HC needs nurses

BIG SPRING — Faced with the resignation of three instructors, Howard College is in need of qualified teachers for its nursing program.

College vice-president Andy Hicks said today that the program is searching for instructors in the wake of the resignations.

The three nurses have resigned over the course of the summer. One quit because of her husband's transfer to Iowa; the second to accept a position with Texas Tech University; and the other to be closer to her family.

The instructors will remain with HC until the summer term is complete, Hicks said, adding that the college has interviewed potential replacements, but no hirings have occurred.

Any qualified persons interested in the position should contact Hicks at the college in writing or by calling 267-6311.

Inmates transferred

BIG SPRING — Five Howard County Jail inmates were transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections early today.

Those transported to the TDC were: Willie Dearing, 40, Dallas, sentenced to 18 years after being convicted of sexual assault; Santos Tiyerina Menez, 32, 1403 Wood St., sentenced to three years after being convicted of felony driving while intoxicated; Jesse Dean Mince, 18, 1408 Nolan St., sentenced to six years after having probation revoked for delivery of a controlled substance; Douglas Anthony Parks, 23, Midland, sentenced to five years after having probation revoked for unlicensed use of a motor vehicle; and Billy Joe Mitchell, 40, no address given, had parole revoked for unlicensed carrying of a weapon. His length of sentence was not listed on the report.

Up and away

PALMDALE, Calif. — The B-2 stealth bomber lifts up from the runway here Monday morning on its first flight. The first flight of the radar-eluding bomber had been delayed for 18 months. For details see Page 7-A.

Epilepsy meeting

BIG SPRING — A representative of the West Texas Epilepsy Association will be at the second floor conference room of the Permian Building, 113 W. 2nd, on July 20 from 1-3:30 p.m.

Appointments are not necessary to get information or assistance. For more information call the WTEA office at 697-7901 in Midland.

Official indicted?

COLORADO CITY — Officials today declined comment on a published report stating that a Mitchell County Commissioner has been indicted on four counts of official misconduct.

Larry Hale, Mitchell County Precinct 3 commissioner, was named on four sealed indictments returned by a Mitchell County grand jury Friday, according to a report in the Colorado City Record.

The Record, citing informed sources, stated that 12 counts — one felony and 11 misdemeanor — of official misconduct against Hale were presented to the grand jury. The exact nature of the indictments is unknown.

A spokesperson for the Colorado City District Attorney's office today said that the indictments are still sealed, and will remain so until the persons named in the indictment are in custody.

LULAC, trustees close to agreement

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — Lawyers for LULAC and school board officials here may be close to reaching an agreement on election procedures, attorneys for LULAC said Saturday.

The League of United Latin American Citizens is pushing the district to replace the current method of at-large voting with single-member districts in board elections.

"We're in the middle of discussions; we think we might be able to settle it (without a lawsuit)," San Antonio-based lawyer Rolando Rios said in an interview before a Colorado City LULAC meeting Saturday. Rios is one of two attorneys representing LULAC in their lawsuit against the school district.

"We are making progress," confirmed Jim Ramsey, Colorado City School superintendent today. Ramsey stressed the tentative nature of any current discussions. He advised contacting the school's Waco attorney for any further comment, but calls to that office were not returned as of press time.

Rios and Dallas-based lawyer Bill Garrett told LULAC supporters elections might take place in September.

"There's always that possibility," Ramsey said, again cautioning about making rash conclusions on the state of negotiations.

Attorneys for LULAC filed suit against the school district Jan. 30 in U.S. District Court in Abilene, charging that the at-large voting method discriminates against minorities. The judge in the case suspended school elections March 20 until the matter could be resolved.

The lawsuit — which named the current school trustees as defendants — was filed because LULAC members were dissatisfied with the state of negotiations between LULAC and CCISD officials. LULAC members felt "we weren't going anywhere the way things were going," Colorado City LULAC President Oscar Ortiz said previously.

Rios said seven districts would be created in the arrangement with school officials; minorities make up the majority in two of the districts.

Rios expressed confidence that the districts will lead to Hispanic membership on the school board. "It looks like for sure at least two (Hispanics) can be elected to the school district," he said.

For at least 15 years, the school district had only one Hispanic trustee — Ruben Alvarez, who was appointed to the post in January.

Rios called LULAC's battle for single-member districts "democracy at work" and said the desired end result is to have "all interest groups represented."

"Hispanics need to have representatives on the school board. What is the Hispanic population (in Colorado City) — 30, 40 percent?" Rios asked. "Issues come up, you need to have minorities on the school board" for their input on those issues, he said.

Rios told LULAC supporters he and Garrett are also attempting to have Colorado City adopt single-member districts in city elections.

"We hope we can do it without

School boards to meet

Four area school boards will meet within the next few days to consider budget and policy items for the upcoming school year.

Coahoma's board meets tonight to consider approval of a teacher's resignation and recommendations for two others. Board members also will consider a bid for resurfacing the school's track, and a policy update, according to the superintendent's office.

The board will also hear maintenance, transportation, and tax reports.

Garden City trustees also meet tonight to consider a proposed budget for the new school year and a proposed tax rate. The board will also resume discussion on curriculum changes, and on accounting transfers denied by the state, said Superintendent Donn Stringer.

Borden County's board meets tomorrow and will discuss payment of July bills, and they will open bids on a milk supplier for the new school year and on a depository for school funds. The board will also hear financial and personnel reports and consider changing the current policy for students with dual residence.

Superintendent James McLeroy said the board members will consider a preliminary budget for the 1989-90 school year, set lunch room prices, and discuss the driver's education program and any suggested changes to it. The board will also select a delegate to the Texas Association of School Boards and Administrators joint convention.

Forsan trustees meet Monday, and members will probably discuss a tentative budget voted on at the last meeting, said Superintendent J.F. Poyner.

Poyner said the board's agenda is not yet firmly set, but it will consider bids on various types of insurance, discuss the travel policy

Tourists leave strange things

By MARC SCHWARZ
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — At the height of the summer vacation season, travelers often are prone to leave personal items in motel rooms, RV parks, and bus and train stations, leaving clean-up staffs to deal with the objects and wonder about their owners.

"Pillows are the number one thing people leave behind," said Big Spring Days Inn manager Jan Howard. "We also find a lot of shoes and children's toys, and last week someone left a briefcase. But the most unusual thing I've found was a pair of false teeth."

William Kaberle, manager of the local Great Western Motel, said he's also found some interesting things over the years.

"The strangest thing someone ever left here was an old pillow left by a lady in her sixties," Kaberle said. "The pillow had belonged to her mother and her grandmother, and was passed down to her. She called us and was real upset, so we shipped it to her."

Bikes are one of the most common things left behind, and people hardly ever come back for them or call us about them, so I guess they just go out and buy another one."

If the address of the item's owner can be found, or if the owner contacts the motel, the item will be sent to the person. Anything still unclaimed after 30 days will usually be thrown away, unless it has any significant monetary or sentimental value,

Kaberle said.

"Something that's hard to replace, or maybe important to the people I usually put in a box and keep just in case the people should come back for it one day."

he said.

The Days Inn has a similar policy, said Howard.

"The object goes to the lost and found for 90 days while we try to

Years of work bring Scout highest honor

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Special to the Herald

BIG SPRING — David Neal Yockey of Troop Five has earned his Eagle Scout award, the highest award given by the Boy Scouts of America. The 16-year-old Big Spring High School junior was honored Friday at an Eagle Court of Honor.

For Yockey, who joined the Cub Scouts when he was 8, the award is the culmination of years of hard work. His most recent endeavor was his Eagle Service Project in which he planned, directed and supervised the construction of four sturdy picnic tables and had them placed at the Big Spring State Hospital facility.

The project involved about 120 hours of work after school and on weekends in March and April using plans for Boy Scout table E41, a table that will not flip or lurch like a boat when one side is vacated. Eleven helpers bolted the tables using lug screws and nuts — not one nail was used. They were then undercoated with white and painted green.

As projects go, there was a lesson in it for Yockey. "Start with a plan and keep it in gear," he said with a grin.

But the Boy Scout experience as a whole has provided many other learning experiences for Yockey, who's goal after graduating high school is to attend the Air Force Academy.

"Boy Scouts really helps you learn your leadership skills, be more responsible and helps you get along with people," he said.

Other scouting awards that he has garnered are the Brotherhood of the Order of the Arrow and a few Den Chief Service Awards. His other interests include reading, assembling models and collecting knives.

His troop, chartered by the First Baptist Church, is one of four in Big Spring and has 48 registered scouts. The scoutmaster is Bill Bradford.

Yockey moved to Big Spring from New Mexico two years ago when his father Fred became a district executive for the Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America in Midland with responsibility for six of the 18 counties in the council. His mother's name is Jorja.

Yockey has one brother and four sisters.

Apollo astronauts celebrate 20th anniversary of moon landing

The Apollo 11 astronauts were honored Sunday at Kennedy Space Center on the anniversary of man landing on the moon (left). Lunar Module Pilot Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin Jr., above, center, wipes his eyes as he and Command Module Pilot Michael Collins, left and the first man on the Moon, Commander Neil Armstrong, right, stand before NASA employees at Kennedy Space Center.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Twenty years after the first moon walk, the Apollo 11 crew called for further exploration of the lunar surface and Mars, but another astronaut said a bold new program is unlikely soon.

Neil Armstrong, Buzz Aldrin and Mike Collins, at a ceremony Sunday commemorating the anniversary of their spectacular liftoff on July 16, 1969, expressed their hopes for a rejuvenated space program.

On Thursday, the anniversary of the landing, they will join with President Bush for a celebration outside the National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C.

There, Bush will deliver a speech on space policy. Some are pressing him to announce a return to the moon, while others are pushing for an exploration to Mars. Many scientists are suggesting a joint U.S.-Soviet exploration for either option.

Bush said in Paris on Sunday he was weighing different ideas.

At Cape Canaveral, Armstrong, told 6,000 flag-waving space workers and their families Sunday that they should "allow ourselves just a touch of pride, a touch of satisfaction, that we were participants and witnesses to the birth of a new human era."

He said historians in future centuries will identify the 20th century "as the time when the human species broke the bonds of gravity that had heretofore bound them to this planet."

In brief remarks, Aldrin, who walked on the moon with Armstrong, and Collins, who remained in lunar orbit in the command ship, looked to future space exploration.

"One of these years, and I hope it won't be too long, this country will decide to press on again far out into space, perhaps to the planet Mars," Collins said.

Aldrin said NASA's Freedom space station, to be assembled in orbit in the mid-1990s, should serve as a stepping stone to a manned lunar base and human flights to Mars.

He called President John F. Kennedy's commitment to the moon landing goal 28 years ago "a starter's gun for our pioneering giant leap for mankind."

"We're not yet ready for that go again. But perhaps we are at the starting line, prepared to take our marks or get set," Aldrin said.

Following the ceremony, the astronauts rode in a 20-mile-motorcade from the space center to Cocoa Beach, where they attended a luncheon in their honor. An estimated 10,000 people lined the route to cheer the spacemen and to take pictures.

For Armstrong, Aldrin and Collins, the ceremony was the second stop on a week-long sentimental journey that began Saturday with a visit to the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., where their Saturn 5 rocket was designed.

In Huntsville on Sunday, Apollo 12 astronaut Alan Bean had a more pessimistic view of space exploration in the near future.

Bean, the fourth man to walk on the moon, said that until the Soviet Union decides to put a man on the moon or take some other such step, Americans will be complacent about their space achievements.

"Sometime something will happen where we'll say maybe we'd better catch up. But that won't happen today," Bean said.

Bean, who walked on the moon on Nov. 19, 1969, and later flew aboard Skylab 3 for 59 days in 1973, said he didn't want to see another 1960s-style space race.

"I'd rather have space cooperation. I'd think that would be much better for the Earth," he said.

Spring board

How's that? Howard College

Q. Who elects the Howard College Board of Trustees? How long are their terms and who decides the length?
A. According to a spokesperson for Howard College, the citizens of Howard County elect the members of the Howard College Board of Trustees. There are seven members; three are elected at large and four are elected by districts. Each member serves a six-year term. The six-year term and the seven-member board have been a part of the original structure of the institution since 1945.

A tiring Bush ends tour with speech on East-West relations

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — President Bush met with leaders of this staunch NATO ally today and brings down the curtain on a 10-day European tour with a speech on his strategy for dealing with the Soviet Union and its East Bloc allies.

After his arrival at Amsterdam from an economic summit talks in Paris, the president was whisked on a 40-minute drive through the Dutch countryside to this seat of government for tea with Queen Beatrix and talks with Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers.

The president's meeting with Lubbers and Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek lasted nearly an hour and was believed to have focused on the environment — a major Dutch concern.

Lubbers' center-right coalition government collapsed in May over the financing of an environmental cleanup campaign, and was thrown into caretaker status until elections are held in September.

The high point of the visit was a speech at Pieterskerk, the Church of St. Peter, a huge cathedral that was built around 1500 in the town of Leiden.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the speech would focus on East-West relations and the U.S. approach toward the Soviet Union as it wrestles with economic and political reforms.

Bush's stopover on his return to Washington was the first visit to the Netherlands by an American president. Dutch politicians described the 25-hour stay as an American "pat on the back" for a loyal NATO ally that braved fierce public opposition in agreeing to accept the basing of nuclear-tipped cruise missiles.

The Netherlands is the final stop for Bush after four days in Paris for the seven-nation economic summit and earlier visits to Poland and Hungary.

At a post-summit news conference Sunday, Bush admitted he didn't object when the gathering was cut short after three days with the cancellation of a farewell dinner.

Bush hailed the outcome of the summit and said its first-ever focus on environmental problems was a watershed.

The final summit communique called for "decisive action" to save rain forests, the atmosphere, and the seas, lakes and rivers.

regulations which prohibit an officer from having certification in two different police agencies. The police department and fire department are both regarded as police agencies, he said.

"As far as I know that's why he had to transfer membership."

Sparks said Williamson had been a part-time officer with the Colorado City Police Department for about four years and had previously served as a full-time officer for another four to five years. He did not know how long Williamson had been fire marshal.

Asked why Williamson had not been forced to move his membership to one of the two departments earlier, Sparks replied, "You'll have to talk to him about that. I'm just telling you what I know."

Sparks said he still has confidence in his former officer. "I would not hesitate on calling on his assistance in an emergency . . .," he said.

Sandoval said he had obtained five volumes of depositions which detail alleged brutality by Williamson during his years on the Colorado City police force. He allowed a Herald reporter to view the documents but refused to disclose how he had obtained them.

The documents "are going to blow the FBI's mind when they see it," Sandoval promised. "It will blow your mind if you see it," he told LULAC supporters.

Sandoval said, "They (the FBI) want to know more and this will give it to them." The FBI has recently stepped up its interest in the case after Sandoval and other area and state LULAC members met with key FBI officials in Washington, Sandoval said.

contact the owner, she said. "After that it goes to the person who found it."

A specialized logbook helps the local Best Western Motel locate owners, said manager Joyce Cole.

"As the item is turned in, we log the date, room number, and the person who found it," Cole said. "Then we match it with the registration card and get the owner's address, so when they contact us, I wrap it up and ship it to them."

Cole said unclaimed items are saved at least six months, and then "I give it to the maids or take it to the Salvation Army."

Jerry Worthy, owner of the RV park in Big Spring, said he mostly discovers toiletries left in the park's shower area, or clothing in the laundry room.

"I hardly ever find anything in the actual trailer area itself," Worthy said. "Whatever I find, I usually leave where it is for a day or two in case it belongs to people staying at the park a few days. If it's still there I take it and dispose of it or give it away."

Bus stations are also recipients of forgetful travelers' personal items, said local station manager Paul Deboskie.

"Mostly people leave pillows and overnight kits and packed lunches, and sometimes baggage," he said.

The station will forward the item to the owner if it has an address listed on it, otherwise "if we can't find a name or address, and it's of any value, we ship it to the baggage locator in Los Angeles, where it's stored in a warehouse," Deboskie said.

Great Western manager Kaberle said his strangest lost and found case occurred while he worked at a New Braunfels motel.

"Once a couple got about 100 miles down the road before they realized they'd left their little son back at the motel," he said. "So about three hours later, they pulled in and picked him up from the front desk."

Police beat

The Big Spring Police Department reported the following incidents:

- Jessie Lee Woodruff, 25, 1002 N. Main, was arrested Saturday and charged with driving while intoxicated.
- Jose Antonio Moran, no age given, 603 E. 18th, was arrested and charged with criminal mischief.
- Jimmy Olivares, 25, 1512 Harding, was arrested on warrants issued for robbery, parole violation and theft under $20.

- The burglary of a building was reported in which clothing valued at $382 was removed and a window valued at $175 was damaged.
- A person reported that another person fired a shot at him during an aggravated assault.
- The burglary of a building was reported in which VCRs and video equipment valued at $1,647 were removed from a business.
- A felony theft was reported in which the wire wheel covers on a Cadillac Seville were removed. The wheel covers were valued at $800.
- The burglary of a habitation was reported in which an air conditioner valued at $350 was removed.
- The burglary of a habitation was reported in which hand tools and shop equipment valued at $5,552 were removed.
- The burglary of a habitation was reported in which golf equipment and a chainsaw all valued at $959 were removed.
- An accident reported Sunday sent one person to Scenic Mountain Medical Center. A motorcycle eastbound on Randolph struck a raised median, injuring the driver.
- One person was hospitalized Saturday after a two-car accident. In the 1100 block of E. 11th, a person driving one vehicle was distracted and ran into the rear end of another vehicle.

Wife of 'charming' womanizer wonders if charm is enough

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive, 49-year-old, professional woman, married for more than 30 years to a charming womanizer. He has had many affairs during our marriage.

He's a loving, generous man. I truly love him, and I know he loves me. But when I question him about his continuous affairs, he says he could die tomorrow, and he intends to enjoy his life fully while he's here and able to do it.

I've decided to continue our marriage, but a major problem is that I'm reminded of reality frequently by women leaving messages for him, sending him gifts and cards, etc. He also talks openly about his exploits to our men friends, and I feel anger at the invasion of privacy, and despair at his insatiable ego. Am I a fool to continue to live with this man? What do your readers who have been in similar situations think? — PAINED IN SHERMAN OAKS

DEAR PAINED: Obviously, your husband has made no secret of the fact that he collects women like a schoolboy collects baseball cards. When he tells you that he intends to "enjoy his life," and you accept his fooling around, that is tantamount to giving him permission.

Every woman has her definition of love, but how a woman could "love" a man who has taken a vow to cherish her and forsake all others, then openly makes a mockery of those vows, is a mystery to me.

Since his shabby treatment pains and angers you, and you continue to hold still for it, you should see a therapist to find out why you tolerate it.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I was doing some housecleaning and came across a congratulatory wedding card we had received 2½ years ago. Tucked into the envelope was a check we had overlooked. It was a wedding gift from an acquaintance of my husband. It had been sent to his parents' home while we were on our honeymoon, and later forwarded to us. We moved soon after, and this card with the check enclosed was buried in the mess!

Of course, no thank-you note was ever sent, and the check was never cashied. What should we do with the check? Cashing it at this late date might mess up someone's checking account.

Should I destroy it? Return it? Any suggestions? — FLUSTERED IN FULLERTON

DEAR FLUSTERED: Acknowledge the gift graciously, and apologize profusely, explaining how the goof-up occurred.

Since no bank (to my knowledge) will honor a check of such ancient vintage, unless the sender is very understanding and sends a replacement, you can kiss the gift goodbye.

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice on how I (a mother-in-law) should handle the following problem: Our son and daughter-in-law were married in August 1988. To this date, my friends have been calling me to inquire as to whether their wedding gift was received. This is very embarrassing. Have thank-you notes gone out of style? I have questioned our son on a couple of occasions where money was the gift, and he told me those gifts have been acknowledged.

How should I answer my friends? — EMBARRASSED PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: I understand your embarrassment, but friends who ask parents if their children have received their wedding gift are putting the blameless parents on the spot.

I suggest that you give those friends the couple's telephone number, and suggest that they call and ask if their gift was received.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your continued stand against using live animals in research. As you and some of your readers have expressed, a great deal of this research is duplicative, useless and just plain cruel. Our money could be far better spent on the research alternatives already available, and developing yet more. Let's hope it won't be long before animal research is seen as being as barbaric and backward as slavery. — LYN ROSEN SPRINGUT, ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR LYN: I am well aware that there are areas of medical research where, for the sake of mankind, the use of live animals is absolutely necessary, and I have no quarrel with that, provided there is no other alternative and the animals are treated humanely.

But I abhor the use of live animals to test cosmetics and household products.

Advances improves cataract surgery

By NYU MEDICAL CENTER
Surgical advances have improved the outcome and reduced the risk of cataract surgery, according to an ophthalmologist at New York University Medical Center.
"The refinement of microsurgical techniques, combined with better artificial lenses, has meant a vast improvement for vision that has been significantly impaired by cataracts," said Dr. Robert Cykiert.
The 1 million cataract operations performed annually in the United States suggest that about 3 percent of the over-65 population have cataracts severe enough to make surgical removal desirable.
An article in an upcoming issue of the center's Health Letter explains that a cataract is a clouding of the eye's normally crystal-clear lens. Located directly behind the pupil, the lens focuses light on the retina, which forms images of what we see.

"A clouded lens is like a frosted window," Cykiert explained. "Light passing through it produces images that are fuzzy and, if the clouding or frosting is heavy, distorted. Metabolic changes in the living cells of the lens are responsible for the clouding."
Although this may result from diseases such as diabetes, medications (most notably steroids), blunt injury to the eye or radiation of various sorts, 90 to 95 percent of all cataracts are associated with aging, he said.
"More than half of all Americans over 65 have some degree of clouding, though for many it may be too slight to be noticed," Cykiert noted. "It tends to worsen as an individual gets older, and it will in time become noticeable as a reduction in vision."
Although cataracts are often considered an inescapable consequence of aging, the need for surgery is not. Since a cataract does not interfere with the eye's overall health, the decision to remove it depends solely on how much an individual feels vision is impaired and how dependent he or she is on having uncompromised vision.

In most cases, new surgical techniques allow the operation to be performed on an outpatient basis under local anesthesia. Microsurgery with tiny instruments dramatically reduces the trauma to the eye, hastening the healing process.
"Cataract surgery need no longer entail a hospital stay of four to five days, followed by eight weeks of very blurred vision and the lifelong necessity to wear thick glasses that distort the perception of objects in space," Cykiert emphasized.

Wolves in the wild

By SPORTS AFIELD
There is a plan to reintroduce wolves into the northern Rockies, including Yellowstone National Park, which has pitted pro-wolf forces against some hunters.
The Northern Rocky Mountain Wolf Recovery Plan, according to an article in the current issue of Sports AfIELD, was developed under the Endangered Species Act to remove the northern Rocky Mountain wolf from the endangered and threatened species list.
This would be accomplished by maintaining for three consecutive years a minimum of 10 breeding pairs of wolves in each of three areas: northwestern Montana, central Idaho and the Greater Yellowstone Region.
Supporting wolf recovery, eminent wolf biologist David Mech said:
"Yellowstone Park is a place that literally begs to have wolves. It's teeming with prey; it used to have wolves. All the species that were there originally should be restored."
"Wolves would add an element to the ecosystem that would help restore it to a more natural state, allowing the public to better enjoy the park."
Others fear that big game herds surrounding the park may be diminished by emigrating wolves and that hunting opportunities may be curtailed as federal land is closed to protect wolf habitats.
"I don't want to see hunting controlled by the federal government, which is controlled by population centers other than those in Wyoming," said Mike Axson, executive director of the Wyoming Outfitters Association.
Surveys in the Rockies have demonstrated similar polarization. For example, 82 percent of the visitors to Yellowstone in 1985 felt that wolves belonged there. Only 23 percent of Wyoming Stock Raisers Association members felt economically affected by wolves wishing to see the animal return.
Groups supporting wolf recovery include Defenders of Wildlife, the Audubon Society and the National Wildlife Federation. Indeed, 66.8 percent of the members of the Wyoming Wildlife Federation, a group made up largely of hunters, favored the introduction of wolves into Yellowstone National Park.
Opposing groups include the Idaho, Montana and Wyoming Stockman and Woolgrowers Associations, the Foundation for North American Wild Sheep and various outfitter associations.
These organizations won the support of the Wyoming congressional delegation, which in 1987 pressured the Department of the Interior not to proceed with an Environmental Impact Statement for wolf introductions into Yellowstone.
Both sides would benefit from learning more about the wolf, a large wild dog that weighs, on average, less than 100 pounds. It lives and hunts in packs, roaming hundreds of square miles in pursuit of its favorite food - deer, elk, moose and caribou.
Despite tales of wolf predation on humans, the wolf has actually proven to be a shy creature. In modern times, there have been no verified reports in North America of attacks on humans by nonrabid wolves. By contrast, 11 people were mangled by bison in Yellowstone National Park in 1983.
Adolph Murie, the first researcher to record wolf behavior, wrote, "The strongest impression remaining with me after watching the wolves on numerous occasions was their friendliness."
The Environmental Impact Statement for Yellowstone was to have been the document in which the concerns of both the hunting and nonhunting public were to be drafted into specific working programs.
But, Wyoming's two senators and one congressman have stonewalled this process.

Opinions from across the U.S.

Pay hike hard to sell

President Bush faces a difficult task in selling Congress and the American people on his broad and generous pay raise plan for federal employees. It's not that some relief isn't probably justified overall, critical for retention of key specialists in a few areas. It's just that the federal government is low on money — most taxpayers are too — and the economy is slowing down to boot.

Public sentiment on public salaries was demonstrated unmistakably in the congressional pay raise bloodbath earlier this year. Bush is proposing hikes of from 8 to 25 percent for some 7,900 top government employees, plus $100,000-plus salaries for a few hundred specialists with critical skills. Administration spokesmen said they had had many qualified government service candidates who couldn't afford the pay cut to accept government service.

Congress — and the voters — should educate themselves on this situation before rejecting Bush's proposal out of hand.

Albuquerque (N.M.) Journal

Alternative tests better

Two cheers for Avon and Revlon, the cosmetics manufacturers, which recently announced that they would no longer use animals to test new products. Both companies have been under siege in recent years — indeed the whole industry felt the pressure, here and in Europe — to stop using animals and start employing computer models, existing safety records, and even human volunteers, for new formulas and toiletries.

It is not widely understood that a significant proportion of the animals killed or injured annually in laboratories are not used for medical research but for product testing.

The Providence (R.I.) Journal-Bulletin

Force reductions first

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev continues to make dramatic proposals and declarations that are ratcheting down the historic tensions between the Soviet Union and the United States and its West European allies.

In France last week, at a meeting of the Council of Europe, Gorbachev once again commanded world headlines by, in effect, nullifying what has come to be known as the Brezhnev doctrine. That was a seemingly bedrock philosophy that the Soviet Union was justified in using force to keep communist-bloc nations of Eastern Europe within the fold.

Gorbachev's talk in France also sought to spur negotiations on reductions of tactical nuclear weapons, which have represented the cornerstone of U.S. and NATO deterrence to Warsaw Pact forces in Europe.

Bush is right to insist on a U.S.-Soviet agreement on conventional force reductions prior to talks on tactical weapons, which also is the adopted policy of NATO.

As welcome as Gorbachev's tension-reducing overtures are, the West must not be stampeded into risky arms agreements if might come to regret.

Seattle Post-Intelligencer

North only minor player

Instead of throwing the book at Oliver North, U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell threw a handful of the pages and expressed the hope that North, and the rest of the country, would get the message.

That message is that North deserved punishment for misusing his power as a National Security Council employee during the Iran-Contra arms-for-hostages dealing, but that the punishment should fit not only the crime but the criminal.

Some observers believe North got off with a wrist-slap, and should have done time in prison. Others, supporting North, believe a $150,000 fine and a ban on holding public office is a high price to have to pay for merely following orders.

We probably all lack "full understanding" of the case, even though it was widely reported. Left undocumented, for example, was the extent of President Reagan's role in the illegal activities. But one thing Gesell seemed to understand fully was that jailing North would have achieved little more than making him an unjustified martyr.

Future Iran-Contra trials will help us understand more about the case and North's role in it. Until then, the judge has relegated him to minor-player status, which is probably where history will keep him.

WHICH HOTHEAD THREATENS TO INFLAME THE AMERICAN FLAG FOR CRASS POLITICAL PURPOSES?

Under restrictive abortion laws

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

"I'm here to see if I can qualify for an abortion."

"It's not that easy, miss. First, I must ask you some questions under the state's new abortion regulations. So, how did you get into this trouble?"

"I was raped by a mad-dog psycho with a genetic brain disorder."

"Did this alleged attack..."

"There was nothing alleged about the attack. I was raped by a drooling crazy person. You can check with the police."

"And we most certainly will, young lady. But first I must know if your so-called attack took place during daylight hours."

"It was at five in the afternoon. I was on my way home from work. What possible difference could that make?"

"What possible difference, indeed, you brazen hussy. If it happened in daylight, then you should have been able to scream and attract someone to help you."

"I was in my car at the parking garage and this lunatic forced his way into the front seat, stuck a knife to my neck and told me to drive until he said to stop. He made me drive to a secluded area, and that's where he raped me."

"Were you wearing any sort of suggestive clothing or exotic perfumes or oils at the time this man is supposed to have forced his way into your car?"

"I'm not believing this. Why are you asking me such questions?"

"Under the new state regulations for abortions we must determine if anything you were wearing — or not wearing — at the time of what you describe as an attack could have led the assailant to think you were asking for it."

"What have I done here? Stepped back into another century?"

"I don't think such insults will get us anywhere, you harlot. Now, please answer the questions and keep your wise comments to yourself."

"Despite the fact you are not married — and we did check on that before you came in — would you describe the amount of sexual activity in which you allow yourself to be involved as 'hardly ever' or 'occasionally' or 'only when I'm out of town' or 'only after at least three dates' or 'I can't get enough'?"

"This is insane. How dare you ask me such a question. My sexual activities are my business and certainly not the state's."

"So, more than five times a week, involving many different partners."

"I never said that. What I am saying is, I don't have to answer personal questions like that because it's none of your business."

"Oh, yes, it is our business, you temptress. We know about your kind. You're loose, you're easy, and how can we be sure you were really raped and didn't lure this poor man into your evil web of flesh and unbridled passion?"

"Look, the creep is a suspect in four other rapes, and it is my constitutional right to be granted this abortion."

"Just a few more questions, Healer Devyne. Do you own a bikini?"

"Yes."

"Hmmm. Do you use lipstick?"

"Of course."

"I see. Can you name the starting lineup of the 1969 Chicago White Sox?"

"I wasn't even born in 1969."

"Sorry, Jezebel. Abortion denied."

Court turns elections into battlefields

By WALTER MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — This time, the election returns may follow the Supreme Court, onto an abortion battlefield no candidate is likely to escape without scars.

President Bush expressed confidence that Americans will handle the issue "within the bounds of civility and our legal institutions."

That may be wishful confidence. Abortion is not a subject that fosters civil discourse. Not even in the chambers of the Supreme Court, where black-robed justices bitterly denounced one another in the July 3 decision permitting state restrictions on abortion. And certainly not in the streets.

Chief Justice William Rehnquist said dissenting colleagues had accused his 5-4 majority of cowardice and illegitimacy. In angry dissent, Justice Harry Blackmun said the decision invites constitutional crisis for the nation and brutal consequences for women who would defy laws against abortion.

The shouting and shoving started almost at once, in demonstrations scattered around the country, with confrontations that can only escalate.

Both sides said they would demand that every state legislator, indeed every candidate for office, take a public position on abortion. To the rival activists, that single issue overrides everything else in judging a candidate.

After a politically popular decision at the turn of the century, Finley Peter Dunne, the Chicago columnist, wrote that the Supreme Court follows the election returns.

That observation may be reversed on abortion, which Blackmun called "the most politically divisive domestic legal issue of our time." There is no safe side for office-holders, office-seekers, even for judges.

Justice Antonin Scalia said the court should overturn its 1973 abortion rights ruling, get out of the way and let the political system deal with the issue.

Capitol report

For 16 years, since the court held that a woman has a right to terminate a pregnancy, opponents of abortion have been campaigning intensively, sometimes defying the law to barricade abortion clinics, sometimes shouting down candidates.

They were on the offense, demanding a constitutional amendment against abortion.

Now the court has opened another path to their objective, permitting state restrictions and hinting that it may eventually reverse its 1973 abortion decision. So they will lobby and demonstrate for restrictive state laws and also will put the issue before the courts in as many versions as possible.

Abortion rights organizations saw the handwriting of an increasingly conservative Supreme Court and began mobilizing in anticipation of court setbacks. Now they will try to make the issue central in every legislature and every election.

The first arenas will be the closely divided Florida Legislature, to be summoned to special session by a Republican governor bent on restricting abortion; and the Nov. 7 elections in New Jersey and Virginia, which are electing governors and legislators. In both states the Republican gubernatorial nominees oppose abortion, the Democrats support abortion rights.

While the issue is too personal

The great class of 1979

By TIM APPEL

The 1970s; arguably the most interesting decade in the history of civilization.

For us Americans, it was the 10 years that brought you the end of the Vietnam war, the fall of a president and the Iranian hostage situation.

We took our hard-earned dollars to buy CB's, mood rings and pet rocks.

The decade saw the breakup of the Beatles, the death of Elvis and the rise of disco.

We witnessed the Pittsburgh Steelers winning their four Super Bowls and my Portland Trailblazers taking the NBA championship.

There was the introduction of the integrated circuit, the Bicentennial celebration and Patty Hearst.

Dollar-a-gallon gas.

And Three Mile Island.

It was an interesting decade indeed. And at the end of it was my Corvallis High School class of 1979.

Much like every other senior class from that year, we are remembered for very little. We did not achieve the fame that the rebels from the late 60s-early 70s did, or the current Yuppie-isk trend of the 80s.

The end of the baby boom generation, caught in between with no identity of our own.

Or were we? Nay, we were far from having an identity crisis. We took the best of both worlds and combined them to make one of the most powerful high school classes ever seen.

From our brothers and sisters before us who stood as one to fight the injustices they perceived, we took their togetherness to conquer battles as one unit, not as a group of individuals. And as this solid bond, we raised the Spartan tradition to new heights in the world of sports, winning the football crown with a perfect 13-0 record, returning to the familiar confines of the Portland Memorial Coliseum for the basketball tourney and rolling into the finals in baseball.

Yet our unit did not solely rely on the sports of brawn. The chess team went to Philadelphia and rode back to Corvallis as the national high school chess champions.

From the younger generation and their individualist attitudes, we each set new levels for ourselves and obtained them, never resting on our personal laurels. And that feeling has continued even today with one of my classmates an All-Star second baseman for the Seattle Mariners, with another receiving one of 32 Rhodes Scholarships earlier this decade.

We achieved our goals through sound Christian morals and the Puritan work ethic. And unlike our cross-town rivals, who we perceived as the godless red hoard, blundering through life in a drug-induced haze, we realized that our education was of first priority, with extracurricular activities taking a distant second.

Ours was a tight-knit class. During the school year, the football and basketball games were not so much an athletic event as they were a social gathering. Maybe it was cockiness, but we knew which team would win. And so the games gave us plenty of time to sit and gossip, tell jokes, talk homework, and maybe once in awhile, cheer the team.

And despite breaking up our unit via graduation on that fateful day in June, we remained close. My best friend was also a member of that 1979 class, and we have remained best friends even today.

Now, 10 years later, it is time for the class reunion. One decade has passed since we last slammed lockers, heaved a water balloon into an open classroom window on a warm spring day and took a calculus test.

But when we meet in August, we will look back upon those days, having plenty of memories to reminisce about, news to catch up on, and new families to see.

We were, and continue to be, the class of 1979.

Samples collected from Valdez

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Scientists aboard the Exxon Valdez are collecting samples of the gooey blue substance still oozing from the damaged ship's cargo tanks, preventing its passage through California waters for repairs.

The research team, which arrived Sunday after the Valdez was moved into calmer seas off San Diego, is sampling the contents of eight torn cargo tanks and several more torn ballast tanks at various depths.

The sampling and testing of the materials will take about a week, said Coast Guard Lt. Larry Solberg.

A Coast Guard lab has concluded the material which has appeared near the Valdez since its arrival off San Diego one week ago consists of plankton and other micro-organic compounds mixed with traces of Alaskan North Slope crude.

The Valdez was towed 2,900 miles from Alaska, where it caused the nation's worst oil spill in March. About 11 million gallons of crude spilled into Prince William Sound when the tanker struck a reef March 24.

Though all of the discharges spotted near the crippled tanker since Friday were small and dissipated quickly, state wildlife officials disagreed with Exxon officials' assessment there was no potential hazard to marine life posed by the spillage.

Meanwhile, the Valdez was towed about 35 miles to calmer seas Sunday to relieve ocean stress on the ship's increasingly exposed steel framework.

KIRKENES, Norway — A Soviet Alpha class submarine, reportedly in distress off the coast of Norway Sunday afternoon, steams back to the Soviet submarine base in Murmansk under its own power.

Wildcat strikers continue protest

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Thousands of union coal miners returned to work today, but some wildcat strikers continued their protest, threatening to cloud the goodwill message their leaders want to send.

United Mine Workers President Richard Trumka, who was to meet Tuesday with a federal judge in Virginia and hoped to show the miners' desire to return to work, called for an end to unauthorized pickets and a month-long wildcat strike.

Most UMW locals east of the Mississippi River met during the weekend and approved Trumka's request, which he issued Friday.

In southern West Virginia and western Kentucky, however, wildcat strikers again disrupted coal production today.

Up to 46,000 miners in 10 states began wildcat strikes June 12 to support 1,900 other UMW members who have been striking the Pittston Coal Group Inc. since April 5.

Coal companies in states other than Kentucky and West Virginia reported no problems today, although their employees were unhappy over the back-to-work order.

"This situation at Pittston is not over, so naturally there is some unhappiness," said Jerry Jones, president of UMW District 12.

Mass for victims of Revolution

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Bastille Day-related events honored the French Revolution, but at a funeral Mass in Manhattan for Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette and other victims, celebrants deplored it.

Instead of the Marseillaise, a Gregorian chant was heard Saturday at St. Ann's Church, where 125 people prayed for the repose of the souls of aristocrats and clerics.

"Let us pray to God that there will never be another French Revolution," said the Rev. Karl A. Claver, who dwelt in his sermon on the revolutionaries' "fundamental and violent hostility towards the Catholic Church," shown by the killing of Paris' archbishop, the guillotining of nuns, the closing of churches and the persecution of priests who refused to swear loyalty to the revolutionary government.

And he told the worshippers, some of whom called themselves monarchists, that the French Revolution ushered in such dangerous practices as "civil marriage, secularized education and the separation of church and state."

Norwegians say fire, Soviets claim exhaust

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Smoke was spotted pouring out of a Soviet nuclear submarine off Norway but Soviet officials said today that no fire had occurred. Norway voiced skepticism and protested the incident.

Norway maintained that the ship may have been on fire and criticized what it said was Soviet failure to warn it of a possible radiation threat. The Soviets said the Norwegians mistook diesel exhaust for smoke.

"We must note what the Soviets said, but stick by our original statement about indications of a possible fire," Defense Ministry spokesman Erik Senstad said today.

The Alfa-class ship was spotted pouring smoke from its observation tower Sunday and was being towed by a Soviet tugboat, Senstad said.

In response to a diplomatic query, Soviet officials said Sunday that the smoke was part of an exercise and that the submarine had never been in trouble, said acting Foreign Ministry spokesman Oeyvind Nordsetten.

Today, Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov denied there had been a fire and said the Norwegians had mistaken diesel exhausts for a blaze, the official Tass news agency reported.

Yazov said the submarine had been on a combat training mission and was shifting its power load to a battery when "one of the cells was short-circuited."

"The submarine surfaced. Its diesel engines were fired and produced the exhaust," he said. "There were no accidents or other emergencies."

The ship was sighted by the Norwegian research vessel Marietta in the Barents Sea about 75 miles east of the Norwegian town of Vardo and north of the Kola Peninsula. It was 30 miles north of Soviet territorial waters.

Alfa class submarines are powered by two nuclear reactors cooled by liquid metal and have auxiliary diesel engines.

Vatican to send envoy to Poland

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Holy See and predominantly Roman Catholic Poland today re-established full diplomatic relations, the first time the Vatican has forged such ties with a Warsaw Pact nation.

The announcement by the Vatican and Poland's state-run news agency said relations, cut by the Communists who took power in Poland in 1945, are at the level of ambassador.

Negotiations had been going on for some time, and Polish-born Pope John Paul II indicated recently that an agreement was near. He disclosed a week ago that he intended to send an envoy soon but did not say when.

A major hurdle was cleared in May when the Polish Parliament enacted three bills establishing the legal status of the Roman Catholic Church.

China denounces nations' censure

BEIJING (AP) — China today denounced the seven leading industrialized nations for their "gross interference" in calling on China's Communist leaders to end their crackdown on participants in the pro-democracy movement.

The strongly worded response mirrored earlier Chinese reaction to sanctions individually imposed by some of the seven, including the United States and France, after the Chinese army violently crushed the movement on June 4.

Communist Party newspaper, the People's Daily, called on the Group of Seven to follow a value-free foreign policy based on economic and strategic considerations.

"The actions taken by the Chinese government have in no way offended the West or any other country," it said. "The problem arises simply because certain countries, out of their own likes and dislikes and their sense of value, have in a broad scope directly damaged China's interests and dignity with words and deeds."

Revered conductor dies at 81

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Conductor Herbert von Karajan, the brilliant and revered maestro who stirred millions with his music and inflamed passions with his stormy life, is dead at age 81.

He was perhaps the world's most honored, prolific and well-known conductor.

Karajan, who resigned as conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic on April 24 after 34 years, died Sunday at his home in Anif near Salzburg, said Albert Moser, the president of the Salzburg Festival.

Austrian television said the cause of death was heart failure but festival organizers could not confirm it.

The conductor's membership in the Nazi Party during World War II and his volatile temper made him a figure of controversy throughout his life.

But fellow musicians adored his artistry — and his more than 800 recordings sold 150 million copies, the most by any conductor.

PALMDALE, Calif. — The B-2 stealth bomber lifts up from the runway at Palmdale early Monday morning on its first flight. The flight of the radar-eluding bomber had been delayed for 18 months.

Stealth bomber makes maiden flight

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The $500 million stealth bomber roared into the air for the first time today, soaring above the Southern California desert on a flight that could decide whether the bat-winged aircraft lives or dies.

The B-2, designed to evade enemy radar, was arrayed with reflective material to allow test personnel to keep track of the plane and its two pilots during the 2-hour flight.

The sinister-looking black jet raced down an 11,000-foot runway at the secretive Air Force Plant 42 at Palmdale and lifted off at 6:37 a.m., with two F-16 fighter jets giving chase through the still and cloudless desert sky.

It landed here at 8:30 a.m. after performing test maneuvers over the Mojave Desert.

Thousands of people gathered among the tumbleweeds outside the plant shouted "Here they come, here they come!" as the great flying-wing's dark shadow passed over. "Great God," exclaimed Northrop employee Les Holland.

The plane's landing gear remained down, as is standard practice on test flights in case of malfunctions.

The plane, 69 feet long with a 172-foot wingspan, taxied out of Plant 42, the Air Force's primary research and development facility, located in the desert 40 miles north of downtown Los Angeles.

The stealth bomber's only previous flights have been on a computer flight simulation, Air Force and Northrop officials say no other aircraft has been tested more thoroughly without having been flown.

The flight was seen as vital for the future of the bomber, which is already 18 months behind schedule. At a budgeted price of $500 million each — the Air Force wants 132 of the planes — it is the most expensive plane in history.

A key congressional committee has voted to withhold further funding until the plane proves itself in the air.

"If that plane doesn't fly, the debate is over," Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn said Friday. "It is far too expensive to be a stealth taxi."

As the plane took off this morning, the "Star Spangled Banner" was sung on the runway by Alis Clausen, a member of the staff of a local cable TV station. Air Force Capt. Tess Taft unfurled the Stars and Stripes, which was held by a tearful Linda Tokish.

"It feels great. It feels just fantastic. A lot of work has gone into this. Millions of man hours, with people working seven days a week, 24 hours a day. We feel just great," said Air Force Col. Douglas Kennett.

"It feels great, I was speechless. I was overcome with emotion. I was so thrilled when I saw the wheels go up. I'm just so excited to know that it's up there now and I pray that it lands safely," Taft said.

"This represents the technology of tomorrow," said Maj. Pat Mullaney. "It gives us the opportunity to stress deterrence. It represents a new generation of technology and it's the way you're going to see airplanes look tomorrow."

The bomber's maiden flight had been scheduled Saturday, but a low fuel pressure gauge reading aborted the flight.

After the flight was canceled, workers checked the aircraft and discovered a problem in a device called the heat exchanger in the bomber's fuel system. The problem was fixed, but no other details were available, said Air Force Lt. Col. Jerry Ferguson.

The B-2 is designed to carry nuclear bombs, and, along with the conventional B-1, replace the Air Force's aging fleet of B-52 bombers.

So-called stealth technology combines advanced materials and a special shape to create a plane undetected by enemy radar.

Forensic scientists to exhume Colorado cannibal victims

DENVER (AP) — The century-old legend of an admitted cannibal has become grist for local jokes and promotions, but a legal expert hopes the tools of modern forensic science will lay to rest questions about the case.

Alfred G. Packer admitted eating the flesh of some of his five fellow gold prospectors in 1874, but claimed he did so to avert starvation after the men died while marooned in the San Juan Mountains. He was eventually convicted of manslaughter after two trials nearly a decade later.

On Monday, a group of anthropologists, archaeologists and pathologists will attempt to exhume the remains of the five victims near the mountain town of Lake City, about 170 miles southwest of Denver.

The expedition is the brainchild of James E. Starrs, a professor of law and forensic sciences at George Washington University's Law Center in Washington.

Starrs has used the Packer case as an example in his classes because of the nature of the evidence presented at his two murder trials. He believes scientific examination of the 115-year-old remains will determine whether Packer really killed the gold diggers and then ate them.

Packer's admitted cannibalism has made him a bizarre folk-hero — especially at the University of Colorado. Alfred Packer Grill, where annual eating contests mark the end of the school year.

The legend arose out of the Colorado Rockies in the winter of 1874.

Packer, a 42-year-old harness maker plagued with epilepsy, convinced a group of prospectors in Utah he could lead them to the Colorado gold fields. Five men stayed with him until they became marooned in the San Juan Mountains.

On April 16, 1874, a rosy-cheeked Packer walked into the Los Pinos Indian Agency, at what is now the town of Sagauche. Authorities became suspicious when they found he was carrying several neatly wrapped packages of human flesh.

Packer admitted shooting one man, Shannon Wilson Bell, in self defense, but said Bell killed the other four with a hatchet while he was looking for a route out of the mountains. He claimed starvation drove him to eat the flesh of the dead prospectors.

Several months later, Packer fled just before artist John A. Randolph, on assignment for Harper's Weekly, discovered and sketched the five bodies.

Packer was arrested in 1883 in Cheyenne, Wyo., and was taken to the then-new mining camp of Lake City where he was convicted of murdering one of the prospectors, Israel Swan.

The state Supreme Court overturned that sentence. Packer then was retried for all five murders and convicted of manslaughter at Gunnison. In addition to Bell and Swan, the victims included George Noon, James Humphrey and Frank Miller. In 1886, Packer was sentenced to 40 years. He was paroled in 1901 and died April 24, 1907.

Last summer, Starrs visited Lake City and says he located the burial site of the five men near a bronze and stone memorial to the victims set amid wildflowers and clover a mile outside of town.

"Until we see a bone... we can't be 100 percent certain, but the place has been maintained as a grave site since the early part of this century," said Patrick Zickler, editor of Starrs' Scientific Sleuthing Review.

Starrs says the bones should be in good enough condition to determine how the men died.

"From the bones we will be able to see bullet holes and hatchmarks where the skinning knife might have scraped the bones. We'll be able to tell if the victims were cannibalized, if they were struck by a hatchet blow, if they were really near starvation," Starrs said.

"My personal feelings are we'll find more bullet wounds than described," Zickler said. "My pet theory is that Bell and Packer conspired against the others because of the general desperation of the situation. For some reason we'll never know, Packer and Bell had a falling out. Packer emerged victorious — and Bell became a perfect scapegoat for all the other deaths."

Many of the 219 permanent residents of Lake City hope the dig will raise the town's profile as a vacation spot.

At the General Store, proprietor Jack Eisele is selling buttons that read: "Alfred Packer Ate Here-Lake City, Co."

T-shirts for sale in several shops proclaim, "Have a Friend for Dinner," and "Alfred Packer, Serving His Fellow Man."

The menu at Murphy's Restaurant includes Packer's Platter, "for those with a man-eating appetite."

A theater group from Western State College in Gunnison on Monday will open a three-week nightly dramatization of Packer's trial in the Lake City Courthouse, where the original trial took place.

ALFERD G. PACKER

Fall's elections may preview abortion battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A governor's race and a handful of legislative sessions this fall are expected to give an early preview of the state-level warfare predicted next year in the wake of the Supreme Court's abortion decision.

The high court's ruling this month handing states greater authority to restrict abortions has thrust the emotionally charged issue into the New Jersey statehouse race and promises to make it a major factor in many of the 36 governor slots at stake next year.

The ruling also has galvanized anti-abortion lawmakers across the country, with the earliest battles expected in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Florida and several other states with legislatures scheduled to meet this fall.

Burke Balch, state legislative coordinator for the National Right to Life Committee, said a wide range of proposals to restrict abortion will come before legislatures starting in September.

"What we've seen here is an unshackling of the state legislatures," he said. "But the assumption that... you're suddenly going to see all sorts of states automatically enacting protective legislation is an oversimplification of the challenges we face. There are not a lot of states that are locked up for either side."

The National Abortion Rights Action League will try to stave off anti-abortion offensives this year at the state level and will plan a more aggressive strategy for 1990, said Nancy Broff, the group's political and legislative director.

In New Jersey, NARAL plans to make abortion a central factor in the gubernatorial race between Reps. James Florio and Jim Courter. Florio, a Democrat, has said he would veto Webster-like restrictions while Courter, an anti-abortion Republican, has backed off and said he would not lobby the Legislature for restrictions.

New Jersey is among five states — also including California, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Vermont — where state supreme courts have ruled that abortion rights are guaranteed by the state constitution. And in Florida, a doctor-legislator who performs abortions has suggested amending that state's constitutional privacy clause to add reproductive rights.

But for the most part, the ball is in the anti-abortion court. Lawmakers in Pennsylvania plan to have a series of bills ready when the Legislature returns Sept. 18 from its summer recess.

Rep. Stephen Freind, who has led abortion fights in the state for a decade, said he intends to introduce measures to outlaw sex-selection abortions, fetal tissue experimentation and fetal transplants. Also, he wants to require spousal notification, require waiting periods except in medical emergencies, and require extensive informed consent that includes a description of fetal development.

The high court's ruling this month... promises to make (abortion) a major factor in many of the 36 governor slots at stake next year.

Other states are considering similar restrictions, Balch said.

Some of the proposals have been struck down previously by the Supreme Court or vetoed on grounds of earlier high court rulings.

But Freind said, "A lot of things will be coming back now. That was the old court and this is the new court. The court is saying you can regulate (abortion) and restrict it and in some cases outlaw it as long as there is a rational basis for doing it."

The 1989 legislative outlook in other key states:

- Florida: Gov. Bob Martinez says he will call a special session this fall to deal with abortion. However, this does not guarantee a change in law because the Legislature is considered about evenly split.

- Illinois: The Legislature returns in October to reconsider bills vetoed by the governor. Anti-abortion lawmakers are planning an offensive.

- Minnesota: The Legislature returns in September for a special session that Gov. Rudy Perpich wants to limit to a property tax proposal. Committee leaders could thwart efforts by anti-abortion forces, who are in the majority.

- Louisiana: The state House overwhelmingly approved a resolution asking prosecutors to enforce anti-abortion laws passed before the Supreme Court's 1973 decision legalizing abortion. The New Orleans district attorney asked a federal judge to reinstate a law that makes abortions illegal.

- Texas: Gov. Bill Clements says if there is a special session before the Legislature returns in January 1991, he would consider adding abortion to the agenda. The body is in special session now but is expected to leave this week without taking up abortion.

Hemingway stamp

Ernest Hemingway has long been considered the literary equal of writers like Herman Melville, William Faulkner and John Steinbeck. After today, he will have the same stamp of approval. In recognition of Key West's influence on the Nobel prize-winning author, the U.S. Post Office has honored the tiny island as exclusive site of the first day of issue of a commemorative stamp featuring the author's likeness.

Nude sculpture shielded for children's tours

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A sculpture of a nude woman at the Arkansas Arts Center is being kept under wraps when children visit because the director doesn't want their teen-age guides to be embarrassed.

Townsend Wolfe, director of the center, said he strongly opposes censorship, but volunteered to drape the work by sculptor John DeAndrea when children under 12 tour the center's Rockefeller Gallery.

"These young children come in with part-time teen-age leaders. They might turn around and walk and never come back again," said Wolfe.

"I don't understand the controversy. We've got much stronger nude pictures hanging currently, and have had," said Wolfe.

An exhibit showing a couple making love was on display uneventfully for four months, Wolfe said. He added, though, "Three months ago, I got called up and told that the caller was praying for my soul."

With the sculpture-covering, "some will think those prayers were answered," Wolfe said with a laugh. "But the decision we reached on this particular piece was not that it was provocative, but because of the younger visitors we have in the summer months."

Wolfe said the draping "was not a request of any group. It was a judgmental call I made."

DeAndrea said Thursday from Santa Cruz, Calif., that he wasn't mad about the draping. But he wasn't pleased, either.

"It's happened a lot of times," he told the Arkansas Gazette. "I wish they had enough sense not to do it, but I guess they don't. It's the same old same old."

The life-size sculpture shows a woman leaning backward while seated on a box. It is displayed with a sculpture of a clothed man, a self-portrait of DeAndrea.

Wolfe said he expected increased interest in the exhibit because of news coverage about the draping, most notably a front-page story in the Gazette headlined, "Nude art clothed in cover-up."

The sculpture is part of the Goldstrom family collection making a three-year national tour.

A security guard at the arts center, Jackie Martin, said he had seen some smaller children peeking under the cloth covering.

"It distracts them," Martin said.

Central Texas woman qualifies for her first driving license at 78

TEMPLE — Thelma Ryan, 78, takes to the road after getting her driver's license for the first time. Her first and last brush with driving was 57 years ago in the Mojave Desert.

TEMPLE (AP) — Thelma Ryan has been to England three times, but she never went to the grocery store alone until recently.

She used to accept the fact that she was "extremely dependent, very ignorant and very unmechanical." Now she warns her neighbors, "If they see me, just to stay out of the way."

Her schedule is largely unchanged since May 19, days punctuated with trips to the grocery store, hair permanent appointments and a trip to a cafe every morning with a friend for breakfast.

But those routine trips have a special spice to them now: Thelma is driving herself most places, giddy with the new-found freedom of her first driver's license.

Thelma is 78 years old.

"I drove to Petite Beauty Shop last Wednesday. Usually I get out at 10:30 a.m., after a haircut. But this time, I got a permanent." She paused. "That means I got out at noon." Pause. "That means there was all that noon traffic." Sigh. "But I made it."

Thelma's first — and last — brush with driving was 57 years ago, when she and her husband of two years drove through the Mojave Desert.

"I decided I wanted to drive. And the road was very, very empty. We approached an intersection, with a small grocery store on the left corner. Three men were seated with their feet up outside."

"I was going to turn left, and I saw a car coming from the right," she said. "I wanted to get into the intersection before that car did. I started to turn and meant to hit the brakes; instead, I floor-boarded the gas. I went right across that grocery store lot. You never saw three men move so fast. I missed that porch by no more than this much."

Her husband sternly told her, "Stop the car. Stop the car!" And I got hysterical and laughed and laughed. After that, I never wanted to get behind the wheel again." But her husband died in December 1988, and soon Thelma knew she either had to sell the car or learn to drive.

"I left it in the hands of the Lord as to whether I'd get my license or not. I didn't know if the Lord wanted me to start driving at 78. But He helped me by giving me a good teacher."

Tommy Stone, owner of ProAdvisor Driving School in Temple, said he knew Thelma could successfully complete the course when she received perfect scores on two written tests required for her driver's permit.

But Thelma wasn't so sure, nearly backing out of her plan after two lessons. She's short-waisted, she said, at 5 feet tall, and "I have a hard time seeing — now don't tell the DPS that."

Not to worry. She drives with two cushions under her and has no further vision problems.

"After the third lesson, her and the Lord decided she was going to complete the job," Stone said. "She continually asked if we thought she could do it."

But being short, she had a hard time learning how big the car was and where the right side is when she's driving.

In one lesson, Stone says, "We passed a man getting out of his truck, standing on the right side of the road. We, uh, came awfully close to him."

"He'll never do that again," Thelma said with a calm smile. She had to master parallel parking, too, a task not without its emotional scars. "I'll avoid parallel parking, any time, any place I can," she said.

But the hardest part of her 14 lessons was "forcing myself to get in the car, turn on the key and do it. There is a tremendous fear. I wasn't sure who was going to be in control, the car or me. These first times alone in the car, it was terrible."

Past her fear of city driving now, Thelma feels "thankfulness. I have the most wonderful friends in the world who take me places. But it's a good feeling to be a little independent, knowing that I can (drive) if I have to. My husband's last week of life, he was more worried about how I was going to get along than about himself. At least he knows I'm not entirely dependent."

But limits are limits. "I don't think the Lord wants me to drive to Dallas. I wouldn't attempt I-35 at this stage."

Senior League All-Stars romp

The Big Spring Senior League All-Stars began District III tournament play with a bang as they clobbered the Midland American League All-Stars 11-1 Sunday at Roy Anderson Complex.

Big Spring hurler Shane Myrick was almost untouchable on the mound, firing a two-hitter while going the distance. Myrick fanned nine and walked two. Brian Rounding took the loss for Midland Americans. The only hits off Myrick were singles by Smiley Hinojos and Rounding in the first inning.

Big Spring began strong in the bottom of the first, scoring seven runs and sending 10 men to the plate. It all started with Abel Hilario hitting a triple, followed by Pat Chavarria's single. Then came back-to-back homers by John Downey and Steven Robles. Joe Conway, Kevin Rodgers and Mike Lucio all singled in the inning.

Hilario, Chavarria and Conway all got two hits each for the Big Spring Senior All-Stars. All the Big Spring starters got hits.

Big Spring will play the winner of the Midland National-El Paso contest Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at Roy Anderson Complex.

MIDLAND INTERNATIONAL 3, MIDLAND NATIONAL 2

In a pitching duel, the Midland Internationals edged the Midland

Nationals Sunday afternoon.

Jim Patton got the win for the Internationals, firing a six-hitter. Julian Urquidez pitched a four-hitter, but received the loss for the Nationals.

Top hitter for the Internationals was Allan Chase, who doubled and tripled in three at-bats. Bennie Ramirez and Mark Berger each singled.

Mano Fuentes led the Nationals by hitting three singles in four at-bats. Jeff Vidal doubled, and Marty Perez and Steve Wooten singled.

Midland Nationals will play El Paso at 7:30 tonight at Roy Anderson Complex.

JUNIOR LEAGUE TOURNAMENT

Tonight the Junior League tourney will start at Roy Anderson Complex.

The Big Spring All-Stars will play the Midland American All-Stars at 7:30. The winner of that game will play Midland National Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Members on the Big Spring All-Stars are David Akin, Todd Parrish, Jeremy Smith, Greg Bid-dison, J.J. Robertson, Brandon Rodgers and Jeff Phernetton. Also on the team are Wes Hughes, Brandon Hamblin, Mike Jones, Read White, Tim Rigdon, Jon White and Chad Wright.

Manager is Ducky Robertson and coach is Alan Parrish.

McDonald wins in overtime

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Mike Donald knew what his reputation was on the PGA Tour, and he hopes that view is about to change.

"I've kind of been an also-ran, a journeyman if you will," Donald said this morning after he birdied the fourth hole of a rain- and darkness-interrupted playoff to win the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

It capped Donald's 10-year quest for his first tour victory, and the winner's check of $153,000 made him the 101st million-dollar winner on the circuit.

"It hasn't been a horrible career," said Donald, 34, of Hollywood, Fla. "You know, I won over $900,000 coming into this week, so it hasn't been painful."

The victory came after Tim Simpson missed a 30-foot birdie putt.

"He said, 'Mike, you'll remember this one. Your first one is special,'" Donald said.

Simpson, 31, who got his second victory earlier this year at the USF&G Classic, left immediately after the playoff for a commitment in Illinois and was not available for comment.

As darkness descended Sunday night over the Kingsmill Golf Club, Donald and Simpson eliminated Hal Sutton on the third playoff hole, where he made a double-bogey 6 and they both carded 4s.

Tournament officials then told Simpson and Donald to return this morning to continue the playoff at the 427-yard 16th, a dogleg right with an elevated green.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Mike Donald of Hollywood, Fla., reacts to a winning putt on the first hole of a sudden death playoff at the Anheuser Busch Golf Classic at Kingsmill Golf Club.

Playing under gray skies and a continuing threat of rain, both players put their drives in the fairway. Donald, hitting first, landed his approach seven feet from the pin and Simpson hit his to 30 feet.

As the players walked on the green, a light rain began to fall, and Simpson, after lining up his birdie try, left it four feet short. Donald then wasted little time in knocking in the winner and going into a mini-victory dance.

"After I hit the second shot in there close," Donald said, "I kind of wanted to run up there and putt real quick."

Instead, he waited his turn and made a smooth stroke at the ball, which was on almost an identical line as Simpson's putt.

"I didn't know if it was going to go in or not," Donald said. "Tim's first putt came up short, and I said, 'Man, I've got to hit this thing.'"

Nearly an hour after winning, Donald tried to recall his feelings when the putt had fallen.

"I don't even remember, to tell you the truth," he said. "It took me four or five minutes to even realize what had happened."

Sutton and Simpson won $74,800 each.

The three had finished four tours of Kingsmill's 6,776-yard, par-71 layout in 268, 16 shots under par.

Donald closed with a 6-under-par 65. Simpson carded a final-round 67, and Sutton, looking for his eighth title but his first in three years, had a 68.

Mike Hulbert, the leader after the second and third rounds, lost a chance to join the playoff field when he bogeyed the 72nd hole. His 1-under 70 left him at 15-under 269.

Before dusk halted play, heavy showers had led to a pair of rain delays, the second of which came as the trio carded regulation 4s on the first playoff hole and walked to the 177-yard 17th.

Simpson and Sutton both put their tee shots on the green about 35 feet away, but Donald was in deep rough down a steep hill beside the putting surface. At that point, officials halted play for nearly an hour, and when it resumed, Donald chipped his ball to within two feet of the cup and sank his putt.

King gains fifth victory of season

LAKE ORION, Mich. (AP) — In the hours before the most important round of her career, Betsy King decided she would leave nothing to chance.

"I knew I was going to play aggressively, and I wanted to find out early if I was going to hit the ball well," King said Sunday after a final-round, 3-under-par 68 that gave her a four-shot victory over Nancy Lopez in the 44th U.S. Women's Open.

LPGA

King, who led through the first two rounds, entered the final day in a tie for the lead with Patty Sheehan. Also there was the memory of a third-round collapse on Saturday, when King lost a four-shot lead by taking two bogeys and a double-bogey over the final four holes.

It was a rare lapse for King, who with Sunday's victory — her fifth this season and 19th overall — became the first woman golfer to top $500,000 in earnings in one season.

A driver and a 4-wood on the Indianwood Country Club course's first hole erased that memory.

"I hit two good shots on the first hole and that was an instant lift," she said. "That was actually the first round I'd even hit the fairway on that hole."

King reached the 462-yard, par-5 in two and two-putted for the first of her five birdies. She followed with consecutive birdies on the par-3 third and par-4 fourth holes, with putts from five and 15 feet.

King three-putted from 65 feet to bogey the 170-yard, par-3 fifth hole and Sheehan, who scored her only birdie of the day on three, was back within one.

No one would get that close the rest of the way.

King birdied again on No. 7, where she hit a 9-iron to within 25 feet, then sank the putt.

Sheehan, who had vowed not to play under pressure in the final round, took a triple bogey on eight, where she hit her second shot — a 3-wood — out of bounds. King's lead ballooned to six shots over her playing partner, and only Lopez, who matched King's 68, came close to mounting a challenge.

Sheehan, a runner-up twice this decade in the U.S. Open, never recovered and finished with a 79.

King's 72-hole score of 6-under 278 was second best in the tournament's history, one shot more than Liselotte Neumann's winning score last year at Baltimore. But 278 was a notably impressive score, given the character of the 6,109-yard Indianwood course, with its narrow fairways, slick greens and waist-high heathered rough.

And while much of the field subdued Indianwood at least once — 16 players broke par on Sunday — only King conquered it.

"I played very, very well this week," said Lopez, whose 282 score was 12 shots better than her second-place finish at Hazlet National in Minnesota in 1977. "The difference is that Betsy is playing great golf right now."

King, who did not win a tournament in her first seven years on the LPGA tour, has 14 top-10 finishes in 19 tournaments this season.

Cain gains first professional win

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Life on the PGA Seniors Tour was just a beginning for John Paul Cain.

Cain, 53, a Seniors Tour newcomer who never played on the PGA Tour, won the Greater Grand Rapids Open on Sunday. Cain had never seen The Elks Golf Club until last week, but he obviously found it to his liking. He shot a 5-under-par 66 in last Monday's qualifier to get into the 72-man field of the $300,000 tournament.

Charles Sifford.

Cain was only the second qualifier to win a tournament on the Seniors Tour. Larry Mowry did it in the 1987 Crestar Classic.

"I didn't expect to win a tournament this quickly," said Cain, who entered the Senior Tour last fall. The Greater Grand Rapids Open is just his ninth event as a pro.

Cain's earnings for the year jumped to $69,988 with the victory, which also earned him a one-year exemption from qualifying.

Walt Zembriski, who started the day tied for the lead with defending tournament champion Orville Moody at eight under, shot an even-par 71 and finished at 205, tied with Al Geiberger.

Moody, the tour's leading money winner, and Frank Beard finished at 7-under-par 206. Peter Thomson, Gene Littler, Mike Hill, Bob Brue, Jimmy Powell, Bruce Crampton and Dale Douglass were at 207.

Cain, the 1959 Texas State Amateur champion, birdied Nos. 1, 2, 5, 7 and 9 to make the turn with the lead at 10 under.

Down and out
LAKE TAHOE, Nev. — Brazilian Adison Rodrigues bounces on the canvas after being knocked out in one minute, 29 seconds of the second round by Evander Holyfield of Atlanta in their heavyweight title bout Saturday.

Seniors

Once in, he proved why he is a member of the Texas Golf Hall of Fame.

Cain shot rounds of 69 and 68, respectively, on Friday and Saturday. Then after beginning the day three shots off the lead, he emerged from the crowd early on Sunday.

He birdied five of the first nine holes and went on to finish with a 66 and a 54-hole score of 10-under-par 203, winning the $45,000 first prize by one shot over Dave Hill and

Doctors fear ex-gridder could be first of many

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — He was one of professional football's mightiest men, a 295-pound monster who could bench press twice his weight. Now, Steve Courson is thrilled to lift 15-pound dumbbells and climb a flight of stairs.

The former offensive lineman, now only 33 years old, suffers from cardiomyopathy, a mysterious disease that turns heart muscle into fat and eventually kills its victims unless they undergo a transplant.

Though his doctors can't blame Courson's condition on his long, heavy use of anabolic steroids, they can't rule it out. Neither can he.

"There are so many ironies about my situation. That's why I can't discard them as being an accident. Why is all this ironically happening to me? I've had two strikes. Strike three you're out."

Courson, formerly of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Tampa Bay Buccaneers, is believed to be the first professional athlete to be put on the waiting list for a heart transplant after years of taking illegally obtained anabolic steroids.

Experts fear more may follow.

"I wouldn't be surprised. I think it's going to happen," said transplant pioneer Dr. Thomas E. Starzl of the University of Pittsburgh. "It might be liver disease that comes out of those things, too."

"The potential health hazard and the impact on the national health care system ... it's very frightening," said Harvard University's Dr. Lyle Micheli, president of the American College of Sports Medicine.

It also raises an ethical question for transplant surgeons: With a scarcity of organs, should people who take harmful drugs be given lower priority?

Anabolic steroids, fast becoming the scourge of sports, are derivatives of the male sex hormone testosterone. They stimulate development of bone, muscle and skin. Admitted users include Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson, whose 1988 Olympics gold medal was withdrawn after he tested positive for the drugs.

Courson first took anabolic steroids in 1974 before his sophomore year at the University of South Carolina. In four weeks, he went from 230 pounds to a solid 260. He continued the off-season habit after being drafted by the Steelers in 1977 and playing on two Super Bowl teams.

Not long after being traded to the Buccaneers in 1984, Courson boasted a 60-inch chest and 22-inch biceps and was pressing up to 605 pounds. "Anyone who's trained with weights or trained that seriously at world-class level realizes those types of gains don't occur by eating Wheaties."

At one point, Courson was shelling out $1,500 a year for steroids, "not that big a tradeoff when you're making $300,000 a year," he said.

In March 1985, in the midst of an 1,800 milligram-a-week regimen, his highest ever, Buccaneers doctors told him he had an irregular heartbeat. The problem cleared up in two weeks with medication, and Courson quit taking steroids for the next year.

At the end of the 1985 season, Courson lost his starting job. He took his last dose of anabolic steroids before the Buccaneers' training camp in 1986 in hopes of getting off the bench. "I wanted to maintain a competitive edge and I realize it had to do with my age, too, the wear and tear on the body."

Courson was waived at the start of the season, got no other offers, and retired. He lived in Wyoming and Florida, then returned to the Pittsburgh area in early 1988 to finish his autobiography and train as a professional wrestler.

On Nov. 23, 1988, Courson went to Allegheny General Hospital for what he thought was an ulcer. It turned out to be cardiomyopathy.

For years, doctors have warned of the immediate side effects of steroids: acne, sexual dysfunction, rashes and unusually aggressive behavior known in the trade as "roid rage." Less is known about long-term effects, although animal tests suggest the drugs accelerate cardiovascular disease.

"Anybody who's used steroids and who's had any malady, it's immediately assumed steroids caused it. We haven't even done those studies yet," said Dr. Charles Yesalis of Pennsylvania State University.

"We don't know frankly what is the bottom line," said Dr. Judith Orie, Courson's cardiologist. "But we do know anabolic steroids cause high blood pressure in patients. High blood pressure after a point in time causes the heart to fail."

Also, "steroids can alter the immune system. We don't know whether that has played a role and allowed a virus to affect his heart or not," Orie said.

Complicating matters is the fact that doctors don't always know what causes cardiomyopathy.

"There are many people who have cardiomyopathy and had nothing to do with steroids," said Dr. Barry Maron of the National Institutes of Health. "That's the problem there is in establishing a connection in this one person. It's a very iffy kind of thing (although) I'm not saying it's impossible."

About 40 percent of all heart transplants are performed on cardiomyopathy patients, said Dr. Michael Kaye of the University of California at San Diego, who keeps the international registry of heart, heart-lung and lung transplants, which stood at 11,181 in late June. The vast majority — 10,154 — were straight heart transplants.

There were 1,223 people awaiting heart transplants in the United States as of June 26, according to the United Network for Organ Sharing.

Stienbach puts slam to 'Jays

By The Associated Press
Terry Steinbach always has a grand time against the Blue Jays. "I don't know what it is about this club that seems to bring out the best in me," he said Sunday after hitting his second career grand slam and leading Oakland past Toronto 6-2.

John Cerutti, 5-5, gave up four hits and two runs in six-plus innings. Leading 1-0, he walked Carney Lansford and Jose Canseco to open the seventh and Duane Ward relieved.

Mark McGwire singled to load the bases and Dave Henderson's grounder forced Lansford at home. Steinbach, whose previous grand slam was against the Blue Jays' Mike Flanagan on July 2, 1988, then hit his fifth homer.

"I don't think he wanted to throw that pitch in that situation," Steinbach said. "It was a slider in and I was just trying to hit a fly ball to drive in the run. When I first hit it, I didn't think the ball was out so I rounded first hard. Even if it wasn't out, I didn't think George Bell had a play on it."

In other games, Minnesota beat Boston 4-3 in 11 innings, Detroit beat Seattle 8-5, Chicago beat Milwaukee 2-0, New York beat Kansas City 10-1 in a game shortened to 6½ innings by rain, Cleveland beat Texas 11-5, and Baltimore beat California 3-2.

Mike Moore, 12-5, won his fourth straight start, allowing Toronto six hits in six innings.

"Mike's been a great addition to this club," Athletics manager Tony La Russa said. "It seems like MINNEAPOLIS — Minnesota Twins Carmen Castillo (??) slides across home plate out of the reach of Boston Red Sox catcher Rick Cerone to score the winning run in the 11th inning Sunday.

every time we lose a couple of games, Mike puts us back on the winning track."

Todd Burns pitched 2 1-3 innings for his seventh save.

Twins 4, Red Sox 3
Tim Laudner had a two-run single in the 11th inning, after Mike Greenwell's home run off Jeff Reardon with two outs in the ninth sent the game into extra innings. Ed Romero's RBI single off Randy St. Claire had given visiting Boston the lead in the top of the 11th. Gary Gaetti and Carmen Castillo singled off Rob Murphy, 1-4, to open the bottom of the inning and Gene Larkin sacrificed. Launder then grounded a single between shortstop and third and into left field.

Tigers 8, Mariners 5
Charles Hudson, 1-4, won for the first time since July 4, 1988, as Tracy Jones, Lou Whitaker and Alan Trammell hit home runs at Tiger Stadium. Detroit ended a 10-game losing streak, its longest since June 1982.

Gene Harris, 1-2, allowed four runs and six hits in two innings. He left with a bruised right forearm after he was hit by Dave Bergman's line drive.

White Sox 2, Brewers 0
Richard Dotson, 3-6, didn't allow a hit for five innings and finished with a one-hitter over 7 1-3 innings. Chicago scored in the third on Ivan Calderon's RBI single and right fielder Mike Felder's throwing error.

Dotson, making his second start for the White Sox after the Yankees released him in June, was hitless until Robin Yount's sixth-inning single.

Indians 11, Rangers 5
Brad Komminsk drew a bases-loaded walk in Cleveland's six-run first inning and hit a three-run homer that capped a five-run sixth.

Reliever Rich Yett, 5-6, got his first victory since May 21, working 2 2-3 scoreless innings after starter Scott Bailes lasted only three innings.

Kevin Brown, 7-6, gave up nine hits and eight runs in five innings for the visiting Rangers.

Expos beat Reds in 12 innings

By The Associate Press
If the price of admission to a baseball game was based on its length, 28,348 fans at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium got their money's worth. But if quality of play is the true barometer, they should have lined up for a refund.

National League

They were forced to sit through 4 hours, 8 minutes of stumbling and bumbling, which mercifully came to a halt shortly after Nelson Santovenia broke an 0-for-8 slump with an RBI single in the top of the 12th inning Sunday to lead the Montreal Expos a 6-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The teams combined for 26 strikeouts, 17 walks, six errors, two wild pitches, a passed ball and 25 runners left on base.

Neither did Cincinnati third baseman Lenny Harris, whose throw home hit Montreal's Tim Wallach in the back, enabling the Expos to tie the game in the fifth.

Santovenia's single off Kent Tekulve, 0-3, enabled the Expos to overcome four errors.

Tim Raines opened the 12th with a single and was sacrificed to second. Wallach was intentionally walked to get to Santovenia, who grounded a single through the middle to snap a 3-3 tie.

After Andres Galarraga was intentionally walked with two outs, Steve Frey, 3-0, allowed two hits in one inning of relief for the victory. Tim Burke pitched the 12th for his 19th save.

Giants 3, Pirates 1
San Francisco has had several pitchers shuttled back and forth between the disabled list and the active roster for most of the season. On Sunday, the Giants got Scott Garretts back, and he paid an immediate dividend, pitching six innings of two-hit ball in a victory over Pittsburgh at Candlestick Park.

Jeff Brantley pitched two hitless innings and Steve Bedrosian got the final three outs for his 13th save and seventh in eight opportunities since being acquired from Philadelphia on June 18. Garretts is 7-3.

The Giants broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth when Kevin Mitchell led off against Jeff Robinson, 5-8, with a single, went to second on Ken Oberkfell's grounder and scored on the sacrifice single. Tim Lincecum added a run-scoring single in the fifth.

The victory increased San Francisco's lead over idle Houston to three games in the NL West.

Dodgers 3, Cardinals 2

Tim Belcher returned to a starting role and pitched out of jams twice as Los Angeles gained a split of its four-game series with St. Louis.

Belcher, 6-8, started a key double play in fourth inning after giving up both St. Louis runs. An inning earlier, he escaped a bases-loaded jam by striking out Vince Coleman and Milt Thompson and retiring Ozzie Smith on a fly ball.

Jeff Hamilton hit a two-run triple to key a three-run second for the Dodgers. The decisive run came on a bad throw by Thompson. The St. Louis center fielder caught Mike Scioscia's fly ball and overthrew both catcher Tom Pagnozzi and Jose DeLeon, 8-9, allowing Hamilton to score.

Jay Howell pitched the final two innings of the four-game series in opportunities.

Coleman stole his 40th and 41st bases for the Cardinals, running his streak of successful steals to 47 in a row. He has not been caught since last Sept. 15.

Braves 6, Mets 2

Darrell Evans hit the 408th and 409th home runs of his career, breaking out of a tie with Duke Snider for 21st place on the all-time list, to lead Atlanta over visiting New York in game delayed by rain three times for a total of 2½ hours.

Evans, at 42 the oldest player in the league, homered in the second inning off Bob Ojeda, 5-9, and in the fifth against Kevin Tapani. The next target for Evans is Billy Williams, who had 426 career homers. It was the second time this season that Evans, who has six homers, has connected twice in a game.

Rookie Marty Clary, 3-0, lost his bid for his first major-league shutout in the sixth when Howard Johnson doubled and scored on a sacrifice by Kevin McReynolds.

Padres 4, Cubs 3

San Diego sent Chicago to its third straight loss when Tim Flannery's pinch-hit sacrifice fly with the bases loaded in the sixth inning climaxed a two-run rally by the Padres. Roberto Alomar singled to tie the score earlier in the inning.

Dennis Rasmussen, 4-6, went six innings for his first victory since June 29. Mark Davis pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his 24th save in 27 opportunities.

Oldest player wants to play regularly

ATLANTA (AP) — Darrell Evans said he wants to play every day, not to fill the role of a pinch-hitter and part-time starter.

"I don't know if you really accept it," he said of his role with the Atlanta Braves. "You deal with it. It's tough to back off and say you've got to be satisfied with what's going on."

"I don't think you truly get that way. You're always hoping maybe you'll get hot in a couple of ball games and do something to change it. That's still always in the back of my mind. That could happen."

Evans, at 42 the oldest player in the National League, is moving up baseball's all-time home run list in the twilight of his career.

He hit two home runs in Atlanta's

6-2 victory over the New York Mets Sunday at Shea Stadium.

Evans broke out of a tie for 21st place with Duke Snider at 407.

His next target is former Chicago Cubs star Billy Williams, who hit 426.

Evans followed the career of Snider and often watched him play during his youth in California.

"It means a lot to pass him," Evans said. "He's a good friend."

It was Evans' second two-homer game of the year, the other coming on April 29 at Montreal, where the Braves opened a three-game series Monday night.

Evans is in his 19th full season in the majors, going back to a token appearance with the Braves late in the 1969 season.

His home runs break down to 126 in two stints with Atlanta, 122 with the Braves and 12 with the Mets, with the Detroit Tigers, including 40 in 1985 when he became the oldest player to win the American League home run title.

Evans also contributed to a major league record in 1973 — most players on one team to hit 40 or more home runs.

Evans had 41 that year with the Braves, current New York Mets manager Davey Johnson had 43 and all-time home run king Hank Aaron 40.

Evans said the main problem he faces in not being an everyday player is keeping motivated and maintaining consistency.

"It's a lot tougher because the patience factor comes in a lot," he said. "You're a little too anxious when you're not playing and you want to do something to make things happen rather than let them happen."

Evans hit 22 home runs in 1988 in what he termed "an off year."

He says he's still capable if given the chance, but he doesn't expect any big changes in his role with the Braves, or even trying to bring on youthful players in an effort to climb out of the NL West cellar.

"I'm just trying to keep my confidence in myself going," he said. "That's something I've had to work on, this year especially. Sometimes it's worked and sometimes it hasn't."

"I still have confidence in myself, but that depends on the situation, what happens the rest of this year and we'll see what happens this winter," he said.

Texas League All-Stars to showcase their talents

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Arkansas manager Gaylen Pitts says some of the players who will be showcased at tonight's Texas League All-Star Game might emerge on the major-league scene in the years ahead. "I think we'll have pretty good talent in this game. There's plenty of big-league prospects. I'd say the level is up over last year." — East manager, Gaylen Pitts.

Tonight's game, which has endured since 1936, is expected to be played before a sellout crowd at V.J. Keefe Stadium.

San Antonio manager John Shoemaker said it was difficult to compare the talent in the league to the years he played in San Antonio in 1979 and 1980, an era that produced major-league standouts Orel Hershey, Mike Marshall and Tim Leary.

But in interviews the San Antonio Light conducted with the league's managers, Arkansas outfielder Ray Lankford was singled out as having the best chance of becoming a star in the majors.

A total of 10 cowboys — five from the first nine days of the Stampede and five from the Budweiser series — qualified for Simonsen's final. The four cowboys with the best score after an elimination round competed in the $50,000 shootout.

West scored a 79 aboard Charlie's Ghost, a 6-year-old white bull who packs 1,300 pounds.

The other three cowboys in the $50,000 round — defending champion Clint Branger of Roscoe, Mont., Gary Toole of Mangum, Okla., and Chuck Simonson of Shepherd, Mont. — all were thrown off.

The closest battle in other events came in steer wrestling, where one-tenth of a second spelled the difference between $50,000 and nothing. Rod Lyman of Kaispeil, Mont., won in 8.8 seconds while Herbert Theriot of Wiggins, Miss., who had led all week, clocked in at 8.9 seconds.

Robin Burwash of Okotoks, Alberta, claimed the bareback title with rides of 81 and 82 for 163 points. Dan Etbauer of Goodwell, Okla., won the saddle bronc title with 77 in the first round and a Stampede-high score of 86 in the final.

Tod Slone of Canyon Lake, Texas, won the calf roping crown in a total of 19.6 seconds, dethroning defending champion Dave Smith of College Place, Wash. Slone's shootout time of 8.8 bettered Smith by almost two seconds.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Saudi Arabia's King Fahd doesn't just slip quietly into the hospital. Twenty rooms of the Cleveland Clinic are being refurbished to accommodate the 67-year-old monarch, his wives and retinue of 200 when he arrives in a few weeks for a physical and possible knee surgery, said clinic spokesman Gary Weiland.

Taste and security are both concerns, the spokesman said Wednesday.

The Saudi Embassy in Washington refused to confirm or deny that the king is headed for the clinic, but Weiland said that Fahd will come to the hospital during a state visit. The king is scheduled to meet President Bush on July 27.

The clinic was picked because of its staff's experience in orthopedic surgery and because the king's half-brother, Khaled, had heart surgery there twice, Weiland said.

DALLAS (AP) — Jerry Hall, Mick Jagger's live-in, insists their children get an occasional look at the wide open spaces she knew from her childhood in Mesquite.

The 33-year-old actress and model says she brings 5-year-old Elizabeth Scarlett Jagger and 3-year-old Leroy Augustine Jagger to Texas from their home in England five or six times a year.

Ms. Hall, who has a supporting role in the hit movie "Batman," was in Dallas this week to introduce a line of swimwear she designed.

TUESDAY, JULY 18, 1989

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: stage star Hume Cronyn, comedian Red Skelton, Sen. John Glenn, playwright Clifford Odets, slugger Joe Torre.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unusual financial opportunities present themselves. Be prepared to put in more hours at work. Diet and exercise contribute to your new self-confidence. A compliment or gift will make your day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Follow up on creative ideas. Home matters require careful handling to preserve harmony. Comparison shopping helps you save on a family vacation. Keep a stranger who flatters you at arm's length.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Behind-the-scenes planning begins to pay off in the marketplace. Former associates re-enter your life in a beneficial way. Making small changes in your lifestyle will be advantageous to everyone you love.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Occupational pressures demand much of your attention. Letters and long-distance calls help you avoid expensive business trips. Romance looks happy. Make certain you and partner share basic values before setting a wedding date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Wear fashionable but loose-fitting clothing for maximum comfort. Meeting your responsibilities requires a sense of obligation. Paperwork is a necessary evil. A telephone call fills you with happy anticipation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An active day lies ahead. New employment ventures are exciting, but could involve a major move. Consult mate or partner before committing yourself. Cancel evening plans to spend time with loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Refining techniques will boost your earning potential. Your inspired approach impresses higher-ups. Change schedule to accommodate loved one's plans. Out-of-towners bring news about an old flame.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Reduce stress by shifting from one task to another. An upsurge of energy lifts your spirits. An offbeat solution to a problem will surprise everyone. Enlist a family member's help with domestic chores.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Negotiations may be temporarily suspended. Do not get antsy. A regular checkup uncovers a routine health problem. Loved ones share a happy secret. Be more conservative financially. Save for the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are prophetic, uncannily tuned in to what is going on. Others look to you with greater respect. Be sure to keep any promises to a youngster—and earn a greater measure of trust.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be prepared to spend additional money and time on projects already under way. A problem involving a relative requires careful thought. Solutions come easier following a friendly exchange.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Complete paperwork before starting new projects. Applications must be filed on time. A business lunch or dinner may be on the agenda. Revise the family budget only after considering everyone's needs and wishes.
