Three arrested

COAHOMA — Three people stopped by a sheriff's deputy early this morning for a traffic violation were arrested on more serious charges when it was discovered the vehicle they were driving was stolen and they were carrying weapons, a sheriff's department news release reported.

Arrested were: Larry G. Martinez, 22, 1510 Oriole St., on charges of unlawful carrying of a weapon, possession of a prohibited weapon and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle; Jesse Rodriguez Lopez, 20, Rt. 1 Box 371A and Dora Cruz, 17, 500 S. Goliad, on a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Deputy Sheriff Woodie Howell stopped the 1988 Brown Chevy being driven by the three after he noticed them acting suspicious near the Coahoma Town & Country Store, the news release said.

A check through the Big Spring Police Department dispatch reportedly confirmed the vehicle to be stolen from the parking lot of Pollard Chevrolet. The truck was in the dealership for repairs, Howell said.

Howell reported finding a loaded 12-gauge sawed-off shotgun and .25 ACP semi-automatic pistol near the front seat of the vehicle, the news release said.

Martinez, Chavez and Cruz were transported to the sheriff's department where they were jailed and awaiting arraignment. Bond had not been set as of press time.

The weapons were seized and preserved as evidence. The Chevy truck, valued at approximately $20,000, was reportedly released to its Big Spring owner.

New plates

AUSTIN — This is an artist's rendering of the new Texas license plates to be issued next spring. The tag will sport the colors of the Texas flag, and the darker areas of the top and bottom of the plate are a graduated blue.

Trial begins today

BIG SPRING — Jury selection began this morning and the trial may begin this afternoon in the wrongful death case of an Odessa man who allegedly died through the negligence of a Howard County man.

Jury selection began in 118th District Court today in a suit filed by Janelle Land and other family members as next of kin to Elton Wayne Land against local resident Bruce Hensley and Andres Transport Company of Abilene.

Mrs. Land filed suit against Hensley and the transport company, charging that Hensley is guilty of gross negligence in the May 29, 1987 death of Mr. Land.

Mrs. Land and relatives are suing for damages, punitive and exemplary damages and court costs.

Sewage sludge

AUSTIN (AP) — Reports that dangerously contaminated fertilizer, made from sewage sludge from Boston Harbor, may be destined for Texas are "unfounded," said state health department officials.

The Austin American-Statesman reported earlier in the week that dried sewage sludge from the harbor could be marketed in Texas and Florida as fertilizer.

The plan to sell the sludge evolved out of a $6 billion proposal to clean up Boston Harbor, widely considered one of the most polluted bodies of water in the country.

The proposal is supported by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in Boston.

Expert: Too much asbestos in library

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — An unhealthy level of asbestos exists in the county library and needs to be removed, the owner of an asbestos abatement company told Howard County Commissioners today.

"There is a hazardous amount of asbestos" in the library, asbestos contractor Dewayne Patterson said. Patterson said that after a consultant with his asbestos abatement company had inspected the library and taken samples, it was determined that asbestos was used for thermal insulation in the library. A preliminary study by the company has shown that the abatement contractor, he added.

Commissioners indicated to Patterson that they were interested in removing the asbestos. They told Patterson that because of the cost, bids will have to be submitted from all interested abatement companies for the work.

The commissioners also heard an informal report on county delinquent taxes. Drew Mouton with the Baweroff and Mouton law firm, told abatement contractor, he added.

Commissioners indicated to Patterson that they were interested in removing the asbestos. They told Patterson that because of the cost, bids will have to be submitted from all interested abatement companies for the work.

The commissioners also heard an informal report on county delinquent taxes. Drew Mouton with the Baweroff and Mouton law firm, told commissioners that collections on delinquent taxes are down dramatically from last year.

Overall collections for all four area taxing entities — the county, city, school district and Howard College — are down slightly from last year, Mouton said. Collections for the county and Howard College were down the most, the other two taxing entities were at basically the same level as the previous year.

The current economic situation in Big Spring is a significant factor in the decline, he said.

The county's largest contributor to delinquent taxes is the Fiberflex Products company, Mouton said. The company, which has declared bankruptcy, owes $200,000 in back taxes, approximately 25 percent to the county, he said.

Mouton told commissioners the county could receive "a significant chunk of money" if the company could be restructured and begin to pay back its back taxes.

Delinquent taxes fall into three categories: those who are delin-

Edward Mayson lost the use of his right arm but learned to use his left hand to fulfill one of the great loves of his life — painting.

Artist overcomes handicaps to walk and paint

By LYNN HAYES
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Edward Mayson loves two things in life — music and art — and not even two strokes and partial confinement to a wheelchair are able to keep him from his passions.

Surrounded by oil paintings and porcelain art pieces, Mayson listens to the sounds of Luciano Pavarotti in his Big Spring home.

"My life revolves around music and art," Mayson said.

But the 71-year-old Detroit native's life almost was cut short by two strokes that left him paralyzed on his right side.

While living in El Paso several years ago, Mayson was hospitalized for gangrene, and suffered his first stroke while in the hospital. Five years later, enroute to the Big Spring VA Medical Center, he was stricken again.

With his right side paralyzed by the strokes — he still can't lift his right hand above his waist — Mayson began teaching himself to use his left hand. It was during that time he began painting.

"I painted my first painting while I was recovering in the hospital," he said. "My head was in the clouds — I couldn't believe I could take what little talent I had in my right hand and transfer it to my left hand."

While in therapy he was told he'd never be able to walk unattended.

Determined to prove the doctors wrong, Mayson began teaching himself to use a cane.

After two strokes, Edward Mayson baffled the doctors, and learned not only to walk again but learned to paint with his left hand.

"While the others (patients) were watching TV — I was walking," he said.

Then, after church services one Sunday, he said an inner voice told him to walk.

"I went where there wasn't any carpet and I stood up and started walking... Boy, my head was in the clouds again," he said.

Because he's "never satisfied" with his progress, Mayson says he's constantly working to perfect his artistic abilities. "I can tell I'm making progress — but I'd be silly to quit now and stay where I'm at."

Although he is able to walk, Mayson prefers to sit in his wheelchair while performing daily chores and painting. He works with oil paints in his living room, creating colorful works of art.

Mayson, who estimates he has more than 40 oil paintings to his credit, gives his art pieces to his friends.

"I figure in my mind that painting is a God-given talent... He (God) wouldn't want me to sell them," he said.

Mayson, a devout Catholic who wears a crucifix around his neck, praises God for blessing him with his artistic talents. "Who else would I give credit to?" he asks.

Although divorced from his wife, who abandoned him while he was in the hospital, Mayson said he leads a happy life.

"I met and fell in love with a nurse at the hospital," he explained.

Officials mum on U.S. diplomat suspected in spy probe

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — With U.S. officials remaining tight-lipped about the investigation of a top diplomat suspected of passing information to the Soviets, the emerging picture is one of a frustrated bureaucrat who may have aroused intelligence doubts a decade ago.

Administration, legislative and law enforcement officials skirted questions Sunday about the probe of Felix S. Bloch, the former second-in-command at the U.S. Embassy in Austria for seven years. Bloch is the target of an intelligence probe, making him the highest-ranking U.S. official ever implicated in an espionage investigation involving the Soviet Union.

Bloch, who has not been charged with any crime, reportedly was filmed by U.S. officials earlier this year passing a briefcase to a known Soviet KGB agent in a European capital.

The State Department and the FBI are "pursuing the inquiry thoroughly in order to identify the compromised security which has occurred and the appropriate steps," the State Department said. Bloch's building pass and security clearance have been lifted.

"My directions are really not to comment on this case," an FBI spokesman said Sunday. "You're talking about security matters."

Although reports remained sketchy, the picture was emerging of a 54-year-old career diplomat who was frustrated by his lack of advancement while serving in Vienna under two political appointees.

Vienna, because of geography, reportedly has been a hotbed of East-West spy activity.

By all accounts, Bloch, born in Austria, had access to sensitive intelligence material during his career, and officials expressed concern he could cause serious damage to U.S. interests if he shared his secrets with foreign powers.

The Wall Street Journal reported in today's editions that Bloch helped shape the State Department's policy on transfers of sensitive technology to the Soviets and actively participated in the decision earlier this year to relax U.S. policy on transfers, unidentified officials said.

Baby found at church

AUSTIN (AP) — An abandoned infant boy, estimated to be about 2 weeks old, was found Sunday in the pastor's study of the Faith United Methodist Church, said the Rev. Floyd Vick.

A brown burlap bundle containing diapers was placed on the sofa next to the child, who was wrapped in a blanket, Vick said.

"We're grateful that they found the church," Vick said, "and glad he was brought here, instead of put in a Dumpster."

"William" was the third baby abandoned in Austin in less than two weeks.

A note made from words cut out of various publications and glued to a sheet of paper accompanied the infant. It read: "Homeless and can't take care of William. Help find a family."

Ringo returns

DALLAS (AP) — Yes, kids still scream when a Beatle performs. Only now, their parents are often screaming alongside them.

When Ringo Starr kicked off his first-ever solo concert tour on Sunday night, he was playing to a concert audience dominated by "Baby Boomers."

One woman who had brought her two young daughters said, "My kids don't even know who Ringo Starr is, but they will after tonight."

The concert's promoters made it a family occasion for many by giving free admission to children 12 and under who were accompanied by adults.

The 49-year-old Starr, the first Beatle to become a grandfather, was backed by what was billed as his "All-Starr Band." And those appearing on the star-studded stage set indeed were a celestial aggregation.

Collision kills three

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities said the conductor and engineer of a Union Pacific freight train were unable to stop in time to avoid colliding with a pickup in an accident that killed three people near Alvin.

Investigators with the Texas Department of Public Safety said Kenneth Baxter, 40, an Alvin man on leave from the U.S. Navy, apparently did not see the train as he approached an intersection.

Protesting shrimpers end blockade — for now

GALVESTON (AP) — Shrimpers who ended their blockade of ship channels along the Texas coast Sunday said they were ready to move back into the trenches today if officials fail to answer concerns about costly new devices meant to protect sea turtles.

The shrimpers lifted anchors and yielded to traffic in the ship channels Sunday, but hundreds waited nearby today as their representatives prepared for a requested meeting with national fisheries officials.

Coast Guard Adm. William F. Merlin, commander of the 8th Coast Guard District in New Orleans, continued meeting with shrimpers' representatives Sunday and assured them he would try to arrange a meeting today with federal officials.

The Coast Guard said U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher agreed to a meeting Monday with Texas and Louisiana congressional leaders in Washington.

A Commerce Department spokesman could not be reached but a spokeswoman for U.S. Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Sugar Land, confirmed that such a meeting was being planned.

"That had already been promised before, but he (Merlin) just reaffirmed it and he is really helping us and working to set up these meetings to try and satisfy the demands of the shrimpers," said

GALVESTON — Four shrimp boats participating in a blockade of Galveston Bay stand in the path of a freighter bound for Houston Sunday morning. The shrimpers are protesting regulations requiring them to use turtle excluder devices.

Tee John Mialjevich, president of the Concerned Shrimpers of America.

About 200 shrimp boats on Saturday crowded the deep-water Houston ship channel, which passes between Galveston Island and Bolivar Peninsula, and about 300 shrimpers jammed Port Aransas, gateway to the Port of Corpus Christi.

Similar blockades in smaller Texas and Louisiana ports also ended Sunday. Two recreational boaters were hospitalized briefly for minor injuries after trying to run the blockade Saturday in Cameron, La.

Gunfire was reported in both states and four shrimpers were arrested in Texas. There were no injuries, officials said.

Shrimpers who clogged the ship channels Saturday were protesting new Commerce Department regulations requiring that they use devices intended to protect endangered Kemp's Ridley sea turtles.

The devices are designed to allow the turtles to escape shrimpers' nets, but the shrimpers complain that they cause them to lose shrimp, and are bulky, dangerous and expensive to operate.

The devices, which range in price from $60 to several hundred dollars, are made of wire mesh and come in various shapes and sizes. However, they usually are cylindrical in shape and slightly larger than a crab trap.

They have a hinged door on top that allows the turtle to swim out before it is pulled to the back of the trawl with the shrimp. (Some shrimpers claim, though, that this lets shrimp out too.)

Mialjevich, whose group argues that the devices don't really save endangered turtles, said he would propose that federal officials instead consider a requirement that shrimpers perform tows no longer than 90 minutes. He said that by checking nets more often, they could avoid killing turtles and save their valuable shrimp.

Many of the shrimpers who filled shipping channels Saturday with booms outstretched to widen their stance also went ashore for a symbolic burning of the turtle protection devices they vowed not to use despite potential fines of $8,000 to $25,000 and six months in jail.

They ended their blockades, including an armada of about 200 boats in the Houston Ship Channel and another 300 at Port Aransas, after Coast Guard officials issued warnings that they would not allow continued blockage.

Bullock criticizes detective use

AUSTIN (AP) — The hiring of a private detective by a candidate for lieutenant governor has heated what already promised to be a hot race between state Sen. Chet Edwards and Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Finance records this week show the Edwards campaign on April 14 paid $2,500 to Jack Montague of Austin for a consulting fee.

Edwards' campaign manager Dennis Randolph said he decided to put Montague on retainer to provide security for the campaign office in Austin, because the office contains thousands of dollars of computers and other business machines.

But Bullock — Edwards' chief Democratic opponent in the 1990 primary — said the action smacked of "Watergate politics."

"I don't know why in the world someone would hire a private detective on a consultant basis for anything other than attempting to find a lot of dirt," Bullock said.

Randolph said Montague had been asked to check into published reports about possible misdeeds in the bingo industry, which Bullock's office was regulating at the time. But Montague was not hired to look into Bullock's personal life, Randolph said.

Montague was appointed to the Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies in August 1987, and was confirmed by the Senate on March 30, after clearing the Nominations Committee headed by Edwards, D-Duncanville.

Bullock questioned the timing of confirmation and payment to Montague two weeks later. "It doesn't pass the smell test," he said.

The business relationship poses a conflict of interest, said Bullock spokesman Tony Proffitt, "because you're conducting private business with an individual you have public jurisdiction over."

Proffitt said the relationship was "a little too cozy."

Randolph said he was "99 percent" sure that Montague did not perform any work for Edwards' campaign before being confirmed. However, Randolph acknowledged he had discussed with Montague the possibility of working for the campaign before the Senate confirmed him to the board.

"We do no business with the agency, and we took no money from Jack Montague," Randolph said. "Bullock's camp is totally off base. They're just blowing smoke. It's a legitimate business deal."

DALLAS — Former Beatle Ringo Starr began the first night of his first-ever solo tour by asking the Dallas crowd, "What's my name?" Sunday night. The crowd answered with a resounding "Ringo."

Tuberculosis on the rise among Austin homeless

AUSTIN (AP) — Health officials are hoping to get better results from a tuberculosis testing program that begins this week by getting immediate treatment for homeless people who test positive.

The Austin-Travis County health department will set up a mobile chest X-ray at the downtown Salvation Army on Tuesday in a program to last 10 weeks. The X-rays, which can conclusively disclose active tuberculosis cases, are funded with a $34,500 grant from the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

"We're trying to identify these people on the spot and get them to (treatment) the next day," Ms. Tatum said. "There's probably a lot of (tuberculosis sufferers) walking around who just don't go to a doctor. Hopefully, as soon as we get the chest X-rays, we can identify more of them," she said. Ms. Tatum said the health department cannot force the homeless to get chest X-rays.

Travis County recorded an increase in tuberculosis cases since 1987, when 40 active cases were treated in the county. In 1988, there were 49 cases and 51 cases have been reported this year.

Tuberculosis skin tests given in March to more than 100 homeless people showed 45 percent were exposed to the disease and were carrying the tuberculosis bacteria, said Eryn Tatum, tuberculosis coordinator for the Austin-Travis County Health Department.

As many as one-third of those could have active tuberculosis based on the sketchy results obtained from the March testing, the Austin American-Statesman reported Sunday.

For those tests, tuberculosis test skin patches were placed on 215 homeless people, but only 108 returned two days later to allow nurses to analyze the patches and record test results.

Forty-nine who returned — 45 percent — tested positive. These people, called positive reactors by health officials, have been exposed to tuberculosis at some point in their lives and the bacteria is either latent or active in their bodies, Tatum said. About 0.4 percent of the general population would react positively to the skin test, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

Of the 49 Austin homeless who were positive reactors, 15 came to a health department clinic for chest X-rays, she said. Three of those who were X-rayed appeared to have active tuberculosis, but health officials were unable to locate them for further tests.

Local test results show the tuberculosis exposure rate among Austin's homeless tracked national exposure data. Tuberculosis test results reported to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta indicate as many as 51 percent of the homeless people in some cities are infected with tuberculosis.

Ms. Tatum said Austin's homeless diagnosed with tuberculosis will be sent to San Antonio State Chest Hospital. Treatment, which takes six months to one year, is effective at curing the disease, she said.

Symptoms of tuberculosis are severe night sweats, a persistent cough, steady weight loss and extreme fatigue. With no treatment, the disease can be fatal.

Until the 1950s, when tuberculosis treatment became widely available, the disease was a major killer in the United States. Before the drugs were developed, victims were isolated in sanitariums.

Ms. Tatum said the bacteria is airborne and it usually takes multiple contacts with the bacteria to become a carrier.

Texas cities fighting to host international summit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — President Bush's attempt to bring countries of the world together in Texas is dividing the Lone Star State as its largest cities are fiercely competing to host the next world economic summit.

This week, San Antonio Mayor Lila Cockrell drafted a letter — accompanied by a city council resolution and letters from business leaders, tourism officials and area chambers of commerce — to encourage Bush to bring the summit to the Alamo City.

President Bush said at the close of the Paris summit last week that the 1990 meeting "definitely" had a chance of coming to Texas.

Officials estimate such a summit could bring $20 million to Dallas, Houston or San Antonio, which is the reported front-runner.

"Since you are a Texan — one of our own — you understand that every Texan has two homes, the city where he resides and San Antonio," Mrs. Cockrell wrote Bush. In her letter, Ms. Cockrell pointed out San Antonio's historic attractions, its downtown hotel facilities, convention center and military bases that would help ensure adequate security, the San Antonio Express-News reported.

Houston's Ward said he spoke to aides to President Reagan about the possibility of Houston hosting a summit.

In Dallas, Karen Schifelbein-Jordan, president of the Dallas Convention and Visitors Bureau, has appointed an informal task force to work on attracting the event, said bureau spokeswoman Jany Poth.

"I don't think we can underscore how really preliminary all this is. The selection process has just begun, and it's quite a long, drawn-out process." — Randy Erben.

"This is an exciting opportunity for the bureau to land the big one, and we are not going to miss a beat," Ms. Poth said.

Since Bush's announcement last week, Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire has sent a telegram to the White House reiterating the city's interest, aides said.

"This is a political decision made by a few people in Washington, so what we're doing now is asking people with influence among that small group to make sure that Houston is on any list," a Houston source who asked not to be identified told The Dallas Morning News.

Ward said Houston will parade the attributes of its consular corps — at 52 the largest in Texas — and its ties to international trade.

The host site rotates among the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Great Britain, Italy and Canada. The last U.S. city to host the meeting was Williamsburg, Va., in May 1982.

State-controlled media in China gives contradictory coverage

BEIJING (AP) — China's media, back in the hands of government propagandists after exercising a degree of freedom this spring, now gives confusing, contradictory news coverage as it tries to depict life returning to normal.

All the major newspapers covered the pro-democracy student movement for several weeks in May, giving accurate, colorful and enthusiastic reports rarely seen in the Chinese press.

But since the military crackdown on June 3-4, during which hundreds — perhaps thousands — of students and their supporters were killed, the media has reverted to being a tool of the state.

The result is often confused reports that sometimes turn out to be old news and a litany of the Communist Party line, as broadcasters read word-for-word commentaries and editorials from the party newspaper, the People's Daily.

The government has said it was forced to crack down on the popular student movement because it was disrupting social order to the point of anarchy. The ubiquitous reports about production always are prefaced with a statement about the hard-working employees trying "to recover the losses suffered during the student movement that developed into counterrevolutionary rebellion."

But the reports continue by quoting factory managers as saying their employees didn't join in the popular movement. Instead, they reported for work every day, even if it meant bicycling or walking for hours because buses had stopped running, and the factory didn't miss a day of production.

Even peasants in remote areas untouched by the events in the capital are depicted by the reports as striving to "recover the losses caused by the turmoil."

The news also reports China's top leaders performing their regular duties, including meeting with visiting foreign delegations, to show that international relations have not suffered. But almost all the visitors are low-level officials or non-government personages.

On Wednesday, Vice Premier Tian Jiyun was shown on state-run

TV meeting with the Soviet Union's fisheries minister. Premier Li Peng has met, among others, the former mayor of Cerritos, Calif., and the chairman of the economic research institute of Japan's Daiwa Securities Co. Ltd.

In an effort to show that even the foreign businessmen who fled during the turmoil are convinced that everything is fine, newspapers often report the signing of new contracts or the start of new projects.

This month, the official China Daily reported in its lead business story that the United States' Motorola Corp. planned to set up a $100 million electronics plant in Tianjin, saying "Motorola recently confirmed its plan." But company officials in Chicago said the project has been on hold since the crackdown and nothing is likely to be decided this year.

The Beijing Review reported this week the German partners of the Shanghai Volkswagen Automotive Co. had decided to reinvest their dividends from last year and expand production. The article said the decision was made at a "recent board meeting," and quoted a German official as saying the recent unrest had not affected their partnership.

Another company official revealed, however, that the board decision was made in April, before the crackdown, and said that it received little, if any, press coverage at the time.

The official Xinhua News Agency reported two weeks ago that France had agreed to provide a government loan of $130 million. But the French Embassy said the agreement was reached in April.

"It's a sort of trick. It's not a new loan signed by the two governments," said an embassy spokesman. France has in fact frozen relations with China.

Last month, the Finnish Foreign Ministry took the unusual step of clarifying that a $22 million loan to China was agreed upon two weeks before the June 3-4 crackdown, not after as implied in a China Daily report.

Such tactics are not lost on Chinese citizens, some of whom say they have stopped reading the papers or watching TV news.

Rough ride sends 45 to hospital

MIAMI (AP) — After he bounced off the ceiling a second time and the plane began shaking and dropping, Bob Watson was sure American Airlines Flight 1707 from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami would crash.

"Everybody thought that was it," said Watson, 39, a tennis pro from Jensen Beach. "I was resigned to dying."

About 45 passengers on the American Airlines A-300 Airbus

"All of a sudden there was this tremendous boom. I flew up and hit the ceiling. I came down in my seat, and about two seconds later, I flew up and hit my head again."

were treated for cuts and bruises after the plane was jolted by turbulence at 35,000 feet during its descent into Miami International Airport Saturday night.

John Hotard, an airline spokesman, said Sunday in Fort Worth, Texas, that the pilot's radar hadn't shown the storm that buffeted the plane.

The airliner, carrying 200 passengers and a crew of nine, landed at 11 p.m. Several people were removed in wheelchairs and stretchers.

The injured were taken to Jackson Memorial, Hialeah and Palmetto General hospitals. Most of the injuries were neck and shoulder sprains, and there were no broken bones, Hotard said. Several of the injured were admitted overnight for observation, and the hospitals reported that all were released Sunday morning.

The plane's exterior was undamaged, Hotard said, but 12 seats were damaged, and holes were punched in the cabin's overhead compartments.

Watson said the three-hour flight had been uneventful until 30 minutes out of Miami. He was reading a book, the seat-belt warning lights weren't on, and his seatbelt was unhooked, Watson said.

Then, without warning, "All of a sudden there was this tremendous boom. I flew up and hit the ceiling. I came down in my seat, and about two seconds later, I flew up and hit my head again."

As he was bouncing around, he said, he looked and saw "other people were doing it too. Some people's heads broke right through the ceiling panel. It was unbelievable. People were screaming and crying."

Study targets video display terminal users

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federally funded study on 8,000 women office workers aims to resolve persistent questions over whether video display terminals can harm the health of people who use them.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., whose House Government Operations subcommittee has held hearings on VDTs, said the two-year, $2 million study by Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York is long overdue.

Weiss said he had urged the U.S. Public Health Service for several years to fund research "that could determine whether VDTs cause serious harm, especially for pregnant women who use them."

"They have been terribly slow to respond, partly due to encouragement by several large corporations to avoid this kind of research," he said. "Meanwhile, the potential harm has increased dramatically as the number of VDT users has multiplied."

Weiss calls the Mount Sinai epidemiological study — being funded by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, a unit of the National Institutes of Health — "an important first step" toward resolving the health issue.

The study comes in the wake of a report issued last month by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment, saying more research is needed to explore the potential health risks of power frequency electromagnetic fields — particularly their effects on the nervous system and possible role in promoting cancer.

The OTA report said that while most public concern has focused on high-voltage transmission lines, more attention should be paid to exposure to such fields from other sources such as household and office wiring, appliances and other electrical equipment, including VDTs.

"It is now clear that 60 Hz (cycles per second) and other low frequency electromagnetic fields can interact with individual cells and organs to produce biological changes," it said. "The nature of these interactions is subtle and complex. The implications of these interactions for public health remain unclear, but there are legitimate reasons for concern."

Michele Marcus, the Mount Sinai study's principal investigator, said it will be conducted in four cities — New York, Boston, Cleveland and an as yet undetermined city in California. Both union and non-union workplaces will be included.

Dr. Marcus said a major difference between the Mount Sinai project and previous epidemiological studies in this country is that in addition to gathering health-history data through questionnaires, "we are going to be looking at reproductive effects prospectively. That is,

we're going to be following women forward in time."

She said she would be identifying their exposure to their use of video display terminals, and then seeing whether or not they get pregnant and following the course of the pregnancy," she said.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Commerce subcommittee on science, technology and space, said "there are still many unanswered questions about the potential health effects of VDTs and of electromagnetic fields generally, but there is no longer any doubt that this form of radiation can cause some biochemical changes."

"The decision by NIH to support Mount Sinai's study is an important step, but more is needed," Gore said. "Government must expand its research program and do more to ensure that private industry is preparing solutions should the evidence warrant it."

Also welcoming the study was Rep. Joseph M. Gaydos, D-Pa., chairman of the House Education and Labor subcommittee on health and safety, which plans to hold further hearings on the VDT issue early next year.

"I am concerned about the health hazards faced by office workers, especially those who use video display terminals for long periods of time during the working day," Gaydos said.

Weather

Scattered thunderstorms continued over the Southeast today, part of a storm system that spawned a tornado that roared through a Florida town and cut a mile-long swathe of destruction.

The twister Sunday in South Fort Myers damaged the roofs of 10 businesses and 29 boats from a marine sales business. It slammed one boat into an office building, and also damaged 36 mobile homes and seven condominiums. The Lee County Sheriff Department reported no injuries.

Thunderstorms erupted Sunday evening across the Rockies. High winds blew down large trees at Helena, Mont., and winds gusted up to 58 mph at Elko, Nev.

Scattered thunderstorms doused Kentucky, the Tennessee and lower Mississippi valleys, and parts of Texas.

Heavy rainfall during the six hours ending at 2 a.m. EDT included 1.5 inches at Tampa, Fla., .98 inches at Centerville, Ala., .69 inches at Farmington, N.M., and half an inch at Knoxville, Tenn.

Fog hung today over the Ohio Valley, the Great Lakes and the northern and Middle Atlantic Coast.

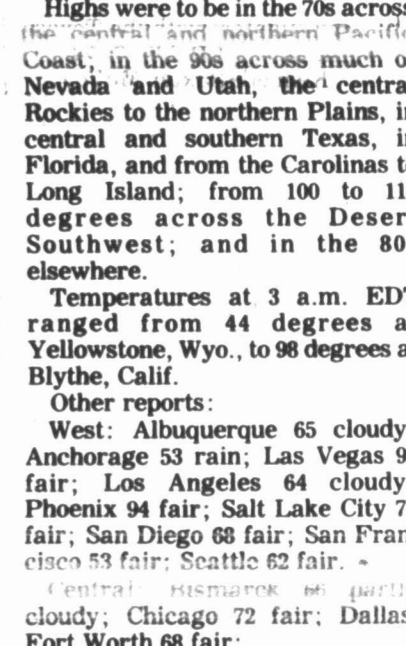

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms during the afternoon and evening across the central Rockies, the Plains, Texas and much of the Southeast and Gulf region.

Highs were to be in the 70s across the central and northern Pacific Coast; in the 90s across much of Nevada and Utah, the central Rockies to the northern Plains, in central and southern Texas, in Florida, and from the Carolinas to Long Island; from 100 to 110 degrees across the Desert Southwest; and in the 80s elsewhere.

Temperatures at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 44 degrees at Yellowstone, Wyo., to 98 degrees at Blythe, Calif.

Skinner is asking public for ideas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stuck in traffic? Tired of waiting for the bus? Fed up with rising air fares? Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner is trying to find out what Americans want to do about it.

But Skinner, in starting today a series of nationwide public hearings aimed at coming up with a national transportation policy, is asking for ideas, not complaints.

"You shouldn't go if you're just going to say, 'We've got gridlock, somebody ought to do something about it,' because we know that," said Skinner in an interview. "These are needs and idea sessions."

Skinner, who carries a regular Washington Metro rail card in his wallet and drives to work on the same jammed roads as this region's other commuters, said the nation has been taking transportation for granted.

And he makes it clear this includes the Reagan administration. Skinner is a former federal prosecutor and Chicago area transit chief brought to Washington by President Bush.

"We've had a policy, but there hasn't been a coordinated national policy," he said. "There was an absence of planning, and I happen to be a planner."

Skinner said the nation's airports, highways, bridges, waterways and mass transit system are simply wearing out.

"We're going to have to rebuild it and replace it, or we're not going to be able to rely on it anymore," he said.

Among the most critical problems are a lack of planning for new airports, Skinner said, and $80 billion worth of work on the country's deteriorating bridges.

The Transportation Department has scheduled 33 meetings in cities ranging from Moscow, Idaho, to New York City.

Meetings are to be moderated by department experts in various fields, with sessions focusing on different subjects according to the location.

In Moscow on Wednesday, for example, it's rural needs, including health care delivery, intercity buses and rail transport. In New York on Sept. 8, it will be drug and alcohol use in the commercial transportation system and federal research and development.

The last meetings will be Sept. 11-12 in Boston.

Skinner has asked for expert testimony at the hearings as well as comments from anyone interested in improving any aspect of highway, rail, air, or water transportation.

The department is accepting written suggestions until Sept. 1. Skinner said he hopes to have a new set of transportation policies in place before the end of his first year in the Cabinet.

Poll finds nationwide opposition to anti-abortion candidates

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans by nearly a 2-1 margin are inclined to oppose anti-abortion candidates for their state legislatures and to support legal abortion in their states, a national poll has found.

As lawmakers across the country prepare to take up new abortion laws, 38 percent of respondents to the Media General-Associated Press poll said they would be less likely to vote for a candidate who firmly opposes abortion.

The same number said abortion wouldn't matter much in their vote, while the smallest group — about two in 10 — said they would be more apt to vote for a candidate who took a strong anti-abortion position.

Moreover, 63 percent of the 1,163 adults polled said they would want abortion to be legal in their state if the U.S. Supreme Court reversed its 1973 ruling that made abortion a constitutional right and let each state make its own abortion laws.

That support for legal abortion was up slightly from 57 percent in an MG-AP poll in March. Similarly, support for the 1973 ruling in the Roe vs. Wade case was up to 59 percent, from 53 percent.

While those increases were within the poll's margin of error, similar movement in several questions indicated a slight rise in pro-choice opinion since the high court decision July 3 that permitted states to increase restrictions on abortion.

The new survey, conducted July 7-16, had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

While most respondents expressed general support for legal abortion, they were split on specific restrictions permitted in the recent Supreme Court ruling. Among those findings:

- Sixty-five percent said abortions at public hospitals should be legal, but that fell to 51 percent when respondents were asked specifically about abortions that are not required to save the mother's life. The Supreme Court said states can ban such abortions from public hospitals.

- Respondents split about evenly on whether it should be legal for public health employees to perform or assist in abortions. The court said that, too, can be barred by the states when the mother's life is not at risk.
- Respondents strongly supported mandatory pre-abortion tests to see if fetuses that are at least 20 weeks old can survive outside the womb, with 62 percent in favor. The high court said such tests can be required.
- By 54-38 percent, with 8 percent undecided, respondents said it should be legal to use public funds to counsel women about the availability of abortion. The court

Overall, 48 percent said they opposed the July 3 ruling, 43 percent favored it and 9 percent were unsure. That was a split in opinion given the margin of error.

As in previous polls, general questions on abortion produced divided views, reflecting public discomfort with an issue that pits the rights of pregnant women with concern for their fetuses.

Sixty-seven percent said a woman should be allowed to have an abortion if she wants one and her doctor agrees to it; 25 percent said not, and 8 percent were undecided. On the other hand, 42 percent said they would support a constitutional amendment to ban most abortions. Fifty-three percent opposed such an amendment and the rest were undecided.

Younger, more educated and wealthier people were more apt to support legal abortion, as were residents of the Northeast and the West and big-city dwellers. People who called themselves conservatives were far more likely to oppose abortion: Just 42 percent of conservatives supported the 1973 ruling, compared with 66 percent of moderates and 80 percent of liberals.

Candidates bone up on Spanish

AUSTIN (AP) — In next year's statewide elections, "Quiero su voto," meaning "I want your vote," may be the popular motto among candidates.

Every seventh Texas voter registered as a Democrat is Hispanic, and the many of the various candidates have been taking crash courses in Spanish to attract those 1.2 million ballots.

For example, a year ago, Democratic state Sens. Ched Edwards of Duncanville and Hugh Parmer of Fort Worth traveled to Mexico for crash courses in Spanish, the Austin American-Statesman said Sunday.

Edwards, who is running for lieutenant governor, studied the language 12 hours per day — and spoke English for only 10 minutes during a two-week program in Mexico City.

Parmer, who is challenging U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, spent four weeks in Cuernavaca, taking classes while living with a Mexican family.

"Everyone can read the demographic tea leaves," said state Rep. Dan Morales, a San Antonio Democrat running for attorney general. "Those individuals who want to be statewide Democratic nominees are going to become increasingly sensitive to the Hispanic portion of the electorate."

Last November, 600,000 Hispanics voted in Texas, surpassing the previous general election record of 493,000 in 1984.

For some, getting the Hispanic vote may be a little more difficult.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, who is vying for the Democratic nomination in the 1990 governor's race, has taken a two-week intensive course in Cuernavaca, the newspaper said.

But Mattox uses few Spanish words because his thick Texas accent makes it difficult to roll his r's, a pronunciation technique needed in many Spanish words such as "derrotar," which means to rout.

The political advantage of speaking Spanish was demonstrated when Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis charmed many South Texas voters with his proficiency in the language — and went on to win the Democratic presidential primary.

Dukakis' fluency in Spanish prompted George Bush, in the general election, to turn to his Hispanic daughter-in-law Columba, who crisscrossed Texas during the final weeks of the campaign.

Although most Texas Hispanics speak English, candidates say knowing some Spanish demonstrates genuine appreciation and insight into Hispanic culture.

"If someone has a bad record, speaking Spanish would be meaningless," said Edwards. "But I think it's important that we try to reach out, and one way to do that is to learn the language."

Cut spending first

Just because President Bush vowed back when he was candidate Bush that the words "new taxes" would never cross his lips, Congress is looking for new ways to raise money that don't look like taxes.

So our nation's leaders ponder hikes in the tax on tobacco and snuff while discarding the idea of raising cigarette taxes. And lawmakers look at repealing a tax break on employee stock ownership plans, but won't consider hiking the gasoline tax.

If the important task of moving toward a balanced budget requires new income, members of Congress and George "no new taxes" Bush should consider all possible sources — not just those that pass the duck test (if it looks like a duck, it's a duck; if it looks like a tax, it's a tax).

But we have an even better idea before Congress and the executive branch leap upon the back of some poor revenue source that doesn't look like a tax-collecting duck. Why not try cutting spending first?

Stuck with stupid laws

The founding fathers never intended that the Supreme Court would be the branch of government that made everything right. The court is intended only to be the last resort on interpretation of law.

The most important law the court must interpret is the Constitution. Yet, even in fulfilling that function, it is not the duty of the court to nail new amendments onto the Constitution simply because wise men and women think they are needed to achieve justice.

It is true that in interpreting the law, justices have some latitude to construe the law broadly or narrowly. But, essentially, the duties of the court are technical, relying on the legal scholarship to come to an informed, lawyerly judgment about what the law, enacted by others, means when applied in very specific cases.

The recent decisions of the Supreme Court suggest to us that the court is groping to return to the original function envisioned for that body by the founding fathers.

Legislative bodies made up of elected officials, not the court, are supposed to make laws. But if the laws are within the permissible bounds defined by the Constitution, narrowly interpreted, the Supreme Court seems to be saying that it will not throw out even stupid laws.

After all, democracy requires that voters who elect stupid legislators should live with the results.

More careful spending

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney understands where the real military savings can be found. That is in procurement. Defense buying will account for more than $60 billion of this year's $305 billion defense budget.

The problem, of course, is how to get at those potential savings. Any number of Defense officials before Cheney have tried to streamline the procurement process, and failed.

It is the Gordian knot of the Defense establishment. And, as Cheney noted . . . in calling for reform, Alexander the Great's fabled single-stroke solution — simply cutting the knot — does not apply to this 20th century problem.

Cheney says he has no "quick fix" for streamlining the Pentagon. But he does have a complex plan to overhaul the weapons-buying bureaucracy. And he hopes to achieve some $30 billion in total savings by the 1993 fiscal year.

Whether or not that is a realistic expectation is anybody's guess.

It is important that Congress cooperate, because defense budgets are certain to decline in the years immediately ahead. The only way to keep the nation's defense capabilities from declining as well as to spend more carefully.

Disorderly conduct?

Monroe County, Ind., Sheriff James Young says a U.S. Supreme Court decision isn't going to stop him from arresting people who burn the American flag.

Young has told his deputies to continue arresting people who deface the flag. He based his policy on two theories:

—That flag burning fits the definition of disorderly conduct under Indiana law.

—That desecrating an American flag violates the First Amendment freedom of expression of U.S. citizens who revere the flag as a symbol of their country.

Young believes he's on solid ground with the disorderly conduct law because few public acts provoke a more violent response than defacing an American flag.

Young also defends his policy on constitutional grounds, arguing that the flag is a "collective expression" of public patriotism that should be protected under the First Amendment.

Young may be stretching the point a bit too far. But the U.S. Supreme Court also has been known to do that occasionally.

It looks good, but can high tech win a war?

By MARC SCHWARZ
Staff Writer

A "stealth taxi" no more, the B-2 bomber lifted its wings into the wild blue yonder this past week — for about two hours. Then the sleek, ominous "batplane" settled back down and retired to its hanger, content to wait out coming Congressional battles over its continued existence.

Congress is rightly concerned about the $500 million bomber. The Air Force wants 132 of the planes, making it America's most expensive weapon, yet its usefulness has yet to be fully determined. The stealth is designed to sneak in under hostile radar, deliver its lethal payload, and wing its way out of enemy airspace.

On paper, the theory sounds fine. But in reality, the B-2 is able only to fly at subsonic speeds, carries virtually no defenses against other aircraft or land-based military installations, and has a rather small space available for its payload. In other words, it can't run and it can't fight, and it doesn't pack much of a punch.

The B-2 is an example of the problems inherent in contracting with civilian companies to provide for the national defense. Private corporations are really bound, both to their stockholders and by the system under which they operate, to turn a profit. And, unfortunately, it's been proven all too easy for contractors to dupe the government, turn a larger profit than warranted, and set costs a bit higher than originally promised.

Politicians win too, after all. They win friends in industrial circles who can hire them as consultants after they leave office. And the more money spent, the more jobs generated, the more pork barrels greased, the more votes secured for the next election.

Around the rim

Everyone wins — everyone, that is, except the state of the nation's defense. If, God forbid, we should ever be forced to summon our energies for another military conflict, I fear we will see the effect of all the cut corners, cost overruns, and graft. I fear the mighty "arsenal of democracy" our politicians assure us exists will rapidly and inconspicuously fall apart, at the incalculable cost of American lives.

I have heard facts and figures indicating NATO forces would be incapable of waging a conventional war against the Warsaw Pact for more than three weeks before equipment failures and breakdowns took their toll, and left our conventional forces in shambles. NATO would then have no alternative but to surrender or use nuclear weaponry.

It's actually quite simple to understand. With the increasingly complicated and technical nature of modern weapons, it becomes increasingly more difficult and eventually impossible to repair equipment in the field. And modern, computer-run, electronic arms, as indestructible as they might prove to enemy missiles and guns, have computer "brains" that can be totally disrupted by the slightest speck of dust.

Defense contractors favor more complicated, sensitive equipment because it costs more, and enables them to turn a larger profit. But in wartime such weaponry is virtually useless.

What contractors don't know, and bureaucratic generals have probably forgotten, is that in order to win a war, your forces must conquer and hold the ground. Air cover is valuable but not necessary. Naval support is helpful, but not imperative. Napoleon fell from power because of Waterloo, not Trafalgar.

The primary concern of the armed forces must be to maintain a well-trained, well-equipped infantry. All other concerns, while they should not be neglected, must remain only secondary considerations. The navy and the air force, except those portions reserved specifically for home defense, must be used to complement the infantry in its offensive capacity.

The wars fought in the future — and, unfortunately, they will occur — will be of an entirely different type than previous wars. Trench warfare along the Somme and established, solid fronts are now things of the past. The new warfare will resemble more closely what we faced in Vietnam — fluid, evasive actions coupled with quasi-guerrilla activity to break morale. We proved unable to successfully fight that type of war then, and if the B-2 is any indication, we can't fight one now.

The British and Israeli armies are better equipped to fight the new style of war, and of the two, the British is the more able, notwithstanding the greater field experience of the Israelis. Perhaps improving the officer exchange program between ourselves and the Brits will teach future generals the value of mobile, agile infantry.

And while our officers are there, perhaps they could interest the British in an only slightly used stealth bomber, at a bargain price of under a billion dollars (maybe).

Equation: One politician one crook

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

Looking back, I really should have paid more attention when my teachers attempted to teach me mathematics.

I'm not certain why I never had much interest in math when I was in high school. I do recall, however, my high-school algebra teacher, Miss Fleming, was quite attractive and I suppose I paid more attention to watching her every move at the blackboard than I did to mixing "a" and "b" with a bunch of numbers.

These are complicated times in which we live, and I find, as one of the mathematically impaired, I'm having trouble dealing with issues that involve numbers.

Let's take the scandal at HUD, the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Jack Kemp, HUD's secretary, was quoted recently as saying the waste and influence-peddling that occurred in his department during the previous administration totaled somewhere near 2 billion dollars.

My first problem is trying to understand how much money that actually is.

I know it's a lot, enough to meet the payroll of a professional basketball team, but how many zeroes does 2 billion have?

I called a banker friend of mine to ask. I figured he would know since he probably turns down that much in loans every week.

"You just start with a '2,'" he said, "and add zeroes until your hand begins to hurt."

The reason I like to know how to write out 2 billion dollars is that I would like to find out just how much the HUD heist cost me, the individual taxpayer.

I suppose I could make a rough estimate of what I lost in the rampant influence peddling and taking-care-of-buddies network.

I'm going to guess $150. It could be more or less than that, but $150 is a nice, uncomplicated figure with which to work. Think what all I could have bought with the 150 big ones if people like Samuel Pierce, Reagan's HUD secretary, hadn't stolen it from me.

I could have bought a few nice items of clothing. If I went to K mart I probably could have purchased an entire outfit.

If I had gone to my local Ralph Lauren dealer, I probably couldn't have walked out with anything more than a pair of socks, but that would have been better than handing over the money to some crooked politician.

A hundred and fifty big ones also would buy a pretty good dinner for two in a fancy restaurant, unless you got a little crazy and started ordering expensive wines. To stay under the $150, you should order only wines you can pronounce like "Gallo Thun-der-bird."

A hundred and fifty would also buy a fairly large amount of groceries, a nice tune-up for your car and maybe a few new hoses.

It would pay for subscriptions to several magazines, 150 cigars at $1 each, a bunch of golf balls, maybe even a trip to Dollywood, or you could give it to somebody in an urban area who needs housing, which is where it should have gone in the first place.

Having said all that, I now realize algebra really isn't that difficult when you use it relative to government fraud.

The formula is easy: (a) If you don't keep a close eye on politicians and bureaucrats, the result is (b) they'll steal you blind.

Farmers search for engine parts

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — Investigators stepped up a hunt for pieces of the rear engine from United's ill-fated DC-10, training infrared cameras on cornfields 60 miles from the crash site and asking farmers to search their land.

At Sioux Gateway Airport, officials on Sunday were painstakingly reassembling the tail section of Flight 232 in hopes of determining what caused the jet to lose hydraulic power and tumble out of control across the runway. In Denver, meanwhile, a United official told about 200 people at a service for survivors and victims that it was time for healing after Wednesday's crash.

According to a list compiled with information from United, relatives and employers, 105 people were confirmed dead and five were still listed as missing. Another 186 passengers survived the crash, United said.

Hospital officials said 40 people remained hospitalized.

Marital tiff escalates to brawl

BOSTON (AP) — A husband-wife tiff aboard an airliner escalated to a fight among several passengers and led to the arrest of six people from the Continental Airlines plane at Logan International Airport.

"They had a little brawl," state police Cpl. Joseph Howley said of the weekend incident aboard an MD-80 jet with 146 passengers aboard.

but said the husband struggled with police who arrested him in the airport terminal.

Facing arraignment today on a variety of charges are Steven Sacks-Wilner, 39, attorney for Republicans in the New Jersey Senate, and his wife, Joane, 37. Also arrested were a Medford, Mass., family, Frank J. Federico, 50, his wife, Camella, 48, and their son John, 22, and John's girlfriend, Lauren Belmonte.

"It started out as a husband and wife that were sort of running around the plane and making demands on the crew and being a general nuisance and hollering," Howley said.

Officials available today were unable to say if blows were exchanged on the flight Saturday, Sacks-Wilner is charged with interfering with a flight crew, being a disorderly person and three counts of assault on a police officer for allegedly resisting officers at the gate. The others were charged with interfering with a flight crew.

Hearin abduction still unsolved

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A year after a wealthy woman was abducted after a bridge party, authorities don't know whether she is alive but they promise surprises when a lawyer goes on trial in connection with her disappearance.

Although the kidnapers never made any specific demands, Hearin paid a total of $1 million to the 12 franchisers after receiving the note from his wife. Hearin's worth is estimated at between $100 million and $200 million.

Although the kidnapers never made any specific demands, Hearin paid a total of $1 million to the 12 franchisers after receiving the note from his wife. Hearin's worth is estimated at between $100 million and $200 million.

Annie Laurie Hearin, then 72, disappeared from her Jackson home on July 26, 1988. Her husband of 49 years, Robert, reported her missing.

Newton Alfred Winn, a St. Petersburg, Fla., lawyer, faces federal charges of conspiracy to kidnap, extortion by mail and perjury in connection with Mrs. Hearin's disappearance. He is to stand trial Aug. 28 in Hattiesburg.

According to information released so far, Winn's arrest stemmed from statements by an unnamed woman who says he paid her $500 to dye her hair and otherwise disguise herself, travel to Atlanta and mail what is believed to be the Aug. 10 note from Mrs. Hearin.

The only word from Mrs. Hearin or her abductors has been a vague ransom note left at the scene and a blood-stained note

Israeli court rules on question of Jewishness

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Supreme Court ruled today that the government must recognize Jewish conversions conducted abroad by Reform and Conservative rabbis, deciding an issue that has put many U.S. Jews at odds with Israel.

The 4-1 decision immediately caused friction in Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Cabinet, where religious parties protested and one faction threatened to resign.

Orthodox rabbis. The change has been fought by Conservative and Reform rabbis, whose followers constitute a majority of more than 5 million U.S. Jews but who have few adherents in Israel.

The Reform and Conservative Jews contend the Orthodox proposal would symbolically excommunicate them from Judaism and alienate U.S. Jews from Israel.

In a second decision, the court unanimously rejected an appeal to allow Reform rabbis to perform marriages in Israel. That decision upheld an Orthodox monopoly on conducting religious weddings.

Both of today's rulings were linked to the issue of "Who is a Jew?" Israeli Orthodox Jews have sought to narrow that definition under the Law of Return.

Rabbis estimate there are more than 10,000 conversions a year in the United States, nearly all non-Orthodox.

The Supreme Court, headed by Chief Justice Meir Shamgar, made today's decision in a ruling on appeals by 12 U.S. immigrants and one from Brazil. They were denied Israeli citizenship papers by the Interior Ministry, which is controlled by the ultra-Orthodox Shas Party.

The court's 17-page ruling said a 1965 Israeli law did not entitle the government to decide the validity of conversions by different Jewish groups.

Religious Affairs Minister Zevulun Hammer reacted to the ruling by pledging to renew a political campaign for a narrower definition of who is a Jew.

Although opposition politicians have in the past boycotted entire sessions of parliament, they had never resigned.

Arafat: Israelis talked with PLO

ROME (AP) — PLO chief Yasser Arafat says in an interview published today that Israel has opened direct contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Arafat was quoted by the Rome daily Il Messaggero as saying a member of the PLO's executive committee met recently in Vienna with an envoy of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

He did not identify the two officials or give any details of the talks.

The Israeli government has repeatedly denied it is carrying out direct or indirect negotiations with the PLO, which it describes as a terrorist organization intent on the destruction of the Jewish state.

Arafat was quoted as saying that Shamir himself had met with Palestinian leaders in the occupied territories who are tied to the PLO. He showed the interviewer what he described as a written report about a 45-minute meeting on July 12 between Shamir and Palestinians.

Shamir's spokesman, Yossi Ahimeir, has said the prime minister held two meetings with Palestinians from the occupied territories this month. Israeli officials refuse to say who the Palestinians are.

Record number of women win

TOKYO (AP) — Women, both candidates and voters, played a prominent role in ending the governing party's control of parliament's upper house and driving Prime Minister Souseke Uno from office.

A record 22 women won seats in Sunday's election as female voters rallied against a new 3 percent sales tax that daily cuts into their buying power and women's groups denounced Uno over allegations that he kept paid mistresses.

The previous record number of women winners in upper house balloting was 10. Elections are held every three years for half of the upper house's 252 seats. In Sunday's voting, the Liberal Democrats lost their upper house majority for the first time since the party was formed in 1955.

Opposition politicians resign

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — All 106 opposition members in the lower house of parliament submitted their resignations today, saying a controversial foreign arms deal had destroyed confidence in Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's government.

As deputies from Gandhi's Congress Party chanted "shame, shame," the lawmakers from the 12 opposition parties handed their letters of resignation to Speaker Balram Jakhar.

By giving up their seats, opposition leaders said, they hoped the billion-dollar deal would be a major issue in the next general election, which Gandhi must call by January.

"Never before has the office of the prime minister been brought into disrepute as under the present incumbent," said V. P. Singh, leader of the People's Party. "We were all elected by the people and now we are going back to them for their verdict on this issue."

Rodeo cops

AMSTERDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Cattle roundups do not appear anywhere in the training manuals for city police officers. "I don't think the academy prepared us for this," said Carl Rust after he and his partner helped round up about 30 cows. Rust and his partner, Dave Bardascini, were not the only ones surprised to see the cows Saturday morning, wandering the streets of this city of 21,000 people located 40 miles west of Albany.

"At first I saw a couple of cows, and I thought I was seeing something," said Nora DiCaprio, whose yard became an impromptu cow pasture.

The cows, owned by Joseph F. Korona of nearby Fort Johnson, knocked down a pasture fence after being frightened by three dogs and headed for the city, according to Korona's son, Joseph J. Korona.

Rust said he and Bardascini were dispatched to a city neighborhood after police received a report of large animals walking on the road.

"We got the call, and the dispatcher told us it was one cow. And we turned the corner and it was about 20 to 22 cows," Rust said.

Rust said the cows began running through backyards and then split into two groups, with about 13 of them heading for the Amsterdam Municipal Golf Course.

It eventually took the Korona family and some friends six hours to round up the animals.

Thunder mug collector

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Things have panned out nicely for Norma Grundy's collection.

As a nurse, she was no stranger to the bedpan; as an administrator, she is surrounded by them.

"I came by it honestly because I'm a nurse," Ms. Grundy said. "You know, they're fun to look at."

Ms. Grundy, nursing director and clinic administrator of the mental health division at the University of California, Irvine, has lined her office walls with 44 bed pans of varying sizes, colors and composition.

Some are decorated with flowers, small stuffed animals and decoupage poems. Others hang bare, including plastic models of the modern variety in red, white and blue.

"I have the most fantastic collection you can imagine," she said. "It's fun looking for them and adding to the collection."

They may be called bedpans by most people today, Ms. Grundy said, but those who used them decades ago affectionately referred to them as "chamber pots," "thunder mugs" and "chambers of delight."

Ms. Grundy, 58, credits her father for starting the collection, but the display came from a colleague.

"One of the psychiatrists on the staff thought my office wasn't bright enough and brought in an 18th-century French chamber pot, and that started the office decoration," she said.

Ms. Grundy's collection was put to good use at a university chancellor's retirement party four years ago, when she and her students wore hospital gowns and body stockings while carrying the bedpans.

"We used them for drums and we won first place for the best costumes," she said.

Many of her bedpans have come from people who knew of her collection.

"I got one from someone who was tearing down their house and found it in a closet, and another from a student who saw it on top of a trash can," she said.

Expert: Flee the nasty maitre d'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nothing — not a soup spill, a burned filet mignon or a cockroach crawling through the salad — turns a restaurant meal into a disaster quite like a nasty headwaiter, says professional diner John Campbell. His advice: Don't take it sitting down. Complain to the manager. Or simply walk out.

"The degree of humiliation to which a repulsive maitre d' subjects his patrons and their guests can be the most unforgettable part of the dining experience," says Campbell. "Unfortunately, it happens in some of our better restaurants."

Campbell has been rating lodgings and restaurants for the American Automobile Association for the past 15 years. He says restaurants in New York doubtless are the worst for sneering, snarling headwaiters whose unlucky customers forgot to slip them a sawbuck.

The bearded, Australian-born Campbell, 52, says the hapless victims of sadistic headwaiters "can just get up and leave" if they've been seated next to the kitchen door, insulted and forgotten.

"You don't have to eat bad food, and you don't have to be stuck suffering this self-punishment," he said in an interview.

When the atmosphere turns brutish, Campbell takes the offending headwaiter aside and asks,

"What seems to be going wrong here? What is my problem and what is your problem?"

If the situation can't be resolved through quiet reasoning, he says, "I would leave." But don't forget to complain to the restaurant's owner or manager.

"He has a desperate interest in the health of his property, and he will listen," Campbell said. "If you tell him you had an unpleasant experience with Monsieur Jacques, he's likely to say, 'Really?' and Monsieur Jacques might not be there next time."

Campbell, who is based in New York, is one of 60 full-time, professionally trained field representatives who are rating restaurants for AAA, the 30-million-member motoring and travel service organization based in suburban Falls Church, Va.

At a news conference Thursday, AAA officials announced they are going nationwide with their "diamond" rating service, which awards five diamonds for the highest-ranked luxury restaurants to a single diamond for informal, family-style eateries serving "good but unpretentious dishes."

No fewer than 72 rating guidelines, developed with the help of Cornell University's School of Hotel Management, will be applied to nearly 7,000 restaurants annually in the United States, Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean for inclusion in AAA's 1990 tour books.

Officials said that means Campbell and his colleagues will eat an average of 10 to 12 meals in different restaurants every week. Each will be scored on everything from parking lots to table flowers, from the taste of the hors d'oeuvres to how discreetly the waiter delivers the bill.

"It is one of the most onerous jobs in the world, dining out for a living," said Thomas R. Crosby, the AAA's managing director for national travel.

Campbell, interviewed over lunch at a five-diamond French restaurant in downtown Washington, agrees that all that eating and drinking can be a health hazard. When time came for dessert, he passed up the chocolate mousse for a dish of strawberries.

Some of his fellow judges have quit because of gustatory burnout, he says, and one turned into an alcoholic after eight years on the restaurant circuit.

"You can drink so much and eat so much good food — and bad food — that you become poisoned, and your health starts to deteriorate," Campbell said.

"You have to jog a lot and swim a lot. You have to be picky. You learn to stop eating after one bite. You don't have to clean your plate, no matter what your mother said about all those starving children in China."

NOW convention votes to amend Bill of Rights

CINCINNATI (AP) — The National Organization for Women said it wants to amend the Bill of Rights to include abortion rights and agreed to explore forming a new political party for women.

NOW President Molly Yard called "historic" the passage of a resolution for a "Bill of Rights for the 21st Century" at the group's convention Sunday.

It urged an expansion of the Bill of Rights to include freedom from government interference in abortion or birth control. It also said women should have the right to receive public funds for abortions, birth control and pregnancy services.

Other parts of the resolution dealt with discrimination and violence against women, living standards and the environment.

"We're fighting for women's individual rights," Ms. Yard said in an interview. "I feel we are in a battle."

The convention on Saturday sponsored a march in support of abortion rights that attracted about 3,000 supporters. About 1,500 attended the convention itself, which ran Friday through Sunday.

The political party resolution called for NOW to form a commission to investigate the possibility of forming a new political party "dedicated to equality for women" because of "the failure of both major political parties to address women's needs."

The proposal reflected the NOW membership's "total disgust" with the Democratic and Republican parties, Ms. Yard said.

NOW called for a national march in Washington Nov. 12 to protest the Supreme Court's ruling giving the states the power to restrict abortions.

Mother tired of strangers' cruel stares

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, age 11, is seriously overweight. She is an adorable child who is bright, outgoing and has a terrific personality, and the people who know her think she's wonderful.

This child has suffered a lot from her peers, who at times can be very cruel, but adults are the cruelest of all. When we are out for the evening or shopping, adults actually stop and stare, point and whisper. Each time, I cringe, then I get angry. They look at ME with such expressions of disgust on their faces, as though to say, "How could you have allowed this to happen to that child?"

Abby, strangers do not know that I have had my daughter to more doctors than I can count, including a year and a half of therapy. We joined Overeaters Anonymous and we still live the 12-step program in our daily lives. (I have always been overweight, too.) We go to the spa and either ride bikes or go for long walks several times a week, and watch what we eat, avoiding cholesterol, sugar and fats.

Our society is so obsessed with being thin that overweight people are abused even after death. One local headline read a few years ago: "The Naked Body of a 200-Pound Woman Found at the Bottom of a Mine Shaft!" Never have I read the weight of a THIN victim in bold print. That poor woman was a victim in more ways than one — and so were her loved ones.

Abby, please tell your readers that overweight people have feelings, too. Most are just like thin people — loving, kind and caring. — HEARTBROKEN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You are speaking for many. Perhaps those cruel or simply thoughtless people who stare, point or make fun of overweight people will see this and change their ways. I hope so.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to thank the person who sewed two pennies in the lining of a silk suit I purchased to wear to the funeral of my beloved mother. She passed away last January. We were very close, and talked on the phone or saw each other every day of our lives.

During the funeral services, my sorrow was beyond comprehension. When I jammed my hand into the pocket, I felt something in the lining. I finally worked out the two pennies someone had sewn in there to wish a stranger good luck.

It gave me such a wonderful feeling, I had to smile through my tears. May I use your column to thank that person? — LORETTA HILLIARD, MANSFIELD, OHIO

DEAR LORETTA: You just did. Please accept my condolences on the loss of your beloved mother, and add my 2 cents' worth of "good luck" to match those of the anonymous stranger.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I hear about a man who asks his wife to pack his suitcase for him, I'm reminded of the following story:

A man called his wife from his office and told her that he was going on a weekend fishing trip, so would she please pack his overnight case.

Then he added, "And please don't forget to put in my nice new robe." After he returned from the trip, he said to his wife, "I thought I asked you to pack my robe — I couldn't find it."

His wife replied, "I put it in your tackle box." — LUCILLE R. HENDERSON

DEAR ABBY: Re: Men wearing wedding rings: As our wedding date approached, the issue of wedding rings came up.

My fiancé asked, "Do you want me to wear a wedding ring?"

I answered, "If you don't want to wear one, then neither will I."

The idea of his bride not wearing a wedding ring was shocking!

We had a double-ring wedding ceremony. I put a ring on is finger, and he has never taken it off.

SANTA FE, N.M. — From the land of record heat waves during the past month or so, an afternoon thunderstorm left more than a summer shower. Just east of Santa Fe on I-25, motorists were treated to a winter scene. Several inches of a wet snow-hail mix fell in a very short time, blanketing a four-mile stretch.

Elks to vote on female members

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — The national Elks organization will consider this week whether to welcome women into the all-male preserve, but the proposal's sponsor says he wasn't motivated by a desire for equality between the sexes.

Retired Air Force Lt. Col. Hal Detrick says his resolution, approved by the Jonesboro lodge, was prompted instead by the fraternal organization's declining membership and the resignation from the local chapter of a federal judicial nominee under Senate scrutiny.

"I could see then that any young lawyer or young aspiring politician who might aspire to be anything within the federal government might be reluctant to become a member of the Elks, and we do too much good work to make it an albatross around any young person's neck," Detrick, 67, said last week during an interview.

The resolution is to be submitted Thursday at the 125th national convention of the 1.5 million-member Benevolent and Protective Order of the Elks in New Orleans. It would delete the word "male" from the group's national membership requirements, which specify "a male citizen of the United States of America."

Did Detrick's proposal, approved by the Jonesboro chapter by a two-thirds vote in March, arouse emotion?

"Passion? No. Words? Yes," Detrick said. "The first person who talked to me said, 'Hal, what are you trying to do?' And I explained exactly what I was trying to do."

In St. George, Utah, a woman who was rejected for Elks membership filed in 1987 a sex discrimination lawsuit, which still is pending. And while the Elks do have some black members nationally, several California lodges threatened legal action if rules were not changed to allow more minority representation in the group's 2,300 lodges.

No woman has tried to join the 90-year-old Jonesboro organization, which also has no black members, said Jonesboro Exalted Ruler Clyde Harcrow, 56, the equivalent of local president.

Candidates must be nominated by a member and undergo background checks and interviews, with questions that might include whether the nominees use illegal drugs or believe in the U.S. Constitution and God, Harcrow said.

Votes on prospective members are by secret ballot.

Detrick's resolution says Elks membership policies were subject to "undeserved criticism" during the February 1988 confirmation hearings for Stephen M. Reasoner of Jonesboro, now a federal judge.

Reasoner's memberships in the Jonesboro Elks and Masonic lodges were criticized by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who accused the organizations of discriminating against women and blacks.

In a letter to Metzenbaum disclosing his resignation from both groups, Reasoner wrote: "I want to reiterate that I do not do this out of a belief that these organizations are racially discriminatory."

But, he said, it was preferable to resign "to remove this issue" from consideration of his nomination.

Detrick's resolution also says that "a member of this state's congressional delegation has shown reluctance to risk unfavorable publicity if he should pursue membership in this lodge."

Detrick would not identify the congressman. Jonesboro is represented by Democrat Bill Alexander, who said through a spokesman that he is not a member of the Elks and did not recall seeking membership.

The 1,300 members of the Jonesboro Elks — down from about 2,000 a decade ago — provide scholarships each year to several Arkansas State University students, raise money for a state-run center serving developmentally disabled children, foot the bill for a hot-lunch program for senior citizens, and deliver birthday cakes to nursing homes, Harcrow said.

Harcrow said he will vote for Detrick's resolution at the national convention because a majority of his members favored it.

Neither Harcrow nor Detrick would predict whether it would pass, but Detrick said it might be difficult to persuade members to change the rules.

"When it comes time to vote for or against this, it's a secret ballot, just like when we vote on a prospective member," Detrick said.

"Several members since I made the proposal have said, 'Hey, it's coming sooner or later. We might as well do it now.' And it's better to do it rather than be forced to do it."

American hushes critics with British Open victory

TROON, Scotland (AP) — An American has won the British Open at last.

All that was missing was the apple pie.

The flag was there on Sunday, the Stars and Stripes hanging proudly beside the silver claret jug that goes to the winner of the oldest of all golf tournaments.

Motherhood was even in the offing, as new champion Mark Calavecchia talked about his pregnant wife back in West Palm Beach, Fla.

"I called her right after the final hole and she was crying up a storm," the 29-year-old Calavecchia said. "I was just about ready to ask, and she said, 'No, I haven't had the baby yet.' I thought, 'If I sent her into labor with this.' But it could happen any minute. It's time to get home."

The home hole of Royal Troon was where Calavecchia added his name to the list of Open champions by beating Australians Greg Norman and Wayne Grady in a four-hole playoff after they had finished four rounds tied at 13-under-par 275.

With Norman picking up after hitting out of bounds to finish another near miss in a major, and Grady bogeying three of the playoff holes after leading the tournament for almost two rounds, Calavecchia became the first American winner of the Open since Tom Watson in 1983.

He said he was proud to end the losing streak.

"I thought about it quite a bit," Calavecchia said. "Practicing before the playoff started, I said to myself, 'Man, it's been a long time since an American won it.' I had to get an American name back on that trophy. I had to do it for our Tour.

"I know there are a lot of happy people back in the U.S."

To make this Yankee Doodle Dandy dream become reality, Calavecchia had to overcome nearly as many obstacles as Washington did at Valley Forge. He started the day three strokes behind Grady, with five players between him and the top of one of the most tightly bunched fields in recent Open history.

Alcott wins by three

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Amy Alcott knows she's a great golfer. Just check her record. Better yet, just ask her.

After posting the lowest four-round score this year on the LPGA Tour to easily win the Boston Five Classic by three strokes over Cathy Marino on Sunday, Alcott said:

"I feel like I've got 50 more wins in me. I don't question that."

"I just played fantastic."

"I was born to play golf."

And, needing two more victories to reach the 30 that will make her the 12th member of the LPGA Hall of Fame, the 15-year tour veteran said:

"I wouldn't be surprised at all" to do that this year.

All that would sound annoyingly arrogant if the 33-year-old Alcott didn't play golf as well as she did. Instead, it comes off as self-assurance.

"I don't care what people think," she said of those who wondered why she got off to a slow start this year. "I care what I think. I like me."

Alcott shot 4-under-par 68s in each of the four rounds. Her total bested the 274 posted by Lori Garbacz in the Tucson Open and Nancy Lopez in the Mazda LPGA Classic. And she finished just four strokes off the LPGA record of 20-under 268 set in 1985 by Lopez.

Alcott broke the tournament record of 274 set last year by Colleen Walker.

And, until she double-bogeyed the final hole, she had 20 birdies and just two bogeys, both at the 380-yard ninth hole, in her previous 62 holes at the 6,008-yard, par-72 Tara Ferrocourt Country Club.

The short course puts a premium on accurate shots rather than long ones.

DANVERS, Mass. — Amy Alcott of Pacific Palisades, Calif. reacts after chipping up to the 18th green Sunday in the final round of the Boston Five Classic. Alcott won $52,000 by winning the tournament.

"Once she's out in the lead, she's not going to make any mistakes, especially on this golf course," said Marino, who finished at 275 with a final-round 68. "She's such a smart player."

"I knew if I went out and played my game and made some birdies, there was nobody who could beat me," Alcott said. "The key to my game is my guts and how I think, not to sound egocentric."

Alcott began the day at 12 under, two strokes ahead of Shirley Furlong and three ahead of Marino, Patty Sheehan and Jody Rosenthal.

Alcott birdied the second hole to take a three-stroke lead that never decreased. The lead peaked at three.

Bowler rolls 300 game in Olympic Festival

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — There was revenge and there was perfection. There were a few surprises and some strong performances from heavy favorites.

Most of all, there were athletes in 20 sports getting the U.S. Olympic Festival off to a rousing start.

For wrestler Kenny Monday, Sunday was perfect. On Sunday, bowler Gordon Vadakin was perfect.

Monday, the 1988 Olympic champion, not only got revenge for his loss in the U.S. Open, but he also beat another Olympic champion, Dave Schultz. He did all that just to get into the festival freestyle field.

"I'm glad it's over," Monday said. "Now it's time to get these other guys out of the way."

Vadakin rolled the first 300 game of the festival in men's doubles competition, but his feat only helped his team get a bronze medal.

Figure skater Paul Wylie, a 1988 Olympian, got a silver medal, but it was not what he sought. The heavy favorite finished behind Mark Mitchell.

Kristi Yamaguchi easily won the women's gold, as expected, sweeping first place on all seven judges' cards in both the original and long programs.

Seven national amateur boxing champions advanced to the finals. The one who failed was super heavyweight Eddie Donerison Jr., who lost to Golden Gloves champion Larry Donald, a 227-pound shoe salesman from Cincinnati who began boxing just two years ago.

OKLAHOMA CITY — Brian Lonon (left) of Army-Fort Hood reacts to being hit by Ricky Jones of Augusta, Ga. during boxing action in the 112 pound class at the U.S. Olympic Festival Sunday. Lonon won a 5-0 decision.

The other national champions who won Sunday were Frank Pena, Brian Lonon and Chris Byrd. The four who advanced Saturday were Tony Gonzales, Raul Marquez, Ray Lathon and Javier Alvarez.

The biggest winner had to be Monday, who thrilled the fans at Stillwater — he wrestled for Oklahoma State — by storming through the mini-tournament "just like Pac-Man. Eat 'em up, one at a time." He moved into the 163-pound festival draw with four victories, beating 1984 Olympic champ Schultz 6-3 in his second match.

Monday pinned Charles Royer in 27 seconds, while Schultz beat his student, NCAA winner David Lee of Wisconsin, 4-2 in the opening matches. Then Monday dominated Schultz from the beginning of their meeting.

"I wrestled real poor, real poor," Schultz said. "I don't have anything to say good about the way I wrestled."

Monday then beat Lee and Eddie Urbano, a former NCAA champion from Arizona State who ousted Monday from the U.S. Open when Monday injured his tongue.

"I wanted to wrestle him again," Monday said. "He beat me when I wasn't at my best."

Vadakin was at his best — as good as you can be on a bowling lane. It was his 11th perfect.

"This is pretty unbelievable," Vadakin said. "This is the most meaningful of any of my 300s."

Wylie slipped off the U.S. world team in the national championships last February. He then went back to Harvard and didn't skate until recently.

His rustiness showed here and he was second to Mitchell, the 1986 U.S. junior champion.

"The silver is a disappointment to me," Wylie said. "There are many other festivals to come."

There certainly should be other titles to come for Yamaguchi, 18, who is ranked second in singles and holds the U.S. pairs title, with Rudi Galindo. She won here with a new program.

"The program wasn't fully in, with all the choreography, until three weeks before this competition," she said. "I just wanted to come and try out the new program and see how it worked. I'm pretty happy with it but I know I have a lot of work to do."

April Sargent and Russ Witherby won the ice dance. The pairs title went to Calla Urbanski and Mark Naylor.

Lonon, a four-time U.S. amateur champion, was the most impressive of the boxers. He won after a telephone argument with his wife, who is expecting the couple's second child any day.

"I wasn't there when the other child was born, either," Lonon said. "But I think that's good in a way. It makes her strong. I didn't want her to rely on me. I believe a strong woman makes a strong man."

The strongest men's basketball team has been the North, which is 2-0 under coach Jud Heathcote of Michigan State. The East women won both of their games.

Andretti bumps way to victory

TORONTO (AP) — Michael Andretti was so close to victory and, suddenly, there was Emerson Fittipaldi again.

Andretti had not won an Indy-car race since the season finale at Miami in 1987, with a rash of mechanical problems and accidents keeping him out of Victory Circle for 23 races.

And here he was just two laps from victory in Sunday's Molson-Indy bumping wheels with Fittipaldi in the first turn on the 1.78-mile, 11-turn temporary circuit in downtown Toronto.

Fittipaldi, who had won four of the last six races and was second last week, cut a 9-second deficit with 23 laps remaining to nothing as the leaders headed into the first turn on lap 102, one lap from the end of the 183-mile race.

"I think I had used my tires too much," the 26-year-old Andretti said. "In the last 10 laps I was doing everything I could just to keep it (the car) straight."

"I didn't know he was there," Andretti said. "He was just a spot in my mirror before that. He must have had a lot of straightaway speed."

Fittipaldi tried to squeeze his Penske PC18-Chevrolet on the inside of Andretti's Lola-Chevrolet.

Andretti moved over slightly and his right rear tire touched Fittipaldi's left front, nearly sending the Brazilian into the concrete wall. Fittipaldi spun slowly into a runoff area as Andretti straightened out his car and went on to his eighth career victory.

"It was just our day, other than that," Andretti said. "I was real sure something broke in my car (in the Fittipaldi incident), but it was fine."

The 42-year-old Fittipaldi, a two-time Formula One champion and winner of this year's Indianapolis 500, got over his anger quickly after Andretti apologized to him, saying he didn't see Fittipaldi and taking the blame for the latest in a series of Indy-car bumping incidents among the top competitors.

"He apologized and I believe him," Fittipaldi said. "I'm happy, with all the circumstances, to finish second."

The Brazilian now leads Rick Mears, who finished fifth Sunday, 141-102 in the CART-PPG season points race.

Danny Sullivan, back most of the way from a broken arm suffered in practice at Indianapolis in May, wound up third, one lap behind the leaders.

The elder Andretti, running immediately behind Fabi, said there was no yellow flag when he came around for the ninth lap, and he thought Guerrero's car had been removed.

A crowd of 61,156 watched the race in sweltering heat and humidity.

"Fabi just moved away and there it was in front of me," Andretti said. "I assumed it was moved away. It was a real big surprise it was there. I don't agree that he was in a safe place. You cannot tell me that was a safe spot, but at least leave a standing (yellow) flag."

Pokes prepping for scrimmage

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys begin their first workout in pads without Tom Landry today, when new coach Jimmy Johnson takes a look at what he's got in an afternoon workout in preparation for a Wednesday scrimmage against the Los Angeles Raiders.

Rookies and some veterans reported to the 30th Dallas Cowboys' training camp on Sunday but quarterback Steve Walsh, the number one pick in the NFL's supplemental draft was among the no-shows.

Johnson said Walsh, whom he coached in college at Miami, wouldn't be in camp until he had a contract. Walsh is asking a contract similar to the $11.037 million which top draft pick Troy Aikman received.

"I would hope that we would be close to signing Steve by the middle of the week," Johnson said. "One way or the other, he won't be here until he signs."

Walsh said the Cowboys have received offers from four teams.

"There is still a chance of a trade and we prefer" to do something now if something is going to happen," Johnson said. "I'd still say the percentages are leaning toward him being with the Dallas Cowboys."

Johnson added "We've had three offers and a fourth we didn't entertain. I have no idea what's going to happen but I do know the quality of Steve Walsh. We know what he's capable of doing."

The Cowboys picked Walsh after Atlanta, which had the selection ahead of Dallas, passed.

"I'm still in a fog why Atlanta didn't get him," Johnson said. Johnson said most of the Cowboys' draft picks would be signed by the time Dallas scrimmages the Los Angeles Raiders on Wednesday.

However, he said the talks with veteran quarterback Steve Pelluer were still at a stalemate.

"We feel we can do all we can do to sign Steve," Johnson said. Pelluer is asking some $750,000 per year and the Cowboys have offered $450,000. Pelluer has said he would accept a trade to another team.

The Cowboys have to sign Pelluer before they can trade him.

The Cowboys will under physicals on Monday morning then plunge into a Monday afternoon workout in full pads.

"We need to evaluate everybody in pads," Johnson said. "A running back may be the best in the world running against air but terrible at breaking tackles."

"The same with linebackers. We want to see how they close and hit."

"We'll evaluate it after it's over," he said.

Slumping O's lose fifth straight

By The Associated Press
If the rest of the American League East is going to catch up with the Baltimore Orioles, now is the time.

The Orioles' lead, larger than anyone could believe last week, isn't so big anymore. Cleveland and Milwaukee are on the move, and so are Boston and Toronto.

Baltimore lost its fifth straight game Sunday, matching its longest skid of the season. Jose Canseco's home run helped the Oakland Athletics win 3-2 and complete a four-game sweep.

American League

"We've been through this streak before, and we came out of it all right," Manager Frank Robinson said.

The Orioles have lost their first four games of their longest road trip in 15 years, a coast-to-coast swing of 14 games. Coming off their first sweep of the season, Baltimore begins a three-game series Tuesday in Minnesota and follows with visits to Kansas City and Boston.

While Baltimore has slumped and its 7 1/2-game lead has slipped, the rest of the division is creeping up. The Indians cut their deficit from 10 games to six, and Toronto is also within six games.

Oakland remained two percentage points behind California in the AL West with its fifth consecutive victory. The Athletics had never swept a four-game series from Baltimore and had not done it against any team since beating Seattle in 1984.

Canseco homered for the third straight game, connecting against Jeff Ballard, 11-5. Canseco's two-run drive into the second deck in left field was his fifth home run in nine games since returning from the disabled list.

Storm Davis, 9-4, won for the sixth tie in seven decisions. He is 4-0 lifetime against the Orioles.

Davis became the only former Bird to beat Baltimore this season. The Orioles are 12-0 in other games against ex-O's.

The A's again got good relief. Dennis Eckersley pitched one inning for his 17th save, including three in the series. The Oakland bullpen has allowed only one hit in 10 innings.

Canseco homered in the fourth inning after outfielders Steve Finley and Joe Orsulak each made great catches to rob Dave Henderson and Mark McGwire of extra-base hits.

Cal Ripken hit a two-run homer in the seventh that pulled Baltimore within 3-2. Ripken's 13th homer was the first by the Orioles in 46 innings and only the second home run against Oakland in 65 innings.

The Orioles went on to put runners on first and third in the seventh, but reliever Todd Burns got Bob Melvin to ground into an inning-ending double play.

Rangers 5, Yankees 4

Texas, held to one hit for eight innings, rallied for four runs in the bottom of the ninth and then scored the winner in the 10th on right fielder Jesse Barfield's two-base throwing error.

The Rangers swept a four-game series from New York for the first time in their history. The Yankees lost their sixth straight game.

Chuck Cary was one out away from a one-hit shutout when Scott Fletcher doubled home Rick Leach, who had walked. Julio Franco met reliever Dave Righetti with an RBI single and Ruben Sierra tied it with a two-run homer.

With one out in the 10th, Rafael Palmeiro drew a walk from Righetti, 2-3. Cecil Espy then grounded a single through the right side. Palmeiro rounded second and then was headed back to the base when Barfield, the major league leader in outfield assists with 16, threw the ball past third base and into the stands.

Bobby Witt, 9-8, pitched a four-hitter for the Rangers, striking out 11 and walking two.

Red Sox 8, White Sox 2

At Boston, Roger Clemens stopped Chicago's eight-game winning streak and sent the White Sox to their first loss since the All-Star break.

Chicago's winning string was its longest since 1983. The White Sox have not won nine straight games since 1977.

Clemens, 11-7, gave up one run on six hits in seven innings. Angels 5, Tigers 4

Wally Joyner was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded and California scored twice in the bottom of the ninth inning to again sting Detroit.

The Angels swept the four-game series, winning each time in their final at-bat. Detroit has lost 15 of 17 games.

Indians 17, Royals 5

Dion James homered and drove in five runs as Cleveland got 16 hits in its highest-scoring game since 1966.

Brad Komminsk homered, doubled and drove in four runs, giving him 15 RBIs in 10 games. Joey Belle tripled and also drove in four runs.

Kansas City, because of injuries, began the game with just two regulars in their normal positions. Cleveland finished 8-4 against the Royals, the only team with a winning record against Kansas City.

James hit a two-run homer in the first against Mark Gubicza, 9-8, and broke a 4-all tie with an RBI double in a five-run fifth. Bud Black, 8-7, went 5 2-3 innings against his former team for the victory.

Astros get benefit of the doubt in 3-2 win

By The Associated Press
Charlie Rehliford is one of those temporary umpires who fills in for vacationing regulars.

Philadelphia Phillies manager Nick Leyva figures Rehliford should find another occupation. "He was terrible all four games, but you can't talk to him," Leyva said. "This guy should be training horses."

National League

Leyva was irate over the call Rehliford made for the final out in Philadelphia's 3-2 loss to the Houston Astros on Sunday.

With pinch-hitters Curt Ford and Jim Adduci on base following singles, Len Dykstra hit a sinking line drive to left-center. Houston's Billy Hatcher raced in from left, reached down for the ball and rolled over as the ball went into his glove.

Rehliford, umpiring at third base, called Dykstra out. A television replay clearly showed that the ball had hit the ground and was traveling upward when it lodged in the pocket of Hatcher's glove.

The call cost the Phillies at least one run and probably two while bringing to an end Dykstra's 14-game hitting streak. It also enabled Houston to sweep the four-game series and move within 1 1/2 games of front-running San Francisco in the National League West.

"The game was on the line and he couldn't make the call," Dykstra said. "The play wasn't even close. We should be ahead and I'm on second base."

Hatcher claimed he caught the ball.

"I knew I caught the ball but I was just hoping it didn't pop out when I hit the ground," he said. "I knew I had a shot at it."

"I was hoping it would stay up a little longer but it started dying and I had to dive for it."

Crew chief John McSherry would not take issue with the call, but did not say he thought it was correct.

"He got into position for the call. He saw it clearly and he made the call," McSherry said. "He has umpired in the minors for eight or nine years, he has umpired at spring training and he has been scouted thoroughly. I've got to think he belongs in the majors."

Rehliford was not available for comment.

Elsewhere, it was Montreal 12, Cincinnati 4; Chicago 9, San Francisco 5; New York 7, Atlanta 2, and St. Louis 3, San Diego 2. Los Angeles and Pittsburgh split a doubleheader, the Dodgers win-ing the opener 4-3 and the Pirates the nightcap 2-1 in 10 innings.

Expos 12, Reds 4

Cincinnati, mired in its worst slump in three years, lost its eighth straight as Mike Fitzgerald had two of five Montreal home runs and a career-high five RBIs to lead a 16-hit attack.

Cubs 9, Giants 5

Mark Grace and Andre Dawson drove in three runs each as Chicago wound up winning three of four games against the NL West leaders.

The Giants entered the series having won five straight while losing only once since the All-Star break.

Grace had two hits, extending his hitting streak to 13 games, to back Greg Maddux, 10-8, who allowed seven hits in 5 1-3 innings. Don Robinson, 8-7, took the loss.

Mets 7, Braves 2

New York extended its winning streak to six games and David Cone ran his personal streak to five as the Mets scored six times in the first inning.

Cardinals 3, Padres 2

St. Louis swept a four-game series on the road for the first time in nearly seven years behind the hitting of Willie McGee and Milt Thompson.

Jose Quendo, who struck out twice against Bruce Hurst, 8-8, doubled in the fifth inning to extend his major league-leading hitting streak to 21 games. McGee doubled in two runs and Thompson was 3-for-4 with an RBI.

ed at five strokes when she birdied the 13th, her third birdie in four holes.

Alcott earned $52,500 of the $350,000 purse to move from 26th to 14th on the 1989 money list and from fourth to third, passing Betsy King, in career earnings. Alcott has won $141,514 this year and $2,366,042 in her career.

Marino, who matched the highest finish of her seven years on the tour, earned $32,375, her biggest payday. Marino finished one stroke ahead of Marta Figueras-Dotti, whose 68 put her at 276. Furlong, with a 71, and Beth Daniel, with 67, were at 277.

"I kept trying to tell myself anything can happen, just birdie the last four holes," Marino said. "I never gave up. I still felt I had a chance even though I knew it was unlikely."

"If it hadn't been for Amy, I would have won. I feel I'm capable of winning a tournament."

The last of Alcott's seven birdies Sunday came at the 17th hole and put her up by five strokes. She had more than enough of a cushion to endure the double-bogey 7 on the 485-yard final hole.

After finishing in the top 20 in five of her previous nine tournaments, she felt a win wasn't far away. After all, the only years she hadn't won since joining the tour in 1975 were 1987 and 1989.

"I felt calmer this week than I have in any other win," she said. "I just felt it was destiny."

He had to bounce back from a bogey-5 at the seventh hole, a hole he had played well throughout the tournament.

He had to scramble for par with a 40-foot putt at No. 11, then chip in from 60 feet up a hill for a birdie-3 at No. 12.

"I sent up the shot. I blinked, it hit the flag and fell in the hole. I was more embarrassed than anything," Calcavecchia said. "I mean, how lucky can you get?"

The long-range success from bad situations at 11 and 12 inspired Calcavecchia.

"My spirits just changed," he said. "That put a smile on my face."

He birdied the par-5 16th, and then rapped in a 5-foot putt for a final birdie at the 18th. He was tied with Norman, who finished early with a course-record 64. But both were one shot behind Grady, for the time being.

"I went in to sign my scorecard and I heard the crowd groan," he said. Grady had just bogeyed the 17th, missing a par putt by inches.

"I went out and watched Wayne play 18, and I'm in the playoff," Calcavecchia said. "My caddy told me it was sudden death, but then I learned it was four holes and said, 'I like that.' That relaxed me."

Norman birdied the first playoff hole as Calcavecchia and Grady made par. Grady's par on the second put him two strokes behind, as the other two birdied the par-4.

Two holes from the end and Calcavecchia was again just one stroke back. And again he heard the groan of the crowd as something went wrong to the player in front.

At the 17th hole, the third in the playoff, Norman sent his tee shot through the green, just on the fringe on the back side.

"If there is such a thing as hitting a shot too perfect, Greg did it there. He just oversmoked it," Calcavecchia said.

Norman had 30 feet between him and the cup. He pulled an iron out of the bag.

"I might have chosen a putter," Calcavecchia said. Norman said a big clump of grass behind the ball would have made a putt difficult, but he may like to have the choice to make again.

His shot was too strong, hitting the cup and speeding 10 feet past. The 1986 British Open champion missed the par putt coming back, and his bogey left Calcavecchia even as he made par and Grady bogeyed.

To the 18th again, and this time Calcavecchia was tied for the lead. Very quickly, he was alone at the top.

Norman, one of the biggest hitters in golf, sent his drive screaming down the right side of the fairway. It hit on ground left hard by weeks of sun and little rain and rolled 30-40 yards into a steeply banked fairway bunker.

The Australian was incensed with himself. He glowered at the hole and the ball, and bit his lip. Then he hit the ball into another bunker.

A desperation shot sailed through the green and out of bounds. Add Troon '89 to Augusta '87, Winged Foot '84 and so many other sites where Norman has been close, but not close enough.

Grady bogeyed again, two-putting from four feet, and Calcavecchia, his approach shot resting six feet from the pin, was all but official.

"I thought to myself, 'I can three-putt and still win the British Open,'" he said. "I told myself, 'Just don't double-hit it,'" which would have been a two-shot penalty.

"You can spend your whole career, win 20, 30 tournaments, and never win a major," he said. "Here I am, 29 years old, and I have my name on this trophy with all these great players. I think to myself, 'My god, it has a great ring to it.'"

Calcavecchia expressed sympathy for Norman. "As happy as I was for myself, I felt very bad for Greg," he said. "The things that have happened to him in major tournaments are unbelievable."

Top player remembers the Negro Leagues

CHICAGO (AP) — Lou Dials and Bobby Robinson were majestic baseball players of the 1930s who may have been on a par with Lou Gehrig, Mel Ott and Jimmie Foxx, but few fans ever heard of them.

The reason is they spent their entire careers shuttling around Negro League cities on run-down buses, staying in shabby hotels, receiving low pay and getting little recognition.

Used to black stars such as Hank Aaron, Willie Mays, Ernie Banks and Tony Gwynn, it is difficult now for Americans to imagine a time when the sport was not integrated.

But from 1887 until 1947 there was the all-white major leagues — and its minor-league system — and the Negro Leagues for blacks and Hispanics, as baseball mirrored segregated America.

"Lots of black players could have played in the majors then.

We'd watch the Tigers play and I can remember a third baseman for Detroit — he couldn't touch me playing third," Bobby Robinson, now, 85, said in a recent interview from his Chicago home.

"Their manager said if I was a white boy, I would be the Tigers' third baseman. I thought about that. It made me feel bad," said Robinson. "White boys made more money, but it was more than that — it was the pride."

Oddly, black and white teams would play exhibitions between seasons in the 1930s and 1940s, and the blacks did well in those games, both players remembered.

"The whites were afraid that if they allowed Negroes to play on the same team with them, the Negroes would dominate the game like they do football and basketball," said Dials, also 85.

Dials, a star outfielder and first baseman, broke in with Rube Foster's Chicago American Giants in 1925, and also played for the Memphis Red Sox, Detroit Stars, Cleveland Giants and New York Black Yankees in the Negro Leagues.

In 1943 — three years before Jackie Robinson played for Montreal — Dials, then 39, was one of three black players offered contracts from the Los Angeles franchise in the white Pacific Coast League.

"But a week before spring training, they told me another team wouldn't let me sign, and there was no place for me no matter how good I was."

Dials said he was glad when Jackie Robinson broke the color barrier.

"I only wish it had been me. I'm quite sure I could have done the same thing," said Dials, a resident of Modesto, Calif., who was in Chicago earlier this summer for the National Sports Collectors Convention. "But I don't know if I could have handled the heckling Jackie had to go through."

At the convention, Tom Kloessler of Milwaukee was one of many collectors lining up to get Dials' autograph.

"I think he has a good shot at getting into the Hall of Fame, and I collect Hall of Fame signatures," Kloessler explained.

Dials, a 1927 University of California graduate in electrical engineering, thinks his election to the Hall may come next year.

Many records were lost from the old days, but Dials was credited with winning the National League batting title in 1931 with a .382 average, leading the Detroit Stars to the Negro championship.

"I caught the last out of the championship game," said Bobby Robinson. "I had all the players on our team sign the ball. I still have it, and me and Lou are the only ones still alive."

Dials and Robinson — void of bitterness despite playing under racial bias or what was called Jim Crow — look back over their playing days with fond memories.

"I have no regrets being a baseball player. I think about that time every day," said Robinson. "I'd like to see the players one more time."

Dials said the toughest pitcher he ever faced was Wilbert "Bullet" Rogan. "Without a doubt, Casey Stengel said the same thing," said Dials.

The best all-around ballplayer, according to Dials, was Martin DiHigo.

"He could pitch, he could hit," said Dials. "He was a Cuban who played in the Negro Leagues." DiHigo is among about a dozen oldtime Negro League players admitted to the Hall of Fame since Cooperstown's officials decided to try to right some of baseball's wrongs.

The Negro Leagues had plenty of hardships.

"It was pretty rough traveling by bus, and playing so many games — sometimes two or three games a day," Bobby Robinson said. "You'd ride all night and get up the next day and play."

Robinson broke in with the Indianapolis ABCs in 1925, and later played for the Cleveland Elites, Memphis Red Sox, Detroit Stars, Cleveland Stars and Cleveland Red Sox.

"The most I ever made was between $300 and $400 a month, plus meal money — $1," said Robinson, a brick mason after baseball.

Flying high
LONG POND, Pa. — Greg Sacks of Mattituck, N.Y., flies his racing car over another car driven by Lake Speed of Jackson, Miss. after both cars collided on the first turn at Pocono International Raceway Sunday during the running of AC Spark Plug NASCAR Pocono 500.

American Tour de France winner

PARIS (AP) — Greg LeMond tried to become just another American in Paris, taking in the Moulin Rouge, the famed French night club.

But he had a hard time going unnoticed. Less than six hours earlier on Sunday, he had won the Tour de France, the famed French cycling race, to complete a miraculous comeback.

And he won the 2,020-mile, 23-day race by the closest victory margin ever — eight seconds over Laurent Fignon of France. After 315,515 seconds of competition, LeMond, the only American to ever win the Tour de France, won his second.

So, it's no surprise he was greeted by applause at the Moulin Rouge. Or was recognized at a local McDonald's when he went for a quick snack.

In 1986 LeMond prevailed in cycling's most famous race in a French-dominated sport.

Then he went through misfortune. In April 1987 he was accidentally shot by his brother-in-law while hunting. Then he had an emergency appendectomy followed by shin surgery. All of which made him miss the Tour de France in 1987 and 1988.

He came back this year with low expectations.

"One month ago, I didn't think I would be in the top 10, top 20. But through the race I got more confident," — Greg LeMond.

He kept performing well. He won a time trial on July 6 that put him in the lead for the first time.

He lost the lead five days later to Fignon only to gain it back on the basis of a good performance in another individual race against the clock.

Again Fignon battled back to reclaim the leader's yellow jersey with four days to go and held an apparently insurmountable 50-second lead entering the final 15-mile time trial from Versailles to Paris.

"I went all out," LeMond said. "I didn't think I was going to win. The worst thing I could have done was lose by a second — the worst thing."

LeMond finished in 26 minutes, 57 seconds to Fignon's 27:55. LeMond's overall margin of eight seconds was the slimmest in 76 editions of the Tour de France, besting Jan Jensen's 38-second margin in 1968, a race which was also decided in a time trial.

LeMond's total time for the race was 87 hours, 38 minutes, 35 seconds, eight seconds faster than Fignon. Pedro Delgado of Spain, the defending champion, finished third, 3:34 back.

"I thought it was possible but when I warmed up today I saw there was a strong tailwind," LeMond said. "With a strong tailwind it's hard to make up the difference."

But LeMond did.

"When I finished the stage I turned around and waited," LeMond said. "I heard the announcer counting off the seconds. I saw Fignon pass. That was the hardest moment. I was afraid."

"I saw he had 20 seconds to go and make it. He was in sight and I didn't think it would take that long to finish," LeMond said.

Fignon finished eight seconds too late.

Fignon, who had been over-powering last week in the brutal climbing stages in the Alps, was hindered by an inflamed perineum, which made sitting on his bike seat painful.

"What does it matter for eight, 10, 20 or 30 seconds. It's all the same," Fignon said. "My legs were going well, but that wasn't enough. Still, I was hoping. But Greg performed a super time trial. He's a great champion."

To Guy, child's smile serious business

By VALERIE CULP WILKERSON
Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN (AP) — Smiles are serious business to Warren S. Guy, D.D.S., Ph.D.

There is a child's drawing pinned to the bulletin board in his Lufkin office depicting an armored knight pointing a lance-like toothbrush at a tooth with a cavity in it, saying, "I hate cavities."

Most likely the artist intended the knight to represent Guy — an apt depiction.

Guy is ever-vigilant in his work of protecting and improving patients' smiles.

The mouths he peers into are small ones and the bodies stretched out in his reclining chairs are on the short side. Guy is a pedodontist, a dentist who specializes in children's teeth.

"About half our patients come from Lufkin. The others come from outlying communities in a 13-county area. The next pedodontist is in Houston or Dallas," he said.

Children can also receive dental treatment from general dentists and they do a good job with children, too, he said.

"We really love kids," he said of himself and his staff. "They are so easy to love."

In addition to his dental degree, Guy has a doctorate and formerly taught in dental school. When he decided to specialize, he said he decided he was interested in children.

"Children are so playful, cheerful, unassuming and honest," he said.

Honesty works both ways in LUFKIN — Warren S. Guy, left, examines Kelli recently. Warren specializes in children's dentistry. Cindy Faussett as her mother, right, looks on.

Guy's airy office at 1218 Ellis. He and his staff use a "Tell, Show, Do" method to treat children. They tell them about a procedure, show them the instruments that will be used, and then do it.

"Most fear is of the unknown. We allay those fears by 'tell, show, do,'" Guy said.

He and his staff are honest about shots, for example.

"Local anesthetic is a mixed blessing. It is good because it has a numbing effect, but it hurts on injection," he said. "We let them look at the syringe. We tell them it will hurt for a minute and they need to be very brave."

They use nitrous oxide gas before the injection to calm children and sometimes do a pre-injection to numb the area even more.

Most children do fine during their dental visits, he said. They readily cooperate with the treatment and look forward to the helium balloon they receive as they leave.

Guy has several ways to manage those who don't, ranging from extra gentleness to calling on his authoritative manner to employing physical restraints. Some procedures must occasionally be performed in a hospital under general anesthesia.

In-office patients who require such extra attention are placed in a separate room, made cheerful by a bright fabric mural mounted in front of the examination chair.

Biting is a natural defense employed by some of that minority of problem patients. Mouth props take the bite out of most patients. When a bite does happen to be coming, however, Guy said he has learned to sense it and act appropriately.

Eleven-year old boy completes bid to circle globe by plane

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — An 11-year-old boy successfully finished his bid Saturday to become the youngest pilot to circle the globe, landing safely at home after a trip that took him across the far reaches of the Soviet Union.

Tony Aliengena touched down under bright, hazy skies at about 2:30 p.m. and turned off the engine of his plane at Orange County's John Wayne International Airport, where he started his "Friendship Flight '89" seven weeks and 19,000 miles ago.

"I want to meet President Bush and talk with my parents and see if they will take me to Disneyland," the boy said after landing.

Aliengena's father Gary, who accompanied his son on the flight, emerged from the plane and then lifted his son from the aircraft, along with his sister Alaina, 10, and Tony's Soviet pen pal, Roman Tcheremnykh, 10.

Aliengena earlier Saturday took off from Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, stopped for refueling in Reno, Nev., and then headed for Orange County.

"I really liked the Soviet Union, especially Moscow. I also liked Boston because that's where all my relatives are." — Tony Aliengena.

decided to skip a stop at Oakland, Calif., because of a delay in Alaska that put them a day behind schedule, said Bob Combie in Seattle, a spokesman for the boy.

"They are all glad to be back in the lower 48," Combie said.

The final leg was to be about 1,300 miles, he said.

After he arrived in Seattle Friday night, Tony said that when he gets home he wants to ride his bike for a while "and then I'd like to meet President Bush, maybe."

The fourth-grader flew a borrowed single-engine plane to Sea-Tac from Juneau, Alaska, along with his flight-instructor father, Gary, his mother, Susan, 10-year-old sister Alaina, and the rest of his party. The single-engine Cessna Centurion Tony started with crashed Tuesday while his father was taking off from Golovin, Alaska, 90 miles from Nome, for a fishing side trip. No one was seriously hurt.

That crash, which is under investigation by the Federal Aviation Administration, was the only sour note on the 19,000-mile trip with 35 stops in seven countries, Tony said Friday night.

"I really liked the Soviet Union, especially Moscow," he said. "I also liked Boston because that's where all my relatives are."

Tony and his party, a second plane carrying some of them, made 14 stops in the Soviet Union alone. In Moscow, the Friendship Flight crew met with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Tony said aviation will always be just a hobby. "I want to be an orthopedic surgeon," he said.

He plans to visit the White House to see President Bush and present him with the Friendship Scroll, which is more than 1,000 feet long and contains more than 200,000 signatures of U.S. children.
