Martin ASCS reports

STANTON — The Martin County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service is currently accepting acreage reports for 1989 planted, idled and other farm program acres.

The final reporting date is July 17, Nestor Hernandez, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office said.

"Farmers who meet this deadline will avoid paying a late reporting fee," Hernandez added.

Before program participants can receive price support loans, deficiency payments and other benefits, the entire farm must be certified. Program participants are required to report their crops and acreages planted and the uses to be made of these crops, acreage conservation reserve, or idled cropland.

"Farmers who are not participating in the 1989 programs should report their crops to ensure future benefits and to protect acreage bases," Hernandez said.

After producers report their acres, the ASCS county office will select farms at random to verify that the reports are accurate.

Spring seeded crops may be certified by calling the Martin County ASCS Office for an appointment.

"We encourage farmers to certify as soon as possible after planting and not wait until the July 17 deadline to report their acres," he said.

Students to dance

COLORADO CITY — A student dance will be held Saturday at the middle school cafeteria from 8 p.m. until midnight.

Admission will be $3 per person.

Open play day

BIG SPRING — The Howard County Youth Horseman Club will have an open play day at 7 p.m. Saturday at the club arena on the Garden City Highway.

Monday the club will meet at the arena at 7 p.m. and on Tuesday they will have a trail ride beginning at 7 a.m.

God and country

COLORADO CITY — The annual God and Country Celebration sponsored by the Southern Baptist churches of Mitchell County will be held at the First Baptist Church in Colorado City Sunday at 7 p.m.

Special speaker will be Darold Baldwin of Snyder, who recently assumed duties as director of missions for Southern Baptists work in Mitchell, Scurry and Nolan counties.

Michael Young, minister of music at Calvary Baptist Church in Colorado City will direct a combined choir.

Sponsoring churches include First Baptist Church of Loraine, First Baptist Church of Westbrook and Calvary Baptist, Oak Street Baptist, Plainview Baptist and First Baptist of Colorado City.

$50,000 escape?

PECOS (AP) — Authorities say they believe two federal prisoners were allowed to escape from a privately run jail in Pecos in exchange for $50,000 and a Mexican cattle ranch.

A guard and prison trusty have been arrested and are accused of assisting in the escape from the West Texas jail. Officials told The Dallas Morning News that the investigation is continuing and that more guards may be arrested.

Officials say that Elias Herrera Corral and his son, Elias Herrera Terrazas Jr., escaped from the Reeves County Correctional Center on Sunday, but were recaptured Wednesday.

The Herreras were awaiting trial on charges of delivering 7.5 pounds of heroin and 4.5 pounds of cocaine to undercover agents.

Controversy brews over phone plan

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The city council's recent approval of a telephone company's "economic development package" might benefit area phone service, but consumer groups argue the company is trying to keep from paying Texas customers a $90 million refund.

"The (improvements) they should do anyway. They have an obligation as a regulated entity to stay modern and provide services Texans want," said Janee Briesemeister, project utilities director for Consumers Union. The consumer advocate organization is one of six such groups that oppose Southwestern Bell's "Texas First" plan.

The telephone company recently made proposals to Big Spring and cities across Texas to upgrade service; make refinements in the service; eliminate mileage charges on one and two party lines; freeze local rates and reduce charges paid by long distance companies to access the phone company's local network, which in turn should reduce long distance rates.

"The plan is almost custom-made for West Texas," said Darlene Gifford, area public relations manager for Southwestern Bell. The elimination of mileage charges, reducing rates for calls between the city and outlying area, is an especially attractive proposal for West Texas, she said.

The plan would also benefit the rest of the state by providing a quality phone system, which could be an incentive in drawing new businesses to Texas, she said.

Gifford said cities that chose not to support the program could indicate the people either "don't trust us or are not interested in economic well-being in their area. I just can't see a city... not being in support of this," she said.

A city's failure to support the program will not mean the phone company won't initiate Texas First programs in that city, Gifford said.

"There's no vindictiveness here," she said.

Opposition to the plan is largely the work of consumer groups working out of Austin who favor an advocacy approach to the problem. That approach seeks to have the phone company pay back customers for any overcharges, she said.

About 150 cities, including Dallas, Odessa and several small towns from the surrounding area have endorsed the plan. The phone company has been asking cities to approve the Texas First proposition because the company wants to have "grassroots support" for the plan, she said.

Notice of the support is then given to the phone company's regulating agency, the Public Utilities Commission.

"They want to get our attention," PUC Spokesman Bill Dunn said. "We certainly pay attention to what cities and chambers of commerce think. They are not the only ones writing us though."

Dunn said consumer advocates have expressed their displeasure with the Texas First plan.

"In all fairness, (Southwestern Bell representatives) feel like they have a good program," Dunn said.

Consumer advocates have charged that the telephone company's

Officials attend new laws meeting

By RUTH COCHRAN
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — The long arm of the law generally gets longer when the Texas Legislature convenes.

Legislators pass fistfuls of new laws with each session.

Keeping up with the changes can be difficult for police officers, judges and prosecutors, but Governor

Bill Clements has taken care of that.

After the 70th session, Clements created a conference to acquaint law enforcement officials with new legislation.

The governor sponsored another conference recently to follow up the 71st session, and Big Spring Police Chief Joe Cook and Howard County Justice of the Peace China Long both jumped at the chance to attend.

Cook said the conference, attended by about 700 law enforcement officials from across the state, dealt not only with recently passed legislation, but also with the governor's plans for the state's criminal justice system.

"They had various panels... made up of some of the people out of the governor's criminal justice system... legislators... and aides who had worked on the bills," Cook said of the conference.

The morning session, he said, involved HB 2335, the Omnibus Criminal Reform Bill.

"They're going to try to systematically deal with the corrections problem in the state, he said. "I believe what they're going to be striving for is broadening the handling of convicted criminals."

According to plans outlined at the conference, state officials will try to consolidate the criminal justice system out of the governor's office into three divisions, Cook said. The three include a community justice assistance division, an institutional division, and a board of pardons and paroles division.

The reform, Cook said, looks at alternative sentencing in local

Doctor's warning letters a mistake

By JOHN FLORES
Special to the Herald

BIG SPRING — For Dr. Clyde E. Thomas Jr., the period since his recent retirement has been anything but pleasant.

The Office of the Inspector General, a division of the Department of Health and Human Services, recently issued a warning notice to patients of the THOMAS

Big Spring physician — which Thomas and some national health officials say was not accurate.

The letter was an advisory to Thomas' patients stating "reimbursement for all services rendered by Doctor Thomas will be denied under the Medicare Program (title XVIII of the Social Security Act). This action is being taken because of his conviction of a criminal offense related to his participation in the title XVIII program."

Thomas denied any wrongdoing, and has referred the case to his lawyer, and son, Mike Thomas of Big Spring.

Dr. Thomas said a second letter, also sent to patients, was recently delivered to his son. Thomas said the second letter refuted the first letter's claim that he had been convicted of a criminal offense. "But the letter said I was censured from accepting any further Medicare patients."

"They (the Office of the Inspector General) called yesterday and said to my son Mike that they (the Department of Health and Human Services) had no claim against me. I had not been censured," Thomas said.

The letters prompted Thomas to proclaim to his patients, in an advertisement in the Big Spring Herald recently, that "... a letter has gone out stating that I have been convicted of a criminal offense. I want to assure you I have never been convicted of a criminal offense."

A Texas Medical Foundation spokesperson made no comment on the case, but referred inquiries to the Washington office of the inspector general.

Bush pushes for anti flag burning amendment

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush, using the statue of the nation's most famous flag-raising scene as a backdrop, today urged passage and ratification of a "simple, stark and to-the-point" constitutional amendment to ban flag burning.

The president spoke before a hastily assembled crowd at a ceremony at the Iwo Jima Memorial, the statue of five Marines raising the flag on a Pacific island during World War II.

Bush used the ceremony to register his support for a Republican-drafted proposed amendment that asserts: "The Congress and the states shall have power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States."

"This flag is one of our most powerful ideas," Bush declared. "If it is not defended, it is defamed... it represents the fabric of our nation."

Bush said the statue behind him, a huge bronze casting of a photograph by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal, was "stunning... even now it humbles us, it inspires us."

Bush said that the amendment drafted by Republican congressional leaders with the support of some Democrats was "simple, stark and to-the-point."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas praised Bush for supporting the amendment and called it "a serious step" to circumvent last week's 5-4 Supreme Court ruling that said flag burning is a form of free expression protected by the Constitution.

Dole said that people across the nation were speaking out against the ruling. "People are saying, keep your hands off Old Glory," he said.

Also speaking at the ceremony were co-sponsors of the amendment, House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois and two Democrats, Sen. Alan Dixon of Illinois and Rep. Sonny Montgomery of Mississippi.

Both Democrats and Republicans have publicly deplored the Supreme Court decision, but a spokesman for the Democratic National Committee accused Bush of using the issue for political opportunism.

"He's running for president instead of being president," Mike McCurry, DNC communications director, said Wednesday. "The heroes of Iwo Jima didn't die so they could become a backdrop for some political photo opportunity."

Bush used the flag ceaselessly in his presidential campaign last year.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said Thursday the House Judiciary Committee will begin hearings on the flag issue in July.

Lawmakers frustrated by workers compensation impasse

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers adjourned for the long holiday weekend on a sour note over the issue that brought them here in the first place — workers' compensation.

House Speaker Gib Lewis on Thursday blasted special interests picking over a proposed overhaul of the state workers' comp system and said another special legislative session may be needed to break the impasse.

"I don't remember any issue that I have been so frustrated over in my life," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Lawmakers have been in special session since June 20 after failing during the 140-day regular session to reach a compromise on the issue of compensating workers who are injured in on-the-job accidents.

"Nobody wants to be fair. It's all greed, and nobody wants to give an inch," Lewis said. Meanwhile, he said, employers and workers are getting a "raw deal."

"You've got the highest premium charges and the lowest benefits," he said.

"I had some scandalous things exposed to me on how workers' comp works... and it's really disheartening to see how people who should not be involved in the system at all have raped, robbed, and pillaged the system."

"I'm talking about doctors, insurance companies and trial lawyers and everybody that is connected with the system," he said.

Although most lawmakers left Austin for the July 4 period, Lewis said closed-door negotiations between key legislators will continue.

But, he added, "I don't think we can get there this special session," he said.

State Rep. Richard Smith, who has been meeting with Senators in the private negotiations, said, "We are not near getting a bill agreed to by the Senate, but we are making progress, and it's very slow."

"It's not real encouraging at this point," Smith, R-Bryan, said. Smith said the House will consider his bill in about one week.

The major dispute is over whether to allow disputed workers' comp claims to go to a jury trial. A Senate proposal maintains the right to a jury trial, while the House wants to eliminate the trials in favor of an administrative system of resolving disputes.

Businesses say that jury trials have driven up the cost of workers' comp insurance premiums, which have increased 148 percent over the past four years, but labor groups and trial lawyers, who represent injured workers in court, say the increases are due to inadequate work safety conditions and greedy insurance companies.

Rig capsizes; three missing

FREEPORT (AP) — Coast Guard divers arrived this morning at the site of an oil-drilling vessel that capsized in the Gulf of Mexico near Freeport, but winds and high seas delayed a search for three missing crewmen, officials said.

A fourth man on a fishing vessel helping in the search fell overboard and also is missing, said Lt. Don Merwin with the U.S. Coast Guard in Galveston.

Six workers from the vessel Titan, containing a jack-up rig, were rescued late Thursday by Coast Guard helicopter and boat crews. The men suffered only minor injuries, including one with a broken ankle, Merwin said.

AUSTIN — Austin police escort Paul Stedman Cullen into the Austin police station Thursday afternoon. Cullen is charged with the poisoning of the historical Treaty Oak tree.

Suspect arrested for poisoning tree

AUSTIN (AP) — The Travis County district attorney praised an "outpouring of support from the community" for the historic Treaty Oak after a man was charged with felony criminal mischief in the poisoning of the tree.

Paul Stedman Cullen, 45, of Elroy, was being held in lieu of $20,000 bail in connection with the poisoning, authorities announced in a Thursday news conference at the centuries-old tree. Elroy is a community south of Austin.

Authorities said the pouring of the powerful herbicide Velpar around the tree's base may have occurred during some sort of ritual. Police would not elaborate.

"The arrest is a tribute to both the good work of the Austin Police Department and to the caring of this community," said District Attorney Ronald Earle, noting that several residents phoned in tips to police.

"The people who live here have a pretty high awareness of their environment and take steps to preserve it," he said.

Cullen was arrested at 11:41 a.m. near a farm and ranch supply store where he worked, said Austin Police Sgt. John Jones, who investigated the case. The warrant said Cullen acquired Velpar through the business.

An arrest warrant authorized by State District Judge Jon Wisser said Cullen poisoned the Treaty Oak "in a ritual."

Wisser said that before he signed the warrant, investigators told him Cullen had checked out books from the public library on black magic and the occult.

Earlier, the Austin-American Statesman reported an unidentified suspect in the poisoning had been trying to cast a spell to protect a woman or because of a rivalry over a woman.

The judge also said police told him that Cullen had a prison record for burglary, was known to carry a pistol and was believed to have mental problems.

"So, I set bond at $20,000 because it sounded like he was a fairly unstable, dangerous individual," Wisser said.

Cullen was charged with second-degree felony criminal mischief and faces a maximum of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine if convicted. A prior felony conviction would allow that to be raised to a first-degree felony, with a maximum punishment of life in prison and a $20,000 fine, Earle said.

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles said Cullen was released from prison on March 19, 1987, after serving three months of a two-year sentence for burglary in Travis County.

Cullen was under parole supervision until December 30, 1988, said Karin Armstrong, spokeswoman for the board of pardons and paroles.

Wisser said Jones told him he had listened to a tape on which Cullen said he poisoned the tree. Jones said last week that several callers identified the same suspect and that the man supposedly had told others about the episode.

Tighter control of Texas pollution urged

AUSTIN (AP) — More than a dozen groups urged national and state leaders to take steps to reduce the emission of toxic air pollutants in Texas.

The state ranks first in the nation among the 50 states in toxic air pollution, according to data compiled by the Environmental Protection Agency, the coalition said.

"We are here to send a strong message to our elected officials that polluters do not have the right to trespass into our communities, our homes, and in our bodies with dangerous toxic chemicals," Jeanne McMatier, director of the Austin office of Texans United, said Thursday.

Other groups calling for stricter pollution regulations and enforcement were the Sierra Club, Citizen Action, American Lung Association, Audubon Society, Public Citizen, Texas People Organized to Win Environmental Rights, Baytown Citizens Against Pollution and Citizens for Quality Environment.

"Now is the time for Texas itself to take the lead in reducing toxic air emissions and in eventually eliminating emissions of any cancer-causing substances," said Ken Kramer, director of the Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club.

The groups called for support of a toxic air control bill by U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, and for a state interim committee to study the problem of toxic emissions.

Industries in Texas emitted about 238 million pounds of reported toxic releases from major industrial sources in 1987, Kramer said.

The groups released a list of the 25 Texas counties that reported the most toxic releases into the air and named the "dirty dozen companies" that have reported the most toxic pollutant emissions.

The counties are Harris, Jefferson, Brazoria, Calhoun, Galveston, Orange, Harrison, Milam, Brown, Tarrant, Dallas, Nueces, Hutchinson, Victoria, Matagorda, Gray, Howard, San Patricio, Angelina, Gregg, Moore, Bell, Travis, El Paso and Bexar.

The 12 companies that release the most toxic emissions named by the coalition are: Aluminum Co. of America, Point Comfort; Texas Eastman Co., Longview; Union Carbide, Texas City; Dow Chemical, Freeport; Aluminum Co. of America, Rockdale; 3M Company, Brownwood; Amoco Chemical Co., Alvin; Chevron U.S.A. Inc., Port Arthur; Shell Oil Co., Deer Park; DuPont Beaumont Works, Beaumont; DuPont Sabine River Works, Orange; Texaco Refining & Marketing, Inc., Port Arthur.

Tourism is up in state

AUSTIN (AP) — Tourism rose in Texas for the first quarter of 1989, compared with last year, according to a study conducted for the Texas Department of Commerce.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday hotel-motel room revenues rose about $28.6 million from $441.5 million during the first three months of 1988 to $470.1 million for the first quarter of 1989.

"That's good news for the Texas economy," William Lauderback, executive director of the Commerce Department, said.

In addition to room revenue gains, the statewide average room occupancy rate rose to 50.2 percent in 1989's first quarter from 47.5 percent in the same period of 1988.

Governor: Protect crime victims but keep records open

AUSTIN (AP) — Information on felony crime victims should be open to the public and the media, but not to companies trying to sell security or alarm systems, says Gov. Bill Clements.

"We will not stand by and allow Texans to be preyed upon by criminals and unscrupulous business practices," the governor said in a news release announcing he had opened the special legislative session for consideration of changes in a recently passed law on crime victim identity.

Clements said Thursday that state law shouldn't restrict information available to the media.

"Allowing the Texas Open Records Act to become the Texas Closed Records Act is inexcusable," Clements said. "Clearly, the Texas media has a right, indeed an obligation, to fully and accurately inform the people of Texas."

"This information is essential to their responsibility as public representatives," he said.

The new law, which allows government agencies including police and fire departments to withhold the names of felony crime victims, has angered news organizations and confused police.

State lawmakers, who asked Clements to put the issue on the special session agenda, have said the measure was meant to protect crime victims from sales pitches by security and alarm companies. They said it has been misinterpreted and misapplied.

Clements urged legislators to amend rather than repeal the law. He said penalties should be established for people or businesses that use crime victim information for commercial profit.

The bill's author, Rep. Fred Blair, D-Dallas, earlier Thursday said he wanted to repeal the law "because of what is going on now and because of the future misapplication of the bill."

Thought to be the first of its kind in the United States, the measure allows the withholding of victims' names, addresses and other identifying information.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, a frequent sponsor of open-records legislation, said the bill "just slipped through," during the regular legislative session, which ended May 29.

Blair said, "There was no opposition (to the bill) at any level. It went through the process like every other normal bill does."

"It's just that those who were interested didn't pay any attention and didn't do anything about it," he said, referring to the lack of opposition by news organizations.

"I think the lawmakers are just like you and everybody else," Blair told reporters. "I think all the lawmakers saw the bill as I saw the bill."

Clements signed the measure June 14. He said later that he hadn't thought it would put crime victim information "in seclusion."

News organizations throughout Texas have been unable to get routine crime information, such as the names of people killed in drunken driving accidents.

Numerous police departments have sealed or severely restricted their arrest and offense reports. Some departments were studying the law before making changes in policies on releasing information.

State troopers have been told to withhold any victim information in a possible felony crime.

Texas Media, a volunteer-run, freedom of information group composed of statewide news organizations, didn't notice the bill as it went through the Legislature, said chairwoman Sharon Jayson.

"Texas Media is so new that I think it's going to take some (legislative) sessions to get everybody in gear," she said. The group watched and researched about 50 of the more than 5,000 bills lawmakers filed in the regular session, she said.

The organization did the best it could to protect open meetings and open records laws this session, Ms. Jayson said.

"I've talked to several legislators who called me themselves in the past few days and said, 'What happened? How did this happen?' and they (had) voted for it," Ms. Jayson said.

"It shows that there's a problem. Things slip through," she said. "No matter how good anybody does their job, things slip through."

Bill Libercci, deputy director of the office of the inspector general in Baltimore, Md., said Thomas was not guilty of any criminal actions, or other abuses, claimed in the previous letters to Thomas' patients.

"The carrier notice was incorrect," Libercci said. "We're in the process of correcting the problem now. Dr. Thomas has never been, to my knowledge, convicted of anything," Libercci said.

Thomas said the case is being investigated, and will continue to be investigated until his name has been officially cleared.

"We want a written apology from the inspector general's office," Mike Thomas said.

proposed improvements plan is being used to divert attention away from an investigation by the utilities commission concerning overcharging by the company.

"Their response to the complaint is 'Texas First,'" Briesemeister said.

Dunn agreed. "That's pretty much our position."

The utilities commission estimates Southwestern Bell has overcharged consumers by $90 million per year.

"We felt that was a conservative amount," Dunn said. The commission has received some information from the company on its earnings, but does not have any definitive figures on an actual overcharge amount, he said.

Gifford called the $90 million overcharge estimate a "passe figure" the PUC created "out of the blue." It is believed Southwestern Bell made some "overearnings," but an exact figure is not known, she said.

"I know they say (the actual overcharge) is by $21 million now," Briesemeister said. "Two months ago they said (they owed) nothing."

One of the main features of the phone company's plan is to freeze local rates. "Even if the cost of living rate may rise they will have the same rate for five years," Gifford said. Rates for local calls are the lowest in the nation by 20 percent, she said.

"That statistic is new to me," Dunn said, but added it is not necessarily untrue. Texas does have one of the lowest rates, he said.

But the standard for unacceptable rates is not how they compare with other states, it's how they compare with profits the company makes, Dunn said. "It's possible to have the lowest rates in the country and yet still be too high," he said.

The PUC believes Southwestern Bell's profits exceed the utilities commissions allowed rate of approximately 12 percent.

Southwestern Bell's profits may have been able to rise in recent years because of a change in the tax laws, Dunn said. In 1986 corporate taxes were reduced by approximately 46 percent.

Unless the communication company has as-yet-undetermined costs of operating, it means the profits have increased, perhaps substantially, Dunn said. The current PUC inquiry seeks to establish if the lowering of the corporation tax has resulted in over earnings by the phone company and to establish where the rates should be.

"We have some reason to believe . . . their payment of lower taxes now makes the current charges excessive," he said.

Briesemeister said rates for local service have been going down in recent years. A freeze will keep the rates artificially high, she said.

Gifford said it would be difficult to say what will happen if the PUC ordered the phone company to return the overcharges. "They really like our plan, I don't think they'll issue such a cut and dried decision," she said.

Dunn said any decision on the PUC inquiry could take some time. Even if a decision were issued against the phone company, there is a question if the utilities commission could force Southwestern Bell to pay back its' costumers.

Dunn cited a previous case where the utilities commission ordered General Telephone to pay back its' customers for several million dollars in overcharges. The phone company raised objections to the legality of the commissions' ruling and the case is now awaiting trial in U.S. District Court.

Dunn predicted, "It's going to take some time. This is going to be a highly contested, controversial, ground-breaking case."

Kingdom of the crabs

CHRISTMAS ISLAND, Australia — For about two weeks each November, 120 million forest-dwelling red crabs migrate to the shore for mating and spawning on Australia's Christmas Island, their sharp claws wrecking havoc on motorists' tires. Some one million are killed by heat distress or are crushed by traffic, but the casualty rate doesn't make a dent in the enormous crab population.

Thomas

Thomas admitted that he has had problems with the Texas Medical Foundation, a regulatory agency based in Austin, but did not disclose the exact nature of those problems. A spokesperson at the Foundation declined to comment regarding Thomas' statement.

Thomas did refer to the Foundation's tendency to cite "small-town hospitals and physicians" for negligence, malpractice and/or abuses more often than those located in metropolitan areas, "because it's very easy for them to check the charts in small towns . . . they couldn't go through all the charts in the city hospitals . . . there's too many of them," he said.

Thomas said such regulatory actions can hurt the small-town physician.

Mike Thomas, investigating the case with a Houston attorney, Charles R. Kaufmann, said the case is complex, and is not likely to be resolved in the near future.

"It's pretty complicated," he said. "I don't know what's going on, to tell you the truth," he said.

East Germany accused of passing loan to terrorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $600 million loan by American and other western banks to communist East Germany in 1985 wound up in Libya, and part of it was used by terrorists against Americans, says a former staffer for the National Security Council.

About $60 million of the money was divided evenly among the Red Brigades in Germany, the Provisional Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland and the M-19 guerrilla force in Colombia, said Norman A. Bailey, senior director of national security planning from 1981 to 1983.

White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said today the Bush administration "has no information to substantiate such an allegation."

The official Libyan news agency JANA denied Bailey's contention, saying: "Such claims are the latest inventions of the machine of misinformation and lies. . . One cannot . . . receive such claims with ridicule and laugh at them and at the people who fabricated them."

The loan was arranged by the First National Bank of Chicago along with the International Bank of Japan, according to Tom Lindeman, a spokesman for the Chicago bank. He added that about 50 banks of several nationalities took part and the agent was the Arab Banking Corp. of Bahrain.

Bailey said the money was traced by the National Security Agency, a highly secret agency that eavesdrops on international communications for U.S. intelligence operations.

Narcotics officer collects past due overtime check

CONROE (AP) — Crime doesn't pay, but Conroe policeman Edd Jordan has learned that overtime does.

Along with his regular monthly wages, Jordan today will get a check for $18,436.38 in back overtime pay for narcotics work.

"I've already bought my wife a new car. She's needed one a long time," said Jordan, adding that "Uncle Sam will be pleased" to take a 28 percent share of the windfall.

Jordan, 33, is one of numerous peace officers in Conroe and Montgomery County whose overtime was long overdue.

He took his case to the City Council last week, requesting payment for 1,700 overtime hours he accrued over 31 months with the Montgomery County Narcotics Task Force, a special unit of Conroe police and county sheriff's officers.

Jordan, who has switched to patrol duties, said he had repeatedly asked former Police Chief Mike Arthur and Deputy Chief John Lindon for the overtime pay, but was told that the money was not in the budget.

communities as a solution to the criminal justice system's problems, such as overcrowding. Cook said he doesn't think the reform will drastically affect the crime problem on the local level, but it will help.

"They're saying what we're doing now is not working," he said. "They think there are alternatives out there."

"I don't think that we're going to see any real impact on the local level for quite some time."

While he found the reform bill interesting, Cook said he was more interested in recently passed legislation that can affect the Big Spring crime scene.

"Maybe I'm too far removed (from them)," he said. "I'm concerned with what we do here and now in Big Spring."

To that end, Cook was especially interested in the oral confession bill. Previously, Texas did not allow oral confessions as evidence in court cases. With the new bill, however, electronically recorded confessions may be admitted.

"When I got into state law enforcement it was a big, major hurdle," Cook said of the old rule. "It's definitely an improvement."

There were also some lesser bills covered — some 100 in all that will directly affect officers in Big Spring, Cook said.

Although, he would have reviewed the new bills eventually, Cook said the conference gave him a head start on educating department personnel.

"I wasn't up on it," Cook said of the new legislation. "I simply hadn't had time to trail these new bills. It gives us a jump. We can start instructing our officers in the changes in the code."

Mudslinging out of place

Although Lee Atwater's pit-bull approach to politics has won him high praise among many of the Republican Party faithful, it has made him a liability to the GOP in general and the Bush administration in particular. Two recent incidents show the abrasive Mr. Atwater, who masterminded George Bush's dramatic comeback victory last November, to be ill-suited as chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Several weeks ago, Mr. Atwater approved by phone the sleazy memorandum insinuating that newly installed House Speaker Tom Foley is a homosexual. After persuading President Bush that he had not personally seen the vicious hit piece before it was released, he promised to be more careful in the future. Whereupon he proceeded to embarrass the party with an inflammatory, partisan speech during last week's conference of mayors in Charleston, S.C.

In both instances, Mr. Atwater was quick to attribute most of the heavy fallout to spiteful Democrats who are still smarting over his pivotal role in demolishing Gov. Michael Dukakis's presidential candidacy. Yet, this disingenuous response ignores the problems that Atwater's scorched-earth tactics pose for Republicans.

There is a fine line between being a politically adept gunslinger, which party chieftains are supposed to be, and a self-indulgent mudslinger — a crucial distinction Mr. Atwater fails to grasp. To the contrary, he seizes upon every opportunity to smear Democratic opponents, no matter what the negative consequences.

For example, the day after the scurrilous Foley memorandum was drafted and distributed by Mark Goodin, his former aide and protege, Mr. Atwater defiantly defended it as "no big deal." His facile assessment changed abruptly when Republican leaders, led by the President, denounced this as the dirty trick it was. As a consequence, Mr. Atwater promptly conceded that it was indeed in bad taste and accepted Mr. Goodin's "resignation."

Given Mr. Atwater's relentless instinct for the Democratic jugular, it's difficult to take him at his word that he meant Speaker Foley no harm. This, after all, is the same man, who after being accused in 1980 by a Democratic congressional candidate of planting stories about his electro-shock therapy as a teen-ager, said he would not respond to allegations made by someone who had been "hooked up to jumper cables."

Mr. Atwater's rationalizations notwithstanding, he must be held strictly accountable for the despicable Foley memorandum. As party chairman, he helps to set the moral tone for Republican campaigns. Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., said it best, "if you run a sleazy campaign...to build a majority by trashing the other side, it has a tremendous potential to backfire."

So long as the Atwater-smear syndrome pervades the Republican National Committee, the GOP will have forfeited the high ground that the Democrats' ethical problems had given it. Republicans are, accordingly, increasingly vulnerable to a voter backlash against the smear strategy. And so long as Lee Atwater is chairman, the Republican Party will be stuck in the muck. If he doesn't have the good sense to resign for the good of the party, President Bush should show him the door.

Flag deserves respect

By Lisa Swinney

John A. Dix, Secretary of the Treasury in 1861, said: "If anyone attempts to haul down the flag, shoot him on the spot." Flag-burning is an outrage. An even more outrageous atrocity is the Supreme Court's ruling.

Would the Constitution's writers agree? Would they let such a desecration bypass without a price? Surely, the least of punishments would be denial of American citizenship. Our "flower of liberty" as O.W. Holmes termed it, is more than a piece of flimsy cloth blowing in the wind.

The flag is our freedom standard. Its stripes represent thirteen colonies made of freedom-loving people. The stars are symbolic of the fifty states, each one composed of multitudinal molecules, each representing a citizen...you and I. Within these states, our ancestors lived and fought for the liberties we now have.

We are the people. We are the flag. We are born of the stars and stripes.

"What is love of country for which our flag stands? It is the great multitude of people, charged with the usual human feelings, yet filled with such a hope as never caught the imaginations and the hearts of any nation on earth before. The hope of liberty. The hope of justice. The hope of a land in which man can stand straight, without fear, without rancor.

The land and the people and the flag...to these each generation must be dedicated and consecrated anew, to defend with life itself...but above all, in friendliness, in hope, in courage..." (This Land and Flag, author unknown)

If destruction of the flag is now allowed, what's next? Will assassination be legalized? Will there be vandalism of monuments and historical sites for the sake of freedom? What will become of America?

The Supreme Court has gone too far in attempting to honor the Constitution. This excess compromises our forefathers' principles. Yet, it is the highest court in the land. There is none other to appeal to. The court is made of people and people are destined to make mistakes. It is our duty to pledge our allegiance to the flag, take up honor, and point this out if we have to fight for justice.

Remember The American's Creed by William Tyler Page: "I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its Constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies."

We must also remember those gallant men on Iwo Jima who raised the flag as it began to fall. We are the majority. We have the freedom of speech.

Let the people have their say and may our flag be raised on high: untainted, visible, clean, and pure. It is woven with the threads of men's lives who have lived, fought, and died for the cause Old Glory embodies. History cannot be unraveled. "And the Star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave, O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave." (Francis Scott Key, The Star-Spangled Banner)

Jordan's house on shaky ground

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein of Jordan knows how to handle monarchy, but matrimony is another matter. He is on his fourth wife, an American-born debutante whose Cinderella story is second only to that of Grace Kelly. But our sources in Jordan say that 37-year-old Queen Noor has become something of a liability for the king and he has set his sights on a fifth wife.

The object of Hussein's interest is a 21-year old woman whose mother is an American and father a Palestinian. If Hussein wants to marry again, he can divorce Queen Noor or simply add another wife under Moslem law.

The reports we have gathered illustrate that Queen Noor, the former Elizabeth (Lisa) Halaby, has simply not gone over well with Jordanians. Many in her adopted country are not happy with her lifestyle and not sure of her commitment to Jordan.

Public grouting about the queen could not come at a worse time for the king. His normally stable country has been broken by austerity measures and torn by rioting. The prime minister, Hussein's boyhood friend, was forced to resign because Jordanians blame him for their troubles.

Queen Noor is perceived, by the Jordanians we spoke to, as part of the problem — a die-hard shopper who flaunts expensive jewels and designer clothes. She is more nouveau royal than regal.

Hussein is building a new castle for Queen Noor, setting the rumor mill in motion with the speculation that he wants to put her away in a pampered corner so he can set up housekeeping with someone new. One Jordanian official told us the government put out an "official rumor" that the house was a gift from the Sultan of Oman.

Jordanians have complained about the queen's indulgence in cosmetic surgery. Our sources say that the government-controlled press was once instructed not to use any photos of the queen for two weeks while she recovered from a nose job.

Most disconcerting to the royal house is that Jordanians are openly gossiping about the close friendship the queen developed with actor Sean Connery when he was in Jordan filming "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade." Press reports in the United States hinted recently that the queen's interest in the filming and her visits to the set were more than ceremonial, but her spokespeople have denied that the queen is anything more than a fan and a friend of Connery.

A spokesman at the Jordanian embassy in Washington, D.C., said the rumors about the queen and Connery are "ridiculous." He declined to comment on the personal relationship of the royal couple. Hussein's track record at the altar has not been good. He was married briefly at 19 to an Egyptian distant cousin who was seven years his senior. After their divorce, she went on to marry a Palestinian guerilla.

Wife No. 2 was also non-Jordanian — a British officer's daughter whom he renamed Muna al Hussein or Desire of Hussein. The desire wore off and they divorced, but remained friends.

Hussein's third wife, Alia, was the first that carried the title of queen. She was the daughter of a prominent Jordanian family. She died in 1977 in a helicopter crash. By all accounts, the king fell into a deep depression and barely tended to the affairs of state.

Then along came Lisa Halaby, the 27-year-old daughter of Najeeb Halaby, former head of the Federal Aviation Administration and chairman of Pan Am. The Princeton-educated Lisa was working as a designer for Royal Jordanian Airlines and met the king when she advised him on an unfinished guest palace.

He proposed. She converted to Islam. He renamed her Noor al-Hussein, Light of Hussein. And they became a modern fairy tale. Except the queen doesn't quite fit. She tried learning Arabic but Jordanians told us she uses it sparingly in public because her command of it is not good.

Hussein had seven children from his early marriages and three with Queen Noor. If they split, she would probably have to leave the children with Hussein.

Some things worse than toe-lickers

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

A number of readers have enquired recently about my new dog, Cornbread.

Cornbread is a 6-month-old male black Lab, and I have paired him with the grizzled veteran Catfish, also a male of the same breed.

People want to know, "How does Catfish like having another dog around the house?"

I'm not certain since Catfish can't talk. But the look on his face when Cornbread bites him on the ears, or outruns him to a tennis ball seems to be saying, "How could you have done this to me?" Sibling rivalries. I've heard about that sort of thing before, and why shouldn't it apply to dogs?

Cornbread has turned out to be a toe-licker. I've heard about that before, too. Erotic novels are full of that sort of thing, and, again, why shouldn't it also apply to dogs?

A toe-licker isn't the worse kind of dog you can get. The worst kind of dog is an egg-sucker.

I had an egg-sucker once. His name was Leonard. He hung out around the chicken coop, and when the hens had finished their business, he would root his way under the fence and suck a few eggs.

"You have to get rid of Leonard," my grandfather said.

Lewis Grizzard

"He's an egg-sucker."

I might have had to give Leonard his walking papers had it not been for an incident that occurred soon after my grandfather's ominous statement.

Leonard was on his way to the hen area one morning and got into a rift with our rooster, Garland. Garland gave Leonard such a whipping the dog never went near the chicken coop again. And whenever he smelled eggs cooking, he would run under the bed and whimper.

In an effort to find out if Cornbread was an egg-sucker, I opened the refrigerator door and pointed out the eggs to him to see what he would do. (They don't allow chickens in my neighborhood.)

Cornbread showed no interest in the eggs whatsoever. He grabbed a pound of ground chuck instead. What relief I felt.

I first learned Cornbread was a toe-licker early one morning. I had thrown off my covers and my feet and toes were exposed.

I was in the midst of a dream in which I was attempting to walk through a field covered with green jello. I awakened, however, to find Cornbread licking my toes.

I asked the vet if the fact Cornbread licked toes meant the dog was suffering from any sort of physical or mental disorder.

"Not that I know of," said the vet, "but if he stops licking your toes and starts biting and chewing them, you've got a real problem."

Biting and chewing, indeed. Like Catfish before him, Cornbread has done some serious damage.

He ate my glasses recently. He chewed up one of my golf shoes. Even the spikes had teeth marks.

He has gnawed the legs on several chairs, he attacked a pillow and won, he destroyed a wool blanket a friend brought me from New Zealand, and one morning I took him out and he started chewing on one of the tires on my car.

Other than all that, he's a wonderful dog. He's happy. He's friendly. He's smart. And he's mine.

Catfish, I am certain, eventually will learn to accept him as a part of the family, and sleeping in a pair of socks hasn't been nearly as bad an experience as I thought it might be.

Freedom to be a jerk

By STEVE RAY Herald Editor

"I don't consider myself an American. I'm not. I'm an internationalist, a proletarian internationalist." — Joey Johnson, flag burner.

I've never been a particular believer in that old bumper sticker "My country — love it or leave it." Somehow those words seemed to imply you had to agree with everything our government did in order to be patriotic.

Just because you disagree with the government's decision of a matter, didn't mean you love America any the less.

But I've got to admit, that the flag burning Communist who got off without so much as a slap on the hand is a little bit irritating.

Gregory "Joey" Johnson of New York City, a member of the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade, was spared a prison term when the U.S. Supreme Court issued a ruling that limited the power of states to outlaw desecration of the American flag.

Afterwards Johnson said, "We want to turn up the heat on the flag and on the system of imperialism it symbolizes."

OK, Joey boy, I'm going to be the very first one to stand up for you and say you've got the right to say what you want to in this country — and maybe, just maybe, you even have the right to burn the flag that symbolizes all this country stands for.

But my question is: If it's all so bad, why haven't you packed your bags and headed for one of those great countries you like so well — like Russia or China?

I'd like to see what the Chinese would do to you if you burned their flag in Tiananmen Square.

And I'd like to see what the Russians would do to you if you were as outspoken against their political system as you are against ours.

That's right Joey — I said ours. Because no matter how much I don't like it, you're an American too. And that's what our Constitution is all about — it protects your right to make a jerk out of yourself by burning the American flag.

I'm one of those kind of guys whose heart still flutters when the flag passes by, and who still gets a tear in his eye when he hears the Star Spangled Banner.

But you Joey, you're a user. You want to use everything this country stands for to rail against the very thing you're using.

Justice William J. Brennan said it violates constitutional free-speech guarantees to ban flag burning at political rallies or protests merely because the destruction of the flag offends some people or because the state wishes to preserve the flag as a symbol of national unity.

I don't like it but I've got to agree. The ruling shows that values fought for in the Bill of Rights are still intact.

The day Joey burned the flag, other protestors began chanting "America, the red, white and blue, we spit on you."

OK Joey, you can say what you want. You can burn the flag if you want.

But what you can't do is force us to go back on the rights our Constitution and Bill of Rights guaranteed you.

The Supreme Court proved that. And oh Joey, the other thing you can't do — stop me from exercising a little freedom of expression myself by kicking your rear from one end of the country to the other if I ever catch you with a flag and a match again.

Don't play with fire, Joey, or one day you may get burned.

Cocaine washes up on beach

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Federal agents scoured the south Texas coast after a fisherman found 5 kilograms of cocaine washed up on the shore of Matagorda Island.

Officials said a smuggling boat may have capsized during Tropical Storm Allison early this week, dumping contraband into the water.

"We expect a large quantity of cocaine to wash ashore in the next few days," Joe Flannery, agent in charge for the Drug Enforcement Administration in Corpus Christi, said Thursday. The fisherman found the five bricks of cocaine near Port O'Connor Wednesday.

Coast Guard officials heightened their surveillance of the Gulf of Mexico and Customs Service agents were scouting the beaches along Matagorda Island, said Flannery.

The fact that no boat was reported missing aroused suspicions, he said.

"If a boat went down and nobody reported it, that indicates it was some type of smuggling operation," Flannery said.

Flamboyant minister arrested

NEW YORK (AP) — The flamboyant minister involved in the Tawana Brawley case has been charged with stealing more than $250,000 from a charitable organization he founded.

The Rev. Al Sharpton, 34, was arrested Thursday at his home on a 67-count indictment for fraud, grand larceny and falsifying business records of the National Youth Movement, which Sharpton started at age 16.

Sharpton also was to be arraigned in Albany today on three counts of tax evasion for allegedly filing a false return in 1987 and failing to file in 1986.

At his arraignment on Thursday's indictment obtained by state Attorney General Robert Abrams, Sharpton was asked how he pleaded.

'Santa Barbara' leads in awards

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's "Santa Barbara" won Daytime Emmy Awards for outstanding series and actress, sending perennial nominee Susan Lucci home empty-handed for the 10th straight year.

Lucci, star of ABC's "All My Children," was on hand at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on Thursday as former "All My Children" colleague Marcy Walker was honored for her role as Eden Capwell Castillo on "Santa Barbara."

Others who chose not to attend the ceremony fared better.

Justin Deas, who plays Keith Timmons on "Santa Barbara," repeated as outstanding supporting actor, but again missed the proceedings.

And "Jeopardy!" host Alex Trebek sent along his thanks after being named best game show host. He added that if his absence helped him win, he promised not to come again next year.

"The Oprah Winfrey Show" was recognized as best talk show for the third straight year, and veteran broadcast personality Sally Jessy Raphael received her first Emmy in a 30-year career, as best daytime talk show host.

David Canary was honored for the third time in four years for his roles as Adam and Stuart Chandler on "All My Children."

Military overthrows government of Sudan

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Military forces today seized power by overthrowing the civilian government of Prime Minister Sadek el-Mahdi, the military announced. No casualties were reported.

The coup leadership suspended the constitution and placed the country under a state of emergency, Egypt's Middle East News Agency reported from Khartoum. Parliament and political parties were disbanded and newspaper licenses revoked, it said.

The agency identified the coup leader as Omar Hassan Ahmed el-Bashir and said he signed the decrees. It was unclear whether he was the same person as a man identified as Brig. Gen. Omar Hassan who announced the coup on official Radio Omdurman.

Paratroop and armored units staged the coup, according to the agency, and it indicated the coup leaders were not from the top echelons of the Sudanese military command. "The coup leaders have designated the general command and army leaders as 'the former command,'" it said.

Soldiers occupied the presidential palace, Cabinet offices, Radio Omdurman, and the official Sudan News Agency. Khartoum International Airport and Sudanese airspace were declared closed.

The agency said "some political figures and Cabinet ministers" were arrested but it was uncertain if they included el-Mahdi, who became prime minister after a May 1986 general election.

A Western diplomat in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, said he had heard the coup leaders tried to arrest the prime minister at his home in Khartoum but that el-Mahdi escaped.

A military statement said the coup was launched because political parties failed to lead the nation.

Would-be astronauts respond

LONDON (AP) — "Astronaut Wanted. No Experience Necessary," blared a full-page advertisement in London newspapers today. The response was overwhelming.

In the first three hours after 16 telephone lines for applications opened, more than 1,000 people called seeking to get aboard the first joint Soviet-British space mission.

Under an agreement signed in Moscow on Thursday, Britain's first astronaut will accompany two cosmonauts to the Soviet orbiting station Mir in 1991.

A cartoon in London's Today newspaper showed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, looking outraged, floating in space in a pressure suit. "I know you didn't apply, comrade prime minister," a Soviet cosmonaut is saying. "Thirty million of your countrymen nominated you."

Those who do apply must be between 21 and 40 years old, have scientific training, proven ability to learn a foreign language and a knack for getting along with foreigners.

The project, pairing the Soviet space agency Glavkosmos and a British consortium, will be the first manned space flight financed entirely by the private sector.

The British consortium is trying to raise $25 million to cover the British astronaut's costs. The project was named for Juno, the Roman goddess.

Zhao Ziyang not to be executed

BEIJING (AP) — Disgraced former Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang was removed from his last government post today but senior leader Deng Xiaoping indicated Zhao will not be executed for sympathizing with students seeking pro-democratic reforms.

Zhao's ouster as vice chairman of the State Central Military Commission by the Chinese legislature completed a purge that began last weekend when Deng engineered his formal removal as party general secretary, or party leader.

Deng wrote in a letter to the National People's Congress that "since Comrade Zhao Ziyang has committed serious mistakes, I proposed his dismissal," the official Xinhua News Agency said.

Deng's reference to Zhao as "comrade," however, indicates he retains his membership in the party and will not face trial as a "counterrevolutionary." Earlier, there was speculation he might be tried and executed.

Zhao fell out of favor with Deng last month for opposing martial law and the crackdown on the student-led democracy movement.

He was swept out of his posts with several other moderates, who were replaced by officials backing the suppression of dissent. Zhao was replaced by Jiang Zemin, a former mayor of Shanghai who quickly put down protests in his own city.

Zhao made a tearful speech to hunger-striking students May 19, the last day he was seen in public.

Israeli settlers stage protest

BATTIR, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Hundreds of Israelis with military escorts hiked and rode in cars through the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip today to dramatize their claim to the territories.

Soldiers blocked one group from marching through an Arab village because the hikers were not accompanied by soldiers, intended to prevent clashes.

Israel radio said about 2,000 people took part in the day of hikes, most of which were in the West Bank. Critics said the marches were a provocation to Palestinians residents and a burden on the army.

Maj. Gen. Amram Mitzna, head of the army's central command, landed in a helicopter and ordered armed hikers of the anti-Arab Kach Party from entering the village of Battir, near the West Bank town of Bethlehem.

"This is a minority creating trouble," Mitzna told reporters about a mile from the village.

Canal joins oceans, divides nations

"I don't want to enter the history books. I want to enter the Canal Zone." — Epitaph on the tomb of Gen. Omar Torrijos.

"We built it, we paid for it, it's ours and we should tell Torrijos and company that we are going to keep it." — Ronald Reagan, 1977.

BALBOA HEIGHTS, Panama (AP) — To the United States, the Panama Canal is a marvel of American know-how, a symbol of the strength and ingenuity that made it a power.

To a generation of Panamanians, the canal is merely emblematic of American domination.

"The canal has been a curse for Panama," said Maj. Edgardo Lopez, a spokesman for the Panamanian Defense Forces. "Sometimes I think we would have been better off barefoot, eating bananas — but without this canal."

In 1978, the United States finally agreed to turn over the Canal Zone and its military installations to Panama by 1999. Meanwhile, the Panamanians will assume greater administrative control.

For Latin Americans, the agreement was one of the most significant developments of the century and the centerpiece of a more open U.S. policy in the region.

The violation of that accord "would create a grave crisis," said Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, even though he is no friend of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega. The president has backed the U.S. effort to oust Noriega, Panama's Defense Forces commander and de facto ruler.

The controversy over canal dates back to the founding of Panama in 1903, when Panamanians accepted a treaty that gave the United States permanent rights to a zone 10 miles wide across the center of Panama.

In essence, Panama was exchanging the Canal Zone for help in gaining independence from Colombia. At the time, it seemed worth the trade.

Secretary of State John Hay wrote a friend at the time that the treaty was "vastly advantageous to the United States," according to David McCullough's book, "The Path Between the Seas."

Panamanian objections were outweighed by a desire to profit from the immense U.S. construction effort that ended in 1914, according to Materno Vasquez, an aide to former leader Gen. Omar Torrijos during the treaty negotiations. Vasquez said it was not until 1935 that nationalists began to refer to the Canal Zone as a "colonialist enclave."

He said many Panamanians resented the "gold" and "silver" canal payrolls — the higher gold for Americans and white Panamanians, the silver for dark-skinned Panamanians.

By 1964, resentment had festered to the point where it fueled riots that left 20 Panamanians and four U.S. soldiers dead.

Vasquez said Torrijos, who controlled Panama from 1968 until his death in 1981, viewed the effort to recover the zone as his generation's historical mission.

In his book "Keeping Faith," Jimmy Carter, who agreed as president to the 1978 pact, said he

"The canal has been a curse for Panama. Sometimes I think we would have been better off barefoot, eating bananas but without this canal."

felt the old arrangement was unjust and was driving a wedge between Panama and the United States.

Nevertheless, Carter said he did not understand the strength of Panamanian feelings until Torrijos, reading a statement at the signing of the new pact, broke down and sobbed.

In addition, the canal's strategic value has dropped because the U.S. Navy has grown and need not move as often between the oceans. Its economic importance has been diminished by air travel, interstate highways, and oil pipelines.

Many Americans, however, bitterly opposed the new agreement. They saw the canal as vital to American security, and some suggested Panamanians would be unable to run it.

Ronald Reagan gave a lightning rod to opponents with the phrase "we built it" during his successful run for Carter's job in 1980.

The U.S. Senate ratified the new treaties in spring 1978 by 68 votes, only one more than the required two-thirds majority.

The canal is now run by the Panama Canal Commission, with five U.S. and four Panamanian members. Though the administrator for this year is an American, a Panamanian is supposed to succeed him.

That may be a sticking point because the United States is unlikely to approve a Noriega nominee. The canal could be run temporarily by a U.S. deputy administrator.

For his part, Noriega never loses a chance to say the United States wants to keep the canal. However, both his enemies and friends say he sincerely believes in a historical mission of taking over the canal.

In the United States, ironically, it is Noriega's leadership that has given rise to new talk in Congress and elsewhere about abrogating the canal agreements. Noriega has been indicted on U.S. drug-running charges, and both the Bush and Reagan administrations have tried to pressure him out of office.

"I think it's inconceivable that the American people, directly or through a marionette, would allow Noriega to appoint an administrator for the canal," said Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Miss., in early May.

The United States, moreover, has military options it could use. U.S. troops, who now number about 14,000, would leave in 1999 under the treaties. However, Congress says it has reserved the right to defend the canal with U.S. soldiers if necessary.

The United States last flexed its muscles in May, sending about 2,000 more combat troops to the canal after Noriega voided a national election.

Bush's flag proposal draws mixed reactions in Europe

LONDON (AP) — National flags command far less reverence in Europe than in the United States, and President Bush's proposal to outlaw burning the Stars and Stripes has drawn mixed reactions.

Flag scholars in France and Belgium think Bush's idea is a good one, but in Britain and Ireland they are less enthusiastic.

A West German said he understands the sentiment in the United States, because "patriotic feeling is very much more alive there than in the European countries."

An Italian law provides prison terms of one to three years for insulting Italian or foreign flags, but scholars say they are not aware of other laws specifically protecting European flags. Offenders in West Germany can be prosecuted under broader legislation protecting cultural, religious and political symbols.

In France, a few prosecutions have been brought when flags on public buildings were harmed, but there is nothing to prevent citizens burning the tricolor in the backyard, said Lucien Philippe, a French vexillologist, as flag experts are known.

He supports what Bush is trying to do. "If the flag is a national symbol that is honored in all ceremonies, I think it follows logically that it should be protected by a law," Philippe said in an interview. "That is normal."

Roger Baert of the Belgian Flag Society said he thought a law was "necessary to protect a sacred idea."

In England, William Crampton, director of the Flag Institute, said Bush risked going down "a very thorny road." His Irish counterpart, Seamus O'Brogain, said Bush was "trying to enforce an outward show of respect for symbols of state, which I think should be voluntary."

A West German said he understands the sentiment in the United States, because "patriotic feeling is very much more alive there than in the European countries."

Arnold Rabbow, a West German vexillologist who has visited the United States, said he found Americans far more respectful to the flag than Europeans.

He said there have been occasional attempts to prosecute satirists for debasing the West German flag, "but the defendants mostly argued freedom of the arts and the courts generally saw it the same way."

Old Glory has remained constant through U.S. history, except for the number and pattern of the stars, but European flags have changed with wars or political upheaval.

Germany is a prime example of how a nation's banner can reflect a turbulent history.

It has changed four times since 1848, shifting among republican, imperial and Nazi colors. Today both Germanies fly the black, red and yellow tricolor, with East Germany adding a hammer, a drawing compass and a sheaf of wheat.

Changes of regime or state ideology often find their first expression in alterations of the national flag.

Iran's flag since 1979 has featured the Arabic words for "God is Great" 22 times, signifying the Moslem calendar date when Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini returned to Iran after Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was overthrown.

Britain's Union Jack combines the flags of Scotland, England and pre-independence Ireland in a design that often leads to it being displayed upside down by mistake.

The Union Jack still figures in the flags of some former British colonies that now belong to the Commonwealth, as well as that of South Africa, which has left the Commonwealth. It also is prominent in the state flag of Hawaii.

British attitudes toward the Union Jack often border on the cavalier. The flag shows up in clothing, shopping bags and sun hats, and frequently appears on company logos. No rules or guidelines govern the dimensions or mode of display.

Crampton says he would like such a code introduced, but only on a voluntary basis.

He believes Europeans are more relaxed about their flags because many countries still have royal families as objects of national sentiment.

O'Brogain said: "Americans revere their flag with the same sort of superstition that Europeans revere the monarchy."

In Britain, far more headlines are generated by members of Parliament who mishandle the mace, the royal symbol in the legislative chamber, than by the occasional flag abuser.

Crampton thinks that may gradually change.

"We are becoming more nervous about the flag," he said. "We see Britain shrinking as a world power and we feel perhaps a need to turn to our core symbols. More people want to fly it than in the past, and flag makers report sales have boomed in recent years."

House panel votes to reduce Medicare gap

WASHINGTON — A key House committee has approved an estimated 25 percent closing of the gap in the standardized rate of Medicare repayments between urban and rural hospitals.

Under a formula approved by voice vote late Wednesday in the House Ways and Means Committee, city hospitals next year would be paid approximately 9 percent more than country hospitals for providing the same services.

This year, the differential was set at 12 percent, down 1 percent from the previous year.

The differential does not include adjustments for such things as wages, unusually complicated cases and amounts of each sickness treated, which in some areas has widened the gap to as much as 40 percent.

The full House is expected to take up the measure after it returns from its Independence Day recess, which began Thursday evening. It is part of a larger package of Medicare adjustments being debated, including one approved this week that would for the first time place an overall limit on what the government would pay physicians who treat Medicare payments.

No companion measure on the hospital payment difference has yet been approved in the Senate, although Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., and Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., are pushing legislation to eliminate the differential entirely.

A coalition of rural members of the House has been trying to eliminate the differential ever since it was established five years ago.

They rallied behind legislation by Rep. Byron L. Dorgan, D-N.D., a member of the Ways and Means Committee, that would have reduced the differential in stages over three years.

Meeting with reporters Thursday, Dorgan called the reduction to 9 percent from 12 percent "a substantial victory," which he said had been negotiated in the past two months with the House leadership as well as officials of the Bush administration's Treasury and Health and Human Services departments.

"I expect this to be fairly close to the package that passes Congress this year," he said.

The congressman estimated the move, if signed into law, would bring between $140 million and $150 million in additional payments to rural hospitals in the next budget year, which starts in October.

The gap would be closed by giving rural hospitals an inflationary adjustment plus 2 percent, while cutting 1 3/4 percent from the inflationary adjustment for the biggest urban hospitals. Suburban hospitals would not be effected.

Bird caller wins guest spot

PIEDMONT, Calif. (AP) — Patricia Raphael said the most exciting moment of her life came when she out-whooped a girl imitating a whooping crane and another impersonating the common loon to win a bird-calling contest.

The 17-year-old girl and seven of her fellow avian impressionists won an appearance tonight on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," the 15th year in a row the bird callers have appeared. "I've never been so excited about anything in my life," said Raphael, who beat second runner-up Alicia Gruber, 18, to win the 26th Annual Leonard J. Waxdeck Bird Calling Contest.

Gruber, who said she joined the competition to help her with public speaking, plans to stop calling when she enters college this fall.

She won the contest with her impression of Middendorff's grasshopper warbler.

The ultimate in slot machine playing

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — For slot machine players who feel they "get no respect," billionaire Donald Trump's casino presents the ultimate in pampering.

Not one to ignore customers with big bucks, Trump has created an elegant slot machine section away from the run-of-the-mill tourists on the main casino floor.

Mind you, this posh place is not for those customers who gamble with quarters and nickels. The "Monte Carlo Casino," which opens this weekend at Trump Castle Hotel and Casino, features three $100 slot machines — one with a $400,000 jackpot — seven $25 slots and 51 $5 slots.

If slot players invest enough, they will be treated just like the high roller in the baccarat pit. The new section, which cost $1.5 million to furnish and equip, has been enclosed with marble walls, brass rails and etched glass. Flowering plants line the sides. Deluxe chairs with armrests face each slot machine, and phone jacks are available alongside.

The "Monte Carlo Ambassadors" — butlers in tuxedos — will provide every amenity: light snacks, slippers for tired feet, a neck massage and even a hot towel to wipe hands that have been dirtied by those big-buck tokens.

"Traditionally, slot players are handed a Wet-Nap at the cashier's window," said Trump Castle spokeswoman Jeanine Repa. "We wanted to take things a step up for our preferred customers."

Scientists get a lot from common peanut

ATLANTA (AP) — Making chocolate- or tangerine-flavored peanut pudding was a snap, but peanut-based cheese spread was a tougher nut to crack.

Food scientists at the University of Georgia came up with those examples of peanut creativity as part of a government-supported effort to develop low-cost, high-protein foods for the Third World. The foods also are low in saturated fat and cholesterol, qualities that might sell them to U.S. consumers as well.

And the taste is, well, "quite acceptable," Dr. Anna A.V. Resurreccion, associate professor of food science, said in a recent interview. She began developing the products three years ago under a grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

For the peanut pudding, Resurreccion and her colleagues pressed peanut kernels to remove some of the oil and ground up the remaining material. They added hot water and a coagulating agent to get a slab of peanut curd about the consistency of tofu. Finally, they mixed in sweeteners and flavorings.

States seek to solve mystery of oil company pricing practices

WASHINGTON (AP) — As motorists take to the roads for the July Fourth weekend, the heaviest driving time of the year, officials in a growing number of states are steering investigations into the possibility that oil companies used the Alaska oil spill to push gasoline prices higher.

The industry rejects any suggestion of collusion or price gouging, and the Bush administration has helped promote the companies' explanation that the big price rises following the March 24 Exxon Valdez spill were due to normal market forces.

But the size and speed of the price increases for two months following the accident triggered a level of public suspicion and outcry not seen in this country since the gasoline price spirals of 1974 and 1979.

"There was something very special about this leap in prices; it was the fastest and greatest increase in the history of the United States," said Trilby Lundberg of the Los Angeles-based Lundberg Survey, which tracks gasoline prices.

The Energy Department says the spill cut supplies of Alaskan crude oil by 13 million barrels over 13 days — not enough by itself to cause a major jump in gasoline prices. Critics contend the oil companies, seeing early signs of panic in the market, arbitrarily raised their prices to wholesalers, thus forcing up prices at the pump.

Lundberg does not believe the oil companies are guilty of gouging, but she says the increases — reaching about 20 percent in the first weeks after the Valdez spill — "jolted people in various walks of life" into thinking about it.

Many states have launched investigations into oil refiners' pricing practices, but none apparently has produced conclusive evidence of wrongdoing. Even so, some state officials have publicly accused the companies of manipulation.

"Greed and collusion are the only apparent explanations for these unwarranted price increases," Gray Davis, the California state controller, told a U.S. Senate hearing last April.

Joseph Koach, executive director of the Service Station Dealers of America, said in an interview that part of the problem in determining the legality or fairness of gasoline pricing is lack access to information about refiner costs.

"There was something very special about this leap in prices; it was the fastest and greatest increase in the history of the United States," said Trilby Lundberg of the Los Angeles-based Lundberg Survey, which tracks gasoline prices.

"We just can't prove there's collusion; we can't prove there's price fixing," he said.

Davis and other state officials, plus some U.S. Senators, have called on the Justice Department to investigate.

Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Nebr., in May asked the department and the Federal Trade Commission to investigate what he called "a possible abuse that could cost American consumers millions of dollars." The FTC declined, saying in a letter to Kerrey that "available information does not indicate that such violations have occurred or are occurring."

A Kerrey aide said this week that the Justice Department had not replied.

Prices at the pump have leveled off in recent weeks and now stand at a nationwide average of $1.17 a gallon, up from $1.00 in mid-March, a week before the spill.

The oil industry says the price rises were due to a combination of factors unrelated to marketing efforts.

Among the reasons cited: a normal seasonal rise in gasoline demand, higher prices for the crude oil used to produce gasoline, tougher environmental rules for gasoline that raise refiners' manufacturing costs, and higher state taxes on gasoline.

Yet inquiries into the pricing practices of oil refiners are moving ahead, and in some states service station dealers are pressing for legislative action.

A trade group of station dealers in Washington state is launching a statewide petition drive over the Fourth of July weekend seeking a law that would place oil refiners and their product prices under state public utility controls.

Tim Hamilton, the main organizer of the petition drive, said in a telephone interview that he believed public outrage against the oil companies had reached the point where he can easily get the 150,000 signatures he needs by Dec. 31 to get the issue on a statewide ballot.

Washington was among seven states whose attorneys general or their deputies held meetings in May with oil company officials to investigate the reasons for the stunning price increases following the Alaska spill.

Those officials — from Oregon, California, Idaho, North Dakota, Alaska and Indiana, plus Washington — expressed concern about possible oil company collusion, but they said more information was needed.

Doctor's joke not funny

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A young doctor who jokingly taped a bandage marked "Do not resuscitate" on the head of an injured drifter has been ordered to perform 100 hours of community service at a clinic for the homeless.

Administrators at Humana Hospital of Louisville said Thursday that the doctor will be required to donate the hours at St. John's Health Center to complete a three-year residency in emergency medicine at the hospital.

The doctor has not been identified because of student privacy laws, officials said.

The message, taped to the head of Lewis Woodard, 52, is meant for use only with terminally ill patients. Woodard had been treated June 15 for injuries suffered in a beating.

Nicknames help on ballot

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — "Lardy" and "Jughead" know one of the first rules of rural politics in Kentucky: Don't get too uppity with the folks that put you in office. They are among more than 200 candidates in primary elections today who have chosen to put their nicknames on the ballot.

A name with quotation marks in it is the great equalizer, said Flatwoods Mayor T.L. "Lardy" Groves, 71, who is running for Greenup County judge-executive. "Anytime you got (a nickname), it brings you down on the same level with the ol' country boys out in the county," Groves said. "They say, 'He's not one o' them big shots.'"

Besides, almost nobody knows him by his real name. Since Groves' playmates named him "Lardy" at a swimming hole more than 60 years ago — "I was a little, round boy," he said — the label has stuck.

Earl "Jughead" Mastin, 61, was born in Sardis, "a little ol' rough town" in Mason County, he said.

Mastin said his nickname comes from when he weighed less than three pounds when he was born, but his head grew quickly. And the townspeople dubbed him Jughead. "That's an awful name, isn't it?" he said.

But he put it on the ballot.

Wright gets warm welcome back home

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jim Wright says he is not bitter about his political downfall and he's undecided about what he'll do next.

Wright, whose resignation from the U.S. House of Representatives takes effect this afternoon, was greeted by about 3,000 enthusiastic supporters Thursday night at a homecoming bash at the Round Up Inn in central Fort Worth.

"I want to thank you for being broad-minded enough, tolerant enough, big-spirited enough to tolerate my foibles, my eccentricities and my mistakes occasionally," Wright said as the crowd cheered. "And you let me do the big and important things that helped all of us."

That was about the closest Wright came to mentioning the 69 alleged violations of House ethics rules that prompted him to announce May 31 that he was resigning the House seat he held more than 34 years.

He blamed his troubles partly on reporters who he said were too quick to write about rumors.

When Julius Caesar rode his chariot through adoring crowds, Wright said, a man continuously whispered in his ear, "Remember, Julius, you're only a man."

"Thank goodness I don't need somebody to remind me of that," Wright continued. "Now, in our modern society, we have the newspapers to remind us of that."

After a 15-minute speech, Wright took off his coat and sat on the edge of the stage, shaking hands, signing autographs and saying hello to old friends. The crush of admirers thinned out after about an hour.

Wright, smiling and obviously pleased with his reception, said he felt no bitterness toward the media and his political opponents.

"Anyone who carries a burden of bitterness does more harm to himself than anyone else," he said.

FORT WORTH — Congressman Jim Wright is surrounded by supporters during a welcome home party in Fort Worth Thursday night.

In his folksy speech, during which he stood, relaxed, with his hands in his pockets, Wright said he would like to remain active as a private citizen. He said he would like to work toward peace in Latin America, and he added that talking with college students made him happy.

After the speech, he said had yet to make any long-range plans. Wright's welcome was warm.

The red drapes behind the stage at the cavernous Round Up Inn were decorated with a "Welcome Home Jim" sign in 6-foot-high letters. Beside the letters was a 10-foot-high caricature of Wright featuring his bushy eyebrows. He got half-minute standing ovations when he took the stage and after he finished his speech.

The Rev. Carol Ann Tatum of Fort Worth braved the crush in front of the stage and emerged with autographs of Wright and his wife, Betty, who sat beside him.

"I feel fantastic that other people feel the same way about him that I do, and that's pure love," she said.

Jack Adkison, a city councilman in the Fort Worth suburb of River Oaks, said the gathering was "a beautiful party but a sad occasion."

"That's the spirit of our district, right there," he said, jerking a thumb in Wright's direction. "When we needed something, who you gonna call? You call Jim. Not the speaker, not the congressman — you call Jim."

Woman stops mugger with scrub bucket

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 63-year-old woman stopped a mugging by beaming an attacker on the head with a scrub bucket, and later said she was only doing her civic duty.

Police say she went beyond duty, however, and plan to recommend her for a citizen's commendation for coming to the aid of a younger woman.

Margie Searles said she took a bucket to scrub some paint from the pavement in front of her son's house Thursday.

"When I got out the door, I heard screaming," she said, "and I looked across the street and saw him pulling her hair."

Searles hit the alleged assailant, Ricardo Caban, 29, and he walked away. Searles watched where he went, however, and waved down a police car. Caban was charged with robbery and aggravated assault.

The assailant's target, Annette Sinnott, 29, was treated for neck and arm injuries and released from a hospital.

"Believe me, I have never had fear in my mind," Searles said.

Protein lack linked to breast cancer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A natural protein produced in healthy breast cells could be useful in determining likely breast cancer victims and in treating the disease, a researcher says.

The protein, mammastatin, already has been shown to stop the growth of most types of breast cancer cells grown in the laboratory, Dr. Max S. Wicha, a professor of internal medicine and director of the University of Michigan Cancer Center, said Thursday.

"We speculate that women with low levels of mammastatin may be more prone to develop breast cancer," Wicha said. "If this is the case, a scientist could potentially detect and correct a woman's predisposition to breast cancer before the disease occurs."

Wicha said he and fellow researchers discovered mammastatin three years ago while searching for compounds that could block growth of cancerous cells. They have succeeded in isolating and purifying mammastatin, but not in quantities large enough to inject into laboratory animals, he said.

The researchers hope to use recombinant DNA technology to clone the gene that produces mammastatin, Wicha said.

They already have developed a blood test for mammastatin levels but must spend the next several years testing women with and without breast cancer to determine if there is a link between the protein and the disease, he said.

Mammastatin might inhibit breast cancer by shutting down breast cell growth near the end of pregnancy, Wicha said. Researchers believe production of the protein might account for a 50 percent reduction in the risk of breast cancer among pregnant teenagers, whose breast tissue is still developing, he said.

"If the protective effects of pregnancy are due to mammastatin, then one could potentially administer this agent to lower the risk of developing breast cancer in women who have not been pregnant," he said.

Mammastatin might be used in conjunction with chemotherapy to kill cancerous cells more effectively than chemotherapy alone, Wicha said.

Wicha, research associate Paul Ervin and Drs. Mark Kaminski and Robert Cody reported their findings in this week's issue of Science, the university said.

United Mine Workers urging non-violence

LOGAN, W. Va. (AP) — United Mine Workers leaders are urging striking members to remain peaceful in their efforts to force the Pittston Coal Group Inc. to sign a contract.

"We are doing our best to make sure our people are still in a non-violent frame of mind," said Roger Horton, vice president of UMW Local 5958 in Dehue. "We cannot win with any type of violence."

Horton was an organizer of a mass meeting planned by UMW locals in Logan today in support of 1,900 union members on strike against Pittston in West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky.

Those members went on strike peacefully in April after working 14 months without a contract. But there have been scattered violent incidents since thousands of union miners in Appalachia and the Midwest went on a wildcat strike in sympathy with the Pittston workers 2½ weeks ago.

Four coal trucks in West Virginia and Virginia were hit by bullets this week and two others were damaged by steel balls fired from slingshots, police said. No arrests had been made by Thursday.

Striking Pittston employees and wildcat strikers continued to clog traffic on coal-hauling roads in West Virginia and Virginia Thursday, but no arrests were reported.

About 1,600 wildcat strikers from a half-dozen states stayed overnight at a campground near Pittston's main processing plant in Carterton, Va.

Union and coal company officials estimate about 37,000 miners in eight states are on strike, although the start of the traditional summer vacation period this week has made it difficult to determine precise numbers.

Single adults should be treated as adults

Bigfoot tracks? Paul Freeman poses in his Walla Walla, Wash. backyard late last year with plaster casts of tracks he says he saw in the Umatilla National Forest. Freeman believes the tracks were made by Bigfoot. He is holding a branch that he says was twisted apart by something with a powerful grip, most likely a Bigfoot, according to Freeman.

DEAR ABBY: A recent letter expressing concern regarding the manner in which a wedding invitation had been issued prompts me to write you about my objection to the way singles are often treated in that regard.

We have two sons, both past 35 and professional men, who are happily unmarried and have their own homes in cities many miles from ours.

Invitations for weddings, graduations and other occasions, as well as Christmas cards, often come to us with their names tacked on as if they were still children. Anyone who does not have their addresses could obtain them with a simple phone call. Instead, we seem to be expected to call them long-distance or write to them to relay the invitation or greeting. They, in turn, have made it a practice not to attend any function when invited in this manner.

On one family occasion they were seated at the "children's table" because they were unmarried!

Their grandmother excluded them from her magazine gift

Dear Abby

subscription list, saying, "That is only for the married ones. They can read yours." (No mention was made of the miles between us.)

Are single adults being treated in this manner for the purpose of saving the cost of an additional acknowledgment and postage stamp, or is it merely thoughtlessness on the part of the sender? Or are singles not considered valid social entities, by some?

Abby, please let your readers know that single adults are indeed adults and should be treated in an adult manner. — STEAMED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR STEAMED: You just did. And I couldn't have said it better. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for your letter regarding the grandparents who failed to buckle up their grandbabies in their car seats. Parents have to get tough and absolutely insist that their little ones are buckled up whenever they ride in a car.

My smart daughter and her husband solved that problem by training their CHILD to insist on being buckled up. My 3-year-old grandson said to me, "Grandma, you can't go yet because you haven't buckled me up!"

Train the children to DEMAND to be buckled up. — PEGGY S. HENDRICK, SPRINGFIELD, MO.

DEAR PEGGY: Hooray for a great suggestion. Little ones are always taking orders — what a treat for them to be able to give one. Thanks for giving several million people a lifesaving idea.

Readers, instruct your little ones to DEMAND to be buckled up — or nobody goes anywhere.

DEAR ABBY: The vacation season brings to mind an experience I had on consecutive trips to Europe several years ago. The first trip, in France, the night before the bus driver was to leave our tour group (which was flying to another city), the tour guide had some bad news: The driver's room had been burglarized, and all his money stolen! The people on our two-week tour had a meeting, and everyone agreed to double his tip.

The next year, in Greece, different tour guide, different driver, same bad luck before departure. Different, but sympathetic tourists. All except one. Just call me — CYNICAL IN LOS ANGELES

Top 10 Popular Parks

The symbols above show a few of the fun things to do in our country's parks. The U.S. government has set aside lands to be used for these and other fun activities.

These 354 parks are run by the National Park Service.

The largest parks are called national parks. There are 50 of these.

The 10 most popular of the 50 national parks are listed below, along with some of their attractions.

All states except Delaware have national parks. Your nearest library will have a listing.

Mark where you live on this map. Draw in your nearest park.

① Great Smoky Mountains (Tenn. and N.C.). Mountains, streams, forests, plants, wildlife, waterfalls.

② Acadia (Maine). On Mount Desert Island off the coast; granite cliffs, rugged coastline, forests, lakes.

③ Grand Canyon (Ariz.). 277-mile-long canyon that is up to 1 mile deep; colorful rocks.

④ Yosemite (Calif.). The towering Sierra Nevada mountains; forests, waterfalls.

⑤ Olympic (Wash.). Borders on the Pacific coast; includes rugged mountains and rain forests.

⑥ Rocky Mountain (Colo.). High, rugged, snowy mountains; lakes, forests, streams, wildflowers.

⑦ Yellowstone (Wyo., Idaho, Mont.). Geysers, hot springs, deep canyons, forests, mountains.

⑧ Zion (Utah). Colorful canyons, mesa scenery.

⑨ Shenandoah (Va.). In the Blue Ridge Mountains; forests, wildflowers, rivers.

⑩ Glacier (Mont.). High mountains, valleys, lakes.

Our National Park System

Our parks

Yellowstone National Park has more geysers than any other area in the world.

Park rangers

A ranger on horseback gives directions to a park visitor.

You can tell park rangers by their dark green and gray uniforms and broad-brimmed hats. Rangers are interested in history, nature, preservation and people. Some rangers are interpreters who tell visitors about the park. Some rangers are park police who enforce the laws of the park. Some rangers manage the park and keep it in good shape.

Some types of parks

Mount Rushmore National Memorial (S.D.) honors four presidents. National memorials are set aside in memory of someone.

Shiloh National Military Park (Tenn.) is the site of a Civil War battle. Battlefields and military parks are areas that are important in our military history.

Abraham Lincoln's home in Springfield, Ill.

National historic sites are areas that honor persons, events and activities in American history.

The United States was the first country in the world to set aside areas to be used as parks. Yellowstone National Park was our first park. It was set up in 1872. When we think of parks, we usually think of our 50 big national parks. But today there are more than 350 national parks, of many different kinds. They are managed and protected by the National Park Service.

Browns back arrested

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns running back Kevin Mack, freed on bond at his arraignment on cocaine trafficking charges, has entered the Cleveland Clinic for a medical evaluation, according to the team.

Mack, 26, who was arrested with two others Wednesday evening in an East Side neighborhood known as a drug trafficking area, was freed on $2,500 bond Thursday after a hearing in Cleveland Municipal Court.

Browns spokesman Kevin Byrne said Mack was taken to the clinic from the Justice Center and met with Dr. Greg Collins, a team physician who founded the Inner Circle, a self-help drug counseling program for players.

"We arranged for Kevin Mack to be taken to the Cleveland Clinic to meet with Dr. Collins ...," Browns owner Art Modell said. "Dr. Collins met with Kevin and admitted him to the clinic for extensive evaluation."

Mack had been in jail since his arrest, when police said they seized 11 $50 bags of suspected cocaine, a pipe and a vial for cooking cocaine into crack.

Sources told The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer that Mack admitted to police he had a previous drug problem.

Cowboys tight end has surgery

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys tight end Thornton Chandler underwent surgery on his left wrist and probably won't be ready to play until the regular season, a Cowboys spokesman said Thursday.

Chandler, listed as the Cowboys' starting tight end heading into training camp, damaged ligaments in his wrist while playing last weekend in a local basketball tournament, Cowboys spokesman Greg Aiello said.

Dr. Peter Carter performed the surgery Wednesday at Mary Sheil's Hospital in Dallas.

A fourth-year pro out of Alabama, Chandler will report next month to training camp on time, but will be held out of contact work. His wrist will remain in a cast for eight to 10 weeks.

The Cowboys signed during the off-season unrestricted free agent Anthony Jones, who has played professionally at San Diego and Washington. They selected Clemson tight end Keith Jennings in the fifth round of this year's draft.

Ex-boxer turns to kidnapping

EVERGREEN, Ala. (AP) — Former Olympic boxer Clint Jackson, who once worked as a sheriff's deputy in Tennessee, was convicted of kidnapping a South Alabama banker in a $20,000 extortion scheme.

The jury deliberated about 1½ hours Thursday before returning guilty verdicts against Jackson and another man in the kidnapping of Thomas Salo, a vice president of the local First Alabama Bank.

Jackson, who is from Atlanta, was found guilty of first-degree kidnapping, while Dale R. Smith, also of Atlanta, was found guilty of second-degree kidnapping.

Conecuh County Circuit Judge Sam Welch did not immediately set a sentencing date. Attorneys for both men said they expected the convictions would be appealed.

On Wednesday, Welch granted an acquittal motion that cleared Jackson's brother, Billie Jackson, of kidnapping charges.

Billie Jackson and Smith both testified that Clint Jackson developed the plan to kidnap Salo for $20,000. Billie Jackson testified that he aided Clint Jackson and Smith without knowing they were planning a kidnapping.

Unknown ousts Garrison

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe overcame his own spotty play and a run-in with the umpire to advance to the third round at Wimbledon today, while Zina Garrison, the women's fifth seed, was upset by an unknown Australian.

McEnroe, who needed the comeback of his career to survive a first-round scare from Darren Cahill, beat fellow American Richey Reneberg 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Louise Field, ranked 121st in the world, blew a 5-0 third-set lead before ousting Garrison, a 1985 semifinalist, 1-6, 6-2, 7-5 on her fifth match point.

Other seeds — including two-time champion Boris Becker, who won in straight sets on Centre Court — had better luck on another day of rain delays.

McEnroe, seeded fifth, lost five straight games as Reneberg wrapped up the second set and took a 1-0 lead in the third on McEnroe's fifth of eight double faults.

After losing the opening game of the third set, McEnroe was upset and tossed his racket during the changeover. When umpire Bruno Rebeuh of France gave him a code warning for racket abuse, McEnroe exploded.

"That took a lot of guts ... An excellent decision," McEnroe yelled at Rebeuh. "I bet it says in the rule book that if he throws his racket, call racket abuse. An excellent choice."

Although he questioned some line calls — and muttered repeatedly to himself — McEnroe kept his temper in check the rest of the way and turned his game around just when it looked as if he might be eliminated in the second round at Wimbledon for the second year in a row.

With Reneberg leading 3-2 and 40-0 in the third set, McEnroe battled back to send the game to deuce four times, then broke to even the match when Reneberg sent a volley long.

He held serve, broke at love for a 5-3 lead and served out the set on his fifth of eight aces, then broke in the eighth and 11th games of the fourth set and served out the match at love, winning on a backhand volley. Field, who had not gotten past the second round in a Grand Slam tournament, used mistakes by Garrison to get back into the match, then survived a third-set comeback bid to score her biggest victory.

Garrison dominated play before slumping in the second set. She rallied from five games down to tie it 5-5 in the third and survived a fourth match point when Field served her eighth double-fault in the 10th game.

But Field broke Garrison and then served out the match, winning on her fifth match point with a backhand volley to complete her biggest victory in just over two hours.

"The chances were there. I just didn't take them," Garrison said. "It's not like she blew me off the court."

Becker, the third seed from West Germany, defeated American Richard Matuszewski 6-3, 7-5, 6-4 on Centre Court.

Aaron Krickstein, the 13th seed, beat Javier Frana of Argentina 4-6, 6-3, 3-6, 7-6, 7-5, in the completion of a match suspended by darkness Wednesday night.

French Open women's champion Arantxa Sanchez of Spain, playing on an outside court, needed less than an hour to defeat Julie Halard of France 6-4, 6-3.

Besides Sanchez, the seventh seed, other women's seeds advancing to the third round included No. 12 Mary Joe Fernandez and No. 15 Lori McNeil of the United States and No. 14 Hana Mandlikova of Australia.

Fernandez defeated another American, Louise Allen, 6-4, 6-1; McNeil beat Martina Pawlik of West Germany 6-1, 6-3; and Mandlikova beat Catherine Suire of France 6-1, 6-4.

Becker, the Wimbledon men's winner in 1985-86, served 11 aces and encountered his only trouble in the 10th game of the second set, when he saved three set points.

But the West German recovered to win that game and broke Matuszewski's serve for a 6-5 lead, then served out the set.

No faith; bye Gabby

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — For the second straight Grand Slam tournament, Gabriela Sabatini entered a match lacking confidence.

For the second Grand Slam tournament in a row, Sabatini made an early exit.

The No. 3 seed from Argentina lost 6-4, 6-3 to Rosalyn Fairbank of South Africa, a solid grass-court player, in the second round at Wimbledon Thursday.

A month ago in the French Open, with clay courts more suited to her topspin, baseline-hugging style, Sabatini was eliminated in the fourth round by an old nemesis, Mary Joe Fernandez, who beat her for the fourth consecutive time.

Both times confidence, or lack of it, played a part.

Sabatini said she learned something from another big defeat.

"Just maybe I need a little more confidence on grass," Sabatini said. "Play a little more and try to work better on the serve and just be stronger ... mentally also."

After the French Open loss, Sabatini admitted she needed to be mentally tougher against Fernandez. So going in against Fairbank, Sabatini had to be thinking about what Fairbank has done at Wimbledon.

Last year Fairbank, ranked 37th in the world, beat two seeds before losing to eight-time champion Martina Navratilova in three sets.

Sabatini knew she was going to be in for trouble this time.

"She is obviously a very tough player on grass courts," the Argentine said. "I lost the match. Everything was so fast."

Fairbank knew her grass court power probably would make Sabatini wary.

"She had to have been. I have had so much more grass court practice than she has. I won the Beckenham singles and doubles three weeks ago," Fairbank said.

Blue Jays rout division leader

By The Associated Press
The feelings were similar but the results vastly different for two pitchers making their first major-league starts.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't nervous," Toronto's Steve Cummings said after limiting Baltimore to a run and six hits in seven innings as the Blue Jays beat the Orioles 11-1 Thursday night.

"I was pretty tight," Minnesota's Mike Dyer confessed after lasting only two-plus innings and yielding six runs and six hits in the Twins' 10-3 loss to the California Angels.

AL

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Chicago 12, Kansas City 5; Seattle 2, Texas 0; New York 7, Detroit 6, and Boston 2, Milwaukee 1. Oakland and Cleveland were not scheduled.

The Blue Jays backed Cummings with a season-high 19 hits in snapping a four-game losing streak. The victory enabled Toronto to salvage the finale of the three-game series with the AL East leaders and avoid being swept in Baltimore for the first time since September 1982.

Manny Lee, Junior Felix, Ernie Whitt and George Bell each had three hits and Tony Fernandez drove in three runs. He hit a two-run double in Toronto's tie-breaking, five-run fourth inning and drove in another in a four-run fifth with a groundout.

Padres stop Fernando's winning streak

BY The Associated Press
Tony Gwynn is a great hitter; everybody knows that. So good that his other skills often get overlooked.

NL

Gwynn helped save San Diego with his glove and guile Thursday night as the Padres won in Los Angeles 5-3.

The Dodgers had already scored once in the ninth inning and had Dave Anderson on first base with two outs. Alfredo Griffin hit a high bouncer to pitcher Mark Davis, who threw the ball past first baseman Carmelo Martinez.

But Gwynn, playing right field, was in position. He retrieved the

Angels 10, Twins 3
California climbed within one-half game of division-leading Oakland in the AL West as Brian Downing had four hits and four RBIs and Mike Witt pitched eight innings for his third consecutive victory.

Johnny Ray and Tony Armas had three hits apiece in the Angels' 16-hit attack that snapped Minnesota's four-game winning streak. Downing broke open a 2-1 game in the third inning with a two-run single that keyed a four-run uprising.

White Sox 12, Royals 5
Ozzie Guillen and Dave Gallagher hit two-run doubles in a tie-breaking, seven-run sixth inning, Chicago's biggest of the year. Winner Melido Perez, who came into the game with an ERA of 6.26, yielded six hits and four runs, three earned, in 7 2-3 innings.

The first five runs in the Chicago sixth were charged to Terry Leach after Bret Saberhagen pitched the first five innings. Greg Walker, a .194 hitter, drove in two runs with a homer and double for Chicago and Carlton Fisk also had two RBIs with a sacrifice fly and single that broke a 3-3 tie.

After Kansas City tied the score 3-3 in the top of the sixth on Bo Jackson's sacrifice fly, Harold Baines greeted Leach with a single. One out later, singles by DETROIT — New York Yankees Steve Sax beats the tag by Alan Trammell of the Detroit Tigers, to steal second base in the sixth inning of their game at Tiger Stadium.

Dan Pasqua and Fisk put the White Sox ahead and Walker's double made it 5-3.

Mariners 2, Rangers 0
Scott Bankhead held Texas to three singles in eight innings and Darnell Coles went 3-for-4 with an RBI. Bankhead, who won his fourth straight decision, didn't walk a batter and struck out four before giving way to Mike Schooler.

Texas' Charlie Hough gave up 11 hits, all singles. Seattle took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on singles by Ken Griffey Jr. and Coles plus Scott Bradley's sacrifice fly. The Mariners added a run in the fourth on singles by Jeffrey Leonard and Griffey and Coles' squeeze bunt, which went for a hit.

Yankees 7, Tigers 6
New York snapped a nine-game losing streak in Detroit as Steve Balboni and Roberto Kelly homered and Steve Sax singled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning.

Winner Eric Plunk, the second of five Yankee pitchers, worked two innings, allowing two hits and an unearned run. Dave Righetti retired Fred Lynn on a liner to center with the bases loaded to end the Tigers' eighth and allowed one hit in the ninth for his 14th save.

Red Sox 2, Brewers 1
Rich Gedman doubled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and John Dopson and Lee Smith combined for a six-hitter as Boston snapped a three-game losing streak. Mike Greenwell's single, a sacrifice and Nick Esasky's infield hit preceded Gedman's double off loser Chris Bosio.

The Brewers took a 1-0 lead in the third on Gary Sheffield's RBI grounder.

Rasmussen, 3-5, gave up seven hits in 8 1-3 innings. He had five straight no-decisions despite allowing just 2.45 runs per game. Davis got his 21st save.

Valenzuela, 4-6, allowed four runs, only one of them earned, on eight hits in seven innings.

Errors by third baseman Jeff Hamilton and second baseman Mariano Duncan helped San Diego score three times in the fourth inning for a 4-1 lead.

Astros 8, Expos 3
Mike Scott became the first 13-game winner in the major leagues as Houston ended Montreal's six-game winning streak.

Scott, 13-4, gave up two runs on eight hits in eight innings. He also drove in a run and scored one. Kevin Gross, 7-7, was tagged for six runs in five innings.

Billy Hatcher hit a three-run homer and RBI double as the visiting Astros won their third straight game.

Giants 12, Cubs 2
Robby Thompson's two-run homer and pitcher Scott Garrelts' two-run triple were part of a seven-run second inning, leading San Francisco over Chicago. The visiting Cubs lost their seventh consecutive game.

The Giants got eight straight hits in the second. Kevin Mitchell, who leads the majors in homers and RBIs, made two outs in the inning. Garrelts hurt his hamstring running out the triple and left the game. Jeff Brantley took over and allowed one run over five innings for his first big-league victory.

The game lasted just 1 hour, 48 minutes, the shortest in the majors this season.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Two Arkansas coaches — Nolan Richardson of Arkansas and Mike Newell of Arkansas-Little Rock — are on a list of seven finalists for the vacant head-coaching job at Ohio State, a newspaper reports.

The Columbus Dispatch, quoting unidentified sources, said Friday that the five others are head coaches Jim Crews of Evansville, Lon Kruger of Kansas State, Cy Alexander of South Carolina State, Ohio State assistant coach Randy Ayers, and former Tennessee coach Don DeVoe.

The newspaper said Crews met Wednesday with a six-member university search committee and told Ohio State's athletic director, Jim Jones, that he would let him know Friday morning whether he intends to remain in the running for the job.

Alexander also was interviewed Wednesday, and an interview with Ayers reportedly took place Thursday, the Dispatch said. Neither Ayers nor Jones would confirm the interview.

Alexander told The Associated Press his interview "went very well, according to them." Richardson apparently will be interviewed early next week, according to The Dispatch, which also said Richardson "appears to be neck and neck with Crews as No. 1 on the committee's list."

Kruger has remained silent about the Ohio State job since Kansas State's athletic director gave Ohio State permission to talk with Kruger last week. He has not been on campus since returning from a cruise Wednesday.

Newell has declined comment about the Ohio State post.

DeVoe, an Ohio State alumnus and a head coach at the Division I level for 18 seasons, was fired by the University of Tennessee on March 21 despite leading the Volunteers to an NCAA tournament berth this season.

Long wait for Andretti

CLEVELAND (AP) — There is a special sense of accomplishment that comes with winning a closely contested race.

When Mario Andretti beat Danny Sullivan and Bobby Rahal here a year ago in what is considered one of the best road races in Indy-car history, it would have been hard to convince Andretti he would still be looking for his next victory a year later.

But, heading into Sunday's Cleveland Grand Prix, that is exactly the situation, with the 49-year-old driver enduring one frustration after another.

"It really is hard to believe we haven't won since last June," Andretti said. "That's too long without a win."

"But it isn't that we couldn't have won races since then. We've had our chances. Things have just happened to keep us from winning."

Among those things: — In the season-opener at Long Beach, Andretti was leading late in the race when he was bumped aside by Al Unser Jr., who went on to win the race.

— In the Indianapolis 500, a minor mechanical problem cost Andretti six laps and he wound up fourth, six laps behind.

— At Detroit, a first-lap bumping incident with Emerson Fittipaldi damaged Andretti's brakes, and a second touch with Fittipaldi made the situation worse. Still, Andretti finished third. — And last week at Portland, Ore., Andretti appeared ready to challenge for the lead in the early going only to succumb to an electrical problem that doomed him to a 19th-place finish.

"Cleveland would be the right place to turn this thing around," said Andretti, whose 51 Indy-car victories stands second only to A.J. Foyt's 67 on the career list. "The win here last year was really one of the best we've had in recent years."

"This was one of those races where you needed 100 percent," Andretti said. "And this is a tough place anyway, bumpy and very physically demanding. But it's also a very competitive track."

Fittipaldi, the Indianapolis 500 winner from Brazil, comes into the weekend with two straight victories and three in his last four starts. Heading into the seventh of 15 races this season, he leads the season points chase with 86, followed by Rick Mears with 70 and Unser 62. Andretti is seventh with 37 points.

Fittipaldi, who won here in 1987, said, "The track in Cleveland is very challenging. They've got good braking areas and places to pass. It's very tough, but no tougher than Detroit was. But then I've won Cleveland so I can't criticize too much."

Two drivers absent this weekend are Sullivan and Foyt.

Wimbledon

lost its oldest player — sparking questions that Jimmy Connors has heard before.

Once again, he wasn't giving anything away.

"Get through this year first and see what happens," the 36-year-old Connors said when asked about retirement after being knocked out by Dan Goldie in the second round.

His 7-6, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 loss marked only the third time since he came to Wimbledon in 1971 that Connors had exited so early. It was by far the biggest upset through the first three days of the tournament.

Known for his stirring comebacks, Connors had beaten Goldie, ranked 47th in the world, in both their previous meetings. This time, however, he couldn't convert a flurry of break points and failed again to add a third title to his 1974 and 1982 triumphs.

"That's the grass. Sometimes it works out and sometimes it doesn't," Connors said.

Pressed about his future in the game, Connors said he'd know when it was time to retire, but that time hadn't come yet. Enjoyment, not winning, was his main motivation.

"I don't need to play just to be around," Connors said.

Forget the honeymoon; Beck wants Western win

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Chip Beck, delaying his honeymoon in search of the top prize of $180,000, shot a 65 to take a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the $1 million Western Open.

Beck, who came within one stroke of the Butler National course record of 64 set by Bob Gilder in the first round of the 1982 Western, had a one-shot advantage over Payne Stewart and Blaine McCallister. Paul Azinger and Mark O'Meara were two shots off the lead with 67s.

A tournament-record 55 players broke par, 11 more than in last year's first round over the par-72, 7,097-yard layout. Most of the players felt that Butler would exact its toll over a weekend with no rain in the forecast.

Beck, who was married to Karen Thompson last Saturday, had an eagle and eight birdies against three bogeys in Thursday's round.

"That was fun," Beck said. "I was telling my wife the honeymoon can come later. The best honeymoon would be winning this tournament."

Beck, who won at Los Angeles and New Orleans last year, came closest to victory this season when he finished in a tie for second, one shot behind Curtis Strange, in the U.S. Open.

"I have been playing consistently well and had a chance to win the U.S. Open," Beck said. "I was 3-under for the last 13 holes."

Beck had three straight birdies on the front nine and then carved six strokes off par in a stretch from No. 11 through No. 15. He eagled the 478-yard, par-5 12th when he put a 1-iron approach onto the green and dropped a 60-foot putt.

He sank two birdie putts of 30 feet, another of 15 feet and chipped in for another.

"The greens were beautiful," Beck said. "When it looked like a putt would break one inch, it broke one inch. That's a tribute to the greenskeeper."

Stewart, who had eight birdies and two bogeys, said, "The course is in the best condition it'll be in all year. The greens were perfect but they will get firmer. It's nice to get off to a good start."

McCallister warned: "The course will get firmer and quicker. A lot can happen in the next two days."

O'Meara had a bogey-free round and said, "I'm satisfied with the way I'm playing."

Azinger said he couldn't remember the last time he had shot in the 60s on the first day of a tournament.

"I've finished in the top 10 in the last 16 tournaments but I always had to come from behind," Azinger said.

Greg Norman was in a group ate 4-under-par 68 with former Western champions Hale Irwin and Mark McCumber.

"It was a smooth day but I was playing in the slipstream of Chip Beck," said Norman, who was in a group behind Beck. "Every time I looked up, Beck was chipping in or making a putt."

Irwin called his bogey-free round "one of those days. A good day, but nothing to hang my hat on."

Defending Western champion Jim Benepe all but shot himself out of contention with a 78.

Spiritual and mental states closely related

By BILLY GRAHAM
DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Do you think all mental illness is a result of spiritual problems? This is not just a theoretical question with me, because I have a continuing problem with depression, and while my doctors have it under control, I wonder if maybe I have a spiritual problem also. I have heard people say this. — D.P.

Billy Graham
 night your hand was heavy upon me; my strength was sapped as in the heat of summer. Then I acknowledged my sin to you... and you forgave the guilt of my sin" (Psalm 32:3-5). I am confident many causes of depression would be lifted if the person came to know Christ and his forgiveness.

DEAR D.P.: Mental illness takes many, many forms, and has many different causes. Some types of mental illness, for example, clearly come from physical problems, such as chemical or hormonal imbalances in our bodies. In this case there is little direct connection with a spiritual problem. Or there may be problems in our background and upbringing that have made us susceptible to mental illness.

At the same time, there certainly are situations in which a person's spiritual and mental states are closely related. After committing sin with Bathsheba, King David fell into a deep depression that clearly was a result of his guilt and sin against God. "When I kept silent, my bones wasted away through my groaning all day long. For day and Although I don't know your situation, I urge you to give your life to Jesus Christ if you have never done so. No matter what your past may be, or your present situation, you can face the future with greater confidence if you know Christ is by your side. "And surely I will be with you always, to the very end of the age" (Matthew 28:20). Thank God for the help you are receiving from your doctors, and thank him also for his help and encouragement every day.

FOR A REAL EDUCATION, TAKE TIME TO READ YOUR BIBLE

In that busy life of yours, so rigidly apportioned among work, home maintenance, TV, PTA meetings, the bowling league or whatever, try to find time to read your Bible; even if it's only one chapter at a time. It contains a great many elements for our education and well-being. It's history, with the story of the earliest days of the world, faithfully handed down through the generations. It's geography, inviting fascinating comparison between the Middle East and Mediterranean lands, then and now. It's a prescription for better living, with its rules for behavior toward our fellow human beings. It's a great comfort, bringing us guidance and solace in times of trouble or sorrow. All in all, it's the world's most perfect collection of writings, and if we know how interesting and helpful it can be, we will somehow manage to find the time for it.

Rooftop preacher

Challenge prompts sermon from on high

By SCOTT HALLMAN
Beaumont Enterprise

VIDOR (AP) — Members of Northwest Baptist Church received the word from on high one recent Sunday morning.

Their pastor, the Rev. Joe Constantine, preached from the roof of the church. His rooftop sermon grew out of a challenge he made half in jest to one of the church deacons, who was helping him repair the roof of the church parsonage soon after he became pastor, Constantine said. Constantine told the deacon it would be nice if the parsonage had a patio and then issued the deacon a challenge.

"If we get 150 people in Sunday school will you give me a patio?" he asked the deacon. The deacon agreed, and when Constantine told the congregation about the bet, someone asked what the church would get out of the bargain. So Constantine offered to preach from the roof if the church met its Sunday school membership goal.

But prospects for getting 150 people to attend Sunday school weren't good. For the past 20 years, attendance in the classes and worship services steadily had dropped. When he became pastor in October 1987, about 20 people attended Sunday school, he said.

"When the church called me it was at a crossroads," he said. "They had to decide between hiring a full-time pastor or a bivocational pastor (a pastor who works a full-time job outside the church)."

Deciding to become pastor was a difficult decision for him and his wife Janice, Constantine said. Although he wanted to become a pastor, he was very comfortable in his job as youth director at First Baptist Church of Stowell and his full-time job at Mobil Chemical Co. in Beaumont, he said.

When he first visited the church, he found the parsonage in need of major repairs and a nearly empty church in an economically depressed neighborhood, he said.

"Janice didn't say much and I didn't either, but I knew what she was thinking. I wasn't so sure if this was the right place for us," he said.

He preached at the church, and his mind was made up.

"That Sunday when I stepped in the foyer I knew that this is where I should be. I didn't hear any voices, I just knew in my heart." Credit for the church's turnaround should go to its members, who worked hard to get their friends and family out to the church and give him the support that he needed, Constantine said.

Last month, Sunday school attendance reached 154 and it was time for Constantine to keep his promise. Because he had done carpentry work in the past, he said he was not afraid to walk on the roof.

The piano was moved outside and chairs arranged on the church's west side so that the congregation could be shaded by pine trees on the church lawn. Instead of merely preaching from the roof, he got an idea that made his sermon more meaningful, Constantine said.

With the help of an artistic church member, he drew a map of the ancient Holy Land on several bed sheets, tracing the route God instructed Abraham to take and the route Moses took in leading the Israelites out of Egypt. The sheet map was placed on the roof.

As he preached, Constantine walked the routes outlined on the map. He talked about how God had met the needs of his people then and how he had done the same thing for their church now. The experience helped him grow spiritually, Constantine said. "God still moves. I learned that you don't need a big building or a lot of finances. God still meets the needs of his people." And he said he expects to get his patio soon.

Church brief

Spiritual retreat set to begin

The ladies of Northside United Methodist Church will be the hostesses for a spiritual retreat for women beginning today at 7 p.m.

Activities include Bible study, prayer sessions, group discussion, and question and answer period. Mrs. Mara Estrada, a leader of women and wife of the district superintendent, will direct the Bible study and program.

Communion service will be conducted at 6 a.m. The retreat will conclude after breakfast at 7 a.m.

This gathering of women for spiritual growth is sponsored by the El Llano sub-district of the Rio Grande Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Pastor preaches to two different denominations

GREENFIELD, Mo. (AP) — When he gazes out upon his flock from the pulpit, the Rev. Mark Shaffer admits that it's hard to tell a Methodist from a Presbyterian. "Most people here will tell you that without checking the membership lists, they don't know who's a Methodist and who's a Presbyterian," Shaffer said.

That, "in this kind of situation," he added, "is the best thing. We learn from each other." For almost two years, Shaffer, 31, has served as pastor to both the United Methodist Church and Ebenezer Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations in Greenfield, a rural community of 1,400 in southwest Missouri.

The 84 members of the Methodist church and the 62 Presbyterians have shared a pastor and worshiped side by side for nearly 20 years.

Shaffer and members of both churches agree that it's been a happy, successful marriage made possible by numerous similarities in doctrines and beliefs between the two denominations.

The union was also born somewhat out of necessity. Each congregation is small, made up primarily of older people and unable to afford its own preacher.

"It's a way to worship together and still preserve a separate identity at the same time," Shaffer said.

Benton King Wilson, a longtime member of the Presbyterian church, said the arrangement has worked out "famously."

"After we started worshipping together, we just found we kind of liked it," he said. "The doctrines of the two churches are real similar. We emphasize the 999 miles we're together and overlook the one mile we might be apart."

The practice of two churches of different denominations uniting under one minister is known as "yoking."

"Yoked" Methodist and Presbyterian parishes occur mostly in small, financially limited congregations in rural areas of the country, officials of both churches said.

The Rev. Wes Ummel of Joplin, district superintendent of the United Methodist Church, said Methodists and Presbyterians "worship well together in a number of small communities across the country."

In fact, the two denominations are so compatible that there is speculation they could eventually merge. Both are members of the Consultation on Church Union, involving 10 Protestant bodies working toward closer unity.

The United Methodist Church, founded by John Wesley in the 18th century, has about 9 million members in the United States. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), with about 3 million members, follows the teachings of 16th-century theologian John Calvin.

Both denominations believe in the Trinity and the humanity and divinity of Christ. Each practices the sacraments of the baptism and the Lord's Supper.

Religion roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — Already working on a project to help send a million Bibles to the Soviet Union, the American Bible Society was jolted by word that Christians there need at least 20 million.

Terje Hartberg, a publishing consultant, says that Russian Orthodox leaders told him the demand for Bibles "would not even slow down" until at least that number were in the hands of the people.

Bishop Vladimir, deputy head of Russian Orthodoxy's external affairs department, was quoted as saying that not only believers but non-believers want Bibles.

The Rev. Cirilo A. Rigos of Reading, England, general secretary of United Bible Societies, which includes about 100 national societies, says the request "is without a doubt the greatest challenge we have ever faced — and we welcome it."

GENEVA (AP) — The general secretary of the World Council of Churches has expressed "shock and profound consternation" at the Chinese government's violent crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators.

The Rev. Emilio Castro in a message to Bishop K.H. Ting, president of the China Christian Council, also assured him that churches are "joining with you ... in praying for the people of China in these days of need."

NEW YORK (AP) — Responding to a recent statement by Los Angeles Archbishop Roger M. Mahony that Catholic officials "have a positive moral obligation" to work for repeal of laws permitting abortion, the American Jewish Committee said:

"Public officials owe all citizens — and not just those who share their religious views — a duty to exercise their own best judgment. ... What no church or synagogue should do is demand that its adherents holding public office respond in lock step to its religious teachings."

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American scholar on Soviet religion said legislation has been proposed by the Soviet Council on Religious Affairs that would legalize most church activities there.

Amid closings controversy, Szoka marks first year as cardinal

DETROIT (AP) — Even a Roman Catholic cardinal has those moments when he'd trade the management of a 1.5-million-member archdiocese for the tranquility of ministering to a small congregation.

But Cardinal Edmund Casimir Szoka, who has waded into several church disputes since becoming head of the Detroit Archdiocese in 1981, banishes such thoughts quickly.

"I am where I am," he said. Szoka became a priest 35 years ago and started in a small parish, but began climbing the church hierarchy quickly.

This month marks the first anniversary of his installation as a cardinal by Pope John Paul II. It was a year that placed him squarely at odds with some Detroit Catholics for ordering the closure or consolidation of 30 inner-city churches.

Some of those parishes were to go to court today, seeking an injunction to halt the closings.

The brouhaha over church closings wasn't Szoka's first challenge. Early in his tenure in Detroit, where he was named archbishop in 1981, Szoka set out to make the annual process in Michigan more efficient. He increased staff and introduced computers, shortening the waiting period for an annulment from six years to about nine months.

He faced another challenge in his first year when a Roman Catholic nun, Sister Mary Agnes Mansour, took over as head of the state Department of Social Services. At the time, the agency administered abortions for the poor. Szoka wanted her to resign or publicly oppose abortion. She quit.

Sitting in his modestly decorated downtown office, Szoka quietly justified his decisions and church doctrine.

He expressed dismay over accounts that money alone forced the church closings. Money was a factor, Szoka said, but more important was the dwindling number of parishioners and the inadequate supply of priests.

"It's not enough just to maintain a church building and slowly watch it die as the people die," he said. He admires the opponents of the closings as deeply dedicated to parish and faith, but sees his task as providing for the whole church.

"It's always the problem of trying to find the balance of what is for the common good and what is for special interests."

"I can't work miracles," he said. The church-closing dispute "has made me accept more clearly that all I can do is the best I can. Accepting that brings a great deal of peace, a great deal of comfort and tranquility to my life."

UCC heads for major transitions

FORT WORTH (AP) — Delegates representing the 1.7-million member United Church of Christ will steer the denomination through several major transitions during its biennial national meeting that began Thursday.

Two longtime church leaders will retire at the meeting, called General Synod, and a new location will likely be chosen for a national headquarters.

"I think there is some feeling of sadness for the end of an era," Dr. Beverly Chain, director of the UCC Office of Communication, said Wednesday.

In addition, the denomination — one of the most liberal of the mainline Protestant churches — will consider a statement critical of the U.S. economic system. Though not binding on local churches or the UCC's national offices, the statement mixes biblical and contemporary themes and calls for U.S. and world reforms aimed at economic justice.

The UCC is meeting for the first time in the Southwest, where it has few local congregations and where religious life is dominated by conservative and fundamentalist churches.

"Most of our people are in the Midwest and Northeast, and we thought it would be good for our people to come down here and experience how it feels to be a true minority," said Rev. James Tomasek of Austin, leader of the UCC's South Central Conference, the regional body that includes churches in Texas.

The 700 General Synod delegates will consider keeping the UCC's national offices in New York or moving them to either Cleveland or St. Louis. A 15-member committee established at the 1987 synod will recommend Cleveland become the new home for the national office.

By moving out of New York City, the UCC will follow other mainline denominations seeking to save money and bridge the gap between local churches and the national office. The most prominent have been Presbyterian and Lutheran denominations involved in mergers.

Critics say, however, such moves weaken the ecumenical strides taken by the big denominations during the 60s and 70s. Some of the UCC's instrumentalities, including its world mission board and investment arm, will maintain an office in New York, where travel and communication with other world service organizations is easier.

"The idea that the denomination is somewhat decentralized already makes this kind of decision not unusual," Dr. Chain said.

"We have always had a number of regional offices. New York is going to be one of those."

So sure is the relocation committee that the synod will approve the move to Cleveland that an "agreement in principle" was reached in April for the purchase of a nine-story building there.

The headquarters move will be deliberated in committee and on the synod floor several times during the six-day meeting at the Tarrant County Convention Center. A vote is scheduled for Monday morning.

A nominating committee will recommend synod delegates elect the Rev. Dr. Paul H. Sherry of Chicago to replace the Rev. Dr. Avery Post as president of the UCC. Post is retiring after 12 years as the denomination's senior minister and chief executive.

Sherry, 55, has been executive director of Community Renewal Society, a United Church-related organization that supports congregations and community groups. Previously, he worked for the UCC's home missions board, its council on higher education and served as minister at parishes in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Nominations from the synod floor are also likely and may include Rev. Yvonne Delk of Detroit, the only woman on the nominating committee's list of finalists.

Though considered unlikely, if Ms. Delk is elected, she would become the first woman to lead a major U.S. church. A Presbyterian woman, Claire Randall, was chief executive of the National Council of Churches for 10 years until 1985.

The synod will also elect a new treasurer to replace Charles H. Lockyer, retiring after 28 years in the post.

The UCC is often confused in the Southwest with the Church of Christ, a large group of conservative churches with no formal polity.

With roots stretching back to English reformers and some of the first Christian communities in America, the UCC was formed in the 1957 merger of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

"People down here just don't know what the Congregational church or United Church of Christ is," said the Rev. Dr. R. Ralph Nichols, pastor of First Congregational Church UCC in Fort Worth, one of two UCC churches in the city. "Some think it's a new sect."

Names in the news

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Entertainer Bernadette Peters says her film career has not been harmed by the box office flop of her last two movies.

Ms. Peters, appearing in Atlantic City this weekend, made her film debut in 1973 in "Ace Eli and Rogder of the Skies." She co-starred with comedian Steve Martin in "The Jerk," in 1979 and won a Golden Globe Award for "Pennies From Heaven," in 1982. The same year she starred in "Annie."

This year she was featured in the episodic "Slaves of New York," a satire of that city's downtown art scene. In "Pink Cadillac," she played a bail-jumping mother of an infant to Clint Eastwood's bounty hunter.

"I think my screen career is a very young career," she said. "I did some movies long ago. Now I'm paying more attention to it and I'm more into the business."

Ms. Peters, 41, was nominated for a Tony Award for her co-starring role in the Broadway show, "Sunday in the Park With George" in 1983, and won a Tony for "Song and Dance" in 1985.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Adam West, the Batman of television fame, says he's been too busy to see the new Batman movie and he's content to leave the crime fighting to Michael Keaton's new version of the fictional character.

"I guess if anyone should see it, I should," he said Tuesday while in town for a return of his 1966 Batman movie. "I've been too busy. But I'm very curious."

DENNIS THE MENACE

"I'M HERE BECAUSE I'M ACTING MY AGE."

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"Those are the air holes for the blackbirds."

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1989

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: comic Dan Aykroyd, Princess Diana of Wales, dancer Leslie Caron, director William Wyler, actress Olivia DeHavilland, actor Jamie Farr, actress Karen Black, British actress Jean Marsh, French novelist George Sand, choreographer Twyla Tharp.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make reservations if planning to dine out tonight. Romance gives you new hope for the future. Wear your heart on your sleeve! Partner appreciates your direct approach. Plan a special trip together.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Those who share your life need encouragement, not criticism. Listen closely to younger family members. If you are to do your best, keep your spirits up. Having a positive attitude is half the battle!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Sharing a special surprise with partner makes you feel tender. A Fourth of July celebration could rekindle the embers of an old romance or turn up the burner under a new one.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Restore your energy by doing something you really enjoy. An afternoon at the pool or on horseback proves especially relaxing. Curt up with a captivating book this evening instead of going out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You deserve a real vacation! If you have the money, head for a favorite resort. You finally see the light where a longtime relationship is concerned. Let partner know if you have had enough.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try to be logical and clear when giving instructions. Others need to know exactly what you expect from them. Relax with your family this weekend. New rapport is likely if you open up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Certain problems will solve themselves today. Welcome a chance to travel or expand your educational horizons. Your fears regarding someone's plans are unfounded. Ask direct questions if you still have doubts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):

Spiritual growth leads to new gains in your personal and work relationships. Call family members you will not see this Fourth of July. An older friend would appreciate a supper invitation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The emphasis this weekend will be on commitment. Once you and romantic partner get in a happy holiday groove, stay there. Much of what you do now you will want to keep secret.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Travel is very alluring now. You long to do something very different from your everyday routine. You could make a shopping or marketing discovery that will pay off handsomely. Protect trade secrets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A person you consider lucky for you will be available this weekend. Beware of someone who tries to pry into your business or private life. Make it clear certain questions are off-limits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spending some quiet time at home will bring the greatest enjoyment today. Moderation in all things is the key to good health. Ask a friend to join you on a special expedition.
