Electrocuted teen tried to save best friend

COAHOMA — A 17-year-old Coahoma youth, trying to save his best friend from a downed electrical wire, was electrocuted late Sunday on wires that firemen say had been down for almost a year.

Larry Allan Pherigo, a junior at Coahoma High School, was electrocuted when he tried to pull his best friend off the wires of a Union Pacific railroad circuit.

Pherigo, 17, was rushed to Scenic Mountain Medical Center after unsuccessful CPR attempts by a Coahoma woman and Texas Highway Patrol trooper Mike Dawson.

He was pronounced dead at 4:55 p.m. by Dr. Bill Sullivan; Justice of the Peace Willie Grant pronounced the death an accident.

The boys were walking along the railroad tracks Sunday afternoon when Billy Nelson, 17, somehow grabbed the fallen wire and was burned on his hands and arms.

"We went walking down the railroad tracks, just to have something to do, and were kind of playing around," Nelson said today. "I grabbed a hold of a wire and it started shocking me. He got me loose somehow, but when he got me loose he took all the shock."

"The boys were just killing time," said Kathy Hayes, one of the volunteer firemen who answered the call for help. "Billy put his arm across the highline wire because he didn't know what it was. The wire was hanging about as high as a fence. "The post was burned about a year ago in a grass fire and when it fell the sand covered it up deep enough to hold it up. . . whoever was responsible for it never had it repaired."

Nelson said it was "kind of hard to remember" all the details of what happened.

"The pole was down," he said. "The authorities said the hot wire was about a foot taller than what my arms reach. . . I don't know. I just know somehow I got a hold of it."

"We were right behind a little trailer park, and when it happened I ran to the closest trailer and got a man and woman to come help. The woman was certified in CPR but when we got back, he was still breathing so all we could do is sit there and wait for the ambulance. Then when he quit breathing she administered CPR.

"All I knew is that we'd damn sure been shocked. . . all I could think about was to get help."

"When Billy started hollering (after he grabbed the wire), Allan grabbed him to pull him away. . . " Hayes said. "Evidently the shock traveled through Billy and Allan got the full voltage of the shock."

But John Bronley, a spokesman for the Union-Pacific Railroad said he had no indication that the pole had fallen.

"According to the report we had they had knocked down an old pole, and were taking the glass insulators off the pole and breaking them on the ground. And that's when he came in contact with the

Vo-tech offers students choices

By JEAN WARREN

Want to learn how to overhaul a lawn mower? Or study to be an electrician or automotive technician? Perhaps you would like training in office administration.

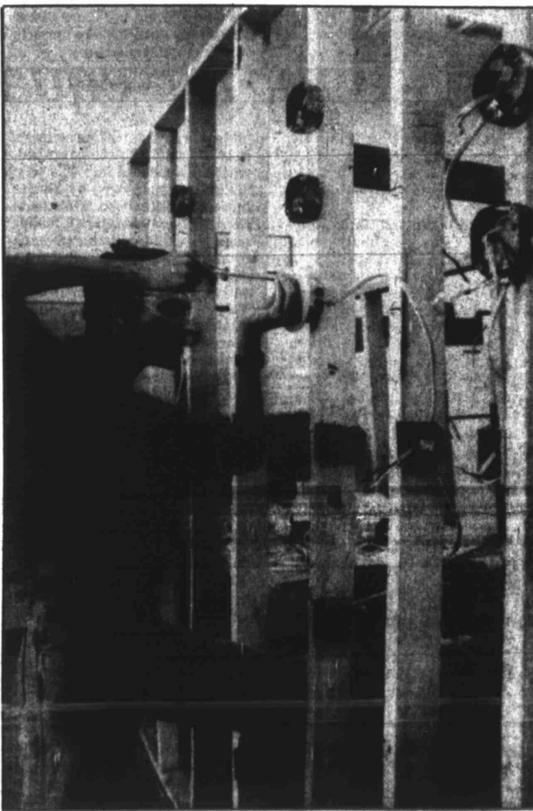

These are just some of the opportunities available to students in Vocational Trades at Big Spring High School.

Loran H. Spencer heads the department, which employs 17 teachers and focuses upon seven program areas: trades and industries, industrial technology, agricultural science and technology, occupational home economics, office education, consumer and homemaking education, and marketing.

Each program is divided into courses, many of which are one semester in length. Some are exploratory and general in nature; some are for job specific training; all have essential elements that emphasize the work ethic and concepts and skills related to leadership, successful employment, entrepreneurship, safety, human relations and personal and business management.

Spencer is enthusiastic about the vocational department where he taught for 16 years before becoming the administrative head 5 years ago. This is evident as he conducts a visitor through the classrooms and the four large well-equipped pre-employment laboratories.

In the automotive tech lab, students are prepared for entry level employment as automotive technicians. Their training, directed by Douglas Wagner, includes use of repair manuals and service and repair of basic components of an automobile — fuel systems, engine, emission control, power trains, chassis, electrical, brakes, heating and air conditioning.

In the lab for metal trades, practical experience in machine shop and welding skills prepare students for entry level employment in metal trades careers. The instructor is Keith Bagnall, who, like all trades and industrial instructors, has had five or more years experience in his field, in addition to teacher training courses.

This is the 15th year for Pete Ruiz to instruct students seeking employment in the small engine repair field. Students learn to overhaul engines and to repair and service cooling systems, air cleaners, starters, and fuel, ignition and lubricating systems.

In the electrical trades lab, Frank Ortega gives students practical experience in installation and servicing skills required of the residential and commercial industrial electrician.

The Vocational Trades department was built as an addition to BSHS in 1964. Prior to that time, students were transported to the old Center Point School where labs were housed in the old gym. Big Spring is now classified as an area school; this means students residing in other towns may come to BSHS to take one or more courses in Vocational Trades.

Industrial technology features another large lab. Here students enrolled in Manufacturing Systems and Production Systems learn woodworking skills and focus on the pre-construction, construction and post construction practices and the management techniques used in industry. In Manufacturing Graphics, which incorporates drafting, students make working drawings, design products and construct prototypes. These courses in industrial technology are taught at BSHS by David Budke and Ronald Walker.

Milton Laird is the instructor at Goliad Middle School and Wayne Rhyne at Runnels.

Agricultural Science and Technology is taught by Terry Denton. Courses offered include equine science, wildlife and recreation management, animal and plant production, and agricultural metal fabrication.

Advisor doubtful of SSC funding

DALLAS (AP) — Newly appointed White House science adviser D. Allan Bromley promised to fight hard for funds to build the $5.8 billion super collider, but said he is not optimistic that Congress will grant the money.

"I can't be optimistic at this point," Bromley said of the funding prospects for the project. "We're in a time of substantial financial deficits."

The super collider, a 53-mile particle accelerator, is planned for construction in Ellis County south of Dallas.

As a new member of the Bush administration, Bromley, a 63-year-old physicist from Yale University, told The Dallas Morning News that he supports building the collider.

His backing of the project follows President Bush's support of the super collider, which could bring thousands of jobs to North Texas. Leading congressional representatives have predicted a hard road for the project's $250 million request for fiscal 1990.

The Senate Budget Committee already has cut $1 billion from President Bush's $15.5-billion request for the budget category that would include the super collider. But last week, the committee added $175 million to those funds, a move that encouraged supporters of the proposed accelerator.

Bromley also said he wants to move forward with other science "megaprojects" such as the $3 billion plan to map the human genome, the $20 billion space station or the aerospace plane.

"But," he added, "even more important, we have to ask ourselves: Can we as a nation afford not to do them? All of these projects have the potential of moving technology forward to pay off in wildly different areas, areas we can't even anticipate at this point."

Bromley was appointed in April as President Bush's chief adviser on science and technology matters.

AF test may give boost to area firm

The Air Force is testing a new ceramic-based aircraft protective coating system on F-15 airplanes.

If successful, it could be a boon for a Big Spring company — which developed the paint for the Department of Defense.

The final test was made by the Air Force last week, when the 1st Tactical Fighter Wing took off in an F-15 to try out the paint's durability in the air.

"They are going to monitor it after so many hours in the air with videos and photographs," said Donnie Reagan, who handles military and international marketing for Freecom of Big Spring. "The schedule time for a final contract is about one year."

Prior to the in-the-air test, the paint had already passed other F-15 tests including one on air intakes on the leading edges of the plane and the verticals. Reagan said the paint is "performing excellent" so far.

"This is the last test before a decision is made for coating the entire aircraft," Reagan said. "We own the patent on the FOC-54 ceramic epoxy coating being used. It was developed by our president John Freeman."

Freeman, president of Freecom Inc., began his business in his mother's garage. The first year he only made $250.

Last year the company recorded sales of $1.25 million.

If the coating contracts are sealed with the Department of Defense it could mean millions of dollars to the company and the Big Spring economy.

Painting began in late April at the new wing corrosion control facility at Langley Air Force Base, Va.

"If the new paint proves to live up to contractor-predicted reliability and maintainability goals, it offers tremendous potential."

Reappraisal put off until '91 - Toomire

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

Howard County's appraisal district will not be able to reappraise until 1991 — one year past its state-mandated deadline — the county's chief appraiser revealed to county commissioners today.

"I don't feel at this time we're in shape to do a reappraisal in 1990," chief appraiser Keith Toomire told the commissioners.

"I don't think if we tried to do a reappraisal in 1990 we could have a product we could believe in. . . one that we could sell to the people," he said.

Toomire said instead of appraising this year and having to hire another person to take on the load associated with attempting to finish a reappraisal, the district would like to hire another part-time clerk and train a current employee as an appraiser.

Missing woman found

LAFAYETTE, La., (AP) — A New Orleans woman who had been missing for a week was back in Louisiana with her parents today after showing up in Houston, saying kidnapers had just let her go.

Charles Goss of Lafayette chartered a plane Sunday and brought Susan Goss Ortiz, 23, to Lafayette, the young woman's husband, Tulio Ortiz, said Sunday night.

"She seems to be pretty banged up," he said as he prepared to leave for a reunion with the woman he married in December. "She says she was abducted and thrown in a truck. She showed up (Sunday morning) at some guy's house up in Houston."

Ortiz reported his wife missing May 1 when she did not return from errands.

Woman faces eviction

ALVIN (AP) — An elderly Alvin woman who never has missed a rent payment for her government-assisted apartment is facing an eviction suit in what boils down to a dispute between her and the apartment management.

"I'm being treated like a dog," says Zella Berry, who has lived in the Alvin Memorial Gardens since October 1987. "We should be treated with respect. We're old, but we're not crazy."

The apartment manager, Mary McElhanon, alleges the 72-year-old Ms. Berry laughs too loud, gossips and has a sense of humor that is unappreciated.

The allegations, spelled out in an October letter to Ms. Berry, include an accusation that Ms. Berry showed off an advertisement for condoms to other residents.

SSC advisor pessimistic

DALLAS (AP) — Newly appointed White House science adviser D. Allan Bromley promised to fight hard for funds to build the $5.8 billion super collider, but said he is not optimistic that Congress will grant the money.

"I can't be optimistic at this point," Bromley said of the funding prospects for the project. "We're in a time of substantial financial deficits."

As a new member of the Bush administration, Bromley, a 63-year-old physicist from Yale University, told The Dallas Morning News that he supports building the collider.

Hope mission closing

HOUSTON (AP) — Several hundred homeless men will have to find other places for overnight lodging now that the downtown Houston Star of Hope mission is closing.

"I'm glad we tried and failed rather than having never tried and been successful at nothing," Don Johnson, the mission president, said Sunday.

The men's dormitory had been open for a little more than a year. Mission directors, however, voted last month to close the dormitory effective today after building inspectors found the facility was not in compliance with city codes.

Cultists: Ringleader ordered his own killing

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The leader of a drug-smuggling cult that killed 15 people and buried their bodies along the U.S.-Mexican border ordered his own killing when police closed in on him, two of his companions said Sunday.

Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo was shot and killed Saturday after police appeared outside the Mexico City apartment building where he was staying with Sara Aldrete and five other alleged cult members.

Ms. Aldrete, 24, a former honor student at Texas Southmost College in Brownsville, told reporters Constanzo ordered Alvaro de Leon Valdez to kill him and his right-hand man, Martin Quintana Rodriguez.

Ms. Aldrete, described as the "witch" of the cult, de Leon Valdez and three others arrested after the shootout were presented to reporters Sunday at the Mexico City Attorney General's office. They stood behind a 3-by-6-foot table bearing confiscated cult items, including a skull apparently made of wax and a female doll holding another doll.

De Leon Valdez said he shot Constanzo and Quintana with a machine gun after Constanzo ordered him to do so and hit him when he resisted.

"He went crazy, crazy" when police came, said de Leon Valdez, who had had collar-length blond hair and a beard and wore a dirty white shirt.

"He grabbed a bundle of money and threw it and began shooting out the window," he said. "He said everything, everything was lost."

He quoted Constanzo as saying, "No one's going to have this money."

Ms. Aldrete said Constanzo "ordered him to kill him because it was the end and he wanted to die with Martin." She referred to Constanzo, 26, as El Padrino, or the godfather.

The bodies of Constanzo and Quintana were found slumped together inside a tiny closet in the Mexico City apartment. Their shirts were smeared with blood.

Ms. Aldrete said she did not see the shooting or the killings of 15 people whose bodies were found on the Santa Elena Ranch outside Matamoros along the U.S. border in April.

She said she did not know about those killings until she saw reports of them on television. Constanzo and Ms. Aldrete are believed to have directed human sacrifices, mutilations and the boiling of brains and other organs in rituals to bring occult protection to their drug-smuggling ring.

De Leon Valdez, 22, said he took part in the killing of Mark Kilroy, a Texas college student, and of some of the others on the ranch. But he and Ms. Aldrete indicated Constanzo committed most of the killings.

Asked who killed Kilroy, Ms. Aldrete said: "Adolfo."

De Leon Valdez said the young American was killed with a machete chop to the head. His back was opened to remove his spinal column for a necklace, he said.

Appearing calm, Ms. Aldrete said she was sorry about the death of Kilroy and the others.

"I feel sorry because when he disappeared I was trying to help the (Kilroy) family," she said in response to reporters' questions. She did not explain what she meant.

"If I had known it was like this, I wouldn't have been in it," she said of the cult.

Ms. Aldrete told authorities Constanzo invited her to join "Christian Santeria" and asked her to use voodoo to help people with problems, said Abraham Polo Uscanga, deputy city attorney general. She said Constanzo initiated her into the cult in 1988.

Santeria is a blend of Catholicism and old African beliefs that includes animal sacrifices.

Bentsen forecasts tough fight for equalization

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six years after deciding rural hospitals could live on less than their urban counterparts, Congress appears ready to admit it made a mistake that many blame for the "slow starvation" of rural health care.

"We made a wrong calculation," says Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., who has joined the call for Congress to eliminate inequities in the urban-rural Medicare differential.

But finding the money to bring rural hospitals to the same reimbursement level as their city counterparts will be tough in these days of tight budgets, says Sen.

Lloyd Bentsen, sponsor of the Equity for Rural Hospitals Act.

The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Bentsen also cautions that no single bill will solve all of the problems of rural hospitals; federal officials agree say Medicare cannot be the sole source of a hospital's survival.

"For some hospitals, no matter what you do to the Medicare system, you would not save the hospital or have a significant impact," said Louis B. Hays, acting administrator of the federal Health Care Financing Administration. Medicare is "just one piece of the picture and there is nothing Medicare can do to produce more patients for a hospital that has a 10 percent occupancy rate," Hays said.

Although Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan is concerned about ensuring access to health care in rural and inner city areas, the department has not yet taken a position on Bentsen's bill, said spokesman Campbell Gardett.

Bentsen, a Democrat from Texas, which has led the nation in hospital failures for three years running, said bringing rural hospitals to the same reimbursement levels as their urban counterparts will cost $700 million annually when fully phased in.

His bill, co-sponsored by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole and backed by Senate Majority leader George Mitchell, calls for phasing in a uniform Medicare reimbursement rate beginning in 1991.

But Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa and a member of the Senate Rural Health Caucus, warned the Finance Committee last week that Congress could face a "drastic price tag" for rebuilding the rural health care system if quick action is not taken.

"I'll do what I can to accelerate it," Bentsen said Friday in an interview. "You have to find the money to accelerate it, that's the problem in these budget constraints. I expect to get some money for it, but not as much as those rural hospitals would want in that first year."

"I'm optimistic about the chances for passing my rural hospital bill this year and I'm making it a high priority," Bentsen said. "I have some 56 senators co-sponsoring it... I've got my forces well marshaled."

Irving's fake biography being auctioned

HOUSTON (AP) — The manuscript on the fake autobiography of reclusive billionaire Howard Hughes that landed author Clifford Irving in prison is being sold at an auction later this month.

Simpson's Galleries in Houston will include the manuscript in a scheduled May 21 auction of memorabilia relating to Hughes. It conducted a similar auction of such items in February.

In 1972, a court ordered Irving's publisher, McGraw-Hill, and Life Magazine, which planned to serialize the Hughes autobiography, to destroy all their copies of the manuscript and any proofs of the work.

But Irving said the court order didn't apply to him and kept a copy of the manuscript he possessed, consisting of about 1,000 typewritten pages.

"It moldered away in a carton in my farm house in Spain for more than 15 years until I crated it and other papers to this country two summers ago," Irving wrote Ray

"Dick (Suskind) clutched the briefcase which contained one copy of the transcript — the most valuable one, for it had been hand corrected by Howard to add to its authenticity. 'Five years from now,' Dick said jubilantly, 'we can sell it to the University of Texas for $100,000.' Maybe that was a bit of hyperbole." — Clifford Irving.

Simpson, proprietor of Simpson's Galleries.

Editorial comments and changes in the text are in the forged handwriting of Hughes.

Irving's literary hoax to publish the Hughes autobiography 17 years ago fell apart with him, his wife, Edith, and co-conspirator Richard Suskind all going to prison.

Irving, assisted by Suskind, invested lots of time and effort doing research and writing Hughes' fictional memoirs. After his release from prison, he reaped some profit from all the work by writing a book entitled "The Hoax," his story of how he carried out his scheme.

Irving, reached in California, said he referred to this manuscript in his book in this passage:

"Dick (Suskind, his collaborator) clutched the briefcase which contained one copy of the transcript — the most valuable one, for it had been hand corrected by Howard to add to its authenticity. 'Five years from now,' Dick said jubilantly, 'we can sell it to the University of Texas for $100,000.'"

"Maybe that was a bit of hyperbole," Irving said laughingly.

He said the germ of his idea for the Hughes autobiography may have been subconsciously planted when he wrote an earlier book,

"Fake, the Story of Elmyr de Hory, the Greatest Art Forger of Our Time."

"I have always believed that had I gone to trial I would have won because to disprove the authenticity of the autobiography they would have had to bring in Howard Hughes, and he was not going to appear in court," Irving told the Houston Chronicle.

He said he elected to plead guilty because his wife was admitting her guilt and because there was a possibility Suskind would become a government witness.

"I didn't think it (faking the autobiography) was such a terrible thing, and doing it was a lot of fun," said Irving.

Among other items being auctioned is a tape recording of a Jan. 21, 1972, conversation between Hughes and one of his attorneys in which he complains about another phony autobiography being published.

Simpson said he had hoped the auction would also include a 1941 Cadillac limousine Hughes used.

Astronauts prepare for landing after replacing computer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Atlantis streaked toward a landing in the California desert today after the astronauts stayed up past bedtime replacing a computer that quit during the mission's last full day in space.

The problem posed no threat to the four-day flight — the shuttle has four computers, a backup and a spare — but ground controllers decided to take no chances and had the crew cut short their experiments and install a new one.

"We just don't have the confidence to run with it for entry," said flight director Ron Dittemore.

After the repair job, the five astronauts began stowing their gear for the fiery dash through the Earth's atmosphere and 3:43 p.m. landing at Edwards Air Force Base in the Mojave Desert. The forecast called for favorable weather.

The computer problem was the only glitch reported on the mission, during which the shuttle sent the $550 million Magellan probe on a 15-month, 800 million-mile voyage to Venus to map its surface with super-sharp radar.

The astronauts' wake-up call this morning consisted of a barking dog and the Beatles' song "A Hard Day's Night," a reference to the repair work the night before.

"Good morning. It's time to come home," Mission Control communicator Ken Cameron told the crew.

A relatively small crowd of 100,000 was expected at the landing site because it is on a weekday, NASA spokeswoman Nancy Lovato said. An estimated 460,000 people watched Discovery's landing March 18, a Saturday.

Flight director Bill Reeves said this morning that the forecast at Edwards was for winds between 9.2 mph and 15.4 mph, meaning Atlantis probably would land on a dry lake bed to test its crosswind handling.

He said if winds dropped below 9.2 mph, the shuttle would probably land on a concrete runway. If the landing takes place on the lake bed, commander David Walker will test the nose-wheel steering by driving off the center line and back at 161 mph.

"It's been a nice, clean flight — a good vehicle and good crew," Reeves said. "We're looking forward to a good landing."

The other crew members are pilot Ronald Grabe and mission specialists Norman Thagard, Mark Lee and Mary Cleave.

Sunday's failure occurred in one of four computers that actually fly the shuttle most of the time. The shuttle could land with only one computer.

Walker, who reported the problem, got the computer working again, but ground engineers determined there was a hardware problem and ordered up the spare. The crew took 4½ hours to install the computer and went to sleep an hour late, getting about seven hours of rest.

"We send our congratulations. Good work," said Mission Control communicator Tammy Jernigan. "We wanted to point out that this is the first time that such a changeout has ever taken place on orbit."

The crew abandoned plans to melt and then crystallize a metal sample in a furnace and to photograph lightning and polluted areas on Earth. The Magellan mission — the first U.S. interplanetary mission in 11 years — will send back images that scientists said should tell them not only about the history of Venus but also about the evolution of its sister planet, Earth.

Venus, shrouded in sulfuric acid clouds and a carbon dioxide atmosphere, has a runaway greenhouse effect, with surface temperatures of 900 degrees.

Many scientists fear Earth may experience similar overheating. "We need to know the mechanisms whereby these things occur," Thagard said.

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incident:

• Sherry Lynn Chandley, 32, Midland, was released on $1,200 bond after being arrested on charges of possession of drug paraphernalia and marijuana, under two ounces.

Crimestoppers

Two green Rally lawnmowers valued at more than $375 were reported stolen from a storage building on the south side of Wal-Mart, April 5.

Witnesses said three Hispanic males were seen in the area of the storage building at the same approximate time. Reportedly, one of the three men distracted an employee while the other two forced their way into the storage building and removed the lawnmowers. The suspects were seen leaving the area in an old model white and red Chevrolet pickup truck.

Anyone with information regarding the above crime or any other felony are urged to contact Crimestoppers at 263-1151, 24 hours a day. Crimestoppers is authorized to pay up to $1,000 cash for information leading to the arrest and conviction or indictment of any person involved.

would be between $22,000-$27,000, he said. The alternative plan would cost about $17,000.

Toomire said that the county was billed for a 13.86 percent increase in the appraisal district's budget on the assumption that a county-wide appraisal would be issued. Because the appraisal board did not think a 1990 appraisal could be issued the budget for the 1990 year was amended. It now reflects a 9.95 percent increase, he said.

Toomire told the commissioners, "You can't say 'appraise' or 'don't appraise' (but) there are some steps you could take against the appraisal district. You could sue the district if it fails to meet the deadline."

Doing an appraisal in 1991 would allow the appraisal district to keep costs down and do a better appraisal, he said.

"I don't have a problem with that," commissioner William B. Crooker said.

"I'm all for it, but can we do that?" commissioner David Barr asked.

Toomire replied that the definition of appraisal is not sufficiently clear. He said that what usually constitutes an appraisal is the field work involved in assigning values to properties, something not done since 1986.

Several commissioners expressed their belief that what is done each year to appraise properties — compare records from previous years — would be sufficient for the time being.

"I think it would save a lot of expense," Barr said.

Commissioners also heard a presentation by Nancy Patrick, who told appeared before members of the county court with a large doll called "Polly Peace" to talk about the alleged dangers of pornography.

"I going to carry her around for awhile because people are sensitive to children," said Patrick, holding up the doll for commissioners to see. "They (pornography dealers) don't really have any dealings with children except in dirty pictures, which of course we don't approve."

Patrick said if the people who sell pornography thought about the children it affected they might possibly reconsider. She said there are 28 stores that sell pornography in Big Spring.

Patrick asked if she could approach the bench to speak privately with the commissioners about the subject, saying, "I have some information I don't want the general public to know," but was told by county judge John Coffee that since she was not scheduled to be heard from on the agenda that it was not possible.

She asked if she could send a confidential letter to the commissioners and Coffee approved the request.

Commissioners also reviewed photographs of the accident that claimed the life of a Howard County employee after commissioner O.L. "Louis" Brown raised questions about the accident with Sgt. Frank Woodall of the Texas Highway Patrol.

Woodall was before the commissioners on another matter, the possible hiring of another secretary to help the department with its paperwork.

Brown asked Woodall if the man involved in an accident that took the life of Scott Eric Mayhall, 23, was given a breath-test by the highway patrol. Woodall replied that the man had not because the trooper who investigated the accident did not believe there was sufficient cause.

Woodall showed commissioners dozens of pictures of the street, the driveway, the accident and of the young victim.

"They're not for the squeamish," he told the commissioners.

Crooker asked if it were standard procedure to take so many pictures of the accident and Woodall replied that it was.

"It's not uncommon for us to take two or more hours at the scene and several more at the office," he said.

Results of that investigation showed that Mayhall was below the speed limit and that the driver failed to yield the right of way, he said.

Ben Lockhart, deputy sheriff with the Howard County Sheriff's office, said his investigation into the incident was "kind of in limbo right now."

tial to the Air Force and military," Lt. Col. Ray Davies, assistant deputy commander for maintenance told The Flyer, the base newspaper recently.

"Tactical Air Command aircraft appearance standards are the highest in the Air Force. We try to maintain our aircraft up to an appearance standard that will instill pride in those who fly and maintain them. Currently, we paint our aircraft about once every 12 to 18 months. This new paint system could possibly extend that paint cycle to beyond 4 years."

"What's so interesting about the product," says Reagan, "is that it is very flexible — very corrosion resistant, very abrasive resistant. One of the big pluses with the government is... we do not require an undercoat, we are outperforming the current systems, and it will save them money in maintainability. Plus, it is also giving better performance."

"Another plus to using it on a high performance aircraft, such as the F-15, is that the radome — which houses the radar — usually takes a special material or product to protect it. In critical areas like the air intake, the leading edges of the wings and the vertical stabilizers, it takes another product to protect it. Then they have the top coat, and underneath that they use a primer — with FOC-54 we do not require a primer and we can do the entire aircraft with one product."

What that means for the nation's military airplanes is less "down time" for the aircraft, plus it will make it "easier to repair and easier to clean," Reagan said. What it means for the company is that "we would be producers of major government contracts which should open a lot of jobs."

"What makes me angry," said Hayes, "is that this happened. I'm surprised it hasn't happened sooner. After seeing that highline wire I was just sick. I want who ever is responsible to do something about it... they were just two kids who didn't have anything else to do... they weren't up to anything mischievous."

Report: Cost of school bus seat belts too high for lives saved

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal committee today rejected the idea of requiring seat belts on the nation's more than 300,000 larger school buses, concluding that it would cost $40 million and save an average of just one life a year.

"The overall potential benefits of requiring seat belts in school buses is insufficient to justify a federal standard mandating installation," said a committee of the National Research Council after an 18-month study. The NRC was set up by the National Academy of Sciences.

The committee said, however, that some steps should be taken to improve what transportation officials say already is one of the safest public conveyances, including raised seat backs and programs to prevent accidents while children are getting on and off the buses. The group estimated that if all school buses were equipped with seat belts for each passenger and half the students used them, it might save one life and prevent several dozen serious injuries a year. It would cost $40 million a year to equip and maintain all larger school buses with passenger seat belts, the study said.

Raising seat-back heights from a minimum of 20 inches to 24 inches could save two to three lives, prevent up to 95 serious injuries and cost about $6 million a year, the report said.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration does not require seat belts in buses rated at more than 10,000 pounds gross weight that typically carry more than 16 passengers. Smaller, van-like buses must have belts, however.

"The overall potential benefits of requiring seat belts in school buses is insufficient to justify a federal standard mandating installation."

The study, ordered by Congress and funded by the Department of Transportation, recommended that all states prohibit children from standing on school buses when they are in motion. Some states allow school buses to carry more children than there are seats.

The committee, which included a wide range of safety and transportation experts, also recommended that states, local school districts and private contractors stop operating school buses made before 1977 because they do not comply with current safety standards.

Buses built after 1977 have extra padding in seats, protected fuel tanks and other modifications to make them less deadly in crashes.

The recommendation on older buses followed a similar conclusion from the National Transportation Safety Board five weeks ago after an investigation into the head-on collision between a pickup truck and an older school bus used by a church group in Kentucky in May 1988 that killed 24 children and three adults.

Although that crash was blamed on the allegedly drunken driver of the pickup truck, who is to face trial in November on 27 murder charges, the safety board said design of the bus contributed to the severity of the accident. The bus's unprotected fuel tank burst into flames that spread fire and smoke through the bus.

The report said a minority of committee members felt seat belt use should be encouraged for all motor vehicles.

In reaching its conclusion that a school bus seat belt law is unwarranted, the committee studied the experience of New York and several school districts in Illinois, New Jersey, Virginia and Arizona that have required safety belts.

The committee said that an average of 10 children a year are killed while riding school buses, but 40 are killed while trying to board or leave a bus, two-thirds of them hit by their own or another bus.

The report proposed more careful driver selection and training, mandatory stop-signal arms on all new buses, and possible use of loudspeakers, barriers and sensors to prevent pedestrian accidents.

"Although the death or injury of any child transported by school bus is cause for concern, the safety record of school buses is good considering the amount of travel involved," the report said. U.S. school buses log four billion miles a year.

The report said it's four times safer to ride in a school bus than an automobile.

Fishermen expect reduced catch

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — Exxon stalled in its response to the Alaska oil spill and gave bad information, the state's top environmental official told congressional investigators.

The five-member subcommittee of the U.S. House Interior Committee also heard from fishermen who said they fear their multimillion-dollar catch in Prince William Sound will be reduced this season to protect seafood lovers from the effects of the spill.

"We've been told, we've been emphatically told, that we're going to have a normal fishery this summer. We're going to have anything but a normal fishery," Ken Adams of the Cordova District Fishermen United said Sunday.

Adams said the state could put a large portion of the sound off-limits when the commercial salmon season begins May 15. The state has not yet set any limits while it monitors the spill's movements. At an estimated $84 million, Prince William Sound has the nation's eighth largest commercial fishing industry, Adams said. About 85 percent of the catch is salmon.

Riki Ott, a member of the Cordova group's board of directors, said the fishing industry has long been fearful of a spill. Cordova is a fishing town on the edge of the sound, about 50 miles from Valdez, which is the terminal for the trans-Alaska pipeline.

"We knew we were playing with Russian roulette," she said.

Dennis Kelso, commissioner of the state Department of Environmental Conservation, questioned Exxon's statements that it could have more effectively contained the spill had it been allowed to use chemical dispersants.

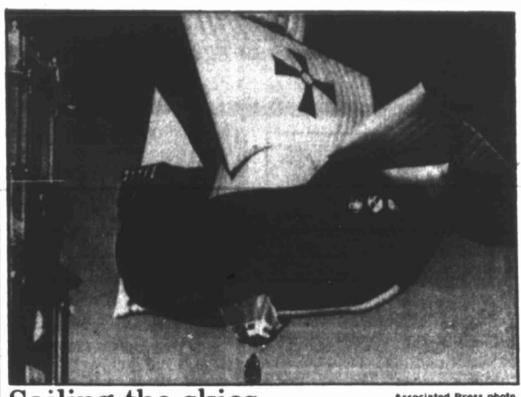

Kelso said neither Exxon nor Alyeska, the oil industry's jointly owned operator of the pipeline, was prepared to deal with the oil spill. "Neither of them had the equipment on site to deal with it either through mechanical means or chemical means," he said.

He also said Exxon's response was "reluctant and myopic, characterized by stalling techniques, disinformation, and a refusal to pay real attention to damage outside of Prince William Sound."

The subcommittee today was to conclude two days of hearings investigating the nation's largest oil spill. Today's session was expected to include testimony from Exxon, which has defended its actions.

Exxon, in a plan that has yet to win Yost's approval, has called for the worst of the oil to be cleaned off five islands in the sound by Wednesday, with 364 miles to be cleaned by Sept. 15.

WHO funds threatened if PLO joins

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is waging an uphill fight to prevent the Palestine Liberation Organization from being admitted to full membership in the World Health Organization.

A U.S. delegation flew to Switzerland over the weekend to wage a last-minute campaign against PLO admission to the U.N. agency.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III threatened last week to strip the international health organization of U.S. funds if it votes to admit the PLO.

The U.N. agency, meeting in Geneva, could take up the PLO request for membership as early as today.

The United States contributes about one-quarter of the WHO budget — about $71 million this year — and $73.8 million has been requested for fiscal year 1990.

U.S. officials are working feverishly to convince other nations in the 166-member organization that the PLO request should be withdrawn, deferred, or as a last defense, voted down.

Sources in Geneva reported Sunday that WHO Director General Dr. Hiroshi Nakajima, who has warned that a cutoff of the U.S. funds would "destroy" the agency, made an unpublicized trip to Tunis on Saturday in a last-minute attempt to get PLO Leader Yasser Arafat to change his mind about pressing for membership.

Reports from Tunis suggested, however, that the PLO leader remained unconvinced and ruled out any compromise.

His envoy to the U.N. Office in Geneva called on all WHO member countries Friday to "oppose any proposal or procedural action aimed at deferring consideration of the (P.L.O.'s membership) application."

The New York Times reported that Nakajima — who consulted with U.S. officials in Washington last week — is pushing a compromise under which the WHO would offer more medical aid to Palestinians in the occupied territories but defer consideration of the PLO's application until next year.

The compromise would keep the United States from cutting off aid to WHO.

Arafat last year declared a Palestinian state on Israeli-held land and about 100 of the 166 WHO members have already recognized the "State of Palestine" or at least acknowledged its proclamation of statehood.

However, the Dec. 15 U.N. General Assembly resolution that changed the Palestine Liberation Organization's nameplates in the U.N. system to "Palestine" stressed that this did not change its status as a nonvoting observer to the United Nations.

In the WHO, a simple majority is all that would be required for PLO admission.

"I think it's an uphill struggle for us, I really do," said John Bolton, the assistant secretary of state designate in charge of international organizations.

Bolton, in charge of the State Department's effort to head off the PLO entry, is the No. 2 man in the U.S. delegation headed by Secretary of Health and Human Services Louis Sullivan.

The WHO sponsors public health programs throughout the developing world and would be seriously hampered by the loss of the U.S. funds.

Opinions from across the U.S.

Weak appointees

(President) Bush has made one outstanding appointment in William K. Reilly as chief of the Environmental Protection Agency. But his selections for other critical nature-resource jobs raise serious questions about the administration's pledge to safeguard the nation's parks, wilderness and coastline. . . . James Cason has been nominated as assistant secretary of agriculture in charge of the U.S. Forest Service and Cy Jamison has been selected to be director of the Bureau of Land Management. . . . Cason is a former Oregon real estate developer who constantly ran afoul of the nation's environmental organizations as deputy assistant secretary of the interior. Jamison . . . for the past eight years has been an aide to Rep. Ron Marlenee (R-Mont). Bush's determination to build a strong environmental staff has managers at Interior and the Forest Service who are willing to put conservation and protection of the nation's dwindling natural estate ahead of the business-as-usual practice of commercial exploitation. The new appointees should be given a chance to demonstrate such a commitment, but so far, the record is not encouraging.

Los Angeles Times

Too soon to say

Assessments of the floundering from Washington like a river . . . have been nothing if not predictable. Read what President Bush or Vice President Quayle has to say about the first 100 days: Just fine; gaining momentum; under control. Read what conservatives say: competent if not spectacular. Read what liberals say: lack of focus, unimpressive. Funny, that's exactly what they were saying last year before the election. The fact is, 100 days is too soon for anyone — the president included — to make any meaningful assessment of a new administration. In that short amount of time the president can do little more than react to situations while he tries to put his team together. Members of that new team, in the meantime, are still trying to remember the way to the nearest restroom. The measure of a presidency is how successful it is at accomplishing the goals it sets for itself, and how appropriate those goals turn out to be. The voters will be making the final assessment on that when they go to the polls in 1992.

Skagit Valley Herald, Mount Vernon, Wash.

A hand can be a fist

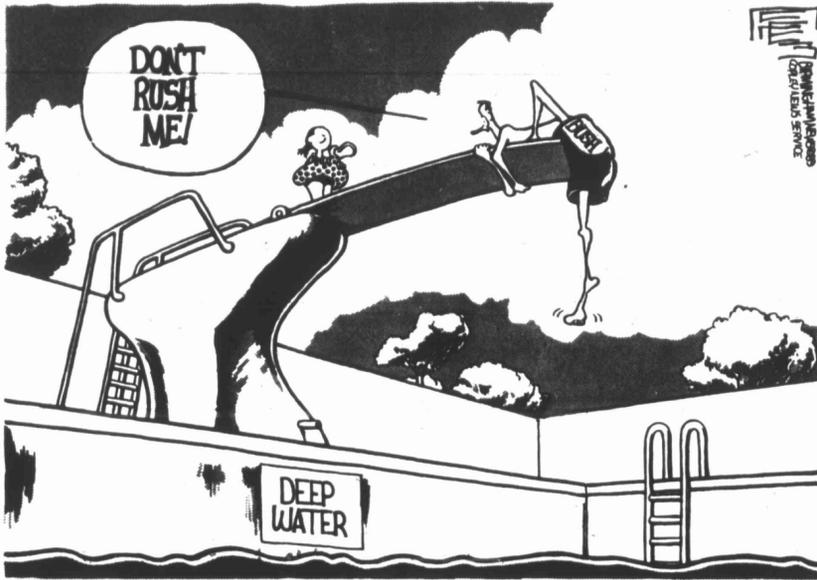

See Mikhail Gorbachev smile. Now see him bite. The Soviet president has purged a third of the ruling Communist Central Committee. Officially, the departures were described as "resignations." Uhhhhh-huh. Imagine 110 entrenched Communists deciding to retire gracefully from powerful public office at precisely the same moment. In fact, Gorbachev has accomplished what all Soviet leaders must do. The alternative is to lose power to someone else. It's not democratic, but it's effective. . . . Americans should be neither totally naive nor completely cynical. The winds of revolution blow hard in the Soviet Union. When they are warm, they are welcome. When they are cold, nations suffering under communism feel the iron fist of power. Now it looks like an outstretched hand. But a hand can still be a fist.

The News-Leader, Springfield, Mo.

Battleships outdated

Many Americans' hearts fill with awe and pride at the sight of a battleship. Others would respond similarly to the sight of a troop of horse cavalry, but they can't. While the Navy still has battleships, such as the Iowa in whose No. 2 gun turret an explosion April 19 killed 47 crew members, the Army's horse cavalry is long gone, replaced by tanks. The explosion in its No. 2 turret is not a major reason for mothballing the Iowa and its three sisters again, and for the last time. The best reason has existed for decades, and it's a shame that it took the deaths of 47 brave men to remind us that the battleship, like the horse cavalry, has long since had its day.

Morality, ethics and legislation

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — When would-be reformers rose up in Congress, their elders used to say that you can't legislate morality. So they didn't try.

That era is gone, that slogan no longer is fashionable, and the government has been trying for a generation to instill ethics by statute.

The results are mixed. The issue is far more visible. The rebukes and punishments for misconduct are far more frequent. And the rules of conduct are far more stringent than in the days when the late Sen. Everett M. Dirksen rose up in mellifluous protest against even the suggestion that members of Congress should disclose their sources of income.

"There are those, of course, who say that public ethics and values cannot be legislated," President Bush said as he sent Congress his new ethics proposals last Wednesday. "You're never going to legislate away impropriety or, through legislation, guarantee that everybody lives beyond the, you know, perception of criticism."

But he said there should be clear, explicit and enforceable federal ethics laws, applying across all branches of government, to replace a code that now is in disarray.

One reason for that disarray is that Congress has written ethics laws for other branches of government while exempting itself. "The American people do not understand why certain behavior is considered criminal when committed by an executive branch official or perfectly legal when committed by someone in another branch of government," Bush said.

One notable example is the revolving door that allows former members of Congress to become instant lobbyists or contract consultants, in contrast to executive branch officials who are barred from doing business with their former colleagues for at least a year after leaving government.

Bush said the rules should be uniform.

But then, he wasn't altogether consistent himself. His proposed rule against a quick spin through the revolving door would seem applicable to the defense consulting work that was one of the issues raised against former Sen. John G. Tower, Bush's rejected nominee for secretary of defense.

When the president was asked how he squared his ethics proposals with his support for Tower, he said there was no conflict. "I see no contradiction whatsoever," Bush said.

The president did not propose legislation to ban speechmaking fees for members of the House and Senate, an omission that drew protests from the ethics lobby. Bush said he'd leave that and the question of a congressional pay raise for later consultation with leaders of House and Senate.

But the president did say flatly that "honoraria for member of Congress should be banned" and that Congress should have a pay raise. A similar ban was proposed earlier this year, but it was scrapped along with the 51 percent pay raise Congress didn't dare to accept.

Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell said he also favors a ban on honoraria, with a corresponding increase in congressional pay. He added that pay increases should not be effective immediately for the Congress that approves them, but after the next round of elections.

The open question is whether Congress will risk taking on the politically unpopular question of its own pay again this year. "There is no point, absolutely no point, in putting Congress through another traumatic bashing like the one just completed," Bush said.

Another Bush proposal underscored another inconsistency in ethics rules. He said Congress should act this year to close the loophole that permits some senior members to convert surplus political contributions to personal use. That is permitted for members elected before 1980.

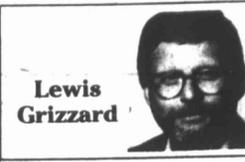

Ironically, that abuse was a central issue in one of the cases that marked the change in congressional attitudes about legislated ethics.

The year was 1967, when Bobby Baker was convicted of financial wrongdoing. Rep. Adam Clayton Powell was denied his House seat for misappropriating office and expense funds, and Sen. Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut was censured by the Senate.

The central accusation against Dodd was that he had used political funds for personal purposes. That was held to have brought dishonor and disrepute to the Senate.

Now, after a generation of ethics inquiries, rulings and laws, some similar conduct is held to be legal. Bush described his government ethics proposals to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, and he offered a pointed suggestion to a profession that is grappling with ethical questions of its own.

"Public service is not the sum of our perks or possessions, but a measure of how we conduct ourselves and what we achieve," the president said. "Come to think of it, this is a good code for all occupations, from high school to the highest callings in journalism and government."

Red Eye flights can do you in

By LEWIS GRIZZARD
Twice in the past three weeks it has been my misfortune to take the Red Eye flight home from the West Coast.

If you're not a frequent flyer, you may not be familiar with the Red Eye. Several airlines have these flights.

They leave California around 10:30 p.m., Pacific time, and they arrive back East at an awful time of the morning. I don't want to mention the exact hour for fear of frightening small children. (It's around 6 a.m., but don't tell the kids.)

The only people who dare take the Red Eye are people who are desperate to get out of California. I'm always desperate to get out of California because I'm afraid of earthquakes.

Who knows when the Big One — which scientists say is coming to California — might hit? I figure that the faster I get out of there the better my chances are of avoiding being swallowed up by the ground or being hit by a collapsing shoji bar.

So, the Red Eye, does, indeed, serve a useful purpose, but there are some things about it that need to be looked into, and there are some things about it that should be changed.

What I want looked into is the capabilities of the pilots flying the Red Eye. Since no pilot in his right mind would want such duty, are these pilots being punished for something they did?

"OK, Watson, you were supposed to land on the runway, but you missed and put her down in a Hertz lot. Next week, you're on the Red Eye."

And, certainly, experienced pilots would have enough seniority to be able to avoid the Red Eye. Who flies those things back East? Rookies?

"Uh, Captain, what does it mean when the landing gear light doesn't come on?"
"How should I know? It's my first flight, too. I'll ask after we land."

As far as Red Eye changes are concerned, I'd like to see the following:

No humorous movies are to be shown. Most passengers have the good sense to try to get some sleep.

But there is always one insomniac who stays awake and watches the movie. On one of my flights, they were showing "Twins," with Danny DeVito and Arnold Schwarzenegger. Everytime I'd doze off, a guy three rows down would start laughing his head off.

Show "Accidental Tourist" on the Red Eye. That would put even insomniacs to sleep.

Make the pillows larger. You get a pillow the size of a washcloth on a Red Eye.

Don't make an announcement to fasten your seat belt because we are about to fly into turbulence. I keep my seat belt fastened at all times anyway, and the best way to handle being inside an airplane that is bouncing all over the sky is to sleep through it.

Don't serve me a drink, no matter how hard I beg for it. It's either too late or too early for a drink when you're on the Red Eye. And a man my age should realize that.

Prohibit any child under 8 on the Red Eye. They tend to cry and scream, and you add that to some guy laughing and the only solution is to order a drink.

Install showers in the plane. Somewhere over Missouri the passengers could be showering so they would be a bit more fresh for arrival and not smell like what Eastern employees say Frank Lorenzo has for brains.

I don't think any of this is too much to ask, but in the spirit of the new Eastern deal, I'm willing to make a concession.

Forget the showers — who's up at that hour to smell me anyway.

Farmers finding best seed scarce

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. (AP) — The nation's farmers are beginning to sow their fields for this year's crops, but probably not with their first choice of seed since producers were so badly hurt by last summer's devastating dry spell.

"It dramatically reduced the amount of seed produced," said Harley J. Otto, executive vice president of the Minnesota Crop Improvement Association, which certifies seed for certain standards. Minnesota leads the nation in the number of acres of certified seed.

"The more popular, better producing seeds are in short supply," he said.

Last summer's drought slashed yields of corn and soybean seed by as much as 35 percent.

The small crop forced seed producers such as Northrup King Co. and Cargill Inc. to deplete reserves and call upon winter production facilities. More than two decades had passed since Northrup was forced to rely on winter facilities in Texas and Argentina, the company said.

City, county expenses increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's cities and counties, like many of their residents, are increasing their spending faster than their income, according to a pair of new Census Bureau reports.

Total city and county income still exceed spending, but the gap is narrowing, and local governments are increasingly unable to turn to Uncle Sam for help because federal aid is declining, said the studies released Sunday.

Spending by the nation's cities was 7.9 percent higher in the 1986-87 fiscal year than the year before, according to the reports. During the same period revenues rose 6.9 percent.

The result was spending totaling $164.1 billion by the cities, compared with revenues of $169.8 billion.

That left cities $5.7 billion in the black for 1986-87, although that marked a reduction from surpluses of $6.6 billion the year before and $7.7 billion in 1984-85.

For counties, spending rose 11.2 percent while income climbed 9.3 percent between 1985-86 and 1986-87, the Census Bureau said.

That totaled out to $105.8 billion in revenues and $102.9 billion in expenditures, for a surplus of $2.9 billion. Counties were $4.2 billion in the black a year earlier and $4.6 billion in 1984-85.

The reports also showed that federal aid fell by 14.2 percent for cities and by 7.2 percent for counties between the 1985-86 and 1986-87 fiscal years.

Senator: Testimony censored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bush administration officials ordered a government scientist to change his planned congressional testimony today on the greenhouse effect to support their "do-nothing approach" to the problem, a senator says.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., said Sunday that the Office of Management and Budget "censored" a scientist's planned testimony on global warming to downplay the seriousness of the problem.

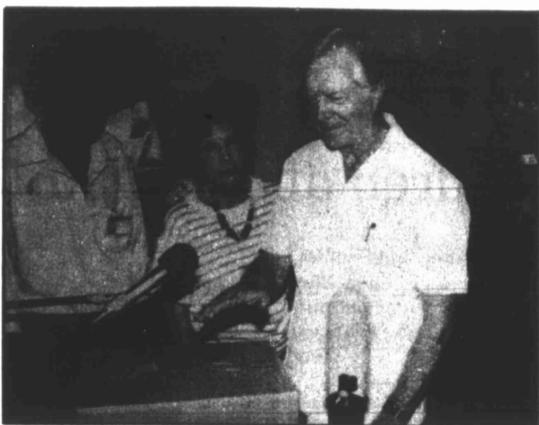

Dr. James E. Hansen, director of NASA's Goddard Institute for Space Studies, was among those scheduled to appear before the science and technology subcommittee headed by Gore.

The New York Times today quoted Hansen as saying OMB edited the text of his testimony to soften the conclusions and make the prospects of change in climate appear more uncertain.

"It distresses me that they put words in my mouth; they even put it in the first person," Hansen told the Times, adding that he had tried to "negotiate" with the budget office over the wording but "they refused to change."

"I should be allowed to say what is my scientific position; there is no rationale by which OMB should be censoring scientific opinion," Hansen said.

SAN MIGUELITO, Panama — Former President Jimmy Carter watches at a polling station Sunday as part of an international delegation of observers under the auspices of the Council of Freely-Elected Heads of Government.

Panamanian opposition charges election fraud

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Opposition leaders called for a massive march today to protest a presidential election they claim was stolen by Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, whose soldiers reportedly seized vote tallies at gunpoint from precinct workers.

Sixteen hours after polls closed, the official tabulation board said it had not received a single vote to count. Witnesses said soldiers stole lists of precinct results nationwide, and shots were fired in at least two instances when opposition members objected. There were no reports of injuries.

Both opposition and government-backed parties claimed victory in Sunday's largely peaceful voting, a contest that was seen as a referendum on Noriega's de facto rule and U.S. involvement in Panamanian affairs.

Turnout was high and many people had to wait in line several hours to cast ballots for president, two vice presidents and the National Assembly.

There can be no recount. When polls closed, poll workers burned the ballots after official results were verified at each precinct and put on tally sheets, a political tradition aimed at ending recount demands.

The opposition claimed that Noriega's 15,000-member Defense Forces rigged the voting, with soldiers voting more than once and some ballots cast in the name of dead voters.

"Despite all the irregularities, the opposition has triumphed," opposition presidential candidate Guillermo Endara told a news conference Sunday night. He claimed to have won by a 2-to-1 margin over Noriega's hand-picked candidate, Carlos Duque.

Witnesses, speaking on condition of anonymity, said final tallies of precinct votes were seized by soldiers in Panama City, its suburb of San Miguelito and the Atlantic port city of Colon.

At the Venezuela School in Panama City, witnesses said a government representative offered to take the vote tallies to the central counting place. When the opposition objected, the lights went out and shooting began, and when the lights went back on the ballots were gone, they said.

Witnesses reported similar thefts elsewhere, but the extent of the fraud was uncertain.

China's unemployment rate up

BEIJING (AP) — China's unemployment rate of 2 percent will rise to about 3.5 percent this year as more people compete for fewer jobs, an official newspaper said today.

The China Daily quoted Xi Zhongsheng of the State Commission for Restructuring the Economy as saying 10 million people will be looking for work this year with just 5 million jobs guaranteed by the state.

Jobs are scarce this year mainly because the government, in an austerity program to combat inflation and too-rapid economic growth, has canceled or suspended thousands of construction projects and cut off credit for new investment.

Factory managers also have been given greater authority to hire and fire workers, and have been encouraged to reduce the number of employees.

It has been estimated that 20 million to 30 million of China's 135 million workers are not really needed by their employers.

Arafat rejects retaliatory killing

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — PLO leader Yasser Arafat has condemned Iranian Parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani's call for the killing of Westerners in retaliation for Palestinian deaths in the Israeli-occupied lands.

"I reject this call in its totality," Arafat told a news conference Sunday at Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters.

Rafsanjani on Friday called for five Britons, French or Americans to be killed for every Palestinian killed in the Gaza Strip or West Bank by the Israeli army. Washington, London and Paris condemned the statement.

Rafsanjani is one of Iran's most prominent political personalities and observers have said his statement of solidarity for Palestinians, fellow Moslems, may have been motivated by political ambition.

Arafat on Sunday called on the international community "to act rapidly to put an end to the crimes and the massacres perpetrated by Israel against the population of the occupied territories."

The Palestine National Council, the PLO's parliament-in-exile, on Nov. 15 said it recognized Israel, renounced terrorism and will work toward a peace settlement that includes a state of Israel and a state of Palestine.

More than 460 Palestinians have been killed since the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip began in December 1987.

Iran reportedly ordered bombing

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Iran ordered the destruction of Pan Am Flight 103 and paid a Palestinian terrorist more than $1 million to carry out the bombing, a West German magazine said today.

Munich-based Quick said the Boeing 747 was bombed to avenge the shooting down of an Iranian civilian jet by the U.S. Navy in the Persian Gulf.

It said the Iranians paid Palestinian terrorist Ahmed Jibril $1.3 million to carry out the attack.

Pan Flight 103 blew up over Lockerbie, Scotland, on Dec. 21, killing all 259 people aboard and 11 on the ground. British investigators determined the plane was downed by a bomb hidden in a radio-cassette recorder.

The magazine said the decision to bomb an American plane was made in a "narrow circle" of close advisers to Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The Quick report is the latest of many assigning blame for the disaster. Officially, authorities in West Germany, Britain and the United States say they do not know who blew up the aircraft.

Wrinkle Cream Great Success

"YOUR SKIN CAN LOOK YOUNGER," says Pharmacist Robert Heldfond about his wrinkle cream, EB5, to an interested onlooker. They are shown above in a JCPenney Cosmetic Department.

It's an exciting story of a pharmacist who developed a wrinkle cream which women are requesting throughout the country.

Robert Heldfond is making cosmetic headlines with his EB5 Cream. His dream since pharmacy school has resulted in a wrinkle cream which is enjoying tremendous sales in department stores and is praised very highly by customers.

Research lab tests show that EB5 helps facial lines appear smoother when used twice daily. And you'll be so pleased to find that EB5 is 5 creams in one jar... EB5 is a wrinkle cream, a moisturizer, a night cream, a day cream, and a makeup base... all in one.

Pharmacist Heldfond's EB5 Cream leaves the skin feeling soft and velvety and younger-looking.

If you are concerned about your skin appearing to be aging too quickly, try Heldfond Formula EB5 Cream. Here is your chance to get a personal gift from Pharmacist Heldfond. Pharmacist Heldfond says: "Improper cleansing methods may result in extra dryness. You should avoid harsh cleansers and soaps. I developed EB5 Facial Cleanser as the first step to younger-looking skin. EB5 Facial Cleanser is soap-free and cleans deeply but gently and will not dry your skin."

For a limited time, with the purchase of my wrinkle cream EB5, your JCPenney beauty advisor will give you a bonus gift of my EB5 Facial Cleanser, a regular $9.50 value, at no charge with my compliments.

NOTE: Hear directly from Pharmacist Heldfond. Just dial 1-800-356-4798 (THERE IS NO CHARGE FOR THE CALL) and learn more about his exciting wrinkle cream, EB5, and how you may have younger-looking skin.

EB5 Cream is available at most large JCPenney stores. Sold with a money-back guarantee. (Complete details available in store.)

Dad needs education on respect

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a man (my husband) who, in my presence, informs his 16-year-old son from a previous marriage that although certain body parts of mine have deteriorated and become less attractive due to childbirth and aging, he would still (not unlike a martyr) rather have sex with me than a younger, firmer woman with whom he would run the risk of contracting AIDS?

The message I received was that I was no longer attractive to him, and that he just "puts up with me." Since then, I don't enjoy sex with him as much as I used to. Also, I feel that my privacy has been invaded.

My husband's defense was that he was just being "honest and open" in trying to set an example for his son to be a faithful husband when he marries.

Am I too sensitive? — FEELING BELITTLED

DEAR BELITTLED: Too sensitive? Certainly not. Your husband's lack of respect for your privacy, plus his boorishness and cruelty (however inadvertent), are appalling.

All attempts to educate this incredibly ignorant man may be useless, but do let him know that his references to your sex life and deteriorating body parts are gross and demeaning, so he'd better find another way to stress the importance of fidelity in marriage to reduce the risk of contracting AIDS, or any other sexually transmitted disease.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single parent trying to raise an 11-year-old son without a father. "Kevin" lost his father when he was 8 years old.

Abby, this boy has started to ask me questions about sex (gulp) that really startle me. I had no idea he was even thinking about such things at his age. He says all the kids at school talk about it.

Some time ago you advertised a booklet on how to talk to teen-agers about sex. Do you think it would be appropriate for Kevin? I don't want him to know too much at his age, but I want him to know enough to satisfy his curiosity and keep him safe from trouble.

If you think he's not too young for your booklet, please tell me how to order it. — SINGLE PARENT, ATHENS, GA.

DEAR PARENT: Correct information — at any age — can do no harm. Ignorance can. "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know" has been very well-received. It has been purchased in large quantities for use at both Baptist and Catholic summer camps for children and young adults.

To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included in the cost.)

Teaching children about death

By REDBOOK

A Hearst Magazine

Teaching children about death is almost as difficult as discussing sex — and should be handled in a similar fashion.

Children encounter death when a pet, a grandparent or even a parent dies, according to the current issue of Redbook, and they ask questions about their own mortality and those of the people they love.

"Teaching kids about death is very much like teaching them about sex," said Dr. Frances Millican, a supervising and training analyst with the Washington Psychoanalytic Institute in Washington. She said that means that as questions arise, they should be answered in a way that is keyed to their age and understanding.

There are "unhealthy explanations" parents should avoid, as Earl Grollman warned in his book, "Explaining Death to Children." They include:

- So-and-so has gone on a long journey for a long time. The child could feel hurt, angry and abandoned that someone he loved left without even saying goodbye.

"Teaching kids about death is very much like teaching them about sex." — Dr. Frances Millican.

- So-and-so has been taken away by God because he's so good. A child may fear the reward for goodness is death.

- So-and-so died because she was sick. A child may fear the normal illnesses he experiences could kill him.

- So-and-so is in eternal sleep. Equating sleep with death can cause bedtime problems.

Dr. Robert Gillman, a child psychoanalyst with the Baltimore-Washington Psychoanalytic Institute and president of the Association for Child Psychoanalysis, warns about using religion to fudge the facts of death.

"Even if we tell our children Grandpa's soul is in heaven — if that's our belief — we first should make it very clear his body is in a coffin in the ground."

Erna Furman, a child psychoanalyst with the Cleveland Center for Research in Child Development and the Hanna Perkins Therapeutic School in Cleveland, warned that "avoidance of the realities does not protect children but may add to their fears."

She said if they are not given clear information, "they will make up their own answers, which are usually very mixed up and much more frightening."

Children as young as 2, she said, can grasp basic information, although they may have trouble accepting that death is irreversible.

Youngsters up to age 9 or so may not grasp that death is universal and they may ask if it could happen to them. Gillman counsels against lying, but you can say something like, "You are going to live for a very long time — until you're very old." If they then ask if they will die when they are old, the answer is, "Yes, all living things die."

When confronted with death, a child faces a host of emotions including anger, guilt, sorrow and sometimes a desperate denial.

Elbow club hosts meeting

Elbow Extension Club hosted the May 1 meeting of the Howard County Extension Homemakers Council, with Myrl Soles, chairman, presiding.

Zula Rhodes gave the devotional titled "This Thing Called Prayer." Rhodes, who serves as the 4-H Scholarship committee chairman, announced that scholarship information and applications have been made available to graduating seniors who have been active in 4-H.

The Extension Council has been working since 1980 to make available two scholarships to Howard County 4-H members. This fall will be the first time the scholarships will be given, according to a club report.

Frances Zant, program chairman, asked for ideas for next year's program.

A committee was named to work on plans for Achievement Day in October. Special plans will be made for club members to hear reports from delegates to the state meeting in Corpus Christi in September.

Nominating committee for council officers are: Irene Priebe, chairman; and Zula Rhodes, and Lennis Couch.

Naomi Hunt, extension agent, announced plans for leader training May 22. The session, titled "Onion Fun," will be at the home of Myrl Soles.

An open house to mark the 75th anniversary of extension service in the United States will be conducted in the court house today.

This time Jordan's shot falls

By The Associated Press
The Chicago Bulls and Milwaukee Bucks have dispelled any doubt that the NBA playoffs are a new season.

After dropping all six regular-season games to Cleveland and Atlanta, the Bulls and Bucks eliminated their tormentors from the playoffs on Sunday — and they did it on the road in the final games of best-of-5 opening-round series.

At Richfield, Ohio, Michael Jordan drove past Craig Ehlo and hit a 15-foot jumper at the buzzer, giving the Bulls a 101-100 victory over the Cavaliers. In Atlanta, Ricky Pierce scored 25 points and Paul Mokeski and Jay Humphries hit key baskets down the stretch as Milwaukee overcame the absence of injured scoring leader Terry Cummings and beat the Hawks 96-92.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Lakers, seeking their third straight championship, opened their Western Conference semifinal series by defeating the Seattle SuperSonics 113-102 as Magic Johnson scored nine of his 21 points in the first five minutes of the fourth quarter.

On Tuesday night, Chicago visits New York to start the best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinals while Golden State plays Game 2 of its Western Conference semifinal at Phoenix. The Suns won the opener on Saturday 130-103.

Two more games are scheduled for Wednesday — Milwaukee at Detroit in the start of the other Eastern Conference semifinal and Seattle at Los Angeles for Game 2 of their series.

Jordan scored 30 of his 44 points in the second half, 17 in the fourth quarter. Ehlo scored 15 of his 24 in the final period, including three 3-pointers.

Scottie Pippen's 3-pointer gave the Bulls a 97-95 lead with 1:12 left, but Ehlo countered with a 3-pointer of his own to put Cleveland ahead 98-97 with 51 seconds left. Jordan made a 15-footer with six seconds to play for a one-point Chicago lead, but Ehlo gave Cleveland a 100-99 lead on a drive with three seconds to play.

After two timeouts, Jordan got the ball near the top of the circle, drove past Ehlo and leaped at the free-throw line. The winning shot barely touched the back of the rim as it went through.

"Everyone had been writing us off," Jordan said. "I was very disappointed after we lost Friday night. I was fighting off tears. But I had to get rid of that attitude today."

"Larry Nance did a good job of keeping me from going where I wanted (on the inbounds pass from Brad Sellers that led to his winning shot), so I had to pull off a fake just to get the ball. Once I got the ball, I penetrated a little and got set up a little. But Ehlo came over and had me covered. I had to hesitate and then I got the shot off. How it went in I don't know."

Neither did Ehlo. "I was kind of excited at first because he (Jordan) picked for Bill Cartwright, so I thought they were using Jordan as a decoy," Ehlo said. "We pushed him out to the sidelines. We did what we wanted to do, but he's exceptionally quick. I put a hand up in his face, but he made the shot."

wright added 16 for the Bulls. With Cleveland ahead 82-76, Jordan took over, hitting two straight 15-footers to start an 11-0 run that put the Bulls ahead 87-82 for the first time since the opening period.

Mudd garners second PGA win

IRVING (AP) — Jodie Mudd was another of those PGA millionaires who hadn't won many tournaments.

Until Sunday. Mudd, 29, whose only previous Tour victory came last year at Memphis, doubled his lifetime total by beating Larry Nelson in a playoff to capture the Byron Nelson Classic.

The former Georgia Southern star made a 12-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole, a 554-yard par-5 to beat Nelson, a former U.S. Open, and PGA Championship winner.

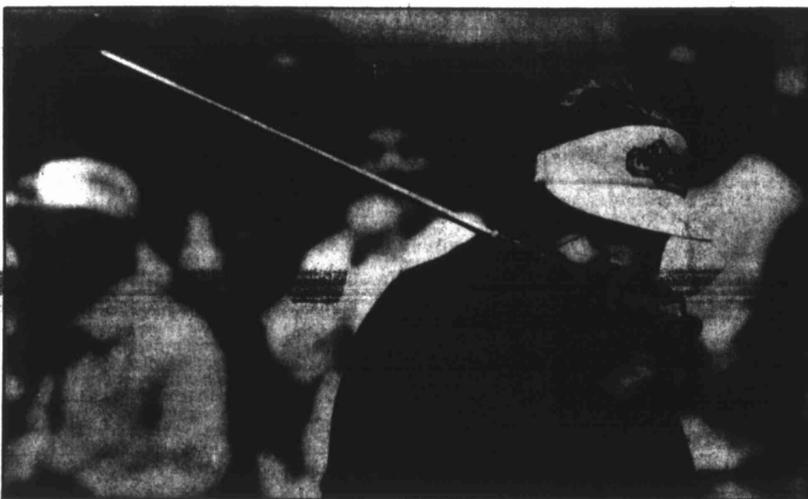

"I've been here (on the tour) for 7½ years and I decided it was time to get my career going," Mudd said. "I decided it was time to take my shot and be more aggressive, to play for wins instead of a good tournament."

Mudd shot a final round 65 to tie Nelson, who had a 67, at 15-under-par 265 over the Tournament Players Course at the Four Seasons resort in Las Colinas.

It was the fourth playoff in five years at the Nelson Classic. Bruce Lietzke won last year.

The $180,000 first-place check increased Mudd's lifetime earnings to $1,356,494. It was Mudd's first playoff victory. He had lost to both Phil Blackmar and John Mahaffey in 1985.

Nelson, who is now 3-2 in playoffs, won $108,000. It was his first top 10 finish this year after suffering an ankle injury last November playing touch football with his son.

DALLAS — Wayne Levi of Utica, N.Y. bites his lip as he misses a birdie on the second hole of the championship round of the Byron Nelson Classic Sunday afternoon.

"It's a sad feeling to lose a playoff," Mudd said. "I've been on the other end of it twice."

Nelson left the course without discussing his round, but Mudd said he knew he was battling a fierce competitor.

"Larry is a great pressure player," Mudd said. "He's won all those majors."

Mudd said he thought he might have an edge on the playoff hole because he normally outdrives Nelson.

"Playoffs are petrifying because it can be over in one hole," Mudd said. "I did feel comfortable because I thought I had an edge in my length. I really wanted to make that putt because I didn't want it to go any farther. I didn't want to give Larry a chance to do something spectacular."

Mudd said his most spectacular shot during his regulation round came with mud on the ball.

He blasted his third shot out of a hazard on the par-4, 14th hole and it came to rest 40 feet from the hole.

"It had mud all over it but I couldn't take it off," Mudd said. "I couldn't believe it when my putt went in (for a par)."

Inkster repeats as champ; wins easily by five strokes

Associated Press Writer CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — The hardest thing to do in sports is to repeat as champion. Juli Inkster is making it look easy. Inkster's victory Sunday in the LPGA Crestar Classic was the 13th of her career. Of those 13, five were at events she had won in the past. Her Crestar vic-made even more uncomfortable by a stiff breeze.

Neumann, the U.S. Open champion, birdied the 18th hole to salvage a 2-over 74. Daniel, a 14-time winner whose last victory came in 1985, kept pace with Inkster for seven holes but wound up with a 74.

Those three were the only ones to break par for the tournament, which was suspended twice by storms.

Inkster, one of 65 players who had to complete their rain-shortened second round early Sunday morning, built a three-shot lead midway through the final round and never led by less than two the rest of the way.

Inkster and Daniel began the final round at 3-under, one shot behind Jody Rosenthal and Cindy Figg-Currier.

Daniel sank a 5-foot birdie putt on the 509-yard first hole and parred the next six.

Inkster joined her at 4-under with an 8-foot birdie putt on the 372-yard fifth hole.

Meantime, Rosenthal and Figg-Currier each lost three shots to par in the first five holes.

Rosenthal bogeyed the first three par-4s. The first came when she drove into the water and the other two were the results of approach shots that missed the green.

tory marked the second time she had successfully defended a title.

"I enjoy that kind of little extra boost," said Inkster, whose victory was her second of the season and was worth $45,000 from the $300,000 purse.

Inkster closed with a 3-under-par 69 for a 54-hole total of 210, six shots under par and five ahead of her closest pursuers on Greenbrier Country Club's 6,275-yard layout.

Inkster won the tournament last year at Shady Hole Golf Course, ending the event's eight-year run at the club in nearby Suffolk.

"It's always tough to come back and defend," Inkster said. "To come back and do it on a different golf course is really tough."

What many of the players found difficult Sunday was the rainy, 48-degree conditions,

Will everything fall into place for Sunday Silence?

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — If all it took were money, guts, top-flight personnel and the fastest 3-year-old horse in the world, there would be more than 11 winners of the three races in a single year that comprise thoroughbred racing's quixotic Triple Crown.

"Luck, don't forget luck. And timing," Lucien Lauren, trainer of the fabled Secretariat, said Sunday, traces of his French-Canadian heritage apparent over a telephone line from near-by Lexington.

It was less than 24 hours after Sunday Silence, the Charlie Whittingham-trained dark bay colt out of Halo, cleared the first hurdle of the Race Course — loomed large.

Should that fall into place, the most grueling — the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes — lurks June 10.

And Whittingham, at 76 the dean of the training fraternity and winner of more than 500 stakes races, didn't make things any easier for himself by predicting for all the world to hear that Sunday Silence was equal to the task.

"Charlie is one of the best horsemen ever, and you must respect that," Lauren continued. "But three such different and difficult races in such short time. It's a question if the horse is strong enough, ... but also necessary that he be at the very top of his form.

"Even Secretariat got beat a couple times ... and the horse, he don't talk like a human being. We take his temperature, we look at his legs, we do what we can," he continued, "but how do you explain it?"

"Maybe it's just that the horse don't feel so good that day. And if your luck is bad," Lauren said, "maybe that day turns out to be one of the (Triple Crown) races."

Secretariat scored 2½-length victories over Sham — a great horse in the wrong year — in record times in both the 1973 Derby and Preakness. And then, with Ron Turcotte aboard wearing the blue and white block silks of Penny Chenery's Meadow Stable, ripped off a world-record 2:24 at Belmont before a frenzied New York crowd — an achievement generally considered the finest ever by a thoroughbred.

It came 25 years after Citation, one of the few racehorses mentioned in the same breath with Secretariat, had last turned the Triple Crown, a feat that would be matched twice in the decade — by Seattle Slew in 1977 and Affirmed the following year — and not since.

Surely cognizant of that fact, Chrysler Corp. etched its name into the crown last year by

Canadiens take 3-1 advantage

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Pentagon could use Patrick Roy's defense system.

Roy, supported by an airtight checking effort, had to make just 17 saves Sunday night as the Montreal Canadiens shut out the Philadelphia Flyers 3-0 Sunday night in Game 4 of the Wales Conference finals.

The Canadiens, seeking their 24th Stanley Cup, lead the best-of-7 series 3-1 and can advance to the finals with a victory at the Forum Tuesday night.

Roy made a couple of tough saves in the first period, foiling good scoring attempts by Brian Propp and Scott Mellanby. But in the final two periods, he needed to make only nine stops for his second shutout in three games.

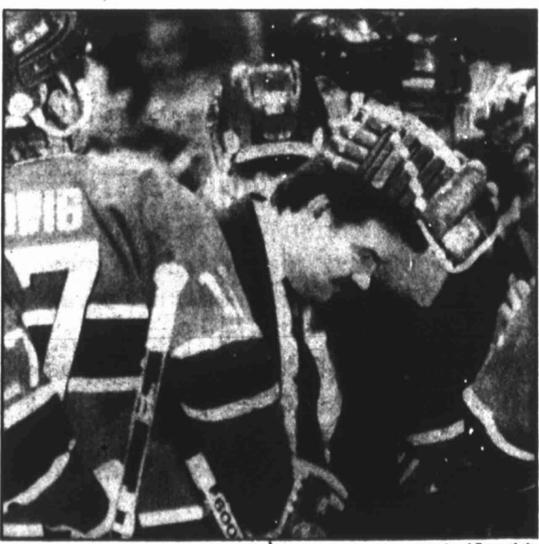

The 24-year-old goalie is now 10-1 in the playoffs this spring with a 1.83 goals against average. He has allowed only one goal in the last three games.

But Roy said the Canadiens aren't counting on the Flyers.

"The Flyers have won one game in this series," he said. "I respect them. We can't expect the series to be finished. They will play well in the Forum. We must be ready."

However, the Flyers can bring out the golf clubs and beach chairs unless they find a way to penetrate Roy & Co.

"Our concentration is at a high level now," Roy said. "We're confident. We've played with patience all year. Hockey is a sport of mistakes. And we have capitalized on mistakes all year. We did it again tonight." Montreal's Shayne Corson, Chris Chelios and Guy Carbonneau scored in a 7:31 span of the second period, giving Roy all the offense he needed.

Corson opened the scoring by tucking in his own rebound at 10:09. Chris Chelios scored on a 20-foot slap shot during a 5-on-3 power play at 13:57 and Guy Carbonneau finished off the Flyers with a shor-thanded goal at 17:40.

The Canadiens, first in the Adams Division with 115 points, may be just too good for the Flyers, who finished fourth in the Patrick Division with 80 points, and coach Paul Holmgren seemed to recognize the obvious.

"One goal in three games doesn't say much for our offense," he said. "It says a lot for their defense. We just have to capitalize on our scoring opportunities. Against this team you are not going to get a lot of chances. They are doing a tremendous job of shutting us down."

Especially on the power play. The Flyers led the NHL in power-play percentage during the regular season and connected for 20 man-advantage goals in the first two rounds against Washington and Pittsburgh.

But against the Canadiens, the Flyers are 0-for-15. They also surrendered Carbonneau's goal, which Holmgren said was the killer.

"It's hard to imagine they can play so well for three games in a row," Holmgren said.

Not even the return of goaltender Ron Hextall could slow down the Canadiens.

Hextall returned after missing four games with a strained right knee and made 29 saves, but it wasn't enough.

Propp said the Flyers must score first against Montreal to stay in the series.

"We need to get the first goal," Propp said.

players for the courage it took to continue to overcome one obstacle after another.

Mokesci twice gave Milwaukee the lead on layups in the final 3½ minutes, the last with 2:51 to play, putting the Bucks ahead to stay 87-86. Fred Roberts made two free throws 30 seconds later, Pierce hit an 18-footer and Humphries scored on a breakaway layup, stretching the lead to 93-86.

Atlanta countered with a 3-pointer by Glenn Rivers, but Humphries hit two more free throws with 53 seconds left for a 95-89 lead.

Moses Malone, who led the Hawks with 25 points and 16 rebounds, got Atlanta within three points with a 3-point field goal but Humphries hit one of two free throws with eight seconds left.

"We controlled the tempo," Pierce said. "A lot of people were counting us out. We have lots of confidence."

Free throws were the difference. The Bucks, who led the NBA in free throw shooting, made their first 16 and finished with 26 of 29. Atlanta made only 22 of 35.

It was the second victory in a row at Atlanta for the Bucks, who had broken a nine-game losing streak in The Omni by winning Game 2.

"This will be hard for us to get over," said Dominique Wilkins, who had 22 points for the Hawks.

Lakers 113, SuperSonics 102

James Worthy had 28 points and 12 rebounds for the Lakers, who didn't go ahead for good until a jump shot by Johnson with 9:51 remaining gave them an 88-87 lead, starting a 16-4 spurt that made it 102-91 with 4:34 to go.

Byron Scott had 18 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Mychal Thompson added 16 points each for Los Angeles. Derrick McKey led Seattle with 23 points and Dale guaranteeing $5 million in total prize money to a single winner of its more formally monickered "Triple Crown Challenge" and, in the absence of a sweep, $1 million to the horse with the best combined finishes in all three.

Fittingly, a flashy bay son of Secretariat named Risen Star took home the earmark of the check last year. After running third behind Winning Colors and Forty Niner at the Derby, Risen Star upset the filly in the Preakness and went on to take the Belmont in the fastest time since his father won the race in 1973.

Woody Stephens and Jack Van Berg, contemporaries of Whittingham's and two of the shrewdest trainers in the game, figure Sunday Silence has a very good chance of doing as well. Both believe the colt's toughest obstacle to the bigger payday will be repeating Saturday's Derby victory over highly regarded Easy Goer at the Preakness — just 18 days from now.

"I think Shug (McGaughey, trainer of Easy Goer) learned something from this and I think he'll catch him back at the Preakness, then Charlie will get back over in the Belmont," said Stephens, a Hall of Famer who has saddled winners in all three — including an unprecedented five straight in the Belmont — but never in the same year.

"The wet track definitely took something away from Easy Goer,"

BASEBALL

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Jose Canseco reinjured his left hand Sunday on the second day of his rehabilitation assignment with the Huntsville Stars, the Oakland Athletics' Class AA farm team.

Canseco, who was 1-for-4 Saturday, grounded to second in his first at-bat Sunday and then reinjured the wrist as he singled in the third inning. He was clearly in pain as he ran to first on the RBI single.

After the game, the Stars released a statement saying Canseco probably would undergo more surgery on the wrist and could be out another three to five weeks. Canseco was scheduled to have X-rays taken of the injured hand in Huntsville today and then travel to San Francisco for further tests, the team said.

Ellis had 19, but only two in the fourth quarter. Xavier McDaniel scored 15 for the Sonics, only two in the second half.

It was the Lakers' ninth straight playoff victory over the Sonics dating back to April 1980.

Johnson said he could sense the Sonics were fatigued in the fourth quarter when the Lakers outscored them 33-21.

"Oh, yeah, you can feel that," he said. "We kind of picked the defense up, got some easy transition points. That's when we took advantage of them getting tired."

There was a difference of opinion among the Sonics, who earned their berth in the conference semis by eliminating the Houston Rockets with a last-second 98-96 victory on Friday night.

"There's no doubt about our getting tired," Seattle coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "They still tried to get it out. When you get tired, you make the kind of mistakes we made in the fourth quarter."

Dale Ellis, the Sonics' leading scorer, had only two of his 19 points in the fourth quarter and McDaniel, Seattle's second-leading scorer, had just two of his 15 in the second half.

"I can't blame fatigue," Ellis said. "We got out of it mentally and just didn't handle the ball well in the fourth quarter."

GOOD YEAR CERTIFIED AUTO SERVICE

HAVING TROUBLE STOPPING?

If your brakes are screaming for attention, head for the red, white and blue sign of Goodyear Certified Auto Service. The place where your car — and your brakes — will get the best of treatment.

Goodyear quality care begins with a staff of trained auto technicians. Graduates of Goodyear training schools in high-tech repair and maintenance of today's automobiles, many of them also proudly wear the ASE emblem on their sleeves — having passed the requirements of the National Institute of Automobile Service Excellence. The equipment they use is the very best; on some services it's even computerized for speed and accuracy. And you'll like the job they do, because it comes with a written guarantee. Your Goodyear retailer has the details of our Nationwide Warranty, and a pledge to you to do the job right.

DISC BRAKE $69 SERVICE

Preventive maintenance on your car is important. But preventive maintenance on your brakes is very important. Drive to a Goodyear Certified Auto Service Center and ask a Goodyear technician to service your brakes. Our disc brake service includes new front disc pads and resurfaced front rotors. The price applies to front wheel drive vehicles. Prices vary for rear wheel drive. Caliper overhaul additional if needed. Hydraulic service will be recommended if needed for safe operation. Semi-metallic pads extra.

Limited warranty for 6 months or 6,000 miles, whichever comes first. Ask for details.

The next generation

Students create their own mall

McLEAN, Va. (AP) — They're not as glitzy as the stores at other malls in this affluent suburban shopping mecca, but the shops at the brand-new Magic Mall have a few things over their competitors. "They will teach us kids how to run our own businesses and avoid bankruptcy," said third-grader Warren Johnson. "I think they are fun because they offer different ways of learning. And best of all, they are all my size."

Magic Mall, an elaborate wooden structure housing a dozen enterprises, opened Wednesday at Kent Gardens Elementary School with the goal of "teaching children here a business person's mentality," said principal Robyn Hooker.

The mall is a $20,000-plus project that takes up a spare multipurpose "pod" area in an airy, carpeted, skylit new wing of the school outside Washington, D.C.

Private sources, including a local bank and three development and construction companies, picked up the tab. Parents in the fields of film-making, architecture and consumer advocacy played key roles. And everyone involved has become a missionary for school malls.

"This is but one example. It's a model. It could be done in every community in the country. It's not difficult," said Ed Rothschild, the consumer advocate.

"We are ready to pass the torch to Washington, D.C., and a depressed school," said Hooker. "You don't have to have the luxury of a pod area to do this. Your facilities don't have to be this elaborate. You don't have to have a computer in each shop. Based on the children's enthusiasm, the other pieces will fall in place."

Payrolls, profits, losses, investments and inventory will be among the concerns addressed by the third-graders, and eventually fourth-graders, who run the shops at Magic Mall. Each venture will start off with an imaginary $20,000 in capital, to be multiplied or McLEAN, Va. — Roger Socci, a third-grade teacher at the Kent Gardens Elementary School, poses with students who recently built this scaled-down version of a shopping mall within the confines of the school.

"They will teach us kids how to run our own businesses and avoid bankruptcy. I think they are fun because they offer different ways of learning. And best of all, they are all my size." — third-grader Warren Johnson.

diminished depending on the skill — and grades — of the students.

Students will write letters and mail them at the post office; publish books; put out a newspaper; invest in stocks at a market exchange; conduct experiments at a science store; cook at a short-order snack bar; use a video camera at an ad agency; and work with wood at a shop called "Sawdust." Each shop is scheduled to have a computer. Each student will have a credit card provided by a local bank.

"Once they learn to balance checkbooks, once they begin to understand how the stock market functions, these are lifelong skills. We're planting seeds and they will germinate," said Hooker. Asked if the youngsters will learn about mergers and takeovers, she grinned. "Why not?"

The mall was the brainchild of third-grade teacher Roger Socci, sparked by memories of "the lemonade stand, the hideout, the dollhouse." To operate a successful shop, he reasoned, children would be virtually forced to upgrade their math, reading and writing skills. They would be naturally interested in the project and they would learn to work as a team.

Architect Jairo Delgado designed the school mall in the latest neo-Victorian style, with quaint varied roof lines and bright painted trim in red, blue and green. Each shop is the size of a large playhouse.

On ribbon-cutting day, three girls fussed over supplies at "Card and Craft," showing off homemade cards, flowers and paper baskets. Several others concocted a chocolate sundae, stepping over children's cookbooks strewn across the floor of their tiny restaurant.

Newspaper editor Adam Sher, 8, was writing an editorial about the mall opening. "I think that's going to be my front page," he confided.

Down the way, "Packs of Facts" manager Brian Rowe, 8, explained that "we patent inventions and we do experiments and package them." His first product, he said, would be a vinegar rocket — a cork that shoots out of a bottle due to a mixture of baking soda and vinegar.

"Tomorrow it has to be ready," Brian said. He had the look and sound of a man worried about the bottom line.

A SMILE — The words, principal and principle, are often confused even when students are reminded that "The principal is my PAL," and principle and its synonym, rule, both end in "le."

Through the years, I have come upon some pretty unique spellings, but none more interesting than in this story by a Marcy second-grader:

"Once there was a girl. She was asleep, and her name was Ashley. When she woke up, she saw her wings. When she went to school, all the kids look at her for 50 seconds. Then all of them were afraid. Even the prince of bull was afraid."

First-graders pledge to finish high school

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — First-graders learning the value of an education signed contracts pledging to finish high school in exchange for $100 they will receive upon graduation in the year 2000.

The 71 students from the Crossley Special Emphasis School donned caps and gowns Wednesday and pledged in writing to earn the right to wear similar garb when they finish high school. Community and business leaders agreed to donate the $100 each will receive upon graduation.

Lawyers Tony Bonilla and Mary Helen Berlanga, a member of the State Board of Education, came up with the idea for contractual agreements, in an effort to stem a high dropout rate.

"While these 6-year-old youngsters may not fully comprehend today's events, their parents do," said Bonilla, chairman-elect of the city's chamber of commerce. "We are hopeful that their parents... will be inspired to work with their youngsters, knowing the community cares about their children."

First-grader Jessica Rice said she didn't understand the significance of Wednesday's ceremony, but said she likes school and expects to graduate from high school.

Nicolas Wade, 7, agreed, and said he enjoys going to school at Crossley, especially during lunch.

Ten children were sponsored by the law firm of Allison and Huerta because the firm wanted to get involved in community affairs, said attorney Albert Huerta.

Huerta said it is time people "quit waiting for Big Brother in Washington to help us."

Crossley principal Raul Prezas said Thursday the predominantly minority, low-income school is excited about the interest from the community, and that he hopes the idea spreads to other schools.

"The electricity and the sharing and just being there was incredible for me," Prezas said. "The difference between dreams and reality is effort."

Crossley is part of the Corpus Christi Independent School District.

Academia

Bradley Grandon of Big Spring is among 15 students at Mountain View College to complete the first year of the intense, two-year professional training program in theatre, music, dance, voice and on-camera technique. The Performing Artists' Musical Theatre Conservatory (PAMTC) is a nationally acclaimed program that accepts only 20 people each year, by audition only.

Bradley has successfully participated in over 30 hours per week of training for the last year. As part of the program, the 15 students will appear as featured performers in the PAMTC 1st Year Showcase, entitled "Adam and Eve: The Battle of the Sexes," on May 4, 5 and 6 in the Mountain View Arena Theatre at 8:15 p.m.

Glasscock team places second

By KATHRYN BURCH
Martin/Glasscock County Extension Agent

The Glasscock County 4-H Consumer Judging Team placed second at the District VI Competition recently in overall individual and first in Giving Reasons.

Members of the team are Jamie Glass, Brooke Eoff, Christy Carlton, and Brande Scott. The coach is Helen Glass. All are from Garden City.

The Consumer Decision-Making Contest is provided to help 4-Hers learn more about making consumer choices. They learned to read labels and to match the purchase to the purpose. They also studied terminology and conditions that related to the items they were judging.

For example, when judging compact disc players, it is important to know there are basically three types — portable models, table models that play one disc at a time and table models with changers.

Classes that were judged during competition included house plants, booster cables, motor oil, jeans, snacks and athletic shoes. A situation for each purchase is given along with four choices. The 4-H'ers must place the items first through fourth choice.

Then the judge names a class and each team member must give reasons of why each item is placed as it is. 4-H'ers get 50 points for placings and 50 points for reasons.

"This is a new 4-H Project area and great one to get involved with."

"Consumers Open Markets" was the theme for National Consumers Week, April 23-29. National Consumers Week saluted the leadership role consumers play in our nation's economy.

According to Virginia H. Knauer, former director of the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs, "The 1989 slogan has significance for many types of organizations, indeed everyone who deals with consumers — businesses, government offices, schools, educators, and consumers themselves."

Businesses must anticipate and meet consumers' needs, she said. Both businesses and governments must recognize that they are not the arbiter of consumer preferences — consumers are, Knauer said.

"But in the end, it is informed consumers who have the power to open — and close — markets," she said.

Weather

A record snow continued to fall on upstate New York early today, while rain showers fell across the middle part of the nation and frost and freeze advisories extended from Michigan to South Carolina.

In western New York, more than 11 inches of snow had fallen by early today in Rochester, and more than 8 inches had blanketed Buffalo, setting snowfall records in both cities for May. The snow was mixing with rain early this morning, leaving only an inch of snow on the ground in both cities by 3 a.m. EDT.

Frost and freeze advisories were in effect today over lower Michigan, Indiana, western Ohio, eastern Kentucky, West Virginia, southwest Virginia and inland areas of the Carolinas.

Record-low temperatures were broken or tied Sunday in more than 30 cities, with temperatures fluctuating widely in some areas. Temperatures at Manhattan, Kan., climbed from a low of 30 degrees on Sunday morning to an unusually warm high of 88 degrees in the afternoon.

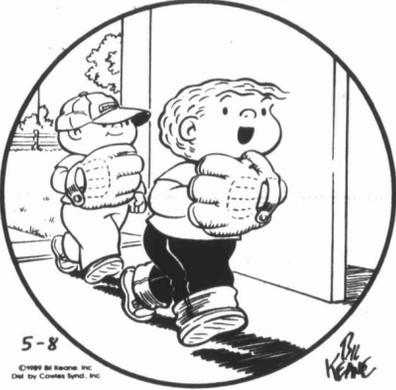

Today's forecast called for showers extending across New England, New York and northern Pennsylvania; scattered showers and thunderstorms across the eastern Plains and much of the Mississippi Valley, with possible severe thunderstorms over the eastern part of Kansas and Oklahoma and most of Missouri and Arkansas; and mostly sunny skies elsewhere.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actresses Candice Bergen and Glenda Jackson, dramatist Sir James Barrie, actor Albert Finney, tennis star Pancho Gonzales, abolitionist John Brown, TV correspondent Mike Wallace, industrialist Henry Kaiser, country singer Hank Snow, golfer John Mahaffey.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can take a giant step forward in a relationship just by showing more patience and affection. Travel and romantic opportunities capture your attention. Keep a close eye on details at work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You find it easier to communicate now. Put your personal interests ahead of business for a change. Group activities help you reach some of your goals. You attract a new and influential audience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A new trend in your personal relationships boosts your spirits. The future looks much brighter. A relatively stress-free period helps you sort out your priorities. Go after what you want!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get things moving forward by making the first move yourself. Business keeps you busy, even beyond quitting time. Work projects must be completed on schedule. If necessary, ask co-workers for assistance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Enjoy your time in the spotlight. It will be good for both you and business. Use your leadership skills to straighten out a family matter. Romance is highlighted. Go for it!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Small purchases will help cement a relationship. Stay in touch with someone who played a special role in your life. Open new lines of communication with others in your workplace. You need allies!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A business partnership needs rejuvenation. You better take the first step. Computers begin to play a more important role in your life -- and in your eventual success. Welcome technological advances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can move forward quickly now that you have eliminated doubts that clouded your decision-making abilities. Explore travel opportunities. Those at a distance will be impressed by what you have to offer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You run the risk of upsetting others with your enthusiasm for far-away sights and sounds. Your energy and experience open many doors for you. Collaborative ventures do great.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You find practical applications for your inspirational ideas. Many people benefit. Postpone travel and concentrate on a special project. Look for ways to help an associate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Think of what you have achieved, not of past disappointments. Clarify a situation before it becomes agonizing for both you and your partner. Check bills for possible errors before paying them.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can correct mistakes if you move quickly. Taking certain risks is necessary to move forward. Good luck will favor you in many ways.
