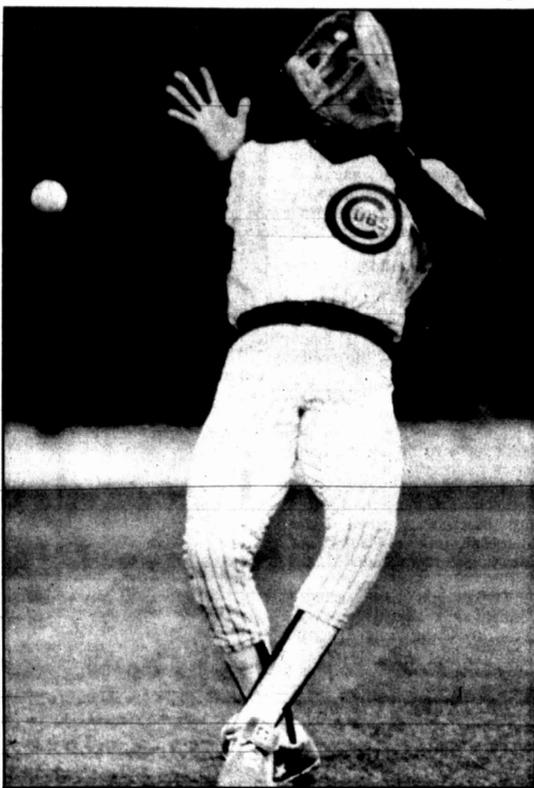

In three spring outings, Magrane has allowed one earned run in 1-0 innings.

"I really didn't have the action on the ball like I hope to have during the season," he said.

St. Louis took advantage of five errors by the White Sox to score three unearned runs. Chicago has 23 errors in 13 games after committing a major-league high 154 last year.

However, the Cardinals learned that right-hander Danny Cox will undergo elbow surgery and will miss the entire 1989 season. Cox has extensive damage to the medial collateral ligament in his elbow.

In a classic pitching matchup, Minnesota's Frank Viola and Boston's Roger Clemens each allowed one run in four innings as the Red Sox nipped the Twins 4-3 when Balvino Galvez walked Danny Heep with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth inning.

Clemens, who won the American League Cy Young Award in 1986 and 1987, gave up his first run in 10 spring innings. Viola, who won the Cy Young last year, gave up three harmless singles before rookie Carlos Quintana tied the score with his second spring homer. Rich Gedman also homered for Boston.

"I was excited," Viola said. "I like to watch Roger Clemens pitch. I enjoy watching an opponent like Clemens or Ted Higuera or Mark Langston at any time. I just hope I'm in there long enough to see it."

Athletics 20, Giants 7
Felix Jose and Billy Beane each drove in three runs during a 14-run ninth inning. The Athletics, in winning their sixth straight, entered the ninth inning trailing 7-6 before erupting with 10 of their 21 hits and sending 19 batters to the plate against three pitchers.

Loser Scott Garrelts faced six batters and didn't register an out. He yielded four singles and two walks, including Ron Hassey's two-run single. Rookie Doug Robertson was charged with five runs in 2-3 of an inning. He was lifted following a two-run single by Jose. Rookie John Burkett was greeted by Beane's two-run double and allowed four runs before recording the third out.

Reds 9, Astros 7
Dodgers 7, Astros 6

Jeff Treadway, whose sacrifice fly in a three-run seventh tied the game, had a two-run double to drive home the winning runs. Gerald Young hit a two-run homer for Houston.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, had 21 hits against the other Houston team, four by John Shelby. Dave Hansen singled home the winning run with one out in the 11th.

Tigers 9, Rangers 7
Luis Salazar hit a two-run homer for the Tigers and Sam Sosa hit a grand slam for Texas. Jack Morris, hoping to rebound from a 15-13 record in 1988, allowed two runs on five hits for Detroit, striking out four and walking two in five innings.

Mets 3, Braves 2
Lee Mazzilli singled home two runs in a three-run seventh and Phil Lombardi drove home a third with another single as the Mets broke a five-game losing streak. All the runs came off Derek Lilliquist, after Zane Smith had shut out New York on three hits for four innings.

Padres 5, Cubs 3
Jack Clark and Carmelo Martinez homered for San Diego in the third inning off Les Lancaster. The Cubs, 1-9, lost their eighth consecutive game.

Indians 10, Brewers 9
Brewers 9, Indians 6

Cory Snyder's three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth gave Cleveland its 10-9 victory.

Blue Jays 8, Phillies 1
Pirates 6, Phillies 5

George Bell had a three-run homer and Pat Borders a two-run homer as the Blue Jays won their fifth straight against the Phillies, who have won just one game while being outscored 58-19. Five of the runs came off Don Carman in the third.

The Pirates scored twice in the bottom of the ninth on Barry Bonds' triple, singles by Benny Distefano and Andy Van Slyke and R.J. Reynolds' grounder after the Phillies took a 5-4 lead with three runs in the top of the ninth on RBI singles by Joe Redfield and Steve Jeltz and an error. Bonds and Van Slyke homered for Pittsburgh.

scored two points to reach the 10,000-point mark for his career.

Kings 114, Hornets 105
Wayman Tisdale scored 20 of his 28 points in the second half and Kenny Smith added 22 points as Sacramento handed Charlotte its seventh straight loss.

The Kings held off a strong second-half challenge led by rookie Rex Chapman, who finished with a career-high 37 points, by hitting 24 of 28 free throws, including a perfect 13-of-13 in the second half.

Pistons 110, Bullets 104
Isiah Thomas scored 22 points and sparked an 11-4 fourth-quarter run that led Detroit past Washington. It was the Pistons' seventh straight victory.

Detroit has won 10 of its last 11 games and 10 in a row at home.

Bill Laimbeer scored 24 points and grabbed 16 rebounds for Detroit. Laimbeer's final basket, a long jumper with 48 seconds left, gave him 10,000 career points.

Jeff Malone led Washington with 30 points, hitting 14 of 19 shots.

Sports Briefs

Hawks hosting Texas Southmost

The Howard College Hawks will be in baseball action Tuesday when they host Texas Southmost in a non-region contest at Jack Barber Field.

The 1 p.m. doubleheader begins a eight-game week for the Hawks, 17-4, for the season. Howard will play Texas Southmost in a doubleheader Wednesday, and a single game on Thursday. This weekend the Hawks travel to Ranger to take on the Rangers in a three-game region series.

Steers to travel to Lamesa

The Big Spring Steers will play the Lamesa Tornados in non-district baseball action Tuesday in Lamesa starting at 7 p.m.

The Steers, 4-4, for the year, are coming off playing in the Lubbock tournament, where they won one and lost two. Last week Lamesa defeated Big Spring 9-5 at Steer Field.

UGSA umpires needed now

The Big Spring United Girls Softball Association needs umpires for the upcoming season.

Anyone interested should call Eddie Franco at 263-3962.

SWC teams shunned by NIT

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian coach Moe Iba was surprised when the National Invitation Tournament decided not to invite any Southwest Conference schools.

Iba had figured his Horned Frogs were a likely choice for the 32-team field, he told The Dallas Morning News.

"I thought they would take the highest-finishing (SWC) team with the best record, and that would be us," Iba said.

TCU, 17-13, finished third in the SWC behind Arkansas and Texas, who are in the 64-team NCAA field.

Bob Gennerelli, assistant commissioner of the SWC, said an NIT representative had requested information about the Horned Frogs at 2 a.m. Sunday.

"I thought TCU was getting in," Gennerelli said.

Other SWC candidates were Houston, 17-14, and Texas A&M, 16-14. The lack of an NIT bid gives the SWC its lowest number of teams in post-season play since 1981 when Arkansas and Houston were the only advancers.

Clear Lake 5A champions

AUSTIN (AP) — For posterity's sake, it will henceforth be known as "the run."

Clear Lake's 21-point blitz that deflated San Antonio Jay's hopes for a perfect season and a state championship not only frustrated the Mustangs but at the same time had 14,018 fans on their feet in disbelief.

Clear Lake won the Class 5A championship 86-69 over Jay, which had been 38-0.

With Jay on the comeback trail and leading only 55-53, Bill Krueger's Clear Lake squad bordered on near-perfection in the fourth quarter and scorched Jay with 21 unanswered points without missing any shots over a 3:21 span.

The Falcons hit all five field goals they attempted during that streak, including three consecutive three-pointers. They also connected on eight straight free throws.

For the quarter they were 7-of-8 from the field and 14-of-17 from the line.

Krueger admitted it would have to rate high on his list of performances, but in many years as a coach, he has seen his share of impressive outbursts.

"In 32 years, we've had a lot of runs, but you don't get many of those," he said after the game. "But those opponents have had a lot of runs too."

Celtics make it back to .500 mark

By The Associated Press
Denver Coach Doug Moe would like to bench his bench.

"We had horrendous bench performance," Moe said after Sunday's 121-115 loss at Boston. "Every time I tried to give our starters a rest, we would get killed by dumb plays and mistakes."

"What I can't take is that every team scores against us down the stretch. It's a joke. I put guys in to give me some offense, and we wind up with a guy who can't even cover me."

NBA

Reserves also were on the mind of Boston Coach Jimmy Rodgers.

"This was a bench contribution," Rodgers said. "We got a solid effort from all the reserves. We came quite a ways from behind with our bench."

Jim Paxson was one of the keys in Boston's victory, coming off the bench to score 17 points and help erase a 13-point second-half deficit. Also putting in a solid performance was Kelvin Upshaw, who signed a 10-day contract with the Celtics last Friday.

With the Celtics trailing 76-63, Paxson and Upshaw, along with center Joe Kleine and forward Ed Pinckney, sparked the Celtics to a 26-13 surge to tie the game at 89 after three quarters.

"Those guys gave us a great effort during that comeback, and as a result our starters were fresh at the end of the game when we needed another burst," said Rodgers.

Reggie Lewis paced the Celtics' attack with 28 points as Denver suffered its 25th loss in 31 road games this season.

Alex English led Denver with 27.

"I was just trying to make English work as hard on defense as he was making me work on the other end," said Lewis, who also had a career high in free throw attempts, making 10 of 11. He added six rebounds and two steals.

The victory gave the Celtics a .500 record, 30-30, for the first time since the All-Star break and snapped a three-game losing streak to the Nuggets.

Lakers 126, Warriors 115

Byron Scott scored 32 points and shot down Golden State with three 3-point bombs in the final period as the Lakers posted their fourth straight victory.

Scott ended a furious comeback bid by the Warriors when he snapped a 109-109 tie late in the fourth quarter with the first of his three straight bombs. After Winston Garland hit a 3-pointer for Golden State, Scott hit two more to make it 118-112, and the Lakers never lost the lead again.

Los Angeles outscored the Warriors 14-3 over the final five minutes of the game.

Chris Mullin, who led the Warriors with 27 points, scored only one point in the final 11 minutes.

Cavaliers 123, Trail Blazers 110
Brad Daugherty scored 23 points as Cleveland broke a two-game losing streak. Craig Ehlo added 19 points for the Cavaliers, while Larry Nance had 16 points and 14 rebounds.

Terry Porter led Portland with 20 points.

Caldwell Jones of Portland

Tigers

Sean Elliott had 21 points as Arizona took command early and cruised to its ninth straight win.

The Wildcats, 27-3, took the lead for good after less than six minutes and went on to take a 43-27 halftime lead. Stanford couldn't get any closer than 14 points in the second half.

Todd Lichti, Stanford's leading scorer with a 20.6-point average, was held to 11 points. Despite the loss, the Cardinal received their first NCAA berth since 1942.

Big East
No. 3 Georgetown 88, Syracuse 79
Alonzo Mourning scored 21 points as Georgetown dominated Syracuse to win its sixth Big East championship.

The Hoyas controlled the game in the second half following an 8-0 run that gave them a 58-45 lead with 11:50 left. The Hoyas, 26-4, have won all six of their Big East tournament championship games. Syracuse, 27-7, has lost seven of its last eight meetings with the Hoyas.

Georgetown guard Charles Smith, who scored 16 points, was named the tournament's most valuable player. He had a total of 50 points in the Hoyas' first two games.

ACC
No. 9 North Carolina 77, No. 7 Duke 74

Steve Bucknall scored all 10 of his points in the last 5:28 to lead North Carolina to its first ACC tournament title since 1982.

North Carolina, 27-7, led by 12 points in the first half but Duke rallied to take the lead for the first time on two free throws by John Smith with 5:44 left in the game.

Danny Ferry's desperation 70-foot toss at the buzzer could have tied the game, but it bounced off the rim. J.R. Reid led North Carolina with 14 points, while Phil Henderson had 16 for Duke, which fell to 24-7.

Metro
No. 16 Louisville 87, No. 14 Florida St. 80

Pervis Ellison scored 22 points as Louisville won its second straight Metro tournament.

Louisville, 22-8, led by 14 in the second half, but the Seminoles rallied to cut the margin to three with 1:35 left on a three-point play by Derrick Mitchell.

Marcy scholarship named in Selma Hicks' honor

The Marcy PTA has designated the scholarship given by the organization as the Selma Hicks Scholarship. Principal Royce Cox made the announcement March 6 at the Marcy Open House.

Mrs. Hicks will be retiring in May after spending a total of 37 years in the teaching profession, 20 of them at Marcy Elementary. Since she is the daughter of an elementary school principal father and a first grade school teacher mother, it was only natural that she become a teacher. Her brother is an elementary principal in Forth Worth, and a number of aunts and one uncle are also in education.

Mrs. Hicks graduated from Texas Christian University and has earned many hours in graduate study. She began her teaching career in Bludworth in Tarrant County in 1949.

She married Clayton Hicks in 1949; they have two sons, John and Joe. In 1959, the family moved to Albuquerque where she taught for nine years and where her husband was chaplain in the VA Hospital. In 1969, when Chaplain Hicks took up his duties at the VA Hospital here, the family moved to Big Spring and Mrs. Hicks began teaching at Marcy. Mrs. Hicks has taught various summer sessions including puppetry and creative writing. She was trained in gifted/talented education and participated in Region 18 Gifted/Talented Project in 1976-77.

Principal Royce Cox says, "Countless numbers of children have received the benefit of her love and experience throughout her teaching career. She has helped many a beginning teacher get off to a good start in a successful career."

Family, school and church remain top priorities in Selma Hicks' life today. She and her husband are members of College Baptist Church where he has served as minister of education and senior adults since his retirement from the VA Hospital in May, 1984. Currently Mrs. Hicks is a teacher in the church pre-school department and is a past director of that division. However, she does find time for hobbies. These include crafts, artwork, and reading.

Students may apply for the Selma Hicks Scholarship at the counselor's office at Big Spring High School. The applicant must have attended Marcy Elementary for a minimum of two years and must be planning to attend Howard College.

She also was selected for the Texas Tech Circle, Omicron Delta Kappa to which only 30 members were selected. In addition she was elected the Raider Rampage Sing Song director for Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority and the Kappa Alpha Order Fraternity. ## Junior high All-Region Band students attend clinic

By JEAN WARREN
Junior high school students from Coahoma, Forsan and Big Spring who were selected for the All-Region Band participated in a band clinic Friday afternoon and all day Saturday at Big Spring High School. Following the clinic, a concert for the public was given at the BSHS auditorium.

Director of the clinic and conductor of the concert was Blane Hinton; he is a graduate of BSHS where he was Steer Band president and drum major. He earned both bachelor and master's degrees at Texas Tech University where again he was band president and drum major. He was voted outstanding bandsman at Texas Tech in 1982.

Currently Hinton is high school director at Brownfield; under his direction, the high school band has earned two UIL Sweepstakes Awards. He was recently selected as the Class 3-A Honor Band director in Texas. He is the son of Mrs. Johnita Hinton, Big Spring.

Secondary students in Big Spring are taking the California Achievement Test this week. The C.A.T. is a diagnostic tool used to determine a student's progress in school. Test results are helpful to teachers in understanding a student's strengths and weaknesses; they are also helpful in preparing a student's schedule.

BSISD now has the capability of scoring achievement tests locally. This has resulted in a considerable saving to the district.

Spring brings cheerleader tryouts and cheerleader elections. Goliad sixth graders who aspire to be cheerleaders next year will be filling out eligibility and parental permission forms this week. The forms must be turned in to cheerleader sponsors Deanna Adams and Judy Terelitsky by 3:30 p.m. Thursday. A meeting for prospective cheerleaders will be held Friday at 8 a.m. in Mrs. Adams' room. Elections are scheduled for March 31.

Seventh graders will have the opportunity to try out for eighth grade cheerleader during the first week of April. That election is set for April 14.

"Stop and Read." This is the theme at Elbow Elementary as students and teachers alike enjoy leisure reading each morning from 8:15 to 8:30.

The importance of enjoyment of reading cannot be over-emphasized. Schools encourage leisure reading in various ways. During March all classes at Moss Elementary are participating in a special reading contest, "Reading for Pizza."

At Bauer Magnet School, Mrs. Rogers, the librarian, hosted a hamburger party for first semester top readers in each class. Those over the 100 mark included Ramnath Subbaraman, a third grader, who read 276 books! Matthew Fraser, another third grader, read 164 books. Second graders Sterling Hillman read 108 books and Lauren Hillman, 107.

Kentwood students who have read and reported on over 100 books in the library reading program include Kelly Kennedy, Brian Morris, and Andy Howe. Super Readers in Mrs. Woodall's first grade class at Kentwood are Lindsey Marino who has read 113 Take-home readers and Brandi Platt who has read 118.

In Mrs. Pilgrim's second grade class at Marcy, Thomas Garza has read over 100 books.

Students at Anderson Kindergarten Center have been applicants will probably have a passport in hand, gifts decided for their host families, and many of the miscellaneous preparations accomplished.

The Rotary currently has two foreign students in the Big Spring area. Annette Ponighausen-Brinkmeier is attending Garden City High School and she has stayed with three host families. She is from Herford, Federal Republic of Germany, and her family lives on a farm near Herford. She is with her third host family, Warren Multer.

Hector Tejada is attending Forsan High School and he has stayed with two host families. He is from Leon, Mexico, and his family is involved in industry and sales. He is living with his second host family, Fred Holguin.

Annette and Hector will be leaving in June for a tour of the Western United States and then back to their home countries.

On Feb. 25, the Big Spring area students interviewed with Rotary District 573 Exchange Committee members in Plainview. The year long applicants are:
Brandy Qualls — South Africa
Joel Jennings — Spain
Allan Cox — France

Michelle George of Spain.

They will have graduated from high school by the time they leave and three of the students have been on various types of exchanges prior or have had an exchange student in their home.

For more information on age limits and requirements, pick up applications for exchange students from school counselors. Anyone interested in being a host family can apply now.

The host families are chosen on basis of the student applications and what the host family can offer to compliment the needs of the student. The Rotary Club tries to match students to families for a good exchange for all concerned.

Host families do not need to be Rotarians, and they may have young children, teenagers or no children. Families do not need unlimited income — just a willingness to care and a heart that is ready for a touch of adventure. Host families in both countries offer the student the opportunity to be the best ambassador of their country.

learning about Texas. In addition to learning the state symbols, they have learned Texas songs, made Texas mobiles, constructed a 3-D bluebonnet field, made Texas salt maps, talked about the Texas-Mexico history, and enjoyed a chili cookoff.

Each class enjoyed making a Texas booklet that was on display at Texas Public Schools Open House. Parents participated by decorating a paper doll to look like their child. The children were awarded the "Good Texan" certificate for their participation in the Texas Unit.

Third grade classes at Bauer went on a Safari to Africa. Mrs. Harry Middleton, Lauren Middleton's grandmother, just returned from Kenya with many wonderful slides of the animals and shared them with students. On their safari, students saw monkeys, elephants, lions, zebras, giraffes, hippos, and other animals in their natural surroundings. Not only did they see animals, but they visited the villages of the natives of Kenya and observed how they lived and dressed. Everyone had fun on this safari!

Area students will be enjoying spring break next week. There will be early dismissal Friday. Big Spring and Coahoma students will return to class Monday, March 27. Forsan students take up their studies Tuesday, March 28.

An aide at Anderson Kindergarten Center was reading a story about "A Fat Cat." When she asked students what they would do with the cat, one student said emphatically, "I'd put it on a diet!"

The class was discussing a book about dinosaurs at St. Mary's Episcopal School. The book stated that no one is sure why all the dinosaurs died. One boy raised his hand, "I know," he said. "The dinosaurs died because they were old."
