BIG SPRING — Water will be turned off Monday between the hours of 9 a.m. and noon in the area of 1009 W. Interstate 20.

Water lines in the surrounding areas may also be affected.

College board meets

BIG SPRING — Howard College trustees heard reports from several individuals in connection with the planned construction of dormitory additions during their regular meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Lonnie Gary, Jack Roberts and Cliff Holden, who will be heading the construction project, gave reports about construction plans to the trustees during a work session, HC President Bob Riley said.

"It was just a good interchange between those people and the board," Riley said.

"The two new additions (to the dorms) will be a good addition to the community... I feel it'll enhance our entire operation out here."

Construction on the dorms is tentatively scheduled to begin Aug. 1. Riley said the additions should be ready for occupancy by the beginning of the Fall, 1990 semester.

In other business, the trustees approved the hiring of Leon Johnson, a bonding consultant from Plano, to be the bonding consultant on the construction project. He will assist the college with the sale of revenue bonds which will finance the project, Riley said.

Choking suspect knifed

BIG SPRING — A man who was stabbed while reportedly attempting to choke an attendant at a local bar Tuesday night is reportedly in stable condition at a hospital today.

An arrest warrant for the man, whose name is being kept confidential by police, is likely to be issued after he is released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center, Police Lt. J.D. Carter said today.

The man reportedly went into Lil' Texas Bar, 3801 W. Third St., where he drank some beers and waited for the other patrons to leave. The man then approached the bar and asked for change. When the woman had her back turned toward him the man began trying to choke the woman, Carter said.

The two struggled in another room, during which the woman suffered lacerations and contusions to the right side of her head, just above the temple of the forehead. At some point the woman grabbed a knife and stabbed the man, Carter said.

The woman was treated for minor injuries and released; the man remains in the hospital in an intensive care unit, Carter said.

Jury finds man guilty in local sexual assault

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — An eight-woman, four-man jury found a man guilty in the sexual assault of a local woman after deliberating 22 minutes in 118th District Court today.

Willie Dearing, whose age and place of residence are unknown, could be sentenced from 2-22 years in the Texas Department of Corrections and assessed a $10,000 fine for the Jan. 5 crime.

The jury had not determined punishment as of presstime.

Assistant District Attorney William Dupree said in his closing argument that the law is designed "to protect us from people like him," pointing to Dearing.

Dearing's attorney Don Richard argued there were mitigating circumstances in the case. Richard said that Dearing and the woman had spent time together the day the rape allegedly occurred and that they were friendly, citing the testimony of two people called to the witness stand Wednesday.

In their remarks, made before the jury recessed a second time to consider sentencing in the case, Richard again argued that there were mitigating circumstances. He asked jurors to remember that because Dearing is not from the surrounding area he did not have the chance to have anyone testify on behalf of his personal merits. Richard also reminded jurors Dearing has served six months in county jail.

Dupree argued, "If there's anything we've got here it's a 20-year case. Send him down for 20 years."

A strong sentence would "send a message out to our community... that we're not going to

"If there's anything we've got here it's a 20-year case. Send him down for 20 years" . . . A strong sentence would "send a message out . . . that we're not going to tolerate this in our community." — William Dupree, assistant district attorney tolerate this in our community," he said. Dupree also argued that women are "the weaker sex" and deserve special protection.

Wednesday's session recessed after the district attorney's office presented six witnesses who arrived at the victim's residence shortly after the attack and three witnesses who had seen Dearing the day the attack occurred.

Two of the prosecution's witnesses offered different views of the relationship between a couple believed to have been Dearing and the victim.

Pablo Martinez Jr., who worked at a Texaco station on Birdwell Lane visited by the two, said the relationship seemed cordial.

"The girl seemed to be kind of friendly toward him," Martinez said. The man gave the woman money to go buy wine at a nearby liquor store, he added.

But Betty McCray, part owner of Elmer's Liquor Store, said she remembered a black male and white female entering the store and said it was apparent they were not extremely close. "You could tell they weren't dating," she said. Dearing is black and the victim is white.

McCray said she remembered the man because "he had very cold eyes. . . I notice eyes. Other people notice other things, I just noticed his eyes."

In testimony concerning the medical condition of the victim, Marcy Murray remembered it was necessary to treat the victim's injuries before the medical staff could take the samples it needed for analysis. Murray served as a registered nurse with Scenic Mountain Medical Center at the time.

Asked by Dupree to describe the victim's physical and mental condition at the time, Murray responded, "She'd been beaten to a pulp. . . She was hysterical."

That testimony mirrored statements made by five of the victim's friends and her sister. All six people arrived outside the victim's residence shortly before the police.

The sister said she entered the residence at the same time as the police officers. The victim was on the floor in her bedroom when she was discovered, her sister said.

The sister described the victim as being "severely beaten" and said the woman kept repeating: "I tried, I tried. That's all she would say." The woman said she was the victim of a sexual assault, her sister testified.

Dupree asked if the witness knew whether her sister ever dated black men.

"She never dated black men. . . The family has nothing against black men, but she would not date anyone outside her own race," the sister said.

Aggie oilman runs for governor

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press Writer

MIDLAND — It was only last December that he laughed at the idea.

WILLIAMS

"I may be dumb, but I'm not stupid," he cracked.

Yet little more than a month later, the 57-year-old oilman, entrepreneur and diehard Aggie was probing the possibility of his first political race and on Wednesday made his formal announcement to enter the Republican gubernatorial primary.

Williams is the husband of former Big Spring resident Modesta Simpson Williams.

Now, instead of racing up the Capitol steps on horseback as he once did in a protest against deregulating AT&T, he'd like to make a more dignified entrance as the state's chief executive.

Friends and associates, some of whom had encouraged Williams to enter politics, say the change of heart came after his return from an annual big-game hunting trip to Pakistan right after Christmas.

"When a guy gets as high a profile as Claytie for various things, the state's biggest Aggie and the ClayDesta television commercials, it's not unusual for people to want him to get into politics," said Midlander Ernest Angelo Jr., who as a Republican national committeeman plans to be neutral in the GOP primary race.

Recent polls show not many Texans east of Interstate 35 know Williams, but around his West Texas stomping grounds, he's regarded as the ultimate good ol' boy — a tough, wealthy businessman with down-home charm.

"He's a man who gets things done," said longtime friend and business associate Bob Smith. "He's not afraid to venture out and take a chance."

From his childhood in Fort Stockton, to his first jobs selling insurance and waiting tables, Williams has always been able to stay one step ahead of the latest economic trend or tragedy, and his accumulated wealth will make his campaign a well-financed one.

He has committed more than $3 million of his own money to the campaign effort.

No 'Heartaches by the Number' for this Ray Price

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

He can't sing "For the Good Times," or "Heartaches by the Number" and he didn't open shows for Hank Williams Sr. — but Ray Price of Sand Springs can brag about his ability to play dominoes.

Price and his partner Irene Maxwell won the co-ed domino tournament Tuesday at the Senior Citizens Center.

"He's been bragging for three days that he was gonna win it," said competitor Bill Cauble.

"It ain't bragging if you can do it," Price replied with a laugh.

Price, who is retired from Caprock, said "I've been playing all my life."

A frequent visitor to the center, Price plays the game with his family, and hopes to enter the upcoming Big Spring Domino Tournament.

Although Price plays for fun, he agreed there's big money in the game.

"Some people make a living playing dominoes," Cauble replied.

For their efforts, Price and Maxwell received a trophy with a domino mounted on top.

Because Maxwell has possession of the coveted prize, she promised

Comparing the game to bridge, Gum said "If you're mean — you play for blood and guts."

Looking at her trophy, Gum smiled and said "We (the women) told them (the men) we'd share them — once in a while."

Inside Texas

Tax hike needed?

AUSTIN (AP) — A tax increase is needed in Texas to close the funding gap between rich and poor schools, legislative leaders say.

Sen. Carl Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, and Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, chairwoman of the House Public Education Committee, scheduled a news conference today to formally request that Gov. Bill Clements add the item to the special session agenda.

The gap is the subject of a lawsuit before the Texas Supreme Court.

The governor, who sets the agenda, has only allowed consideration of workers' compensation reform during the special session.

Contraceptive ad airs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Contraceptive ads being aired this week by four San Antonio television stations extol the product's price, but never mention contraception.

The first ad for Lexis Pharmaceuticals Inc. of Austin aired about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday on the CBS affiliate KENS during the "Entertainment Tonight" show and then again about 20 minutes later. KENS broke broadcasting tradition by airing the spot.

The ad in which the manufacturer says the generic oral contraceptive is less expensive than other brands will air later in the week on the NBC affiliate KMOL, the Fox affiliate KRRT and the independent station, KABB.

The 30-second and 60-second spots are scheduled to run through the next five weeks.

Deputies arrested

SAN DIEGO, Texas (AP) — Two Duval County Sheriff's deputies were suspended without pay after their arrests on charges they stopped Mexicans on roadways in the South Texas county and forced them to pay cash fines.

Sheriff Santiago Barrera Jr. said the charges stem from a June 6 incident involving Jose Guadalupe Chavez Gutierrez, a Nuevo Laredo used-car dealer who reported being stopped by a man in a deputy's uniform.

Vet 'grieving' over court flag decision

DALLAS (AP) — A man who was spared a prison term when the U.S. Supreme Court issued a ruling that limited the power of states to outlaw desecration of the American flag predicted that the ruling would spark celebrations.

"We want to turn up the heat on the flag and on the system of imperialism it symbolizes," Gregory "Joey" Johnson, of New York City, a member of the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade, said following Wednesday's controversial ruling.

He predicted the ruling would spark celebrations Friday.

The ruling brought swift, but varied reaction from those who praised and criticized the ruling. Disappointment was expressed by a Korean War veteran who recovered the remains of an American flag spat upon and burned by protesters during the Republican National Convention in 1984.

"A lot of people who served their country are grieving just like I am," said Dan Walker, who came upon the burning flag in front of Dallas City Hall. "Some do not respect the country and the flag, its symbol."

Stan Weinberg, a Dallas lawyer who defended Johnson, said veterans should be encouraged by the ruling because it shows that values fought for in the Bill of Rights are still intact.

Justice William J. Brennan said a Texas law that bans conduct leading to breaches of the peace is unaffected by Wednesday's ruling.

But Brennan said it violates constitutional free-speech guarantees to ban flag burning at political rallies or protests merely because the destruction of the flag offends some people or because the state wishes to preserve the flag as a symbol of national unity.

But Walker said the ruling hasn't changed his opinion.

"I haven't mellowed any," said Walker, a 61-year-old retired engineer from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. "But I am convinced now that they can burn the material, but not burn the spirit. So it is just the body they may kill, but they will not kill the soul."

Walker says he holds no animosity for Johnson, whose sentence of one year in jail and $2,000 fine was thrown out by the justices in a 5-4 vote.

But he described Johnson as "a sick guy."

"He doesn't want my sympathy," he added. Johnson said the ruling means that the "Supreme Court was forced to back off. I think they got in a situation where it was too exposing of their whole professed belief in freedom of expression."

"I've talked to thousands about the issues involved in this case," he said. "Many of them don't think burning the flag is the most effective form of protest, but they were disgusted that the very government that wrapped Ollie North in the flag to commit all sorts of horrendous crime is now going to slap his wrist and was attempting to jail an anti-patriot revolutionary."

State's modest economic growth continues

DALLAS (AP) — Analysts at the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas say the state's economic recovery is continuing at a moderate pace, driven in part by strong retail sales including expansion of auto sales.

"Retail sales show strong year-over-year expansion," the Dallas Fed says in a report prepared for next month's meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee which will determine the central bank's monetary policy.

"Rates of (sales) growth are particularly high in West Texas and on the Mexican border, but increases elsewhere are the rule, rather than the exception," the report, known as the Beige Book, says.

The report singled out Houston for retail sales growth of between 8 percent and 10 percent from the same time last year.

Texas also is bucking the trend in car sales, which are slumping nationally. In Houston, for example, car sales are up 9 percent from last year and dealers there expect the trend to continue. Dallas dealers told Fed analysts they believe the sales growth would have occurred even without recent rebate and other incentive programs.

But according to the New Car Dealers Association, new car sales

Students protest reception

HOUSTON (AP) — Local Chinese students screamed shouts of protests at guests to a farewell reception to the Chinese consul and urged them not to attend as a demonstration of outrage over the Tiananmen Square massacre.

"We just want to show our anger to the whole world and let them know what the Chinese government has done," said Mayor Kathy Whitmire, who attended the reception but arrived late after returning to Houston from the U.S. Conference of Mayors in South Carolina.

Ms. You, like many of the other 150 students protesting at the consulate's building near downtown Wednesday evening, carried signs reading "No more executions" and "Don't eat with butchers, don't deal with animals."

They also shouted "Don't go" and "Shame" as guests arrived. "I'm here to tell them that I'm outraged by what the Chinese government has done," said Mayor Kathy Whitmire, who attended the reception but arrived late after returning to Houston from the U.S. Conference of Mayors in South Carolina.

Despite their angry shouts, protestors remained behind yellow police tape that kept them several feet from the consul. About a dozen Houston police were stationed outside the reception.

The students mailed about 121 letters over the weekend to civic leaders and foreign consuls asking them not to attend the party for Gen. Ni Yaoli, said Fan Lu, a research associate at Rice University.

Ni is returning to China after completing his three-year term in Houston as consul general.

"We respectfully urge you not to go, as a gesture of personal protest against the recent heinous crime against humanity committed by the 'government' of the People's Republic," the letter said.

Lu said he asked those attending to tell Ni "that the current regime has lost the support of the people and that it has no legitimacy in the eyes of the world."

The letter also asked them to express disapproval of the recent attack on pro-democracy students and other citizens in Beijing, Lu said. Students also are upset about not being able to get Ni to hold a meeting with them.

Accumulation of red ink slowing in '89

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's budget deficit is mounting at a slower pace this year than it did in fiscal 1988, due to stronger federal income tax collections so far in 1989.

For the first eight months of the 1989 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, the budget deficit totaled $113.32 billion, 11.8 percent less than the $128.43 billion shortfall counted at the same time last year, the Treasury Department reported Wednesday.

Analysts say the figures suggest this year's shortfall is likely to be undershot both the Bush administration's projection for a $163.3 billion deficit and the Congressional Budget Office's estimate of $159 billion.

For all of last fiscal year, the deficit totaled $155.1 billion.

The Treasury report showed the government posted a $25.47 billion budget deficit last month, 12.8 percent more red ink than in May 1988 and higher than most analysts had expected.

The May shortfall followed a record surplus of $40.57 billion in April, when government coffers were fattened by an unusually large surge in income tax payments.

Last month, revenues were up 19.1 percent from May 1988 to $71.12 billion, while spending was up 17.4 percent from a year earlier to $96.58 billion.

Analysts say revenues this year have been running ahead of projections due to strong personal income tax collections generated in the wake of the 1986 overhaul of the tax code.

"Even though we had slightly wider red ink in May, it does appear as if the budget for the entire year will show visible improvement over last year," said economist William V. Sullivan of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Sullivan estimated the fiscal 1989 deficit will total $130 billion to $135 billion, and said most of the improvement comes from the bulge in personal income tax receipts in April. He said the surge in tax payments occurred because people shifted some of their income from 1987 to 1988 when the top tax rate dropped.

Economist Samuel Kahan of Kleinwort Benson Government Securities Inc. in Chicago said that although May's deficit was higher than expected, "it looks like the trend in the deficit is working its way down slowly."

Kahan estimated the 1989 deficit would be around $135 billion to $145 billion.

As usual, the government's largest spending category last month was the military. Defense spending in May totaled $24.33 billion and reached $192.96 billion for the first eight months of the fiscal year. That was up 2.3 percent from the same point a year earlier.

Other large spending categories were:

- Social Security: $19.15 billion in May and $147.53 billion so far in fiscal 1989, up 5.8 percent from a year earlier.
- Other programs in the Department of Health and Human Services: $15.22 billion in May and $112.34 billion so far in fiscal 1989, up 6.9 percent from a year earlier.
- Interest payments on the national debt: $20.06 billion in May and $153.67 billion so far in 1989.

Rodeo parade

The 56th annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo officially began Wednesday afternoon, as the rodeo parade snaked its way through downtown Big Spring. As in other parades, candy was tossed onto the streets for the kids to scramble for the tasty treats in the top photo. Despite the hot weather, adults and youths alike lined the streets to watch and wave in the bottom left photo. Three parade participants clown around as they ride down Scurry Street in the bottom right photo. The rodeo will continue this evening, beginning at 8:30 p.m. in the Rodeo Bowl.

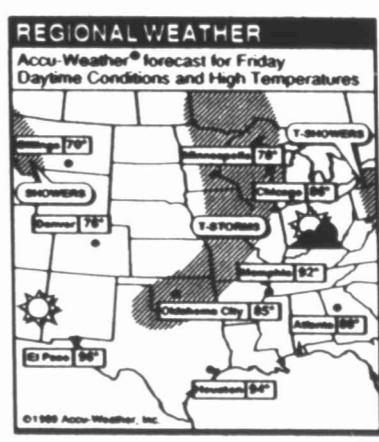

Weather

Thunderstorms covered much of the Plains early today. Rain extended from southeast Minnesota across western Iowa, eastern Nebraska, Kansas, western Oklahoma and the Oklahoma and Texas panhandles. Storms dropped about an inch of rain at Omaha, Neb., and small hail at Great Bend, Kan.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms in the upper Mississippi Valley and lower Missouri Valley, the northern and central Plains, Oklahoma, the Texas Panhandle and eastern New Mexico. Showers also were forecast for the northern Rockies. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast during the afternoon and evening from the upper Ohio Valley through the Appalachians and central Gulf Coast to the middle and southern Atlantic Coast.

Highs were expected to be in the 70s and 80s across much of the nation; in the 60s from the northern Rockies through the upper and middle Missouri Valley into western and northern Minnesota; in the 90s across much of Florida, from the lower Mississippi Valley through Texas.

the group of people who went to the home, but said he only had a glimpse of the victim before she was taken to the hospital.

Kirby reported he had talked with the victim prior to the attack and that she was very agitated because a "strange man was in her house and he wouldn't leave." Kirby said he called friends and told them about the incident, who in turn called the victim's sister. She called the police, Kirby said.

Asked by Richard why Kirby originally called the home of the victim, Kirby said he had been asked to call her by a friend. Pressed by Richard for the reason for the call, Kirby replied, "I can't remember."

"You called for some reason and you don't even remember why?" Richard asked.

"Yes," Kirby answered.

Ricardo Salcedo, who arrived with the group, said he heard "a woman screaming inside the house" when he arrived. Salcedo said he obtained permission from police officers at the scene to jump a fence and open the back door, which was unlocked. The house was in a noticeable state of disarray, he said.

Asked by Dupree for a description, Salcedo said he noticed blood stains in the kitchen and that a chair and telephone had been knocked down. Dupree later argued it was evident a struggle had taken place at the scene.

Police officer John Stowers said he stopped Dearing near Birdwell Lane sometime after 9 p.m., shortly after the incident occurred, because Dearing ran a stop sign in crossing the intersection.

Stowers said he was in the process of arresting Dearing for driving while intoxicated because he failed a sobriety test. A police radio

Picket wounded as wildcat strike continues

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — A picket was shot and slightly wounded at a non-union coal mine today, and some of the 42,000 miners off the job in 10 states say they were threatened with violence if they returned to work under court order.

Judges in at least four states have ordered the miners back to work. Today was the 10th day of wildcat walkouts in support of 1,900 miners on strike against Pittston Coal Group Inc. since April 5.

Jamie Blankenship, 18, the son of a disabled miner, was grazed in the head as he picketed at Hampden Coal Co., a strike-closed mine in West Virginia. Blankenship, who is not a miner, was treated at a hospital and released.

Blankenship was believed to be the first person wounded by gunfire since the unauthorized walkouts began. Previously, others had been hurt by rocks.

State Police said no arrests were made. Officials at Hampden Coal did not immediately return calls.

A UMW official said Wednesday that he sees no quick end to the unauthorized walkouts, citing millions of dollars in fines that courts have levied against the union.

"Our members feel like they're fighting for our whole organization," said Howard Green, a UMW international executive board member from Charleston. "They feel the courts are being used as a means for destroying our organization."

Green said miners have shown up for work but have encountered pickets and refused to cross the line.

"I've been warned by pickets, 'We'll find out where you live,'" miner Ted Sanson said. "The judge didn't understand this part — the fear. Are those marshals going to be there when I get off work?"

and gas business with $2,000 savings and built a multi-million dollar empire that reached its peak in the early 1980s. He then branched out into real estate and banking under the name ClayDesta — a combination of his name and wife Modesta's — and sold off much of his energy holdings before the oil crash.

Today his oil and gas exploration company operates over 350,000 acres of leases.

Until he sold it in 1987, Williams' Clajon Gas Co. was the largest individually owned natural gas company in the state.

"When the time came, I said, 'Claytie, you're not such a big deal. You better retrench, consolidate, sell,'" he has said, stressing that submerging his ego saved him from the ruin which befell many oilmen in the mid-80s.

Meanwhile, he invested in agribusiness. He currently operates an alfalfa farm and cattle ranches encompassing 482,000 acres in Wyoming and Alpine, which features a swimming pool shaped like an Aggie boot. High tech also lured Williams, and he founded ClayDesta Communications Inc., which eventually became the largest Texas-based telephone company. The sale of the company was completed to Atlanta-based Advanced Telecommunications Corp. earlier this year for $43 million in cash and stock.

Williams starred in a series of commercials for the company, shot at his Alpine ranch, Happy Cove, and showing him riding up to the camera on horseback to deliver ClayDesta's message.

The father of five children, Williams has two daughters from a previous marriage, and he and the former Modesta Simpson have two sons, ages 19 and 15, and a 13-year-old daughter.

He met his wife while guzzling beer and singing Mexican ballads one night in a Midland restaurant.

"I love to drink beer and sing mariachi songs ... and she picked me up the first night we met," he once joked.

Williams is known for throwing late-night parties and lavish black-tie cattle sales, helping round up cattle with his ranch cowboys and staging zany antics, even at serious occasions.

Last year, when leaders of the energy industry met to discuss their problems in grave tones, he burst in on a hospital stretcher wearing a hospital gown and cowboy boots, was dumped in front of the Texas Railroad Commissioners, then carted away by a comely pair of nurses.

Williams shows his passion for his alma mater by flying Aggie flags from some buildings and drilling rigs. He also supports the school with dollars, bankrolling a $2.5 million student center bearing his name, and teaches an entrepreneurship course for which he won a teaching award.

His only previous attempt at elective office, for president of the Fort Stockton Jaycees, was a failure that Williams jokes humbled him for life.

But Williams has said small failures never daunt him from looking for opportunities.

"It's like being an old hunting dog looking for birds," he says.

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Department reported the following incidents:

- A Snyder man with the West Texas Microwave Company reported that sometime between the night of June 20 and the early morning hours of June 21 someone had shot a hole in each of three air conditioners, valued at $950 apiece.
- Ms. James Ward, no age available, PO Box 324, was released on a $1,100 surety bond.
- Susanna Alvarez, 26, 4107 W. Hwy 80, was released on $1,500 bond after being arrested on a charge of theft over $200.

EPA rules to start tracking waste

The upper Atlantic Coast is a long way from the Gulf of Mexico, but Texas and Louisiana beachgoers should take note: Medical waste is beginning to wash ashore for the third year in a row.

This summer, however, a new procedure for tracking those wastes will be in effect. The Environmental Protection Agency is enforcing a two-year program to track and manage the disposal of such waste.

Seven jurisdictions, including Louisiana, will be involved in a program in which the EPA will require doctors, dentists, veterinarians, hospitals, medical laboratories and clinics to keep detailed records that track a waste product from origin to disposal; others involved with handling the product also must sign documents used in the tracking.

The new procedure likely won't make much of a dent in the medical waste problem, according to the EPA, which estimates that only 10 percent of the waste that floated ashore this past summer came from sources covered by the new regulations. Much of the rest came from illegal drugs and from outpatients who take drugs at home, says the EPA.

To their credit, states covered by the new regulations have chosen to participate rather than opt out, which they could have done under an escape clause written into the law.

Settling these problems a little at a time is far better than letting them fester.

Battle of wills over wage bill

The proposed increase in the minimum wage is caught up in a battle of wills, a political fight, an economic dispute and — coming last in line in typical Washington fashion — the real needs of those on the lowest rung of the wage ladder.

President Bush, his veto upheld, has the best political position and the preferable minimum wage proposal. When the powers-that-be get around to a compromise, it should look a lot like what Bush proposes.

The president announced early on his intention to veto any minimum wage increase that boosted the hourly wage to the $4.55 in 1991. Bush said that quick a rise would cost as many as 400,000 jobs and lessen opportunity for entry-level jobs. This turned into a battle of wills, and Congress passed the bill anyway. Bush, on a trip, didn't even wait to get back on the ground — he vetoed the bill in Air Force One.

The minimum wage has been a political dispute for decades. The Democrats are using the bill to forward their claim that Bush favors the rich. Bush says he is protecting jobs. Economists differ only on how many jobs a minimum wage increase will eliminate, but Bush is undoubtedly right that many thousands would be off the payroll.

The Earned Income Tax Credit proposal being discussed has merit. It would cut taxes for low-income households and could produce cash payments. There is a lot of room for compromise in the various figures.

Somewhere in here the needs of the low-income worker need to be taken into consideration. Eliminating 400,000 jobs is not the way to help. Bush's proposal would be of some benefit while doing the least harm.

Bureaucracy needs no more fuel

The solution to bloated government is to make it more bloated, or so insists Paul Volcker, the ex-chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Volcker recently outlined his views in an interview for the GAO Journal, a magazine for government bureaucrats. . . . Notes Volcker: "Senior civil servants are paid, in real terms, about 40 percent less than in 1969."

But that was just after a big pay boost during an era of low inflation.

One reason top Washington bureaucrats want more money is that Washington, D.C., has high living costs. But government itself has caused the problem by growing so huge, forcing up property prices. The solution is not to give bureaucrats more money, which would only pour gasoline on the inflation fire, but to cut government down to size.

Even Volcker admits that what's needed is "more effort put into recruitment, more flexibility in promotion and firing, more decentralization, and improved educational training programs. Right now, there's too little being done in these areas; the bureaucracy is choking on bureaucracy."

Yes. And to save the patient we need to apply the Heimlich maneuver of privatization.

Dropout license law good idea

Texas lawmakers in the just-concluded session of the Legislature took drastic action. With virtually no opposition being registered, they wrote into law a requirement that those under 18 must attend school in order to qualify for a driver's license.

Diabolical? Machiavellian? You bet — but the beauty of the thing is that it just might work. West Virginia, also afflicted with a soaring dropout rate, passed such a law last year, and while it's too early to draw any definite conclusions, the experiment has promise.

The reason, of course, is that it hits the teen-ager right where he/she lives: "When you're 16 years old, being able to drive is one of the most important things in your life," said Rep. Bill Hammond, R-Dallas, author of the bill.

Civil libertarians will fume that this represents an unconscionable infringement on individual liberties, and there will doubtless be court challenges — but given the gravity of the problem, there's something to be said for taking the hard line. A healthy whack with that two-by-four just could jar some perspectives into sharper focus.

Cold fusion turning to confusion

As of now, there is only one way for the great mass of us to view cold fusion. So far, to the best of our ability to determine these things, it hasn't cost us anything.

Of course, it's not quite the same for the scientists involved. . . . Pity Milton Fleischmann and Stanley Pons, the University of Utah electro-chemists whose "discovery" of cold fusion was dismissed last week by Britain's Harwell Laboratory, where extensive efforts at reproducing cold fusion have failed.

David Williams, head of Harwell Laboratory, summed up these men and their work by saying, "When brilliant people have mad ideas, it can come down on them like a ton of bricks."

There are still phenomena associated with the Fleischmann/Pons experiment which scientists cannot explain. It could still turn out that Fleischmann and Pons had their fingers on a piece of something, even if science cannot yet determine exactly what they had.

In the meantime, the rest of us must count ourselves lucky that such brilliant people are working so hard to make life so much easier for us. There was never a law that said Fleischmann and Pons couldn't have taken their powerful intellects and gone into the junk bond business instead.

We hope scientists Fleischmann and Pons will pick themselves up, dust themselves off . . . and head right back to their beakers. We're glad there are some brilliant people around with ideas.

Agents want just the fax

By ART BUCHWALD

Washington had a super storm last week — its worst in history. It caused tree damage, house damage and electrical outages that only family legends are made of.

Once the storm blew out of town, the insurance adjusters blew in, and the serious storms between homeowners and companies began.

Art Buchwald

I was over at Roy and Martha Thurston's place helping them clean up their yard when the man from Mutual of Deadwood Insurance Company arrived to discuss the Thurstons' claim.

He carried a beeper, a portable telephone and a fax machine. "The office likes me to keep in touch so that I don't give away the store," he chuckled. "So tell me, how are you trying to screw us?"

Roy was incensed. "We're not trying to screw you. All we want is compensation for the damage caused by this terrible storm."

"How can you be so certain that the damage was the result of a storm?" the adjuster asked. "It could easily have been caused by God."

"What's the difference?" Martha Thurston wanted to know.

"God moves in mysterious ways, but our company doesn't cover Him. If it's His fault, you have a fiddler's chance of us paying the bill."

"It couldn't have been caused by God," Roy said. "God would never dare hurt Chevy Chase."

"Can we just get down to specifics?" the adjuster pleaded.

"Okay. That tree up there was knocked over by the wind and crashed into my roof, leaving a 10-foot hole over the master bedroom."

"What kind of tree was it?"

"It was a 300-year-old oak."

The man hit the button on his fax machine. After reading the fax message, he turned to "The Thurstons, "Your policy doesn't cover damage from oak trees. Now, if a Japanese bonsai tree had hit the roof, you would be in fat city."

"Why didn't someone tell me that when I bought the policy?"

"Any grade school kid knows that. Do you have some structural damage from a falling Christmas tree?"

"Not that I know of."

"Too bad, because if you did, we'd cut it up and cart it away free of charge," he informed them.

Thurston took the adjuster to the back of the house. "The wind blew my balcony away. You can see it hanging by one strut."

"I have only your word that it was the wind. How do I know that beavers didn't knock down the balcony?"

"We don't have any beavers in this neighborhood," Thurston protested.

"That's what everybody says," the insurance adjuster added. "Then as soon as I leave, the beavers come out and start chewing on every piece of wood around here."

"Aren't you going to pay for any of this?"

"I'm trying to find something. What happened to the glass door leading out to the patio?"

"A garden umbrella went flying through it on the way to our living room."

"Was it green or striped?"

"A green one."

"Too bad. We're only covering striped umbrellas this summer," the adjuster said.

"Well, that's it. You have been most helpful," Martha mumbled.

The adjuster told the Thurstons, "I'd like to do more, but how can I when it's all God's fault?"

Don't forget the elder statesmen

By DAVID HAWKINGS

WASHINGTON — While there is much talk these days about the historic passage of congressional power to a new generation, it risks obscuring the virtues of Capitol Hill's elder statesmen.

Richard A. Gephardt of St. Louis, the new Democratic Majority Leader, and William H. Gray 3d of Philadelphia, the new whip, both were born in the year the United States entered World War II.

This is important news both for their party and the nation for two reasons: For the first time Congress will be run largely by leaders with first-hand expertise in the concerns of the baby boom generation, and at the same time they are adept at communicating on television.

But with their relative youth also comes relative inexperience; Gephardt and Gray have a combined House tenure of just 23 years.

So even this baby boomer is comforted that their boss is a man of experience. Speaker Tom Foley arrived in 1965 to represent Washington State in Washington, D.C., so he is well-suited for bridging the gap between the old guard and the baby boomers.

The members of the old guard have tolled in the House for more than a generation, more often than not with little national notice.

They are the ones who determined, for many different reasons, that their government careers would be made in the House of Representatives — and not in the White House, the Senate or a govern-

Capitol report

Elected to Congress the same year Gephardt and Gray were born, Rep. Jamie Whitten of Mississippi now gets noticed because he's first in seniority by eight years. But he deserves attention for his perseverance on behalf of rural America as chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Living proof that you can be squeaky clean and still succeed in Congress is Rep. William H. Natcher of Kentucky. Since arriving in 1963, he has never taken a campaign contribution, made a speech for an honorarium or missed a House vote. (Last week, he cast his 16,000th in a row.) His work as No. 2 on Appropriations is a reminder why members of Congress traditionally refer to each other as "gentleman."

But the most unlikely elder statesmen of all these days is perhaps Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez of Texas, elevated partially by circumstance this year to chairmanship of the Banking Committee just as the House began crafting the savings and loan bailout. Because he had cast himself as a populist and iconoclast for most of his 28 years in Congress, and because thrifts in his home state account for more than half the industry's insolvency, expectations were low.

But Gonzalez proved the skeptics wrong, moving along this year's most important legislation with fairness, temperance and minimal bombast. Late in his career, he has provided an example of just what kind of leadership newcomers like Gray and Gephardt might try to emulate.

Beyond the realm

Let's treat teens right

By STEVE REAGAN

The most infuriating thing about editors, I have learned, is that they are right so often.

In my short career as a newshound type, I have on occasion disagreed with my boss. Sometimes, I was right, and convinced him of the brilliance of my logic.

More often than not, however, I have walked from his office a humbler, yet wiser, person — in other words, I lost.

Such was the case recently when we were discussing a law that was passed by the this year's state legislature that bans dropouts from obtaining a driver's license before their 18th birthday.

I took the position that such legislation is a good idea. One only has to look at the staggering number of students leaving school before graduation to realize that something must be done about the problem.

And the law, though admittedly harsh, sounded like a good idea. "This will hit (the dropouts) where they live," one legislator said.

There is a certain logic to that statement. Teenagers enjoy driving a car only slightly less than breathing and eating. Threatening them with the loss of their driver's license, therefore, seemed like an ideal incentive for them to stay in school.

The only mistake I made was espousing this view to my editor. He looked at me, shook his head as if trying to explain physics to a five-year-old and told me that the law — as he so eloquently put it — was "stupid."

He stated several reasons for his opinion, but the one that made the greatest sense was this: Teenagers can legally drop out of school at age 16, so why penalize them for exercising their legal rights by denying them the right to operate a car?

I have to admit that he had me there.

To allow youngsters to drop out at 16, and then saying they can't have a license until they're 18 sends a confusing message to our teenagers.

On one hand, we're telling them that if they don't want to go to school after they're 16, that's fine. But, on the other hand, we're telling them that if they choose that course of action, they'll be punished.

I don't know about you, but I surely wouldn't want to be treated like that.

If the legislature is serious about the dropout crisis, why don't they simply raise the age limit to 18? That would make tons more sense than the current double standard.

There have been too many laws in that vein in recent years.

Eighteen-year-olds are old enough to go fight and die for their country, but they can't legally buy a beer; this country, which supposedly values freedom of speech and expression, tells high school newspaper editors that they stand the possibility of having their articles censored or cut if the principal sees fit.

It's about time we started treating teen-agers more like young adults — and stop confusing them with double standards.

Congress eyes oil spill cleanup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Irrate members of Congress are moving to ensure the Exxon Corp. pays the full cost of cleaning up the Alaska oil spill.

Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., pleaded Wednesday for fellow senators to support a law that would deny Exxon a tax writeoff for expenses of cleaning up the spill, the largest in the nation's history.

"I do not want to tell my constituents that the American people owe Exxon, the biggest polluter in history, millions of dollars in a tax rebate in return for destroying the environment and raising prices at the gas pumps," Reid told the Senate Finance Committee.

Reid is chief sponsor of a bill that would prohibit Exxon from deducting costs of cleaning up the spill unless the federal government certified the cleanup meets standards of the Clean Water Act or other federal laws.

In the House, Rep. Robert G. Torricelli, D-N.J., said Wednesday he and 61 congressional colleagues have asked the federal government to sue Exxon and the Alyeska Pipeline Service for the cost of environmental damage to Prince William Sound and the surrounding Alaskan wilderness.

Moderate quake hits California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A moderate earthquake was felt in a wide area of Northern California late Wednesday afternoon, but there were no reports of damages or injuries.

The tremor had a magnitude estimated at 4.2 on the Richter scale by the University of California at Berkeley Seismographic Stations. Its epicenter was in Pittsburg, about 40 miles northeast of San Francisco.

knocked off of shelves, but that's about all that's going to happen," said Berkeley seismologist Robert Uhrhammer.

In northern Utah, a small quake measuring 3.7 on the Richter scale shook the community of Tremonton near the Idaho border Wednesday, but no property damage or injuries were reported.

Telephone interviews indicated the California quake was felt in San Francisco north to Vacaville and as far east as Stockton.

Video stores refuse to stock film

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — It triggered riots and arrests, lawsuits and lectures. Several countries banned it.

Now, the nation's largest video-store chain has decided against stocking "The Last Temptation of Christ" at its 343 company-owned outlets.

"It's certainly unusual, but it was a corporate decision considering all that went on with the film," said Wally Knief, spokesman for Fort Lauderdale-based Blockbuster Video stores.

Nearly 80 percent of its 387 franchise locations also have indicated they won't carry the video, said Knief.

Blockbuster does not carry all kinds of films, such as pornography.

But the ban of "The Last Temptation of Christ" is its first such action against a major studio release, Knief said.

Slain civil rights workers honored

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP) — Three young civil rights workers killed 25 years ago were martyrs who sacrificed their lives for a better America, participants in a memorial service said.

Veteran civil rights activists joined state officials to pay tribute Wednesday to the work of James Chaney, Andrew Goodman and Michael Schwerner during a commemoration of their deaths on June 21, 1964.

Mississippi Secretary of State Dick Molpus, a Philadelphia native who was 14 at the time of the slayings, offered an apology.

"We deeply regret what happened here 25 years ago," Molpus said. "We wish we could undo it. Every decent person in Philadelphia and Neshoba County feels that way."

The observance, in front of the Mount Zion Methodist Church, where Chaney, Goodman and Schwerner had been conducting a black voter registration meeting the night they were killed, showed that "Mississippi and America are far different places than they were 25 years ago," Gov. Ray Mabus said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, turning thumbs down on the first proposed tax increase of the year, is using a deficit-reduction bill to increase spending for social programs.

The package includes higher spending for welfare and children's services and authority for Social Security recipients to earn $360 more next year and $240 more in 1991 before losing a portion of their benefits.

taxes as well.

Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., acting chairman of the subcommittee that proposed the increase, said he will not give up the fight for the boost and an attached improvement in jobless benefits. He told reporters the committee was simply signaling opposition to any kind of tax increase at this point.

The committee voted to raise by $600 over two years the annual amount Social Security recipients may earn without losing part of their benefits. The new limits: $9,720 in 1990 and $10,440 the following year.

In a second day of work on a catchall package Wednesday, the committee rejected a recommendation from its human resources subcommittee by defeating a proposed increase in the employers' tax that finances unemployment compensation. The vote in a closed-door session was 18-17 against the increase, with Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the committee, voting on the losing side.

For each $3 earned above those levels, the beneficiary would lose $1 of Social Security.

The Bush administration had expressed solid opposition to the tax increase, which would have cost employers $10.6 billion over five years at the federal level and automatically boosted their state

The bill does not affect the lower earnings limit that applies to retirees 62, 63 or 64. That ceiling will rise under current law from $6,480 this year to $6,840 next year.

People 70 and older also would be unaffected; they could continue to earn an unlimited amount without losing any pension benefit.

The committee also agreed to raise a special Social Security minimum benefit for retirees who worked long years at low wages.

Chinese execute more protesters

BEIJING (AP) — China today executed seven more anti-government protesters, saying they had set fire to army trucks, stolen army goods or assaulted soldiers when the military crushed the pro-democracy movement in Beijing.

The Beijing executions, ignoring international pleas for clemency, came a day after three men were executed in Shanghai for setting fire to a train June 6 after it ran through a barricade, striking and killing six protesters.

In addition, 17 people were executed in Jinan on Wednesday, a reporter said in an unconfirmed report from the northeastern provincial capital.

The official Xinhua News Agency gave no details of today's executions other than to say a court had rejected appeals of the seven, who were convicted Saturday. Most executions in China are with a bullet to the back of the head.

The Shanghai executions were the first announced for crimes allegedly committed during nationwide protests against the army's June 3-4 killing of hundreds of unarmed civilians in Beijing.

gathered at Myenigon Circle north of downtown Rangoon to give "agitating speeches," chant slogans and lay bouquets.

The demonstration Wednesday appeared to be one of the most serious outbreaks of anti-government agitation in Burma since last September, when troops crushed a pro-democracy uprising.

Witnesses said earlier that the demonstrators were honoring pro-democracy protesters killed by government forces at the spot on June 21, 1988.

Aung San Suu Kyi, who heads the National League for Democracy, was released after being "warned not to create disturbances," the radio said. The League had organized the rally.

Korean police arrest radicals

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Riot police stormed a university campus before dawn today and arrested 44 radical students who have led violent anti-government protests, press reports said.

radical students, Yonhap said. The Yongnam students had used about 6,700 firebombs in four months of protests, leaving about 200 police injured, it said.

About 800 riot police raided Yongnam University in the southern city of Taegu, arrested the students and seized hundreds of firebombs and steel bars, Yonhap, the South Korean news agency, said.

No injuries were reported today. Yonhap said police planned to bring charges against all students involved in violent protests.

Two people were hospitalized with gunshot wounds after the unrest in the Kazakhstan town, Novy Uzen, spread Wednesday to settlements 40 miles away, the Communist Party newspaper said.

Most of the violence in Novy Uzen has been aimed at settlers from the Caucasus Mountains region, who make up more than a third of the town's population.

Dehydration kills 14 Mexican babies

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Fourteen babies have died of dehydration since the beginning of May in a hospital that can't afford air conditioning in its pediatric ward.

the sunbaked city. Red Cross officials said they are treating about 24 cases of dehydration a day and the Social Security Hospital reported it has admitted 137 patients suffering from heat-related illnesses since the beginning of May.

Little relief is in sight from a heat wave that began last week and has sent many looking for medical help. Patients at Juarez General Hospital sometimes find conditions inside almost as unbearable as outside.

Most cases of infant dehydration are coupled with severe diarrhea, a leading cause of infant death in the Third World.

On Wednesday, more than a dozen infants being treated for dehydration endured the heat of the non-air conditioned, two-room pediatric ward as the temperature outside climbed to 105 degrees.

Temperatures have topped 100 degrees daily since late last week, and a high of 100 was expected today. Because the desert skies remain cloudless and humidity drops to the single digits or teens during daytime, there is nothing in the air to diffuse the sun's oppressive rays.

"It's unforgivable to have our children without air conditioning," hospital director Victor Manuel Jurado said as he wiped sweat off the forehead of a baby. "Many times, they get worse when they get here."

Jurado said parents often make the mistake of waiting too long to take their children to the hospital. "People wait until the child is agonizing before bringing him here," the doctor said. "They come to us in serious condition, and many times there is little we can do."

Jurado said the staff Juarez General, where the 14 infants have died, remains committed, but can do little about the heat because the hospital simply can't afford air conditioning.

Officials in El Paso and Juarez are urging people to remain indoors from noon to 5 p.m. and drink lots of nonalcoholic beverages.

People have been reporting heat-related medical problems all over

Member shares chapter history

The Chapter of American Gold Star Mothers met recently at the home of Odell Turner.

Charter member Mrs. Ollie Christensen presented a display of history books and pictures of the organizing of the local chapter in May 1950.

The pictures included Mrs. Lucille Franklin Jacobs, who was the first chapter president, with the 10 charter members and Mayor G.W. Dabney and Chaplain C.O. Hitt.

Hitt, who served as chaplain at the Veterans Administration Medical Center, also served as chaplain for the Chapter Installation Service.

Martha Moody read an article on the origin of the United States, Stars and Stripes, and the Gold Star Mother Banner.

The Gold Star Mother Banner is a gold star on a background of white. The American Gold Star

Mother organization was founded May 1928 with 17,000 members and maintains National Headquarters in Washington, D.C. It is an organization of mothers whose sons and daughters served and died in the Armed Forces in World War I, World War II, the Korean Conflict, Vietnam or other strategic areas, or died as a result of injuries or illness received in such services.

Notes of thanks were read for monetary gifts to the Social Services Fund at Marlin Veteran Hospital and the Sam Rayburn Veteran Medical Center in Bonham.

Turner, who also serves as hospital chairman, reported that coffee and cake were served at the VA Hospital in May. She was assisted by Lora Bell Tom and Edna Peacock.

The Sept. 14 meeting will be at the home of Kathryn Thomas.

Cobean discusses salaries

The Richard Hubbell Chapter of the 17th Century met Tuesday for lunch and a business meeting at the A.A. Kelly home, with Mrs. Wm. Riley, president, presiding.

Mrs. John Cobean shared a "Congressional Fact Sheet" and letter from Lynn Oates, chairman of Texas for Financial Responsibility, which noted the salaries of Congressmen and representatives and many financial benefits they are allowed to retain.

Kelly reported on her ancestor, Peter Montague and his wife Mary

Minor, widow of Samuel Jordan, a wealthy land owner, who died in 1619.

Peter was the eighth generation from Edwins Montague, lord chief justice of England who was the executor of the will of King Henry 8th. Edward's motto was "You can displace me, you cannot change me". Each generation thereafter used this motto including Peter Montague.

The next meeting will be October 2.

Volunteers walk for donations

The first "Neighbor to Neighbor Walk," sponsored by the local chapter of the American Heart Association, was "quite a success," said Gloria Bain, event chairperson.

The door-to-door campaign, conducted June 15, was the efforts of 50 volunteers who walked for two hours, collecting approximately $1,800, Bain said.

All proceeds will benefit the organization, she said.

"This was our first walk in Big Spring," Bain said. "We wanted to see if it would work — and it did," she explained.

As well as collecting money, volunteers handed out literature on cholesterol and heart disease.

The group met at 5:30 p.m. at St. Mary's Episcopal Church to watch a video and ate sandwiches and drinks before beginning their walk.

Because of the short length of time, Bain said "The walk was a success. The amount of money collected was quite a shock because of the two-hour campaign."

Local merchants also donated money and refreshments.

"The regional director in Midland was quite pleased, please, we may do it again next year.

Record attendance by out-of-town members

The 12th Annual Cannibal Draw Reunion, conducted June 10 at La Posada Restaurant, was a "tremendous success," said Mack Underwood, reunion organizer.

Much of the event's success was credited to the attendance of out-of-town members, Underwood explained.

"The old record of 24 was literally shattered this year when 42 of the 110 members present came from throughout Texas to take part in the festivities," Underwood said.

Out-of-town members who attended are:

Don Thomas, Friendswood; Anne Anderson, Borger; Henry Fisherman, Houston; Sam and Lily (Fisherman) Bloom; Allen and Adelle Stripling, Dallas; Darrell and Emma Ruth (Stripling)

Webb; Joy Stripling, John and Marjorie Stripling, Buster and Lillie Mae (Petty) Bray, and Ethyle (Hooser) Schaad, all of Ft. Worth.

Also, Bob, Karen, Steve and Stacy Stripling, G.E. (Pappy) and Tish Malone, and Louise (Flowers) Underwood, Lubbock; Irene Mixon, Granbury; L.V. Morgan, May; Cecil Neel, Horseshoe Bay; John Childers, Joshua; Finis and Mayme Bugg, Norma Lee, and Joe Bugg, all of Odessa; James and May Ripps, Irving; Amy Dixon and George Bugg, Miles.

And, Lorita (Angel) McReynolds, Earl and Lorene Robinson, and Elton and Lorraine (Robinson) Smith, all from Midland; and Jess, Obera and Tom Angel, Stanton.

Couple finds interruptions hard to swallow

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I both work, and during the dinner hour we have our first opportunity of the day to sit and talk.

We have a very dear friend who is semi-retired and works at home and lives near us. While we enjoy our friend's company, we find it not so enjoyable when our friend arrives during dinner, pulls up a chair and chats about anything and everything with no thought whatsoever as to whether or not our dinner or evening plans have been interrupted by her visit. Her visits last anywhere from 30 minutes to three hours.

Our time at home is precious since we both work and must plan to fit our house and yard work into our business schedules.

We can find no way to communicate this problem to our friend without offending her since we are sure it never occurred to her that her visits are often an intrusion, and sometimes spoil previous plans that we may have had — whether it be relaxation, house or yard work. We are hoping that our friend will see this letter and understand that not everyone is semi-retired with evenings free to socialize and entertain unexpected company. — BUSY FRIENDS IN NEW YORK

DEAR BUSY: I receive no less than 1,000 letters on a slow day, and approximately 100 of them sound exactly like yours, so let me kill 100 birds with one stone (with apologies to the S.P.C.A.):

Nobody can impose upon you without your permission. People who make a practice of dropping in and staying anywhere from 30 minutes to three hours, and spoil your previous plans, can hardly be called "dear friends." And if you tolerate this kind of "intrusion" (your word), you are encouraging it.

If you can't summon the courage to tell a drop-in friend that you have plans for the evening — even if it's only to wash your hair and go to bed early — you will have to put up with the intrusion. Unless, of course, your friend reads "Dear Abby," recognizes herself and takes the hint. But don't count on it.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a telemarketer for the last 10 years, and I thank God every day for my job. I have no other skills and do not have a degree in anything. I have rheumatoid arthritis, high blood pressure and diabetes, so needless to say, I could never hold down a factory job or do waitress work.

I always read your column and usually like your answers, but you are off the wall knocking people who make a living telemarketing. I am a single parent who makes enough money to support myself and three children, and this job keeps me off welfare.

If people aren't interested in what I'm selling, all they have to do is say, "No, thank you," and hang up. I'm sorry if I call some folks at an inconvenient time, but regardless of what they say to me (and I have heard everything), I am always polite and keep my cool.

You probably won't print this, but maybe you will realize that telemarketers provide an important service, plus we provide jobs for a lot of people who otherwise might be on welfare. We hire pregnant women, students, handicapped people, overweight people and mothers with small children who can work from their homes.

Thank you, Abby, for letting me get this off my chest. — I'M OK IN OKLAHOMA CITY

Some of my friends and I were talking about different things, and we have a question to ask you. Can a girl get pregnant when she "does it" with a guy for the first time? — FOUR GIRLS IN CHARLESTON, W.VA.

DEAR GIRLS: The answer is YES!

DEAR ABBY: Abby, ol' girl, that was bum advice you gave "Broke in Brooklyn."

Just when is the kid going to learn how to handle money? Will Daddy always be around to tell Junior how to spend and how to save? Give him a break, Abby. If he's mature enough to hold down a job, he should be mature enough to selectively save and spend his earnings.

I suspect that Dad is on a power trip and isn't ready to give up the control he has always had on his son. — MINNESOTA MOM

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Career success

By HARPER'S BAZAAR

No matter how good you are as a numbers cruncher or media planner, success in your career also depends on people skills.

Ambitious newcomers to the job market can make the most of a summer internship or first job, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, by following these expert tips.

● Be certain you are in the right place. "Make sure it's a company that will invest in you," said Robert H. Welsh, a partner with Heidrick and Struggles, a Chicago executive search firm, adding:

"You want to be in a place that will train you, educate you, give you the chance to travel, expose you to different segments of the business and to outsiders, such as security analysts."

● Find a mentor. Lynn Tender Bignell, a co-founder of the New York search firm of Gilbert Tweed Associates, said having someone high up show you the ropes can be extremely valuable.

● Develop your people skills. "MBAs who manage upwards, downwards and sideways — those who get along with their superiors, their support staff and their peers — do best in their jobs," said Paula L. Goodman.

Action continued Sunday during the last squad of the Texas State Championship Tournament.

Local bowler Julie Van Dyken took over first place, Division 2 singles. Rolling games of 262, 218 and 197 gave her a 677 series. Van Dyken will also receive a Texas Women's Bowling Association award for her efforts.

Also from Big Spring, Shelly Massey rolled a 1731 all events to put her in first place in Division 3.

Now news from the Comanche Trail Ladies Golf Association...

Peggy Marshall, Mary Malone, Dee Jenkins and Dana Wilkinson won first place over Annie Ward, Tammy Newsom, Harriett Richardson and Julie Hall in a playoff on scorecards. Both teams shot a three-under-par 34, in scramble play on the front nine Monday.

Don and Roxie Belew and Jim and Annie Ward captured first place in couples scramble play on the back nine Thursday. They shot a four-under-par 31. Scoring one point behind for second place was the team of Jim and Ruby Honea and John and Darla Swindell.

Big Spring was well represented at the state junior bowling tournament in Austin last weekend.

Amy Hyden and Lois Carter won the Junior-Senior Division girls competition. Michael Everett and Jennifer Lewis won their respective division also. Carter also won the all events.

In Boys Prep competition, Brandon McGuire won the singles and all events. In team competition, the Highland Lane All-Star boys finished second in the prep division.

The tournament will conclude July 28.

Sunday at the Western Sportsman Club at 1 p.m. a centerfire and 22 rifle matches will be conducted. Rifles with scopes will be allowed in both matches.

Non-members are welcome and trophies will be awarded. Entry fee is $6 for members and $7 for non-members.

The club is located on Highway 176, (Andrews Highway), about nine miles west of town.

Annie Ward and Patsy Sharpnack won third place in the first flight in the Levelland Ladies' Best-Ball Partnership at the Levelland Country Club.

Ward also won closest to the pin on the third hole.

Hogan Golf Course in Midland will be the site of a local qualifying for the 15th Annual Michelin Long Driving Championship July 10 at 5:30 p.m.

The $60,000 championship is open to amateurs and professionals. Entry fee is $5 per person. Last year Jim Maynard, a 6-6 sales director from Raleigh, N.C., won the championship with a drive of 334 yards in the final.

Cathey has currently earned $34,438 on the PRCA tour. Leading the bull riding competition is Tuff Hedeman of Bowie with $39,183. Second is Tulsa, Okla., cowboy Ervin Williams at $36,903.

Colts regroup, beat Tigers

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The American League Colts served noticed to the International League Tigers that by no means were they going to lay down and die despite being one game from elimination in the city Little League tournament.

Well the Colts are still one game from elimination, but so are the Tigers after the Colts soundly whipped them 15-4 Wednesday night at Lawson Field, home of the International League.

The rubber match will be played tonight at 8 p.m. at Johnnie Hobbs Field, home of the American League.

The Colts the AL champs, have battled back from losing their tournament opener. Ironically it was to the Tigers, who finished third in their league. The Tigers won that game 8-7 with Ernie Escovedo on the mound.

Last night it was Escovedo on the mound again, but it was much different results. Instead of going the distance and scattering nine hits, this time the big lefty was knocked out of the box in the fifth inning. The deadly Colts bats racked up seven hits and scored 10 runs before Escovedo was lifted in favor of Robert Rios. The damage might have been much worse if the Colts hadn't left the bases loaded the first three innings.

Colt pitcher Gabriel Rodriguez pitched a masterful game. The quick-working right-hander fired a five-hitter while going the distance, fanning two and walking none.

Big Spring rodeo opens

National Finals Rodeo champion Dave Appleton gave rodeo fans their money's worth and more during the opening performance of the 57th Annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion Rodeo Wednesday night.

The transplanted Australian cowboy, in a tour de force, took a huge lead in the bareback riding with a score of 82. Cumby's Lance Crump grabbed second with a 77 during the performance.

Appleton, now of Arlington, also took the overall lead in Saddle bronc riding, marking a 79. Robert Etbauer of Goodwill, Okla., came second with a 73.

Besides watching Appleton dominate the Professional Rodeo Association competition, rodeo fans also enjoyed opening night entertainment featuring Jimmy Anderson's cowboy monkey, which rounded up sheep while riding on a dog's back.

Perennial crowd pleaser and top barrel man Quail Dobbs kept the laughs coming with his chicken coup — a riding apparatus powered by chicken.

The cowboys kept up the excitement in the bull riding competition when every rider failed to stick for the required eight seconds.

In the calf roping, Hobbs, N.M., cowboy DeLynn Jones pulled in the overall lead with a two-calf total of 24.3 seconds. Terry Kit-chens of Brookesmith turned in the best time Wednesday night with an 11.0. Close on his heels was Johnny Powell of Eldorado with an 11.1.

Leon Bauerle of Kyle took the overall lead in steer wrestling after totaling 9.7 seconds on two steers. Dale Meineke of Huntsville dogged the other competitors Wednesday night with a time of 4 seconds flat. Dennie Gee of Wichita Falls was second with a 4.6.

Ropers Steve Kolle of Olney and Pete Pearce of Washington teamed up for a two-steer total of Big Spring rodeo fans were treated to some no-holds barred rides like this one during Wednesday night's opening performance. Arlington cowboy Dave Appleton got off to a roaring start, taking the lead in both the bareback riding and the saddle bronc riding.

14.0 seconds for the overall lead in the team roping. Brad Raney of Fruitvale and Terry Wynne of Terrell led Wednesday night's performance with a 6.7, while Matt Scoggins of Frierson, La., and Phillip Owens of Shreveport, La., were second with a 7.0.

Fredericksburg's Charity Meier took the lead in the barrel racing, whipping to a time of 17.10 seconds. Martha Wright of Stephenville was a few ticks off for second in 17.28.

In the Wrangler bull fighting contest, Jimmy Anderson turned in a 73-point performance to beat out Smurf Horton's 62.

Royals hurler dominates Brewers

Bret Saberhagen is dominating American League hitters again.

He pitched a three-hitter for his league-leading seventh complete game and the Royals scored four times in the first inning Wednesday night, beating the Milwaukee Brewers 6-0.

AL Roundup

Saberhagen, 7-4, has won four consecutive decisions and has lowered his earned-run average to 2.17. He said complete games aren't his goal.

"It's something that doesn't really mean as much as ERA or wins or stuff like that to me," he said. "I've got three in losing efforts. It would mean more if I was going out giving one run or shutting them out. All shutouts would be better. But you shut them down as long as you can."

Saberhagen retired the first nine batters before Paul Molitor singled leading off the fourth. Gary Sheffield singled in the seventh and Molitor singled in the ninth.

"That was a masterpiece,"

Royals manager John Wathan said. "You can't pitch better than that. It was nice to get off to a good start and bat around. We haven't done that often where we give a starting pitcher a cushion like that."

In other games, Toronto beat California 6-1 in 14 innings, Chicago beat New York 7-3, Texas beat Boston 10-3, Oakland beat Detroit 6-3, Baltimore beat Seattle 8-6 and Minnesota beat Cleveland 5-1.

Singles by Kurt Stillwell and Kevin Seitzer and Bo Jackson's blooming double off Don August, 6-7, gave the Royals a 1-0 lead. Jim Eisenreich's sacrifice fly made it 2-0 and RBI singles by Pat Tabler and Bob Boone capped the four-run, six-hit inning.

Kansas City made it 6-0 in the fifth on Eisenreich's two-run single.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 1
George Bell doubled in the go-ahead run in the 14th inning and Tom Henke, 6-3, finished with 3-2-3 hitless innings.

Atlanta whips Reds

Today is Jeff Treadway Day in his hometown of Griffin, Ga., so he decided to do some early celebrating.

NL Roundup

Treadway's two-run single off Cincinnati relief ace John Franco gave Atlanta a 4-3 victory over the Reds in the opener of Wednesday's two-night double-header. Treadway doubled and scored the only run in the Braves' 1-0 triumph in the nightcap.

"I was hoping against the Reds I might have one good game out of this thing," said the second baseman who the Braves bought from the Reds for $50,000 near the end of spring training. "Sweet. That was a lot of fun for me. It's an old team that let me go."

In other National league games, it was Chicago 1, Pittsburgh 0 in 11 innings; New York 2, Montreal 0; San Francisco 2, Houston 0, and Los Angeles 6, San Diego 2. The St. Louis-Philadelphia game was rained out.

The Kirby slide

CLEVELAND — Minnesota Twins runner Kirby Puckett (34) slides home to score under the guidance of teammate Randy Bush in the first inning of Wednesday night's 5-1 win over the Indians. Puckett smacked three singles in the game for his 32nd multi-hit game this season.

More Rose allegations

CINCINNATI (AP) — Baseball has a handwriting expert's analysis showing that Pete Rose wrote out gambling slips on games involving the Cincinnati Reds, The Associated Press learned.

The betting slips give baseball evidence to support allegations that the manager bet on his own team, an offense with an automatic lifetime ban from the game.

Rose, who has sued Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti in state court, has maintained he never bet on baseball. His lawyers also have said that baseball's report on gambling allegations, written by John M. Dowd, was based on hearsay and the word of convicted criminals.

Steroid case ends

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Former South Carolina defensive coordinator Tom Gadd was acquitted of two misdemeanor charges stemming from the alleged use and distribution of steroids within the school's athletic department.

After deliberating for just under two hours, a U.S. District Court jury of eight women and four men found Gadd innocent of importing steroids into the state, encouraging football players to use steroids and helping to monitor use of the drugs.

McEnroe surprised

WIRRAL, England (AP) — John McEnroe's Wimbledon preparations received an unexpected jolt when he was beaten 3-6, 7-6, 7-6 by fellow American Jim Pugh in the second round of a grass-court warm-up tournament.

Top-seeded Boris Becker won easily, beating Jan Gunnarsson of Sweden 6-2, 6-3, and American Dan Goldie and Jeremy Bates of Britain also were victorious.

Navratilova cruises

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova cruised into the quarterfinals of the Eastbourne tournament, while Chris Evert pulled out with an ear infection. Navratilova beat Larisa Savchenko 6-3, 6-0, but Evert defaulted her match against Italy's Raffaella Reggi. Evert's status for Wimbledon, which starts on Tuesday, is uncertain.

Unseeded Etsuko Inoue of Japan upset No. 3 Zina Garrison 4-6, 6-4, 9-7.

In another upset, Ros Fairbank of South Africa ousted fourth-seeded Helena Sukova 6-2, 6-3, while No. 7 Mary Joe Fernandez of Miami stopped Nathalie Tauziat of France 6-3, 6-4.

Bowling title

DUBLIN, Calif. (AP) — Top-seeded Pete Weber of Florissant, Mo., built an early lead and coasted to a 210-182 victory over Tom Baker of Buffalo, N.Y., in the title match of the Professional Bowlers Association's $130,000 Kessler Open.

Switzer to continue drawing salary

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Barry Switzer is no longer football coach at Oklahoma, but he will continue to draw his regular $7,250 monthly salary until next June and then will pocket $145,000 as part of a "farewell" settlement.

Interim university president David Swank discussed terms of the $225,000 settlement on Wednesday after it was approved by the university's board of regents. The regents also voted unanimously to hire former defensive coordinator Gary Gibbs as Switzer's successor.

Swank called the settlement with Switzer "abundantly fair considering the contributions he has made to the university and the state."

Switzer announced Monday he was stepping down as coach of the Sooners after 16 seasons, during which his teams won three national titles and 12 Big Eight Conference championships. He was the fourth-winningest coach in college football history.

In addition to hiring Gibbs and approving a salary of $88,000 a year for him, the regents also approved the settlement with Switzer and gave basketball coach Billy Tubbs a yearly salary of $88,000. The $88,000 for Gibbs is $1,000 more than Switzer made.

The Switzer settlement included a $145,000 lump payment to the former coach on June 1, 1990. It also provided that Switzer would be paid a salary of $7,250 a month until that time. Until Feb. 1, Switzer is to be on "special assignment" with the school, but his duties were not outlined. Switzer resigned Monday after six months of turmoil which saw the Oklahoma program wounded by a three-year NCAA probation and five players charged in incidents involving guns, drugs and sexual assault.

Swank said the regents received legal advice before making the settlement.

Colts

Three of the Tiger hits came in the sixth inning with the game out of reach.

The Tigers put the game away in the fifth and sixth innings, scoring 11 runs off six hits. The seven-run sixth inning was the icing on the cake.

The Colts led from start to finish, scoring three runs in the second inning. It was a horrendous inning for the Tiger defense, as it committed four errors. The only hit in the inning was a ground-rule double by shortstop Trey Terrazas.

Like they did in the first meeting, the Tigers tried to pitch around the heavy-hitting Terrazas. He was walked intentionally three times. The only other time the Tigers pitched to him, he laced a hard single to left field.

Terrazas was also perfect on defense, accounting for seven putouts. His best play was when he snared a hard line drive off the bat of Roger Eddington, just before it hit the ground.

The Colts added a run in the third. Derek Hobbs singled but was forced out by Markus Balderach. Balderach scored from second on third baseman's Clint Caudill's ground-rule double over the left field fence.

The Colts made things interesting in the bottom of the third, scratching for two runs on one hit and one Colt error.

Rios led off with a single up the middle, the first hit of the game off Rodriguez. After Rios advanced to second, Robert Valencia grounded to Terrazas. Rios tried for third but Terrazas flipped to Caudill to get him out.

Next Richard Balcazar reached base when he grounded to third, but Colts second baseman Richard Thompson was slow to cover, and Valencia beat the throw to second. After the runners advanced on a passed ball, Valencia scored when Orlando Olague grounded out to short.

Balcazar scored when Thompson mishandled Chris Yanez's grounder, cutting the lead to 4-2. But Rodriguez got out of the inning by fanning cleanup hitter John Oliva.

In the fifth the Colts added four runs on two hits and one error. Matt Rigdon and Terrazas singled in the inning. They both scored along with Caudill and Rodriguez, giving the Colts a comfortable 8-2 advantage.

In the sixth, the roof caved in for the Tigers. Rigdon, Thompson and Minter all doubled, and Leslie Atkins singled. Minter and Thompson's hits drove in two runs each. Rigdon drove in a run as did Atkins. By the time it was all over, the Colts were leading 15-2.

The Tigers made a mild rally in the sixth, scoring two runs on singles by Escovedo, James Escobar and Oliva. But it was much too little, too late, as the Colts romped 15-4.

Bailed out
DALLAS — Attorney Royce West, left, escorts former Dallas Carter High School football stars Derric Evans, center, and Gary Edwards from the Lew Sterrett Justice Center after gaining their release on bond. According to police, Evans and Edwards, arrested Tuesday morning, matched the descriptions of two men who robbed two video stores at gunpoint.

Treadway's game-winning hit in the opener marked only the second failure in 20 save opportunities for Franco. Dale Murphy and Andres Thomas singled to start the ninth. Tommy Gregg sacrificed and Jody Davis was walked intentionally to load the bases before Treadway poked his two-run single into center field.

After being shut out on two hits in six innings by Tom Browning, who extended his string of scoreless innings to 23, the Braves began their comeback from a 3-0 deficit against Rob Dibble with one out in the eighth when pinch hitter Jeff Wetherby doubled and Lonnie Smith hit his eighth home run.

Cincinnati manager Pete Rose said the Braves "beat the best setup man and the best short man in the world."

In the nightcap, John Smoltz and three relievers combined on a nine-hitter with 13 strikeouts. Smoltz allowed six hits in 5 1/3 innings. Paul Assenmacher pitched two innings, Mark Eichhorn got the final two outs in the eighth and Joe Boever pitched the ninth for his 11th save as Cincinnati's losing streak reached four games.

Treadway opened the bottom of the first with a double off former Brave Rick Mahler and took third on Gregg's single. After Gregg was caught stealing, Gerald Perry hit a grounder to short that was bobbled by Lenny Harris, allowing Treadway to score.

Cubs 1, Pirates 0

Greg Maddux held Pittsburgh to six hits in 10 innings and got the victory when Lloyd McClendon hit a sacrifice fly in the 11th. Maddux walked four and struck out five before Mitch Williams pitched a perfect 11th for his 18th save. Pirates starter Doug Drabek allowed five hits in nine innings.

Gary Varsho, inserted as a pinch-runner in the ninth inning, doubled off Doug Bair to start the 11th, took third on Damon Berryhill's fly ball and scored on McClendon's sacrifice fly as the Cubs won their fourth straight. They are 5-0 against Pittsburgh this season and have won 18 of their last 27 road games.

"This game showed people why we're in first place," Williams said. "It's because of our starting pitching."

"It's just been unbelievable," Manager Don Zimmer added. "Everybody's been a part of it, and we're doing it by doing the little things that don't look big, but are. Varsho started it with a double and then McClendon drove in the run. He hasn't played every day in three years, but he's doing a great, great job for us."

Henderson

for the betterment of the Yankees. We desperately needed pitching. It's been our Achilles heel."

"We expect great things from him, both for the rest of the season and in the future," Athletics general manager Sandy Alderson said, adding that Henderson accepted the trade "without any cajoling from us."

"He's extremely excited," added Alderson, whose club is in first place in the AL West despite the season-long absence of slugger Jose Canseco and injuries to several other key players.

It has not been a good year for Henderson, on or off the field. On the field, Henderson — a career .292 hitter — was batting just .247 with the Yankees, with three homers, 22 RBIs and 25 stolen bases. But he said he was starting to come out of his slump.

Henderson, 29, has stolen 80 or more bases six times since coming to the majors with Oakland as a 20-year-old in 1979 and has been one of the game's top offensive players throughout the 1980s.

He set the single-season record with 130 steals in 1982 and is fourth on the career list with 819 stolen bases. He also broke Bobby Bonds' career record for home runs leading off the game with his 36th earlier this season.

"It's just a matter of time before I started to hit better," he said. "I've been hitting the ball hard, but right at people."

season, swept a three-game series in Anaheim Stadium for the first time since 1980.

Tony Fernandez led off the 14th with an infield single against Greg Minton, 1-2, went to second when Kelly Gruber was hit by a pitch and scored when Bell doubled into the left-field corner.

White Sox 7, Yankees 3
Carlton Fisk set an American League home run record for catchers with his 307th, passing the Yankees' Yogi Berra. He still trails Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, the major league leader with 327.

Fisk's homer off Andy Hawkins, 7-8, broke a scoreless tie, and he tied the score 2-2 in the fourth with an RBI single. Harold Baines' leadoff homer in the eighth snapped the tie.

Rangers 10, Red Sox 3
Geno Petralli had a double and four singles in a 19-hit attack as Texas routed Roger Clemens. Rafael Palmeiro and Julio Franco each had three hits and Sammy Sosa added his first major league homer.

Staked to a 3-0 lead in the first inning, Clemens, 8-5, allowed 12 hits and four runs in 5 2/3 innings.

Athletics 6, Tigers 3
Dave Parker hit a pair of two-run homers and Mike Moore, 9-5, and Rick Honeycutt combined on a six-hitter. Honeycutt pitched a one-hit ninth for his seventh save.

Parker had his first multi-homer game since Sept. 15, 1987, when he played against Atlanta for Cincinnati. He has 11 homers this season. Detroit, 26-43, is 17 games under .500, its lowest standing since 1976. Mike Schwabe, 1-3, allowed five hits and four runs in 1 2/3 innings.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Mikhail Baryshnikov is leaving as artistic director of the American Ballet Theatre at the end of the 1990 season. The company's board of trustees announced the departure Wednesday, a day after Baryshnikov told them of his decision to leave. Baryshnikov, 41, became ABT's artistic director in September 1980.

He joined the company in 1974 after defecting from the Soviet Union, where he danced with the Kirov ballet company. "I will have given 10 years to the company, and it has been a true challenge," he said. "The dancers in the company are superb. Of all the responsibilities associated with being artistic director, I've enjoyed working with the dancers more than anything else." Baryshnikov said he would "pursue other professional options" but did not elaborate. He is starring on Broadway in "Metamorphosis," a play based on Franz Kafka's story, and has appeared in such films as "White Nights" and "The Turning Point." He also recently started a perfume for women called "Misha," his nickname. * * * NEW ORLEANS (AP) — First lady Barbara Bush told a group of underprivileged college-bound high school students she hopes to see one of them at the White House during the next four years as a Presidential Scholar. "If you work hard and keep up your grades I'm sure you can. That will be a thrill," she said Wednesday as she addressed 100 of the students known as "Taylor's Kids."

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

FRIDAY, JUNE 23, 1989

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: country singer June Carter Cash, King Edward VIII (the Duke of Windsor), dance genius Bob Fosse, actor Ted Shackelford, author Anna Chennault, baseball's Tom Haller, golfer Lawson Little, French Empress Josephine de Beauharnais, actress Irene Worth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): News from a distance could benefit you in a most unique way. You have more influence over your friends than over your children. Travel is best postponed. Write letter reflecting your true feelings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Realize that work is not everything. Someone you meet today will be a source of inspiration. Respect for you grows. Travel enjoys highly favorable influences. Contact pals at a distance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A relationship can be greatly strengthened by bold action today. You have a clearer picture of the future. Rely on old friends and ignore a newcomer's criticism. You are on the right track.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emotional self-indulgence will accomplish nothing. You are only deceiving yourself if you think you can change partner. Face reality and get on with your life. Provide for your future financial security.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Wedding bells may be ringing soon. Exciting business developments make this a stimulating day. You are in pursuit of sizzling romance. Do not neglect your work or family obligations for frivolity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Starting an exercise program now could help you avoid health problems later. Be willing to make some adjustments in your schedule today. Higher-ups expect you to be accommodating. Show you are a team player.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today's events help you understand what is really important in life. Your spirits get a big boost when you spend an evening with people who genuinely care about you. Be affectionate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you can, make this a three-day weekend and relax completely. New educational opportunities are on the horizon. Jump in with both feet! Taking the plunge now will pay off handsomely later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Taking the long view of a work situation is your best bet. Many good things lie just around the next corner. Patience is golden today. Resist the temptation to blow off steam.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New sources of income can be found if you follow up on a good idea you previously set aside. Take steps to both protect your health and increase your cash reserves. Curb spending.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep a closer tab on expenditures or you may have to make drastic cuts later. Enrolling in an educational seminar or special class will boost your chances for promotion. Seek tuition reimbursement.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Recycling an old idea could open up rich new fields to plough in the future. You get financial help from an unexpected quarter. Call a former ally and suggest teaming up again.

A sorta scary tour

By STACY PAYNE
Herald Editor

Miles Tollison, president of the Martin County Convent Foundation, took me on a tour of the convent last week. It is old, in desperate need of repair, and quite frankly, I was glad when we left. No sooner had we walked in the place and gotten to about the middle of that first room when the front door slammed shut.

A scary movie fan, I'm not, but I've seen my share, and the first thing that always happens when somebody walks in an old, deserted house is the slamming shut of the door someone just walked through.

Miles, of course, was unafraid. He's been through the house dozens of times. The weird sound we started hearing about the time we started up stairs sent shivers up my spine. If it did the same to Miles, I couldn't tell, but he did go check it out.

Outside was a very old dog who rasped instead of barked. Mr. Anastasio, caretaker of the grounds, has this thing about old dogs who need a home — he gives them one. The dog was very friendly, but he really should do something about that cough. It can scare the daylight out of people less fearful than myself.

I did not live in these parts when the local Jaycees used the old convent for a spook house on Halloween. So you can imagine my horror when Miles and I came from the basement and saw an antique tub full of bones and other grisly items.

Miles seemed to think the look on my face was quite hilarious, but judging from my increasingly fragile appearance, he stifled the guffaw, merely smiled and explained from whence and why they came.

The only spooky thing that happened after that was when we drove around to the front of the grounds and peered through the wrought iron gate — the kind with spikes on its tips — and I kept waiting for the fog that appears on those Saturday morning horror movies to begin seeping up from the ground.

Now I know my imagination is the cause of all of this. I am the squeamish type, after all, and I do see ghosts and goblins where there are none. I tend to hear scrapings and scratchings in the night instead of the house settling. Which brings up the point: just what does it really mean when your parents and grandparents tell you that it's just the house settling? Have you ever really thought about that?

Why does the house just happen to settle at night, right around the time you're going to bed, instead of, let's say 2:45 in the afternoon? And why do cats scream bloody murder while sitting on the sill of your bedroom window instead of any other time? Ever wonder why a couple of your babysitters used to laugh that evil laugh when they told you there were no monsters under your bed?

"Monsters under your bed? Those 14-eyed, fire breathing, belly slithering, gray and purple drooling type of beasts that wait for little kids to go to sleep so they can tear their limbs off one by one and chew them into little bits? Nah. No way is that kind of monster under your bed. Sweet dreams."

The Convent, of course, is not haunted. Only my imagination is.

The Convent is just about the only thing left standing except maybe a couple of very old trees that allows us to see and touch and feel the earliest part of our history.

Tollison, and the other board members of the Martin County Convent Foundation, are trying hard to restore the Convent for that very purpose. But, of course, like every good thing, it

Ten-year-old Virginia Ragland was washing dishes one day when she looked out the window and saw something a bit strange to her young eyes.

"I saw a dark purple bank of stormy looking clouds with a reddish purple haze near the bottom," she said in a letter to Miles Tollison, Martin County Convent Foundation President, and enthusiastic supporter of the Convent Restoration, 51 years later. "Suddenly, I saw a long, black funnel drop out of the clouds and, not knowing what it was at the time, pointed it out to the Sister."

Virginia was referring to the tornado that wiped out most of the Academy of our Lady of Mercy back in 1938.

"I was the only child in the Convent at the time of that terrifying tornado," she said. "My parents had sent me to the Convent in 1937 and I had attended the school in the winter — living in the dorm... and in the summer time I had to stay there alone with the Sisters while the other children went home."

The youngster from El Paso, after showing the Sister what she had seen in the sky, was whisked away to the girls dormitory and told to stay under the bed until the Sisters had come back for her.

"Of course, what happened is history now."

Who would have guessed that

Tollison hopes to raise the funds that will restore the historical structure, including the basement door he is shown opening in the photo at right.

Remember when... Mamie Eisenhower made a fashion statement by wearing bangs?... when the pink color of her inaugural ball gown became known as Mamie Pink?... when Fidel Castro became premier of Cuba?... when the Space Age began with Russia's Sputnik I and II?... when America launched her first satellite, Explorer I... when the polio vaccine was declared safe?... when the Korean War ended?

Relive these and other memories at this year's Miss Martin County and Junior Miss Pageants as they present "A Sentimental Journey." The pageants will be Saturday, August 12 at 7:30 p.m. at the Stanton High School Auditorium. Gwen Sawyer will be the pageant director.

Area businesses and clubs are encouraged to contact county girls to enter this year's pageants. To enter the Miss Martin County pageant, girls must be at least 17 years old and not over 21 years old by September 1.

To enter the Junior Miss pageant, girls need to be entering at least the 8th grade this fall and be under 17 years of age. Contestants must attend school in Martin County or school within her own district.

College students' parents or legal guardian must be residents of Martin County. The girls must be single, not divorced and not a parent. Sponsorship of each girl is $50.

Who is the lucky person that will kiss this face? Will it be Jack Allred, Louis Phelps, Bill Young, Paige Eiland, Teresa Barnhill, Corky Blocker, Danny Fryar or James Jenkins? The "winner" will be selected by the amount of money collected in the honor of each candidate at the lemonade stand on Old Settlers Day, Saturday, July 8, 1989. Sty Princess, Miss Piggy, above, told The Herald that she will not tolerate sloveness, filth or groveling of any kind during the Kiss A Pig Contest being sponsored by the American Cancer Society, as she has endured enough of those things already. She added that all monies collected will go directly to the American Cancer Society to help fund research and services for cancer victims. She also admitted that there are a couple of men in the contest she is a bit partial to, but she wouldn't name names.

Stantonites contribute to their museum

STANTON — If you've seen one arrowhead, you've seen them all — unless you unearthed it with your own plow in your own field and the arrowhead became a museum exhibit.

The Martin County Historical Museum has plenty of them, all brought in by local farmers, along with other American Indian artifacts.

The museum has been designated as one of the best small county museums in the state by the Texas Association of Museums. Although the building may appear small, once inside, a visitor can keep going around the display area a long while before running into "Grandmother's Attic," an exhibit filled to overflowing with every kind of antique item that a grandmother might have used during early frontier days. Ruby Payne, curator, said that one of the best aspects of the displays is that almost every item, large or small, was brought in by a Martin County resident. "The arrowheads, the quilts, the churns — everything was brought to us by folks from around here. We have incredible support from Martin Countians."

Hesitant to take much credit for the quality of the exhibits and materials, Payne said that June Reid, president of the Martin County Historical Commission, was responsible for the design and layout of each exhibit.

"In 1969, during the Old Settlers Reunion, June was able to use a vacant office building in downtown Stanton to display some historical artifacts, and she's been doing a great job ever since," Payne said.

It was a one-day event, but the response was so overwhelming that Reid, who was then head of the local historical committee, decided

Around town

The Atchison Reunion was held May 27 at the Community Center with approximately 99 people attending. Registered guests included relatives from Stanton, Midland, Odessa, Tyler, Houston, Lampassas, Abilene, Marble Falls, Slaton, San Angelo, Big Spring, Alpine and Fort Stockton.

Several guests were present at the June 13 meeting of the Noon Lions Club. Former club member Terry Blair of Lamesa introduced the speaker, Gerald Griffs of TU Electric. Pauline Woods, musician and news writer for the club said that he discussed the Comanche Peak nuclear plant. "He told of the progress toward its completion," she said. "He told the Lions that some of the electricity would be available by the end of the year and full capacity for next summer. This will necessitate a raise in price, probably ten percent."

Kelly Inman, grandson of Erma Inman, has recently returned from Boys State at Austin. Inman was selected from Stanton High School as an outstanding student and athlete to attend the conference. Marsha Todd, Stanton High School counselor, said. The conference is sponsored annually by the American Legion "to better educate high school students in the democratic way of government," she said.

While in Austin, Inman served in the role of County Commissioner of Hill City in Rathur County, Brown District. Each unit modeled city, county, and district government. Inman campaigned for state comptroller, but was narrowly defeated, Todd said, in a run-off election.

Each day began with calisthenics before members reported to the various meetings. "The boys were taught how government holds elections, conducts business and functions at each level, including city, county and district," Todd said.

Inman met Ken Hackemack, University of Texas starting defensive lineman and Eric Metcalf, tailback starter for the Longhorns.

"A memento from the trip is an autograph from John J. Montford, Texas senator, that was addressed personally to Kelly," Todd said. "Kelly also had his picture made with Senator Montford."

Todd said that highlights of the trip included a parade to the capital and a congressional session held by the Boys State Officials on the floor of Congress.

it was time for Martin County to have its own museum.

"She worked very, very hard from that moment on to ensure that we had a local museum. She hasn't stopped working yet, even though I took over as curator a few years back.

"June sets up the exhibits, and she does so in a way that is extremely effective. Every detail is thought over, and when she is finished, she always has a masterpiece, and that's one reason we have the statewide reputation that we do."

The Prehistoric Age is a display that contains fossilized mammoth bones thought to be more than 10,000 years old. "They may be as old as 20,000 years," Payne said.

There are countless number of arrowheads in the Indian exhibit, along with one blanket handmade by an Indian tribe and given to Stanton folks in approximately 1908, lots of implements for grinding corn, spears and even a war paint finger pot.

"Apaches were a warring tribe that roamed the West Texas Plains," Payne said. "There were Comanches here and a few other tribes as well."

Payne referred to the book "Martin County, Its Land and Its People, 1881 To 1978", which includes reports about several local excavation sites where human bones, jewelry and other artifacts have been found. One find, made in 1953, was of fossilized human remains. The bones, determined to be female, are referred to as "Midland Minnie," although she was actually discovered in Martin County.

"The information in the book is great for gaining some real insight into what visitors see at the museum," Payne said. She added that Reid was also responsible for its publication.

Sometime around 1881, when Stanton was called Grelton, the railroad came to the area, and that's the subject of the next exhibit. Complete with a mannequin that appears ready to write a train ticket for a traveler or send a telegraph, the exhibit describes the changes created by the railway as well as several pictures of Texas and Pacific trains at various stages of development.

Although Payne is happy to tell all about the railroad, one can sense her eagerness to advance to the next area. It involves the Convent and Academy of Our Lady of Mercy.

"This is my favorite," she said. "This is where it all began."

Martin County Historical Museum Curator Ruby Payne browses through the archives that contain magazines dating back to the turn of the century. Texas and American history texts, as well as historical books from surrounding counties, can be used for research at MCHM.

Beside a painting of the convent, and not far away from an actual prayer altar from the convent, hangs a portrait of Mother Mary Berchmans Kast.

"She headed a group called Sisters of Mercy. They all arrived here in 1894 on the train. They came from San Francisco, California, where they had served in St. Mary's Hospital," Payne said.

According to "Martin County, Its Land and Its People, 1881 to 1978", the community began as a German Catholic one, but lost its Catholic influence after a severe drought forced many residents to leave the area, as well as from increasing Protestant influence. The academy was closed until the sisters arrived.

"The school reopened in 1894 with 16 pupils. By 1896, there were 35 pupils," Payne said. "The enrollment continued to rise. In 1904, there were 110 students. For the next 20 years the convent and academy did very well, with students coming from all over West Texas, and as far away as California and Ohio."

On June 11, 1938, a tornado destroyed what had grown into a Catholic church, the convent, a boys' dormitory, girls' dormitory, laundry, barns, windmills and some recreational buildings. Only the convent building remains and has since become a historical site in the city.

A museum visitor can become engrossed in this story and begin to ask so many questions that it becomes difficult to move on to the next exhibit, which concerns the medical history of Martin County.

"The arrowheads, the quilts, the churns — everything was brought to us by folks from around here. We have incredible support from Martin Countians." — Ruby Payne.

Dr. J.R. Vance arrived in Martin County from Ohio in early 1891, an era that brought with it occasions to grab a horse and gallop miles to save a life in such desolated areas like Lamesa and Garden City. The exhibit contains various medicines, pills and ointments — one that reads "improved," just like products today.

Since then, Payne explained, Martin County has had numerous doctors, all with different styles of practicing medicine, and all being highly respected by the community.

Early businesses flourished after initial hard times, including the Hotel Stanton, the sign of which hangs in the next area of exhibits. There was Hall's Drug Store, a motor company, First National Bank, and the dry goods store.

Several protestant churches developed after the one-room Union Church; attorneys established practices and men ran for public office; public schools were built in the area, including several rural ones; women learned the fine art of canning what would grow in West Texas.

Ranching became the economic mainstay and cotton became king in Martin County. Horse-drawn buggies gave way to horseless carriages. Men began going to war. The telephone found its way into the small community and electricity changed everything. Oil was struck and a new era began.

Whatever the subject, if it has to do with Martin County History, it will likely be found at the Martin County Historical Museum. Payne will know about it or else she will have it there to see. If not, one can enter the archives and conduct research.

"We not only have local history in our archives," she said, "but we carry books on surrounding counties, the Permian Basin, state and U.S. history. We have Life magazines dating back to (its earliest issues).

"This museum has so much to offer. We have lots of stuff in storage that we want to share with the public, and someday we hope to have more space to exhibit it."

Convent

area, and it was ripe for people and activity. While Konz' entrepreneurial genius got going in the direction of first a general store and then a drug store, Father Anastasius busied himself doing the Lord's work.

He didn't wait for funds or material to build a church. He just used the second of two tents for a house of worship. According to "Martin County, Its Land and Its People, 1881-1978," he conducted the first religious service on the second Sunday after their arrival, and soon after had enough clout to get the citizens of Grelton to change the community's to Mariensfeld, German for 'field of Mary.'

More priests came, and with them came the need for more serious quarters. When the first load of lumber arrived in Mariensfeld, permanent buildings were constructed for the Catholic brothers, a priest's residence and a small church. They called their church St. Joseph Catholic Church.

Not too awfully long afterward, the priests built a two story adobe building and used it as a day school for boys and as a monastery for those interested in the Carmelite order. This was in 1882. Construction continued slowly and Mariensfeld grew quickly.

All was well with Father Anastasius. For the next few years he was able to recruit many priests from across America as well as Europe and to gather needed funds when necessity dictated. Martin County history suggests that his popularity with church members, elected officials and the townsfolk was enviable, and that his energy, even as he got older, was boundless.

Then, in 1886, a devastating drought hit Mariensfeld. The Protestant sector was gaining more influence in the community all the time, even changing the town's name to Stanton. And then, three years later, the worst happened.

One of the student monks, Father Francis Esser, whose given name was Lawrence, apparently committed suicide. The suicide was established, however, only after Father Fuhrwerk, subprior of the monastery, stood trial for murder. The financial loss to the group was enough, but the embarrassment and humiliation took more out of Father Anastasius than was first evident. In late 1889, he accepted a position in Louisiana, and left the little community and the monastery that he'd nurtured for several years.

The Father Anastasius era began to fade then. The Carmelite Fathers disbanded a few years later and sold their property to the Sisters of Mercy, who had arrived in Stanton in 1894.

Mother Mary Berchmans Kast began new building projects almost immediately, either oblivious to past happenings or living with a faith the rest didn't have. Under her direction, the monastery became a convent. She added a dining room and kitchen and a two story wing that was completed in the summer of 1897.

According to the Martin County history book, "The Academy of Our Lady of Mercy was formally opened in the fall of that year with the enrollment of 16 pupils... The Convent became a chartered institution in 1897 and the articles of incorporation were drawn up April 23, of that same year.

Why the Sisters thrived in 1897, just three years after the Carmelite Fathers had to disband, is a mystery to this writer, but thrive they did. The initial enrollment of 16 pupils increased steadily every year under the leadership of Mother Mary Berchmans Kast. Boys and girls came from almost every town and city in Texas, and as far away as California and Ohio.

"The school progressed and high school subjects were added. In 1925 the academy received an accredited rating as a junior high school. A commercial course was conducted, and there were departments of music, arts, and home economics," the book states. It also tells of the academy's continued success despite the lack of endowments and the increasing competition of the public schools.

By 1938, there were 3,000 students in the flourishing Convent and Academy of Our Lady of Mercy in Stanton.

On June 11 of that same year, Virginia Ragland stood at the kitchen window and saw first hand the "black tunnel" that brought the immediate end to an era.

All that was left was the Convent, the building that sheltered Virginia.

Her letter to Miles this past April that briefly described the devastating tornado ended like this:

"Of course, what happened is history now. The storm damaged the Convent so bad (ly) they had to send me home — the Convent was closed down... It's been a long time. I'm sixty-one."

"It will certainly be nice if you can preserve Our Lady of Mercy Convent. I have a plethora of memories of those two years out of my life."

Miles Tollison, and several other Stanton residents are determined that Virginia's wish for the preservation of the Convent comes true.

"The purpose of the Martin County Convent Foundation," Tollison said, "is to restore, preserve, renovate, maintain, and oversee the use and management of the convent, lands and attachments of the (Convent's) foundation."

"The foundation is also set up so that the convent, lands and attachments may never be sold, transferred or given away."

Before Tollison, or any of the other 18 board members, can see to the Convent's restoration, funds will have to be available.

"We've raised substantial sums in the past," he said,

Tollison said the Foundation can be helped during the week of Old Settlers. "We have cookbooks for sale," he said. "There are approximately 300 recipes in them. They cost $6 per book, or $5 for five or more."

"On Thursday, July 6, that is the Thursday before Old Settlers Day, we will have a get-together at the Community Center so that everyone can come and taste the dishes in the cookbook."

The Martin County Unit of the American Cancer Society met Monday, June 12, at the TU Ready Room to finalize plans for the Kiss-a-Pig contest to be held during the Old Settlers Reunion on July 8.

Marsha Todd reported on the planning meeting held by the Old Settlers Steering Committee saying that the committee had given the ACS permission to conduct the contest during the festivities.

Several Martin County citizens volunteered "or have been volunteered" to participate in the contest, Todd said, and the "winner" will be determined by the amount of money collected in jars set up at the lemonade stand on Saturday, July 8.

"That person will have the honor of kissing a pig during the games on Saturday afternoon," Todd said.

Katy Hughes asked that ACS members meet again June 28 to decide how to decorate the float for the parade. "It is hoped that the pig to be kissed will be on the float so that everyone may see it."

Monies collected will go directly to the American Cancer Society to help fund research and services for cancer victims.

Heritage promotes Howard County history

By STACY PAYNE
Herald Editor

BIG SPRING — Angie Way was busy preparing for an antique phonograph exhibit at the Heritage museum Friday morning.

Way, the museum curator, said that 48 phonographs had been donated to the museum recently from a private collection, and she was quite proud of them. She asked that visitors maneuver around her on their tour as she put the finishing touches on the exhibit.

So many historical museums in Texas seem to start with a huge glass display of arrowheads and grinding implements made of stone. Not in Big Spring. Here the museum has its own beginning.

In fact, the big spring is how the city started; and that's where the Heritage museum begins as well.

According to "Gettin' Started, Howard County's First 25 Years," by Joe Pickle, Captain Randolph B. Marcy recorded his discovery of the spring on Oct. 3, 1849. Marcy found evidence of Comanche lodging and heard of a big battle between the Comanches and Pawnees there. He didn't say whether or not the battle was over use of the spring, though the suggestion is clear.

Heritage's first display provides a good look at the underground side of the spring depicting its once-abundant flow of clear crystal water before the white men began to settle. The Big Spring is why white men began to settle there.

Yet, over the years, as more and more wells were drilled, the flow of the spring dwindled until none was left. As John R. Hutto wrote in 1938, "The beautiful spring was no more."

That didn't deter the men and women who continued to migrate to West Texas and settle in the area in the mid 1800s. The territory was rough and rugged, but the next exhibit shows that a woman's touch could tame the frontier in her own way.

An explanatory note reads, "It was the pioneer woman who brought to it a breath of beauty, culture and social grace."

The floor of the exhibit is hardwood just as in the old days. An antique bed with a handmade quilt sits in the center. What may be most noticeable to some is the delicate jeweled comb and hand-mirror set that adorns the old dresser.

If a visitor has paid close attention to the earlier display and allowed scenes of a barren and hostile desert to enter their minds, as well as the men who came to tame it, they might then see the comb and mirror set as a sharp contrast to the times.

A visitor might appreciate the trunk at the foot of the bed, the hand-made doily on the old night stand and a portrait of Ma and Pa at the turn of the century hanging on the wall. The pitcher and basin near enough to reach without leaving the bed is nice, even for an old cowhand.

Yet, the ruby that glistens on the comb and the polished silver of the mirror seem to jump out of the exhibit and allow the viewer to nearly see a pioneer woman reaching for those soft, feminine items at the end of a long, hot, day of what Hutto called "never ending toil."

Near the china cabinet filled with a collection of antique china cup and saucer miniatures is the music exhibit. A glass case holds the handmade violin of Denver L. Pettitt, who crafted his first fiddle at age 17.

There hangs a photo of the Opera House, built during the 1890s. For a while, it was Big Spring's culture and entertainment center.

A graphophone, first patented in 1886, rests on an antique organ. The graphophone, called a "talking machine," used cylinder-shaped recordings somewhat like that used in the phonograph.

Texas & Pacific Railroad employees formed their own band, and played for weddings, graduations and other functions. One photo shows a group of men and women in front of a sign, more like a chalkboard, that reads "Analytic School of Music."

The caption reads: "All day singing and dinner on the ground was a highlight of rural life for many decades."

Farming, ranching and early businesses are combined somewhat in an exhibit close by. Cattlemen settled the area that would be called Big Spring, as well as several other areas in Texas.

Ranches did not spring up everywhere. Rather, a few ranchers obtained lots of land, became cattle barons, and ruled over their large empires. Photos of J.B. Slaughter and other big-time ranchers are on display.

Howard County history states that railroads followed cattle barons everywhere, and in this case, the Texas and Pacific railroad made its way to Big Spring. When it did, everything changed. The railroad display comes equipped with the sounds of the "Iron Horse" at the push of the button.

The history of the T&P Railroad is extensive, and began long before Texas thought about railroads. According to "Howard County... In The Making," by Hutto, the railroad was completed by T&P on Dec. 16, 1881, and "it was that road that made, not only Big Spring, but all West Texas as well."

"What was formerly the home of a varied wildlife, the site of prairie dog cities, today is dotted by towns and cities of human habitation. Farms and ranches have taken the place of unoccupied space as existed before the days of rail construction. Yet the evolution of that long line of steel that binds the pine belt of the east with the arid hill-country of the El Paso country on the west, a distance of nearly one thousand miles, represents marvelous development."

Tilling the soil apparently began with J.B.D. Boydston, who lost no time breaking ground after his arrival in Big Spring, not long after T&P made tracks through the area.

Cotton became the number one cash crop for farmers and land began to be broken into smaller ranches and farms. Cotton thrived so much in the dry West Texas soil that Joseph Bell built the first cotton gin here.

Businesses of every kind appeared on the few streets known as "town," including the T&P Hotel, owned, of course, by T&P Railroad. Modern appliances reached Big Spring as represented by a photograph of Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Talbot, in which Mrs. Talbot is grinning wildly after replacing the old scrub board and No. 2 wash tub with a brand new hand-powered washing machine.

The phonograph replaced the old "talking machine". Somewhere along the way horseless carriages replaced horse-drawn buggies and railroad travel became passe.

While the Heritage Museum is not large, the few exhibits capsule eras clearly, and in a literary sense, provocatively. In one such exhibit a visitor pushes a button and hears the entire, though abbreviated, history of Howard County in a few minutes. The narration covers the Comanches who coveted the Big Spring long before white men dared to steal not only their land but their souls, and reaches the present day.

Topics covered in the narration include Millie Bailey, who brought "a thrill a minute when she led her famous circus parade right up the middle of town." There was talk of Sweetheart Day on the ranches when women were allowed to enter the grounds to see their beloveds and betrothed and have a chuck wagon picnic.

One of the more interesting subjects may be, to some visitors, the one concerning the Earl of Aylesford. This character of English nobility left his privileged life in the early 1800s and eventually came to Big Spring.

No one really knows why the earl, Heneage Joseph Finch, left the center of Kent, England and arrived in West Texas.

Joe Pickle wrote, "Some said he had come to the New World to recoup the family fortunes; some said he wanted to establish an estate here for his daughters; some said it was to assuage a broken heart; and still others, nearer the truth, said he had come to escape a scandal of major proportions back in England."

Whatever the truth, Finch bought the Cosmopolitan Hotel the same day he arrived in town because there was no room in the inn for him and his party. He paid twice what it was worth, and restored ownership to the previous owner the next day.

For two years, the Earl of Aylesford, kept the town's need for rumor sated. Then he died, some say from his wild, wild ways.

Angie Way, still not through with the finishing touches for Saturday's antique phonograph showing, reminds visitors to go see the Longhorn Room. There are 54 sets of "longhorns" there.

Some are as long as ten and a half feet and the room is 20 feet high to accommodate the collection.

Way, who received her Masters degree in Museum Administration, explained that the exhibits are changed from time to time, and that she has many items in storage.

"We have a nice museum," Way said. "We have many educational programs for children in the summer, one in which adult members of the community dress in costumes of certain eras and present a 'talking history.' "The town of Big Spring is extremely supportive."

During Old Settlers, MCCF will be hosting tours of the Convent and the Old Theater. They will be selling cookbooks that contain over 300 recipes from Martin County residents, as well as hosting a Tasting of as many dishes from the book as possible on the Thursday before Old Settlers.

I plan to participate in all events as well as buy the cookbook. I am inviting all of you to join me in doing the same.

When we are all able to walk through the Convent and touch the walls, walk the stairs and clearly imagine the activity of those early years because we have, individually, played a part in its restoration, it will have been worth the few dollars spent during Old Settlers Week.

Extension news

By KATHRYN BURCH
Martin Co. Extension Agent

The Martin County Convent Foundation met Thursday, June 8. Plans for the upcoming cookbook kick-off sale were made. The kick-off will be July 6 at the Community Center. Citizens who submitted recipes for the cookbook are asked to bring one or two of those recipes prepared for tasting at 7 p.m. The public is invited at 7:30 p.m.

Cookbooks will sell for $6. Tasting will require a $5 contribution. For a cookbook and tasting, you get a discount. That will cost you $8 for a cookbook and a tasting ticket. Everyone in the county is welcome to attend. Out-of-county guests are welcome, too.

For Old Settlers, a tour has been planned. It will include the Convent and the Texas Theater. Jim and M.J. McGilvray have renovated the theater into downtown living quarters. The auditorium supports a beautiful indoor pool, great for swimming year round.

Jim says he is planning to erect a sign the day of the tour that reads "Convent Tour, $100 Donation Suggested, $2 required." Tour tickets will sell for $2. This will allow admittance to the convent and the theater. In addition, if you purchase a cookbook you get a discount. Tour and cookbook will cost $7.

It was reported that the Convent Gala raised $1,600. The Convent Foundation wishes to express their appreciation to all the hostesses and everyone who made this event a big success. This will become an annual event for raising funds for the convent.

The Convent Foundation is in the process of applying for a grant from the National Trust for Historic Preservation. This grant will allow them to hire an architect to do a feasibility study and structural report.

The Foundation also is in the process of collecting letters of recommendation from local clubs and governing bodies, pictures and resumes on Board members. Community support of this project is vital to receiving this grant or any other grant.

If you can't show your support with big bucks, then support the Foundation with your presence at convent functions. Everyone's support is needed.

It is time for clubs and organizations to appoint representatives to serve on the Convent Board. These members serve one-year terms and serve to link our community together on this project.

Kenneth Tollin, retired architect with Peters & Fields in Odessa, is being considered to direct the preservation. Will Robinson, Texas Tech University professor of Historical Restoration, has said he can possibly get some of his upper level students involved in the project.

Board members present were Miles Tollison, Kathryn Burch, Jim McGilvray and Morgan Cox.

The Martin County 4-H Fashion Show was held in Garden City this year in conjunction with the Glasscock County participants.

The Farmer's Co-Op Gin of Stanton presented the $200 in prize money for participants who exhibited cotton garments. Construction awards went to Tarah Schuelke and Amanda Riley.

Tarah modeled a pillow ticking jumper with hot pink watermelons stenciled around the bottom of the dress. She also painted her tennis shoes to look like watermelons. Tarah is the 10-year-old daughter of Kenneth and Patty Schuelke.

Amanda Riley was dressed for church in a heather blue dress with romantic white collar. She is the 12-year-old daughter of Tom and Rebecca Riley.

Ready-to-Wear Division winners for the cotton award were Jessica Holloway and Kelly Harrell. In this division, participants get to practice consumer buying skills. They compare care instructions, construction, fit and fabric durability as well as how the garment fits into their wardrobe.

Belinda Riley won the Specialty Wear Division. She modeled a granny gown. The primary color print on a white background made a darling gown. She is the 9-year-old daughter of Tom and Rebecca Riley.

Jessica Holloway won the Ready-to-Wear Non-Tailored Daywear Division. Her entry was a cute, short white skirt with a t-shirt top. She is the 9-year-old daughter of Jerry and Tahita Holloway. Kelly Harrell took second place. She modeled a striking black skirt and blouse with white polka dots. She is the 11-year-old daughter of Bob and Deborah Adkins.

Jennifer Adkins won first place in the Ready-to-Wear Active Sportswear Division. She modeled a tennis ensemble trimmed in yellow turquoise. Jennifer is the 12-year-old daughter of Bob and Deborah Adkins. Justin Burch placed second. He wore his Red Sox baseball suit. He is the 9-year-old son of Rodger and Kathryn Burch.

A Calibration Field Day will be held Tuesday, June 27 at the Community Center in Stanton. The field day will begin with registration at 8:30 a.m. and the program will begin at 9 a.m.

The field day will include such topics as pesticide safety, calibration of liquid and dry insecticides, spray additives and chemigation. We will have several spray rigs for your viewing and go through the steps of calibrating.

Please call the county extension office at 756-3316 by June 26 in order that we can get a head count for the noon meal. This will be an excellent opportunity to obtain more knowledge about the proper use of chemicals. The following is a run down on the morning's program.

- 8:30 - Registration and coffee
- 9:00 - Pesticide Safety
- 9:30 - Pesticide Use
- 10:00 - Break
- 10:15 - Calibration (formulations

and instruments)

- 10:30 - Calibrating spray equipment
- 11:00 - Additives
- 11:30 - Calibrating granular insecticides
- 11:45 - Chemigation

Lunch will be served at the end of the program.

Big Spring hosts 56th annual rodeo

By STEVE BELVIN
For the Herald

BIG SPRING — It's that time of the year to go steam the crease in your Stetson and shine up your cowboy boots, because the 56th Annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo is coming to town.

The Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association annual rodeo, will begin Wednesday and conclude Saturday night.

Scheduled for nightly performances at 8:30, this year's rodeo will feature all the roping, riding, eating, pretty girls and tough hombres you can handle.

As one of the oldest and most prestigious rodeos in Texas, Big Spring's annual summer event has never been short of top name rodeo talent.

This year's rodeo purse will be in the excess of $40,000 and will no doubt draw some of the top names in the profession.

Past rodeos have attracted such big name stars as former world bull riding champs Charles Sampson, Bobby Del Vecchio and defending world champion barrel racer Charmayne James. World champion team ropers Jake Barnes and Clay O'Brien Cooper have also participated in previous Big Spring rodeos.

This rodeo will feature a all-star lineup in the fact that the PRCA Clown of the Year, Secretary of the Year and Announcer of the Year will be in attendance.

Coahoma native Quail Dobbs, who always attends the rodeo, was named Clown of the Year. He is known for his exploding car and the exploits of his dog Phyliss.

Mildred Farris of Addington, Okla. was named Secretary of the Year for the second consecutive year, and S.J. "Zoop" Dove of Farmington, N.M. Dove announced at the rodeo last year and is a 15-year veteran.

Coors, Coca-Cola and Wrangler are three of the main sponsors of the rodeo. The Big Spring Rodeo Board also puts prize money into the pot.

A added attraction to the rodeo will be the Wrangler Bullfighting competition. The Big Spring rodeo is one of only 10 designated Wrangler Jeans rodeos on the PRCA circuit. Cowboys will be vying for points and a shot at $10,000 in bonus prize money.

Rodeo clowns Smurf Horton, Chuck Kinney and Jimmy Anderson will be competing in the bullfighting event. Horton was the 1987 World Bullfighting champion.

A synonym with the Big Spring rodeo is the rodeo parade. Heading into his second year as parade chairman is Harry Middleton. The parade will move through Big Spring Wednesday, June 21 starting at 4 p.m. from Ninth and Main Streets.

Anyone who wants to participate in the parade can show up at 3:30 at Ninth and Main Streets. Marchers, horseback riders, cars and floats are welcome. Middleton can be reached at 267-59674.

Trophies will be awarded to the top finishers in the float competition.

Each night there will be rodeo competition in bull riding, saddle bronc, calf roping, steer wrestling, bareback riding, team roping and women's barrel racing.

After performances Friday and Saturday nights, a dance will follow at the fair barn. Jody Nix and his Texas Cowboys will perform. Cost is $5 per person.

For the fifth straight year, the livestock will be contracted by Mack Altizer and Bad Company Rodeo of Sonora. Altizer is considered one of finest stock contractors in the country. At 31, he's one of the youngest.

Tickets for this year's rodeo are $5 for adults, and $3 for children twelve and under. Tickets are on sale at the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce, First National Bank, Driver Insurance and Wards Boots and Western Wear.

She was preceded in death by her father, V.A. Green, and a brother, Jody Green.

Serving as pallbearers were Harold Cain, John Wilkes, Terry Childress, David Weeks, Reggie Weeks, Dave Weeks and James Mashburn.

Mae Petree

Mae Olsen Petree, 76, of Stanton, died at 4:20 a.m. on Tuesday, June 13, 1989 in Midland Memorial Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Services were held at 3 p.m. on Thursday, June 15 in the First Baptist Church with Rev. Rick Montgomery officiating. Burial was in Trinity Memorial Park in Big Spring under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

She was born May 21, 1913 in Laneville, and had lived in Stanton for 41 years. She was married to Glen Petree in July, 1948 in Stanton and had been a LVN nurse at Martin County Hospital for twenty years.

Survivors include her husband of Stanton; two sons: Paul, Midland; and David Ray, Big Spring; two daughters: Betty Wagley, Crosby; and Mrs. Larry (Caryl) Henderson, Big Spring; eight grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her parents, Willian and Maud Olsen and a sister, Charisie Robinson.

Serving as pallbearers were Aaron Petree, Bobby Petree, Jerry Petree, Wayne Petree, Robert Morgan and Don Morgan.

Annie Petree

Annie B. Petree, 93, died at Clovis High Plains Hospital Wednesday, June 7, 1989 following a lengthy illness.

Services were at 2 p.m. Friday in Wheeler's Starlight Chapel with Rev. Mike Stafford officiating. At her request, she was buried in the Portales Cemetery.

She was born Feb. 21, 1896, in Commanche. She was raised in Texas and lived for a number of years in Abilene. She married Elsworth Petree on Nov. 13, 1923 in Robert Lee and moved to a ranch near Captain, N.M. in 1936. She lived there until 1969, when she retired and moved to Portales.

For the past three years, she had been at High Plains Nursing Home in Clovis. She was a member of the Calvary Baptist Church.

Survivors include six sons: Malcolm of Albuquerque, N.M.; Wendell, Lovington, N.M.; Eugene, Deming, N.M.; Glen, Stanton; Fred, Imperial, Calif.; and Ray, San Bernardino, Calif.; five daughters: Mattie Currie, Carlsbad; Hazel Herrington, Tow; Helen Morgan, Seagraves; Faye Curtis, Seattle, Wash.; and Ann Bryant, Portales, N.M.; and a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Elsworth, who died Jan. 29, 1942; and by two children, Ross in 1962 and Billy in 1982.

Pallbearers were Darwin Jones, Bill Foster, Lavern Wall, Delbert Brown, Andy Wall and H.L. Parks. All friends served as honorary pallbearers.

Stanton firm wins fuel contract

Franklin and Son, Inc. of Stanton was the successful bidder for fueling the county Road and Bridge Department during Martin County Commissioner Court on Monday, June 12.

The Court approved a gas line crossing, and voted to advertise for bids for a used tractor and a new three-section mower.

The Commissioners requested disaster designation for the county due to weather conditions. The county's official request stated that as of June 12, less than five percent of the cotton land was up to a stand.

The Court discussed, but took no formal action, on a new state law that becomes effective in September, which would regulate new private sewage systems. New sewage systems on tracts of less than ten acres will be subject to State Health Department inspections, unless a local government entity is designated to perform the function.

The Court also approved routine bills and reports.

Recent rains cause for some hope

By MARK HOELSCHER

Recent rains have again raised our hopes for the current year, as well as interest in soil moisture monitoring. We currently have in our office a limited number of soil moisture blocks just for that purpose.

These blocks are made of gypsum with two leads imbedded in them. As the gypsum wets, current transfers more easily and the results are shown on a hand held meter plugged into the above ground portion of the leads.

The blocks can be buried at any depth, however they typically are buried in groups of three at one, two and three feet with leads extending out to the surface.

They can be read with a special conductivity meter or a simple ohm meter. The only problem being that you have to calibrate the ohm meter yourself.

Anyone interested in this program is encouraged to come by our office at 207 1/2 North Saint Peter or call us at 756-2136.

SEE
 "GONE WITH THE WIND"
 FOR 3¢.

Yes, you can see an all-time great movie for just a few cents.

Or enjoy your favorite album for less than one cent. And run an air conditioner for just 7 3/4 cents an hour.*

That's what the electricity costs for these and many other things that bring comfort, protection, convenience and pleasure into your life. And just in the last 10 years, new uses have increased dramatically—from microwave ovens and VCR's, to personal computers and more.

So it's nice to know that since you're using more, TU Electric has made it an even better value by lowering rates twice in the past five years.

After all, it's our job to make sure you get the electricity you need at a cost that's lower than you might expect.

Granddaughter of Stanton residents graduates with honors at Waxahachie

Waxahachie High School held commencement exercises for the Class of 1989 on Friday, June 2, in the Stuart B. Lumpkins Memorial Stadium. Michelle (Misha) Lea Bellah was among the 292 graduates. She graduated fifth in her class with a grade point of 5.02.

While in high school, Misha received the Mrs. D.D. Eastman Memorial Award in Homemaking, Rotary "A" Award, Optimist Scholastic Achievement Award, DAR Citizenship Award, Century Club Citizenship Award, Benton and Wanda Cain Honors English Award, Distinguished Service Award, received academic letters two years and is listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students and the Society of Distinguished American High School Students.

Misha was a member of the Student Council for four years, serving

MICHELLE BELLAH as president her senior year. She was a member of the National Honor Society for two years, serving as secretary her Senior year. She was a member of HOSA, Spanish Club for two years and was in the Interact Club. She participated in tennis for two years, was tennis manager for two years, and was a nominee for Miss Waxahachie High School and Teacher's Pet. She is active in all youth activities at First Baptist Church in Waxahachie.

Misha received the Wal-Mart Scholarship (one year) and the M.E. Singleton Scholarship (four years). She will attend Texas A&M University, majoring in English. She plans to teach on the college level.

Misha is the daughter of Martha and Lee Bellah, and the granddaughter of Troy and Alyene Bradshaw of Stanton.
