BIG SPRING — Illegitimate children composed nearly a third of the 180 births to date this year in Howard County, according to statistics from the county clerk's

Of those 180 births, 50 children were born out of wedlock, and 22 of those to mothers under 20. And area health officials fear local percentages of illegitimate children will continue to rise, mirroring a growing national trend.

"This is more than a big, it's a tremendous problem," said Dr. Jack Woodall, acting director of the local health department. "There are so many facets and ramifications of the problem, and it's affecting the entire country.

"This is more than a big, it's a tremendous problem. There are so many facets and ramifications of the problem, and it's affecting the entire country... There have always been illegitimate children, so the problem isn't a new one, merely the magnitude of the problem." - Dr. Jack Woodall, acting director of the county health department.

Especially serious is the problem of unwed teenage mothers, said Jane Hellinghausen, director of education and community development for Planned Parenthood. 'About 95 percent of teenage girls who get pregnant are abandoned by their boyfriends, and about 96 percent of the girls will follow through and have the baby,' she said. "The long-term repercus sions are really serious because this is a perpetual thing. A daughter born to an unwed, teenage mother is more likely to repeat the same cycle.'

Woodall attributed part of the blame for the increasing trend to societal acceptance of unwed

"The way the trend is, there is no stigma in a woman having babies without getting married," he said. 'The '50s and '60s, the age of socalled 'free sex,' really started the Hellinghausen agreed. "It's simply more socially acceptable to be a single mother these days," she said. Both officials are fearful the increased number of illegitimate children and unwed mothers might severely and adversely affect the nation in the coming decades.

"If a person doesn't have the resources, he's probably going to use deviant means to get what he wants," Hellinghausen said. "So I think we'll see an increase in crime. And since many of those children will drop out of school and go on welfare, it'll be a drain on the the economy. Even worse, we'll end up with an uneducated, illiterate work force."

Woodall also foresees an increased financial drain on the nation, as well as health risks.

"The thing that is so greatly feared is that we'll have an increase in the number of AIDS patients," he said. Education could prove the key to

BIG SPRING — A four-woman, two-man jury deliberated for an hour Friday before convicting Leslye Schulze of all 10 misdemeanor counts she was charged with in County Court. Jurors found Schulze guilty of fleeing to elude police, as well as nine traffic violations.

County Judge John Coffee sentenced Schulze after jurors deliberated for two hours without reaching a decision. Coffee set fines of $25 for each traffic violation and a jail term of 30 days probated for 60 days on the fleeing to elude charge.

County Attorney Hardy Wilkerson said he and defense attorney Robert Miller agreed to let Coffee assess the sentence to avoid a hung jury and re-trial.

Wilkerson said the sentence was fair in light of the circumstances. "I agreed to it. What I was really what in was the milter war Wilkerson said. "It was her

The lack of office air conditioning for about two weeks has caused some changes at the office, Jernigan said.

'We're in shorts," she said. "I'm not behind in my work because you do your work, but you do it slower." Employees took time off when the air conditioner first broke but have returned to the office because of work that must be done from the building, she said.

The staff of the second floor office has opened windows, added six fans and switched the appointments of patients who are most sensitive to the heat. It's still about 95 degrees in the office, she said.

The office staff is "trying to work as best as we can" until a refrigerated air unit system can be installed, she said.

Foster said she knows of one office that stopped payment on its rent check because of dissatisfaction with the heat and the slow pace of repairwork being done.

LULAC supporters originally that the case would not receive an impartial hearing because several jurors allegedly had ties with the city or county government. Those ties, according to some LULAC members, would disqualify jurors from rendering an impartial decision. LULAC supporters also argued the composition of the grand jury did not adequately reflect Colorado City's Hispanic population.

But American teen-agers are working in droves, much of their cash going for cars, clothes, beer and sometimes drugs. They are perhaps learning the work ethic. But they are also learning conspicuous consumption, and some critics say they are compromising their education as well.

When she was named National Teacher of the Year last April, Mary Bicouvaris singled out working students and asked them to put a priority on school. "They are very busy people," she said. "What I find deplorable many times is they work school into the business schedule rather than fit business into the school schedule.

Most studies have shown little or no effect on school performance if students keep their work time to 20 hours a week. But the studies are based on averages that don't apply to individual students. Plus, there are no federal hourly restrictions Teachers all have their stories about students whose work lives have eclipsed their school lives, who leave the classroom to work seven hours at a fast-food restaurant and show up the next day unprepared, their heads nodding onto their desks.

'They will tell you, 'I just don't have time to do that assignment. I have to work,' and they expect you to buy that," says Patrick Welsh, an Alexandria, Va., English teacher who has written a book about high school.

"I don't buy it," he adds. "But what happens is a gradual and subtle erosion of standards and the amount of work you're going to hit kids with. It's happening all over

Work also has been associated with increased drug and alcohol use. Working kids have more money, are under more stress and may come into contact with older teen-agers more likely to have such habits, says Laurence Steinberg, a Temple University researcher and psychology professor.

"Earning and Learning," a recent report by the National Assessment of Educational Progress, said a review of other studies turned up no comparable results and added such that school is the only thing gest that "this is a rosy situation for all students. The averages show no association between school and work, but individual circumstances should be taken into account. There are probably lots of kids buried in these averages who work long hours and do poorly, and I'm sure educators see them."

The United States has by far the highest rate of working students in the world, with Canada a distant second, Steinberg says. "Working while one goes to high school is unheard of in Japan," he says. "The Japanese society is organized ing where their kids are and believe strongly that a job, even if it is only flipping hamburgers at a fast-food joint, builds character and teaches good work habits.

Teenage Research Unlimited, a Chicago-area research firm, found that teens had $31 billion in income derived from jobs, allowances and other money from their parents in 1988. The average teen-ager earns $61.50 a week, the company reported, and it is almost ex-. clusively discretionary.

Abortion issue may come up in special session

In a 50-state survey by The Associated Press of abortionrelated activities since the Supreme Court's ruling in the Missouri abortion law case, Gov. Bill Clements said abortion may be considered this year.

Clements, who is against abortion, said he probably would ask the Legislature to consider abortion restrictions if another special session is held later this year. House Speaker Gib Lewis said he would prefer to wait until the next regular session, in two years.

Texas Special Assistant Attorney General Renea Hicks said Texas is now claiming the actual debt is more than 400,000 acre-feet. Texas wants the water, which would mean New Mexico would have to supply an extra 40,000 acrefeet of water every year for the next decade. Texas lawyers contend farmers in that state suffered $49 million in damages as a result of not having water and that New Mexico derived $980 million in benefits. New Mexico officials want to pay the debt in cash, arguing that delivering the extra water to Texas would destroy southeastern New Mexico agriculture and would cripple the entire region's economy. They have estimated that if the special master orders the repayment in water, 95,000 acres of irrigated farmland, mostly in the Roswell area, could be dry for If Pascoe decides New Mexico should pay the debt in cash, he will have to decide the amount.

Anybody have a positive attitude?

Are there any positive attitudes to be found in Big Spr-

• It was less than a month ago that many readers first learned of the financial state of affairs of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce. Since then, the wheels have been turning and progress has been made.

Of an immediate $30,000 goal, nearly $25,000 has been received and — just as importantly — a strong vote of confidence has been cast concerning the direction of the chamber's efforts to strengthen economic development. New members walking in, current members paying their dues and long-time investors increasing their commitment all contribute to a strong foundation that can grow.

As the chamber's executive officer explained recently, the real proof will be in the 1990 commitment made by these members — but if this were the first quarter of a ballgame, it looks encouraging for the remainder of the

• Likewise, the "Adopt-a-Spot" is beginning to become a reality and what better way to improve the quality of life than to work in small areas, together, and see immediate, tangible results of your efforts to make your community prettier?

No, it won't necessarily guarantee more jobs or economic growth — but inattention to such details as the appearance of our city almost certainly guarantees the absence of growth in jobs and the economy.

No one person or group can take on the entire city as a project — but each of us polishing one little corner as brightly as we can will make a large, shining example of the possiblities around here.

• It was pretty disgusting to walk past the Tubb Pocket Park early last week, and see the overgrowth of weeds in what once was one of the emeralds in our downtown. As is so often the case, the weeds were growing faster than the greenery that had been planted there and one had to wonder what the future held for this location.

Then, within hours, the Rosebud Club came to the rescue, culling and bagging weeds, applying weed killer and taking responsibility for what should be a source of pride for Big Spring. They deserve the applause we hear

Can a few make a difference? Drive by and see. And while you're at it, pass by the corner of Johnson and Third streets and see what was once an abomination. A few can make a difference.

Referendum is a worthy idea

State Representative Rick Crawford, R-Amarillo, has proposed a non-binding referendum on abortion which is drawing fire from both sides of the issue.

The proposed referendum is simply worded: "Texas abortion laws should: (1) Protect the rights of a woman born by restricting abortion." Crawford said he would welcome input from his constituency on the abortion issue and hoped it might take some of the pressure off candidates. Although pro-choice and anti-abortion leaders have expressed opposition to a referendum, the proposal is not without merit. A referendum would allow voters to easily express their wishes on one side of the issue or the other. It would also help get candidates off they hook.

Instead of being forced to take a stand on the abortion question, candidates could say what they ought to be saying anyway: "I will abide by the wishes of my constituents."

Since the Supreme Court ruling in the Missouri abortion case, political analysts have been predicting that abortion will be the decisive issue in the next state elections and even beyond. To allow this to happen would be a disservice to citizens, who deserve to know a candidate's stand on many other pertinent issues and who rightly expect candidates to be knowledgeable in other areas besides

Analysts also predict a great deal of money will be spent by both sides in attempts to promote their candidates. Since it is unlikely any of that money would alternatively be used to combat unwanted pregnancies through education, counseling, family planning clinics and birth control, it would be better to use the money to directly address the issue instead of personalities.

Altogether, a referendum seems like a positive step toward settling a problem dumped on the states by the Supreme Court. Then maybe we can move on to other important issues of state government.

Texas Catholics deserve a voice

By JESSE TREVINO

Catholic Church politics seldom interest the average reader. They rarely appear in editorial pages of newspapers. But, as the explosive issue of abortion gains intensity, the Church's policies gain critical importance.

The Church seems destined to play a major role in the country's politics. Abortion is only one issue. Other issues — U.S. foreign policy in heavily Catholic Central America, nuclear weapons, poverty, immigration, drugs, civil liberties and and the economies of the Third World — suggest greater Church involvement

This is all happening as the country's Hispanic population itself becomes a fixed feature in U.S. politics. Today's critical issues are specifically important to Texas Catholics, the majority of whom are Hispanic.

But more and more Catholics in Texas have begun to realize that their influence in Church matters, especially at the highest levels, is Archbishop Patricio Flores of San Antonio, Texas' highest Catholic authority, is a leading Hispanic prelate in the country. But the influence he has is certainly not in keeping with the numbers that Texas Catholics and Hispanic Catholics represent in the Church in the United States.

Flores, for example, has no voice in helping select the church's leader, the pope in Rome, who ultimately decides the Church's position on matters such as abortion. Flores is not a cardinal, the only ones who can vote for a pope.

of cardinal lead far smaller archdioceses than Flores and they do have such a voice.

Flores represents more than 3.5 million Catholics in what the

Mailbag

Jesse Trevino Church calls the Province of San Antonio, which includes all of Texas. By comparison, the archbishop of Baltimore, with no more than 1 million Catholics, can take part in the election of the pope. The little archdiocese of St. Louis, with only 800,000 Catholics, has had a voice, too, in those elections. The archbishop of Detroit, who at the moment is closing parishes down as its current population of 2.1 million Catholics shrinks, can vote for the next pope, more than 3.5 million Catholics.

The archdiocese of San Antonio, has, in fact, as many people as the archdiocese of Boston and is by far larger than most arcdioceses. But it does not have a voice in the church's highest councils

The reasons for this are mysterious. But however mysteriously the Church operates, that does not explain the obvious argument that Texas deserves a cardinal archbishop to help shape church policy as that policy becomes more important to the region and the country.

Three recent events brought the matter to mind. One: the recent death of the cardinal archbishop of Los Angeles. His death leaves its million without a cardinal Two-Pope John Paul II's failure to name any new cardinals in June, traditionally reserved for such announcements. Three: the revolt-in the gains from the construction of

would really appreciate, a

Washignton, D.C. among some Black Catholics who have broken away to establish their own church. Their leader has been suspended and faces exile from the church. The reasons for the split are familiar: a lack of voice, a lack of participation in Church decisionmaking. Catholic Hispanics in Texas are a long way from taking that step. But many are leaving and joining other churches. Their defection raises the question of why Hispanic Catholics feel ostracized from their traditional church. One wonders how the overwhelmingly Catholic Latin nations, which constitute a large segment of the Church's total membership, feel.

Until Flores came along in the late 1970s, U.S. Hispanic Catholics were invisible even within the U.S. Catholic Church. They remain barely visible in Rome today.

Catholic population, such as Baltimore's, should retain its vote. Baltimore was the founding site of the the Catholic Church in the United States. New York, Boston, Chicago, and Philadelphia and the other cities should have a vote, too. In fact, the number of U.S. votes should be increased. U.S. cardinals cast only only nine votes of the almost 120 votes from around the world who elect a pope. This is absurd. Rome should take into account the country's role in the church's spiritual and financial well-being.

But San Antonio and Texas deserve and should get a voice, and so should Los Angeles. Next June. a cardinal's red hat does not

Anti-abortion not anti-civil rights

To the editor:

There must be something Freudian in the behavior of Ms. Carol Smith and other women who subscribe to the inane argument that there is male conspiracy to deny them of their civil rights. Contrary to their absurd opinion, the anti-abortion movement is not a male assault on women's rights but rather a justifiable assault of men and women on the shallow and selfserving abortionists.

Abortion is inarguably the destruction of an innocent human being for such selfish reasons as economic hardship or inconvenience. I will not debate on the morality of an abortion when the health of the women is at risk, because it is analogous to the deciwomen's rights organizations who support abortion and believe in a woman's right to her body are also actively involved in denying the right of other women to be willingly involved in pornography. It seems that maybe women do not have an all inclusive right to their bodies, after all! If a person has absolute control over her body, then abortionists, by default on their own idealogy, must also support the right of an individual to abuse drugs, commit suicide, or practice other socially unacceptable activities. I sincerely hope this is not the case. Nor do I support the assertion we

Animals teaching us lessons

By ROBERT WERNSMAN

Publisher I'm animal plagued. What used to be a source of mutual affection is turning into a contest of wills First, my all-time favorite cat picked up and moved next door when I had the audacity to allow another feline in the house. Now she, without a meow of discussion about her intentions, has become pregnant and is beginning to act really weird. Well, perhaps there scussion, recalling a few nights of extreme howling, but how was I to know? I've learned my lesson. Cat trouble was not enough,

There was that night of nearly one year ago when I sat in a football press box and was attacked by what are often referred to as June bugs, but they were out in full force that night in September. The attack of the flying Sugar Babies -I'll not soon forget them.

Bug trouble was not enough, however

If you'll recall from a few weeks ago, I had a bit of a swine problem when I was lured, innocent and unknowing, into a pig pushing contest at the annual rodeo. Having never been in a rodeo arena and always willing to try most anything that's not illegal, I gave it a try.

I've learned my lesson But, even pig problems were not Just when I figured I had my fill, along came the March of Dimes goats to those who wanted to "get!" someone's goat.

Not a bad idea, when you're on the giving end — in fact, this migh be the origination of the thought "Better to give than to receive. Under the arrangements of the goat delivery, you had a chance to fend off the helpless (I thought) little goat. If you bought $25 in goat insurance, you could avoid the animal's visit and contribute to a worthy cause. Otherwise, you could pay $25 to rid your office of the animal — and contribute to a worthy cause.

Naturally, I opted to have a goat visit. After all, how often can this hannen? Unfortunately for my of this, nor did they know what was going on when March of Dimes reps came by with my goat - when was gone.

I don't usually time my absences

Helpless was what I thought the goat was, and you might think that 'd hardly know it had been here. Pshaw! It did its level best to leave a reminder. Sure enough, there was a little pile of reminder not two feet from my office door, announcing the animal's arrival, presence and departure in one cute little

I've learned my lesson So, after all of this, I can empathize with the folks living around the Humane Society who have protested its smell and its noises. Animal troubles can be disturbing.

And, now that Stan Partee has generously offered 10 acres of land far from any residences and has drilled a well on the site, the Humane Society will soon have a new home — much to the satisfaction of the folks who have been so irritated about the location in the Berea Baptist Church area.

It would be refreshing to see those folks, who have been so irritated for so long, ready to lend their full support to the big job ahead. They should see that the relocation of the Humane Society facility and its animals does not fall entirely on the shoulders of those who volunteer their time to see that abandoned animals are given humane treatment.

After all, the development of the facility at that location began long ago and the fact that it has grown there could not have been a surprise to those living in the area.

Now that a great deal of time, energy and money have been expended at the location and its neighbors are insisting that it be moved, let's hope that they are willing to pitch in and see that the effort is shared.

And, we'll have learned an animai iesson once more.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — New tests confirmed that the crippled tanker Exxon Valdez is leaking crude oil as it sits offshore in rough seas, but the oil is decomposing, the Coast Guard said Saturday.

"We do have some very weathered and degraded traces of crude oil in the slick," said Coast Guard Lt. Larry Solberg. 'There's also heavy concentrations of organic components."

Microorganisms and plankton made up some of the organic compounds found with the crude, Solberg said. More tests are being conducted to determine the toxicity of the materials.

There was no immediate word on how the results of the test would affect plans to repair the Exxon Valdez, which ran aground March 24 in Alaska and spilled nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil into Prince William Sound.

The tanker was towed 2,500 miles to California for extensive repairs to its shredded hull. It has been barred from entering port.

Bomber test flight postponed

PALMDALE, Calif.(AP) — The first flight of the B-2 stealth bomber was delayed for at least two to three days because of a low fuel pressure reading on one of the advanced bomber's gauges. the Air Force said.

The problem occurred as a small aircraft strayed into the airspace surrounding the site and made a surprise landing. The Cessna 182 played no role in the decision to scrub the flight, said Col. Douglas Kennett.

"Evidently the pilot of a Cessna 182 landed and says he was lost," said Air Force spokesman Maj. Pat Mullaney. "He has two kids with him.

The light plane, a single-engine commuter aircraft, landed as the B-2 stood at the end of its runway.

Air Force officials had feverishly prepared the radarevading, $500 million B-2 for its maiden flight, after a key Capitol Hill committee ruled against funding the bat-winged aircraft until it leaves the ground.

At 6:35 a.m., nearly an hour after sunrise, the B-2 emerged from its hangar and began its slow roll down the runway in anticipation of the first flight.

The plane was arrayed with radar enhancers, reflective material installed at eight points on the leading edge of its wing.

FBI arrests IRA technical experts

SEIZED ROCKET

BOSTON (AP) - The FBI said the four people charged this week with developing rockets for the Irish Republican Army represent the group's "main cogs" in efforts to build sophisticated new weapons.

Agents arrested three of the suspected IRA technical experts Wednesday, and later seized radar and missile parts during raids in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania, the FBI said Friday. An arrest warrant was issued for a fourth, who the FBI believes has gone in to hiding in Ireland.

Investigators say the four were working for the Provisional IRA, the guerrilla wing of the nationalist group fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

The four face federal charges of conspiring to injure and destroy the property of a foreign govern-

Summit seven stand behind Democracy

PARIS (AP) - Leaders of the world's seven richest industrial nations, striving to project a united front, voiced support Saturday for democracy behind the Iron Curtain and condemned repression in China during a gathering that even attracted the attention of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. The 15th annual economic summit meeting was depicted as being so harmonious that the possibility was raised that the final sessions on Sunday might be cut short.

Gorbachev sent a letter petitioning the leaders of the West to consider the reforms he is making in the Soviet economy and to let his country play a larger role in world economic affairs.

"Our perestroika (restructuring) is inseparable from the policy tending toward full and entire participation in the world economy," wrote Gorbachev, whose letter was relayed by French President Francois Mitterrand.

Any disputes that did occur between the leaders of the United States, France, West Germany, Japan, Britain, Italy and Canada were either papered over or ignored as the summit nations issued a political communique Saturday.

The second day of discussions was held on the 35th floor of the Grand Arch, an avant-garde marble and glass office building offering a spectacular view of Paris.

Publisher fired from Beijing paper

HONG KONG (AP) — In a heavy-handed attempt to exert communist control over a Hong Kong newspaper, China on Saturday fired the publisher of a pro-Beijing paper that had criticized the crackdown on student-led demonstrators in Beijing.

The publisher of the Chinesebacked Wen Wei Po newspaper, Lee Tze-chung, called the dismissal "illegal" and said he would fight to stay at the post.

The Communist government, acting through its official Xinhua News Agency, replaced Lee with Chen Bojian, a former Xinhua executive who had been working at the paper about two years. A day earlier, Lee had tried to fire Chen for his attempts to stop the paper from criticizing the June 3-4 military assault on the pro-democracy demonstrators. A source close to the 78-year-old

Lee said he planned to go to court to challenge the action.

Zhang Junsheng, vice-director of Xinhua in Hong Kong, announced Lee's dismissal after an all-night meeting of the paper's editorial board, which Lee did not attend.

He said Lee's firing was legal because Wen Wei Po was "backed by Chinese investment" and therefore Xinhua had the right to "manage the newspaper." China gives the paper an estimated $1.3 million a year.

Pilot has no memory of gunshot

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A pilot told investigators Saturday he didn't know how he was shot and has no recollection of his 800-mile, apparently unconscious flight down the East Coast in his small plane; officials said.

Federal investigators talked to Thomas Root in his hospital room for the first time since the lawyer was rescued Thursday in Bahamian waters where his singleengine plane crashed. Afterward, authorities learned Root had been shot.

Root told a federal air safety investigator in a 40-minute interview that he did not recall the shooting. He was interviewed separately by an FBI agent.

"We have no reason to disbelieve him at this point. We have some questions. There are some inconsistencies," said Andrew Alston of the National Transportation Safety Board. "He doesn't remember a gunshot wound and we see one. That is a large inconsistency that we hope to resolve."

Root, a gun collector, told Alston that he kept a loaded .32-caliber Smith & Wesson revolver in the glove compartment of his plane. Root said he doesn't remember anything after a radio conversation in which he reported having difficulty breathing, the NTSB investigator said Root's plane ran out of gas and crashed about four hours later.

"His statement to me was indicative of an oxygen deprivation situation," Alston said. "The next thing he remembered was waking up and seeing water coming through and around the windshield."

Alston said officials will conduct further tests, including checking for carbon monoxide in a blood sample, and talk to the gun manufacturer about possible causes of the shooting.

Root was in stable condition at Memorial Hospital in Hollywood, north of Miami. He had been under heavy sedation Friday.

"It's an odd story all right," Root's brother-in-law, Brett Geer, said after a visit Friday. "With this wound and him not being able to recollect how he got it, I'm sure there is reason for an investigation."

"Even though there are a lot of unanswered questions, the one thing we are certain of is that he did not make any attempt on his life." said brother W. Todd Root of Burlingame, Calif.

Root had a .32-caliber handgun with him in the cockpit, Geer said.
Investigators from the FBI and National Transportation Safety

Investigators from the FBI and National Transportation Safety Board need permission from Root's physicians to conduct the interview.

"There are many questions I'll be asking," said NTSB investigator Andrew Alston.

Developments Friday included:

• In Washington, a U.S. Customs official said authorities found 35 guns, many of them loaded, and a can of ether in a search of Root's plane last April at the Manassas Airport in Virginia.

All of the guns were legal under state law, which led to a state misdemeanor charge. The arsenal included assault-style rifles and three .357-caliber Magnum pistols. Root had told Customs officials that the ether, which can be used in cocaine production, was used to clean his aircraft.

• In North Carolina, Secretary of State Rufus Edmisten said his office has been investigating security fraud allegations against a company with which Root acted as an attorney. Edmisten said there are allegations that the company, Sonrise Management Services, was set up in a way that allowed it to avoid securities laws. Edmisten said the lawyer knew he was under investigation.

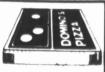

Root, 36, apparently became unconscious in his cockpit Friday with his plane on autopilot and military pilots shadowing his aircraft for nearly four hours.

His plane ran out of gas and crashed in mile-deep waters 14 miles west of the Bahamian island of Eleuthera. Root swam to a raft, where rescuers pulled him to safety.

Geer said Root told him the bullet wound was not self-inflicted and could have occurred when the impact of the crash triggered a .32-caliber pistol carried on board the single-engine Cessna.

Root's wife, Kathy, 35, was in Florida but has refused to comment on the episode.

CRMWD directors get close-up view of dam

Colorado River Municipal Water District got a close-up view of the Stacy reservoir project at the three-quarter mark Thursday and were told that it may be completed almost on time and near budget.

Plans for beginning closure of the last gap at the river channel may be submitted soon, O.H. Ivie, general manager, reported to the board. Also, barring unexpected additional expense for environmental issues, the job may be finished within little more than a million dollars over the $68,000,000

Over 90 percent of the concrete project field office, the board refer-

60th anniversary

Former Coahoma residents, Mr. and Mrs. H.L. Stamps, recently celebrated their sixieth wedding anniversary. Harvey "Red Stamps and Olga Kate Wolf met in Coahoma in the early '20s. The couple married on June 2, 1929 in Pecos, where Red was employed by Burt and Lingo Lumber Company. They then transferred to Fort Stockton where they lived for several years. While in Fort Stockton, two daughters were born to the Stamps: Margaret and June.

In the late 1930s, the Stamps family relocated to Coahoma where Red and Olga owned and operated the local hardware and grocery store. They were members of the Coahoma Presbyterian Church. Upon moving to Big Spring, the couple became members of the First Presbyterian Church. Mr. Stamps has served as deacon and elder throughout his years of membership.

To help celebrate this special occasion with the Stamps were their children and families from California and Texas. Present were daughters Margaret Ogden of San Antonio, Mrs. June McCasland and husband Gerald of Abilene. Other family members attending were Brent and Mary Brooks and family of Orange, Calif.; Noel and Marsha Brooks and family of New Braunsfels, Maxi and Markay Brashears and family of San Marcos, Mark Prather of Denton, Paul Prather and wife Ann of Ft. Worth and John McCasland of Abilene.

1961 class reunion

Seventeen out of 32 original Coahoma graduates of the Class of 1961 held their second reunion July 8, at Colorado City State Park. Methodist Women meet

The United Methodist Women's Organization of Coahoma held their regular quarterly meeting, Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Methodist Church.

Eight members were present including Betty Barr, chairman; Frances Mason, treasurer; Ruth Mitchel, secretary; Jane Headrick, Suzie Brown, Aurilia Sheedy, Mona Drake and Flovelle Thomas. Pastor Darren Skinner was also present.

Members agreed to the purchasing of lamps for the parsonage and a committee was set up to look further into the matter. Members also agreed to send money to the District Organization to help send district officers to the annual Methodist Church in Midland, Sept 10. Members were informed of the Week-Weekend Mission Education Week July 14-19 at Levelland.

A nominating committee was set up to present a slate of officers for the October meeting. Committee members include Juanita Stonerook, Mona Drake and Ruth Mitchel.

A two-part program was presented by Jane Headrick entitled "America, Right or Wrong" and "One Nation Under God." At the end of the program, Mrs. Headrick closed the meeting with a prayer.

County landfill

The Martin County Commissioners will consider sharing the costly close-down of the old Stanton landfill and the construction of the proposed new one.

Stanton Mayor Danny Fryar reported to the County on cost and task completion, of the Environmental Protection Agencymandated project.

Fryar explained that the EPAwas shutting down many landfills in West Texas, and that "Stanton is not excluded.

He said that the city had already spent $20,000 of the proposed $65,000 cost for preparing the draft permit. Other costs, which may end up costing the city and/or county as much as $750,000, included a Texas Department of Health review of the permit and a cityappointed engineer's response to that review.

A public hearing will be held after a final draft is prepared.

Chipping in to crush Chamber cash crunch

By MARC SCHWARZ Staff Writer

BIG SPRING - The financial squeeze the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce faced in June appears to be over, according to Executive Vice-President Whayne Moore.

'We're out of the immediate crunch," Moore said. "But the proof of the pudding will be the dollars committed to the 1990 budget."

The Chamber, caught in a financial quandry, had embarked on a two-pronged plan soliciting current members to increase their annual investment in the organization, as well as convincing delinquent members to pay their dues. An immediate influx of $30,000 was set, and Moore said over $24,000 has already been raised.

"I'm really encouraged by the level of response," he said. "And there are still commitments and pledges that will be made. But the encouraging thing to me is that we're going in the right direction."

A number of delinquent businesses have also paid their fees, but it is unlikely the Chamber will see revenue from every one, ting to talk about Big Spring. Part of the Chamber's purpose recently has been enticing a Chicago-based retirement agency to locate one of its communities here. The agency, San Francis, a religious enterprise, provides condominium-style accommodations in the South and Southwest for Northern families hoping to retire to a kinder, gentler climate.

Moore said the agency's board of directors has had contacts with the Chamber and will travel to Big Spring for an on-site inspection in the latter part of August. If the board decides to locate a facility here, it could provide housing for up to 284

"This could have a tremendous impact on our local economy,' Moore said. "It's hard to say how many jobs it could generate at this point, but it would definitely give the economy a boost. These people would purchase groceries, durable goods, open bank accounts, buy cars, and contribute volunteer efforts to churches and hospitals. These are ambulatory individuals, self-sustaining individuals - not people in need of special care."

The Chamber is currently cooperating with local medical, leisure, education, and other industries to present a package to the your program must meet their board detailing Big Spring's advantages and opportunities.

'We've got all these wonderful opportunities for people who want places to go and see," Moore said. 'We've got great local medical facilities, and continuing educational opportunities with Howard golf courses, and Moss Lake, and we're not even an hour's drive from Midland, and two hours from Lubbock and Texas Tech. And we're only an hour away from Dallas by plane, and about the same distance from Austin.'

Moore said the Chamber is prepared to seek out other retirement communities should this prospect fall through.

"If this board says, 'Hey, this is a nice place, but it doesn't suit our criteria, we can put the pieces in a package and go to other retirement organizations and try to draw them to Big Spring," he said.

However, the Chamber's energies are not wholly devoted towards attracting outside industries.

"You can't have a two-legged stool and achieve any kind of stability," Moore said. "New industry is necessary because of changing markets and economic conditions, but existing business and industry must also do well, and

"Our goals are business retention, business attraction, and most importantly, to improve the quality of life in Big Spring," he said. "If you have those three things, then the community has a full range of options and possibilities to choose

Pioneer reunion

MIDLAND - The 16th Biennial Reunion of the Permian Basin Petroleum Pioneers will oe held in Midland, Oct. 27, with headquarters at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, according to Decker Dawson, Chairman.

Registration, coffee and visitation will occupy the morning hours. A men's luncheon is scheduled at noon at the headquarter's hotel, with the ladies luncheon to be held at Green Tree Country Club with Mrs. Decker Dawson in charge of luncheon arrangements.

An informal reception and buffet for all participants, beginning at 6:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, will be the concluding event.

The reunion, sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Pioneers Association in cooperation with the Midland Chamber of Commerce Convention & Visitors Bureau, has been held on each oddnumbered year since 1959, alternating with the Permian Basin Oil Show

Les Weatherall, Membership Chairman, said all persons who were engaged in any phase of the petroleum industry in the Permian Basin Empire at least 30 years ago prior to Oct. 1, 1989, are eligible for membership

Widows of pioneers also are included. He urged all qualified persons who have not previously enrolled to do so by contacting him at 915-694-2338 or the Midland Chamber of Commerce office at 915-683-3381.

John E. Reid is the reunion's Hospitality Chairman and Bill Collyns is Publicity Chairman.

Survey eyes day-care for kids, adults

By MARC SCHWARZ Staff Writer

BIG SPRING - A survey distributed by Howard College may provide community leaders and employers insight on the local state of child and adult day-care needs and facilities.

About 5,500 questionnaires were sent to major local employers as the first phase in a joint effort bet-ween Howard College and community businesses to provide better, more affordable care for employees' offspring and elderly parents.

"We hope this will give us an idea from the community about the need for child and adult care and how those needs are being met now," said Becky Moughon, Howard College's research consultant for the child care feasibility study.

The study is geared toward creating the best possible community child and adult care, said Dr. Cheri Turner-Sparks, Howard College vice-president for student services.

"We're trying to help meet the needs of the 'sandwich generation,' the ones caught between providing day care for their young children and taking care of their elderly parents," Sparks said. Sparks said the college undertook the project at the request of some local business leaders. "A group of employers approached us in May and asked us to research the community's need for day care," she said. "We had another meeting with most of the child care can be a detriment to students," she said. "A lot of them will delay course work or drop out completely in order to take care of the children because they can't find adequate child care.'

MOUGHON

Howard College is more affected by the problem than some fouryear schools, Sparks said.

"It's a real problem among nontraditional students (students over 22)," she said. "Since they're older, they're more likely to have young children or aging parents they have to take care of, often sacrificing their college careers."

College students aren't the only ones forced to deal with securing proper child care, Sparks said. Shift workers especially have problems finding professional care. 'So many of the child care centers have an eight-to-five schedule that it makes it very hard for the people who work night shifts to find decent care," she said.

The survey should not affect only people with small children, Moughon said

"Some people have older kids, 10-14 years old, and let them stay home alone," she said. "But other parents don't want to do that."

Child care has received national attention and became an issue in last November's presidential election, but day-care for the elderly hasn't been addressed significantly by politicians, something Sparks said will change in the years ahead.

"The issue of providing day-care for aging parents is on the horizon," she said. "We decided to start ahead and try to find some solutions.

When the results of the survey are tabulated within the next few weeks, project sponsors will move on to phase two — studying the existing child and adult care services

"Phase three will be putting all that information together and going from there," said Moughon. 'Until we get that information, we don't really know what we'll do." Sparks agreed.

'We're not sure where we'll go from there," she said. "It may be that we'll just compile the information about what the community needs and how it's being provided now. Then we may have a 'clearing-house' meeting and present our findings to local employers and leaders."

Moughon said anyone wishing to fill out a child care survey can obtain one from the Howard College administration office.

LUBBOCK — The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) has expanded its declaration for Economic Injury Disaster Loans (EIDL) to small businesses in adjacent counties to declared counties that have sustained economic injury losses, according to Walter Fronstin, district director of SBA's Lubbock office. The losses are as a result of severe storms, tornadoes and flooding in Texas, occurring May 4 through June 15.

The counties eligible for EIDL assistance include counties declared in the Presidential declaration and their adjacent counties include Howard County Economic injury loans are limited to the financial needs of the applicant based on the actual economic injury and may be made for up to $500,000. The interest rate is 4 percent. Based on repayment ability, a loan may extend to 30 years.

This program is available only to small businesses which are able to meet the SBA's size standards and which do not have credit available elsewhere.

The deadline for filing for economic injury assistance is February 20, 1990. Businesses seeking additional information should call the SBA toll-free number, 1-800-527-7735.

LUFKIN - Scraps aren't safe around J.E. Shires of Lufkin. He'll whip them into shape and make them do something. He'll snatch them out of the lazy life and mold them to suit his purposes. Take the tractor that he built from scratch, for instance.

It is rust-colored because he built it out of scrap metal and parts picked up here and there.

'It has a little old three-speed transmission. I don't know what it came out of . . . I picked up a little old steering section. I don't know what it came off of," he said.

"I reckon it took me about a month. It is just all head work. I never use a pattern to build anything."

The little tractor has 16-inch tractor tires on the back and 12-inch tires on the front. It pulls an eight-bladed disc with two concrete blocks on it, and Shires uses it to cultivate his sizeable garden.

"My most recent project was a four-by-eight picnic table. The table and the benches are on rollers so that I can just get ahold of it and move it."

He has also built a swing on rollers.

The porch-type swing is supported by an A-frame he built for it and the whole thing is mounted on heavy-duty wheels.

"You can just get ahold of it and pull it into the shade wherever you want."

The picnic table and benches come in handy when he and his wife, Faye, are visited by their five children, 18 grandchildren and "I don't know how many greatgrandkids.'

Stories about small-town boys who make good are a dime a dozen, but Big Spring's Jerald Wrightsil is more unusual. He's had to cross oceans to make his story come true.

Wrightsil, who was a star on the Steers basketball team during the lean years, signed to play for the University of Hawaii. After four successful years on the court and in the classroom - Wrightsil received a business degree — he signed to play professional basketball in

The 24-year-old left Big Spring for Japan recently to start his second season with the Mazda team, one of 12 in the league's first or top division. His first season in 1988-89 was definitely storybook.

Wrightsil opened the new chapter in his life when he shipped off to Japan in mid-1988. He arrived in Tokyo unable to speak the language and unsure of what he would be facing.

"The first day I got there they had a translator for me," he explained. "She stayed around for about three weeks.

"I was in school by then. They expected me to know Japanese in three weeks.' Fortunately, basketball has a language all its own, and between that and the coach's slim knowledge of English, Wrightsil got by. The language barrier made for a lonely life at times though. "In practice it got more dif-

tion, he said. Wrightsil said in those first few months he ran up a big phone bill with all the calls

'I've learned enough (Japanese) now that I can meet people in the street," he said. "I can hold a conversation with them.

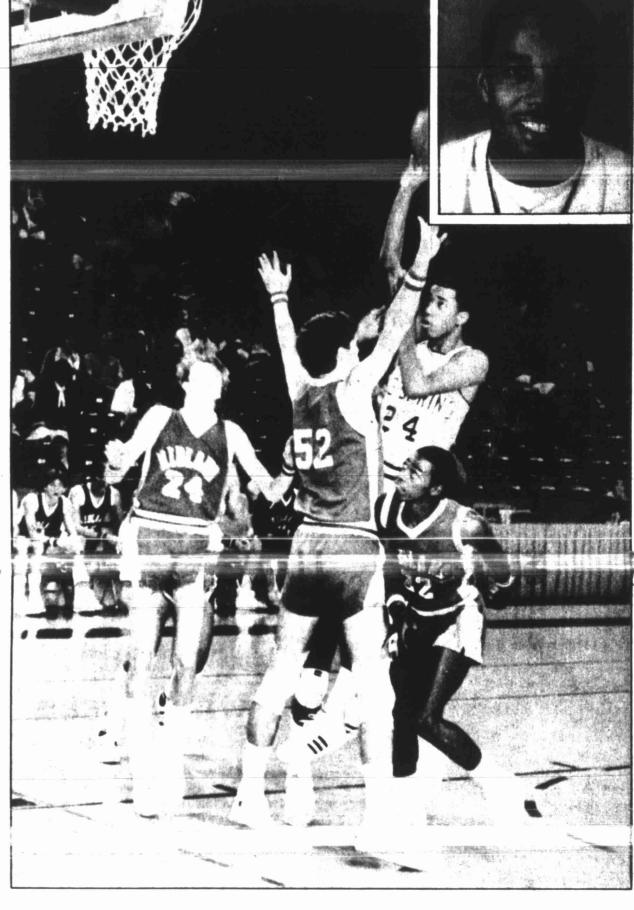

After breaking the language barrier, Wrightsil still had to conquer the courts and master the pressures that come with being an American ballplayer in the Japanese league.

'It's a lot of pressure, a lot of stress," he explained. "Eight times out of 10 (in a close game) it will be my shot or the play will be designed to me.

season and was out of work in March, 1968, after being released by Oakland.

Tettleton is typical of the Orioles. They are a low profile team with a payroll to match. The exception is shortstop Cal Ripken, Jr., who was the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1983, when Ripken could have walked away from last year's mess. He was in the final year of his contract and his father had been fired as manager. He could have washed his hands of the Baltimore blues.

He chose instead to stay, partbecause his brother, Billy, is the team's second ba partly because his father was still in the organization in which he has spent a lifetime, partly

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Bubby Brister said he considered but decided against boycotting training camp, claiming the NFL team is offering him less in a new contract than some backups are making elsewhere

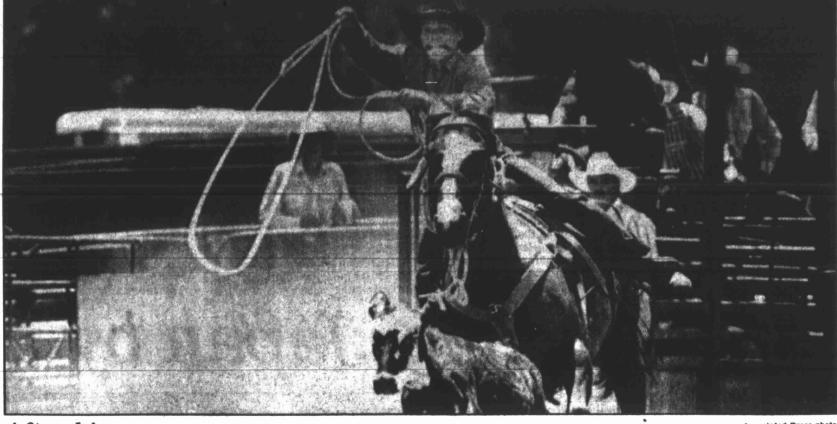

Brister, who has played four seasons with Pittsburgh, cited Cleveland Browns backup quarterback Mike Pagel, who shares agent Jim Steiner with Brister. Pagel was paid $300,000 last season and signed a new contract this week that reportedly will pay him less than $500,000 this season.

"It's disappointing sometimes when you see other guys who are backups earning that when I'm doing the job and working hard," he said. "I guess I'm going to training camp with the attitude I'll play out my option."

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) -Top-seeded Andre Agassi was knocked out of the $415,000 U.S. Pro Tennis Championships Saturday night, losing to Andres Gomez after Mats Wilander had earned a place in Sunday night's Agassi, who had reached the semis with three successive straight-set victories, lost 7-6 (7-1), 6-7 (3-7), 6-2 in two hours and 34 minutes before a capacity crowd at the Longwood Cricket Club.

Agassi, 19 and ranked fourth in the world, lost for the second time in three career meetings with Gomez, an Ecuadorean who is ranked 27th.

Wilander overcame his usual slow start to eliminate Martin Jaite in the afternoon semifinal. Wilander beat Jaite for the seventh time in eight meetings and put himself over the $7 million mark in career earnings with a 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 triumph.

Wilander dropped the first set, as he frequently does against the 11th-seeded Jaite, and came from behind by winning the last three games to settle the 2-hour, 17-minute match.

Along the way, Wilander agreed with Jaite to overrule an incorrect line call on a serve, and waited patiently while Jaite complained to the chair umpire about popping bubble gum in the Wilander said it was easier to

Holyfield on track for bout with Tyson

Evander Holyfield remained a major challenger to heavyweight champion Mike Tyson with a smashing second-round knockout of Adilson Rodrigues on Saturday night at Caesars Tahoe

Holyfield mostly jabbed.

Holyfield went after Rodrigues at the opening of the second round and the Brazilian refused to back away. The two went at it toe-to-toe with Rodrigues landing a hard right to the head. Suddenly, Holyfield shot home that right uppercut to the jaw and, two punches later, the fight was over.

Promoter Dan Duva said before the fight that he hoped if Holyfield looked good, his next opponent would be Tyson. Holyfield is in position to be the mandatory challenger by both the WBA and WBC. Tyson must sign for a mandatory WBA defense by Nov. 25 and must agree to a WBC mandatory defense sometime in February. His defense against Williams will be a mandatory International Boxing Federation defense.

Holyfield, who was an 11-1 favorite, earned his biggest payday to date — $1.2 million. It was his 18th knockout.

Rodrigues, fighting for just the second time outside Brazil, earned $300,000. He had scored 26 knockouts but his the overall quality of his competition was doubtful.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -Houston took advantage of six Philadelphia errors, including four by third baseman Charlie Hayes, and the Astros beat the Phillies 9-6 Saturday night.

Hayes was one error short of the major league record for third basemen, set by David Brain of the Boston Braves on June 11, 1906. Six players have committed five errors in a nineinning game since 1900. Hayes had two putouts and two assists.

Mark Portugal, recalled earlier in the day from Tuscon of the Pacific Coast League to fill in for the injured Mike Scott, gave up three runs and eight hits in 6 2-3 innings to even his record at 1-1.

National League

The victory was Portugal's first as a starter since April 19, 1987, with Minnesota. He struck out six and walked two. Houston scored five runs in the first inning, three unearned, off Larry McWilliams, 2-9. Billy her hit the first pitch of the game for a single, and went to third on Craig Biggio's single. Both scored on Bill Doran's double Glenn Davis walked, and when Hayes threw wildly on Ken Caminiti's bunt single, both runners scored. Caminiti later crossed on another Hayes throwing error.

The Astros added their sixth run in the second when Hatcher was safe on shortstop Dickie Thon's error, stole second and moved to third when catcher Darren Daulton's throw went into center field, and scored on McWilliams' wild pitch.

The Astros added three runs in the eighth on a bases-loaded double by Davis.

The Phillies scored a run in the first on Dwayne Murphy's RBI single and added two in the seventh and three in the eighth.

Thon singled in the seventh and one out later Steve Jeltz walked. Von Hayes' double drove in both runners and Juan Agosto replaced Portugal and

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -Will Clark overcame his career hitting problems against lefthander John Smiley and drove in four runs to power the San Francisco Giants to an 8-3 victory Saturday over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The left-handed-hitting Clark, who entered the game with only two hits in 24 at-bats against Smiley, had a three-run double and a run-scoring single among his three hits.

Mike LaCoss, 4-6 after winning as a starter for the first time since last July 28, gave up two runs in the first inning. He allowed six hits in six innings, struck out four and walked one.

Smiley, 7-5, but 4-1 with a 1.99 earned run average in 12 previous appearances against the Giants, gave up six runs and eight hits in six innings.

San Francisco tied the game in the fourth with the help of singles by Clark and Kevin Mitchell and errors by right fielder Glenn Wilson and third baseman Bobby Bonilla.

Brett Butler, who had three hits and scored three runs, singled, stole second and scored on Clark's two-out single for a 3-2 lead in the fifth Clark's double made it 6-2 in the sixth. Four RBIs gave him 69 for the season, second only to Mitchell's league-leading 83.

Reds 5, Expos 3 CINCINNATI (AP) — Eric Davis had three hits, and three RBIs as the Cincinnati Reds broke a five-game losing streak and handed Mark Langston his first National League road loss with a 5-3 victory Saturday night over the Montreal Expos. Davis hit a two-run homer, his 17th, in the first inning to snap a streak of 15 scoreless innings by the Reds. He added an RBI single in the eighth.

Rick Mahler, 9-8, snapped a personal three-game losing streak with his first victory since June 7. He allowed six hits in eight innings, striking out three and walking two. John Franco pitched the final inning for his 23rd save in 25 opportunities.

Langston, 6-3, was 5-0 in his first six starts on the road after being traded from Seattle to the Expos on May 25.

Paul O'Neill broke a 3-3 tie and put the Reds ahead to stay with a single in the fifth. It scored Rolando Roomes, who had walked and stolen second.

Philly miscues Twins end losing streak

By The Associated Press Jeff Reardon got a milestone save and helped Minnesota end its longest losing streak in four years. Gary Gaetti's opposite-field homer off Mike Smithson, 4-9, snapped a 2-2 tie in the eighth inning as Minnesota beat the Boston Red Sox 3-2 Saturday and ended an eight-game losing streak.

Juan Berenguer, 5-3, pitched two innings of scoreless relief and Reardon pitched the ninth for his 15th save this year and the 250th of his career.

"It's nice to get that," Reardon said, "but it's a move to pull us out of the losing streak, and that's more important.'

Minnesota's offense continued to struggle. The Twins entered the game with just 25 runs scored in their last 12 games, 11 of them losses. They needed two Boston errors to get two runs in the second but Dwight Evans tied it with a two-run homer in the fourth.

Gaetti's homer was to the opposite field.

Subliminal (send cash) messages

By STEVE REAGAN Staff Writer

If Murray Murphy ever tires of education, maybe he has a future as a minister.

Murphy, the assistant superintendent for personnel and instruction for the Big Spring school district, gave the invocation at Thursday's school board meeting.

After asking for divine guidance so the board would make the right decisions, he paused for a moment and asked God to please bring some much-needed rain to this

Guess what happened. Thirty minutes later, while the trustees were considering bids for portable classrooms, the quiet atmosphere was shattered by the sound of thunder. A few minutes later, it began to rain.

I, for one, do not believe that subliminal messages are effective. For the unaware, I am talking about split-second messages inserted in some movies and selfhelp tapes. They supposedly send sub-conscious signals encouraging the viewer to buy products or to stop smoking, lose weight, or whatever they're seeking help for.

To which I say: Baloney. If these things are so effective, why (SEND ME MONEY) are there still so many smokers and overweight people? One would think that if they were as great as they (SEND ME LOTS OF MONEY) they were cracked up to be, there would be fewer people in need of help.

I think the whole idea is (LOTS AND LOTS OF MONEY) entirely overrated.

As an area TV weatherman might say: What's (NO CHECKS, PLEASE) the deal, anyway?

People who are more

AND $20s ARE PREFERABLE) that, far from being helpful, subliminal messages may also be harmful. They say the messages may prey on people (BUT I'LL TAKE JUST ABOUT ANYTHING) who don't have the greatest amount of willpower. Can you imagine some weak-willed person entering a movie theater with nothing more than (AS LONG AS IT'S CASH) a good film in mind?

Why, that poor schmuck might be suckered into (WELL, STOCKS AND BONDS ARE PROBABLY OK) buying Lord knows what.

It's a shame; the unsuspecting person might go expecting to watch toaster (BUT I REALLY NEED CASH) oven, for Pete's sake.

Why, pretty soon we could have a nation of zombies hit by (AS MUCH CASH AS YOU CAN SPARE) uncontrollable urges to buy things they don't really need.

It's a potential disaster that (PLEASE, PLEASE, PLEASE) we must deal with before it gets

So, having identified the problem, what (REACH FOR YOUR POCKETBOOK NOW) can be done to rectify the situation? Well, of course we have to ban (I SAID NOW) any further use of this insidious medium.

But we can't stop there.

We have to implement a mass education campaign designed (THIS IS YOUR FINAL WARN-ING) at informing the public as to the hazards associated with subliminal messages.

This campaign should make use of all types of media (THIS IS AB-SOLUTELY YOUR FINAL WARN-ING) and should also be made available to the schools.

After that, the next step should be to identify (DON'T MAKE ME MAD) the scoundrels behind this hideous plot and ensure that they are subject to the stiffest penalty possible.

Then, of course, we'll have to provide treatment for the (I'M NOT PRETTY WHEN I'M MAD) poor folks who have been brainwashed by subliminal messages.

It make take years, but these people deserve to become normal (YOU'LL BE SORRY) citizens

After all, it's the least (THAT DOES IT, I'M REALLY TICKED) we can do.

Maybe, some day in the future, all this will be (OH, COME ON. FOLKS, JUST A FEW BUCKS, PLEASE) nothing but an unplea-

How many mothers would love to hear this tune playing as their daughters walk down the runway after winning the coveted

If the number of area pageant winners is any indication, West Texas girls have as good a chance as any.

In fact, several area girls are in training for the chance to compete for the title of Miss

At the young age of two years, Brandi Nicole Kilpatrick, daughter of Craig and Teresa Kilpatrick, already has three pageant wins to add to her Brandi first competed and won at the Country Kids contest at the Howard County Fair in 1988. Because of her victory, Brandi's mother decided to enter her daughter later the same year in Our Diamond Miss Beauty Pageant in Odessa, where Bran-di won both the Beautiful Baby and World of Babies categories. With this win, Brandi was eligible to compete June 24 at the state competition in Abilene. Again, Brandi won both her divisions, beating out 13 children from throughout Texas. For her efforts, she received crowns, trophies, banners, flowers and a $50 savings bond. Brandi, who will crown next year's pageant winners, is eligible to compete July 30 at the national competition in San Antonio, where she will compete with children from throughout

Because Brandi, who will ete in the 13 to 24-month as division, is outgoing and has a "real good personality," the stiffer competition, her mother said, won't affect her performance at all.

"She does real well . . . she gets up there and blows kisses and waves," Teresa said. Because pageant competition is expensive, most competitors need sponsors to help pay for clothing and entry fees. Several area residents and ousinesses have made it possible for Brandi to compete, her mother said.

Teresa says that pageants don't exploit the girls, if fact, she says they belo buil

"She (Brandi) enjoys it — if she didn't want to do it, she wouldn't get up there," Teresa

Four-year-old Porsha D'Ann Yarbar began competing at the age of two. Although she placed fourth at her first pageant, her parents, Dwain and Trisha Yarbar, decided to let her try again. This time, their efforts proved Porsha, who competed in the 24 to 35-month age division, won the Beautiful Baby and playwear categories at the Kids of America Pageant. In December of 1988, Porsha won the Beautiful Baby category at the Starlight Pageant in Abilene

Just back from Dallas, where she competed in the national pageant, Porsha competed with more than 30 girls from five different states, placing seventh

For selling the most ads to be included in the pageant pro-gram, Porsha's picture graces the 1989 program cover. She also received a six-foot trophy and a 13-inch color TV.

Competing is " expensive," said Trisha, noting that the average dress costs more than $100.

Several area sponsors helped defray the pageant costs, and Trisha adds, "My parents were wonderful." Porsha, who is working on a song and dance routine, seems to love the competition. 'She's outgoing. She loves it. She knows she's on film or something," Trisha said.

Although some mothers push their daughters into competing, Trisha said "If she ever says she doesn't want to compete Trisha, like all mothers who vant their daughters to be happy and successful, said, "I want her to do whatever she wants to in life - but I sure would like to see her become Miss America.'

Sherri Dawn and Jennifer Lyonell Halfmann are sisters who began competing a year

Sherri, 15, and Jennifer, 14, daughters of Delbert and Betty Jean Halfmann, competed in the Our Little Miss pageant in 1988 in Garden City, where they qualified to go to state competition later that year in Austin.

Sherri was named alternate in the Livin' Doll category, and both girls placed in the top 10 overall.

For their efforts, their names were placed on the state honor roll, enabling them to bypass this year's local pageant and also made them eligible to compete at the state level June 19-24. This time, the girls not only competed with other girls, they competed with each other.

Competing in the Ideal Miss category, the girls said they . . worked together as a team" until the actual competition. Although they both compete to win, they agree they root for each other.

"I hope she wins if I can't -she's my sister. I love her," Sherri said.

Betty Jean noted that being the mother of a competitor is not easy - especially when you have two girls that are in competition with each other. "It's very hard and they both have to sacrifice. One minute I'm trying to help one and the next minute the other one needs help." she said.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the letter from the woman who stayed on her side of the bed for 40 years because her husband hardly ever took a bath

I have a brother who is just like him. He came to stay with me for two months last summer, and never took one bath or shower in all the time he was here. I kept checking the towels and washrag every day, and he never used one!

I changed the sheets and pillowcases on his bed every week, and had to hold my nose while I carried them to the washing machine. (I used to sneak into his bedroom while he was sleeping so I could get his socks and underwear in order to wash them.)

This man dressed up like a sport and looked clean, but he was anything but. He splashed a lot of cologne and after-shave on himself, so he must have known that he needed it. I gave him some deodorant, but he didn't get the hint and never touched it.

Why do some folks just hate to bathe? There must be something wrong upstairs. I would appreciate the opinion of a psychiatrist. -STINKY'S SISTER

DEAR SISTER: I asked my No. 1 consultant, Dr. Judd Marmor, past president of the American Psychiatric Association, and he said: "Some older people who are chronically depressed will go for long periods — often many months without bathing. They seem totally unaware that they smell bad, and may become hostile and defensive when told that they absolutely must bathe.

"In cases where there is repressed anger, refusal to bathe is one way of distancing oneself from a spouse or family members. "People who have very low selfesteem will neglect personal hygiene. They feel loathsome ('Why bother; I'm not worth the trouble')

"If it comes on late in life and hasn't been a lifelong pattern, it may indicate that an organic brain problem has developed.

In order to determine specifically the reason for refusing to bathe, the person would have to be psychiatrically examined.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing that wonderful poem Jimmy Stewart wrote about his dog named Beau. It was priceless. It brought back some fond memories. I am a retired doctor of veterinary medicine and was formerly an assistant to Dr. J.D. Cozzens, who practiced in Westwood Village, Calif., back in 1936-1938. Most of our clients were movie stars, such as Pat O'Brien, Jeanette MacDonald, Gene Raymond, Fred MacMurray, Lloyd Nolan and Jimmy Stewart.

One day we received a telephone call from Jimmy Stewart. He was at the dog pound trying to retrieve his English setter, which had been picked up by the dog catcher. Mr. Stewart needed us to identify the dog - which showed absolutely no recognition of Mr. Stewart when he came to claim him. Because I had handled the dog, Dr. Cozzens sent me down to the pound to verify the ownership of the setter.

As I recall, the dog acted as though he had never seen Mr. Stewart before, which was quite upsetting to this famous movie

Anyway, I established the identity, and Mr. Stewart took the dog home. This happened more than 50 years ago, so Mr. Stewart may not remember it, but I will never forget it. - WALLACE R, EAGLE,

"Anytime you eat Southern dishes like turnip greens you've gotta have some hot pepper sauce to go along with it.'

He grows the habanero, which is the hottest chili pepper in the world. "The Schofield scale, which measures capsicum oil in climes . . . that's what Thanes them hot . . . shows habaneros to be 600 to 800 times hotter than jalapenos," says Jeff. "It's a small orange pepper. Down in the Caribbean they call them Scot's Bonnet or Tam O'Shanter.

You turn them upside down and they look like the caps worn by men in Scotland. They're very

He raises 40 different kinds of chilies. Jeff, who has had his business five years, ships wholesale all over the U.S. and beyond. He sells other vegetables, too, as well as Stonewall peaches. "I tried growing chilies in Colorado once, but the altitude was too high and they didn't do well.

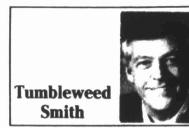

The hill country is a great place to grow chilies."

His peppers are grown a 10-acre tract of land. He has a small steel building on the East side of Stonewall. Nearby is his vegetable farm. Everything he sells is fresh produce grown right there in the hill country. "I had a man from Toronto, Canada call me the other day. He wants to supply food companies up there with the habaneros. We're the only commercial grower of habaneros in the United States."

He says "habanero" has to do with Havana, Cuba. But there's no sign of the hot pepper ever being found there. It's about an inch and a half long and about threequarters of an inch across. When Spanish explorers came to the islands, they wrote in their diaries about an orange pepper "that would make a bull sweat."

It was probably the habanero. "When you eat one, it stays with you a long time," says Jeff. "That's the chili that separates the men from the boys.

A habanero makes well in Stonewall.

horseradish seem mild in comparison," he says. "I warn everybody about them before they take a bite. At first they say it's not not. But live minutes later they say it's hot . . . and getting In the islands they chop them very fine and serve them with salt and lime juice as a seasoning. In the Yucatan Peninsula they use them quite a bit. The food there is hotter than in most parts of Mexico.

His most popular item is jalapenos. He says everybody should have jalapenos for breakfast. "They have more Vitamin C than anything else. Three times more Vitamin C than oranges." Jeff enjoys jalapenos or some type of pepper with every meal. "Food just tastes bland without them.'

He says hot food is becoming more popular. A survey in the north revealed two out of three new restaurants opening serve hot food ... Chinese, Cajun, Mexican or Tex-Mex. "Nor therners are beginning to realize that what we've been eating down here for a long time is good," says

He says lots of people write to him and order peppers. A restaurant in Chicago orders habaneros shipped fresh overnight. His address is the Stonewall Chili Pepper Company, Stonewall, Texas 78671. He has just printed a list of his merchandise and prices. He has chilies fresh and dried, several varieties of chili powders including tabasco, cayenne and jalapeno. He has relishes, salsas, marinades, sauces and just about anything to do with chilies. He handles every size of pepper, from the chili petin, which is about half the size of a dime, to the Mexibel, which is a hot bell pepper. He has the New Mexicotype chilies which he says grow

Things hey never told you bout a heat pump

Fact #7

Installing a heat pump is much more costly and complicated than putting in a high-efficiency air conditioner.

And a heat pump doesn't cool as well or operate as economically,

If you need a new air conditioner this summer, replace it with a modern high-efficiency air conditioner. Not a gadget.

The Big Spring High School Class of 1959 has set a goal for its 30th reunion: raise the money to replace the legendary mosaic that once graced the entrance to BSHS.

It was this class that gave the mosaic - in the shape of the senior ring crest — to the school in 1959. It became a tradition that no one was to step on the colorful tiles.

Alas, when the school was remodeled some years ago, the mosaic was sacrificed to progress

Transmissions may need service in hot weather

Summer driving can take its toll on automatic transmissions, according to Billy Smith, owner of Smith's Automatic Transmission, 2900 E. FM 700. Owners of cars, pick-ups, RV's and 4-wheel drives shoud have those transmissions serviced prior to going on vacation, he recommends. If vacation-goers are going to pull boats, trailers or other loads, Billy suggests they consider coming by for installation of a transmission oil cooler.

Card Of Thanks

We wish to express our appreciation and thanks for the generosity, kindness, thoughtfulness and prayers to all our friends, neighbors, acquaintances, church members, hospital staffs and business people who all were very helpful during the illness and loss of our loved one.

The Grady Redding Family

To our kind friends, neighbors and relatives we wish to express our sincere appreciation for sympathetic attention, beautiful floral tributes and other courtesies extended to us at the passing of my beloved mother.

> Kelly McBee & Family

In the midst of our sorrows, we wish to express our heartfelt thanks and appreciation to our many relatives; friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown us in the loss of our beloved Father and Grandfather, Arnulfo M. Hernandez. We especially wish to thank the Rev. Joseph Scharrer for the lovely service, to Rev. Patrick Walsh for his consoling words, all the donors of the many beautiful floral offerings, the pallbearers, the singers for all their kindness; a special thank you to the Senior Citizen Center of Big Spring; Dr. Parks and the Medical Staff of Scenic Mountain Medical Center; V.A. Medical Center and to Myers & Smith Funeral Home for their efficient management of the services.

God Bless You All. The Family of

Arnulfo M. Hernandez

Misconceptions of single and dual parenting

By NAOMI HUNT County Extension Agent

A misconception among single parents today is that their task is somehow different and more awesome than that of the twoparent household.

Dr. Wayne Grant, San Antonio, author of "Growing Parents, Growing Children," emphasized at a recent single parenting conference that the same rules apply for healthy parenting by both single and two-parent families. He noted five guidelines for healthy parenting in both family situations.

Children from both types of families have identical needs from the standpoint of physical, emotional, intellectual and social development.

They all need to hear and be able to practice good communication; have good nutrition and discipline that promotes healthy self-esteem; and experience unconditional love and spend quality time with their parents

Parents need to avoid using the child as an emotional leaning post. The single parent could be more vulnerable to this trap because of the physical absence of the second parent. The parent may unload allow the child to sleep with her/him, or place undue responsibility on the child.

Avoid allowing the child to be a "pawn" between two angry adults. A child can unconsciously bear the tension between parents, either both being present or one being absent. In a power struggle, parents may inadvertently "use" the child to gain approval.

Allow the child to be a child. Because of the many competing forces and time constraints within today's busy family, the child must be allowed to experience free undirected time alone, time to explore, play and imagine.

Take good care of yourself as a parent. Single parents, more that "normal" families, probably carry feelings and emotions on the child, an extra load of guilt. Grant advises backing off and looking at your own needs. "You can only be as good a parent as you are a person," he said.

One of the best things you can do for your child is to do something for yourself. Nurture yourself emotionally, intellectually, spiritually and physically. Only then will you have the inner reserve to meet the needs of your child.

Avoid allowing the child to be a "pawn" between two angry adults. A child can unconsciously bear the tension between parents.

Sheep, goats highlight of field day

By DON RICHARDSON County Extension Agent

Sheep and Goats will be the main topics of interest at a field day July 18 at 6:00 p.m. at the Middleton Farm, northwest of Big Spring, just off Hwy 87 on FM 846.

A special session on individual plant treatment (IPT) control of mesquite also will be featured. This should be of special interest to those with fence line brush problems and smaller acreages of mesquite infested pasture and ranges.

When the Long Range Extension Plan (LREP) was developed in 1986 to assist local Extension agents in directing their educational program efforts, one of the critical issues indentified by the agricultural committees was the need for diversification by county agricultural producers

Members of the Extension Livestock and Range Program Area Committee believe that sheep and goats offered promise as diversification practices that local producers could incorporate into their agricultural operations and might

Harry and Johnny Middleton demonstrators for the past two years utilizing stocker lambs in several ways in such diversification practices. These programs will be discussed and viewed at this field day, along with other possible enterprises suitable for West Texas conditions Extension Livestock Specialist Dr. Rick Machen, Fort Stockton; Dr. George Ahlschwede, Extension sheep and goat specialist, San Angelo; Johnny Middleton and the local agents Mike Bragg and myself will lead the discussion

Included in the discussions will be cashmere and angora goats, colored sheep and various other alternative sheep and goat enterprises. Ahlschwede will discuss lamb types vs. the lean lamb theory that is so popular now

Dow Chemical Co., Big Spring Farm Supply and Ezell-Key Feed Co. will be hosting a complimentary bar-b-que at the Middleton farm during the event, featuring mesquite flavored lamb and cabrito prepared by Al's Hickory House Bar-B-Que of Big Spring.

A special highlight of the program will be a demonstration of stock show showmanship skills by Howard County 4-H members and training tips by Ahlschwede. This should prove entertaining and educational to all.

The field day and tour is open to any one interested in the sheep and goat industry.

If you plan to attend, please contact the Howard County Extension Office at 267-6671 or 267-1821, by noon Monday.
