

Solutions to oil spill range from powered cheese to feathers

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — One man wanted to sprinkle powdered cheese on the nation's worst oil spill in hopes it would make the oil congeal and easier to pick up.

Another would have dropped feathers on the slick, either making the sludge easier to pick up or tarring and feathering Alaska's coast.

Ideas on how to clean up the 10.1 million gallons of oil spilled in Prince William Sound began pouring in before the Exxon Valdez tanker wreck was 24 hours old.

A Japanese company sent a box of equipment. The problem was the directions also were in Japanese.

It is a big challenge figuring out who is trying to unload a warehouse of some product and who has an answer to Alaska's problems, said Jeff Mach, coordinator for the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation.

"We've gotten hundreds of offers," Mach said. "Some of them come across as a little bit of salesman and a little bit of a do-gooder."

Exxon, too, has been deluged with inventions.

"They range from the sublime to the ridiculous," said Exxon spokesman Dennis Stanczuk. "The one thing about all of them, though, is it's people trying to help."

Tens of thousands of towels have been sent to Valdez to help with the mop-up.

One of the most successful strategies has been to do what nature does to cleanse itself — shower the rocky beaches with water.

"This high-volume flushing of the beach ... it's nature's way," said Erich Gundlach, a specialist in oil contamination of beaches and a consulting geologist for the state.

"They're speeding up the natural processes," Gundlach said, adding that "too many people expect a toothbrush out there."

Most of the ideas being used are established practices taken from past oil-spill fights.

Alaska fishermen gave a twist to a tried-and-true method by sewing absorbent pads into the nets they normally use to catch herring, salmon and other fish in Alaska's rich waters.

Most products presented to state biologists and environmentalists are turned over to the Coast Guard.

The state was similarly besieged with ideas from around the country in October when three California gray whales were trapped in ice near Barrow.

Two Minnesotans, who were given a polite brush-off when they offered their services, refused to take no for an answer. Rick Skluzacek and Greg Ferrian loaded their equipment on an airliner and flew to Barrow at their own expense.

Their device, known as a "bub- blyer," proved invaluable in keeping the whales' breathing holes ice-free and freeing the animals.

"I told him I didn't want it, but he gave it to me anyway," Myers said.

Myers said the program he started provides its own rewards. "I feel like people that lie around after they retire just don't last too long," he said. "I think if I would have just come home and not done anything I'd be dead now."

Myers said he's not sure how many clothes he's given away since he started the project. "It's in the thousands. I really didn't start keeping track of it for the last year and a half," he said.

All clothes donations are appreciated, but Myers said right now he's trying to get pants size 38 on up and shirts size 17 on up for veterans. Shoes, preferably new, are also appreciated. Those interested in donating clothes can contact Myers at 263-7361.

who have not passed the previous tests.

Addressing the fifth grade passing percentages, Murphy said, "In testing such as this, if it goes down a significant amount such as 10 to 15 percent we're very concerned about it," he said.

But the six percent drop could likely be attributed to "the makeup of the class," Murphy said.

He added, "We don't want to see passing percentages go down in any grade level, but from year to year you have stronger classes taking the test."

Murphy said the TEAMS scores indicate the district "is still in pretty good shape in terms of our overall scores."

However, a true barometer of the district's TEAMS test performance cannot be constructed without comparing the district's results against the state average for each grade level, he said.

Murphy said he expects to present local TEAMS results and state averages to the school board in June.

Helen Gladden, curriculum director, responded to test scores, saying, "By and large, the scores are about where we expected."

The percentage of students passing the TEAMS sections in grades three, five, seven and nine, followed by the scores for the same grade last year in parenthesis, are:

- Third grade: math — 94 (94); reading — 90 (92); writing — 86 (85).
- Fifth grade: math — 96 (96); reading — 86 (92); writing — 92 (92).
- Seventh grade: math — 94 (98); reading — 88 (88); writing — 87 (85).
- Ninth grade: math — 78 (74); reading — 85 (76); writing — 62 (61).

The search was conducted by the sheriff's department, the Big Spring Police Department, Texas Highway Patrol and Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Sheriff's department officials said Saturday that Department of Public Safety tests to confirm the drugs as marijuana and cocaine had not been completed, nor had the drugs been weighed to determine the exact amount confiscated.

Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard was out of his office and unavailable for comment Saturday afternoon on the arrests and drug seizures.

After receiving information from "a confidential informant and concerned citizens of Howard County," the sheriff's department obtained a search and arrest warrant for the Cantus from Justice of the Peace Bill Shankles, sheriff's reports said.

Officers also seized a handgun and about $800 in cash, reports said.

a cost of more than $100 million, until Earth and Venus are again in proper alignment.

"Even with this current issue we've run up against, I'm convinced we're still in a very favorable position to launch Atlantis during the Magellan window," shuttle chief Richard Truly said Saturday.

The countdown was halted Friday with just 31 seconds left after controllers noted a power surge in a pump. The pump recirculates liquid hydrogen through fuel lines serving engine No. 1, keeping the lines cool and in proper condition for ignition.

After the launch was called off, engineers examining TV tapes noticed a second problem, a vapor cloud spewing from a line that carries hydrogen from the external fuel tank to the shuttle.

After the scrub, the space agency tentatively set Monday as a new launch target.

Shelter

tracting with TYC.)

The Big Spring shelter will be modeled after Buckner's youth shelter in Odessa, which also contracts with TYC to house teenage boys adjudicated delinquent by Texas juvenile courts.

The local shelter will be classified as a basic care group home, according to Michael Harrison, administrator of contract services for the Texas Youth Commission.

As such a shelter, it will house non-violent juvenile offenders, for six months to a year.

"Basically these are kids who are not a major risk to the community," Harrison said. "We have to look at the community as well as the needs of the kids when we make placements."

The TYC places minors who are adjudicated delinquents in facilities ranging from low-security group homes such as the Big Spring shelter to higher-security facilities such as halfway houses and state schools.

"In the end, though, we will have the right to say, 'No,' to a recommended placement," said Marian Stohler, shelter supervisor and social worker. "We will always have the choice of kids we want to take."

The shelter's staff will essentially remain the same, McElreath said.

Peggy and Jack Cottongame, and Art and Charlene McFadder will continue to serve as houseparents at the shelter and Stohler will continue as supervisor, and working part-time at the shelter.

Buckner will also hire another social worker who will work part-time at the shelter, McElreath said.

All of the workers at the shelter will continue to receive childcare training as mandated by the state, he added.

"We feel good about this and we know how to run this type of program," he said, referring to Buckner's youth shelter in Odessa.

"The staff here has already experienced most of the things these boys will throw at them," he added. "Our staff has been trained in treating the abuse issue. Now we're going to be treating the effects of abuse."

Stohler said the shelter would likely take placements from the West Texas area and possibly from cities "as far away as Dallas."

"We'll have more inquiries into our services than we can say grace over," said McElreath, adding the shelter will never house more than eight boys.

While none of the boys will be violent offenders, Harrison said many would likely have been involved in property offenses such as stealing or vandalism.

McElreath said the boys placed by TYC would "be a little more street educated" than the children the shelter formerly housed.

"They may have experienced some drugs, some alcohol," he said. "They will be just full of energy, and much of it is a negative-type energy."

Most of the boys will have come from troubled home environments, he said, and it will be the responsibility of the shelter to treat the boys' behavioral problems.

"These are youngsters that are falling in the cracks," McElreath said. "We're going to try to pull them out of the cracks. No one really wants to provide a proper home for these boys. What they didn't get at home we're going to give them here. We're going to give them a home life."

Counseling services, religious training and independent living instruction will be provided at the shelter, and the boys will attend local public schools.

Stohler stressed that the boys will be "heavily supervised," and that they will gain increasing individual privileges based on their behavior at school and the shelter.

Once a resident of the shelter turns 18 years of age, Stohler said, the staff will work to place him in a job training program such as those offered by Job Training Partnership Act, or aid him in enrolling in college or obtaining a job.

During the summers, residents will be enrolled in summer job programs.

Asked about the effect of losing an emergency child care placement center in Big Spring, McElreath said it was regrettable, but explained that Stohler would still be available to aid in the placement of local abused children in shelters in other cities such as Midland.

McElreath said the Rainbow Project was well supported by the local community through donations, and that the shelter would still rely heavily upon local contributions.

Of the shelter's estimated annual budget of $150,000, he said Buckner would need to raise about $75,000 locally.

The TYC will pay the shelter $34 per day per placement, but the cost per child is $55 to $60 per day, McElreath said.

He predicted the community would support the shelter "if we get out and tell our story."

Harrison, of TYC, said, "We certainly have a need for group homes out in West Texas."

And McElreath asserted the shelter will be meeting the needs of the boys placed in the home as well as that of society.

"These boys are going to be receiving drug counseling, alcohol counseling," he said. "They're going to get all the help they need — from the schools, the churches, and our staff. We can provide them with the program they need to turn themselves into useful citizens, to cease being a drag on society and make a useful contribution."

Heated Capitol Hill debate ahead for Bush decision

WASHINGTON — President Bush's decision to go ahead with the $7 billion FSX fighter deal sets the stage for a heated congressional debate over U.S.-Japanese defense ties, trade friction and America's high-technology future.

In announcing the agreement for joint development and production of an advanced version of the F-16 fighter, Bush sought to allay concerns voiced on Capitol Hill — as well as within his own administration — over the economic and technological impact of the deal.

Bush told reporters Friday that the United States will have a 40 percent share in the development work and a "similar share" of the production run for the 130 planes which Japan wants to deploy in the late 1990s.

Addressing technology issues, the president said that "sensitive source codes for the aircraft's computer will be strictly controlled. Access will be granted to only those codes that are essential to complete the project."

Bush said he was convinced that the agreement "is in the strategic and commercial interests of the United States."

However, several members of Congress said they were still dissatisfied with the terms of the deal and would strive to block it when the agreement is sent up to Capitol Hill for a 30-day review period.

Congress could try to halt the deal by passing a joint resolution of disapproval, but a two-thirds majority of both houses would be required to override a likely Bush veto of such a resolution.

"Once again, the administration has allowed political and foreign policy factors to dominate a decision having a fundamental impact on our economic future."

Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., chairman of the House FSX Task Force, declared that "I will lead an effort to ensure that this giveaway of American technology never sees the light of day."

"Once again, the administration has allowed political and foreign policy factors to dominate a decision having a fundamental impact on our economic future," said Gephardt, who last year ran for president on a trade protectionism platform.

Gephardt's St. Louis district is the home of General Dynamics, which is slated to work with Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries in co-developing and co-producing the FSX.

The Missouri Democrat and other critics of the deal contend that Japan instead should buy American-made F-16s "off the shelf," to help ease this country's $55 billion trade deficit with Japan.

The FSX announcement came the same day as the Office of the Trade Representative released a study listing Japan as one of the worst users of trade barriers. Ac-ording to published reports, the agency recommended sanctions for refusing to open its markets to U.S.-made cellular phones and mobiles radios.

Proponents of the FSX have argued that the deal will give U.S. industry access to valuable technology — particularly in the areas of composite wing construction and advanced radar systems — developed by the Japanese.

However, a congressional source said a classified report sent to Capitol Hill Friday by the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, indicates that the United States actually may gain little or nothing from such Japanese technology.

"We don't know... as to what advanced technologies they (the Japanese) might have. So it's pure guesswork. From what they've been able to estimate from open-source stuff, the U.S. is far advanced in wing composites and is even further advanced in the radar technology," said the source, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

The source said GAO officials also were expected to testify at hearings on the FSX that when the deal was initially negotiated during the Reagan administration, U.S. officials "did not consider any commercial or economic implications. They did not bring in any agencies that do that... They did it solely for security reasons, and security was narrowly defined."

After the Bush administration took office, concern over the deal's broader economic implication was voiced at White House meetings by Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher and U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills. This prompted Bush to send the draft agreement back to Tokyo for "clarifications."

Another point that is expected to be raised by FSX critics on Capitol Hill is use of so-called side letters to handle provisions on the U.S. production work share and protection of computer source codes, rather than stipulating these provisions in the U.S.-Japanese "memorandum of understanding" that is the heart of the deal.

This goes to the issue of trust in Japanese willingness to fully live up to such agreements.

Congressional critics also are expected to argue in coming weeks that the FSX deal will provide technology that may help propel Japan's aircraft industry into head-to-head competition with the United States.

"We are giving our strongest competitor in the world marketplace the expertise it lacks to directly challenge America's leadership in international civil and military aircraft sales," said Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J.

Judge cuts off further contact with the press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The jury in the Oliver North trial ended deliberations for the weekend shortly after noon today after considering the case for about three hours.

Earlier in the morning, the trial judge had cut off contact with the press corps because 10 news organizations have gone to court to seek public disclosure of a piece of evidence in the case.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell has been keeping in touch with the news media through a press corps emissary.

"Hereafter, no information will emanate from my chambers," Gesell said in a letter to Carl Stern of NBC News, the news media liaison with the judge. "Please advise the press to call" a court telephone number which is updated periodically to keep up to date with court proceedings.

Stern said the judge was taking the step because the press is now an adversary in a court proceeding before Gesell. The Associated Press and nine other news organizations want public disclosure of a stipulation summarizing intelligence intercepts of a CIA-assisted November 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran.

More than 20 news organizations that were not parties to the proceeding wrote a letter to Gesell saying that "each of us... requests permission to maintain contact with the Court or its chambers regarding developments in the North matter."

North's lawyers referred in closing arguments to the stipulation, but the court refused to release the document publicly.

It shows that top U.S. officials knew at the time of the November 1985 shipment that Hawk missiles were aboard the craft.

North is charged with creating a false chronology that says no one knew until January 1986 that Hawks were aboard. Part of his defense is to show that CIA director William Casey and national security adviser John Poindexter knew from the intercepts what was aboard, yet agreed to the story that no one knew.

"On April 22, Gesell rejected the disclosure motion by the news organizations to release the stipulation, saying it "is a classified document."

The news organizations appealed and the appeals court Friday sent the matter back to Gesell, calling for a hearing on national security issues involved, saying it cannot make a decision without having such a record.

Today, the judge set a conference for Monday when a schedule can be set for compiling a record on the national security issues.

North is accused of lying to Congress to cover up his role in secretly assisting the Contras and lying to the attorney general about aspects of the diversion of funds to the Contras from the Iran arms sales. He also faces charges that he accepted a $13,800 home security system and converted $4,300 in traveler's checks from a Contra leader to his own use.

March of Dimes Walk-A-Thon

Angie Cole and Monica Martinez wheel their strollers and infants into Comanche Trail Park Saturday morning as they took part in the March of Dimes Walk-A-Thon. Walkers raised money to help in research to prevent birth defects.

Pre-natal care center to open

A clinic specializing in pre-natal care in an effort to prevent birth defects has recently been formed in Big Spring through a cooperative effort of health authorities.

The clientele for the new clinic will be new mothers and mothers-to-be who "need to see a doctor that maybe cannot afford one," said Shirleen Brown, director of nurses at Scenic Mountain Medical Center and a supporter of the new program.

"It will be for the ones that cannot afford to get medical aid any other way... (women) who don't seek medical help because they don't think they have the money to see a doctor," she said.

"Throughout the nine months of pregnancy" the nurse will do teaching to prepare them for what's coming," she said.

The clinic — staffed by a registered nurse, a secretary and a doctor on as needed basis — will focus on education, teaching expecting mothers about diet, nutrition, care for newborns, infant feeding and how women can prepare for their pregnancies, Brown said.

The program will also work with people facing problematic pregnancies, such as expecting mothers who are diabetic. "It's important (diabetic mothers) take care of themselves so their diabetes doesn't get out of control," she said.

Brown said the clinic is opening as a cooperative effort of the hospital, which furnishes the nurse and doctors; the March of Dimes, which will provide some of the clinic's equipment; and a grant from the Texas Department of Health.

The clinic is expected to be open two days a week, although Brown said a decision on which two days has not been reached yet. She expects the clinic to draw between 50 and 100 patients a month.

Brown said the public is invited to attend the open house of the new clinic, held from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. at the Family Doctors Building, 1608 W. FM 700.

Scholarships awarded

The Howard County Educators Association met April 25 at La Posada for an end-of-the-year banquet.

Scholarships of $100. Each were awarded to Shasta Hollingshead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hollingshead of Forsan; and to Jeff O'Daniel, son of Mr. and Mrs. O.D. O'Daniel of Coahoma.

Officers were elected for the new year. They are: Hannah Coleman, president; Mary Rowell, vice president; Sharon Cregar, secretary and Merlene Brown, treasurer.

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Herald opinion

More attention to issues needed

City of Big Spring voters will have a small plate before them when they arrive at the polls in less than one week. Voters will consider two candidates for mayor and the single candidate for the District Two city council seat May 6. Tim Blackshear's election to the council is guaranteed, unless a groundswell for a write-in candidate should occur — highly unlikely in this unemotional election.

City residents, therefore, have only the mayor's contest to decide, besides participation in the school district race; an opinion on that will appear in Tuesday's Herald.

The race between incumbent A.C. "Cotton" Mize and challenger Maxwell Green has had its moments of excitement, but they have been few and far between.

Mize, on the one hand, is running on the basis of his perceived successes during a three-year term, while Green has sought to establish the need for a cleaner, friendlier Big Spring that would attract out-of-town consumers.

That hardly makes for an earth-shattering campaign. Mize is claiming a healthy list of accomplishments during his tenure, many of which contribute to a healthier Big Spring. He may be exercising the politician's tendency to overstate his own contribution in all of these areas.

Frankly, his comments would be more appealing if they were at least sprinkled with some degree of credit sharing for the accomplishments he ticks off during his campaign speeches. His comments of "I did this" and "I did that" are too frequent. Doubtless, he knows that many people must share credit for these successes; outside of the heat of a campaign he would likely do so.

There is no question: He has enjoyed success and his candidacy appears strong.

Green has admittedly suffered in his efforts to communicate a desire to correct the wrongs he believes have occurred in recent years. Among them, he says, is the lack of a firm grasp on city finances by the mayor and council.

His suggestion that no financial statement exists to inform councilmembers of precise figures deserves investigation.

His desire to have a more friendly, cordial Big Spring is strong and deserves support; we all benefit from that. However, from what we've seen, there has been a lack of substance in his attack on the incumbent.

The issue of a possible tax increase for Big Spring has been bantered during the campaign, with Mize admitting that it might be necessary when asked, "Can Big Spring continue to progress without an eventual increase?" On the same occasion Green contended that no such increase will be necessary.

The "No tax Max" theme is shallow without hard facts concerning the budget, and reminiscent of a ploy President Bush used to be elected. Whether Bush can avoid tax increases is now an open debate; whether Big Spring can advance during the 1990s solely on the basis of spending cuts and friendly shopkeepers is highly questionable.

Unfortunately, neither of the candidates has breathed a word about the issue that may be closest to the citizens of Big Spring: Quality law enforcement.

Recent actions by Big Spring police officers have raised questions about their performance and, if not their training, certainly their maturity. The rapid turnover within that department in recent months and the recognition that Big Spring is little more than a training ground for better paying jobs elsewhere points to a need for a good, hard look in this area. It touches nearly everyone, from enforcement of traffic laws to recovery of the growing number of stolen VCRs, televisions and guns.

Both the city and the mayoral candidates would do well to give this issue serious consideration.

Chief Joe Cook, in many ways, holds a thankless job that many of us wouldn't dare to touch. That we have a man of his experience and training is a bright point, although he might do well spending more time on the streets with his officers.

However, we need a mayor who recognizes that Cook — and all city department managers — need the resources necessary to accomplish the jobs we expect of them, and the courage to fight for those resources, even if it requires a tax increase.

The question of a small increase is probably of less concern to thinking taxpayers than the prospect of an ill-equipped, inefficient operation expected to protect our homes and our lives.

Be fair about ethical judgments

By JESSE TREVINO

The trial of Oliver North did much more than place the fate of Ronald Reagan's "national hero" in the hands of a jury. Evidence introduced at the trial proved, for the first time, that President George Bush lied about his involvement in the so-called Iran-Contra affair.

Despite the passing of more than a week since this revelation, those who expected a public backlash against the President are still waiting, as are those who expected a barrage of questions and investigations from the media.

Instead, the guns of both the public and the press remain trained on House Speaker Jim Wright and his business dealings.

At this point, one must wonder why Wright's career is tottering and Bush's remains unaffected, as was Ronald Reagan's. Why are some scandals so politically fatal and others so inconsequential?

On a superficial level, the answer is obviously public opinion. When the public gets worked up about a particular scandal, the persons involved usually can kiss their political careers goodbye. Now the question becomes, "Why does the public get so worked up over things like Watergate and Jim Wright's book royalties but not over Iran-Contra?"

The answer, I think, is that the public will tolerate almost any unethical or even illegal action by public officials, as long as it believes those actions were not motivated by a desire for personal gain.

This is what undid Nixon. People clearly thought he had tried to rig the election and then lied about it. Jim Wright, too, could be undone by the perception that his book royalties and his business dealings with George Mallick resulted in ill-gotten personal gain.

In fact, the greatest public outcry of recent times was generated by what the public perceived as a political scandal that would have unjustifiably lined the pockets of Congressmen: the recently defeated Congressional pay raise proposal.

Such public reaction against ill-gotten personal gains is both understandable and appropriate. The next question, however, is why the public will tolerate all manner of illegal shenanigans so long as those involved keep their hands out of the cookie jar.

The answer derives from the complexity of modern life, and the separation between individual and communal ethical standards to which this complexity has led. The phenomenon has been widely discussed and written about. Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr. puts it well in his book, "The Vital Center": "A static and decentralized society, based on agriculture and handicraft, was a society dependent on personal ties and governed by a personal ethic. Industrialism shattered the ties and consequently the ethic."

A new code arose to cope with the remote and statistical units of the modern economy. And with the remote and statistical units of modern government, he could have added.

Certainly part of the problem lies in the fact that the complexity of many government dealings places those dealings beyond the understanding of most people who are not actually on the scene. Stealing money is easily understood.

While Jim Wright may not be guilty of actually stealing money, it is easy for the public to picture the charges against him in those terms, and the resulting perception of the Speaker is not altogether unfair.

The Iran-Contra affair, on the other hand, cannot be viewed in such simplistic terms. It is dif-icult to explain what is wrong with breaking the principle of refusing to deal with terrorists. Everyone is accustomed to lying by government officials, so Oliver North's lying to Congress doesn't upset many people either.

Everyone is accustomed to middlemen skimming some profits when large sales take place, so people don't care that Richard Secord and Albert Hakim socked away profits in Swiss bank accounts. Everyone wants to support democracy and fight communism, so the fact that Reagan and Bush illegally supported the Contras in violation of law can also be rationalized away.

Perhaps even the possibility that Manuel Noriega's help in funneling illegal supplies to the Contras was rewarded by letting him continue to smuggle drugs into the U.S. can be overlooked, especially if you can get someone like Oliver North to take the blame. In fact, North is a better scapegoat than ever before, now that he has been accused of accepting a high-priced security gate and using profits from the Iran arms sales to set up trust funds for his children. North was riding a wave of public support until these allegations of ill-gotten personal gain became widely known.

Yes, it appears that all of the Iran-Contra affair can be overlooked, even the fact that George Bush lied to the American people. Whether it should be overlooked is another matter entirely. If the country is to survive the partisan divisions that are becoming institutionalized in government, it must come to grips with the issue of fairness. To continue the investigation of Jim Wright while Ronald Reagan and George Bush remain unworried that a special prosecutor might come knocking on their doors is patently unfair.

Both the Reagan-Bush and Jim Wright escapades deserve real hearings.

Only Wright is getting one. Jesse Trevino is an Austin American-Statesman columnist and member of the editorial board.

City can take pride in concerts

By M. KEITH ROSS

The Big Spring Symphony deserves our support. Concertgoers attending performances in the just-completed 1988-89 series experienced delightful evenings in the Municipal Auditorium. The recently renovated structure is a joy to see, and seems to elevate the mood of all who enter it. This is tangible evidence of the pride we take in Big Spring.

There is, however, much more for us to be proud of. In an incredibly short span of time the orchestra, as well as its parent Association, has exhibited incredible maturity. Expectations and standards have risen in proportion to abilities, musical and administrative. Continually we learn, grow and improve. What results is something which is a source of pride for all of us who live in Big Spring.

The Big Spring Symphony Association came into being nine years ago through the efforts of citizens who wished to hear classical orchestral music performed in Big Spring. To this end, the Association employed the Midland/Odessa Symphony for four years. A courageous step was taken in 1985 when the Association decided to become its own entity by hiring its own conductor and musicians. The diligence and dedication of scores of people both on the stage and behind the scenes has supported the wisdom of this decision.

The Symphony retains a conductor of international renown and has attained such status that it can demand and get top-flight musicians. With an eye to the future, a "native Big Springer" concert was inaugurated this year when Dr. Keith Graumann was invited home to mount the podium as conductor of the orchestra for this performance. Hopeful plans include the inauguration of a "pops" concert.

The program for the forthcoming season is still formative, but the series will bring back principal conductor, Dr. Marianna Gabbi, and the "native Big Springer" concert will find Dr. Graumann again conducting the orchestra. The city's newly refurbished Baldwin grand piano will be heard in some of the future concerts. The piano renovation was a project of the Symphony Association. Funding for this project, and for the auditorium renovation, was provided by the Dora Roberts Foundation. The Association truly appreciates this exemplary action of interest and financial support on a large scale.

The close of the performing season signals the onset of the annual Maintenance Fund Drive. Continued success depends not only upon the enlistment of funds, but also of volunteer personnel. Contributions of time, money, or both may be made at any of the locations where concert tickets are available. Members of the Board of Directors have been actively seeking financial assistance this month.

Operating expenses for a performing season approach forty thousand dollars, much of which comes from folks who must necessarily make small contributions. Additionally, each individual concert requires dozens of volunteer "person-hours". Any citizen may contribute to the Big Spring Symphony and experience pride of ownership in an organization which truly benefits us all. Let's not lose what we already have. In keeping with the "Shop Big Spring" philosophy, no longer must we look to other sources for fine classical music — it's right here in Big Spring!

M. Keith Ross is director of music, First Presbyterian Church, and second vice president, Big Spring Symphony Association.

No pity for this mother

By ROBERT WERNSMAN
Sympathy for Candance Thorp? Not from this corner.

Pity for her child? Absolutely. Candance Thorp is the woman whose Seattle trial is drawing national attention as she attacks the corporation she holds responsible for her son's birth defects.

It is not a pretty sight. Her 4-year-old son Michael, plagued by facial and other abnormalities, is mentally retarded and faces a life you and I likely would not wish on any other living creature. It is believed his condition was no quirk of nature.

Rather, young Michael, through no fault of his own, was cast into the world with such crosses to bear because his mother was an alcohol abuser. And we're not talking about someone who occasionally exceeded her tolerance level by a drink or two.

No. Mrs. Thorp, now said to be a recovering alcoholic, was an abuser beyond anything simple that we might imagine.

She is a woman who admittedly consumed as much as one-half of a fifth of Jim Beam whiskey every day of her pregnancy. Although it might have been worse, that sounds like abuse to me.

And what is her reaction at this point? A cry and hue that has drawn the issue into a courtroom as she and her legal counsel seek to pin the blame for these unhappy circumstances on the corporation that manufactures Jim Beam whiskey.

They are imploring the court to force the distiller to pay for this child's lifetime of costly care because no one ever warned Mrs. Thorp that it might be dangerous for her fetus to be within the womb of a woman who did not control her excesses.

I decline the opportunity to defend actions by the Jim Beam folks; that's not what I'm about today. I see no reason that they should not place a warning on their product to inform consumers that its consumption could damage a developing fetus.

This case, however, rubs me raw every time it crosses my mind — in very much the same way as seeing pregnant mothers smoking cigarettes.

Mrs. Thorp now argues that had such a warning been printed on each of the fifths of whiskey she was drinking throughout her nine-month pregnancy, she would have seen the light; she and her husband would not now be facing the challenge they seek to have the distiller pay for.

Spare me, please. I can't swallow the argument that it would never occur to a 34-year-old woman that her level of consumption would likely damage her developing fetus.

This sounds very much like the symptom of a society that simply does not want to accept responsibility for its actions. There are other examples. Without debating the right or wrong of abortion, I'm convinced that the growing number of abortions is symptomatic of a populace refusing responsibility for its actions.

Teen pregnancies, drug abuse, and countless other excesses rate the same consideration. It is imaginable that success with this suit could prompt legal action against tobacco companies, by parents of children born less than fully developed thanks to a smoke-filled gestation period.

Yet what can such people expect to produce, having daily filled their lungs with smoke during this most critical time of development for the unborn?

There comes a point when it is necessary to face reality and accept responsibility for our actions.

No, Jim Beam producers did not print a postage stamp-sized warning for Mrs. Thorp, explaining that alcohol would be damaging to a fetus. I believe that they should. By the same token, it will take more than this courtroom argument to convince me that a woman who testifies "At times I did. A lot of times I did not," to the question of whether she drank herself into unconsciousness every night of her pregnancy was a likely candidate for abstinence.

What did she think was happening within her body? Pity and kind thoughts for the Michael Thorps of this world.

Hot line now in foreign hands

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (AP) — The hot line, the link set up between Washington and Moscow more than 25 years ago to reduce the risk of an accidental war, has fallen into foreign hands.

The hot line was part of a division Western Union Corp. sold last week to Swiss-owned Tele-Columbus USA of New York for $56 million as part of a reorganization, Western Union said.

Tele-Columbus is owned by Motor-Columbus AG, a telecommunications and cable television company based in Baden, Switzerland, Western Union spokesman Warren Bechtel said Saturday.

The line, which consists of satellite connections and ground lines, is secure because messages are encoded as they travel between the United States and the Soviet Union, Navy Lt. Cmdr. James Cudla, a Navy spokesman, was quoted as saying in Saturday editions of the Star-Ledger of Newark.

Hot-line messages are transmitted from a small room in the Pentagon housing computer terminals. They instantly appear on Soviet screens, and can be printed out at the rate of 1,800 words a minute.

Six winning tickets unclaimed

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Six winning ticket holders for the $115.5 million jackpot still had not come forward when Super 7 officials closed their offices for the weekend. The missing numbers are worth $8.3 million each.

Eight of 14 possible winning tickets from Wednesday's headline-grabbing jackpot had been turned in. The thrill of instant wealth attracted interest from as far away as New Zealand, lottery officials said Friday.

Each of the 14 jackpot-winning tickets is worth $8.3 million over the next 26 years. The annual payment, before any taxes, is $317,524.67 for each ticket. The first payments will be handed out in two weeks, at the local retail outlets where the tickets were purchased and after completion of an extensive computerized validation process, said lottery spokesman Terry Murphy.

Consolation winners learned Friday night that matching six numbers in the April 26 drawing paid $4,842.50.

Winners have a year from the date of the drawing to turn in their tickets, or the money returns to the Lottery Fund and is lost to the winner. About 1 percent of all the big prizes go unclaimed, lottery officials said.

Winners are given an extensive counseling session, with advice on financial planning, consulting an attorney, estate planning, explanation of the annuity from which the prize is drawn over the 26-year payout, and how to handle the media.

Wife of Vincennes skipper resigns

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The wife of the USS Vincennes skipper, who lost her teaching job after a suspected terrorist bombing, handed in her resignation in exchange for $135,000 and said the school bowed to terrorism.

Officials at La Jolla Country Day School said they had to put the safety of students and faculty first, and they felt Sharon Rogers' presence on campus posed a risk to the safety of others that could not be ignored.

After weeks of negotiations over her future at the school, the severance settlement was announced Friday.

The resignation is effective Aug. 31, when her contract expires. The school also agreed to pay $5,000 to her lawyer.

Rogers, 50, escaped injury

March 10 when a pipe bomb exploded beneath her van as she drove alone to school. The attack is under investigation as possible retaliation for the Vincennes' mistaken downing last July 3 of an Iranian airliner in the Persian Gulf. All 290 people aboard the airplane died.

"Many people have asked me if I am angry at the way I have been treated by the school. I may say that over the past weeks I have felt many different emotions, but today I am simply just disappointed. More disappointed than I can possibly express," she said, choking back tears.

Rogers taught for nearly half of her 25-year teaching career at the school and was paid about $32,000 last year. She said she would try to find another job.

Missile issue creates split in NATO alliance

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is at loggerheads with major European allies over retaining short-range nuclear missiles, and some say the issue that has split NATO could cause permanent damage to the alliance.

West Germany wants the United States and Soviet Union to begin talks on reducing the missiles, most of which are in West Germany. But Mrs. Thatcher, supported by Washington, has said they should not be removed while the Warsaw Pact has superiority in conventional forces and chemical weapons.

Mrs. Thatcher and Chancellor Helmut Kohl are to meet Sunday in West Germany, but neither leader is expected to budge.

"It's a very serious problem for NATO," said Hans Binnendijk, deputy director of the London-based International Institute of Strategic Studies.

In Bonn, Alfred Dregger, the parliamentary leader of the West German ruling coalition parties, said: "At present, there is less danger of Soviet aggression than a situation in which disagreements within the alliance could eventually lead to a loss of the trust that is essential for its existence."

The major beneficiary might be Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, observers say.

Mrs. Thatcher has said Kohl's call for weapons talks is principally an election ploy. West German polls show a majority support getting rid of short-range missiles.

"Kohl has a very difficult political situation, and that is creating the problem," said a Thatcher aide who spoke on condition of anonymity. "We're not insensitive to this. But getting rid of short-range nuclear missiles is exactly what the Russians want."

Some observers say the confrontation marks the first time West Germany has asserted its nationhood since the end of World War II. The country is the base for 320,000 American and 60,000 British troops.

Kohl has publicly asserted... that German national interests must take precedence over those of the United States and Britain," the respected Guardian newspaper said in an editorial.

West European leaders are working to defuse the crisis. Italian and Dutch leaders are to meet with West German officials after separate talks with Mrs. Thatcher, and West German authorities are going to France.

West Germany claims it has outright support from nearly half the North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries: Denmark, Belgium, Norway, Italy, Greece and Spain. Britain's leader has Washington behind her.

Mrs. Thatcher will have a chance to sway West European opinion in a May 29-30 NATO summit.

Tanker spills oil in Red Sea

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A supertanker that ran aground in the Red Sea was refloated Saturday, but sources said it leaked nearly 1 million gallons of oil that could damage coral reefs and turtle breeding grounds.

Salvage crews were breaking up a 50-mile oil slick the Indian tanker left after it ran aground off Saudi Arabia on Wednesday. The accident ruptured three of the ship's tanks and sent about 2 percent of its cargo into the water, according to the company that owns the vessel, Shipping Corp. of India.

"The Red Sea is especially vulnerable because it has many beautiful coral reefs, and there are some turtle breeding islands in the area," said Walter Vreeland, an American advisor to Bahrain on environmental problems. Vreeland also said light crude oil is more toxic to marine life than heavier grades.

Saudis say Iran must follow quota

RİYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia said Saturday that Iran must comply with the quota system for sending people to the holy cities of Mecca and Madina during the Hajj pilgrimage in July.

At the 1987 Hajj, thousands of Iranians organized political demonstrations in Mecca and 402 people were killed in clashes with Saudi police. Iran boycotted the 1988 Hajj because of Saudi restrictions.

Iran's Shiite Moslem leaders have claimed that Saudi Arabia's Sunni Moslem monarchs are unworthy guardians of Islam's holiest shrines.

Abdel-Wahab Abdel-Wasei, the Saudi minister of religious affairs, issued a statement Saturday stressing that "all Islamic states including Iran (must) abide by the special arrangements for organizing and defining the numbers coming to the holy sites to perform the Hajj rites."

He referred to the decision adopted by the foreign ministers of the 46-nation Organization of Islamic Conference meeting in Jordan in March 1988. They approved the Saudi proposal to restrict the number of pilgrims until the completion of renovations and expansion of facilities in the holy cities.

The quota was set at 1,000 pilgrims per million of the population from each Islamic country.

Iran had been sending about 150,000 people annually to the Hajj, but the quota system reduced that number to 45,000.

Pope promises help for the poor

ANTSIIRANANA, Madagascar (AP) — Pope John Paul II donated $50,000 today to a local archdiocese to show the Roman Catholic church's desire to help the poor on this impoverished island.

"I would like... in particular to express my affection for those of you are suffering... those who are bearing the weight of loneliness and poverty," the pontiff said during an open air Mass near the airport of this northern port.

Upon his arrival Friday night for the start of his fifth African tour, the pope promised the church would do all it could to help the poor.

The pontiff also said he was willing to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, but that obstacles prevent him from making a papal tour of the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev is to travel to Italy in November.

Mayor ousted

ROBSTOWN (AP) — In what a city councilman described as a "kangaroo court," members defied a court order by ousting the mayor from office.

The council, in a 3-2 vote Friday, removed Mayor Julio Garcia Jr. from office in the wake of allegations of official misconduct and incompetency.

Council members listened to one witness and repeated objections from attorney Arnold Medina, who represented the absent mayor. The council then went into executive session for the vote.

In a 3-2 vote, the council voted to remove Garcia from office and swore in Mayor Pro Tem Miguel Leal as mayor.

Medina told council members that the hearings were illegal and that the council had no authority to remove the mayor.

Merit judges nixed

AUSTIN (AP) — Efforts to change Texas' election of judges to a so-called merit selection system are dead for this regular session, according to the House and Senate sponsors of the legislation.

Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley, and Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said their proposals will not be voted on before the session ends May 29, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

The measures would change the process of selecting judges to an appointive system with periodic retention elections in which judges would run against their own records.

Illegal aliens nabbed

AUSTIN (AP) — The head of an Immigration and Naturalization Service team from San Antonio said a three-day investigation here led to arrests of undocumented workers, whose employers face possible prosecution.

Scott Robertson said a dozen aliens were detained when the INS team combed Austin hotels, restaurants, landscape and construction companies Friday, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Robertson declined to identify the 10 businesses involved.

Officer resigns

CLUTE (AP) — A police officer targeted by a civil rights probe into the alleged beating of a city jail inmate resigned to take a job with a construction contractor, Police Chief Mark Wicker said.

Pete Soto, 35, gave no indication in his resignation letter Friday that recent controversies led to his departure, Wicker said.

Soto, a Clute resident, joined the department in November.

FBI spokesman Johnnie Joyce said the investigation of Soto's involvement in the beating continues, although charges were filed this week only against his supervisor, Sgt. Jack Brown, 48, of Freeport.

Brown resigned from the department in February, one day before he was to be fired. He was charged Wednesday with violating the civil rights of inmate Jesus Louis Dominguez, 28, of Clute.

The charge is a misdemeanor and carries a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a $100,000 fine.

Brown is accused of beating Dominguez Jan. 18 after Soto arrested him on charges of public intoxication and making a terroristic threat.

Therapist: Stress relief a massage away

PARIS (AP) — The art of massage has been practiced for hundreds of years, but not always in a legitimate atmosphere. Massage parlours, which allegedly deal in massage treatment and sex, have given the practice a bad reputation.

The 1985 Texas Legislature took steps to remedy that. And, Jim Walker of Paris, a professional massage therapist who practices in Paris and Mt. Pleasant, said it was about time.

"This law was desperately needed in our profession," said Walker. "It helps the general public identify a legitimate therapist from those untrained individuals who do business under the guise of massage."

Texas was the 16th state to pass a bill regulating massage service by passing a law that carries strict qualifications for professional "massage therapists." These massage therapists must be registered by the state in order to advertise their service.

The names "masseuse" and "masseur," commonly used in the trade over the years, have been dropped in favor of "massage therapist" or "muscle therapist," according to Walker.

Today, massage therapists have their own private practices, or work through health clubs or other legitimate practice centers. Many therapists, such as Walker, get clients through referrals from chiropractors and others in the health care professions.

"To qualify as a therapist, we must complete 250 hours of study that includes courses in anatomy, physiology and massage techniques as well as business practices and professional ethics," Walker said. "A therapist then must pass the American Massage Therapy

PARIS — Jim Walker is a professional massage therapist who says the 1985 law passed by the Texas Legislature has given his profession a better name.

Association's test. Obtaining a license is not a simple matter."

Walker has exceeded those standards, and is classified as an instructor in the profession. He holds a masters degree from East Texas State University.

Massage was once considered a luxury service, enjoyed by the client to make him or her feel good. This aspect is still true, Walker says. But, he adds that massage therapy can also provide mental and physical relief.

"Massage is one way to help relieve some of the stress and tension in the body," he said. "Those two ailments are psychological, but in time can lead to great pain, discomfort, and even life-threatening disease."

In addition to giving a client relief with massage therapy, Walker also gives the patient a dose of counseling while he rubs and kneads the body.

"I try to teach people to relax, pointing out techniques they can use on a day-to-day basis," he said. "Using these practices properly, a person can avoid getting knots in their shoulders and necks, and avoid those ever-present headaches."

As the Jacksonville native works on a client, he takes great pains in rubbing out the knots in the shoulders and massaging the different pressure points in the feet and hands. He says that the rubbing and stroking of the muscles improves the circulation of blood and lymph in the body.

"When I am dealing with highly productive people, both massage and psychotherapy are a must," he said. "These people become very stressed out. They don't have time to properly care for their body, so I have to help them."

Walker laughs at the often-made suggestion that massage helps "rub the pounds off." He said that is far from the truth. He said he simply helps them relieve their stress, and gives them a desire to feel better.

Walker said it usually takes a client two or three visits before they can completely relax during a massage. He said some clients eventually become so relaxed during the treatment that they fall asleep.

"Some rest peacefully, and others snore loudly," he said. "I should wake them after the therapy. I believe some of them would sleep all day."

Walker said the heaviest sleeper among his clientele has been actor and comedian Dom DeLoise. Working on DeLoise when he practiced in Dallas, Walker said the actor would go to sleep during the first five minutes of the treatment.

"He didn't snore much, but he was difficult to awaken after I finished," he said.

Walker said people who feel they need massage therapy treatment should be certain they visit a registered professional.

Sergeant arrested in drug smuggling

COMBES (AP) — A uniformed Texas National Guard member driving a U.S. Army Reserve truck carrying marijuana was among five men arrested Saturday in related drug busts that netted 2,623 pounds of the illegal drug.

Sgt. Lionel Gonzalez, 34, of Harlingen was stopped while driving the military three-quarter-ton truck about two miles north of Combes on U.S. Highway 77 in Cameron County, said DPS spokesman David Wells. Combes is about 10 miles north of Harlingen in South Texas.

Gonzalez and the four other suspects were charged with aggravated possession of marijuana. The arrests began about 4:45 a.m. and involved the Department of Public Safety Narcotics division, FBI, Internal Revenue Service and Texas National Guard.

The truck Gonzalez drove was assigned to an Army Reserve unit in Houston and was carrying 833 pounds of marijuana packed in cardboard boxes and covered with military tarp, Wells said.

Gonzalez was dressed in a Texas Guard uniform, but it was not known whether he was on duty, authorities said.

Fight begins on home for presidential library

DALLAS (AP) — Now that George Bush has finished his first 100 days in office, the battle to find a home for his presidential library has begun.

It has the trappings of any good political fight: Cities battling for prestige and a piece of history — not to mention revenues from an estimated 400,000 annual tourists.

In Bush's case, the battle is all the more interesting, since he has divided loyalties and familial ties.

Bush was born and educated in Connecticut, but has claimed Texas as home for more than 40 years. That opens the bidding among several of Texas' finest and Bush's Ivy League alma mater, Yale.

"He's spoken on the campus many times. We just feel that this is very much a part of his home," said Mimi Crossley, a spokeswoman for Rice University in Houston. Bush has had a "long history of involvement" with Rice, she said, mentioning a one-semester teaching job he held and friendship he has with Rice officials and supporters.

Besides, she told the Dallas Times Herald, Rice promotes its academic excellence — only fitting for a president's papers.

But so does Yale University.

Jack Siggins, Yale's deputy librarian, said about four years ago a Yale professor discreetly contacted Bush about donating his papers to the New Haven college, where Bush graduated in 1948. "He didn't make a commitment," Siggins said.

Shortly after the November election, Yale repeated its offer and the Texas universities chimed in.

Rice officials made an oral proposal for the library shortly after the election and a few weeks later Charles Duncan Jr., chairman of the school's board of governors, made the suggestion by letter.

University of Houston representatives also sounded out advisors after the election and fired off a letter to Bush earlier this month.

But Texas A&M is mounting the most ambitious offensive.

Graduate Michel Halbouty, a longtime Bush friend, broached the matter to Bush after the election, and some A&M professors mentioned it again in February, an A&M spokesman said.

"I'm flattered and it may be what I want to do," Bush recently told Newsweek. "The idea has great appeal to me. It's a little premature, but I want Texas to be the recipient."

But the president said Rice, where he taught an administrative science course in 1978 and which is located in his hometown, "would seem logical, too."

Protesters arrested at noisy confrontations

By The Associated Press

Hundreds of hymn-singing anti-abortion protesters were arrested Saturday as they and slogan-chanting counterdemonstrators vied for attention at entrances to clinics around the country.

Police reported a total of at least 1,396 arrests in Arizona, Colorado, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia. California also had a large protest.

No violence was reported, but a woman driving up to a San Antonio abortion clinic struck a Baptist preacher who was leading prayers in the driveway, police said. Police ticketed the 18-year-old woman for reckless driving and the preacher was taken to a hospital, where his condition was reported only as stable.

Anti-abortion demonstrations were planned in 65 cities from Anchorage, Alaska, to Gulfport, Miss., said Operation Rescue spokesman Bob Nolte, whose group coordinated the protests, said in New York.

In the group's widest previous protests on Oct. 29, Nolte said, 2,600 people were arrested for blocking the entrances to clinics in 32 cities.

On Friday, 334 anti-abortion demonstrators had been arrested in six states, Nolte said.

In suburban Detroit, Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, appeared Saturday at an abortion clinic to denounce activists who were blocking doors.

"We call it Operation Bully, because they bully women," Yard said.

Patricia Ireland, national vice president of NOW, said she coordinated the effort to get counterdemonstrators to Operation Rescue's protest sites, then went to one herself in College Park, Md. She said anti-abortion protesters tried to break into a human corridor the abortion rights forces formed at a clinic entrance, but it was "no more rough than a game of Red Rover."

"We all learned it as children. The way to stop bullying is to stand up to it. That is what we've done and will do all across the country every time these anti-abortion extremists attempt to take away the rights of women," she said.

Operation Rescue protesters said they hope to persuade the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 decision legalizing abortion. The court heard arguments last week on a Missouri case the Bush administration has said should be used to overturn the landmark decision, but the justices have not yet ruled.

Outside a clinic in the Boston suburb of Brookline, one of hundreds of pro-choice advocates who outnumbered Operation Rescue members attributed her side's good turnout to publicity given to the Supreme Court hearing.

"People who have sat at home... said to themselves 'My God, we worked for this stuff 20 years ago to stop the deaths of young women,'" Kathy Ayres said.

Anti-abortion protesters sang hymns, held pictures of fetuses aloft and, in some cases, clutched rosaries while kneeling to pray. The pro-choice contingent shouted such slogans as "OK, hear our voice, Massachusetts is pro-choice."

In Columbus, Ohio, at least 10 abortion protesters were charged with disorderly conduct, including four who temporarily chained themselves by the neck to a 55-gallon barrel filled with concrete and rolled into the doorway of a clinic.

Outside the Planned Parenthood clinic in Shrewsbury, N.J., where police reported at least 100 arrests, executive director Phyllis Kinsler said the protesters "just absolutely shoved video cameras in people's faces" as the patients came in for their appointments.

Bob Pawson, a spokesman for the protesters, said the videotapes would not be released for privacy reasons, but were necessary to counter claims by pro-choice advocates that Operation Rescue protests are ineffective.

In Boulder, Colo., where Operation Rescue kept secret the location of its protest until Saturday morning, about 300 anti-abortion protesters and 30 counterdemonstrators turned out at the Boulder Valley Women's Health Center.

National Organization of Women President Molly Yard, right, applauds for the pro-choice protesters who demonstrated outside an abortion clinic in Farmington Hills, Mich.

Souvenir shops respond to Alaska's tanker spill

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — The Coast Guard wasn't the only one to respond quickly when the Exxon Valdez tanker ran aground in Prince William Sound and set off the nation's worst oil spill.

Souvenir shops sent out their own calls to artists, T-shirt makers and suppliers. Five days later, spill-related merchandise began appearing in stores, and the dark-humored items have been enjoying a modest success ever since.

Ann Derifield has run a souvenir shop in Valdez for 12 years. When the Exxon Valdez got stuck on March 24, it was just a matter of altering an old design. She already sold T-shirts with designs of every tanker calling on the Alaska pipeline's marine terminal across the harbor from her store.

By March 28, she was selling baseball caps and shirts showing a tanker cocked sideways on a reef, carrying the logo: "Exxon Valdez On The Rocks."

"I would have had them earlier, but it was Easter weekend and it took a while to track down my printer in Anchorage," she said.

Derifield was one of the first to capitalize on the ecological disaster, but she's far from alone.

Another popular shirt being sold is the "Tanker from Hell," illustrated by Ray Troll of Ketchikan. The shirt features a shark-toothed tanker flying a skull and crossbones and gushing oil as fish, birds and otters struggle to flee.

On the deck a figure holds a bottle in his hand, an apparent reference to the charges filed against Exxon Valdez Capt. Joseph Hazelwood, accusing him of being intoxicated while operating the ship.

Sales are benefiting a fishermen's union.

"It's just my way of doing my part as an Alaskan that's concerned, and concerned about the livelihood of fishermen in particular," Troll said.

The Texas Department of Public Safety, along with the Howard College Continuing Education, is offering a training course to improve or learn motorcycle riding skills. Beginning and advanced skills will be taught in the course which will be held in Big Spring on the weekend of May 12-14.

The program, established by the Motorcycle Operator Training Section of the Department of Public Safety, is an effort to reduce the number of motorcycle injuries and fatalities occurring throughout the state.

The course was developed by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, and is taught by professionally trained, certified, and experienced instructors from Texas State Technical Institute/Waco.

The course offers riding and street strategies, basic street skills, and practice on protected off-street ranges. Motorcycles and other equipment are provided. The cost is $25.

Nursing seminar

Big Spring VA Medical Center will sponsor a nursing career information session on May 3, according to Conrad Alexander, Medical Center Director.

The event is planned for all medical center employees, all employees in medical facilities in and around Big Spring, and for interested citizens as well.

Recent publicity focusing on the need for professional nurses in Big Spring, in Texas, and throughout the nation, has prompted many men and women to give consideration to this field of endeavor. Some, such as those who are retiring from another lifelong job, are looking at nursing as a second career. Others, such as single parents, look upon the opportunity of preparing for entry into a field which will enable them to fulfill career goals and to meet future family responsibilities while maintaining their present family lifestyle simultaneous with preparational studies.

Featured at the informal session will be the directors of the two area schools of nursing: Howard College's Associate Degree in Nursing Program and Texas Tech University's Permian Basin Campus in Odessa where registered nurses are able to pursue the degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing. Representing Howard College will be Dr. Andy Hicks, Vice-President for Vocational and Technical Education, and Al Blount, R.N., Acting Director of Associate Degree Nursing. Ella Herriage, R.N., Ph.D., Associate Dean of the Texas Tech Permian Basin Campus School of Nursing, will be present to answer questions and explain programs on the Odessa Campus as well as the generic BSN program at Texas Tech's Lubbock Campus.

This half-day session has been structured to be an informal time.

Mary Louise Traczyk, Special Assistant to the Chief of Staff, is coordinating the session which will be held Wednesday from 1:30-4 p.m. in Rooms 211 and 213 of the VA Medical Center.

Hobert Fischer, Riviera slot manager and tournament director, left, toasts Jessie and Howard Calhoun on winning the $50,000 first place prize in a slot tournament.

Big Spring couple wins $50,000 prize

Howard and Jessie Calhoun of Big Spring won $50,000 for taking first place in the Riviera Hotel & Casino $200,000 "Pull For The Gold" slot tournament earlier this month.

The Calhouns have entered other slot tournaments at the hotel and were "thrilled" about winning first place.

Calhoun admits to being superstitious when it comes to slot tournaments.

"We almost didn't come because Jessie was ill," Calhoun said. "We had a lucky feeling and decided we had to make the trip."

Calhoun is an oil worker and retired from the civil service. He plans on investing his winnings in certificates of deposit.

The second place prize of $20,000 went to James Faith of Mukwonago, Wisc. Frank Allen of West Lake, Calif. won $10,000 for third place and Gracie Shoates of Oak Park Mich. won $4,000 for placing fourth.

Charles Clark of Elk Grove, Ill. won a trip to Hawaii for two because he tallied the least amount of points in the tournament, finishing last.

The next tournament is the Riviera's "Pull For The Gold" $1.5 million Slot Tournament scheduled for June 15-18. The first place prize will be $1 million, based on the minimum number of entrants. Second prize will be $65,000 and third prize will be $25,000.

Mexican consulate moving to Midland

MIDLAND — The Consulate of Mexico in Presidio, which serves residents of Howard, Borden, Dawson, Glasscock, Mitchell and Martin counties is moving to Midland.

The announcement was made last week by the Mexican Secretariat of Foreign Affairs in Mexico City.

Consul Ecce lei Mendoza stated that the Mexican Foreign Office started evaluating the situation about five years ago when the basic factors that prompted the opening of the Consulate in Presidio back in 1975 failed to support the need to maintain the office open.

Other events registered within the last three years made the relocation of the consular office inevitable and somewhat urgent.

The Midland office will start its operation at the beginning of July and will cover a vast area with a population exceeding 500,000 with an estimated 20% of that figure being nationals of Mexico.

The new Consulate will have jurisdiction over the following counties: Andrews, Bailey, Borden, Cochran, Cottle, Crane, Crosby, Dawson, Dickens, Ector, Fisher, Floyd, Gaines, Garza, Glasscock, Hale, Hockley, Howard, Jones, Kent, King, Lamb, Loving, Lubbock, Lynn, Martin, Midland, Mitchell, Motley, Nolan, Reagan, Reeves, Scurry, Stonewall, Taylor, Terry, Upton, Ward, Winkler and Yoakum.

Justice report: Crack use increasing in rural America

By DAVID HAWKINGS
Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Increasing amounts of crack, the most inexpensive and addictive form of cocaine, are showing up in America's small cities and farm towns, federal officials report.

"Crack, once regarded as an urban phenomenon, is now invading rural regions of the country," declared Thomas C. Kelly, deputy administrator of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

"While not nationwide in scope, crack is definitely posing some big city problems for certain areas of rural America," Kelly told a Senate hearing last week, "such as increased violent crimes, burglaries and cases of child abuse."

In Pennsylvania, drug-related crime in farm communities is reportedly growing seven times faster than in cities.

"There is not a community," state Attorney General Ernie Preate Jr. said this winter, "no matter how tranquil, no matter how rural, that is immune from drugs."

In addition, Assistant Attorney General Edward S.G. Dennis Jr. says the "burgeoning problem" of rural crack use has brought with it

"I don't know why it's on the rise other than the economics of it. You can make it right here in town and double your money, turn $25 worth of powder into $40, $50 sometimes $60 of crack," he said, through a simple combination with water and baking powder over a flame. — Lt. Jim Harvey, Texas drug fighter.

an "influx" of criminal gangs trying to corner the rural market. Dennis, who heads the Justice Department's Criminal Division, said street gangs from Los Angeles known as the "Crips" and the "Bloods" have tried to spread their business into the rural West, while a network of Jamaican gangs has expanded into the rural East, South and Midwest by manufacturing crack in rural areas from powdered cocaine they have brought from New York, Philadelphia, Miami or Detroit.

Local law enforcement officials also report that some powdered cocaine sellers are diversifying into crack because it has a larger margin of profit.

"I don't know why it's on the rise other than the economics of it," said police Lt. Jim Harvey, who directs a four-county drug task force in the central Texas Hill Country and says crack has arrived on the scene just in the last year. "You can make it right here in town and double your money, turn $25 worth of powder into $40, $50 sometimes $60 of crack," he said, through a simple combination with water and baking powder over a flame.

"A rural community's ability to ultimately wipe out crack street sales and crack house operations will depend on a coordinated federal and local law enforcement and prosecution effort," Dennis told the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Meanwhile, the rural problem is being confounded, some say, by the fact that the states have not touched $777 million in federal funds.

CANCUN, Mexico — Gretchen Polhemus, Miss USA 1989, from Fort Worth, poses last week for pictures with a chimpanzee named Avi and

Watermelons force temporary peace

BLAGOVESHCHENSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — It began with 200 tons of watermelons the Chinese feared would rot. They ran a white flag up a watchtower and invited Soviet soldiers on the other bank of the blue-gray Amur River to a meeting.

The KGB border guards went, then reported back to officials in this Siberian city 3,500 miles east of Moscow that the Chinese wanted to deal.

After some discussion, Blagoveshchensk authorities dispatched a barge to pick up the melons, giving the Chinese a load of fertilizer in exchange.

That modest barter arrangement in 1987 began trade between the Soviet Union's Amur Region and the neighboring Chinese province of Heilongjiang that grew to the equivalent of $81 million last year.

Russians in Blagoveshchensk, a boom town of the 19th century gold rush, once worried about the Chinese coming. Now they want them to.

In the 1960s, when ideological and border disputes poisoned Soviet-Chinese relations, huge portraits of Mao Tse-tung sprouted on the shore in Heihe, the city half a mile away across the Amur.

Chinese tanks and military vehicles maneuvered on the ice-bound river and Mao's frontier troops even bared their buttocks to mock Soviet soldiers, recalled Capt. Alexander M. Kirushin, commander of the 50 border guards in Blagoveshchensk.

"We were frightened and ready to evacuate," said Irina Alexandreyeva, 62, then a nurse in this city of 210,000. "We were prepared for anything. The Chinese could have crossed." Now, government and business leaders in Blagoveshchensk court workers, investors and potential trading partners on the other side of the Amur in an effort to end chronic shortages of goods and spur the local economy.

Vladimir Vechinkin said: "In our region, there's no way to avoid external economic relations. We border on our great neighbor, the People's Republic of China."

He is first deputy chairman of government in the Amur Region, an area the size of Montana where slightly more than 1 million people live.

As the May 15 summit approaches, Soviet officials describe Blagoveshchensk as a showcase for the advantages of better relations.

It is an atypical example. Border trade totaled $146 million last year, according to the Soviet Foreign Trade Ministry. That means trade in this area accounted for more than half the commerce along the 5,000-mile frontier.

Candidates state views on issues

Tim Blackshear, left, Maxwell Green and A.C. "Cotton" Mize are prepared to answer questions at the fourth Annual Firefighters Candidate Forum Friday evening.

The fourth Annual Firefighters Candidate's Forum was conducted Friday. It featured the two mayoral candidates, incumbent A.C. "Cotton" Mize and Maxwell Green, and Tim Blackshear, who is running unopposed for the single City Council seat.

Questionnaires for the candidates were prepared by the firefighter's union and given to each candidate in advance. The written responses of the candidates are printed below exactly as submitted.

Q: Concerning the further development of Big Spring and the various departments of the city municipality: What is currently being done and what plans do you have?

Mize: Beals Creek — Corps of Engineers (grant) $70,000. Identify and determine ways to operate each department more efficiently. Example — we are doing the same amount of work with less employees!

Green: My dream is:
 • for new businesses and new jobs in Big Spring.
 • to hold down taxes and build up spirits.
 • for better water and streets in Big Spring.
 • for a cleaner more beautiful Big Spring.
 • for real estate values to rise.
 • for more positive and efficient government.
 • for a growing, exciting Big Spring.
 • for our people to be proud they live in Big Spring.

Blackshear: I would like to be of service to the city in the area of equipment repair and replacement, streets and utilities. The city has several good programs in place, that I would like to see continued.

Q: Concerning the appointment of a Code Enforcement Officer: Has the weedy lots, old condemned buildings, and abandoned cars continuing to be a problem?

Mize: Yes! But we are making progress. However, we must make the citizens aware that the "city" cannot clean up every lot and move every car — they have to do some too.

Green: Yes. Trying to keep our city clean is an ongoing problem. We need to put our best foot forward when showing our town to prospective business people. The only way to do this is to remove and/or restore the old buildings, get the grass cut on the vacant lots, and remove the dirt from our streets.

Blackshear: I believe the code enforcement is an asset to the city and that more should be done.

Q: What action will be you taking, if any?

Mize: The city is working with the new clean program. Also some service clubs have started helping by taking certain areas to keep clean (Jr. Lions Club). We need news media to help educate and create pride in homeowners.

Green: Start out by trying to get 3rd, 4th and Gregg St. swept on a regular basis, possibly twice a week. This in turn should give the property owners an incentive to keep their own premises neat, clean and attractive. Try to make deals on getting the old cars hauled off and the old buildings either renovated or torn down. Look at all legal enforcement tools that can be used by the city to develop a cleaner town. Encourage the citizens to pick up trash and throw it in the trash barrel.

Blackshear: No answer.

Q: What proposals do you foresee concerning the balancing of the city budget?

Mize: 1. Detention Center Contract — $107,000.
 2. Increase in Telephone franchise tax — plus $30,000.
 3. Elimination of majority of traffic signals — plus $90,000.

Green: The current budget is balanced, that is the revenue is about the same as expenditures. I think that we need to seriously consider the zero budget concept. That is, each department has to justify the work they are doing and come up with new operating schedules to do a better job with less money. Simply because we have been doing things a certain way in the past is no sign that we should continue the pattern in the future.

Blackshear: No answer.

Q: Do you have any proposals to enhance the recreation facilities and what thoughts do you have on generating revenue through the use of these facilities (for example: softball fields, golf courses, swimming pools, city parks, lakes, R.V.'s, etc.)?

Mize: 1. New Comanche Lake & Dam — restocked with fish.
 2. Completely redone Cotton Mize Softball field.
 3. Helping to get fees lowered — to encourage more participation.
 4. Renovation of Moss Creek Lake (also RV Park revenues at Moss Lake.)

Green: I believe that the Parks & Recreation Board is already working out ways to enhance our recreational facilities. I will encourage this board to develop new ideas for future improvements that will make our parks and recreational facilities better. It would be nice if we could get all of our recreational facilities to start making a profit. That is, earn more than their cost of operations. This may not be possible. All of these activities should be reviewed to see if fees can be raised.

Blackshear: Recreation facilities should be provided but should not be a liability to people who do not use them.

Extended Coverage by Danny Weir

There's one chance in three that your home will be burglarized this year, according to FBI statistics. What are you doing to protect it?

Every home should have strong doors and locks, secure windows and enough lighting so burglars can't find dark corners to hide. Increase protection with an electronic alarm.

A wide choice of systems is available. Perimeter sensors may warn as a burglar attempts to get in. Interior sensors aren't activated until the intruder has entered the house. Each has pluses and minuses.

What kind of alarm mechanism? All kinds of sirens, bells, and flashing lights are available to scare off the intruder. Better — a system that also calls the police.

Some systems can be installed by a talented do-it-yourselfer; others require professional know-how. Whatever you decide, choose the system and/or the contractor with care.

It's smart to protect your home from burglars. Then, just in case, be sure you have adequate insurance. Too. Talk it over at:

Q: It appears that water line breaks and repairs have increased recently. What type of preventative maintenance program or plan will enable the city to foresee this problem in order to prevent them?

Mize: 1. Value identification and maintenance.
2. New program just started this year to replace old lines by city employees.

Green: There have been several suggestions in this area. One is to replace the old water lines on a rotating basis. That is, replace a portion of the system each year.

Also, new, modern pipe could be installed that will not corrode or rust. In regard to repairing the leaks, there has been suggestions submitted whereby at least three joints of pipe will be replaced at each leak site. Possibly the repair will last longer. Any and all suggestions will be considered because we must solve this problem.

Blackshear: We need to have an ongoing program of replacing a certain amount of water lines each year.

Q: What would you propose to eliminate further problems concerning Bealls Creek?

Mize: Corps of Engineers study.

Green: First, find out what CRMWD is doing to improve the holding capacity of the dams that they have built upstream. Look at the elevations of the creek bed beginning at the west side of Big Spring compared to the east side of the city. See if we can lower the east end elevations and improve the flow of water through town. Keep the lower end free of silt.

Blackshear: Keep the creek clean of trash and weeds to prevent sedimentation.

Q: Summarize your thoughts on the Gregg Street widening project.

Mize: Once completed, this will be better for moving traffic through our city — plus it will greatly reduce the accident factor on Gregg Street.

Green: This project has been approved by both the city and the state. I think we should try to concentrate on keeping the businesses on Gregg in operation. This can be done by going to a little extra effort to continue doing business as usual during the period of construction.

For the long term, this is a golden opportunity to improve our appearance to those people traveling through our City. Remember that we have from 24 to 25 thousand cars passing through our city each day. A wider, safer, more pleasant street could cause some of these people to stop and do business in our community. Here again is an opportunity to grow.

Blackshear: The widening of Gregg is a good move for Big Spring. The inconvenience it causes during construction will be worth the effort.

Q: Summarize your thoughts concerning the city of Big Spring and the Mid-Tex prison complex.

Mize: This will increase jobs in our community — plus generate revenues for our general fund to help operate our city. The revenues expected will be the same as a 4 cents tax increase!

Green: I wholeheartedly support this project. The new jobs created by this venture have the potential of creating more new businesses and new jobs. An opportunity for growth.

The contracts have been signed between two parties. Now the government contract must be agreed to and signed. By properly monitoring the financial progress of this project, we have an opportunity to improve the financial well-being of our citizens. This project can enhance the prosperity of Big Spring and can be a vehicle for fulfilling our dream as a community.

Blackshear: The Mid Tex prison complex is an opportunity that Big Spring can't afford to pass up. The council has researched the plan and it should be an asset for the city of Big Spring.

Hawks eye playoffs

By RUTH COCHRAN
Staff Writer

A huge win over Region V leader Hill College Friday and a split with the Rebels Saturday gives the Howard College Hawks at least a shot at the state playoffs.

HC blew away Hill Friday, 11-1, then grabbed the second half of a double header Saturday. The Hawks nearly swept the series, but saw a 3-1 lead vanish in the first game, allowing Hill to win, 7-3. HC came back in the second to whip the Rebels, 10-5.

Howard assistant coach Frank Anderson said the Hawks' 12-9 record keeps them in the hunt for a district title and assures them of at least a regional play-off spot.

"In this series, at least we're locked into the bi-regionals," Anderson said. "We've at least clinched another week down the road."

While conference winners receive an automatic bid to the state playoffs, second and third place teams must compete in regional playoffs for a berth.

Game One

The Hawks got off to an excellent start Friday behind the arm of pitching ace Curtis Schmidt. The freshman ran his record to 9-4 after HC pounded Hill for 15 hits and 11 runs while holding the Rebels to just three hits and one run.

Anderson said the Hawks played a near-perfect game.

"That was the best game we played all year," he said. "Curt (Schmidt) did a great job pitching."

Game Two

The Hawks looked to continue their domination of the Rebels Saturday, holding onto a 3-1 lead until the top of the seventh. After watching their base runners get picked off one by one in the early going, Hill rallied for a six-hit, six-run inning to take a 7-3 win.

Anderson said starting pitcher Greg Kroeger began to tire and the team began to falter two-thirds of the way through the inning.

"They did a good job up 'til then," he said. "We made a couple of errors with two outs . . . and that was the difference. Greg Kroeger, he ran out of gas a little bit. He made the pitches. We just kicked around the ball a little bit."

"I don't think we choked — we just didn't make the plays."

Game Three

The Hawks shook off their disappointing loss in game two and whipped the Rebels 10-5 in game three. HC rapped 11 hits and took advantage of three errors by Hill to secure the win.

Howard jumped to a 5-0 lead in the second after Corey Zielinski retired three straight batters in the top of the first, then helped put away four batters in the top of the second. HC's bats, meanwhile, were cracking away. Gerald Camaro sailed a homer over the leftfield fence in the first inning and Jay Williams popped a double in the second.

The Hawks came out swinging in the third, bringing in five more runs — all of them coming with two outs. Camara and Darrin Glenn both knocked doubles during the inning.

Anderson said his team did a good job coming back from the earlier loss.

"The best thing in my estimation that came out of this game . . . we came back and score right away," he said. "We didn't hang our heads."

Thinclads qualify for state

It must be the water.

Whatever the reason, eight area thinclads qualified for the state meet during Saturday action, including Big Spring's Ben Gonzales and Dennis Hartfield.

Region 1 4A

The Steers' Ben Gonzales ran away from the competition in Brownwood Saturday, winning the 800 meters with a time of 1:55.86. Gonzales will be joined at the state meet by 100 meter ace Dennis Hartfield. He took second with a 10.95 behind Mike Ivory of Burke-Burnett, who won in 10.87.

Gonzales also took a fifth in the 1,600 meter run with a time of 4:37.04.

Region 1 3A

Coahoma was just three-quarters of an inch away from sending two girls to the state meet. In Odessa, Sarah Hanks won the 800 meters in 2:24.57 to qualify, but long jumper Kelli Williams just missed. She was third in her event with a leap of 17-10 — just three-quarters of an inch shorter than the second-place finisher and state qualifier.

The team finished in eighth place with 20 points, on the strength of a fourth-place finish by LaTisha Anderson in the triple jump. Anderson turned in a leap of 36-3.

Colorado City's Tracey Hoover put her team on the board Friday, finishing 6th in the high jump with an effort of 5 feet, 2 inches.

Region 1 2A

The Stanton Buffaloes racked up 36 points in Abilene for sixth place in the regional meet. Stanton

Fort Stockton turns back Steers rally

By RUTH COCHRAN
Staff Writer

FORT STOCKTON — Big Spring couldn't get the big hits when it needed them as Fort Stockton downed the Steers, 5-4, Saturday in District 4-4A baseball action.

The win pushed Fort Stockton to 8-3 and into a tie with Snyder for the district lead. Big Spring fell to 7-4 and third place.

Steers coach John Velasquez said his team hit well, piling up 11 hits, but couldn't find the bats at crucial times.

"We had a chance to tie it up in the seventh (inning)," Velasquez said. "We had runners at first and second with one out."

The next two Big Spring batters were stifled, however, and Fort Stockton escaped with the one-run win.

"We didn't drive in the runs when we had the opportunity to do it," Velasquez said. "We made a mental mistake in that run-down deal," when the Steers missed tagging a Fort Stockton base runner. "We just didn't knock in people when we had the opportunity to do it and it came back to haunt us."

The loss puts Big Spring in a must-win and hope-for-the-best situation.

"To assure ourselves of something, we've got to win the last three," Velasquez said. However, "You say that but you never know what's going to happen" with the leaders.

The Steers got off to a slow start Saturday, allowing Fort Stockton a first-inning, one-run lead. Big Spring came back in the second to tie the game when Marvin Rubio scored on a Chris Crownover single.

Two errors in the bottom of the second helped Fort Stockton to a 5-1 lead. Poor communication caused the Steers to drop a fly ball and a mental lapse caused the Steers to foul up a run down.

Big Spring rallied in the fourth when Marvin Rubio singled and later scored on a Robert Perez triple. Perez scored on a passed ball, but the Steers left two runners stranded going into the bottom of the fourth.

The Steers made one more stab at it in the sixth when pinch runner John Woffard scored on a double by

Local gymnasts sweep Big Spring meet

Lance Moore literally went head over heels Saturday to sweep Class 3 of the competition at the Big Spring Sidewinders gymnastic meet.

The 15 year old, who has competed for 2½ years, swept all six events and placed first in all-around competition with a 53.3 score.

"He's moved up very rapidly," said Scott McDonald, who has coached Moore for two years at the Big Spring YMCA. "He's won first place in almost every competition that he has entered. Next year he will be in Class 2 and is expected to do very well."

"I wouldn't be surprised, after he graduates from high school, to see him offered scholarships from all over the United States."

Four teams competed in the Big Spring Invitational, a competition that saw the local boys take the team honors in Class 4.

"They work very well as a team together," McDonald said of his Class 4 team. "They are very dedicated and try hard."

The team comprised of Brandon Polyniak, Brandon Turner,

Aaron Weaver, Jeremy Yates, Glenn Lewis and Mark Webb took top honors in their division.

Yates placed second in all-around competition, followed by Polyniak and Lewis, in the third and fourth positions.

The Sidewinders will compete in a state meet Friday at Angelo State University in San Angelo.

Boston struggles; Cavaliers stumble

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Cleveland Cavaliers charged into the NBA playoffs with the league's second-best record. The Boston Celtics barely made the postseason.

Both, however, have an uphill battle if they are to reach the second round.

The Chicago Bulls will try to take a 2-0 lead over the Cavaliers in their best-of-5 series in Cleveland Sunday, while the Boston Celtics hope to get one victory against the Pistons at Detroit. The Celtics, who have won 16 NBA championships, haven't lost an opening-round playoff series since 1956 when Syracuse beat them 2-1 in a division semifinal.

In other games Sunday, it will be Portland at the Los Angeles Lakers and Houston at Seattle.

Saturday night, Philadelphia was at New York, Milwaukee at Atlanta and Golden State at Utah.

Michael Jordan had 31 points and 11 assists to lead the Bulls, but it was the 3-point shooting of Scottie Pippen and Craig Hodges that carried Chicago over Cleveland 95-88 in their playoff opener.

"When he shoots like he did, it makes an altogether different ballgame," Chicago coach Doug Collins said of Pippen, who was perfect on all four of his 3-point shots and scored 22 points.

Hodges was 3-for-4 on 3-pointers and scored 15 points after missing most of the past month with a sprained ankle.

"I feel it was a big win, especially because everybody said it would be a (Cleveland) sweep," Jordan said. "We just stayed inside with our defense, kept the pressure on down there and helped out as much as possible."

The Cavaliers had defeated Chicago all six times they played during the regular season. But Cleveland played the opening game without point guard Mark Price, who practiced with the team Saturday for the first time in 11 days.

"I want to give it a try tomorrow," Price said. "I don't know how many minutes I can play, but I'm ready to go."

NBA Playoffs

Price's value to the Cleveland offense never was more evident than in his absence Friday. Without the threat of Price's long jumpers, the Bulls were able to collapse their defense on center Brad Daugherty, who managed just nine points on 4-of-9 shooting from the field.

"Let's make no bones about it. That's not the same team without Mark Price," Collins said. "Without Price really squirting the ball like he does, they lose a lot."

At Auburn Hills, Mich., Detroit's guards and bench led the Pistons over Boston 101-91. Guard Joe Dumars led the way with 25 points.

Forward John Salley led the Detroit reserves with 15 points and registered five of his six blocked shots in the second quarter, a club playoff record for blocks in a quarter. Forward Dennis Rodman added 10 points and guard Vinnie Johnson had two, with only center James Edwards failing to score for the Pistons' second unit.

Local fans don't believe allegations against Rose

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose fans find it hard to believe the man whose gritty head-first slides thrilled them for a generation will end up with dirt on his name.

The revelations about Rose's gambling that have filled newspapers for the past six weeks have been largely ignored by local fans, who have a hard time believing the Cincinnati Reds manager would do anything to jeopardize his place in the game.

"Everybody says, 'Where have all the heroes gone?' But all my heroes got shot down, and they're trying to do the same thing to Pete," said Willie DeLuca, who has the bat used for Rose's final hit on display at his restaurant.

Baseball's all-time hits leader is still a hit in his hometown.

No one is pushing to change the street named for him. He still gets lusty cheers whenever he steps on the field. And media commentators have risen to his defense with each new round of reports that his baseball future is in jeopardy.

The reaction has been so sweeping that one columnist thinks it will give Cincinnati a bad name.

"America sees a town that refuses to admit that its sports heroes are human and not inherently humane," Cincinnati Post columnist Mike Bass wrote Friday. "America sees the world's biggest small town exhibiting the world's biggest small-town mentality."

"And that's a shame. This is a decent city that prides itself on its traditions, but now we look like a bunch of rubes."

Regardless of appearances, Reds' fans have a hard time being impartial when they talk about Rose.

"The connection people have with specific teams is big, and the connection with specific individuals is big, and Rose has done that," said Arthur Miller, a social psychologist at Miami University in nearby Oxford, Ohio. "People relate to him emotionally even though they've never met him. The whole thing is a big downer for people."

Since the story of the Rose gambling investigation broke, fans have gone out of their way to express support.

Rose got standing ovations at the team's spring training complex in Plant City, Fla., after the commissioner's office said it was investigating him for "serious allegations." He could be suspended if he's found to have bet on baseball.

Rose got a prolonged standing ovation on opening day in Cincinnati, and hears the familiar chants of "Pete! Pete!" every time he steps on the field at Riverfront Stadium. Radio talk shows crackle at night with the outrage of callers who wonder why the investigation is taking so long.

"The majority of phone calls are in Pete's favor," said Doug Kidd, producer of Bob Trumpy's sports talk show on WLW-AM radio in Cincinnati. "For the most part, our callers are in Pete's corner. But they're also getting tired of the investigation going on so long. They don't think it's fair in that manner. They'd like a decision."

"It really hasn't changed (in the last six weeks). I think they've become angrier that the situation keeps going on longer."

"I wish this whole investigation would get over soon so the city and Pete can concentrate on baseball," said DeLuca, who has been interviewed by baseball investigators because of his friendship with Rose. "It's going on so long; it's like Watergate or Ollie North."

Many fans see Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti as the villain in the drama. One restaurant displays a sign that says, "Rose Forever, Giamatti Never."

Giamatti suspended Rose for a month last year for shoving umpire Dave Pallone.

Miller, a professor of psychology at Miami, said it's not surprising that people have a hard time accepting the reports of Rose's gambling.

"I think many sports fans are used to the corruption in collegiate sports, and they're used to drug abuse in professional sports, but I think Pete Rose has stood, for millions of people, as almost a statue of purity in some sports sense," Miller said. "This whole scenario is completely at odds with that image that he has had."

"People don't like to be faced with unexpected news. They don't react to it well; they try sometimes to resist and deny it. They sometimes get angry at those who tell them such news. That's happened; you see that daily. Anybody who's involved in the investigation is becoming, in the eyes of some, evil in their own right, from the

Stanton netter takes 3rd in region

ABILENE — David Mendez of Stanton ended up in third place in Region 1-2A tennis competition here Thursday and Friday. He reached the semi-finals before being defeated by Jerry Hill of Stamford 7-5, 6-4. He defeated Rickey Ojeda of Hart 6-3, 3-6, and 6-1 to take the third place finish. Anson's Will Green, the top-seed in the tourney, dropped only seven games in his four matches at the Regional tournament. He will defend his Class 2A state singles title in Austin, where he lost only one game in his first two matches last year.

Forsan's Stone medals in golf

ABILENE — Forsan's Bryan Stone finished seven strokes behind regional golf winner Chad Walsworth to tie for second place in the Region 1-2A golf tourney Friday. Walsworth, of Albany, shot his second consecutive 74 Friday to claim the title with a 148 total, seven strokes better than Stone and Chris Marmolejo of Idalou, who tied for second with 155 totals. Stanton's boys team finished sixth in the tourney with 320-346 for a total of 666 team points. Stanton was paced by Brad Holland who shot 76-86 for 162; Darren Patrick 84-89 — 173; Chris Carder 79-85 — 164; Kelly Inman 82-86 — 168; and Chris Barnhill 83-94 — 177. The Stanton girls finished sixth in regional with a team total of 392-400 — 792.

Houston breezes in Derby Trial

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Houston got back on the winning track Saturday with a five-length victory in the $84,150 Derby Trial, his final prep for the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs. Racing for the first time his fifth-place finish in the 1 1/8-mile Santa Anita Derby April 8, Houston took the lead entering the turn and it was quickly apparent that none of his five rivals would catch him. With Lafit Pincay Jr. sitting still in the irons, Houston reached the end of the mile in 1:36.1-5 under 122 pounds on a good track. It was his second victory in three starts this year and his fourth win in five career outings. The handsome bay son of Seattle Slew, a $2.9 million yearling purchase, co-owned by trainer D. Wayne Lukas, returned $3, $2.40 and $2.40. He earned $54,698. Belek, owned and trained by Louis Roussel, who co-owned and trained Risen Star, the 1988 3-year-old champion, finished second under Randy Romero and returned $2.60 and $2.60. Affirmed's Image, ridden by Ronnie Gabriel, was third, another seven lengths back and paid $3.40.

Knicks take 2-0 lead over 76ers

NEW YORK (AP) — Trent Tucker's 3-point goal with 10 seconds remaining climaxed an 11-0 run that wiped out a 10-point deficit in the final two minutes Saturday, giving the New York Knicks a 107-106 victory over Philadelphia and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-5 playoff series. Game 3 will be played at the Spectrum on Tuesday, with a fourth game, if necessary, on Thursday at Philadelphia. Only two teams in NBA history have come back to win a best-of-5 series after trailing 2-0. The 76ers, with Charles Barkley and Ron Anderson scoring nine points apiece in the fourth quarter, had a 106-96 lead on Barkley's two free throws with 2:12 remaining. Barkley finished with 30 points and Anderson 26. Johnny Newman led New York with 20 points and Patrick Ewing had 17 despite sitting out most of the game in foul trouble.

backcourt." Boston's Kevin McHale said. "We tried to take the ball out of their hands. We tried to make Rodman and Salley take those outside shots. "I give John Salley a lot of credit. He and Rodman and Bill Laimbeer, they made those outside shots." The Pistons put the game away in the second quarter when they outscored Boston 21-10 — tying a playoff record set April 25, 1982, at Seattle when the SuperSonics held Houston to 10 points. "We've been through a lot this year," Boston rookie Brian Shaw said. "We've faced a lot of adversity. We've been playing like this all year. It's nothing to start making excuses about now. "We just have to do it with the guys we have left." The Celtics, playing without Larry Bird, were led by McHale, who had 27 points. The Los Angeles Lakers, seeking their third consecutive NBA title, are having to prove themselves. "People say this team is old, senile, finished," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "But we can't allow what people say to affect us.

Injury rumors dog Dolphins' top pick

MIAMI (AP) — Doubts about top Miami Dolphins draft pick Sammie Smith do not center on his ability, but his durability. The 225-pound tailback suffered injuries in each of his four seasons at Florida State that caused him to miss games. Last year Smith sat out two games, saw limited action in three others and heard renewed accusations that he's injury-prone. "It doesn't bother me to hear people say that; I kind of laugh," Smith said. "What people fail to realize is that half the games I failed to play in at Florida State, it wasn't my choice. The coaches felt like they had another guy that could come in and play 100 percent; why play a guy that's 85 percent?" Smith said he always took the field for the Seminoles' most important games. "I never missed a Florida game, a Miami game, an Auburn game," he said. "They've always been East Carolinas — games where we were 40-point favorites. They were games that I could have played in had the coaches elected for me to play." Smith suffered a stress fracture in his foot in 1985, a shoulder separation in 1986, a knee sprain in 1987 and rib and shoulder injuries last year. In 1987, he missed the Seminoles' Tuesday practice — their toughest workout — for six straight weeks. But Florida State coach Bobby Bowden, among others, defends Smith. "If people think he's a sissy, they've got the wrong idea," Bowden said. "I guarantee you, he'll take it to you." The issue of Smith's durability didn't dissuade the Dolphins from taking Smith with the No. 9 pick of the NFL draft a week ago. "A lot of the same things surfaced with Bo Jackson his senior season," said Chuck Connor, the Dolphins' director of player personnel. "Talking with a number of people (in Tallahassee), they think Smith is a classy guy."

commissioner to the investigators." Miller thinks the majority of fans will withhold forming an opinion on Rose's off-field activities until the investigation is completed. If he's allowed to stay in baseball, the whole thing might be forgotten, he said. If Rose is found to have committed serious infractions, fans' opinions probably will change.

Ryan, Clemens turn up heat

By QENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — They live only 40 miles apart in South Texas, throw the baseball 97 miles an hour, make over $1 million a year, and are mutual admirers. On Sunday, heat meets heat. The Texas Rangers' Nolan Ryan, who has five career no-hitters and just missed on two more this season, and the Boston Red Sox's Roger Clemens, twice a Cy Young award winner, duel for the first time. Ryan, the 42-year-old part-time rancher from Alvin takes on the 26-year-old Clemens, who lives in Katy. Ryan is 2-1 and had no-hitters spoiled in the eighth and ninth innings this year in Milwaukee and Toronto. Obtained by the Rangers after the Houston Astros let him become a free agent, Ryan has a 2.33 earned run average in 27 innings. Baseball's all-time strikeout king has 38 strikeouts to only 14 walks. Ryan is in his 21st year in the major leagues. Clemens, playing in his fifth season, is 3-0 and has a 1.89 earned run average. He's pitched 38 innings with 34 strikeouts and only 11 walks. Ryan is leading the American League in strikeouts and Clemens is second. Hitters have a .170 batting average against Ryan and .201 against Clemens. Despite his age, Ryan can still deliver the smoke. He was clocked on a radar gun this year at 97 miles an hour. However, Ryan doesn't depend on his sizzling fastball as much as he did in past. He has developed a straight change and a wicked curve. It was his devastating curve that almost carried him to a no-hitter over the Blue Jays last Sunday. "I've had to become a pitcher instead of a thrower," Ryan said. "I can't just live on that fastball anymore. The fastball takes a toll on your arm." Ryan said Clemens reminds him of Tom Seaver. "I've never seen Clemens pitch in person, it's always been on TV but I compare him to Seaver," Ryan said. "They both came out of high school not overwhelming anybody. Both went to junior college, then major schools, and were very successful. They came out, didn't spend much time in the minors, hit the major league level and never looked back." Ryan said Clemens, like Seaver, knows how to work the ball to spots. "Both of them had to learn how to pitch at an early age," Ryan said. "They had excellent ability and it developed with maturity." Ryan said "I was blessed with the ability to overpower people. That was the only way I knew how to pitch when I came to the big leagues. It took me a long time to be a control pitcher." Ryan said he won't go about pitching against Clemens any differently than he would anybody else. "My approach is the same," he said. "I'll concentrate more on the game than the opponent. I'm realistic enough to know that I won't have the luxury of making any mistakes and coming out with a win." Clemens, who doesn't like to talk before he pitches, has said "Ryan was my idol when I was growing up in Katy. We all wanted to be like him."

dout hurdler Anthony Inman led the way, qualifying for the state meet in both the 110 meter and 300 meter hurdles. Inman won the 110s with a 14.5, then clocked a 39.5 for second in the 300 hurdles. Distance star Kevin Barnes just missed qualifying for state, as he finished third in the 800 meters with a 2:01.1 and fourth in the 1,600 meters with a 4:40.0. The Buffaloes' Darrell Williams also narrowly missed a trip to state, finishing third in the 400 meters with a 52.5. Longjumper Eddie Jordan rounded out Stanton's scoring with a fifth in his event. He leaped 21 feet, 33/4 inches. Forsan got a pair of fifth-place finishes from Paul Bailey and Ruben Halguin. Bailey clocked a 41.0 in the 300 meter hurdles and Halguin turned in a 22.8 in the 200 meter sprint. Region I A Sands' Shannon Nail nearly turned a double in the Region I field events in Abilene. After earning a shot at the state meet with a heave of 50 feet, 31/2 inches and second-place finish in the shotput, Nail took third in the discus with a 140-3 effort. Klondike just missed out on a state qualifier when Foster finished third in the 800 meters with a time of 2:02.75. The Grady girls were well-represented by Naomi Morales. The shot putter won her event and a trip to state with a throw of 37 feet, 21/4 inches. Region II A Lubbock was good to Garden City's thinclads, as two individuals qualified for state and the boys' team finished seventh in regionals with 24 points. Codie Scott outleaped everyone for a first in the high jump with a 6-4 effort. He'll be joined at state by Guillermo Morales, who was second in the 1,600 meters with a 4:42.13. Morales also claimed third in the 3,200 meters with a 10:22.97. The girls' 800 meter relay team sprinted to a 1:51.92, good enough for fifth in the meet.

Derby brought surprises in 1980s

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The 1980s at the Kentucky Derby was a decade that will be remembered for some up-and-coming young ladies and some been-there-forever older gentlemen.

It was a decade in which there were red roses for chestnut and roan ladies as Genuine Risk and Winning Colors became the second and third fillies to win the Derby.

It was also a decade in which Diane Carpenter became the first woman to train two Derby starters and Patti Cooksey became the second woman to ride in the race.

One of the fantastic females, Winning Colors, also answered one of the most-asked Derby questions — when will trainer D. Wayne Lukas win a Derby? The filly was Lukas' 13th starter in his eighth Derby beginning in 1981.

And Billy Shoemaker at age 54 became the oldest jockey to win the Derby when Ferdinand carried him across the finish line first in 1986. It was the 24th of 26 Derby appearances for Shoemaker and his fourth victory. He also won with Swaps, 1955; Tomy Lee, 1959, and Lucky Debonair, 1965.

Another veteran, Hall of Fame trainer Woody Stephens, 75, won two Derbies during the decade, his second coming in 1984 when Swale won while Stephens watched from a hospital bed with pneumonia. Swale also won the Belmont Stakes, then dropped dead after a morning gallop eight days later.

It was also a decade in which: — The No. 10 post position produced the most winners, with Spend A Buck in 1985, Sunny's Halo in 1983 and Genuine Risk in 1980.

— Eddie Delahoussaye was the only jockey to win the Derby twice. — Spend A Buck, 1985, and Winning Colors, 1988, were the 20 and 21st Derby winners to lead wire-to-wire.

— Two of the 13 3-year-olds to go into the Derby unbeaten raced in the 1980s. They were Air Forbes Won, who took four wins into the 1982 Derby and finished seventh, and Private Terms, who took seven victories into last year's Derby and finished ninth. Of the 13, the only two to come out of the Derby unbeaten were Majestic Prince in 1969 and Seattle Slew in 1977.

— Gato Del Sol and Swale became the second and third of the 114 Derby winners to start from outside the No. 14 post. Gato Del Sol won from the No. 19 post in 1982, and Swale won from No. 15 in 1984. Clyde Van Dusen won from No. 20 in 1929.

— There was 44 one-hundredths of an inch of rain when Sunny's Halo won May 7, 1983. It was the last rainy Derby Day and the first since 28 one-hundredths of an inch fell when Dust Commander won May 2, 1970.

— The 81-degree temperature when Sunny's Halo won made it the hottest Derby Day of the decade and the hottest since the 87 degrees registered when Majestic Prince won May 3, 1969.

— In 1980, the chestnut Genuine Risk became the first filly to start in the Derby since Silver Spoon finished fifth in 1959.

— Winning Colors became the 35th filly to start and the first roan to win in 1988.

— Other fillies to start during the decade were Cupecoy's Joy (10th in 1982) and Life's Magic (eighth) and Althea (19th), both in 1984.

— When Carpenter sent out Biloxi Indian to finish 12th in 1984, she became the first woman to saddle a Derby starter since Mary Keim finished sixth with Mr. Pag in 1965. Carpenter finished 14th with Kingpost in 1988.

— Patti Johnson had the best finish of the five women Derby trainers when Fast Account finished fourth in 1985.

— Cooksey rode So Vague to an 11th-place finish in 1984, 14 years after Diane Crump finished 15th on Fathom.

— There were no fillies or female trainers or jockeys expected in this year's Derby.

— While Lukas went all out to win — twice he started three-horse entries — trainer Charlie Whittingham ended a 25-year absence from Derby by winning with Ferdinand at age 73.

— "There's more recognition for winning the Derby than for any other race," said Whittingham, the only trainer to win more than 500 stakes.

— He will try to win this year's Derby with Sunday Silence, the Santa Anita Derby winner. Shoemaker apparently will not have a mount.

— A third Hall of Fame trainer found the Derby winner's circle during the decade when Jack Van Berg won with Alysheba in 1987.

— The Kentucky Derby has sometimes taken on the aspects of a demolition derby, and such was the case when Alysheba clipped the heels of Bet Twice and almost fell.

BRENNHAM — Brenham High School's Jon Peters pitches in the first inning against A&M Consolidated Friday evening here. The senior set a national high school record of 51 consecutive pitching victories with the 10-0 shutout of Consolidated.

Texas pitcher sets national win record

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

BRENNHAM (AP) — This quaint hill country town is famous for its little creamery that makes delicious ice cream and as a central point for viewing fields of bluebonnets, the Texas state flower.

Jon Peters interrupted this pastoral setting for five innings Friday-night to put Brenham on the map for another reason by setting a national record of 51 consecutive pitching victories.

Peters pitched the fifth no-hitter of his career and ended the game in dramatic fashion by driving in the final run in a 10-0 victory over A&M Consolidated.

"It's going to be tough not to have a letdown after something like this," Brenham coach Earl Hathaway said. "But we've still got a season to finish and somehow we'll do it."

With an overflow crowd of 4,000 watching, many sitting on slope beside a railroad track, Peters dealt with the pressure of the moment.

He struck out 12 and drove in John Schulte in the fifth inning, giving the Cubs a 10-0 lead and ending the scheduled seven-inning game.

High school games in Texas are called after five innings if one team is leading by 10 runs.

"I felt really good tonight and I'm just glad to finally get this over with," Peters said.

Peters broke the record of 50 victories by Timmy Moore of McColl, S.C., in 1977-80. Moore attended the game and threw out the first pitch.

Peters tied Moore's record on April 21 when he pitched a two-hitter against Katy Taylor, striking out 12 and retiring the last 15 in a row.

Peters, who has signed a scholarship agreement with Texas A&M, has not lost since the final game of his Little League career when Brenham lost to Taiwan in the semifinals of the 1985 Little League World Series.

Peters had a 13-0 record as a freshman, was 15-0 as a sophomore and 14-0 last season, leading Brenham to an unprecedented third straight state Class 4A title.

Peters is within reach of the state record for career victories currently held by Duncanville's Keith Creel, who won 55 games and finished second in career strikeouts to Houston Westchester's David Clyde, a former major league, who holds the state record of 842 strikeouts in 1970-73.

Peters has 566 strikeouts. Moore lost the final two games of his high school career and finished with a 50-2 record.

It was Peters' second run at setting the national record.

Peters thought he had set the national mark when he won No. 34 last season.

Moore's 50 victories had never been submitted to the National Federation of State High School Associations, which listed the record at 33 victories by Mike Pili, West Covina, Calif.

Moore's recognition came eight years late.

"There was never anything like this when I was pitching," he said. "I'd have to say getting to come here and winning two state championships are the highlight of my career."

Commissioner's office asks Rose to step down

NEW YORK (AP) — The baseball commissioner's office wanted Pete Rose to "step aside," as Cincinnati Reds manager until it completed its investigation into his gambling activities, but he refused, it was reported Saturday.

The subject was brought up early in the investigation by someone in the commissioner's office, Hal Bodley, baseball editor for USA Today, said on CNN's Baseball '89.

"The commissioner's office did not order him to step aside, did not request him to step aside," Bodley said. "...but it's one of these things where they would have liked for him to do it."

Bodley, a longtime friend of Rose's and the best man at the manager's second marriage, said he received the information Friday, but did not say from whom.

"Pete said 'no,'" Bodley said of Rose's response to baseball. "I think it was the right thing to say, frankly, because if he had stepped aside, that would have been a clear admission of guilt on his part."

Bodley also said Rose met "last week" with John Dowd, who heads baseball's investigation into the manager's activities, along with four of Dowd's assistants and Rose's lawyer.

The meeting between Rose and Dowd took place in Dayton, Ohio, Bodley said.

"That meeting was held for most of the morning," Bodley said. "The next day, they repeated the whole thing."

It was believed to be their first meeting, although as the investigation was beginning, Rose came to New York to meet with then-commissioner Peter Ueberroth and A. Bartlett Giamatti, who is now the commissioner.

Bodley did not say what was discussed at Rose's meetings with the investigators.

Longtime doctor retires after 52 years

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

As the young boy walked to school from his home on Benton Street, he would cross a vacant field at the corner of Goliad and Ninth Streets.

After many years, the boy turned man — Clyde Thomas Jr. MD — would become co-owner and chief surgeon of a hospital built on that same land.

On Friday, Dr. Thomas ended his 52-year career at a reception held in his honor at the same location.

The 75-year-old general practitioner and general surgeon of Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital decided "it was time" to retire.

Thomas, who has served as chief surgeon since 1946, decided on a career in medicine at the age of 16 when he began working for Dr. Granvil T. Hall and Dr. Marion H. Bennett. While he was a senior in high school, Thomas assisted the doctors with their patients.

After two years of pre-med training, Thomas decided to take the entrance exam to medical school. He paid the $1 fee and was tested at Galveston Medical Branch of the University of Texas, the first medical school in Texas, Thomas said.

To his surprise, he was accepted and graduated in the top 10 percent of his class.

"I couldn't believe they had accepted me because I only had two years of pre-med," he said.

Thomas became a surgeon, practicing as a civilian from 1940-43. Although he was exempt from the draft, he and his wife, Jane, decided he should enlist. He joined the supply service of the Army and served at the 127th General Hospital, and in Europe for two years.

"We were the first big hospital to cross the channel," he remembered. "We worked in a tent like on M.A.S.H. There were 10 to 15 beds in each tent where we performed surgery on 12-hour shifts."

After serving 30 months, Thomas returned to Big Spring and began his practice with Drs. Hall and Bennett.

He remembered when he and J.C. Pickle (the late co-owner of Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home) were vying for the same position.

"J.C. and I had applied for the same job. When we found out that I'd got it... J.C. became an undertaker," he jokingly said.

Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital, the first permanent hospital built between Abilene and El Paso and Lubbock and San Angelo, had 20 beds and a contract with the railroad to treat its employees.

Although the hospital expanded to 53 beds at one time, it now operates with 20, Thomas said.

In 1928, Big Spring Hospital Corporation was built as a result of the efforts of Drs. Hall and Bennett, who maintained their offices in the downtown area until they decided to erect another building on hospital property. Upon completion it was known as Big Spring Clinic. The clinic was legally set up as a partnership while the hospital retained its status as a corporation, according to hospital history.

Through the years additional doctors were added to the clinic staff, and eventually the hospital stock was held by Drs. Bennett, Thomas and T.J. Williamson. In 1951, the hospital corporation was dissolved and changed to a non-profit and charitable medical foundation known as the Howard County Hospital Foundation to whom the stock and assets of the clinic and corporation were sold.

Prior to becoming a foundation, two wings were added to the original building. One served as a dormitory for the nurses while the other was used for the patient beds. The nurses' residence was later converted to a patient room area.

The hospital's new name proved to be unfavorable, prompting several problems because many residents believed ownership was vested in the county. This created admission and collection problems, the hospital history stated.

In April 1966, after the death of the original founders, the board of directors changed the name to Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital.

Thomas, who was amused and delighted when he was informed that many of his patients thought of him as a "guru," said "When you've treated people for 30 or 40 years, they come to trust you. They've always joked about the laying on of hands."

For outstanding service to his community, he was honored as the Chamber Man of the Year in 1985. The same year, Thomas received the Distinguished Eagle Scout award, placing him among only five people in the United States to ever receive the honor.

Born in San Benita, near Brownsville, Thomas moved to Big Spring in 1919, where he walked to school on the grounds where he later retired. "They built that hospital in my path," he said.

Not certain what he'll do now, he stared out the window of his small office, and said "I hate to quit. I hate to retire — but it's time."

Professor emeritus honored by Howard College

Leslie Kelley, longtime instructor in United States and Western European history, at Howard College was honored with a reception Friday.

A portrait of Kelley, which will hang in the reception area of the school, was unveiled in honor of him being named as professor emeritus Sept. 20, 1988.

Kelley has taught part-time at the school for the past 11 years after retiring in 1979.

He retired with the distinction of serving the college longer than any other faculty member. He has served under all five men who have served as president of the college.

Kelley has a cumulative total of 35 years with the college. He has authored articles of area history which have been published in Ranch Headquarters Quarterly, the West Magazine and several regional newspapers.

When he retired Kelley expressed disappointment with some changes in education.

"These have been years of change in education," Kelley said on his retirement in 1979. "To me it has been a disappointing thing that studies in the humanities and other subjects of academic nature are not emphasized to the degree that one time they were. However, it is encouraging to note that it seems the pendulum is about to swing in the other direction."

Kelley is a native of Snyder and was a member of the Army Air Force in WWII.

He pastored churches in Roby and Snyder and was the pastor of the Prairie View Baptist Church, Salem Baptist Church and interim pastor at First Baptist Church in Knott for eight months.

His wife, Mary, died in 1987 after over 20 years in teaching elementary school students in the West Texas area.

Colt Firearms on sale block

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Colt Firearms, maker of the gun that won the West, has been placed on the auction block.

A 3-year-old strike by hundreds of Colt workers and the recent loss of its contract to make M-16 rifles for the military — its main business — have hampered the company. But officials at parent company Colt Industries said those problems didn't force a sale.

"It's a going business and it's profitable, and, of course, it has a history of quality products," company spokesman Michael G. Dunn said Friday.

New York-based Colt Industries is selling the firearms division so it can concentrate on its aerospace, automotive and industrial service operations, Dunn said.

The Colt company was founded in Hartford in 1836 by Samuel Colt.

"There are loose... people like me today whose dangerous impulses are being fueled day in and day out by violence in the media."

Tax & financial planning

PLANNING FOR THE MEDICARE TAX

Effective January 1, 1989, a new charge has been imposed on Medicare beneficiaries. This new charge, technically labeled a supplemental premium, applies to anyone eligible for more than six months of Medicare Part A hospital benefits. The surcharge is based on the beneficiary's federal income tax. For 1989, the surtax will be 15% of the federal tax liability, with a maximum surtax of $800 ($1,600 for joint returns where both spouses are eligible for benefits). This rate increases to a maximum 28% by 1993 with a ceiling of $1,050 ($2,100 joint). For 1989, the surcharge will be paid when the 1989 tax return is filed. Beginning in 1990, it must be included in quarterly estimate calculations.

With the surcharge based on federal tax, the only way to reduce it is to lower your federal tax. Brokers are pushing tax-free instruments as a means of avoiding the surtax. However, if tax-free instruments were not good investments for you prior to this surtax, the outlook will not change merely because of it. The higher yields of taxable investments may provide a better after-tax return than tax-free investments, even considering the new surtax. If you decide tax-free investments are worthwhile, consider no-load mutual funds. Such funds provide professional management, reduced risk, and liquidity. Otherwise, commissions and investment charges may substantially outweigh the additional tax you are trying to avoid. As always, tax considerations should not be the sole determinant of investment selection.

A study by the American Association of Retired People indicates over 80% of Medicare-eligible recipients will owe less than $250 of surtax, and less than 6% will pay the maximum $800 surcharge. Your 1988 tax liability will help you gauge the impact the 1989 surcharge may have on you and enable you to discuss options with your advisors.

Oil & Gas beat

Operators fined

The Railroad Commission assessed a total of $23,600 in administrative penalties this week to five oil and gas operators for problems under Commission well plugging rules.

Mac Exploration and Drilling Corp. of Ft. Myers, Fla. received a total of $9,000 in penalties for two inactive and unplugged wells on the Marvin Guthrie lease and one on the Coleman Estate lease, both in Coleman County. Commission records indicate the last production from the wells was recorded in March 1986.

Other penalties included $8,000 to Bellis-Weaver Resources, Inc. of Aurora, Colo. for four inactive wells on the Albert Wilson lease, Medina County; and $3,000 to Blackhawk Engineering of Addison for a well on the R. Key lease, Parker County.

Two operators agreed to pay penalties without admitting any violation of Commission rules. William Perlmans of Houston agreed to a total of $3,100 in penalties for three wells on the Southland Life Insurance lease and nine wells on the M.M. Miller lease, both in Duval County. Williams Exploration Co. of Houston agreed to a $500 penalty for one well on the W.T. Carter lease in Polk County.

To date in 1989, the Commission has levied more than $308,600 in pollution and well plugging penalties. Last year, the Commission assessed some $951,000 in such penalties.

BLM sells oil leases

SANTE FE, N.M. — About $1,953,165.50 was collected by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) from the sale of oil and gas leases located on public lands in New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas.

The total includes bonus bids and first-year rentals for these leases. The oral auction took place April 19 in Santa Fe.

BLM offered 306 parcels. Total breakdown by state for the April 19 sale are: New Mexico, $1,733,980 for 85,621.70 acres; Oklahoma, $12,210 for 1,838.60 acres; Texas, $59,346 for 1,181.35 acres; and Kansas, $640 for 320 acres.

Drilling report

At a location four miles southwest of Forsan, Conoco Inc. of Midland has finished a new oil producer in Howard County's Howard-Glasscock Field.

The well is designated as the No. 29 Belle Overton "A", pumping oil at the rate of 50 barrels per day, plus 1,000 CF casinghead gas and five barrels of water.

Location is in a 440-acre unit in the T&P Survey. Bottomed at 2,600 feet with plugback to 2,557 feet, the well will produce commingled from the perforations in the Grayburg and San Andres Formations, 2,186 to 2,468 feet into the wellbore.

Exxon Corporation of Midland has re-completed the No. 35 H.R. clay in Howard County's Howard-Glasscock Field. The well is located 13 miles southeast of Big Spring in a 320-acre unit in the W&NW Survey.

The well indicated potential to pump 29 barrels of oil per day plus 61 barrels of water. It produces commingled from perforations in the San Andres and Glorieta Formations, ranging from 2,275 to 3,225 feet into the hole.

The same operator originally completed the well in 1981 as an oil producer from the Glorieta. The original total depth was 3,280 feet with plugback to 3,265.

Plug-and-abandon orders were issued for the No. 1 Phillips, a developmental venture of Deminex US Oil of Dallas in Howard County's BC Field. Spudded Jan. 19, the well had reached 9,259-ft. total depth. Drillsite was four miles north of Big Spring in the T&P Survey.

Pumping 140 barrels of oil per day, along with 324,000 CF casinghead gas and 362 barrels of water, the No. 22AR Reinecke Unit was completed in Borden County's Reinecke Field by Union Oil of Midland.

It was drilled to 6,795-ft. total depth and will produce from an openhole interval in the Cisco Reef Formation, 6,783 to 6,795 feet into the wellbore.

The location is in a 4,358-acre lease in the H&TC Survey.

J. Ingram Oil & Gas of Dallas has started drilling operations at the No. 1 Smith at a wildcat location in Borden County, 18 miles northwest of Gail. Location is in a 160-acre unit in the ELARR Survey. The well carries permit for 10,500 feet of hole.

A 4,000-ft. developmental well is planned by Kindred Petroleum of Midland at a drillsite six miles north of Lenorah, Martin County. The location is in 480-acre unit in the T&P Survey. Well's designation is the No. 1 Woodward "A". It is in the Phoenix Field.

A new producer has been brought on line in Martin County's Spraberry Trend Field, with Parker & Parsley Petroleum of Midland as the operator. Located 20 miles northwest of Stanton, the well is in an 80-acre unit in the T&P Survey. It is designated as the No. 1 Glass "Y".

It pumped 38 barrels of oil per day, plus 41,000 CF casinghead gas and 175 barrels of water. Bottomed at 9,600 feet with plugback to 9,536 feet, the well will produce commingled from perforations in the Spraberry Formation, 7,788 to 9,400 feet into the hole.

Robert Beall, left, and David Newton display the plaques they won after being named the outstanding Conservation Farmer and Rancher at the Howard County SWCD awards dinner last week.

County's conservation rancher, farmer named

The Howard Soil and Water Conservation District honored the outstanding conservation farmer and the outstanding conservation rancher of the year at its annual awards dinner Tuesday.

Also honored were poster contest grand prize winners.

Plaques were presented to David Newton, Outstanding Conservation Rancher and Robert Beall, Outstanding Conservation Farmer.

Newton, who ranches southeast of Coahoma, has carried out good range management practices including deferred grazing and proper grazing use, as well as good cattle management to improve his grasses.

He has also terraced all but one small field of his cropland which he will complete this year.

Beall has worked for the past 20 years to improve his farms and stop erosion from occurring on his farmland, whether or not it was land he owned or rented. He has installed terracing, diversion and waterways to help accomplish his conservation objectives.

"Soil and Water Conservation" was the theme for the recent poster contest conducted for Howard County elementary school children from the third through the seventh grade.

Grand prize winners in the poster contest were awarded a trophy and a cash prize.

Approximately 65 guests, including the honorees and local people who have helped further the conservation effort in the district, attended the dinner.

Speaker for the event was Sonny Choate who reminded the group of the priceless heritage of the land and the privilege rural citizens enjoy of being close to nature.

Drinkers stand by their Bud

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

For all you do, this column's for you.

Sorry about that little play on words, but an Associated Press news item crossed the wire recently about two college seniors doing their thesis about beer.

The two students were trying to determine what separates expensive beer from cheaper brands and, to that end, conducted taste tests using their fellow students as tasters.

"We figured that college students are experts on beer drinking and they would determine the difference in the five brands of domestic beer we tested," one of the students told the AP.

But — and this was a big shock to me — "Statistically, people couldn't tell the difference," he added.

Heck, I could have told him that. If there is one truism about beer-drinking, it is this: All beer tastes the same — at least after five or six bottles.

AUTHOR'S NOTE: Before we go any further, let me state firmly for the record that I am not condoning any impressionable young sorts out there to go out and start downing beer in large quantities.

Not only would such behavior lead to possible hangover, arrest or death, I don't need any humorless types bombarding me with letters accusing me of abetting mass debauchery in our youths.

So, everything in moderation, OK? OK.

Now, where were we?
I have been known to drink a few brewskis in my time, so I am somewhat knowledgeable of the subject. This is not to say that I could write a dissertation about alcoholic beverages, but I do know the difference between a Coors and a Budweiser.

Like many other things, I acquired this knowledge through hard work and practice. It wasn't easy — and it sure wasn't cheap — but, heck, someone had to do it, right?

So, I wasn't too surprised when I read about the students' inability to tell the difference between brands. After three or four bottles, Busch tastes pretty much the same as Lone Star.

On second thought, allow me to recant that last sentence. Nothing in the world tastes like Lone Star Beer — and please don't misconstrue that as a compliment.

But, I digress.
The remarkable thing to consider, given the survey results, is that brand loyalty among die-hard beer-drinkers is so strong. Millions of Bud-lovers (or Coors-lovers or Miller-lovers, for that matter) would just as soon allow you to spit on their wives than for them to change brands.

Why is this so?
There are several sound theories for brand loyalty, but the one I favor is a simple one: identification purposes.

Drinkers stick with their favorite brand just so they'll know for sure what they're drinking when they get to their third or fourth beer.

It's the only theory I know that explains how someone can get so inebriated that's he's lighting the wrong end of his cigarette and kneeling before the altar of the porcelain god (that's throwing up in the toilet bowl for you humorless types), and still not accidentally drink something poisonous.

He may be slobbering on his date and slurring his words, but something ingrained deep in his brain cells tells the person that the red bottle with the funny-looking label on it is his beer and not the dishwasher.

Of course, this is only a theory of mine. I'm sure there are multitudes of Budweiser drinkers out there who will swear that, by gum, they sure as shootin' can tell the difference between their beer and some dastardly imitation.

But I think they're fibbing.
After all, when you separate the wheat from the chaff — or, as the case may be, the barley from the malts — a beer is a beer is a beer.

Enjoy whatever brand floats your boat. Down a Bud or a Bud Light or a Coors or a Lowenbrau or a Lone Star or whatever.

Just don't overdo it, remember? I don't need the nasty letters.

And the altar of the porcelain god has enough worshippers as it is.

Brad strolls down the park's jogging course, which offers runners a chance to take in the great outdoors while getting in a good workout.

One thousand one . . . one thousand two . . . As Brad can testify, the park has several activity centers along the edge of the jogging path for people who want a full workout experience.

A walk on The wild side

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

I was alone.
I was hiking through uncharted territory, at times groping through green shrubbery and other times taking in a vast expanse of open area. Flies and gnats pestered me, the sun beat down on me and all I carried was the shirt on my back and a little knapsack that held a camera and pen and pad.

My mission: explore Comanche Trail Park. My immediate thoughts: "Why am I here?" — quickly followed by the answer and a more grim thought: "Death to newspaper editors of the world."

I was at the park because my editor ordered me there. "Spend some time at the park today, write me a story for tomorrow," he said.

I thought to myself: "What do I know about parks? Why am I supposed to go to the park? Is something happening there? Surely he doesn't want me to go to the park, just because."

He did.
"Write me a story," he says. "Something interesting," he says. I visualized the headline: "Pond monster gets bite-sized reporter," "Reporter vanishes; editor rues last assignment," or one more to my liking at the time, "New editor found dead, fledgling reporter suspected."

Okay, I was overreacting. After all, what was so bad about spending a couple of hours at the park? When I began to think about it, I guessed I was rather lucky. Here my boss was paying me to spend time getting exercise and enjoying the great outdoors. I've spent most of my life in big cities, but I've heard about people who do these things.

So I was at the park, walking around, seeing the sights, taking in nature, swatting those annoying ants that mistook me for a large "Cheese Nip" and taking note of the park's many signs.

Some signs point the way to the park's dozens of attractions: tennis courts, baseball diamonds, playgrounds and the golf course; others refer to the jogging paths or historical trails.

Many of the park's signs are for use with the running paths along part of the park. Unfortunately, some of the signs meant to go with the activity along the joggers' path are missing and long stretches of the paved portions of the road have fallen into disrepair. Bottles and other debris line the sides of the path in some sections.

Because of an apparent lack of adequate upkeep, it seems the park's running trails are now more suited for hikers and sightseers than runners, but the running course seems well-designed and maybe with a little more upkeep the joggers' section of the park can be restored.

The signs along the joggers' paths demonstrate a variety of exercises for would-be athletes — stretches, chin ups, pull ups — everything needed to make the torso bigger and the tummy flatter. I tried a few of the exercises myself, but decided I was out of sha . . . — Err, that I was there as an observer. Yeah, that's it, I was there just to observe.

There are also dozens of historical markers, telling of the area's early inhabitants — buffalo, fierce Indians, dusty cavalry soldiers and the long-suffering immigrants they escorted. Later came the trappers, then the cowboys, and finally the settlers.

The settlers were a sturdy bunch, it seems, wanting to make a better life for themselves in such a rugged territory, hoping to make their own American dream and willing to make the sacrifices needed to accomplish it.

Unlike the others, they came to Big Spring not because they wanted to get somewhere else, but because they chose to make this their home.

The trails themselves are many and spread throughout the park. Although I only noticed two paths specifically intended for joggers and one main historical trail, there are dozens of others that dart off from the main paths.

I followed the paved paths mostly, but a desire for adventure got the best of me a couple of times and I decided to go off the

● WALK page 6-C

Brad stops to view one of the many scenic, out of the way places that can be found along one of the main historical trails.

As he takes note of the view, he admires one of the bridges where walkers can view the dam and much of the outlying area.

Brad eyes one of the signs of disrepair found along the edge of the jogger's path. Unfortunately, several signs are missing from activity centers and the general upkeep of the park seems lacking in several areas.

Tidbits

With Lea Whitehead

By LEA WHITEHEAD
Staff Writer

The Coker twins, Lonnie and Leonard, celebrated their 80th birthday just the way they've always done things — together. Two of our town's best-known citizens, the twins greeted generations of diners in their popular restaurants here from 1934 to 1972.

Lonnie and Leonard opened their first eatery at the age of 19 in Chillicothe, then moved their business to Quanah. When they heard that the new highway would by-pass Quanah, they packed their pots and pans and headed for West Texas.

Their first restaurant in Big Spring — appropriately called "The Twins Cafe" — opened in 1934 at 206 W. Third. At various times they also operated the Douglas Hotel Coffee Shop and the Permian Basin Snack Bar. In 1957 they built their own building at Fourth and Benton and opened Cokers Restaurant, which they operated until 1972.

The Lonnie Cokers met when Evelyn, an Ackerly girl, took a job in the credit department of Montgomery Ward, then across the street from The Twins Cafe. Leonard and Voncile Coker met at the Douglas Hotel Coffee Shop. Both couples have been married 51 years — the Lonnie Cokers three months longer than the Leonard Cokers.

Friends, old customers and family members turned out for the twins' birthday party at the home of Wayne and Londa Henry (she's Lonnie's daughter). The birthday cake featured a sugar-icing waitress under a "Cokers Restaurant" sign. Table centerpiece was a gift of flowers from friends Red and Edna Womack, who were unable to attend. Scattered about the rooms were fresh flowers from the gardens of Virginia Sweeney and Wanda Rose Fox, arranged by Virginia.

Hosts and hostesses were Lonnie's daughters and their husbands — Gloria and Paul Pettersen, Odessa; and Londa and Wayne. And Leonard's sons, Larry Coker, Austin; and Don and Linda Coker, Lubbock.

Other family members attending were former resident Wilda (Watts) Powers, Oklahoma City; Evelyn's brother Jack and Ruth Archer, Ackerly; Evelyn's sister Geraldine and Wayne Smith, and niece, Alice Howard (who videotaped the party) all from Lamesa; and Inez Ball, Seymour.

Also Lonnie's grandchildren, Dane, Cort and Bruin Pettersen, Odessa; Kurt Henry; Shauna Ashlock and husband Larry, parents of Lonnie's great-grandchildren, Lauren and Aaron, Plano, formerly of Sand Springs. Greg Henry and wife Lori, Austin, were unable to attend.

Also Leonard's granddaughter, Keeli Coker, Lubbock, and his great-grandchildren, Courtney and Kimbra Morris, Lubbock, (their mother Tracy was unable to come.)

Spending a recent weekend at the River Festival in Austin were Julia Lerma; her niece, Rosie Montanez; granddaughter Anissa Lerma, 3; and friend Lupe Gutierrez. "We saw the Fabulous Thunderbirds, and toured the state capitol and the LBJ Library," says Julia. The group also visited Julia's son, Albert and Diane Puga, and their children Melissa and Maria.

Former resident Tiffany Kelly and new baby, Katrina, left Friday to return to Palm Springs, Calif., after a three-week visit with relatives here.

She visited her aunt, Carla Crow, and cousins Jancy, 6, Chris Raney, 16, and Wesley Crow, 11; and her grandfather, Darrell Ditto. Tiffany spent some time baby-sitting Jancy while Carla was at work — and Jancy "baby-sat" Katrina.

Pam Welch and Lisa Nichols recently spent a music lover's dream-of-a-weekend in Ft. Worth as delegates to the Texas Association of Symphony Orchestras annual convention.

They were treated to such speakers as Van Cliburn (who got his start when he won the Dealy Competition in Dallas); enjoyed a performance of Mahler's "Symphony #3 in D Minor," by the Ft. Worth Symphony Orchestra conducted by John Giordanno; and heard Josepha Gayer, mezzo soprano, who has performed with the New York City Opera, Cincinnati Opera and others.

The delegates also were guests for a tour of the spectacular four-story home of Mr. and Mrs. Elton M. Hyde Jr. — a home filled with the owners' collection of antique tapestries, pygmy skeletons (!), Picasso prints and stuffed wildlife, including full-feathered pheasants hanging in the kitchen as though waiting to be cooked.

By the way Lisa was elected to serve on the TASO statewide board, and to chair the organization's communications committee.

Here's news for Felicia Ford watchers. Her latest commercial for Whataburger is being shown in the Permian Basin — on Channel 2 in the 6 p. m. and 10 p. m. time slots, says her mother, Jerry Dunbar. Felicia is shown as the counter girl serving the Texas Rangers baseball team.

Felicia, a 1983 Big Spring High School graduate, is a sales representative for Architect Designers in Dallas when not filling bookings in her show business career. She phoned Jerry Thursday to say she's had just signed with the Kim Dawson Agency in Big D.

"This will be just perfect for a fishing trip," Don Roman said, holding up the jumpsuit he won as a door prize at the second annual St. Vincent de Paul Society game and card party.

Patsy Sharpnak's prize was a "makeover" at Howard College's cosmetology school, and Joanne Holton took home an Italian glass decorative item signed by the artist — just a few of the many winners of items donated by Big Spring merchants.

Society president Maurice Smith got back just in time for the party — he has been sailing in the Caribbean, his first time to sail on ocean waters. He met with an unscheduled storm and Coast Guard rescue.

Mary Louise Tracy chaired the event. Others on the committee were Augusta Clark, Jim and Connie Geralt, Lois Randel, Delia Graves, Mary Smith, and Joan Morphy.

Improved drinking water

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

The consumer who wants to improve the aesthetic quality of drinking water has a multitude of companies and products to choose from.

Sifting through advertising claims and technical data to select the appropriate treatment method can be a trying experience. Here are some questions consumers should ask a water treatment professional to determine the system needed.

1. What exactly does the analysis of the water performed by the treatment professional show? Many companies include free in-home testing of water. Not all contaminants can be evaluated this way. For example, organics, which have been associated with serious health problems, must be analyzed in a lab with sophisticated equipment.

Be wary of home analysis claiming to determine more than basic water quality constituents such as hardness, pH, iron and sulfur.

2. How long has the company been in business? Is there a list of referrals that can be contacted?

3. Have the product and manufacturer been rated by the National Sanitation Foundation or other third party organization? Was the product tested for the specific contaminants in question, over the advertised life of the treatment device, under household conditions (tap water, actual flow rates and pressures)? The NSF, whose function is similar to Underwriters Laboratories, sets performance standards for water treatment devices. U.L. tests electrical services for safety.

4. Does the water quality problem require whole-house treatment or will a single-tap device be adequate? Some contaminants are as hazardous when inhaled or absorbed through the skin as when ingested. Treatment of all water used in the house may be required.

Focus on family

5. Will the unit produce enough treatment water daily to accommodate household usage? If a filter or membrane is involved, how often must it be changed? How does the consumer know when to make that change?

6. What are the total purchase price and expected maintenance cost of the device? Will the company install and service it? Is there a fee for labor? Can the consumer perform maintenance tasks? Will the unit substantially increase electrical usage in the home? Watch for hidden costs, such as installation fees, maintenance fees or rental fees. Additionally, disposing of waste materials, such as reject water, spent cartridges from activated carbon units, and filters, can add to the cost of water treatment.

7. Is there an alarm or indicator light on the device to alert the consumer of a malfunction? Will the manufacturer include in the purchase price a retesting of the water after a month or two?

8. What is the expected life of the product? What is the length of the warranty period, and what does the warranty cover?

These are guidelines for selecting home water treatment systems based on having a potable water supply. Treatment can be for aesthetic as well as health factors contact the County Extension Office for publications on selecting water treatment units and on water problems.

Area brief

Chapter sets meeting May 8

The Elisha Mack Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will meet for dinner May 8 at 5:30 p.m. in the Bridge Room at Days Inn, with Mrs. B.R. Owen as hostess.

Runnels Junior High School teacher, Mrs. John Damron, will speak on American Indians.

Regent Sherri Key and her officers will continue to serve in 1989-90. Officers are: June Reid, vice president; Helen McCreary, secretary; Helen Ewing, chaplain; Fern Alexander, registrar; Sarah Tipton, treasurer; Fran Riley, historian; and Lola Kelley, librarian.

At the recent DAR state convention in El Paso, Key was elected historian of the Texas Regents Club.

The April 8 program, an update on national defense, was presented by Mrs. Altus Kelley at her home.

She reported that during 1988-89, $290.4 billion was spent on national defense. Kelley emphasized the need to unify the submarine armed service for costwise efficiency.

Training is currently duplicated among the Navy, Army and Marines, she said. Quoting U.S. News and World Report, she said that the Soviet submarines now surpass the U.S. in the number and quality of training. All 30 Soviet submarines are nuclear-powered, she said.

She also said that national defense used to mean military spending but now includes the battle against drug trafficking, directed by drug czar Ed Bennett.

She said national defense concerns now involve oil spills, foreign investments of American lands and industries, as well as keeping peace and fighting drug use by American youth.

Many Hearing Problems Can Be Helped.

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

It's yours for the asking, so send for it now. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped. For your free sample send your name, address, and phone number today to: Department 89553, Beltone Electronics Corporation, 4201 West Victoria Street, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

GARY DON CAREY

Q.: My child came home with head lice. How did he get them and what can I do about getting rid of them?

A.: Head lice or Pediculosis is a contagious condition caused by an animal parasite infesting the hair of the scalp. As the parasites feed on the scalp, itching symptoms are felt and scratching may cause an infection. The head louse is transmitted from one person to another by contact with infested hats, combs, brushes or other personal articles. To kill head lice, use a product that can be obtained from your local pharmacy.

HINT: Remind youngsters to NEVER borrow a friend's comb, brush or hat.

Reduce your interest costs

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
 A Meredith Magazine

To reduce interest costs dramatically, Better Homes and Gardens magazine advises homeowners to make an extra mortgage payment every year or two.

Any extra payment will automatically be applied to the principal, thereby reducing the interest owed on the balance and shortening the length of time it will take to pay off the loan.

Some lenders don't accept prepayments, or they allow them only after a specific time period. Other lenders allow occasional payments. Others require a steady schedule - say, an extra $50 a month or whatever sum is agreed on.

Check the rules with the lender, preferably before taking out the mortgage. Also ask for a loan reduction chart to demonstrate how a specific prepayment plan will reduce interest cost and shorten the loan life.

New Doctors Discovery

Weight Loss Pill Approved for U.S. Gov't. Patent

'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight Already Sweeping U.S.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special) - An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W842, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) beaten path — very literally. Most of the off-beaten trails led to the water's edge; sometimes they didn't really lead anywhere, ending abruptly; and once it led me away from anything I recognized, making me wonder where I could be.

As a former Boy Scout, it didn't take me long to figure out exactly where I was: lost. I felt like a character out of a bad Reader's Digest "Drama in Real Life" scenario.

I knew I wasn't far from civilization, I just couldn't tell whether I was getting closer to or farther from the city. I knew I wasn't in too much danger — city parks the size of Comanche Trail are not usually known to swallow people without a trace. My concern was more immediate: Would I get back in time to watch Jeopardy?

I felt like I wasn't just taking the trail, it was more like the trail was taking me — taking me on some kind of excursion; the trail itself taking some kind of evil satisfaction in the fact that I was lost and unable to do anything but follow on.

Once or twice I was tempted to leave the trail I'd begun following. I didn't think I could get any more lost than I was, but then one of the corollaries to Murphy's Law crept into my thoughts: "Just when you think things can't get worse, they will" — I decided to stick with the path. To turn and go back the way I came was another option, but even though I was lost I had the feeling I'd come too far.

I was lost, but it could be worse: it could be raining. And then I looked at the sky, the clouds were dark and foreboding. It started to rain.

I picked up my pace. It wasn't raining hard, just sprinkling. I was moving into a clearing, and then I saw it: a plain brown building. I couldn't tell what sort of building it was at first, but I found out. It was a bar.

Let me say, first, that I don't usually frequent bars, but come on, this was civilization! Other human beings, someplace out of the rain and maybe something cold to drink.

After spending some time at the bar, I was ready to hit the road again. I still wasn't sure where I was going, but I was definitely feeling refreshed.

The trip back was surprisingly short. Stick to the main paths, I learned. Don't go off on an adventure unless you're really looking for an adventure. I learned also. Granted, my romp through the woods was nothing on the scale of an Indiana Jones thriller, but then Comanche Trail Park isn't the Amazon either. (Fortunately for me.)

What the park is though — a place to run, hike, jog, use the playground, play tennis, baseball, golf or just be — is a place that has something for just about everyone. Even a city-slicker like me.

Man recalls Caddo Lake beerleggers

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH

Fred Dahmer is a naturalist. He lives in the community of Urcertain. His house is just a few yards from Caddo Lake. Fred has explored the lake and its legends and the people who have contributed to the legends.

He knows about the beer boats. "The story of the Caddo Lake bootleggers has been told thousands of times," says Fred, "but seldom do you hear about the beerleggers." They were poor and not socially accepted by the wealthy distillers of rotgut.

When prohibition ended, Harrison county voted to stay dry. But nearby Marion county voted wet. "The law was interpreted to mean that you couldn't even transport beer into Harrison County except with a federal license, which was issued only to legal beer distributors," says Fred.

Now all the old-timers knew exactly where the two counties' boundary line was: In the center of the channel of Big Cypress Bayou.

It wasn't long before the Marion County side had a pontoon boat 80 feet long and 70 feet wide with a big sign on it reading "Caddo Diner." Beer was served on the premises. Since the only way to get to the diner was by water, customers drove to a parking lot, got out of their cars and took what were called transfer boats or taxi boats over to the diner.

The Caddo Diner prospered and became a popular place to dine, dance and drink. It was evident that the place needed to be enlarged. Fred says one night the barge was torn loose from its moorings during a storm. "It was replaced with a one hundred by eighty foot building constructed on pilings."

Others noticed the popularity of the Caddo Diner and went into competition with it. New places sprang up on the Marion County side of Big Cypress Bayou: Crip's, Charatier's and Keuhn's. All were built on pilings.

"Only the original Caddo Diner could truly have been called a beer boat, but people liked the sound of the term so all the places were called beer boats," says Fred.

Power was supplied to the beer boats by the rural co-op through an overhead power line from the mainland. Juke box music maintained the silence of Caddo Lake.

A longneck bottle of beer was .15 cents regardless of brand. A soft drink was a nickel. All the catfish you could eat cost .75 cents.

"The Caddo Diner opened at 11 on Thursday morning," says Fred, "and stayed open continuously until midnight Sunday. Eight waitresses worked there along with four cooks and four taxi boat drivers."

The taxi boats ran day and night year around. There was no charge for the service, but most people tipped the driver a nickel or dime. The boats were 16 feet long with flat bottoms equipped with 10-horsepower motors. Each beer boat had its own fleet of taxis, but the owners didn't mind taking passengers to other beer boats.

The beer boats became social centers on Caddo Lake. Parents often brought their children with them to spend a few hours visiting with friends. Some people came in their own boats and tied up at a special mooring area.

Often Fred cruised the lake at night. On two occasions he pulled couples from the water who had just jumped from a taxi boat for the fun of it.

All supplies had to be hauled in by boat. Beer had to be placed directly from the delivery trucks into the transfer boats. It could not touch the ground in Harrison County. No beer could be brought to the mainland from the beer boats.

Greetings — or something like that

DEAR ABBY: In this ever-changing world, the use of our language, as well as the language itself, is constantly changing. The reason for this letter is to point out the fact that no one has yet come up with a new salutation for a business letter when one addresses a company or corporation and the gender of the recipient is not known.

Dear Abby

"Gentlemen" has been in use for as long as I can remember, even when the letter is addressed to the attention of a woman.

Perhaps you can come up with a better salutation. — TOM COLEMAN, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR MR. COLEMAN: Many have suggested; none have caught on. "Greetings" sounds like a summons from the draft board. "Good morning" is not always appropriate — what if the recipient opens the letter in the afternoon or evening? "Hello" sounds like you're answering the telephone. "Sir or Madam" is too stiff and formal. And what's wrong with just jumping in with the purpose of the letter?

If we depart from the standard salutation, how about dispensing with those meaningless sign-offs, such as "Sincerely," "Very truly yours," "Fondly," and especially "Love" — unless you really mean it.

Readers, any suggestions?

DEAR ABBY: How can I find a good psychiatrist I can trust? After seven years of marriage, I have come to hate my husband. I wish him dead every night! He doesn't serve it — he's a nice guy. He doesn't drink, smoke, beat on me or abuse me or the children. He's a decent, upstanding professional man. But the truth is, I really hate him, and I don't know why.

Four years ago we went to a marriage counselor and wasted a lot of time and money for no help at all. I don't care to waste any more of either.

My husband is in charge of the money. I have no money of my own, and I certainly can't ask him for $100 a week more without explaining what I need it for. Please help me. — HATES MY HUSBAND

DEAR HATES: You are a very wise woman to realize that you need to see a psychiatrist. Tell your husband the truth — that you have feelings that seem irrational to you and you would like to understand these feelings. (It's not necessary to be any more explicit.)

Your family physician should be able to recommend a competent psychiatrist. If he does not, contact your state or county medical or psychiatric association for its recommendations.

After treatment, you may still hate your husband — but at least you'll know why.

DEAR ABBY: I am in love with a married man. (I'll call him Al.) We've been seeing each other for 14 months, whenever we can. He wants a divorce, but his love for his children is standing in the way. Al has two boys, 5 and 7. His wife is giving him a hard time about the divorce — she says she still loves him, but she can't put up with his coming and going whenever he feels like it. She is expecting again in August. (He swears he doesn't know how this happened.)

I am 24, support myself (waitress work) and have never been in love before. I didn't know

Al was married when I first met him. He said he didn't want to tell me because he loved me so much, he was afraid he'd lose me.

I am not a tramp, Abby. I have lots of chances to date other men, but I turn them all down. I know Al loves me. He said he never loved his wife. He only married her as a favor to his brother, who got her pregnant but couldn't marry her because he was already married.

What should I do? — TRAPPED BY LOVE

DEAR TRAPPED: Quit seeing Al. No matter how much you love him, there is no future in this relationship. He's very much married, and if he really doesn't know how his wife got pregnant, he needs a refresher course in reproduction. Wise up, and get this man out of your life — the sooner the better!

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Keeping a green thumb while on vacation

From DECORATING A Meredith Magazine

Houseplants can get homesick when their owners are away on vacation if some special provisions aren't made for them.

Plants can suffer from just a few days of neglect and adverse indoor conditions. Follow these simple prescriptions from Decorating magazine on how to keep a green thumb when vacationing.

• If plant owners are leaving for only a weekend, they should water everything thoroughly before they go and let it drain. Standing water will invite rot.

To reduce water requirements, raise the humidity level around plants by grouping them in shallow trays lined with an inch of pebbles and 1/2-inch of water. Don't let the bottoms of the pots touch the water.

• People leaving for several days should gather plants in a bright place but out of direct sunlight. Set up growlights and, with an automatic timer, give plants 14 hours of light each day. Setting the timer to turn lights on at night will help the house look occupied.

• Avoid feeding plants before leaving home. Fertilizing stimulates growth and requires high levels of plant energy.

• To minimize plant stress, remove any dead or dying foliage and flower buds, as well as any buds that would open.

• In winter, set the thermostat no lower than 60 degrees to prevent freezing.

• In the summer, many tropical houseplants will take care of themselves and even benefit from being placed outdoors in a shady, protected spot.

• Indoor self-watering devices can be purchased in garden supply stores, or automatic watering systems can be easily made.

Hester & Robertson busy on auditorium, railroad plaza

Hester & Robertson Mechanical Contractors, Inc. has a hand in several community improvement projects, including the renovation of the Municipal Auditorium and construction of the new Railroad Plaza.

"These projects will make Big Spring prettier and a more desirable place to live — as well as attract tourists," says Carol Hollingsworth. "And we're proud to be a part of it."

Funded by a private grant, the job at the Municipal Auditorium calls for installation of steam heating, ventilation and chill-water air conditioning. The 80-ton Trane package chiller was recently hoisted in place by a crane, as they continue to work on the renovation. "We're on a timetable," says Carol, adding that they hope to have the system in place for the next event bookings.

At the corner of First and Main Streets, Hester & Robertson crews are installing utility lines, plumbing and a sprinkler system at the site of the Railroad Plaza. This work is part of the preparations being made for moving in railroad cars which will house a restaurant and shops. The firm is working with the Downtown Development Committee on this project.

Other recent work includes installation of underground water sprinklers in the old and new Mount Olive Cemetery Masonic Section. This project was funded by the Masons.

"We're busier now than we've been in five years," says Carol. This is the time, she noted, for service checks on business and residential air conditioning systems. Radio-dispatched trucks — well-stocked with parts — and qualified technicians answer customers' calls. Freon, filters and condensate drain should always be checked at the beginning of hot weather, says Carol.

Hester & Robertson specializes in residential and commercial plumbing contracting, installs private water systems, septic and drain fields, lawn sprinkler systems, whirlpool baths and saunas. The firm has access to all the major brands of plumbing fixtures, including Eljer and Kohler.

The firm, located on North Birdwell Lane, was established in 1971 by Roy Hester and Sam Robertson. Phone is 263-8342.

There's no time like the present to check residential and commercial air conditioning systems. A call to Hester & Robertson at 263-8342 will bring a radio-dispatched truck — well-stocked with parts — and a qualified technician. Pictured is serviceman Shane Clark.

Card Of Thanks 693

To: Fina Oil & Chemical Co.
 I can't begin to thank you for all the help and kindness you have shown me and my family.

You are a great bunch of people and I can see why Jim was so devoted and loyal to his job. He worked with, and for some of the nicest people in the world. Thank you so very much.

Mrs. James Knight & Children & Grandchildren

Perhaps you sang a lovely song, or sat quietly in a chair; Perhaps you sent beautiful flowers,

If so, we saw them there. Perhaps you sent or spoke kind words

As any friend could say: Perhaps you prepared some tasty food,

Or maybe furnished a car; Perhaps you rendered a service unseen,

Near at hand or from afar; Whatever you did to console the heart

We thank you so much, Whatever the part.

Many thanks to our relatives, friends, neighbors.

Fina Oil & Chemical, Rev. Ferrell and members of the East 4th Baptist Church, Becky Reeh & Country Flowers staff, Myers & Smith Funeral Home.

Mrs. James Knight & Family
