Move forward

WASHINGTON (AP) — Daylight-saving time returns to most of the nation at 2 a.m. Sunday, giving Americans an extra hour of light for summer-time recreation.

The clocks, however, won't move an hour ahead in Hawaii, Arizona or some counties of Indiana, which exempted themselves from a 1966 federal law that established the current time-change arrangement.

Standard time will return at 2 a.m. on Oct. 29, the last Sunday in October.

Brooks is out

Bill Brooks, a two-term member of the Big Spring Independent School District board of trustees, has withdrawn from the May 6 election.

Brooks, owner of the Design Place, filed for the Big Spring school board election on March 22, the last day candidates could file for the race.

He cited "developing business interests that will take up a lot of my time over the next several months" as the reason he chose to withdraw from the race.

Brooks' withdrawal leaves five candidates in the race for the three at-large seats to be filled May 6.

Current trustees Dan Wise and Al Valdes have filed for re-election; Bobby Baker, Raul Marquez and John Webb have filed for the race as well.

Panel planned

Mayoral candidate Maxwell Green and incumbent A.C. "Cotton" Mize will face questions from city businessmen during a Thursday, April 6, community breakfast.

The breakfast, sponsored by the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce, is scheduled for 7 a.m. at Furr's Cafeteria and should last about one hour. The event is open to the public on a "pay-your-own-way" basis.

Ken Dunwoody, chairman of the major employer's committee, said a three-member panel will moderate the question and answer session. The panel will have a prepared list of questions and will accept business-related questions from the floor after a short review, Dunwoody said.

Dunwoody said the review is necessary to ensure no questions have been planted in the audience by candidates.

The panel includes: Robert Wernsman, Big Spring Herald; David Wrinkle, radio station KBST; and Dick Fields, radio station KIOL.

Each candidate will be given a certain amount of time for responses and both will have a chance to answer each question, Dunwoody said.

The community breakfast is the second in five months sponsored by the chamber. It won't be a regular event, Dunwoody said, but will be held on an as-needed basis.

"When we see an opportunity for the business community to sit down and discuss common concerns, then we'll have one," he said.

Symphony!

The Big Spring Symphony Orchestra led by Marianna Gabbi will celebrate its fifth anniversary when it performs Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Big Spring Municipal Auditorium.

The performance will be the symphony's final concert of the year.

Gabbi — the musical director of the Las Cruces, New Mexico Symphony — will celebrate her five-year anniversary as conductor for the local symphony.

Selections to be performed include: "The Barber of Seville," by Rossini, "Die Fiedermaus," by Strauss, "Carmen Suite No. 1," by Bizet, and "Stars Wars Medley."

Suzanne Haney, event organizer, said the selections chosen for the season finale should "appeal to people of all ages."

In addition to the "Star Wars Medley," which has gained mass popularity, "Carmen Suite No. 1" is the theme from the movie "The Bad News Bears," Haney said.

Following the performance, everyone attending is invited to a free reception at St. Mary's Episcopal Church, 1001 Goliad.

Tickets — $7.50 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens — can be purchased at the door. Tickets are also available at: Country Flowers, Blum's Jewelers, The Accent Shoppe, Artifacts, Dunlap's, and Graumann's Oilfield Pump and Engine Repair.

Cheney: More bases may close

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney says the budget crunch might prompt him to ask Congress to close additional military bases around the country, but he's not prepared to reduce the number of troops stationed in Europe.

Speaking with wire service reporters Thursday, the new defense chief said a base-closing program launched last year by former President Reagan was "a hell of an idea."

"We may well want to go farther and start again," he continued. But as for withdrawing American troops from Europe, "I think what we should do with respect to our commitments in Europe is meet those commitments and those commitments haven't changed," Cheney said. "They may conceivably change

The Defense Secretary, formerly a Wyoming congressman, said closing military bases created problems for his former colleagues, but "I just have to believe that there are opportunities for economies in reviewing a base structure that has been basically unchanged for 50 or 60 years."

as a result of the ongoing negotiation, the conventional force reduction talks. But there's no reason now why anybody, least of all the secretary of defense, should be talking about withdrawing forces from Europe."

The former Wyoming congressman said he understood that closing military bases created problems for his former colleagues, but said "I just have to believe that there are opportunities for economies in reviewing a base structure that has been basically unchanged for 50 or 60 years."

"I'm not ready to make an announcement today," he continued. "But I think if you're going to look at finding ways to maintain the nation's defenses with less money... then I have no choice as secretary but to look for ways to save money. And one of those ways is to close bases that aren't necessary, to consolidate operations and to try to create a leaner, more efficient infrastructure for our military forces."

Cheney also disclosed on Thursday that he had just approved plans submitted by 12 states to increase the use of their National Guard units in fighting drug trafficking. His approval means the 12 states will be eligible for extra federal funds totaling $11.8 million to finance such National Guard operations.

The defense chief, who is just completing his second week in office, said he wants to do everything possible to provide military support to authorities fighting the drug trade but doesn't want to see soldiers being used as policemen.

He also agreed he has no magic answer to dealing with Panama's

Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, who has been indicted on drug charges in Florida. Noriega is a problem the Bush administration "inherited" from the administration of former President Ronald Reagan, which tried unsuccessfully to pressure him from office after he was indicted, Cheney said.

"It obviously is a continuing problem," he said.

On other topics, Cheney said that philosophically he has no problem with applying the death penalty in serious cases of peacetime espionage. Several arrests have been made in recent months in spy cases that have been described as potentially serious enough to justify a prosecution request for capital punishment.

Cheney also said he can't support any type of compulsory "national service" plan for America's youth when they turn 18 years of age, but

Runnels Junior High School student Carvel Nguyen will represent Howard County in the Regional Spelling Bee in Lubbock Saturday. The eighth grader, who is competing in the last year of his eligibility, hopes to repeat his performance of 1987, when he won at the regional level and went to Washington D.C. for the finals.

No foolin' — beware of Saturday

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Pity the April Fool. When the sun rises Saturday, he'll be swamped by countless pranks, gags, tricks, practical jokes and other hoaxes on the one day of the year such behavior is considered acceptable.

Consider some of the fates awaiting the April Fool:

- He'll find his sugar bowl filled with salt, his biscuit stuffed with cotton and an empty eggshell waiting on his breakfast table.

- He'll invariably find a coin on the ground — only to discover that some prankster has glued it in place when he tries to retrieve it.

- Answering a knock at the door, he may discover a burning sack on his porch. Of course, he will try to stamp the fire out, only to realize someone has filled the bag with manure.

- The Fool won't find relief at work, either, if he must work on the weekend. Aside from other gags, he'll likely have a message to call a Mr. Fish, and will discover that he has dialed the local aquarium. (This practice is so common that, in certain cities, aquarium and zoo directors disconnect their phones April 1.)

Happy April Fool's Day. Most historians agree that the holiday (also known as All Fool's Day) began when France became the first country to adopt the reformed calendar in 1564.

Before then, the New Year celebration began March 21 and ended April 1. When the start of the year was moved to Jan. 1, some people were slow to catch on and continued to celebrate the holiday on April 1. The people were dubbed poisson d'avril, or April Fish.

The practice of fooling people became popular in France and soon spread to other countries. By the 1600s, it was well-established among the English, who transported the custom to the United States.

It seems that no one is immune to the April Fool's Day prankster, as evidenced by recollections from Big Springers.

MURRAY MURPHY

Margaret Lloyd, one of the directors of the Humane Society, recalled that when housing was scarce in Big Spring a few years ago, a friend placed an ad stating that Margaret's house was for rent. "I must have received a thousand calls that day," she said.

But the April Fool's trickster that most stands out in Lloyd's mind is Champe Phillips, daughter of Big Spring pioneer and author Shine Phillips. Margaret especially remembers one stunt her friend pulled, when both were enrolled at Texas Womens University.

One year, Phillips placed shoes in each stall of the womens' restroom, giving the impression that they were occupied. "No one could use the restroom all day," Lloyd said.

Assistant superintendent for Big Spring schools Murray Murphy said the most devastating April Fool's trick played on him occurred about 12 years ago.

He had just been named assistant principal at a middle school and April 1 was his first day at the job. The principal called Murphy into the office and informed him — in a grave manner — that the person he was to replace had decided not to retire after all.

"My career had just gone out from under me," Murphy said. "As I walked out, I noticed that everyone was laughing except me. That was the most devastating trick pulled on me, for sure."

As for any tricks Murphy has pulled on others, he said, "I've done a few, but I don't think they're printable."

Big Spring High School Principal Kent Bowermon recalls falling for one of the most common-employed April Fool's tricks.

When Bowermon was assistant principal at Arlington Sam Houston High School, a coach left him a message that an irate parent named Mr. Lyons needed to talk to him. After dialing the number, Bowermon discovered he had phoned the Fort Worth Zoo.

There's no phone in the lion's cage, fool.

Nine mutilated bodies linked to border drug war

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP) — Mexican and U.S. officials say they believe 11 people were tortured and killed in drug-related killings at two sites near the U.S.-Mexican border this week.

The mutilated bodies of two men and three women were found Wednesday in a well and four other bodies were found in a septic tank near the well on an abandoned ranch about two miles west of Agua Prieta, Sonora.

Agua Prieta, about 130 miles southeast of Tucson, sits on the border across from Douglas. The city of 75,000 has emerged in the past two years as the center of what has been dubbed "Cocaine Alley" because of drug trafficking through the area.

The Arizona Republic in Phoenix reported a police official said two other bodies were found at a second location about 10 miles east of Agua Prieta.

Rodolfo Lopez Amaviezap, chief of the State Police in Agua Prieta, said seven people have been arrested, including a Mexican federal customs agent, Antonio "El Jarocho" Hernandez Aburto, and a man identified as Noe Luis Martinez. Lopez did not identify the others arrested.

Ernesto Rendon, a state government spokesman in the Sonoran state capital of Hermosillo, said they included Rosario Lugo Montiel, and a 20-year-old man and 14-year-old boy.

"This is a very complicated and delicate case," Lopez said Thursday. "So far, anything I might say is speculation. But because of the violence involved and the fact they they (the victims) were tortured, it may be drug related."

The Arizona Daily Star in Tucson reported the slayings were triggered by the abduction Sunday of a couple in an apparently drug-related incident.

Lopez said the State Police investigation involved 50 agents and was led by the state's chief investigator, Francisco Martinez. He said the investigation was begun after a missing persons report was filed in the past few days by one of the dead policeman's friends.

The site where the nine bodies were found, on the Los Alamos Ranch at the end of a maze of dirt roads, was within one mile of the border and close to the twin stacks of a closed Phelps Dodge copper smelter in Douglas.

Visible were two ropes with hangman's nooses dangling from a cottonwood tree. The killers had tossed lime, still scattered around the scene, onto the faces of the dead to make identification more

Newly explored cave object of controversy

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — A vast, recently explored cave full of unusual formations is becoming the object of a tug-of-war between business and environmentalists.

Some Carlsbad businesses would like Lechuguilla Cave to be developed to attract more tourists. Environmentalists want to preserve the cave by keeping access limited and declaring it the nation's first underground national wilderness.

Right now, the cavern is accessible only to experienced climbers who obtain permission from the National Park Service. They have to descend a 90-foot rope from the natural entrance.

But Jed Howard, a member of a Carlsbad task force named to investigate the cave's potential, believes a tunnel could be dug to provide easy access to a level underground passage, and that two miles of trails could be opened to the public without unduly harming the cave.

"I happen to think the public has a right to be in this cave if it is possible," Howard said Wednesday at the Carlsbad Rotary Club. "The perfect protection is to have no people in the cave. The park service is getting awfully close to no people in the cave."

But Ron Kerbo, a park service cave specialist, said opening the cavern to the public could dry out formations and cause them to collapse.

"Why must every natural resource always be put into the wallet?" Kerbo said after the Rotary meeting. "Why must every one of them be something we have to exploit? What happened to love of the earth?"

He said developing Lechuguilla Cave "would be akin to the 1920s idea of boring into the Big Room of Carlsbad Caverns and turning it into a parking lot."

The park service has no formal proposal for designating Lechuguilla Cave an underground wilderness, Carlsbad Caverns acting superintendent Bob Crisman said, but cavers' organizations have approached members of Congress with such a plan.

Howard contends the park service backed away from making a formal proposal to name Lechuguilla a wilderness area because public hearings would be required. He said he believes park officials have wanted to bypass anti-wilderness sentiment by excluding public participation, other than cavers, in management decisions.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., has said he will propose legislation calling for a Department of Interior study of options such as commercial development and a wilderness designation.

Lechuguilla Cave's entrance is inside Carlsbad Caverns National Park, about four miles west of the park's main entrance. Its known length is 32 miles, and it's just 50 feet short of being the nation's deepest, a designation Columbine Crawl in Wyoming holds, at 1,550 feet.

Task force looks at health care

AUSTIN (AP) — "Black holes" in rural health care — places devoid of even basic services — must be closed and state lawmakers must act to keep the problem from growing, a legislative task force report says.

"Thousands of rural Texans are denied even basic health care, let alone health care approaching the standards found in urban areas," said the report. "Most affected are pregnant women, the fixed-income elderly and the indigent."

Several House and Senate members gathered Thursday to announce support for a House measure that would include several of the task force suggestions, which they said are badly needed.

"Those who are too sick, too old, too poor... that's the ones that we are trying to help," said state Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, who said he is the only physician in a large area.

McKinney said 53 Texas counties have no hospital and 14 counties, with a total of 23,000 residents, have no physician. He said emergency room and obstetrics care are becoming scarce in many areas.

Donald Mackey, 32, was convicted Thursday by jurors in State District Judge Woody Densen's court for the death of Kanditz Hughes.

The baby's mother, Maggie Hughes, said she had stopped at a southwest Houston gas station last June 9 and had run inside to get a soft drink, leaving the baby and 6-year-old Danielle Hughes in the car.

Man sentenced for leaving baby

HOUSTON (AP) — An ex-convict was sentenced to 99 years in prison for leaving a 3-week-old baby to die in a vacant lot while fleeing in a car he stole because he needed a way home.

The 6-year-old said she jumped out of the car as Mackey drove off.

Mackey testified he had spent his last $2 on beer and needed a ride home when he saw the car with the keys in the ignition.

Mackey said he left the infant at a house and knocked, believing someone would come out and find the baby in an infant seat.

But the baby was found the next day in a vacant lot where she was covered with ants. She died of dehydration.

Prosecutor Sid Crowley said Mackey left the baby 50 feet from the nearest house and then proceeded to sell tools from the car.

Consumers group: Ask grocers about produce

AUSTIN (AP) — Consumers should not hesitate to ask their grocers questions about food products, a Consumers Union spokesman said in discussing preliminary results of a grocery store survey in four Texas cities.

"With few notable exceptions, we found that store representatives were not very knowledgeable of the practices of their suppliers or state and federal laws relating to food quality and safety," John Hildreth, director of the southwest regional office of Consumers Union, said Thursday.

Consumers Union has surveyed produce managers at about 60 grocery stores in Austin, Dallas, San Antonio and Houston, he said. The initial results show that most stores rely on their suppliers' word that produce is pesticide-free, he said.

"Only a few take any action" to independently determine that produce represented as organic actually is, Hildreth said.

"Consumers make certain assumptions about the products they buy based on representations made to them by those grocers," he said. "We think consumers have to be aggressive in asking those questions of grocers, so that they in turn will ask questions of their suppliers and to the growers about quality and safety" and whether produce meets organic standards.

Texas has a voluntary state certification program for organic produce, said Andy Welch, Texas Department of Agriculture spokesman. A grower can get certification by passing a state inspection and meeting certain standards, including no use of pesticides for three years and no chemical fertilizers for two years.

The state also has a transitional organic standard for growers who just have decided to raise such produce, Welch said. Produce that meets state organic standards can be identified by a triangular yellow and green label.

Judge closes Gilley's

PASADENA (AP) — A judge has ordered Gilley's nightclub, a local institution that helped shape Houston's image as a center of country-western culture, to close its doors indefinitely.

"That's it. It's over, they won, they booted us out today," Sherwood Cryer, the club's longtime owner, said Thursday.

Cryer lost a $17 million lawsuit to recording artist Mickey Gilley last summer and declared bankruptcy. Cryer told the Houston Chronicle Thursday night that as far as he is concerned, the club is closed for good.

The 70,000-square foot club that opened in 1972 in the Houston suburb was the primary setting for the 1980 movie "Urban Cowboy" starring John Travolta and featuring the club's mechanical bulls and vast dance floor.

The shutdown came about 5 p.m. following a break-in and theft of electronic equipment Monday at Gilley's Recording Studio adjacent to the club.

Attorney's for the recording artist suggested that the robbery was "an inside job" and a court-appointed receiver obtained court permission Thursday to close the bar in order to protect assets, Kevin McEvily, one of Gilley's attorneys, said.

Houston firm helps with oil spill

HOUSTON (AP) — A local manufacturer has given 18,900 square feet of thick plastic sheeting so that Alaskan fishermen can build a barrier to protect fish hatcheries from encroaching oil offshore Valdez.

Gundie Lining Systems Inc. worked overnight to make the 840-foot long roll of high density polyethylene that was flown to Alaska Thursday.

"If this works, we'll be sending out several miles of this," company spokeswoman Sara Barber said. "If they need it, we'll donate it."

Gundie manufactures the thick plastic and installs it as liners for landfills, hazardous waste sites, portable water storage and leaching operations in mining. It also lined some cooling ponds used by NASA in its space launches.

But Ms. Barber said this is the first time the plastic has been used as part of a floating protective barrier against an oil spill.

The gift came as a result of an inquiry from an Alaskan commercial fisherman, Ms. Barber said.

"We did the first lined landfill in Alaska," she said. "This fisherman contacted the engineering group on that job, got our number and called us."

She said Gundie then worked through the Aquaculture Center in Alaska to get the roll of plastic to the spill scene.

Governor invokes prison act

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements on Thursday invoked the Prison Management Act, triggering the award of 30 days good time to eligible prisoners to reduce the population at the Texas Department of Corrections, his press secretary said.

TDC was closed Tuesday after the prison population went over 95 percent capacity, the limit set under a federal court order. The latest count released Monday showed 39,838 inmates, or 95.11 percent of capacity.

Record number of briefs flood court on Missouri abortion case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A brief with 3,500 signatures in behalf of women who have had abortions was among the flood of unsolicited advice delivered to the Supreme Court as it weighs whether to change its 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

The justices have received dozens of "friend-of-the-court" briefs as they prepare to hear arguments April 26 in a Missouri case that has become the most-watched battleground in the continuing political fight over abortion.

Missouri and the Bush administration, among others, are urging the court to use the case to reverse or severely limit Roe vs. Wade, the 16-year-old ruling that said women have a constitutional right to seek abortions.

A decision is expected by July.

The court received 47 friend-of-the-court briefs, including the one from the administration, that support Missouri's appeal.

The filing deadline for briefs in support of the other side, those who successfully challenged a Missouri abortion law, was midnight Thursday. Lawyers for pro-abortion groups said they expected 20 or more briefs to be delivered or postmarked by the deadline.

By the end of business hours Thursday, seven such briefs had been received by the Supreme Court clerk's office.

"As far as we are able to determine, the largest number has been 58," said court spokeswoman Kathy Arberg.

She said that many so-called amicus briefs were filed in Regents of University of California vs. Bakke, the case in which the court in 1978 first upheld affirmative action.

Before Roe vs. Wade was decided, the court received 48 friend-of-the-court briefs — 42 in support of the women who challenged a Texas ban on most abortions and six in support of the law.

The briefs filed Thursday included one submitted in behalf of "women who have had abortions." Officials of pro-abortion groups personally delivered copies of that brief, which bears the signatures of more than 3,500 women.

Three women and one man who signed the friend-of-the-court brief also made the trip to the Supreme Court.

Gerry Robb of Gaithersburg, Md., said she had an illegal abortion in 1979.

She postponed the operation when she suspected the man about to perform it was intoxicated. He later discovered the man she thought was a doctor was an auto mechanic.

"I signed this brief so other women don't ever have to go to drunk auto mechanics for an abortion," Ms. Robb said.

Elissa Raiten of College Park, Md., received a legal abortion after being told that her child would be born severely brain-damaged. She said she signed the brief so "safe, clean abortions" will remain available.

Jennie Marsh of Great Falls, Va., had a legal abortion at age 17 in 1973, only months after the court's decision in Roe vs. Wade.

"It should be a woman's decision, not anyone else's," she said.

Charles Brack of New York City said he signed the brief because his cousin died during an illegal "kitchen table abortion" in Chicago 24 years ago.

Said Helen Neuborne of the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund, "It's crucial for the court to hear what's in the hearts and minds of women."

Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said, "We have serious reason to be concerned" about the Missouri case.

She noted that three Supreme Court justices were appointed by former President Reagan, an ardent opponent of legalized abortion. At issue in the Missouri case are key provisions of an abortion law that lower courts barred state officials from enforcing.

It is possible the court will decide the Missouri case without significantly changing its 1973 decision, but at least three other cases apparently being held in abeyance by the justices would give the court an opportunity to cut back on Roe vs. Wade.

Those cases are from Minnesota, Ohio and Illinois.

Attorneys argue case for Reagan testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North's lawyers say Ronald Reagan should be summoned back from "the masses" so the former president can testify whether he told his aides to lie to Congress about secretly assisting the Contras.

Saying that Reagan is "clearly a material witness," North lawyer Barry Simon argued Thursday for a court order to compel Reagan's appearance. U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell was expected to rule today.

Reagan attorney Theodore Olson opposed the request, claiming the ability of the president "to exchange confidences" with top aides is at stake. Gesell retorted: "We're not talking about confidences. We're talking about (possible) instructions" to subordinates to lie to Congress.

"What is the problem of determining in this case whether former President Reagan directed or did not direct Lt. Col. North, (former national security adviser Robert) McFarlane and (John) Poindexter to lie to Congress?"

Olson said, however, that authorization to lie may not be a defense for lying and North has provided no factual basis to suggest that Reagan issued any such instruction.

Simon argued that no privileges would be violated by having Reagan testify.

"In this country a president is up from the masses and when his time is over he goes back to the masses," he said. "We are talking about a person who is retired from public office."

North is accused of preparing letters to Congress in 1985 falsely denying that he assisted the Contras and of lying to the House Intelligence Committee in 1986 by making similar denials.

McFarlane has testified he told Reagan about the congressional inquiries in 1985 and the president agreed that whatever answers were supplied would be controversial. McFarlane said that was the extent of the conversation, and he gave no indication that Reagan provided any guidance.

Summarizing the issue Thursday, Gesell asked: "Did the president know what Poindexter and McFarlane were sending up to the Hill? Did the president approve those letters and the non-disclosure that is implied?"

Justice Department lawyer Stephen Saltzburg said that having Reagan testify would create problems. Once courtroom questioning of Reagan began, he said, it would lead "to other areas" that could raise national security concerns.

"Some form of interrogatory (written questions and answers) would be the appropriate first step" if Gesell determines Reagan's testimony is needed, said Saltzburg.

The judge said people who could answer the question of presidential authorization are North and Poindexter, now both accused in the Iran-Contra affair. Their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination might be jeopardized by answering.

"How do you suggest we approach that problem?" asked Gesell.

Saltzburg said representations from North and Poindexter, rather than sworn statements, might be a possible approach.

Big Spring talkers first, second

HERALD STAFF REPORT
An inmate at Big Spring's federal prison camp took top honors and an area resident took second place in the tall tales division of an area Toastmasters competition in Midland Thursday evening.

Ed Moore, a Cherokee, Okla. native and inmate at the prison camp, won first place in the humorous division involving five area Toastmasters groups for his speech: "This is Charlie."

Sonny Choate's speech: "How cold was it?" won second place in the competition.
Moore may now advance to the district finals on April 21 in Odessa, said Ted Zobeck, administrative vice president of Toastmasters.

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incidents:

- Five Howard County inmates were transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville. Antonio Aguilar, Joe Hernandez, Jesus Parras, Tommy Charles Brown and Marcus Yanez were transferred early this morning.
- Michael Preston Newton, 19, 1611 Owens St., was released on $1,000 bond after being arrested by city police on a charge of driving while intoxicated.
- Billy Gene Shubert, 29, PO Box

- 421, was released on $1,000 bond after being arrested on a charge of DWI.

Also, the Legislature is attempting to increase state spending for human services programs to maximize federal contributions, which Gandy said would also better Texas' rankings.

"A lot of attention (in the Legislature) is being focused on Medicare and Medicaid, health and human services," Gandy said.

With 6.7 percent of the population, Texas received 4.5 percent of grants to the state and local governments for such programs as child nutrition, Medicaid, AFDC, housing and community development, highway funds and mass transit grants.

third, behind only California, with $23 billion, and Virginia, with $10 billion, in military procurement dollars totaling $9 billion.

Texas ranked 16th nationally in all government contracts, with a $10 billion total.

David Kellerman, chief of the Census Bureau's federal finance branch, said the study tracked about 85 percent of all federal spending. Excluded were such expenses as interest on the federal debt, foreign aid and payroll for U.S. military personnel stationed overseas.

The remaining federal dollars are split into five categories in the study — grants to states and local governments; salaries and wages; payments to individuals such as Social Security and food stamps; procurement contracts, including military hardware and leases; and all other areas, such as agricultural subsidies and research grants.

Railroad cars to be placed

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

The centerpiece of the railroad plaza — the railroad cars themselves — may be in place by late April or early May, the downtown development coordinator said Thursday.

Coordinator Teri Quinones said continuous water leakage at the site and an accidental sewerline break have hampered efforts to have the cars in place at an earlier date. The $600 necessary to replace the sewer line system is expected to be approved at a future meeting, she said.

The steering committee approved three modifications at Wednesday's meeting, including $880 for an expanded sprinkler system, $500 for water and gas additions to the railroad cars and $500 for telephone work at the site.

The downtown steering committee awarded a contract for $5,600 for the outside renovation of the two railroad cars and caboose to James Johnson, the general contractor on the plaza development, Quinones said. Three contractors initially vied for the job.

"The lowest bidder (Johnson) ended up being the only bidder," she said, noting Johnson's bid "falls pretty much in line with a previous estimate — actually lower than a previous estimate."

No action was taken on what businesses will eventually occupy the railroad cars. Types of shops the board is considering are: an old fashioned soda shop, a deli sandwich shop, a bakery and an arts and crafts shop.

If the steering committee chooses to turn one of the cars into a bakery, the limited amount of room in a railroad car will probably consign it to serve as a bakery outlet rather than an actual bakery, she said.

Locating food-related services in at least some of the cars will be a priority of the committee, Quinones said.

"We'll try to look for food services (for the railroad cars) and then other services could occupy the surrounding vacancies," she said.

One of the things the steering committee is attempting to do is locate a business in one of the cars that is distinctive to the area. Quinones said the committee has had a hard time with that one; two possible proposals are a West Texas souvenir shop or a boot-maker's shop.

The base-closing initiative that is already underway began last year with an independent commission submitting a plan to close 86 installations, most of them relatively small, and to partially close five others for a projected saving of $5.6 billion over 20 years.

Despite some opposition, those closures appear likely because there do not appear to be sufficient votes in Congress to block the plan. Congress must either accept or reject the entire list.

A Douglas police officer, Rudy Salazar, said he was told the victims had been "clubbed, stabbed and shot" and had been mutilated.

Rendon said one victim's mother, Maria Trinidad Soltero de Saracho, reported on Sunday the couple had been abducted at gunpoint from their Agua Prieta home by men in a van.

One of the two bodies found at the second location was said to be that of a reputed drug kingpin known as "El Kaliman," a nickname said to be derived from that of a popular Mexican wrestler.

Lopez said all the victims were adult Mexican citizens.

Time to forge a compromise

It's time for a truce in the the battle of political rhetoric over plans to raise the minimum wage. Softer voices and open minds must prevail if a segment of the nation's work force is to get the pay hike it clearly needs.

Last week, the House passed a bill that would raise the minimum wage from its current $3.35 an hour to $4.55 by October 1991. It would be the first increase in eight years. The focus now shifts to the Senate, where Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is sponsoring a bill that would jump the minimum wage to $4.65 by 1992.

All this is occurring against a troubling backdrop of iron words from President Bush, who continues to flatly insist that he won't accept any increase above $4.25. He also wants any new package to include a "subminimum training wage" for workers during their first six months of employment.

Though labor leaders and congressional Democrats find that latter concept abhorrent, they have wisely left the issue open for compromise. The just-passed House bill includes a two-month subminimum wage for employees getting their first jobs.

President Bush should embrace this spirit of compromise rather than continually threatening to veto any package he dislikes. Virtually everyone acknowledges that a hike in the minimum wage is overdue. The president must remain flexible so this opportunity for economic justice isn't dashed by partisan bickering.

Writer opposes helmet law

To the editor:

I don't know about anyone else in this town, but Congress sure has put a damper on my lifestyle. They are trying to pass a mandatory helmet law. Frankly, you won't see me wearing one! Here are the reasons not to:

1. Helmets impair hearing and vision.
2. 90% of the helmets made are defective.
3. The temperature inside a helmet can reach up to 130°.
4. No helmet made is capable of rejecting impact stress above 13 miles per hour.
5. When you apply the law of inertia, the weight of a helmet is awesome. A four pound helmet at 50 mph becomes 200 pounds on impact.
6. If you're in an accident and are wearing a helmet, your chances of having a neck injury goes up to 3 to 5 times higher than without one.

7. This is our choice. No one should live our lives for us! This is not Russia!

I urge all riders to write your congressmen and let them know how you feel. We don't have much time left!

Ride to live! Live to ride! Don't let them decide! These things are facts, not bull. They come from these places who have done testing on helmets:

1. Department of Transportation;
2. Federal Department of Transportation;
3. University of Utah Speech & Hearing Clinic;
4. American College of Surgeons;
5. Hurt Study, University of Calif.

Check 'em out and see if you don't agree. Act now!

Catfish has a playmate

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

There's a new addition at my house. I have acquired another Black Lab male puppy to go with Catfish, the Black Lab and the faithful companion I've had for five years.

There's a couple of reasons I did this. One, Catfish has to spend a lot of time alone in the backyard. This has to get terribly lonely and boring.

I figure with another dog, Catfish will be much happier and not give me that look, the one where his eyes say, "How can you do this to me, Cruel Master?" when I leave him.

If Catfish and the new puppy can't find anything else to amuse them at least they can occupy themselves by sniffing one another.

Dogs can spend hours doing that. People go to Rotary Club meetings, cocktail parties and singles bars to socialize. Dogs sniff.

I also got the puppy because if anything happened to Catfish I'd be devastated. I have lived with him longer than I lived with any of my ex-wives. So, if Catfish ever decides to take my stereo and move out, at least I'll still have the new puppy.

There are some problems with raising a puppy, of course, especially if he happens to be a Black Lab.

A man who raises these dogs once said to me, "For the first three years of a Lab's life, it can be one of the most destructive animals on earth."

How true. Black Labs have a thing about chewing, and they will chew anything. Before Catfish reached adulthood, he chewed three pairs of my shoes, four pairs of eyeglasses, three remote control devices for my television and several books.

Interestingly enough, Catfish has never chewed any of the books I have written. "The dog obviously has excellent taste in literature," said a former friend.

Lewis Grizzard

He also chewed up a beer bottle once. The bottle was empty so I didn't understand the attraction. He also attempted to eat an entire wasp's nest.

After that experience, which included three days at the vet getting shots for approximately 400 wasp stings on the tongue, Catfish cooled it on the chewing.

The new puppy will chew, too, of course, but I will endure it somehow. One idea is to hang items like my shoes and eyeglasses from the ceiling.

The other problem is what to name the puppy. Naming a dog is an awesome responsibility.

Catfish recently has made several public appearances. For instance, he was the guest of honor at the annual Catfish Festival in Scotsboro, Ala., and got to ride in a police car and be on television.

What if I had named him something trite and stupid like "Blackie"?

He'd likely never have had the chance to break into show business.

I spent at least an hour thinking of a name for the new puppy. He likes to eat potato chips, so I thought of naming him Golden Flake.

I settled on Cornbread, but I'm not sure why. There was a famous basketball player named Cornbread Maxwell and cornbread is one of my favorite foods, so that would have to do for an explanation.

There will be occasional updates on Cornbread's progress as a member of the family. Wish us well.

The free world rejoiced Sunday

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

Many years ago, the writer-philosopher-revolutionist Max Eastman stressed to me that voting is primarily a negative act. The vote in the Soviet Union last Sunday eloquently confirms that observation. The dissidents could not reasonably hope that the reforms of Arkady Murashev (he wants multiparty voting) will be adopted. Nor can Boris Yeltsin (he wants Gorbachevism times 10) expect that because he won 89 percent of the vote, notwithstanding that he had been officially reprimanded by Mikhail Gorbachev as too advanced in the reforms he called for, he will become the political overlord of Moscow.

But oh my God, it was an exciting day. From it much is to be learned, but caution is also in order.

1) Both Lenin and, to an even greater degree, Mao set out to change the nature of man. Their common instructors, Marx-Engels, promulgated the view that in human nature which tends to aggression is rooted in the institution of capitalism, specifically in the institution of private property. Eliminate private property, and all derivative vices evanesce. There is no longer greed, acquisitiveness, envy. And so a new man is born, and that new man, because his behavior becomes exemplary, gradually reduces the need for an overseeing state. Little by little the state withers away, and paradise on Earth is the result.

Professor Donald Zagoria of Hunter College many years ago drew a shrewd distinction between the Soviet and the Maoist means of bringing about that internal human revolution. Under Stalin and his successors, a list long but not infinitely long was drawn up of prohibited activities. Anything that was not prohibited could be engaged in. That left little interstices within which to maneuver. If the local Soviet, for instance, did not get around to saying that you had to turn off your electric light by 11, why, then, you could keep it burning until 12.

Maoism, Zagoria pointed out, was more comprehensive. Under Mao, everything was prohibited — except that which was specifically permitted. So that Mao-man needed permission to do anything he wished to do: to marry, to have a child, to travel to another part of the city in search of a different kind of a job. When in China in 1972, pursuing President Nixon along with 80 other members of the press, we had from anyone we accosted these frozen replies to every question. "What would you like your son to be when he grows up," James Michener asked a woman at a stand that sold straw fans. "Whatever Chairman Mao wants him to be," she replied, smiling.

In Leningrad, 10 years ago, conversing with the U.S. consul there, I asked about the home life of Grigori Romanov, Moscow's pro-consul in Leningrad. The foreign service officer said that no one even knew whether Romanov was married, so secretive were his habits. In Leningrad on Sunday, the successor to Romanov was defeated — even though he ran unopposed!

The experience last Sunday, together with scattered evidence that comes out of China, documents the failure of communism to transform human nature. Yes, we all knew it. But it is now an official part of the Soviet record. And nothing Pravda can do to bury the results of the vote can hide the suppurating sore: Marxist man is a human being badly clothed and underfed. 2) But democracy having delivered what we most want from it, we must not ask more. The enthusiasm our policy-makers have for democracy tends to be undifferentiated. The Argentine voters never quite got around to repudiating Peronism, because voters-at-large cannot formulate a program and vote for a program. To begin with, they don't know how to externalize the political dimensions of the program they want. Besides which, each voter is likely to attach a different emphasis on this or the other objective.

It is one thing to say that democracy may save Russia from Marxism, quite another to say that democracy is sufficient to civilize Russia. And although we have seen that, where tested, the people of the Soviet Union are sick unto death of the fate visited upon them by their Marxist masters, they are far from achieving the strength to take over from their masters. Murashev and Yeltsin aren't going to march to the gates of the Kremlin and demand that the Politburo give up, any more than China's Fang is likely to take over from Zhao. The machinery of repression outpaces the exuberance of the democratic spirit, and it is likely we will have long stretches of disappointment in the days ahead.

But it was a glorious day. And how splendid that it happened on Easter Sunday. God, clearing his throat.

The theft of peace of mind

By STEVE RAY

A friend of mine was robbed last week.

They didn't get much. Some dishes, hot rollers, a vaporizer.

Monetarily, it didn't mean much when they kicked in her door while she wasn't there, ripped the phone out of her wall and literally threw clothes and dishes all over her house.

But psychologically and sentimentally they stole much more than the items they snuck out the back door with.

Among the items they took were a 1929 410 shotgun.

Yes, they'll get some quick cash for it in some pawn shop that really doesn't care where it came from.

And someone will probably buy it, someone who doesn't know it belonged to her grandfather and was the only keepsake she had to remember him by.

They also took an English riding saddle and hat.

They won't get much for that either. And eventually, when they can't find anyone to buy it... it may end up alongside the road to decay and gather dust until it is picked up by garbage collectors.

But they meant something to my friend.

It was the riding saddle and hat she had for years when she rode in equestrian events as a 4-Her.

But, in addition to the monetary value and the sentimental value of the items that were taken, the vermin who broke into her house stole much more.

They took away her ability to feel safe.

It is something that was more valuable than anything physical that was taken from her home.

It was the loss of that feeling that brought the tears, that have added to the fears since that night.

It is the theft of that safety that makes me mad.

It is the theft of her peace of mind that makes me want to find those thieves and beat them within an ounce of their lives.

I'm tired.

I'm tired of people who make excuses for the drug thugs who rob our homes, and take away our right to feel safe.

They blame it on society and they blame it on everything but the one real cause — the person themselves.

It's time.

It's time for us to stop making excuses for those who rob, and steal, and take away our right to feel safe.

It's time we stopped pampering people who take away our rights by worrying more about their rights than those of their victims.

Oh, by the way, drug thugs — I hope you enjoy the opened package of macaroni you took from the shelf.

My friend forgot to close it when she moved into the house. I was helping her move, and I accidentally sprayed it with lots of roach spray.

Brady given standing ovations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House Press Secretary James Brady won two standing ovations Thursday as he presented awards to two community colleges honored for outstanding assistance to the disabled.

Brady, who was shot in the head in the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan, returned to the scene of the crime, the Washington Hilton, to make the awards to Catonsville (Md.) Community College and John Wood (Ill.) Community College.

Brady, who is brain-damaged and must use a wheelchair as a result of the shooting, was recently named vice chairman of the National Organization on Disability.

The National Organization on Disability-J.C. Penney awards were presented at the 69th annual conference of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges. The educators rose to their feet after Brady's brief speech and again when he was introduced by association president David Ponitz.

BOSTON (AP) — A survey released today indicates teen-age boys have become more responsible during the AIDS scare, but researchers caution that those most sexually active appear least likely to use protection.

Condom use among urban teenagers more than doubled, according to the 1,880 boys surveyed in what researchers said was the first national study of sexual behavior among teen-age males in the 1980s.

"There's an apparent acceleration in condom use," said Freya Sonenstein of Brandeis University. "And that must be associated with the increased awareness about AIDS."

Overall, the new study showed 60 percent of 15- to 19-year-olds are sexually active. Fifty-eight percent of that group used a condom during the last time they had intercourse, up from 21 percent in 1979.

The data indicates that sexual activity among teen-age males from the city increased 23 percent since 1979.

Sonenstein and Joseph H. Pleck of Wheaton College had Temple University collect the data for comparison to a 1979 survey.

Pleck attributed the figures to an increased responsibility among young men, but both doctors said there is room for improvement because the most active men appear to be the least responsible.

Disney objects to Academy spoof

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walt Disney Co. is singing a new tune over a portrayal of Snow White during the Academy Awards: Hi-ho, hi-ho, it's off to court we go.

Disney is suing the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, contending the song-and-dance routine by a Snow White look-alike looked, well, dopey.

Corporate spokesman Erwin Okun said the performance was unflattering to the beloved character and the academy lacked permission to use the fairy tale character.

The trademark infringement lawsuit was filed in federal court Thursday.

Okun said anyone watching would reasonably conclude that Disney had sanctioned the routine, adding, "We thought it was extremely unrepresentative of our creative work and of the quality of our creative work."

The broadcast, seen in an estimated 27 million American homes, began Wednesday night with actress Eileen Bowman, dressed as Snow White, following a chorus line of dancing stars into the Shrine Auditorium.

Bowman's Snow White, in a squeaky Betty Boop voice, then launched into a rendition of "We Only Have Stars for You," to the tune of the 1959 hit "I Only Have Eyes for You."

VALDEZE, Alaska — U.S. Fish and Wildlife workers clean oil from a sea otter Thursday night. The otter was found in Prince William Sound covered with oil from the grounded tanker.

Exxon fires captain of grounded tanker

VALDEZE, Alaska (AP) — The captain of the oil tanker Exxon Valde is out of a job today because a federal investigation showed he was legally drunk after his ship ran aground, causing the nation's biggest oil spill.

Capt. Joseph Hazelwood was fired Thursday for violating company rules that ban alcohol on its ships, said Exxon Shipping Co. Inc. President Frank Iarossi.

The federal government, meanwhile, said it will not take over the spill cleanup, but will monitor the environmental damage. The tanker ran aground on a charted reef March 24, dumping 10.1 million gallons of oil into Prince William Sound.

Coast Guard Commandant Paul Yost, one of three senior officials who made a fact-finding trip to the spill site, said it was "almost unbelievable" that the ship strayed outside a 10-mile wide shipping lane to run aground.

"This was not a treacherous area, not treacherous in the area where they ran aground," Yost said in Washington on Thursday. "It's 10 miles wide. Your children could drive a tanker up through it."

On Thursday, crude oil covered about 600 square miles of the sound once considered one of Alaska's most beautiful marine habitats.

As the toll from the slick's trail mounted, so did the wrath of Alaskans.

"The anger of our people would be difficult to describe," said Gov. Steve Cowper.

"Anyone who goes up and looks at the slick has to be humbled by it," said Coast Chief Petty Officer Todd Nelson.

President Bush on Thursday called the spill "a major tragedy" and after being briefed by three senior administration officials who had just returned from Alaska predicted that the cleanup effort "will not be easy."

The president backed away from considering a federal takeover of the cleanup operation, a possibility he had mentioned on Monday.

"It seems inevitable that there will be a very substantial impact, particularly on the habitats of sea otters and sea lions," said William Reilly, administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The government also will monitor salmon and herring fisheries, he said.

"We anticipate detecting a slow but steady mortality of marine birds over at least the next few weeks," Piatt said.

Rebels attack Afghan city

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The government said its troops repelled new rocket attacks by Moslem guerrillas on Jalalabad, the insurgents' first major target since the withdrawal of Soviet troops.

Mohammad Nabi Amani of the Foreign Ministry said insurgents used arms supplies from Pakistan to hit Jalalabad and the surrounding area with more than 8,000 rounds of rocket and artillery fire in the 24 hours ending at sundown Thursday.

He did not say how close the guerrillas were to Jalalabad, but he claimed government troops "pushed back the attacks and consolidated their positions."

Amani said on Monday that there was a lull in fighting.

The U.S.-supported guerrillas, whose headquarters are across the border in Pakistan, began their attack on Jalalabad on March 6.

Israel lifts general curfew

JERUSALEM (AP) — The military today allowed Palestinian workers back into Israel from the West Bank and lifted a general curfew in the Gaza Strip after clashes left three reported dead and at least 30 wounded.

Israel closed the occupied territories Thursday, when Palestinians conducted a general strike to commemorate six Israeli Arabs killed March 30, 1976 — a day now known as "Land Day."

They were protesting confiscation of private Arab land for military use.

At least 415 Palestinians have been killed since an uprising began nearly 16 months ago in the West Bank and Gaza, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 war. Eighteen Israelis have also been killed.

Many West Bank Palestinians were allowed to return to their jobs in Israel today after the one-day quarantine, and a one-day general curfew was removed on the seaside Gaza Strip, the military said. However, nearly 180,000 Gazans remained under curfew in six refugee camps.

Shmuel Goren, the Defense Ministry official in charge of the territories, said the 100,000 Palestinians who work in Israel still depend on it for their livelihoods and have found no alternative despite the long rebellion.

Independence begins for Namibia

WINDHOEK, Namibia (AP) — The South African who will oversee South Africa's transition to independence from his nation says he will repeal laws that hinder free elections but not those that call for racial segregation.

The independence process begins Saturday, along with a cease-fire in a 23-year guerrilla war. An informal truce has been observed for months, but South Africa and the rebel South-West Africa People's Organization, known as SWAPO, made the agreement official on Thursday.

Martti Ahtisaari, the U.N. representative who will oversee the transition to independence, was to arrive today.

Louis Pienaar, appointed by South Africa to impartially govern the territory and oversee elections in November, said Thursday the only immediate change will be "the presence of Mr. Ahtisaari."

Pienaar said he will not rescind laws providing for racially segregated schools, hospitals and municipal governments. But he said that after consultation with Ahtisaari, he will repeal laws that could stand in the way of fair elections.

He said his first proclamation, effective next week, will remove all obstacles to political meetings, previously restricted by security laws.

South Africa has administered Namibia since World War I and the United Nations has been trying to get the South Africans out since 1966. The South Africans agreed to the independence plan as part of a regional accord that also calls for withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola.

Sarney rejects debt swap proposals

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — President Jose Sarney rejected proposals to reduce foreign debt in exchange for programs to preserve the Amazon rain forest, calling the idea a form of colonialism.

Mostafa Tolba, executive director of the U.N. Environmental Program, said Thursday in a message to a regional environmental meeting that the rest of the world has a right to be worried about destruction of the rain forest.

He urged Brazil to consider "debt-for-nature swaps," exchanging a reduction in its huge $115 billion foreign debt for investments in environmental protection programs. He cited successful examples of such swaps in Ecuador and Costa Rica.

A forest area the size of California has been destroyed by ranchers and farmers in the past 10 years. But Brazil has rejected foreign conservation proposals as interference in its internal affairs.

Sarney, speaking to the same group, called Tolba's remarks "awful" and "inadequate."

"We cannot accept this form of colonialism which they want to create here," the president said.

In his speech at the opening of the two-day meeting of Latin American and Caribbean ministers of the environment, Sarney sharply criticized the environmental policy of industrialized countries.

The developed nations have "destroyed the plant cover of the planet, created and developed the civilization of gases and depleted natural resources for the sake of higher living standards," he told 15 ministers and environmental specialists from 32 countries.

Sarney said growing protectionism, the debt burden and "terrible inequalities" between rich and poor countries block a better environmental policy.

Homesteader Raimundo de Souza and his family survey the results of a fire he set to clear his land in Brazil's Amazon region for planting crops.

He also attacked foreign creditors that "impose conditions for granting credits... which results in a reduction of resources that hurts the environmental cause."

Iraq reportedly building nuke warhead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraq is building a nuclear warhead for a missile that could carry it to targets in Israel, The Washington Post reported today.

In a dispatch from Jerusalem, the newspaper said some "well-placed Israeli sources" reported Iraq was two years away from testing such a warhead while others said the project needed five more years.

In 1981, Israeli planes bombed and destroyed an Iraqi nuclear reactor at Tammam that Israel said was devoted to producing a nuclear bomb. The current project was said to be using leftover enriched uranium from that reactor.

Israel has made at least 100 nuclear weapons of various kind, according to nuclear technician Mordechai Vanunu who was imprisoned for revealing state secrets. The Israeli government has never confirmed that it has such weapons and has pledged not to allow its Arab enemies to acquire them.

In Jerusalem, military sources told The Associated Press that Iraq, in cooperation with Egypt and Argentina, for five years has been developing the surface-to-surface "Condor 2" missile with solid fuel and a highly accurate inertial guidance system. The missile was said to have a range of about 500 to 620 miles.

The authoritative Jane's Defense Weekly said in London earlier this week that the missile could carry a 3,300-pound warhead.

Shovel crew wows crowds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The kids at the circus gasp at the Whirling Wheel of Death and oooh over the amazing Tahar, the alligator tamer from Morocco, but they usually save their biggest ovations for the lowly elephant sweepers.

That's show biz.

When the ringmaster at the visiting Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus introduces the next act — "a million pounds of performing pachyderms" — 16 elephants lumber gracefully into the spotlight, followed by a half-dozen anonymous men in blue jumpsuits and -carrying brooms and shovels.

For the next few minutes, 16 elephants dance through their intricately choreographed routine with sequined showgirls. Meanwhile, the sweepers are performing their own desperate minuet, dodging a swaying trunk or a thundering hoof to keep the three circus rings nice and tidy.

The kids in the bleacher seats, and many of the grownups, howl with delight, especially when a man in blue smilingly holds his shovel under an elephant's tail.

"Sometimes the sweepers get more applause than the performers get," said Scottish-born stablemaster Tommy Henry, 56, who's swept up his share of elephant manure during 40 years of circus work.

"The public likes it," he said. "They think it's funny. Most of the guys think it's a big joke."

A million pounds of performing pachyderms produces a lot of pounds of manure.

Ringling's entire animal menagerie, in fact, fills a 30-cubic-yard metal trash bin every day, says general manager Mike Melsen. A private contractor is paid to haul it away, except when the circus hosts a "manure giveaway" as a promotional gimmick.

"Elephant manure is the most potent fertilizer in the world,"

WASHINGTON — An unidentified worker cleans up one of the rings of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus in Washington during a recent performance.

said circus spokeswoman Kim Turpin Davis, with the unabashed hyperbole for which Ringling is famous.

"It will grow tomatoes as big as beach balls," she said. "It will grow spinach as powerful as Popeye's."

Ms. Davis said the stuff is so highly prized that someone in Houston, responding to a Ringling newspaper ad, drove his truck up to the circus the night before an elephant manure giveaway and stole the whole aromatic pile.

"We put out an all points bulletin but it was never recovered," she said.

Group works to ban 'insidious' movie ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — That beer your favorite movie star quaffed in his most recent film may be part of an "insidious" advertising scheme, according to an advocacy group that wants to require moviemakers to reveal when they're being paid to show commercial products.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest says the movie "Bull Durham" included 21 shots of Miller Lite beer, "Superman II" featured the Marlboro cigarette logo, and "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial" prominently displayed Reese's Pieces and Coors beer.

While the center didn't know if money changed hands between filmmakers and manufacturers on all these movies, it said Philip Morris paid $42,500 to get its Marlboro logo into the Superman film.

On the coming James Bond movie, "Licensed to Kill," Philip Morris paid $350,000 to have Lark cigarettes shown on screen, center staff attorney Charles Mitchell said.

The center is asking state attorneys general to determine whether the undisclosed placement of commercial products in films constitutes deceptive advertising that violates state laws.

It also said broadcasting movies on television in which there are paid placements of cigarettes violates a 1971 law that prohibits advertising of cigarettes on TV.

Mitchell said the center urged states to require filmmakers to state at the beginning of a movie, for example: "Notice. This film contains paid advertising for Marlboro cigarettes."

The center also said it would ask state officials to determine whether the placement of alcoholic beverages and cigarettes in youth-oriented films should be prohibited because youths cannot legally buy such products.

The group said it was petitioning the Federal Communications Commission to rescind a rule that exempts theatrical films from the general requirement for television placements to be disclosed.

"The paid placement of junk foods, alcoholic beverages and cigarettes in movies is one of the most insidious forms of advertising," said Michael Jacobson, the center's executive director. "Advertising in movies is blatantly unfair to audiences who go to be entertained, not advertised to."

Elizabeth Barnes, a spokeswoman for the Motion Picture Association of America, said the association had no comment.

Rep. Tom Luken, D-Ohio, on March 17 asked Attorney General Dick Thornburgh to investigate whether paid placement of cigarettes in movies made for theaters and then shown on television violates the 1971 Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act that prohibits cigarette ads on TV.

A senior aide to Luken, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said the $350,000 and $42,500 payments from Philip Morris were made directly to the producers of the films. Liggett & Meyers also paid $30,000 to have its Eve cigarettes appear in "Supergirl," the aide said.

"Our position is that if you show 'Superman' or 'Supergirl' on TV you violated that law," the aide said.

Violating the act is punishable by a fine of up to $10,000.

Steven Weiss, a spokesman for Philip Morris U.S.A., said the $350,000 payment was the total for a six-month promotional campaign that was to coincide with the Bond film's premiere in Japan, where Philip Morris markets Lark. He said the product placement portion was only a "small amount" of the $350,000.

He said Philip Morris' policy is not to pay for use of its products or logos in movies but that it will provide such materials free.

"When requests are made of us... we will do so only if there is a smoking scene already in the film. But we don't pay to have our products placed in films," Weiss said.

Des Moines most 'average'

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — This city is a prime place to sample the likes and dislikes of the typical American, say marketing experts, because residents are so, well, average.

Des Moines residents are surveyed by phone more often per capita than people anywhere else in the nation.

"Des Moines is considered kind of average, your typical U.S. metro kind of thing," said Beth Wallace, a spokeswoman for Survey Sample Inc.

Lubbock among oldest cities

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Like most West Texas towns, Lubbock's history as a white settlement dates only to the mid-1800s, but archaeologists say the city might be among the oldest in the New World.

The arid, wind-swept plains scarcely seem like an environment attractive to early man, but decades of research at the site of Lubbock Lake have unearthed evidence that Lubbock has been continuously inhabited by man for at least 11,000 years.

An array of spear points and bones of such extinct animals as the giant armadillo and giant short-faced bear have been recovered from the site and will be showcased as part of the creation of the state's newest historical park.

The Lubbock Lake Landmark State Historic Site is scheduled to open next October.

"It's unique in having such a continuous history of occupation that could be documented," says parks director Wilson Dolman of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Although Lubbock Lake today is little more than a stream, the 300-acre site drew man and animals in an uninterrupted span of more than 11,000 years because it was one of the few places in the region that always had abundant water, says Eileen Johnson, Johnson, a Texas Tech University museum anthropology curator, has been director of the Lubbock Lake excavations and research since 1972.

"It's one of the largest hunter-gatherer complexes we know of in the New World," she says. "You can study man's entire existence in the New World in one spot instead of having to go to 100 different sites."

Unlike a similar early-man site at Clovis, N.M., the Lubbock Lake site hasn't been ravaged by time, man or nature. Layers of sediment 24-30 feet deep, each containing a record of that time period, have accumulated over thousands of years undisturbed by erosion, Johnson says.

"We have these little packages of time stacked one on top of the other," she says.

Preserving as much of the entire site as possible is important because Lubbock Lake's archaeological significance lies in its continuous record of man's past, rather than any one archaeological find, Johnson says.

However, the legions of volunteers and students who have aided Johnson in excavating the site, discovered in 1936, for the past 17 years have turned up important discoveries, such as remains of extinct animals from about 11,000 years ago.

"The giant armadillo was truly Texas-sized," she says. "It was 3 feet tall and 6 feet long. It was no small animal lumbering down the draw." Bones of a giant short-faced bear show the animal to be about three times the size of a grizzly in mass, Johnson says.

"It's been considered to be the most predacious carnivore of the Pleistocene," she says. "We know that man utilized the meat and bones from this bear but how man hunted it, we don't know."

Finding remains of these types of animals along with evidence of human presence has shown archaeologists that early man depended on other animals besides the giant mammoth for food and bones to make tools, according to Johnson.

Excavations at Lubbock Lake also have yielded what she believes is a new spear-point design from the Plainview period of about 10,000 years ago.

These points were made of obsidian from New Mexico and were joined to the spear shaft in a way that differs from other contemporary points, Johnson says.

"We think that Plainview points and Lubbock points were made by the same people of the Plainview culture," she says. "It's like having a Ford and a Chevrolet."

"Many of the cultures have been looked at as making only one kind of design in their projectiles."

Price Daniel House based on original governor's mansion plans

LIBERTY — Sam Houston Regional Librarian Robert Schaad poses in front of the Price Daniel House. He is holding the original blueprints used to build the replica of the governor's mansion.

LIBERTY (AP) — The governor's mansion based on the original blueprints is not in Austin, but in the small Southeast Texas community of Liberty.

The Price Daniel House, built by and named after the late Texas governor, is a replica of the mansion in Austin. The only exception is that the two wings on the sides of the Price Daniel House were left off the original governor's mansion.

"The Legislature decided not to build the wings in 1856 to save money," said Robert Schaad, archivist at the Sam Houston Regional Library in Liberty. "The state saved $6,400 by not building the wings."

Legislators allocated $14,500 to build the mansion in Austin, Schaad said. The lowest bid came in at $20,900, which precipitated removing the wings from the original blueprint, he said.

Price Daniel and his wife, Jean, decided in 1983 to build a home that resembled the mansion's original blueprint, Schaad said. Daniel, who died last August, never moved into the 12-room home, he said. The mansion in Austin has nine rooms.

The Daniel family lived in the residence off and on, but never moved in permanently because the move was too exhaustive, Schaad said. Researchers and scholars visiting the library also stay there while working at the library, he said.

The Price Daniel House is decorated with furniture, paintings and memorabilia from the Daniels, and from Texas legend and statesman Sam Houston, the great grand-grandfather of Jean Daniel. Houston's bed is kept in one of the upstairs bedrooms in the mansion.

One of the oldest furniture pieces in the home is a small breakfast table dating back to 1820. Most of the antique pieces were purchased by the Daniels specifically for the mansion.

"It was always a dream of Price Daniel to build a house based on the original governor's mansion," Schaad said. "They did not want it exactly like the mansion in Austin, but they did want to keep it in the same style." Jean Daniel and workers from the library are moving furniture and other artifacts into the mansion, which is an addition to the library. The mansion eventually will be turned into a museum depicting the many years of public service by the Daniels, Schaad said.

The Daniel family currently pays all the utility and maintenance bills of the mansion, Schaad said. They also will pay them when the mansion becomes part of the Price and Jean Daniel Foundation, he said.

The mansion also houses artifacts from each office Daniel held, from governor to state attorney general to U.S. Senator. There are numerous pictures of the Daniels with national political figures, including Presidents Kennedy and Johnson.

The Daniels spent $500,000 to build the house and much more to furnish the interior, Schaad said. The mansion currently is used for non-profit functions and parties, he said.

Museum basements are great for dinosaur digs

DENVER (AP) — When most people clean out their closets, they find useless clutter. But when Robert T. Bakker rummages through the closets of the nation's museums, he finds remnants of previously unknown species of dinosaurs.

"What we're in now is a new dinosaur gold rush," says Bakker, a University of Colorado paleontologist.

But the rush isn't to dig into the earth, it's to search the basements of museums, where fragments of dinosaur bones and skulls have been stored since they were discovered.

"Twenty or 30 new dinosaurs are found every year around the world," says Bakker. "Most good specimens are in research storage... like an ancient manuscript waiting to be read."

In the past few years, Bakker, 43, has "read" the remains of what he believes are four new species of dinosaurs, including two that have been researched and formally announced.

"The four I've found were dug up, glued together, waiting to be studied," Bakker says.

Sifting through bones and prehistoric fragments on the shelves of the Denver Museum of Natural History, Bakker came across a skull and bits of armor-like plating. They since have been declared a new species of the plant-eating nodosaur family, of the genus Denversaurus.

It looked like a "two-ton armadillo-Godzilla hybrid with long spikes coming out of the shoulder," Bakker says.

The other find, announced in April, was a pygmy Tyrannosaurus rex, which stood about 8 feet and weighed about 500 pounds. Its skull was in storage at the Cleveland Museum of Natural History.

Still being researched are two other finds which are on exhibit in museums. One, he believes, is an early version of an allosaurus and the other is a relative of the stegosaurus.

Bakker says he got hooked on dinosaurs when he was in fourth grade.

With a bachelor's degree from Yale and a doctorate from Harvard, he has taught from kindergarten to graduate school and has made annual trips to Colorado and Wyoming to take part in dinosaur digs.

He and his wife, Constance Clark, moved to Boulder four years ago. He became adjunct curator of the University of Colorado museum.

The trail to find dinosaurs has taken Bakker to field sites and museums across the United States and Canada.

He says he knew about the Denversaurus skull but "had not looked at it carefully enough."

"I was interested in the very last dinosaurs... the twilight of the dinosaur gods," he says. "I took a second look at it."

The skull was found in 1924 in the Badlands of South Dakota and misidentified, he says.

The Denversaurus, announced in October, was more advanced than other nodosaurs, he says. The eye sockets were at its sides, allowing the animal a 360-degree scan.

It was about 20 feet long, 5 feet tall at the hip and 7 feet across. "You'd need a forklift to turn one of these over," he says.

Bakker discovered a skull of the pygmy Tyrannosaurus rex in storage at the Cleveland museum. The specimen was excavated in 1942 near Bozeman, Mont.

The Tyrannosaurus rex weighed 10,000 pounds and stood 20 feet tall, but the pygmy was full-grown at 8 feet.

"There is no doubt the pygmy was full grown," he says. "The bones were together (in the skull)."

Similar to its giant cousin, the pygmy was a meat-eater, with forward eyes, much like those of a hawk. It had little hands and, Bakker speculates, was nimble-footed.

"It's a mystery animal because there is only one of them," he says. "It's very birdlike... it has feet just like a turkey or a chicken."

Both the Denversaurus and the Tyrannosaurus rex — which were natural enemies — lived about 67 million years ago, during the last years of the dinosaurs.

In fact, a tooth of a pygmy Tyrannosaurus rex was found near the skull of the Denversaurus, Bakker says. "It might have been chewing on the Denversaurus."

Family plans celebration

Mrs. Eunice Page will be honored Saturday for her 80th birthday at Days Inn from 2 to 4 p.m. The event will be hosted by her daughter, Alpheine Gressett; her grandchildren, Mike Gressett, Cindy Trim and Debbie Anderson; and her great-grandchildren Mary Ruth, Tonya Sue, Charles Don and John Edward Gressett, Ty and Christi Trim, Michael Anderson and Jami Ryan. Mrs. Page was born April 5, 1909 in Brown County. She married A.W. Page April 22, 1926 in Snyder. She attended Woodland Heights

School in Brown County. A former member of East Fourth Street Baptist Church, she served as superintendent of the junior department. She is a charter member of Baptist Temple where she serves as supervisor of the Intermediate Sunday School Department, and teaches the elderly women's Sunday School class. Mrs. Page also served as secretary of the Women's Missionary Union for several years. All her family and friends are invited to attend the celebration.

T.O.P.S. installs new officers

Members of T.O.P.S. T.X. 21 met March 28 to install new officers. Those installed are: Shirley Jenkins, leader; Virginia Collins, co-leader; Genay Bertran, secretary; Vernice Moore, treasurer; and Edith Roberts, weight recorder. Roll call was answered by 16 members; the weight recorder reported that club members have lost a total of 20 pounds during the month of March. The monthly and weekly best leader spotlight was captured by Genay Bertran, who also won the Easter Fun Contest, taking home the Easter basket. Four new members were welcomed, they are: Kathy Johnson, Helen Spiller, Wanda Mize and Nathan Menges. Plans were finalized for Friday and Saturday's garage sale, which will help finance the trip to Houston for the state convention April 7 and 8. For more information, call Shirley Jenkins at 263-0391, or Virginia Collins at 263-1304.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I work for the same large corporation, so we go to lunch together. He's 33 and I'm 29. (I tell you this so you will know that we're not a couple of young kids.) We are both divorced and have been seeing each other for about a year. Since neither one of us eats lunch, we usually go for a drive in his truck and park somewhere in the shade, just to talk and hold each other. We are very much in love, Abby, and we don't get to spend much time together alone because we live quite a long distance from each other and both have young children. More than once lately we have gotten a little carried away and we made love in his truck. His windows are tinted so you can't see inside — besides, we are very discreet. Parking as we do is nothing new,

Dear Abby
but I would like to know what could happen to us if we should ever get caught by a police officer. — LUNCH HOUR LOVER
DEAR LOVER: It all depends on where you were caught. (In Paris, they'd probably give you a medal.) I checked with the Los Angeles Police Department and was told that a police officer would approach the truck if its presence were "suspicious" — but once the officer ascertained that the occupants were both adults, and the intent was clearly romance and not rape, they would be given a stern warning that that kind of activity in a public location is dangerous, and to never place themselves in such a vulnerable position again. A word to the wise should be sufficient. And I hope it is.

DEAR ABBY: This is for all those people who don't want to go to their class reunions because they weren't popular — or didn't belong to the "in" crowd in high school and they thought no one would want to talk to them anyway. I didn't think anyone would talk to me either, but my husband and I decided to go to my 20th high school reunion. Abby, it was the best move we ever made. People were actually glad to see us! (We both graduated from the school, but in different years.) I hugged more people in two days than I had hugged in 20 years! I have never felt such a sense of love and belonging as I did at that reunion. There were no pretenses of where we came from, since most of us came from working-class families; we came home to be together. I even made peace with an old enemy!

For those who organized that reunion in Pittsburgh, thank you from the bottom of my heart. For those who didn't make the effort to attend — you missed a wonderful weekend. — YOU CAN GO HOME AGAIN
DEAR YOU CAN: Because you took the trouble to write, perhaps those who were lukewarm about going "home" for a class reunion will reconsider. Thanks for writing. Thanks, too, for mentioning those generous people who organize class reunions. They require a ton of work, and not many are willing to tackle the job.

Try a willpower workout

From LADIES' HOME JOURNAL A Meredith Magazine
Kicking a bad habit or sticking to a new diet or exercise program requires a lot of determination. Often, the success or failure of such programs depends almost entirely on the strength of a person's will. In this role, willpower can be compared to a muscle which requires a workout program of its own. Ladies' Home Journal describes a willpower regime with several exercises designed to improve resolve. It is necessary to create opportunities to use willpower often. Dieters should go to the grocery store and purchase their favorite food, no matter how fattening. Then, after bringing it home, they shouldn't open or eat any of the food for at least 48 hours. An excessive gossip might try stopping the next person offering a piece of juicy news and asking them to not talk about it for 24 hours. Over-spenders can go to a department store and try on clothes until they find something that fits really well and looks terrific. Then, for a real willpower challenge, put off buying it. What about couch potatoes? To break the routine, they should force themselves to spend an evening at home without turning on the TV. Then build up to two evenings or, for the ambitious, an entire weekend without turning on the tube. After willpower exercises, a mental cool-down will maximize the benefits of the workout. Review feelings right before, during and after the test of resolve. When did willpower feel weakest or most elusive? What tricks or self-suggestions helped strengthen resolve? What pitfalls or negative thoughts weakened it? Remember what worked and apply these exercises to help build resolve against other bad habits. Each change should be viewed as a series of small steps. Try stating an ultimate goal and putting it in writing. Then think about each of the steps necessary to reach that goal and write each step on an index card. After making the cards, put away all but the first one. When the first step is completed, write "done" on the card and hang it up as a reminder of success. Then repeat the process with each card

Third time may be charm for hungry Blue Devils

SEATTLE (AP) — Final Four experience gets its chance against international experience when Duke meets Seton Hall in one of Saturday's Final Four semifinals.

The Duke Blue Devils are marking their third appearance in the national semifinals in four seasons — an impressive mark except they have never returned to Durham, N.C., with the national championship trophy.

"I'm hungry," All-American forward Danny Ferry says.

Seton Hall is making its first Final Four appearance in just its second NCAA tournament.

The players aren't all without pressure experience, however, as starters Andrew Gaze and Ramon Ramos both played in the 1988 Olympics — Gaze for Australia, Ramos for Puerto Rico. Gaze, in fact, finished as the Games' No. 2 scorer.

"I always thought the Olympics would be the ultimate," said the 23-year-old rookie. "Now I'm getting a chance to see the Final Four and it might top what I have been through."

The teams took a decidedly different trip to the Final Four.

Duke was the preseason No. 1 and stayed there the first 10 weeks of the season. The Blue Devils finished tied for second in the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season and lost to North Carolina in the conference tournament championship game.

Seton Hall was tabbed seventh in the nine-team Big East in a coaches' preseason vote. The Pirates took off on a 13-game winning streak to start the season and lost just six games — all to Big East opponents.

Duke is known as Ferry's team, while Seton Hall is a veteran unit with balanced scoring and no real star.

"I haven't seen a whole lot of them, but from what I understand they rely a lot on Danny Ferry and he is the key to their offense," said Gaze, who never followed American collegiate basketball until he arrived on the Seton Hall campus this season. "They're well coached and have been to the Final Four a number of times. They are one of the top teams in the country. There's no comparison, I think. From what I've seen they rely a lot on Ferry and we don't have a major superstar. We have more balance."

Guard John Morton leads the Pirates in scoring at 16.9, followed by Gaze at 13.6. The other starters come in between 12.1 and 8.7.

Stopping Ferry will be the key for Seton Hall, a team which relies on defense. The Pirates have allowed no opponent to shoot better than 39 percent from the field in the tournament.

Senior Daryll Walker should start on Ferry, but every big man — including Ramos — expects some time on the two-time champion.

Illini go for third win over fiesty Wolverines

SEATTLE (AP) — Ralph Miller, basketball philosopher and recently retired coach at Oregon State, once remarked that he would rather recruit for size than speed. Big guys don't get smaller, he reasoned, but fast guys sometimes get slower.

It is from this font of basketball wisdom that Michigan must try to draw its strategy Saturday when the 10th-ranked Wolverines meet Big Ten rival and third-ranked Illinois in the semifinals of the N.C.A.A.'s Final Four championships.

Their third meeting of the season will follow the other semifinal between fifth-ranked Duke and No. 11 Seton Hall at the Kingdome. The final is scheduled for Monday night.

"Illinois hurts everybody with their great quickness," said Michigan's Steve Fisher, the first interim coach ever to reach the Final Four. "We have to make sure that we overcome that quickness with our size."

None of the Illinois starters is taller than 6-foot-7 nor shorter than 6-4. The Illini, 31-4 and the only top seed left in the tournament, are led in scoring by 6-6 forward Nick Anderson, who averages 18 points overall, 21.3 points and 10 rebounds in the tournament. The other starters are 6-6 forward Kenny Battle, 6-7 center Lowell Hamilton, 6-4 guard Kendall Gill and 6-6 guard Steve Bardo.

They are like interchangeable parts in a seemingly unstoppable machine, each with quickness, good passing and ballhandling abilities and slam-dunk potential.

"Big teams have great athletes, too," Illinois coach Lou Henson said. "Just like the NBA. They have great athletes 7-foot-1, 7-foot or 6-11, but when small people do things like that, people have a tendency to notice it more."

The starters for Michigan, 28-7, are forwards Glen Rice, 6-7; and Terry Mills, 6-10, center Loy Vaught, 6-9, and guards Mike Griffin, 6-7, and Rumeal Robinson, 6-2 — a more normal-sized lot for a basketball team.

"We are a very small team, but we have excellent speed and quickness," Henson said. "We have the kind of players who put a lot into each and every game. This is a very hard-working group."

Illinois, which was ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press poll for a week earlier in the season, has beaten Michigan twice, 96-84 at home and 89-73 at Ann Arbor, Mich. In a news conference Thursday, however, Fisher discounted the importance of the earlier meetings.

"Our team didn't play well against Illinois this season, and we know that," said Fisher, all of whose four games as a head coach have come in this tournament. "We didn't shoot well, and we didn't work as hard at other areas, like

Donald off to another hot start

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — It's not the starts that have given Mike Donald trouble this season, it's the finishes.

Donald shot a 5-under par 67 Thursday to take a one-shot first round lead in the $800,000 Independent Insurance Agent Open, his third outstanding first round of the year.

But the nine-year veteran still seeking his first tour victory has had trouble sustaining his early-tournament promise.

"I shot a 67 first round here last year and ended up seventh," Donald said. "When you get off to a good start, it takes the cut out of your mind."

Donald is trying to break out of the pattern that has developed this season.

After shooting an opening-round 67 in the Hawaiian Open, Donald finished in a tie for 19th, and after his first-round 68 two weeks ago at the Players' Championships, he faded to a tie for 21st.

Donald's opening round Thursday gave him a one-shot lead over Brad Faxon and Mike Hulbert, who shot 4-under par 68s over the windy, wet par-72, 7,045-yard TPC Course at The Woodlands.

Seven other golfers were another shot back, led by defending champion Curtis Strange and Spaniard Seve Ballesteros.

Donald had birdie putts of 25, and 15 feet on the first four holes he played Thursday and was not distracted by the bogey he made on No. 18, his ninth hole of the round.

"The key here is to drive the fairways," Donald said. "The course is right in front of you. You don't have to hit it far here. I don't have to go up against the big hitters."

Donald and the other golfers did have to face wind gusts up to

THE WOODLANDS — Mike Donald of Hollywood, Fla., chips from the side of the eighth green at the Independent Insurance Agent Open. Donald leads after one round with a five-under-par 67.

25 mph and a soggy turf, the result of heavy rains early in the week.

"The course was pretty tricky," said Buddy Gardner, among the group at 69. "The wind swirls through the trees and you never know which way it's going."

"If this wind keeps up, it's going to be interesting."

Roger Maltbie, Brad Bryan and Don Shirey also finished with 69.

Ballesteros, playing here to get ready for the Masters at Augusta, Ga. next week, was pleased with his round despite playing with the flu.

"It seems like I've been sick all year, I don't know what's going on," Ballesteros said. "But it didn't affect me much. I still had a 69. I'll take it, but it could have been a couple of shots better."

Strange, who has won two of the last three tournaments here, hopes for better weather as the week progresses.

"You never know if you have the right club in your hand," Strange said. "I guess I've played the wind here before, but I can't remember it being this wet."

Steve Jones, the highest-ranked money-winner (third) entered in the tournament, shot a 75.

Lee Trevino, playing his first PGA event since last September, shot two over par on the front nine but finished with an even par 72.

Faxon started his round at No. 10 with a bogey, but quickly got his round going with three birdies over the next four holes.

Faxon's first-round gem came on his wife's birthday.

Asked what he got her for her birthday, Faxon replied immediately "a 68."

Squads geared for women's Final Four

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Auburn coach Joe Ciampi didn't plan on losing a game just before the NCAA women's basketball tournament. It only looks that way.

A 65-51 loss to Tennessee in the championship game of the Southeastern Conference tournament ended Auburn's hopes of an unbeaten season, but Ciampi says it went a long way toward getting the Lady Tigers to where they are now — in the Final Four.

Second-ranked Auburn will meet No. 3 Louisiana Tech in a semifinal game at the Tacoma Dome tonight. It's a rematch of last year's championship game in the Dome, which Louisiana Tech won 56-54.

"There is no revenge factor," insisted Ciampi, who has Auburn back in the Final Four despite losing three starters from last year's team.

"If we changed the word revenge to motivation, yes, it's there. I've had it and these young people have had it. We've gone back to try to correct some of the mistakes we made last year and some we've made this year."

Auburn, 31-1, and Louisiana Tech, 32-3, will play in the first game of the doubleheader. Top-ranked Tennessee, making its fourth straight Final Four appearance, meets No. 5 Maryland, 29-2, in the other semifinal.

The winners will play Sunday for the national championship.

Until the loss to Tennessee, Auburn had been ranked No. 1. While disappointing, Ciampi said the defeat came just in time to wake up his team.

"You can't call them names when they're 28-0," he said. "You see it in their eyes. They listen, but they don't hear what you're saying. They need to be taught a lesson."

"Thank goodness we had an opportunity to learn, and to lose, before it really counted. That's why we're able to be sitting here in front of you right now."

The game will match teams with strong frontcourts.

Auburn is led by 6-foot-3 center Vickie Orr, who is backed up by 6-6 Linda Godby, the tallest player in the Final Four. Louisiana Tech counters with 6-4, 190-pound Venus Lacy and 6-foot Nora Lewis, who combine to account for 45 percent of their team's points and rebounds.

"The matchups inside against Lacy and Lewis is where the game is going to be won," Ciampi said. "I see the outside people as neutralizing each other."

Louisiana Tech coach Leon Barmore said Lacy and Lewis will have to stay out of foul trouble. Lacy averages 21 points and 11.8 rebounds a game, Lewis 18.5 and 10.9. They have helped the Lady Techsters outscored their opponents by 16.1 a game.

"We just don't have the depth, but we do have a group of kids who are really battling right now," Barmore said. "The last month, we've played about as well as we can play. If we continue to play that way, we can win. But if we fall short of that, there's no way we can compete."

Tech also overcame the loss to three starters to earn a return trip to the Final Four. The key loss was point guard Teresa Weatherspoon, who played on the U.S. team that won the gold medal in the Seoul Olympics.

"To be honest, I didn't know what to expect this year," Lewis said. "I didn't know how we'd jell, but once we did, we gained confidence."

Orr has averaged 15.8 points and 8.7 rebounds on two surgically repaired knees, while Godby is averaging 11.3 points in a reserve role.

Louisiana Tech is trying to become the first school to win four national championships. In addition to last year's championship, the Lady Techsters won in 1981 and 1982.

"That's really not a motivating factor to me," Barmore said. "When you've been as fortunate as we have, you just thank heaven you're back here one more time. So I really haven't put any thought to it."

"But I'll tell you this, if it happens, I'll put some thought to it then."

The Tennessee-Maryland game will feature Olympians on opposite sides. Bridgette Gordon leads Tennessee with a 20.1 scoring average and Vicky Bullett is Maryland's top scorer, averaging 21.5 points a game.

The key, however, could be how Tennessee's freshman point guard, Dena Hand, faces up to Maryland's pressure defense. Maryland has forced 82 turnovers in its three NCAA games, including 39 in an 89-54 victory over Stephen F. Austin in the West Regional semifinals.

"I told Dena all along, 'Once we get into postseason and things start to advance, you're the suspect player.' 'People will try to test you and see what you're made out of,' " Tennessee coach Pat Summitt said. "I think she's handled it thus far and I'm confident Dena will handle it tomorrow night."

Maryland will have to keep Tennessee from dominating the play inside with its front line of 6-4 Sheila Frost, 6-3 Carla McGhee and the 6-foot Gordon. The Lady Volunteers are outbounding their opponents by 10 a game.

Knight, Elliott receive AP honors

SEATTLE (AP) — Bob Knight, whose Indiana team looked at one point this year on its way to his worst season at the school, was named Associated Press college basketball coach of the year today.

Also chosen by the Associated Press as college basketball player of the year was Arizona senior Sean Elliott.

Knight's team was 3-4 this season and had allowed more than 100 points in three of the losses — two more times than his Indiana teams had in his previous 17 years.

He changed to a three-guard offense, and the Hoosiers won 24 of their last 28 to finish 27-8, won a record 10th Big Ten championship and earned Knight his third AP coach of the year award, second only to John Wooden's five at UCLA.

Knight received 445½ of 878 votes in a nationwide poll of sports writers and broadcasters conducted before the NCAA tournament.

P.J. Carlesimo, whose Seton Hall team eliminated Indiana in the West Regional semifinals on the way to a Final Four berth, was second with 107 votes, followed by Lute Olson of Arizona with 84, Dale Brown of Louisiana State with 62 and Rick Majerus of Ball State with 46.

Knight won the award in 1975 and 1976, the latter the last undefeated team to win the national championship and the first of his three NCAA championships.

With only one returning starter, Knight's 1988-89 team was tabbed for a second-division finish in the conference, and the start of the season did not bode well. Instead, the Hoosiers wound up winning the conference early enough for Knight to rest four of his starters in the final regular-season game to prepare for the NCAA tournament.

The season also featured Knight's 500th victory — making him the 27th Division I coach to reach that mark — and the win that made him the winningest coach in Big Ten history.

Knight's career marks stands at 514-187 in his stints at Army and Indiana. He is the third Big Ten coach to win the award in the last five years. Iowa's Tom Davis won in 1987 and Michigan's Bill Frieder won it two years earlier.

Temple's John Chaney won the award last season.

Elliott garnered 288 of 879 total votes. Second was Duke forward Danny Ferry who received 209 votes.

The 6-8 Elliott led Arizona to a 29-4 record. The Wildcats were eliminated in the third round of the NCAA tournament by University of Las Vegas Nevada.

Elliott became the 51st player to repeat as All-American in the 41 years the team has been in the Pac 10's all-time leading scorer. This season he averaged 22 points, 4.3 assists and 7 rebounds per game.

Elliott is considered the perfect swingman, switching easily from the forward to guard position.

Evert, Sabatini reach finals

KEY BISCAIYNE, Fla. (AP) — Chris Evert and Gabriela Sabatini, two of the biggest names in tennis, are still looking for their first tournament title of 1989, and one of them will get it Saturday.

Evert plays Sabatini in the finals of the International Players Championships. Two potential obstacles for them — top-ranked Steffi Graf and second-ranked Martina Navratilova — bypassed the tournament.

Sabatini beat Helena Sukova, 6-7 (7-2), 6-3, 6-4, in Thursday's semifinals. Evert swept Zina Garrison, 6-3, 6-1.

Evert and Sabatini both competed in three tournaments earlier this year. Evert's best finish was second at the Virginia Slims of Florida; Sabatini's best was at the Australia Open, where she lost in the semifinals.

"I need to be in the finals of a big tournament," said Sabatini, seeded No. 1. "Especially here, because I always used to lose in the third or fourth round."

Sabatini has played in this tournament five times, but had never reached the semifinals before. The 18-year-old has nine singles titles but has yet to win a two-week tournament.

Evert, by contrast, has won 19 two-week tourneys, including this one in 1986. She's 34 but still tough to beat.

"I'm in the finals — I must not be playing badly," said Evert, seeded second. "At times I think I'm playing better than ever. And at times I have lapses of concentration." Evert has won six of her eight matches against Sabatini, but the Argentine has won two of the past three.

"She always gives me tough time because of her topspin," Evert said. "I don't have a chance if I don't play well. You just hope you play the best match of the tournament when you reach the finals."

Sabatini is confident. "Of course I think I can beat her," she said.

In the semifinals, Sabatini had help from the third-seeded Sukova, who missed three easy volleys in the final game to lose her serve.

"That's the way it goes," Sukova said. "I don't think I got nervous ...

Maybe I wasn't concentrating as well as I should have been."

Sukova said she was tired at the end of the match, which lasted two hours, 20 minutes. Sabatini still seemed fresh.

"I have improved very much physically," Sabatini said. "Usually when I had to play three sets, I always was getting tired. Now I feel much better."

Garrison, seeded fifth, broke Evert in their first game but could do little right after that.

"It was horrible," Garrison said. "I don't think she had to do anything. I gave her 90 percent of the points."

Sanders will turn pro

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma State officials say Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders is ineligible to return now that he plans to skip his senior season and play in the NFL next fall.

"He's through ... We are declaring him ineligible for 1989," Oklahoma State athletic director Myron Roderick said Thursday in Stillwater. "We're 100 percent behind him and we'll be watching him as he develops as a pro. He's a great kid and has done a great job for us."

Roderick said it was his understanding that even if Sanders, who in 1988 rushed for 2,628 yards and scored 39 touchdowns, both NCAA records, chose not to play in the NFL, that he could not return to play in college.

Sanders' status with the NFL, however, is not clear.

A true junior, he is ineligible for either the regular or supplemental drafts without a special exemption from Commissioner Pete Rozelle. NFL spokesman Joe Browne said Rozelle has granted about six of those exemptions a year for the past 20 years, mostly to players who were never drafted.

The most recent was last year when Pitt's Craig Heyward was allowed to enter the draft with a year of eligibility remaining and was taken in the first round by New Orleans. In Heyward's case and others, Rozelle has cited the possibility that if he turned down the request, it might be challenged in court.

Rozelle declined to comment during last week's NFL owners' meeting on Sanders' status, but Browne said in New York on Thursday that the league has received a request from Sanders for special eligibility in the April 23 draft.

Sanders' application now indicates he will opt for the regular draft, although he could also go in to one of the two supplemental drafts — in July and September. However, if he is turned down and forced to challenge the ruling in court, he might have to wait for the latter, causing him to miss most or all of training camp.

Browne said Sanders' application "will be reviewed by this office and while there is no timetable for a decision, the decision will be made by Commissioner Rozelle prior to the April 23 regular draft."

Other NFL sources, however, have indicated the league is more inclined to go to court now to test its rules against drafting underclassmen.

A pro football source told The Associated Press that Sanders will be represented by David Ware, an Atlanta-based agent. But it wasn't clear whether Sanders had formally signed with Ware.

Sanders, who attended an Oklahoma State athletic fundraiser late Thursday in Oklahoma City, had no comment on his pending announcement.

William Sanders, however, said his son's decision to join the NFL came after he learned league officials were not likely to challenge his attempt to turn pro.

"One of the men who told us the NFL would not fight it also told me two or three weeks ago that (outgoing Commissioner Pete) Rozelle was going to retire," Sanders said. "He was right about Rozelle and we think he's right about not fighting. He also said the next commissioner would be (U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development) Jack Kemp."

Sanders was introduced by Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones at the fund-raiser as the "greatest running back in college football history." He made a brief speech, thanking God for his talents and his linemen for the good blocks they provided him.

"All of this is way beyond my childhood dreams," Sanders said following a standing ovation from a crowd of more than 1,000 people. "No matter where Barry Sanders ends up, I hope I have the same fans in Oklahoma."

Jones would not comment specifically about Sanders at the fund-raiser, but did respond when asked how the team would be without him.

"We'll be OK," Jones said. "It wasn't long ago at all when someone was asking me if we would be able to replace (running back) Thurman Thomas," who preceded Sanders as the team's primary ball carrier.

"I just winked and said we would make it," Jones said. "And that's what I'm saying now. We'll make it."

49ers obtain Pokes receiver

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Free-agent Mike Sherrard, hampered by leg injuries since his rookie season with Dallas in 1986, has agreed to a $1.3 million three-year pact with the San Francisco 49ers.

The wide receiver was Dallas' first-round pick but hasn't played since his initial season because he broke and then re-broke his right leg.

"The long-range plan is as important as the short range," San Francisco coach George Seifert said on Thursday.

The player's agent, Leigh Steinberg, said doctors report Sherrard will be as fast as ever once he's fully recovered. Sherrard has been timed in under 4.3 seconds for 40 yards.

"Physically, I feel fine," said Sherrard, who caught 41 passes and averaged 18.2 yards per catch for Dallas as a rookie. "My legs feel fine."

He said he works out by jogging, swimming and lifting weights.

"I'm at a point where I need to step up the pace," he said, adding that he's "positive" he can play again.

In other news, Cowboys veteran tight end, Doug Cosbie, who was left on the unprotective list by the team, was picked up by the Denver Broncos.

Ringener third in U.S. Open

EDMOND, Okla. — Local professional bowler Phillip Ringener is currently in third place in the $500,000 Seagrass Cooler U.S. Open. The tournament is the richest on the Professional Bowlers Association tour.

Going into today's round, Ringener was 4-4 in match play and had a total pinfall of 8743. Leading the pack is Jim Penzak, who is 6-2 in match play and has a pinfall of 8779. Second is Harry Sullins who is 7-0-1 in match play and has a 8748 pinfall.

Illini

"They beat us with toughness. Our shots weren't falling, and I think we began to feel a little sorry for ourselves."

Fisher, who took over when Bill Frieder took the job at Arizona State just before the tournament started and was told to leave sooner rather than later, said his Wolverines weren't going into their third meeting with Illinois beaten already.

"We're confident. Illinois is confident. I know Illinois is saying they beat us twice. Our kids are saying that they know they didn't play very well against Illinois, and they're going to go in and beat them this time."

Rice has had the hot hand for Michigan. Through 35 games, he has averaged 25.4 points, including a tournament-high 31.3 points. For the season, he shot 58.4 percent from the field, 62.2 during the tournament. Despite his size, he has done much of his recent damage from the 3-point distance, hitting 20 of 33 for 60.6 percent from outside 19 feet in postseason.

And he leads a team that shot 58 percent from the field during the season, best in the nation.

"He's the best shooter I've seen from the forward position since I've been coaching," Henson said.

Henson takes his Illini into the Final Four with one physical problem. Hamilton, who averaged 13.9 points during the season and 11.8 in the tournament, sprained his right ankle in the second round against Louisville. He did not practice Wednesday and went through a light workout on Thursday, but Henson said he is expected to play.

Henson has taken the Illini into the tournament seven straight seasons, although this is Illinois' first trip to the Final Four since 1952. Michigan was last in the Final Four in 1976.

"If you get into the NCAA's for nine or 10 years, you don't get into the Final Four, sooner or later they're going to say, 'Can this coach get them there?'" Henson said. "But there's nothing happening at Illinois that doesn't happen everywhere else."

Fisher, on the other hand, didn't have to get Michigan to the tournament. Frieder did that. All he had to do was get them to the Final Four. He still pinches himself, he says, afraid that he'll wake up from the dream.

"I've been at Michigan for seven years as an assistant," he said, "but Bill Frieder gave me a lot of responsibility. I'd be in his ear all the time, saying, 'Let's do this. Let's do that.' So I've been making suggestions for seven years. The difference is, now I just go ahead and do them, and I've got somebody else yelling in my ear."

ference player of the year. "I know he's going to get his points. I know he'll get in double figures," said Walker who is averaging 10.3 rebounds in the tournament. "But I just have to play him straight up and make him work for his points and not let him get 30."

"Everybody on the team looks to him. He's been through it all."

Ferry averaged 22.3 points this season, led the team in rebounding at 7.4 and was second in assists with 164. He knows what to expect of the pageantry surrounding the Final Four, having missed it only in his sophomore season.

"What we have to do is focus on Seton Hall right now," Ferry said Thursday when the team arrived in Seattle. "I think we've done the last couple of days. I don't think we did a real good job of that last year. Hopefully, we've all learned from that and the experience will help us out some more."

Duke was upset by eventual champion Kansas in the semifinals last year. Ferry's freshman season brought a championship game loss to Louisville.

"We're a very confident team right now. I think we were last year also," he said. "I think the team understands itself more, knowing what we have to do. Now it's a matter of carrying it out on the court."

LET'S HELP REBUILD THE LIVES THEY WOULD HAVE GIVEN

We send the members of our armed services into battle in unavoidable situations, knowing with sad hearts that many of them will not return home. There are, however, others who will, for although they have risked their lives for us they did manage to survive; even though in some cases with permanent disabilities. Let us never forget what we owe them for what they have done for us. We must give them every possible advantage in the way of job opportunities, housing, education and all the things they will need in order to resume their place in our society. We should also thank the Lord at our House of Worship for their safe return, and pray for their future well-being. It is incumbent upon us to do whatever we can to help them reconstruct their lives, which they were prepared to sacrifice for the preservation of our freedom.

'Speak the truth in love'

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I don't understand my brother and his wife. They have become very involved in a cult - in fact it takes up all their time and money. They both grew up in good churchgoing families, and we don't understand what went wrong. Is there anything we can do to make them listen to our warnings about cults? - Mrs. G.K.

DEAR MRS. G.K.: In all honesty, your influence may be somewhat limited at this time; one of the worst things about cults is the way they persuade people that everyone else is wrong and they alone are right. Often a period of time has to pass before a person becomes disillusioned and admits he or she has been deceived.

elsewhere. In the long term, false cults cannot fill that spiritual emptiness (although they promise to, and in the excitement of having "answers" a person may think that spiritual need has been met). Your brother and his wife need Christ (and not merely going to church, which may be an empty exercise if they do not know Christ personally).

That doesn't mean you should not express your concern, of course; hopefully you'll be planting seeds that will grow as time goes along. However, avoid being contentious or belligerent; remember that we should be "speaking the truth in love" (Ephesians 4:15).

The most important thing you can do, however, is to show them that Christ has made a difference in your life - if he has. Have you ever committed your life to him, and are you consciously living in fellowship with him every day?

More than that, pray for your brother and sister-in-law. People usually get involved in cults because they have a deep spiritual hunger which has not been met

"You are the light of the world... Let your light shine before men, that they may see your good deeds and praise your father in heaven" (Matthew 5:14,16).

Sanctuary open for prayer

"Share Jesus' Spirit" is the theme for First Church of the Nazarene through April and May. As Pentecost Sunday approaches, Pastor Gary Smith will be conducting services on the works and ministry of the Holy Spirit. Church members have been praying and fasting on Wednesdays. The sanctuary is open for those who would like to pray at the altar. April 8 at 7 p.m., the sanctuary will be open for a "Call to Prayer." Anyone in need of prayer is welcome. Sunday morning worship services are at 10:45; Sunday School is at 9:45; Sunday evening services are at 6 p.m.; and Wednesday evening services are at 7 p.m.

Church to host Spring Fling

First United Methodist Church will host "Spring Fling" Sunday through April 23. A snack supper will be at 5:30 with musical entertainment; selected study offerings will be from 6 to 7 p.m. A study of the Jewish faith will be taught by Larry Steinberg, the son of a Russian Jew who immigrated to New York City in 1922. His four presentations will include:

- Sunday — History — Bible times to present day;
- April 9 — Jewish religion and rituals;
- April 16 — In-depth — modern history;
- April 23 — Zionism, holocaust, and modern Israel.

"Adding Years to Your Life," a study of exercises and what and how you eat, will be taught by Cindy Robinson, who is director of the Children's Day Out Program. Robinson has taught aerobics and other courses on health and nutrition.

- April 9 — The United Methodist Church, taught by Rev. Bobby McMillan, district superintendent of the Big Spring District;
- April 16 — Roman Catholic Church, taught by Father Stephen White, pastor of Immaculate Heart of Mary Church;
- April 23 — The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, taught by DeWayne Wallace, bishop.

"Something for Senior Highs — TV 101," will be conducted by Steve and Gay Herren, who will show videos and lead discussions on teen pregnancy.

"Something for Mid Highs — Clowning — Drama." Jean and Cloetta Shotts will lead the mid highs in exploring the area of drama and clowning with the end goal a presentation.

Children (Grades 1-5) — "The Music Machine." Sue and Gil Oxendine and helpers will work with children in preparation for the children's spring musical scheduled for May 30.

Special activities will be conducted for children who are kindergarten age and younger. Evening worship service is from 7 to 7:45 p.m.; the youth choir will sing each week. Speakers are scheduled as follows:

- Sunday — Rev. Robertson;
- April 9 — Rev. Lee Emerson, chaplain at the Veterans Administration
- April 16 — W.L. and Faye Armstrong, missionaries to Indonesia that the church supported financially;
- April 23 — All Bell Choirs and music worship.

April 9-16 — Art show of 12 paintings on tile of the Lord's Prayer by Harland Narem.

Father Delaney: 'Big Spring is home'

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

Father James P. Delaney, pastor of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, considers Big Spring his home — more than 50 years after leaving his birthplace of Belfast, Ireland and pastoring several churches in Texas. As a young pastor in Sept. 1937, Fr. Delaney, a member of Oblate of Mary Immaculate, received orders from the OMI Superior General in Rome that he was to leave for India, where he was to pastor a church.

At the last minute, Fr. Delaney recalled, he learned he was being sent to Texas.

Having lived in beautiful, green Ireland, Fr. Delaney wasn't expecting what he'd find in Eagle Pass, which he describes as "the end of the world."

After five years in Eagle Pass, Fr. Delaney was transferred to a parish in Houston, which he found to be quite different — including its growing traffic problem.

Seven years passed and he was called to pastor a church 30 miles south of Houston in the town of Alvin, where he would spend another seven years.

Before moving to Big Spring 25 years ago, Fr. Delaney pastored the Guadalupe parish in the Rio Grande Valley for eight years.

He arrived in Big Spring in February 1964, when, as he remembers, many streets weren't yet paved.

Although the valley is known for its flowers and rich fertile land, Fr. Delaney said he prefers Big Spring because of its "good people."

"It's not so much what you see — it's the people. You could live in the North Pole if you have good people with you," he said with a strong Irish accent.

The members of Sacred Heart Catholic Church have influenced Fr. Delaney to remain in Big Spring.

Because his predecessors stayed only two or three years, parish members were concerned that Fr. Delaney might follow in their footsteps and search for a "happier hunting ground," he said with a laugh.

Father James P. Delaney stands in front of Sacred Heart Catholic Church. Born in Ireland nearly 79 years ago, he says Big Spring is his home.

"The parish members asked me to stay; they said 'Don't leave us. We'll cooperate with you 100 percent.' I gave them my word I wouldn't leave."

Parish members recently honored Fr. Delaney for 25 years of dedication and service to their church.

With a membership of nearly 2,000, Fr. Delaney contends his is not a big parish compared to larger cities.

Fr. Delaney said that given a choice he would choose to remain in Big Spring, adding that if he was ordered to pastor another parish he would comply.

Having been offered two other assignments, Fr. Delaney said, "I've managed to beat my way out of it," he said jokingly.

In his 25 years as pastor, Fr. Delaney and his parish have seen many changes.

Located at Sixth and Aylford Streets, the current building — the fourth church on that corner — was dedicated Oct. 11, 1973. Across the street is the Sacred Heart Youth Center, where dances and various youth activities are conducted.

The church purchased the former Kate Morrison School, located across from the youth center, to conduct classes. Across from the school is a parking lot, which the church also owns. "We own the four corners. That's very important you know."

The church also has a basketball court, a putting green and a photo lab where youth are taught to develop film and print their own pictures.

With all the additions to his church, Fr. Delaney proudly says "We never went into debt. Everything is paid for by donation." ... Before we begin a project I announce my idea a year or two ahead — and the people come through," he said.

Religion roundup

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Terming small-town and rural parishes the "overlooked giant" in U.S. Catholicism, sociologist Gary Burkhardt says: "The rural parish is where the theological issues of today's church will come to a head."

He says such current issues as the shortage of priests, priestly ordination, the role of the laity and role of unordained pastoral administrators are most acute in those areas.

Burkhardt of Benedictine College in Atchison, Kan., said in an interview with the Catholic Key, weekly of the Kansas City-St. Joseph, Mo., diocese, that a third of U.S. Catholics live in rural areas or towns of less than 50,000 population.

GENEVA (AP) — Atheism no longer has significance in the Soviet Union, says the recently consecrated bishop of the German Evangelical Lutheran Church in the Soviet Union.

Bishop Harald Kalnins, who visited the Lutheran World Federation here, called the present situation for Soviet churches a "spring breeze." Illustrating their rapid growth, he said in three successive Sunday services he held in the Leningrad area, the congregation doubled each time.

REDLANDS, Calif. (AP) — Mission Aviation Fellowship, which trains missionary pilots for flying in remote areas, reports the theft of one of its training planes, a Cessna Turbo 206, and suspects the theft was drug-related.

"The plane was full of fuel and the thieves took three five-gallon 'jerry' cans of fuel, enough for another hour in the air," says Max Meyers, MAF president. He says this indicates "they planned to fly in the night and avoid any touchdown points in this country."

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Jewish Committee says it has initiated a dialogue with the "heredi," or ultra-Orthodox, leaders to foster better understanding among the various sectors of Judaism.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The Rev. James I. McCord retired in February as chancellor of the Center of Theological Inquiry, which seeks to stimulate greater interchange between religion and science.

A search committee was set up to seek a successor. McCord, who was president of Princeton Theological Seminary from 1959 to 1983, founded the center in 1978.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Duke Divinity School scholar, who thinks the church needs to understand the "theology of popular culture" to attract youths, says that gyrating rock star Prince is a "preacher" of sorts.

People tend to think of him as "the personification of human pornography," but his music also touches on important religious matters, says Jon Michael Spencer, assistant professor of music and black church studies.

Prince sings "about the necessity of loving God" and "issues like war, nuclear arms, drugs, AIDS and poverty," Spencer says. "Prince is clearly somebody who is... religious and who embodies the contradictions of being human. He highlights what it means to be both spiritual and carnal."

CHICAGO (AP) — Protestants gave a bigger percentage of their income to churches back before World War I and in the Great Depression of the 1930's than they have in the last 20 years, a study finds.

It was submitted for a forum this weekend sponsored by the Independent Sector and the United Way Institute.

The historical analysis by researchers John and Sylvia Ronsvalle of Urbana, Ill., says that in 1933, when U.S. per capita income was at a low, Protestants gave 3.3 percent of income to churches.

While per capita income has ballooned 218 percent since then, Protestant church members in the 1990's have given only around 2.5 percent of it to churches, the study says.

Robinson comes home to preach

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

Darrell Robinson, first vice president of the Southern Baptist Convention, is coming home to conduct Midway Baptist Church's revivals, titled "A Healing Touch."

Robinson will serve as guest evangelist during the three-day revival to be conducted Sunday through Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Craig Hughes, Mesquite, will serve as guest music evangelist at Sunday's 11 a.m. worship service.

Robinson served as the church's first pastor, as well as pastoring several other Howard County churches.

The son of Lillie Robinson, he was born Sept. 23, 1935 in Big Spring.

He is a graduate of Baylor University and attended Southwestern Seminary. Robinson received an honorary doctorate from Houston Baptist University in May 1982, and earned his doctorate of ministry degree from Luther Rice Seminary in May 1983.

According to a news release, Robinson began pastoring at 18, and has held several pastorates in Texas and has pastored one church in Liberal, Kan.

When he pastored First Baptist Church of Pasadena, from 1973-81, the church's membership grew from 2,500 to 7,700. Its budget increased from $256,000 to $2,500,000 per year, the release stated.

He currently serves as pastor of Dauphin Way Baptist Church, Mobile, Ala. where the church has experienced spiritual renewal and has just relocated into a new $17 million facility.

Robinson has authored and published three books: "How to Be a Growing Christian," "People Sharing Jesus" and "The Total Church Life."

As a Christian leader and denominational leader, his positions have included chairman of the North Texas Executive Board, first vice president of the Texas Baptist Convention, and vice chairman of the Executive Committee of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Robinson, who has recently been elected by the trustees of the Home Mission Board to serve as director of evangelism, will soon leave the Dauphin Way Baptist Church to help Southern Baptists "reach America for Christ," said Chet Haney, pastor of Midway Baptist Church.

His preaching, teaching and speaking opportunities include more than 200 revivals and evangelistic crusades throughout the United States and in several foreign countries, including Korea, Guyana and Brazil.

In honor of Robinson's 35th anniversary of his call to preach, church members will host a reception after Tuesday's revival.

A "Believer's Baptism" will be conducted Sunday night when approximately 13 people have expressed the desire to be baptized, Haney said.

New nun

MANILA — Mother Theresa, right, founder of the Roman Catholic congregation, The Missionaries of Charity, offers the crucifix for a newly-ordained nun to kiss during a recent ceremony in Manila.

Mother Theresa, popularly known as The Living Saint, assisted in the ordination of 13 nuns from Australia, South Korea, Papua New Guinea and the Philippines.

'Elite' divided on issues

NEW YORK (AP) — The "elite" of American Christianity, those in the upper echelons of power and influence, are found in a new study to be sharply divided in their social-political views.

They also assume different priorities for their common faith.

On economic and military issues, both mainline Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders are on the left and fundamentalists on the right. On family-sexual issues, mainliners remain on the left, but Catholics join fundamentalists on the right.

"The ideological polarization is immense," says social scientist S. Robert Lichter of Washington, who made the study with two colleagues. He added in a telephone interview:

"The differences seem to define the left and right poles of American political discourse. What surprised me is that the mainline Protestant leaders are so far to the left, and Catholic leaders also are to the left on economic issues."

The study involved replies to extensive questionnaires by 178 influential figures of mainline Protestantism, Catholicism and Protestant fundamentalism, compiled through nominations by denominations and religious journals.

Leaders of mainline Protestantism, an establishment that historically has set the tone for American society, were found "liberal on every dimension," although members are fairly conservative, as shown in other studies.

Eighty percent of them say they are political liberals, as do 59 percent of Catholics, compared with only 13 percent of fundamentalists, differences paralleling recent voting records.

Catholic and mainline leaders are "much more critical of capitalism," about a fourth of them saying the U.S. should "move toward socialism," with big corporations "taken out of private ownership and run in the public interest."

In contrast, only 4 percent of fundamentalist leaders feel that way.

Weather

A tornado ripped through a rural area in northeast North Carolina Thursday afternoon, injuring at least 12 people, leaving as many as a dozen more homeless and seriously damaging one school. Two people were in guarded condition in Halifax Memorial Hospital with severe abdominal and head injuries, an emergency room supervisor said.

A tornado and severe thunderstorms destroyed two mobile homes and downed power lines in eastern Arkansas Thursday evening, but no one was reported injured. Another twister hit northwestern Alabama but there were no reports of injuries or damage.

Thunderstorms during the evening shelled parts of Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi with golf ball-size hail, while strong storm winds downed or uprooted trees in Missouri and Kentucky and tore part of the roof off a school at Clarksdale, Miss.

Showers and thunderstorms from the same frontal system also continued in the upper Ohio Valley, southern New England, and along the mid-Atlantic coast and the Carolina coast. Light rain and drizzle dampened the rest of the northern Atlantic Coast and lower Great Lakes.

A few showers and thunderstorms continued in central Oklahoma, while further west, a Pacific front scattered rain from northern California and the Pacific Northwest to western Montana.

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1989

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Debbie Reynolds, pianist Eddy Duchin, baseball's Rusty Staub, actor Toshiro Mifune, football coach Bo Schembechler.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may be seeking information in the wrong place. Refuse to return to a restricting situation. A love relationship is glorious. Do not let a jealous individual tread on your dreams.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your emotional responses could make someone think you are unreliable. Let him know you are doing the best you can. Curb a tendency to act on impulse. Move forward with quiet confidence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Even if you feel like vanishing from the current scene, stay with it. Strong effort will let you overcome obstacles and win big. Someone in love with you wants to be more helpful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You know exactly when to get out of exciting but exasperating "political" situations. Use your awareness of others' needs to develop overdue improvements. Loved ones will cooperate if approached directly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stay in touch with your favorite people and all will go well. Try to keep things in perspective if your plans go awry. A good sense of humor stands you in good stead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are completing difficult tasks and business plans that will help you move ahead. The obstacles you encounter can be overcome with persistence. Romance thrives despite confusion. Speak from the heart.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Write letters or telephone someone you have not seen in some time. He will understand the constraints of your busy schedule. You sense a need for intelligent guidance. Pursue spiritual growth.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are ready to go after what you want. Use the element of surprise. A change of scene revitalizes you.

When progress is stymied, be quietly persistent. Roadblocks fall as you advance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your plans are excellent; stay with them. Do not be lured off-course by other tempting offers. Unexpected companions are a source of delight. Avoid controversy at social gatherings. Act circumspect and discreet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An understanding with someone you means a lot to you firms your resolve. Your curious, inquiring mind could lead to a major discovery. Reach out to potential allies. Teamwork proves richly rewarding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may feel less appreciated than in the past. Avoid lashing out at family members. A deep change within will bring peace of mind. Others are attracted to you. Forge new friendships.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You feel carefree and like to joke with people. Be careful, however. A conservative person could misinterpret your lighthearted approach. Seek companions on your wavelength. Romance holds new promise.
