Abilene tidiest city

ABILENE (AP) — The people at Zero Population Growth say pure, clean Abilene is the tidiest city they've ever seen.

The national environmental organization says Abilene, Roanoke, Va., and Winston-Salem, N.C., have the best environments among 192 U.S. cities with populations of 100,000 or more.

Houston, on the other hand, ranked among the worst.

The environmental rankings were part of an overall study of how U.S. cities cope with their problems. The environmental portion of the study focused on waste management, according to the November-December issue of Garbage Magazine.

"If environmental factors are important to people, then Abilene is one of the best places to live," said Dianne Sherman, communications director for Washington-based Zero Population Growth.

"People would be wise to look at the study when they are looking at places to move," she said. "Abilene should feel proud of itself and the way it handles its urban population and its environment."

Abilene residents throw out about 150,000 tons of trash annually, said Drew Sleeper, superintendent of refuse collection.

"We are totally automated, with state-of-the-art equipment in our residential and commercial trash collection," he said.

The four criteria used for the study were quality of water and air, hazardous waste management and sewage system management.

The top five urban areas for environmental quality were Abilene; Roanoke, Va.; Winston-Salem, N.C.; Berkeley, Calif.; and Billings, Mont.

Dunn found guilty in wife's killing

By BRADLEY WORRELL

BIG SPRING — A 118th District Court jury sentenced former police officer Dennis Dunn to 16 years in prison for the slaying of his wife. The verdict came after nearly 8 hours of deliberations Thursday evening.

"We decided to let God prevail on this, it just hurt us so bad. Now maybe we can start and pick up our lives again," said Jimmy Gatlin, father of slaying victim Carlye Dunn.

The jury announced its unanimous decision shortly after 11 p.m. Thursday.

Gatlin said he believes jurors reached a good verdict when they sentenced Dunn to 16 years and a day in prison for voluntary manslaughter in the April 12, 1988 shooting of Carlye Dunn.

Meanwhile, the family of Dennis Dunn charged that Dunn was tried unfairly because he was a policeman.

"They didn't try him for the shooting, they tried him because he was a cop," said H.C. Dunn, the defendant's father. He also charged that news coverage in the Big Spring Herald had been biased against his son.

H.C. Dunn said the family will appeal the case, although Dunn's defense attorney, Robert Moore III — a possible candidate for district judge — will not handle the appeal.

Dennis Dunn declined to comment. "Not now," he said, as he was led away by sheriff's deputies to the county jail. The sentence imposed on Dunn is effective immediately.

A sentence of 15 or fewer years would allow Dunn to be free on bond while he appeals his conviction. District Attorney Rick Hamby proposed a sentence of 15 years and one day. Jurors instead gave Dunn a 16-year, one-day sentence.

"I don't really have much in the way of any comment in the way of the verdict, except I want to express thanks to the jury. They had a lot of difficult questions (before them)," Hamby said.

Hamby said the fact jurors spent so much time in deliberations to determine a verdict and a sentence indicates they took their duty as jurors seriously.

"I feel it was just," he said of the sentencing. Hamby said it was a well tried case and he did not see any legal errors that might jeopardize the case in appeal.

Moore had argued that testimony from Kathy Stam, a cousin of Carlye Dunn, was improper and grounds for a mistrial.

Stam testified Wednesday that Dennis Dunn had said: "When I'm a policeman I can kill anybody I want and there's nothing anybody can do about it."

Dunn allegedly made the remark August 1987 in the presence of Stam and Carlye Dunn after threatening to use a weapon on another vehicle while the three of them were in a car together in Odessa. Dunn was attending police academy training at the time.

Jurors went into deliberations to consider a verdict at about 1 p.m. after hearing closing arguments. • TRIAL page 2-A

Hawks soar; support lags

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The Howard College Hawks and Lady Hawks may be soaring, but fan support has yet to get off the ground.

The men's basketball team is undefeated, and the women have only lost one of the eight games they have played this year. However, none of the games this fall at the Pettit Coliseum has attracted more than one-tenth of a capacity crowd.

In a coliseum that seats 4,500, attendance at the men's basketball games has averaged 250 people a game. The Lady Hawks have been even less fortunate, though 7-1 for the season, they've drawn from 75 to 100 spectators for games in the coliseum.

"I think everybody on campus would like to have bigger crowds at the games," said Carlos Thumm of Brazil, the sophomore center and a captain of the team. "It would give more incentive to win the games."

Keith Tucker, a sophomore point guard from Detroit, said low turnout from area sports fans give players the impression that "they're not really interested in whether we win or lose."

Tim Ross, one of 12 cheerleaders for the basketball team, said cheerleading is less effective with tiny crowds.

"It's a lot harder to keep the team up," he said. "When they're on a good drive, making a lot of points, it's easier for them to get down again, because there aren't many people cheering them on."

Students at the school, which has an enrollment this fall of 2,039, say support from the campus has been good. But low attendance from Big Spring residents at the basketball games has become a major concern on campus, said Corey Ross, president of the Student Government Association.

"They (players) need more support from the town, and it would give more endurance to the students, along with the faculty. It would turn this town around. This could be a basketball town." — Corey Ross, Howard SGA president

"They (players) need more support from the town, and it would give more endurance to the students, along with the faculty," Corey Ross said. "It would turn this town around. This could be a basketball town."

The Hawks will play their next home game at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 30, against Angelo State University's junior varsity team. Tickets for each event are $2 for adults, $1 for students and free for children under age 6.

Howard students say turnout for the college's two other varsity sports, rodeo and baseball, also need a boost. The rodeo events are held at an arena in west Big Spring, and baseball games are held at Jack Barber Field. But nowhere is the lack of crowd support more noticeable than in the 11-year-old coliseum.

"You can have a good attendance in the coliseum, but because of the size of it and the number of seats available, it looks like there's very few people attending the games," said Bill Griffin, athletic director for Howard College.

Basketball players do notice a large crowd, however. Thumm said he was impressed by the turnout last year for home games against Midland and Odessa colleges, each of which drew about 1,000 fans.

Packed houses are not without precedent in the coliseum, which is rented by the school for entertainment events. Circuses in the coliseum often draw large crowds, and country and western singer George Strait drew a standing-room-only crowd about five years ago.

Hispanics stay on grand jury

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

COLORADO CITY — Five Hispanic jurors who announced earlier this week they would resign from a Mitchell County grand jury have decided to remain on the jury to keep from breaking the law.

The jurors were protesting a grand jury no-bill decision made Friday on a fatal police shooting of a Hispanic man last year.

"We would be seen as lawbreakers," said Apolinar Molina after the five grand jurors, the only Hispanics on the jury, met with 32nd District Judge Weldon Kirk this morning.

The five disagreed with the handling of the grand jury investigation of the May 13, 1988 police shooting of sexual-assault suspect Sammy Gomez by then part-time police officer Billy Ray

Student loses lawsuit over long hair

COLORADO CITY — A 17-year-old Colorado High School senior will have to decide whether to cut his hair to comply with school rules or remain on in-school suspension, according to the ruling of a district judge.

Mike Lara was denied a temporary injunction against the Colorado Independent School District by 32nd District Judge Weldon Kirk Thursday. Lara's attorney, Pat Barber, contended that the school's hair-length rule violated a state common law on personal body privacy.

The suit also says that the rule stipulating that boys cannot wear their hair below the bottom of their collar violates the Texas Equal Rights Amendment because it did not apply equally to boys and girls.

Following the judges ruling, Lara said he needed time to think about what he would do. "I'm not surprised," he said of the ruling.

Asked if he would cut his hair, he said, "I don't know."

Lara's father, Tanis Lara, who is a plaintiff in the suit, said they would decide later if they want to file the case in a district appeals court.

Meanwhile, Mike's mother, Josie, said she does not want her

In the closing arguments, defense attorney Tom Rees said rules such as a hair length rule are necessary to instill values in students to prepare them for the world that they will face after graduation.

son to drop out of school or enroll in another high school. "I want him to go to his regular classes," she said. Right now, Mike Lara said he spends seven hours of an eight hour school day facing a wall in a plywood cubicle not more than 4-square-feet. He has been doing that for 27 days of this semester which began Aug. 31.

In the closing arguments, defense attorney Tom Rees said rules such as a hair length rule are necessary to instill values in students to prepare them for the world that they will face after graduation.

"These societal values are what brought us to where we are today and they need to be taught," he said. "School is a necessity of rules."

He said students will not have to constantly face constitutional issues on an everyday basis. "They will face ordinary times and ordinary people," he said.

In addition, Rees said that if the suit had been filed in a U.S. District Court in Abilene, it would have been dismissed at once. "That is the federal rule in this district in Texas," he said.

Barber said the hair-length rule is "clearly an infringement" to individuals that is "intrusive and constant."

KBYG owed city $15,000

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — The city lost almost $15,000 when a local radio station was placed in bankruptcy recently.

City Secretary Tom Ferguson said radio station KBYG-AM owed back rent on two city-owned buildings when it was placed in Chapter 7 bankruptcy in August.

Ferguson said Giraffe Communications, owner of the station, owed the city $1,125 back rent on a building in Comanche Trail Park and about $13,000 on a building in the Big Spring McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark.

However, he said, since the station is bankrupt, the debt is wiped out and the city cannot collect the money.

Ferguson said the station owed the city "eight or nine months" back rent two years ago when it filed to reorganize under Chapter 11 bankruptcy. That filing also wiped out the station's debt, he said, leaving the city no way to collect.

Although the station reorganized, KBYG still had a three-year contract with the city to rent a building at the airpark, Ferguson said. However, KBYG, which had occupied the building since 1964, vacated it and refused to pay the rent, Ferguson said. Because of the signed contract, the city continued to charge a monthly fee, he said, until the lease expired in July.

Meanwhile, KBYG had consolidated its operation at the building in Comanche Trail Park.

 from the defense and prosecution. They reached their guilty verdict at 8:45 p.m.

Moore, who recommended probation for Dunn, called two character witnesses to the stand, as well as the defendant.

"It's been utter hell, I loved Carlye a lot," Dunn said when asked how his life had been since the shooting. Dunn later added, "I wish it had been me instead of her."

Dunn asked jurors to give him a probation sentence so he could continue to pay child support to his two children from his first marriage. He promised he would live under the terms of his probation.

District Attorney Rick Hamby - who did not at first seem to object to probation sentence - went through the terms of probation item by item with Dunn before stating: "They're not really going to ask a hell of a lot of you, are they?"

"No sir," Dunn replied.

But Hamby later encouraged jurors to give Dunn a prison sentence rather than probation. He said Dunn's actions were wrong and he must be held accountable for his actions while he was a policeman.

"Don't sit back and say 'why don't they do something?' Our land is going to hell in a handbasket," Hamby said while admonishing jurors to take their civic duty seriously and give Dunn a prison sentence.

Hamby asked jurors not to be led by "false compassion" when mentioning a sentence for Dunn. Mentoring probation, Hamby said, "Surely you don't think that is a mete and fair judgment for the death of Carlye Dunn."

In his closing statement, Moore repeated that Dunn would abide by the terms of probation.

Moore told jurors: "Yours is not the burden of the entire community" as Hamby had indicated. He said the fact that Dunn was a police officer should not weigh heavier in what he described as an "unfortunate circumstance."

The defense had argued that Dunn accidentally shot his wife after she playfully jumped on his back while he was carrying a loaded gun to the couple's bedroom. Mrs. Dunn's collision with her husband caused both of them to fall to the bed where he accidentally shot her, Dunn testified.

The prosecution indicated Mrs. Dunn might have been shot at the front door and that a pillow was placed over the barrel of the gun that killed her. Hamby noted Mrs. Dunn was considering a protective order against her husband at the time of the shooting.

Jurors

 Williamson.

A letter addressed to Kirk, signed by the jurors and dated Nov. 14, said, "The prosecuting attorneys were very bias, they were acting as defense attorneys instead of prosecuting attorneys."

The letter asked the judge to release them on the grounds that they had "lost faith in the judicial system."

Although they have now decided to serve their terms which last until February, Molina said this morning, "We still feel that the proceedings were not carried out properly."

Kirk was unavailable for comment but District Attorney Frank Conard said that there are no provisions for grand jurors to resign.

"Once they understood that there was no provision, they decided to do what's right," he said. "Being good citizens of the county, they decided to do their civic duty."

He said he understood their feelings. "These people did not volunteer to do this," he said. "They were drafted in a sense."

He added, "They took an oath to serve. If they refuse to serve they could be held in contempt of court."

Kirk said he would not comment further on the incident.

Local League of Latin American Citizens organizer Sarah Ortiz said the national LULAC office, had reported the U.S. Justice Department had decided to ask for transcripts of last week's three-day grand jury proceedings.

Concerning the five Hispanic grand jurors, she said that LULAC had nothing to do with influencing their decision to resign but that the organization had offered them legal advice if they wanted it.

The jury then entered deliberations for about an-hour-and-half before returning the 16-year sentence.

He said going to jail for contempt of court would have been an option. But he said, "I don't think they would have been put in jail."

Asked about Kirk's option to disband the grand jury, he said, "It's not necessary."

And commenting on the right of a grand jury to ask for further review of a case, he said, "It would have to have new evidence."

He said unless new evidence is produced the case is now closed on a statewide level. He said he would fully cooperate with a federal grand jury if one is empaneled.

Firefighters contain grass fires

BIG SPRING — Three fires, one of which was a controlled burn, were extinguished in Big Spring Thursday before causing a threat to surrounding buildings and dwellings, reported fire officials today.

Two of the fires were rumored to be possibly related by a common cause of arson, but no supporting evidence or report was given by fire officials.

Big Spring Fire Marshal Burr Lea Settles said, "I would not be able to comment on the cause. I have not been at the scene, and I have to go by what is on the report. As far as arson, there was no dollar value lost so it could not be arson. If it were done intentionally, it would be criminal mischief."

According to fire reports, one of the grass fires occurred at approximately 2:27 p.m., Thursday on the vacant land across from the Golden Plains Care Center on E. 8th St. and Owens.

The other grass fire was on 7th St. and Owens at 5:12 p.m., and was also reported as being on vacant land across from Golden Plains Care Center.

"If it's directly across the street from the Golden Plains Care Center, there are some structures there — two residences," Settles said. "There were no reports of any structure damage."

"They were both in that same locale. I'm thinking they are using Golden Plains as a reference point, but this is a supposition," said Settles about the report.

Crews from the Big Spring Fire

Department scoured the estimated block, he said.

As no damage was recorded in the fire reports, the efforts to prevent the blaze from threatening surrounding structures in the area of the fire should be considered successful, said Settles.

Another major brush fire occurred in the south area of the city limits, in the county jurisdiction, and involved 300 acres. The fire was originally reported by Herald employees.

Settles said he did not have any information on the 300-acre fire of a week ago as it was a county matter.

No verified cause has been noted for yesterday's fires or for the fire last week.

According to fire department records, the controlled burn was reported at 6th St. and Abrams.

Monitored parolee busted for drug sales

HOUSTON (AP) — A state prison parolee wearing an electronic ankle bracelet intended to monitor his whereabouts is back in jail, accused of selling illegal drugs in front of his house.

Angelo Burnett, 18, known to friends as "Electro Man," was held on $30,000 bond after a court appearance Thursday before State District Judge Michael McSpadden.

Several Howard students said the Hawks' efforts are overshadowed by Big Spring High's football contests, which are averaging crowds of 3,000 for each game. Griffin said local fans' familiarity with hometown athletes accounts for the greater popularity of the high school's varsity games.

More than half of the 102 varsity athletes at Howard College are from out of state.

To strengthen the town's ties to the school's athletes, Howard in 1986 began an "Adopt-a-Hawk" program. Under the program, area families "adopt" an athlete by treating him to dinners and inviting him to visit their home.

So far this year, 79 of the school's 102 varsity athletes have been adopted, said Karen Reeves, coordinator of the program for the school.

Agencies to monitor level of 'brown cloud'

EL PASO (AP) — Government agencies will put dust monitors along the U.S.-Mexican border to find out how much pollution Mexico is sending into the United States.

The monitors — part of a government study — will help scientists determine how much of the "brown cloud" over El Paso is coming from Ciudad Juarez in Mexico.

Results should help revise state and federal air-pollution control plans for El Paso, said Jesus Reynosa, director of the Air Pollution Control Office for the El Paso City-County Health District.

Reynosa says the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has finally accepted the theory that Juarez contributes to the brown cloud that hangs over El Paso.

"Now, we have to prove that," he said.

El Paso's air frequently exceeds federal standards for the amount of particulates.

Committee OKs bill requiring insurance

AUSTIN (AP) — State lawmakers moved a step closer to revamping the Texas workers' compensation system as a Senate committee approved bills that would raise benefits and require employees to carry the coverage.

Action by the Economic Development Committee on the two bills by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby came Thursday after the State Board of Insurance approved a 22 percent increase in workers' comp insurance rates and berated special interests that take advantage of the system.

"Everyone is abusing the system," said board member Richard Reynolds of Flower Mound.

Board member Jo Ann Howard of Austin described the current no-fault insurance designed to compensate injured employees as a quagmire dominated by doctors, lawyers, employers, and employees.

The new rates, upping premiums by approximately $600 million, will go into effect no later than Jan. 1.

The two bills by Hobby would raise weekly benefits from $238 to $416 and phase in mandatory comp coverage by 1995 for all employers that have four or more employees.

But critics of Hobby's plan say it will deprive workers of a basic right — a meaningful jury trial in disputed comp claims and it would set a specific schedule on what an injury is worth, regardless of how it affects the employee.

In the middle of the fray are Hobby and Sen. Carl Parker of Port Arthur, who has co-written an alternate reform plan with Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, that is preferred by labor and by attorneys who represent injured workers in disputed workers compensation cases.

Parker criticized Hobby, saying his fellow Democrat has written a measure that favors "those employers who have given Texas the worst record in the nation for industrial safety and deaths."

The Caperton-Parker proposal would reduce premiums by 13.7 percent while increasing job safety, the bills' sponsors said.

If Hobby's plan is passed in the Senate, the bills would go to the House. House Speaker Gib Lewis has said he supports the compensation reform bill, but not the insurance reform proposal.

Gov. Bill Clements said even if the comp system is overhauled, Texas employers will be hit with increases for another two years because the rates are based on past experience.

Hobby told reporters the 22 percent increase was not high enough. He said some insurers are leaving the workers compensation business because the Insurance Board has failed to set high enough rates.

The state's consumer protection division, which recommended a 17.5 percent increase, said the Insurance Board's decision will cause more companies to drop workers compensation coverage.

"There have been a number of them dropping them in the past under the current rates, and if you increase rates by 22 percent, certainly there will be a few more dropping," Rod Bordenon, deputy public counsel of the Office of Consumer Protection, said.

The insurance industry, which had requested a 34.9 percent increase, applauded the Insurance Board's action.

Jury clears 12-year-old boy of teacher's slaying

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Fort Worth police sergeant says he is still convinced that police were right to charge a 12-year-old boy with a teacher's slaying, even though a jury took just one vote to acquit the boy.

A jury deliberated less than two hours Thursday before clearing the boy of murder charges in the stabbing death of 24-year-old Jana Simpson. She was stabbed 17 times outside a Fort Worth elementary school classroom building Aug. 28.

"They (jury members) told me they took one vote and it was not guilty all the way around," said the boy's attorney, Earl "Ernie" Bates.

The case hinged on the boy's admission that he killed the teacher, a statement he made after two hours of police questioning Sept. 6. The boy recanted the admission that day.

State District Judge Scott Moore allowed the boy's "I killed the teacher. I killed the teacher" statement from the Sept. 6 questioning admitted into the testimony.

But he disallowed most of the boy's statement to police, ruling that the boy's alleged confession was improperly obtained.

The confession was the most damaging piece of evidence against the boy. No physical evidence linked him to the slaying, authorities said.

Despite the weak case, police sergeant Paul Kratz said he makes "no apologies" for his department's handling of the questioning.

"We still feel very confident that we charged the right person," Kratz said.

After the verdict, Simpson's father, Mike Simpson of Longview, said he still had faith in the jury system, and said he intends to get on with his life.

"For me it means that the final chapter of my daughter's life is over, and I've got to get back to work," he said.

On Wednesday, the boy told Moore out of the jury's presence that he was pressed into a confession by a police detective who showed him pictures of Simpson's dead body.

"He was trying to put it on me. He was trying to accuse me of the killing," the boy said of Detective J.D. Roberts, who questioned him.

"He told me if I would tell the truth about it, he would get me out of it and I could go home."

"I just made up something to get them off by back," the boy testified.

Roberts denied the accusations. During trial testimony, Roberts said he didn't coerce the boy to confess and that police at first considered him only a possible witness to the stabbing.

During final arguments, Prosecutor Barbara Medley told the jury the defendant was seen riding a bicycle from the scene.

FBI out of bounds again

In a free society, what you read is your own business. For instance, you should be able to check books out of the public library without any fear that the government will snoop into your reading habits. Dedicated librarians respect that important principle, but the FBI deplorably has ignored it at times.

It has been revealed that the FBI, in the name of detecting Soviet spies, asked librarians in New York to snitch on certain readers. But things didn't stop there. The FBI also subjected the librarians themselves to official scrutiny, on the imbecilic theory that any who objected to the snooping on readers must be under the influence of Soviet propagandists.

Do FBI agents have nothing better to do with their time? Materials deposited in a public library surely are not top secret. If they fall into the hands of someone who is sympathetic to the Soviet Union, so what?

Moreover, librarians who object to procedures that intrude on the reader's privacy are just behaving like professionals. The FBI, despite certain lapses, presumably takes pride in its own professional standards. Can't it allow librarians to defend their principals without becoming suspect?

The FBI's library caper is too reminiscent of some of the agency's past transgressions. Only last year, FBI Director William Sessions acknowledged that agents had stepped far out of bounds in the mid-1980s in their investigation of Americans who opposed the Reagan administration's Central America policy.

"There is no place for such mistakes in the work of the FBI," Sessions said. Indeed there isn't, but FBI excesses keep cropping up — and at the public library, of all places.

Mother proud of son's school

To the editor:
What an exciting year for the BSHS Class of 1989-90, with district wins in tennis, track and football. The tennis team also came home this weekend from Abilene with the team trophy in the tournament and also a doubles trophy in second flight play for my son, Lewis Hinojos, and his partner. The band received a one rating for marching contest and I can be sure they're aiming for sweepstakes at the end of this concert season.
All this has been achieved through a lot of hard work from all those involved.
I just want to take the time to congratulate all the kids and coaches, and also to wish a lot of luck to those in other sports that have yet to get started.
I'm sure there are a whole lot of fans and parents as proud and excited as I am.
Once again, congratulations and best wishes!
I'm proud of you son!

YES, WE HAVE A GARBAGE DISPOSAL... WHY DO YOU ASK?

Bush sets new records in office

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, jumping the gun on anniversary report cards, is already declaring "a successful first year" after just 10 months in office. But his assessment of his own performance misses a few mileposts.

For instance, when Bush travels to Rhode Island on Monday to appear at two Republican fundraisers, it will be the 28th state he has visited since his inauguration in January.

And when Bush goes to Malta for his Dec. 2-3 shipboard summit with Soviet Leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, it will be the 14th foreign nation he will have visited as president.

Bush has vetoed five bills — and has not yet been overridden by Congress.

By the same token, Bush has received few legislative victories. Of the nearly two dozen major proposals he has sent to Capitol Hill, only one — legislation to rescue the ailing savings and loan industry — has been enacted.

Some 119 of his nominations remain in limbo in Congress. And he was the first president in recent times to have a Cabinet nominee — John Tower as defense secretary — rejected by the full Senate.

The president has given what the White House considers 27 "formal news conferences."

White House pet spaniel Millie, in her first 10 months as first pup, has killed six squirrels, two rats and one pigeon on the White House grounds, Bush recently confided to several reporters during one of his frequent jogs.

Bush took 15 days in August to catch one fish.

The president has spent only six weekends at the White House since taking office. And, while he has made six trips this year to his family compound at Kennebunkport, Maine, he spends most weekends at the presidential retreat at Camp David.

He spends so much time at the retreat in the Catoctin Mountains in Maryland, in fact, that he told a recent audience "my son Marvin has started a modest lobbying campaign for me to change the name to Camp Marvin."

He observed that former President Eisenhower named the retreat after his grandson, David. But, Bush added, since he himself had four sons, one daughter and 11 grandchildren, picking a new name might touch off a fierce interfamily competition.

In off-year general and special election races, he made campaign appearances for six Republican candidates. His batting average — two won, four lost.

He claims he gets up to 60,000 letters a week "from children to our oldest citizens."

Postmaster General Anthony M.

Frank recently suggested that Bush — who himself dashes off thank-you notes and letters throughout each day — has generated and received more correspondence than any president in U.S. history at an equivalent point in his term.

In 10 months in office, in fact, Bush has been responsible for more correspondence than some presidents generated in their entire administrations, Frank said.

Meanwhile, Bush frequently breaks his own self-imposed rule about answering reporters' questions at picture-taking sessions.

In fact, he violated it twice on Tuesday — answering questions on the easing of travel restrictions in Czechoslovakia in the morning and on Nicaraguan arms shipments to El Salvador in the afternoon.

Bush also continues to stick to his own versions of some places' and people's names — often talking about the Middle East nation of "The Lebanon" and referring to Polish Solidarity Leader Lech Walesa's first name as "Lock."

Asked on Tuesday why Bush always called Walesa, his dinner guest at the White House Tuesday night, "Lock," spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that when Bush went to Poland as vice president in 1987, "someone in Poland told him that the correct pronunciation... was 'lock.' And he has used it ever since."

Of course, Fitzwater has some trouble with last names himself. The other day, he turned red-faced after beginning a briefing by referring to the nation's 41st chief executive as "President Mush."

How I broke a golf link

By LEWIS GRIZZARD
ST. SIMONS ISLAND, GA. — I made a hole-in-one.

Honest I did. This isn't some sort of make-believe column like I often write. For instance, I recently wrote a make-believe column about Jim Bakker meeting his new cellmate, Mad Dog.

But this isn't anything like that. I mean that I hit a golf ball on a par 3 and it went into the hole for a "1."

Do you know the thrill of writing a "1" on a golf scorecard next to your name?

I've had my thrills in sports before. Playing for dear old Newnan High back in '63, I hit a jump shot at the buzzer to defeat the top-seeded team in the region tournament.

That got my name and picture in the paper. (I wanted a kiss from a certain red-headed cheerleader, but she remarked how she detested kissing anyone covered in sweat.)

I also pitched a no-hitter in Pony League, finished second in a tennis tournament, hit a hard-way six on a crap table in Vegas, made back-to-back net eagles playing with Greg Norman in a pro-am golf tournament in Hilton Head and once had dinner with the girl who used to say, "Take it off. Take it all off," in the old shaving-cream commercial.

(I realize having dinner with a girl who made a shaving-cream commercial has nothing to do with sports, but she made the commercial with Joe Namath, so there.)

But none of that compares with my hole-in-one.

Get the picture?
I'm on the course, 128 holes, the lovely Island Club here in coastal Georgia. I admit No. 12 isn't that long a hole, but I didn't design the course, so it's not my fault.

The hole is 128 yards over a small pond.

It was Saturday morning, Nov. 4. I was playing in a threesome, comprised of myself, Tim Jarvis and Mike Matthews, two players of lesser talent with whom I often hang out.

It was a lovely morning, having warmed to the low 70s as I approached the tee. I was wearing an orange golf shirt, a pair of Duckhead khaki slacks and my black and white golf shoes, the ones my dogs have not chewed up yet.

I was first on the tee.

"What are you going to hit?" asked Matthews.

"None of your business," I said. We were playing for a lot of money.

OK, so we weren't playing for a lot of money, but you never tell your opponent what club you are hitting.

"Tell us," said Jarvis, "or we'll tell everybody how you move the ball in the rough when nobody is looking."

"Nine-iron," I said.
The green sloped to the right. I said to myself, "Keep the ball to the left of the hole."

(Actually, I said, "Please, God, let me get this thing over the water.")

I hit a high, arching shot. The ball cut through the still morning air, a white missile against the azure sky.

(That's the way Dan Jenkins or Herbert Warren Wind would have described it.)

The ball hit eight feet left of the pin. It hopped once. It hopped again. It was rolling directly toward the hole.

An eternity passed.

It has a chance to go in, I thought. But that's not going to happen, of course, because I'm terribly unlucky and I've done some lousy things in my life and I don't deserve it to go into the hole.

It went into the hole.

It was a joyous moment when my first hole-in-one fell snugly into the hole. But the best moment came at the next tee, the par four, 13th.

For those non-golfers, the person with the lowest score on the previous hole gets to hit first on the next hole.

I strode to the tee with my driver, teed up my ball and then said to my opponents, "I think I'm up, but did anybody have a zero?"

Jarvis and Matthews were good friends and I shall miss them.

"These are men who dedicated their lives to service of others; they committed themselves to living and serving the poor and the uneducated; they ministered to men and women who suffered the effects of the war in San Salvador. Propane fire burns through night

JASPER, Mo. (AP) — A propane fire shooting flames 70 feet into the air was allowed to burn through night after many of the town's 1,000 residents were evacuated from their homes.

Firefighters stood about a mile away early today as the fire at a Williams Pipeline Co. lit up the southwest Missouri sky. The glow from the fire was visible from at least 25 miles away.

The fire was feeding on a 17-acre underground storage cavern, burning propane at the rate of 300 gallons an hour, said Ray Pullen, a Williams official.

Williams president Steve Cropper said the fire was under control but would be allowed to burn until an expert in putting out such fires arrived later today.

"He will assess the situation and formulate a plan of action as to whether to cap it or let it burn out," said Carthage Fire Chief Don Simmons.

The fire started as a work crew was performing routine maintenance on a pump, said Jim Gipson, a spokesman for Williams. Propane escaped and somehow ignited when it reached the surface, Gipson said.

Florida woman turns 115 Saturday

PALATKA, Fla. (AP) — A big birthday bash is planned for Carrie White, who turns 115 Saturday and is recognized by the Guinness Book of World Records as the oldest living person on Earth.

As many as 800 guests are expected at the party planned for Monday at Putnam Memorial Nursing Home, where Mrs. White lives, and there will be a big cake, nursing home administrator Paul Allen said.

When she turned 114, Guinness representatives gave Mrs. White a gold embossed certificate declaring her the oldest person alive, though she was not listed as such in the 1989 edition of the record book because hospital records certifying her age had not been authenticated in time.

Most of Mrs. White's life is a sad mystery. She spent 75 years in a mental institution.

She was born Carrie Joyner on Nov. 18, 1874, in Gadsden County near Georgia. She lived and worked near Tallahassee and married John White, who was a blacksmith or farmer.

In 1909 her husband admitted her to the Florida State Hospital at Chattahoochee; hospital records described Mrs. White's problem as "post-typhoid psychosis," but doctors today don't recognize the term.

Mrs. White wasn't released until 1984, and when asked now, she either can't or won't talk about her past, said Marjorie Allen, her guardian.

Violent storms damage Northeast

By Associated Press

Violent storms caused widespread wind damage and flooding in the Northeast and claimed at least 11 lives, including seven children killed when a wall collapsed on them as they ate in their upstate New York school cafeteria.

Thursday's storms came from the system that spun off tornadoes in eight states in the South and Midwest on Wednesday. The two-day toll: at least 29 dead and hundreds injured, including 17 dead and 1,000 homeless in Huntsville, Ala., and a death in Canada.

Authorities and witnesses in Newburgh, N.Y., about 60 miles north of New York City, said it appeared a tornado was responsible for the death and destruction at East Coldenham Elementary School, but the weather service said it probably wasn't a twister.

The brick, cinder block and glass wall, about 30 feet high and 50 feet wide, caved in on as many as 125 first-, second- and third-graders as they were eating lunch, said Town of Newburgh Police Chief John Kulisek.

Besides the seven killed, 18 children were injured, two critically. All the victims were 6 to 9 years old.

NEWBURGH, N.Y. — A concrete wall of a school cafeteria in Newburgh, N.Y. collapsed Thursday, killing seven children and injuring several others.

Congressional pay hike issue heads for Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A hot-potato decision on a big congressional pay raise and ethics package rests in the lap of a skittish Senate with only a few days left before Congress plans to adjourn for the year.

"Formidable, but possible," was how Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole described the task of getting his sharply divided chamber to act before Thanksgiving on the plan approved 252-174 Thursday in the House.

The House approved a plan to raise its pay, and that of other top government officials, by more than 35 percent in less than 14 months. House salaries would soar from the current $89,500 to more than $120,000.

With the higher pay, House members would be barred beginning in 1991 from pocketing honoraria checks for speeches before interest groups. They also would be subject to other new rules in the first major overhaul of its ethics rules in 12 years.

The House plan doesn't include a raise for the Senate unless the Senate votes to include itself.

Enemies of the pay raise were trying to turn up the pressure against it. Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate who helped kill a proposed 51 percent pay raise just 10 months ago, called the new plan a "legislative pay-grab wolf in a minor ethical reform sheep's clothing."

Dole and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, scheduled an unusual caucus of both parties, behind closed doors, to hash things out this morning. Everyone agreed there was a wide divergence of views.

The Senate could vote to give itself no raise but let the House and others get theirs. Or it could buy into the whole deal, kill it or choose something in between.

"The leadership is pushing hard for us to adopt the House package," Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said Thursday. "Apparently, it must be a close vote."

President Bush, eager to raise pay for his top staff and the federal judges, has already said he'd sign the bill.

Jesuit priests killed and mutilated

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Fears of renewed repression spread today following the slaying and mutilation of eight people, including six Jesuit priests, and the reported detention of a dozen Lutheran Church workers.

Another member of the Jesuits, a Roman Catholic order, quoted witnesses as saying government forces shot the priests and their cook and her daughter. The government denied responsibility and said the murders were "savagely and irrational."

Hours after the slayings, uniformed security officers arrested a dozen Lutheran missionaries, a Canadian diplomat said, and another Lutheran missionary fled the country.

The slayings occurred amid the biggest leftist rebel offensive in the nation's 10-year-old civil war.

El Salvador only recently emerged from a period of repression during which death squads and rightist elements of the military were accused of killing thousands of people.

The Salvadoran right considers church activists and church intellectuals to be subversives.

Soviets prepare to ease restrictions

MOSCOW (AP) — Up to 6 million Soviets would visit abroad or emigrate under a proposed law that would ease travel regulations, compared with 2.2 million this year, a Soviet official said.

The official commented Thursday at a news conference on a bill making its way through the Soviet legislature. It would lift most of the travel restrictions that Soviet citizens and international leaders have complained about for decades.

Soviet officials argued that the more liberal law would encourage Soviets to stay home instead of fleeing their country as East Germans have done.

"There will be no need to be reckless and go for permanent residence abroad. First you should go and see," said Rudolf

A. Kuznetsov, the head of the Soviet agency that issues visas.

"The more democratic and liberal the exit rules, the less people want to leave, and this is corroborated by the recent example of the German Democratic Republic," said Anatoly G. Kovalev, a first deputy foreign minister.

He was referring to the Nov. 9 decision by East Germany's Communist leaders, under the pressure of street protests and mass emigration through socialist countries, to open borders to free travel and begin reforms.

Most East Germans who crossed into West Berlin, West Germany, through openings in the Berlin Wall returned after a brief visit.

Proposed cabinet shares power

WEST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's new premier today asked parliament to approve a Cabinet in which more than a third of the members would be non-Communists, and he called for more private enterprise.

Premier Hans Modrow also rejected talk of reunification with West Germany, which began last week after East Germany lifted travel restrictions and opened its borders, including the Berlin Wall.

The Communists would still dominate the 28-member Cabinet presented to the 500 lawmakers in the People's Chamber.

In his first address to parliament since he took over as premier Monday, Modrow outlined several main points, including a "reform of the political system," legal reforms and steps to clean up one of the most polluted countries in Europe.

He also called for "increasing individual responsibility of the economic units" and allowing East Germans to engage in private enterprise to produce goods and offer services in the shortage-plagued economy.

However, he rejected a "free-market economy."

NEW YORK — Susan Wyatt, left, executive director of the Artists Space gallery in New York, poses with Nan Goldin, organizer of the show "Witnesses: Against Our Vanishing," a controversial AIDS art show. The National Endowment for the Arts reversed itself and awarded a $10,000 grant to the show just hours before the exhibit was scheduled to open.

Controversial exhibit gets grant

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Endowment for the Arts reversed itself and returned a $10,000 grant for a controversial AIDS art show just hours before its Thursday night opening.

"After consulting with members of the National Council on the Arts, several of whom have also seen the show, I have agreed to approve the request of Artists Space... and will release the grant for the exhibition only," NEA chairman John E. Frohnmayer said in a statement.

The chairman on Wednesday had visited the exhibit at the gallery Artists Space in lower Manhattan. After his quick tour, he said there was a chance of reversal but added, "The part of the show I've had a chance to see lacked artistic merit."

The NEA statement was released four hours before the opening of the show, which has a total budget of $30,000. The endowment said it will not fund the show's catalog, which Frohnmayer had called too political to merit federal support.

At the gallery, the NEA decision was hailed as a victory for the artists and the First Amendment.

"We won a battle, but the war is still on — the war against homophobia, AIDS phobia and any undermining of our freedom of speech," said Nan Goldin, organizer of the exhibit.

"Witnesses Against Our Vanishing."

Susan Wyatt, museum executive director, called it "a great day. We've got a great show opening."

The show includes paintings, photographs and sculptures by 23 artists depicting the effect of the AIDS epidemic on the artistic community.

Some of the works are sexually explicit, and the catalog contains derogatory references to Cardinal John O'Connor, archbishop of the New York Archdiocese, and to lawmakers who supported a law restricting funding of art deemed obscene.

The endowment had approved a grant in May for the show. But since then, Congress passed the law on art deemed obscene.

The NEA said earlier this month it would withdraw support; Frohnmayer said the show's content differed from what its grant application said and that it lacked "artistic merit."

Goldin said Thursday that regardless of the NEA's final decision, she wants Frohnmayer to resign.

"It seems he's playing to the people with the most influence," she said.

She said the dispute reflected the controversy over how to deal with the epidemic. Supporters of the law restricting support of the arts "are the same people who think that AIDS victims should be quarantined," she said.

Critics oppose contract between tobacco company and Archives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Archives should have heeded its own misgivings about involving the nation's largest cigarette manufacturer in a campaign to celebrate the bicentennial of the Bill of Rights, a House panel chairman says.

By not doing so, Rep. Thomas Luken said the Archives might be helping Philip Morris Cos. Inc. make "a mockery" of the federal ban on cigarette advertisements on television and radio.

The Ohio Democrat revealed at a hearing Thursday that the agency had expressed its qualms in a letter to the company a year ago. Luken chairs the House Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials, which is investigating the arrangement.

The agency had "reservations about the appropriateness of Philip Morris' role in advertising the Bill of Rights exhibition," said Susan Cooper, spokeswoman for the Archives, in the November 1988 letter.

However, under an August agreement with Philip Morris, the Archives allowed the company to publish and broadcast promotions of the Bill of Rights' 200th anniversary in exchange for a $600,000 donation to the National Archives Trust Fund. The materials carry the names of both Philip Morris and the Archives.

The agreement has come

"What our critics object to is not what is being said, but who is saying it." — David I. Greenberg, a Philip Morris vice president.

under fire from anti-smoking groups and members of Congress.

The Archives and the Justice Department "should pursue whether there is a violation" or cause for possible prosecution, Luken said.

Claudine J. Weiher, deputy archivist, told the panel the agency questioned the "propriety" not the "legality" of the advertising campaign.

"What we reviewed these segments or ads for was to assure ourselves in our own minds that no such advocacy was there," said Weiher.

But an attorney for Philip Morris argued the nationally televised announcement is not restricted.

"Even those who have tried to find fault with the Philip Morris ads have not, to my knowledge, asserted that the spots advertise cigarettes in the commonly understood sense of the term," said Richard Wiley, a former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

The ban "extends only to messages that promote the sale or use of particular tobacco products," added Wiley.

"What our critics object to is not what is being said, but who is saying it," added David I. Greenberg, a Philip Morris vice president.

Philip Morris Cos. Inc. is the holding company for a conglomerate that produces a variety of consumer products including Kraft cheese, Maxwell House coffee and Oscar Mayer meats as well as Marlboro cigarettes.

Religion roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — A Protestant leader says the ecumenical movement can regain its place at the center of culture if the churches put their emphasis on basic faith and serving their people.

At a 30th anniversary banquet for the Interchurch Center in Manhattan, the Rev. Paul H. Sherry, new president of the United Church of Christ, told representatives of most major denominations: "As we move to the 21st century as an ecumenical church, we must remember whose we are. If we do, we will move into the next century with power."

The 19-story center overlooking the Hudson River houses offices of the National Council of Churches and numerous denominational boards and agencies.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Marking his 71st birthday on Nov. 7, evangelist Billy Graham said he plans to continue his crusades. "I do not intend to retire," he said. "Nowhere do I find in the Bible that a preacher should retire."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans divided for Separation of Church and State contends a federal district court in Philadelphia erred when it overturned Pennsylvania's ban on wearing religious garb in public school classrooms.

Concerning a case in which the court upheld the right of Moslem teacher Alima Dolores Reardon to wear Islamic garb while teaching in public school, the church-state separationist group said:

"A teacher is an agent of the state and as an agent of the state may not use his or her position to influence the religious beliefs of the teacher's charges."

Drive-in church is blessing

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Martha Davis of Fort Worth says Texas' only drive-in church is a special blessing for her.

The 61-year-old woman says she cannot go elsewhere because of a medical problem so she cherishes the Abundant Life Assembly of God services broadcast over a lower-power AM radio channel to a Grand Prairie parking lot.

"The Lord gave me a way to come to church and I've come," she said as she sat in her pickup. "As long as they've been doing this, I've come."

There have been Sunday mornings where hers was the only vehicle parked in front of a distant window, from behind which a minister delivers his sermon.

The drive-in church was the brainchild of the Rev. Bob Skipper, who has conducted many of the services there for five years.

"My main interest was to try to reach people who come to Six Flags (amusement park)," Skipper said. "A lot of people who are coming through might want to go to church, but don't have time to change (clothes)."

Another preacher at Abundant Life, the Rev. Jack Guthrie, said the brief drive-in services at 9 a.m. usually draw about eight or nine vehicles, although the number swells to about 20 on warm, summer days.

On those days where only one or two show up, it takes a bit to get motivated, Guthrie said.

"You just kind of look at the trees, pretend they're more people and go on with it, just like the parking lot was full," he said.

Although these church-goers stay in their own cars, they do get one form of human contact.

Church usher Travis Connor comes around to each vehicle to distribute programs and offering envelopes.

Freddy Krueger nails make lawyer's list of children's toys

BOSTON (AP) — Replicas of the blades-for-fingernails hands of Freddy Krueger and a plastic "Butcher Knife and Meat Cleaver" today made a lawyer's annual list of hazardous toys.

Also on the list by Edward Swartz, a personal injury lawyer, were a crib toy that its own manufacturer had warned to "keep out of baby's reach," a doll and play clothes by Playskool and chewing gum cigarettes.

Swartz called the toys on his 18th annual list "a time bomb ready to explode."

A spokeswoman for a trade group representing 240 companies that account for 90 percent of the domestic toy market downplayed the criticism.

"He finds these toys that nobody's buying and nobody's playing with," said Jodi Levin, of Toy Manufacturers of America.

Swartz said the toys he listed were bought within the past six weeks, but one company said its toy that made the list — the X-15 Rocket Plane — hasn't been manufactured for three years.

"We weren't selling enough of them," said Joe DiStefano, vice president of Estes Industries. All of the company's remaining rockets are used as "a safe hobby and a safe science instrument," DiStefano said.

Swartz cited two toys that replicate implements of destruction in the popular horror movies "A Nightmare on Elm Street" and "Friday the 13th."

He said the Freddy Krueger gloves, with plastic simulated knives for fingernails, come in a package bearing a warning, in small letters: "Do not wave, poke or jab this glove at anybody's face, eyes, ears or nose."

Swartz' list included addresses for some of the toys' manufacturers, but not for the Freddy Krueger gloves' maker, Marty Toy Inc.

He also complained about an array of "Friday the 13th" replica weapons. He singled out the "Butcher Knife and Meat Cleaver" set by 1989 Rubie's Costume Co., for which he also listed no address.

"They are made out of rigid plastic, realistic in size and appearance, and when used in play could cause eye or other physical injury," Swartz said.

Swartz said removable ribbons and elastic bands on the Kid Sister doll by Playskool Inc., a subsidiary of Hasbro Inc., could be swallowed by infants, and he said Playskool's Dressing Pretty Bride play clothes are made with flammable lace ruffles and a flammable veil.

Wayne Charness, spokesman for Hasbro in Pawtucket, R.I., said the federal government does not list ribbons and elastic bands as small parts. And he said the bridal dress exceeds all federal and state regulations on flammability.

"Our number one concern is the safety of children who use our products. We go out of our way to ensure everything we produce is safe," Charness said. Swartz also cited play gum cigarettes by Philadelphia Chewing Gum Corp. in Havertown, Pa. Company officials failed to return a telephone call requesting comment.

Hal Kyle, corporate counsel for the toy's manufacturer, Applause of Woodland Hills, Calif., maintained that the company's products are safe.

"We make every effort to ensure every product complies with certain mandated federal regulations," he said.

Sexual addictions hard to cure

DALLAS (AP) — Many people who engage in lewd or criminal sexual activity are experiencing the pull of sexual addiction, an addiction some experts say can be as damaging as drug and alcohol abuse.

"It ruins people's lives," said Wayne Julian, a director of the Life Stages Center in Dallas, which treats about 150 people a week for sexual conditions. "Sexual addiction affects all socio-economic classes and is as hard to cure as drug and alcohol dependency."

The addiction interferes with work, finances and family and often requires drastic measures for treatment, health officials say.

Men and women will spend thousands of dollars on sex-related materials and prostitutes, often exhausting their income and falling heavily into debt, said Richard Wampler, director of the Texas Tech University Family Therapy Clinic.

"They are miserable people," Wampler, who is forming a sexual addictions group at the Lubbock therapy clinic, told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. "They aren't enjoying it. There's very little to enjoy."

Experts say 2 percent to 3 percent of the adult population in the United States could suffer from some form of compulsive sexual behavior.

The extreme obsession with the sexual behavior can result in indecent exposure, child molestation and rape, said Dr. Charles Anecillo, a psychologist at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore who specializes in sexual behavioral patterns.

"The sex offending behavior is very difficult to get at," Anecillo said. "The mentality is very specialized in imagery and content. Some sexual offenders are methodical in their approach to public indecency while the extreme would be for someone to carry out their fantasies in the form of rape."

Anecillo said the sexual behavioral patterns are often passed on from parents to their children.

"Most of the sexual addicts committing the sex crimes were abused sexually when they were younger," Julian said. "It is a vicious circle."

Many of the addicts are from very strict, conservative families, where sex is perceived as dirty, said Tech doctoral student Ann Noble, who is conducting the group.

"The family is very rigid where there are lots of rules," said Wampler. "They're usually not from very loving families."

Ms. Noble said she recently learned of a sexually addicted female who spent eight hours a day in bed fantasizing about sex.

"It took over her whole day," she said. "When your whole day is planned around it, it's not right. When it takes over your life, it's not right."

The job nobody wants to take

EXLINE, Iowa (AP) — After listening to Darwin McElderry, no wonder no one in Exline wants to run for mayor or city council.

"We just don't have the money to do nothin' and nobody's taking much interest," he said Wednesday. "We haven't hardly got a road that you can get over in with a car down here; no way to get it fixed; just about got to ride a horse."

"Nobody seems to care about nothin' down here. They could care less about everything," McElderry said. "Everybody hollers at you. You can't get nothin' done. There's always a somebody a-gripin'."

On election day Tuesday, there were no announced candidates for mayor or five city council seats in the southern Iowa town.

Of the 91 registered voters, 22 cast ballots, according to Appanoose County Auditor Linda Demry.

The mayor, Bob Traxler, received 13 write-in votes for his sixth term. McElderry was re-elected to the city council.

But McElderry said voters should have scribbled in another name. He plans to resign.

On the side

The other Brooklyn

BROOKLYN, Wash. (AP) — Everyone's heard of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Practically no one's heard of this Brooklyn, which consists of a school and a tavern. And the tavern is closed.

But Brooklyn, Wash., is having its day in the sun, even if it's only because of name familiarity.

The tiny town in the Willapa Hills of southwest Washington is featured in a television commercial for Burgerville U.S.A.

Also featured is Bob Tomisser, superintendent of North River School.

"In Brooklyn, New York, you are conveniently located near Wall Street, Yankee Stadium and Coney Island. Big Deal!" Tomisser tells the camera as he strolls out of the small school.

"You're also about 3,000 miles from one of these," he says, holding up a large burger promoted in the 30-second spot.

Then the camera pans back to Tomisser.

"Burgerville U.S.A. — inconveniently located across the United States," he says of the 31-restaurant chain in the Northwest.

The commercial airs in Washington and Oregon, and Tomisser is receiving royalties each time it's shown. Altogether, his one day's work should bring in about $1,500.

Incidentally, you can't get a Burgerville burger here, either. The nearest Burgerville is nearly 100 miles away, in Centralia.

The ad campaign for Burgerville plays off small towns that have big-city counterparts.

Another TV spot uses Detroit, Ore., in Oregon's Cascade Mountains.

Widely read

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Third-grader Jessica Plank receives mail almost daily from people she has never met in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Last Friday was no exception. A correspondent sent a guidebook and told her how the city's 300-year-old trees were destroyed by Hurricane Hugo.

Her fellow pupils get mail from other parts of the United States in what has become a prodigious social studies project in the third-grade class of Julia Shanabrook at Norman A. Trimmer Elementary School in the West York Area School District.

"There are wonderful people in America who care enough about strangers to go out, buy postcards, sit down and write to us," said Mrs. Shanabrook, 31, who has just begun teaching after graduating from college.

Each of the class' 25 students wrote to a newspaper editor in two states requesting help in asking readers to send postcards and share what makes their community special.

On Friday, Mrs. Shanabrook distributed a 6-inch stack of mail among the eager students. "I get folders. I get boxes. I get 10-by-13-inch envelopes filled."

The mail helps the children learn about current events as well as geography, she said.

While the class has decided that "Winston-Salem is probably the most friendly town in the United States," Mrs. Shanabrook said students had heard from people in 24 states.

The children giggled at an Idaho postcard a picture of a single, huge potato consuming the bed of a flatbed trailer.

Twice one day last week students heard that Michigan is shaped like a mitten. One person sent a foot-long mitten-shaped map. Another wrote she lives in the thumb.

Mrs. Shanabrook said a New Jersey television station producer called about doing a story on what Morristown residents think is special about their home. She told the producer "they like General Washington's headquarters."

Montana jerks

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Montana has had its share of jerks over the years — enough, anyway, to devote a 1½-hour seminar on the more famous among them.

Take Calamity Jane, for instance. Idol of frontier mythology, right?

Not necessarily, said seminar organizers, who have titled Jane's segment "Calamity Jane — Sleaze of the Frontier."

The seminar, included in a two-day conference sponsored by the Montana Historical Society was entitled "Speaking Ill of the Dead: Jerks in Montana History."

Others jerks discussed included W.A. Clark, one of the notorious "copper kings" who dominated and corrupted Montana politics near the turn of the century.

Bridge reopening

OAKLAND, Calif. — While the San Francisco fireboat Phoenix spewed water from its monitors, officials cut the ribbon reopening the repaired quake-damaged San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge Thursday. Vehicular traffic resumes Saturday.

'Little guys' bear the brunt of pension abuse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dot Harkness banked on her pension plan, borrowed money against it and planned to do some traveling with her ailing husband in the Utah hills when she retired. Then she found out the savings she counted on had vanished in a bad investment.

James Carsten worked for a jewelry repair shop for 30 years and figured he'd be due about $19,000 in pension benefits. Instead, "all the money disappeared," he said.

Mrs. Harkness and Carsten were victimized by plans that weren't insured by the federal government's Pension Benefits Guaranty Corporation. According to government figures, only 40 million of the 76 million workers with private pension plans are eligible for that protection.

By law, pension fund managers are prohibited from putting all the money into a single investment. They also are required to ensure that any risks are reasonable.

But small programs — those with 25 or fewer participants — don't qualify for federal insurance, and even the larger programs can be undermined by bad investments or outright theft.

The "little guys" have an especially hard time making their cases if their funds are abused, says the Labor Department's acting inspector general, Raymond Maria.

"People are sort of desperate," says Karen Ferguson, director of the Pension Rights Center, a public interest group. "There's no one to help them. If the people who are running the plan are bankrupt, there's nothing to do. And there are a lot of them out there."

The Labor Department's Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration is charged with investigating abuses. But Mrs.

Harkness and Carsten said they received no satisfaction from the government.

Mrs. Harkness, 63, worked as a receptionist for a doctor, handling his billing, setting up appointments and answering the phones. The practice was sold in 1978 but she stayed on and figured her nest egg was safe.

"I was fully vested, so I didn't worry," Mrs. Harkness said in a telephone interview from her Park City, Utah, home.

In 1983, she took out an $8,500 loan against her pension to buy a 1978 motor home and began paying back $200 a month, including 14 percent interest, into the account. She figured she had about $20,000 in the pension fund.

In 1987 she said she received a call shortly before midnight from the doctor for whom she was first employed, saying: "We had lost all our money. The account had gone down the tubes."

After failing to get help from the Labor Department, Mrs. Harkness notified the Pension Rights Center, which referred her to an attorney and the case rests with the courts.

"We were very conservative and raised three children," Mrs. Harkness said. "I counted on this money."

While Mrs. Harkness sounds distraught, Carsten is angry.

The company he worked for was sold and the investment group administering the plan went bankrupt after reportedly investing in palm trees.

Carsten went to the Labor Department and wrote letters to his congressmen.

But the sheer size of the nation's private pension system works against individuals such as Carsten and Mrs. Harkness. With just 300 inspectors, the government can check only a tiny percentage of the country's 870,000 such programs.

L-tryptophan linked to blood disease

AUSTIN (AP) — Anyone using L-tryptophan, a non-prescription amino acid, should stop, the state health department said Wednesday.

L-tryptophan products, used by some for insomnia or premenstrual symptoms, has a possible link with a severe blood disorder, eosinophilia, the department said.

The department said seven people in Texas have been identified as having the blood disorder, including two each in Austin and Houston and one each in Lubbock, Dripping Springs and Port Arthur.

All persons have experienced prolonged fatigue, muscle and joint pain, chest pain, sore throat, cough, low-grade fever and a rash, the department said.

The disorder has been reported in 17 states and the District of Columbia, with 96 cases reported as of Tuesday.

Makers of L-tryptophan are suspending distribution and sales of the dietary supplement pending further investigation, according to J. B. Cordaro, president of the Council of Responsible Nutrition, an industry group.

"This action should not be viewed as a product recall but an interim measure pending clarification of the causes of this outbreak," the industry group said.

"Public health agencies investigating have not been able to establish a scientific basis or isolate medical evidence that links L-tryptophan with this disorder," the council said. "In addition, to date FDA and industry testing of L-tryptophan products have not identified any product contamination."

A spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration in Washington, Don McLearn, said the agency was satisfied with the industry's action.

McLearn said that without a stronger cause-and-effect link, the FDA has no authority to order a recall. He said the strongest action the agency could take was announced Saturday when it advised people taking L-tryptophan to discontinue use of the product.

Folks eager to knock television

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Trish in Easley, S.C." and others among your readers who have chosen to live without television.

Did you know that there is an organization for people who do not have a working television set in their homes and are interested in ridding our society of television dependency?

The Society for the Eradication of Television (SET) believes that TV "retards inner life, destroys human interaction, squanders time and draws viewers into abject addiction." Please spread the word. — SET FREE IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR SET FREE: You rattled the wrong cage. If you, or others, choose to live without television, it's all right with me, but to crusade in an effort to "rid others" of what you call "television dependence" by doing away with all television sets strikes me as un-American.

The television set may provide some folks with the only human voice they hear for days. It provides news and entertainment for millions of people who cannot — or chose not to — leave the comfort, privacy and safety of their homes.

Granted, there's an excess of garbage on TV — but there are also many educational and worthwhile programs. So, please don't work so hard to "free" me. Enslaved, I'm not.

DEAR ABBY: I need help and do not know where to get it. I have been both bulimic and anorexic on and off for about four years. I have coped and dealt with the problem in the past, but bulimia, which I have now, is an ongoing illness, something I turn to whenever I am down.

I am too ashamed to tell my family, and the career I am in (modeling) does not help. I know of many other models who are in the same or similar situations.

Abby, I can't deal with this anymore. I don't have the money for extensive counseling, and I don't know how to find a counselor whom I can trust to really help me. There are a lot more like me out there — more than any of you know. Maybe this will encourage others to get help, too. — NEEDS HELP IN ORANGE COUNTY, CALIF.

DEAR NEEDS: In order to overcome this eating disorder, you will need professional help. You need not feel ashamed to tell your family. It is also important that they understand the nature of your problem so that they can be supportive.

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Plymouth Rock gets Thanksgiving facelift

PLYMOUTH, Mass. — The main crack in the 6-ton Plymouth Rock, the landmark marking the spot where Pilgrims landed 400 years ago, is being repaired by a mason says he'll probably be done for Thanksgiving. "I don't look at it as a job. I look at it as a privilege to put something that means a lot to people all over the United States," said Paul Choquette, 42, of South Dartmouth, who planned to start work on the rock today.

He bid $1 to win the contract to patch up the historic landmark, where Pilgrims are said to have first set foot on American land in 1620. "It's a real challenge," Choquette said. "I've been hired by the state's Department of Environmental Management to analyze the rock, but he concluded that the rock's crack will worsen if left unattended."

"It would look terribly embarrassing if it split in half," said Peter O'Neil, a department spokesman.

The crack first appeared in 1774 when the 6-ton boulder was dropped during an attempt to move it to the town square, breaking it in two.

The smaller piece was used for the town display, but because tourists kept chipping away at the monument, guardians of the rock decided to glue it back to its partner in 1890.

That job has stood up to the tests that occasionally submerge the rock, which is 14 feet wide and 10 feet long and stands in a half-enclosed protective structure in the waters off of this seaside town.

The mortar, however, is deteriorating. State and town officials fear water that seeps into the rock will freeze, causing further fractures or worse. The main crack is about 2 1/2 feet long, Choquette said repairs could be completed in one day.

He said he's not using high-tech glues or epoxy, because scientists want to be able to undo his work without damaging the rock if more substantial repairs become necessary.

He has prepared a special mortar mixed to match the color and consistency of the 19th century repairs, but he declined to reveal his mix, beyond saying it contained "small pebbles."

Choquette, a mason for 22 years, said he also will fix a series of hairline cracks that have developed within the main fracture and in some other areas of the rock. The smaller cracks were caused by the vibrations of the tourist buses that rumble over the road about 5 feet from the landmark, he said.

Two masons submitted bids. Choquette was chosen after the other mason asked for about $100.

"It just makes me feel good," Choquette said. "It's just knowing what it stands for. It's a symbol of freedom and how America supposedly started off."

Entrepreneur hopes people will pay to jump off bridge

NANAIMO, British Columbia (AP) — A New Zealander is betting that British Columbians will pay to jump off a bridge.

John Brown wants to bring "bungee jumping" to western Canada, and thinks he's found the ideal location, the Nanaimo River gorge on Vancouver Island.

In the first year of bungee jumping in Queenstown, New Zealand, about 17,000 thrillseekers paid to leap off a bridge with a thick rubber cord attached to their ankle, said Brown, a veteran of more than 300 such jumps.

"There's been absolutely no injuries," he said.

A bungee jumper leaps headfirst toward the water. The cord, or bungee, slows momentum after about a .45-foot freefall. The momentum is all but stopped by the time the jumper reaches the water — but then comes the rebound.

He said he expects to charge around $70 a jump.

Fort Stockton (0-6, 0-9) at Big Spring (6-0, 7-2)

This game is a state playoff tuneup for the Steers. For the Fort Stockton Panthers, it's the end of a long season. The Steers will be loose and full of fire. They might even try some new wrinkles here and there. Fort Stockton will pull out all stops; what do they have to lose?

Another strong game for the Steer defense, the offense will move at will. The Steers in a romp.

BIG SPRING 42, FORT STOCKTON 7

Robert Lee (1-3, 3-6) at Garden City (3-1, 7-2)

A tuneup game for the state playoff-bound Garden City Bearkats. The Robert Lee Steers will be trying to salvage a disappointing season.

The Bearkats are on a roll. They are playing their best ball at the right time of the season. Just like last week, G-City coach Sam Scott will get to give everyone a lot of playing time.

The 'Kats are primed for the playoffs.

GARDEN CITY 48, ROBERT LEE 14

Stanton (8-2) at Ozona (8-2)

The first round of the playoffs for these AA teams. For the second straight year, Stanton has flipped for the home-and-home basis and lost. Last year the Buffalos did it against Winters and won their first-round game.

Stanton is playing good ball right now. The offense is rolling along and the defense has been steady all year.

The Ozona Lions play good defense, and rely on the one-two combo of tailback George Ybarra and quarterback Greg Denman.

The nod goes to Stanton because it plays well on the road, and the Buffs have more weapons.

STANTON 21, OZONA 14

Sands (10-0) vs. Marathon (7-3)

Marathon coach Ralph Bates says his team's record is deceiving because two of the losses have come to No. 1 ranked Fort Hancock — a big plus in his book.

Sands Mustangs coach Randy Roemisch says he doesn't care who Marathon has played; his team will be fired up and kicking.

All year long Sands has relied on its nasty defense to set up its methodical but effective offense. Tonight will be no different. Roemisch is a good motivator, and he'll do the perfect psyche job on his team.

The Crossroads Mustangs will be the faster breed tonight.

SANDS 30, MARATHON 21

Grady (6-4) vs. Fort Hancock (10-0)

Speaking of psyche jobs, it will take a major one from Grady Wildcats' coach Leonardo Gonzales if his Wildcats are going to beat the Fort Hancock Mustangs, something no team has done the past 24 games.

To put it simple, Fort Hancock is awesome. The Mustangs return all starters back from last year's 14-0 state championship team. How good are they? How many six-man teams do you know that only allows 14 points in 10 games? Nobody has went the distance against the Mustangs this year.

The biggest plus for Grady is that it played Fort Hancock last year in the first round of the playoffs. The Wildcats know what they are in for.

Grady will put up a gallant fight, but it will be like George Foreman fighting Mike Tyson — an early KO.

FORT HANCOCK 66, GRADY 20

Hawks whip Redskins; begin tournament play

BETHANY, Okla. — The Howard College Hawks got their seventh win in as many games as they drummed the Southern Nazarene junior varsity Redskins 112-71 here Thursday night.

The outcome of the game was never in doubt, as Howard got some hot shooting from sophomore wing player Terrence Lewis to get going. Howard led by 22, 57-35 at the half.

"We shot real well from the floor, 62 percent," said Howard coach Steve Green. "We got off to a good start. Terrence got hot early and Greg Christian played a good game."

Lewis led all scorers with 32 points, including four three-pointers. Guard Christian added 15 points and forward Johnnie McDowell added 17 points and 10 rebounds.

The Hawks will play tonight at 8 in the Seminole Classic in Semole, Okla.

Queens win tourney opener

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — Although they sputtered and struggled along the way, the Howard College Hawk-Queens managed a 74-63 win over a scrappy Temple Junior College Leopardettes squad in the Crossroads Tournament Classic here Thursday.

The Queens, now 7-1 for the season, had a hard time with the 3-6 Leopardettes. Temple used a pesky halfcourt trapping defense, and the Queens never really figured a way to beat it.

But two glaring reasons the Queens won the game were Linda Waters and Kim Robinson. Waters, a sophomore forward from Portland, Ore., had a hot night shooting the ball. Whenever Temple tried to settle back and play a zone, she made them pay dearly, as indicated by her four three-pointers. She finished the game by hitting 10 of 16 from the floor for a career-high 26 points.

Crossroads Classic

Robinson, a freshman guard from Slaton, struggled with her shooting early, but down the stretch she heated up and scored four straight baskets without a miss, finishing the game with 15 points. Under the boards she didn't play like a guard, especially in the second half, when she grabbed nine of her game-high 11 rebounds.

"We got into a position a few times where we had to have a score, and Linda and Kim came through," said Howard coach Royce Chadwick. "Linda had a good game. She shot well from the perimeter."

"You have to read the defense to score, and we just didn't adjust to it. There were a few times where they'd trap us, and we'd just give it to them. We played lethargic. I think we had a mass letdown from the game with Western Texas. We played barely enough to win."

Howard started out in a hurry however, taking a 6-0 lead on back-to-back three-point plays by Waters and Lisa Moore. Temple point guard Jarlene Martin hit a jumper, and Howard answered with two baskets by Ana Carroll. Temple slowly whittled away at the lead, forcing Howard turnovers, and getting key baskets by Martin and post player Alyya Abdur-Rahman. Temple tied the game at 15-15 midway through the first period.

Howard would build leads up the seven points, and Temple would quickly cut it down to two. In the waning stages of the half, Kelli Gaspie fed Shannon Lawson for two, Lawson made a foul shot, and Waters nailed a three-pointer at the buzzer, giving Howard a 40-32 halftime lead.

The second half was much like the first, Howard would get a eight or 10-point lead, and Temple would quickly narrow it to two, three or four points.

Late in the game, though, Howard made a run Temple couldn't overcome. Leading 64-61, Moore sunk two free throws, giving Howard a five-point lead with 2:11 left. Temple's Chereen Boudreaux, who had a strong second half off the bench, scored, cutting the margin back to three.

HC came back when Waters dished off inside to Kristen Hedlund for a score. Next Robinson got a steal and turned it into a layup. Gaspie rebounded a Temple miss, and Howard scored at the other end when Cindy Williams hit from the outside. Howard led 72-63 with 33 seconds left. Gaspie added icing on the cake by bombing another long shot as time ran out.

HOWARD (74) — Kim Robinson 7 1 15; Linda Waters 10 3 26; Monique Cook 0 0 0; Ana Carroll 3 0 6; Lisa Moore 2 5 9; Shannon Lawson 1 5 7; Candice Boyd 0 0 0; Mulu Tosi 1 2 4; Cindy Williams 1 0 2; Kristen Hedlund 1 0 2; Kelli Gaspie 1 0 2; totals 27-58 16-23 74.

Lady Steers scalp Indians by 33 points

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Lady Steers jumped out to a 14-0 lead, and were never headed as they crushed El Paso Ysleta Indians, 63-30, in a Crossroads Tournament first-round game here Thursday.

The Lady Steers spread the wealth around in the victory as all the players tallied in the contest. Senior guard Peggy Smith led the Big Spring express with 12 points.

The outclassed Indians were led by junior Irma Mendoza, who scored 10 points.

With the win, Big Spring, now 2-0 for the season, advances to play the Coahoma Bulldogettes in a second-round game at 6 p.m. tonight at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Unlike their season opener — a nailbiting overtime win against San Angelo Central — the Lady Steers were never seriously tested.

Lana Dower, Gisela Spears, Jennifer Hendleman and Smith scored baskets in the first five minutes to stake Big Spring to the early lead.

The Indians rallied briefly behind the shooting of Mendoza and Adriana Quintana and, with 7:06 left in the first half, trailed by four, 14-10.

But Cassie Underwood converted a three-point play for Big

Crossroads Classic

Spring on its next trip down the floor, and the Lady Steers were off to the races once again.

Big Spring's full-court pressure also took its toll on the Indians during this stretch. Ysleta turned the ball over 16 times in the second quarter alone.

By the time Ysleta's Letty Terrazas canned a jumper with three minutes left in the half, the Lady Steers had increased their lead to 30-12, and the Indians' threat was flattened.

The Lady Steers' defense was definitely the difference in the game. Their full-court pressure obviously rattled the less-experienced Indians, resulting in numerous steals.

Big Spring had an amazing 26 steals against Ysleta. Smith led the grand theft parade with seven, followed by her sister, Stephanie, who swiped four.

"We're a pretty young ballclub, but we'll get better as the season goes along," Big Spring coach George Martin said after the game. "That's our goal, to get better as a team. By district, we ought to be where

Tankers will contend

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring swim team served notice to 4-4A foes last week — the Steers and Lady Steers are teams to be reckoned with.

Last week at the Pecos Invitational, a meet that had all the 4-4A swim teams, Big Spring showed that it no longer is a pretender; it's a fully certified contender. Both Big Spring teams finished second in the invitational. The Steers were second to Pecos, and the Lady Steers finished behind Monahans. It was the highest finish ever for Big Spring teams in an invitational.

This weekend, the Steers will get another chance to show their prowess when they compete in the San Angelo Invitational today and Saturday.

Coach Harlan Smith welcomes a large, experienced boys squad back. Returning from last year's third place team are seven lettermen. Leading the way is senior and four-year letterman Johnny Webb, the school record holder in the 200 (1:57.13) and 500 (5:21.26) yard freestyle. Last year Webb narrowly missed making the regional finals in the 500.

Webb will also team with junior Abel Diaz, senior Chase Fraser and senior Chris Fuqua in the 400 freestyle relay. They also own the school record in the event with a time of 3:38.04. Smith says the group has already bettered that mark in practices this year.

Fuqua, a three-year letterman, owns the school record in the 200 yard freestyle (51.89).

Sophomore diver Brian Gordon is another letterman that scored lots of points last year. Other lettermen are sophomores Ricky Grimsley and Russ Roten.

Smith says he also also some good talent in newcomers like juniors DeWayne Partian, Shane Hicks and Shawn Anderson; sophomores Robert Woolvorton, Ken Noble, Jeff Johnson and Shane Roland; and juniors David Doll and Tony Taylor.

Members of First Church of the Nazarene, including the Rev. Gary Smith, Sue Smith, Helen Doll, C.J. Ward and Bud Smith, are praying for the safety of law enforcement officers, and county and city officials.

Power of prayer Church prays for law enforcement officers

By JAMES FLEEHR Staff Writer BIG SPRING — There is power in prayer. It exists. At least that is the consensus opinion of some Big Spring and Howard County officials who are benefitting from prayer offerings by local believers. Prayer efforts at the Church of the Nazarene by the congregation of the Rev. Gary Smith have been going on for the last year for the Howard County Sheriff's Department, Big Spring Police Department and others in authority.

prayer for his department. Big Spring Chief of Police Joe Cook said, "I'm a Christian. I believe in the power of prayer, used it often and relied on it all the time. "I know that they (the Church of the Nazarene) asked for a list of officers so they can put them on their prayer list. "I know that there is an organization called the Organization of Christian Cops. So there are organized efforts in regard to religious beliefs and practices. "I don't know of any qualitative way to measure it. Of course, I believe there is a difference. Certainly I welcome anything like that," he said. "As far as I know we can include every employee in the police department including civilians, jailers and officers (65) in all. "It's a good indication of the majority of the type of people we have out there. That is a good example of the community — the Nazarenes, particularly, because they have made a great demonstration. Youth Director and Associate Minister at the Church of Christ Doug Morris had also volunteered his efforts to the police prior to the prayer group's effort. "We have an active chaplain (Morris), who volunteers his time to the police department and works with the officers and their families. "My initial reaction (to the prayer) is that the people here have always prayed for of-beneficial for our city as the scripture has commanded us to do. Bryant said, "I had read this article back in August in the Guidepost magazine about 'Why don't we,' started by the family, the parents, of three police officers. They called it Shield-a-badge. "In Arlington there are about 400 that are praying for their police force. We've got to protect these boys. When she met chief Cook she decided 'Why don't we pray for them?' "That is where the idea came from and Bryant said she really appreciates the response of both Chief Cook and Sheriff Standard. Within an hour the personnel were listed and the lists sent to her. "So far every one of them are being prayed for once. It isn't costing anything, and it can be in Spanish or English. They can send cards to their officers. The main thing is we want the Lord's hand on our boys," she said. Parishoner Marjorie Goodwin was also responsible for the idea. "The basis behind the prayer efforts is an excerpt from the New Testament... First Timothy, Chapter 2, Verses one and two... 'I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; For kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty.' "It will continue as long as necessary," said Smith.

"We had more than enough participants for this effort to cover the two lists at least once and some doubled up on one name on their prayer assignments. And people were real excited about taking on responsibilities for praying for law enforcement officers and those that are in authority in our city and our county." — Pastor Gary Smith.

Church celebrates 'Dial-a-Story' teaches Christianity 60th anniversary

By JOHN McMILLAN Staff Writer Bakers Chapel A.M.E. Church will celebrate their 60th church anniversary on Sunday at 3 p.m. The Rev. James Green, Rockdale, former member of the church will be the speaker of the hour. The church invites everyone to join the celebration and fellowship with them Sunday. Dinner will be served after the 3 p.m. service. The Rev. Floyd Green Jr. is the pastor of the church.

By JOHN McMILLAN Staff Writer Area children can listen to a bedtime story while learning about Christianity. They can do that by calling "Dial-a-Story," 263-3049, and listening to a tape of a three-minute story with a Christian message. "That's what children need, is the gospel," said Louise Paulger, Big Spring, one of two women who run the tape. "You have to begin by changing the heart." Paulger said the stories are designed for children ages 5 through 12. The tape is provided by Child Evangelism Fellowship, based in Warrenton, Mo. Paulger and Leona Hooper, her partner in running the program, were West Texas directors for the CEF, and are now retired. They have run the program since 1985. There are 52 stories offered, and stories are changed every Saturday morning. "We can hear the machine ring, so we know lots of children call in," Paulger said. "Even late at night they'll call. "The children can call at any time, and as many times as they wish," Hooper said. "We're glad for the boys and girls to tell their friends about Dial-a-Story." Paulger and Hooper began the tapes in response to "Dial-a-Porn." "If they could hear that filth, they could call and hear something good," Paulger previously told the Herald.

The current story, about a little boy and his boat, concludes with this observation about God: "He made us, and we were lost, and he brought us back by Jesus paying the price, by his death on the cross." The service is sponsored by Carter's Furniture, Phillips Tire Company, Harold G. Smith O.D., Son-Shine Bookstore and Louis Stallings Insurance. Hooper and Paulger distribute cards to children bearing the phone number for the service. The cards can also be obtained at the sponsoring businesses. For more information about the service, parents or children may contact Hooper or Paulger at 263-4097.

Thanksgiving service set for Sunday

By JOHN McMILLAN Staff Writer STANTON — The town that prays together stays together. This Sunday at 7 p.m., Stanton residents will once again participate in the annual community Thanksgiving service, an ecumenical gathering. "Anything that can draw us closer together in the Christian movement is the value of the ecumenical movement that we have here in Stanton," said Rev. Tommie Beck, pastor of the First United Methodist Church. Beck's church, 208 East St. Anna Street, will host this year's service, Also participating in the service in which five Stanton-area ministers will participate. Beck will deliver the invocation and welcoming address, and Rev. James Shields, interim pastor of First Baptist Church, will deliver sermon. Rev. Leandro Gonzales, pastor of Iglesia Bautista Calvario, a Hispanic Baptist church, will read a scripture and prayer in Spanish. The other ministers involved in the service will be Father Frank L. Colacicco, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, and Rev. Clifford Ferguson, pastor of St. James Baptist Church.

will be Stacy Long, a student at Stanton High, who is president of the school's Fellowship of Christian Athletes. A community-wide choir will perform, directed by Penny Cleavenger, chancel choir director for the First United Methodist Church. Offerings at the service will go toward the county's benevolent program. The Thanksgiving service is one of two annual ecumenical services held in Stanton. The other ecumenical service is the annual Easter Cantata, which tells a story in music form.

Giving thanks is difficult

By FLYNN LONG JR.
 Special to the Herald

There is an account in the New Testament of 10 lepers who were healed of their disease, only one of whom returned to give thanks for this gift. Among other things the incident brings to mind how difficult it is for people to express thanksgiving, and it leads us to examine what true gratitude involves.

Next week includes a day of national Thanksgiving by presidential proclamation. It will no doubt include a lot of festivities, which are admittedly self-indulgent, commercial, hedonistic, and calculated to help us feel good about ourselves. It is probably going to be a far cry from the occasions of those first Thanksgivings in our land, whether we count the first to be in the Rio Grande Valley in 1598 at San Elizario, or Jamestown, Va. in 1609, or the Pilgrims of Massachusetts in 1621.

Those events celebrated a people's survival from a narrow brush with death, starvation, pain, and oppression. They were thankful to be alive and their future held no promise of comfort, affluence, or pleasure. Their gratitude expressed their intention to commit themselves to carry on with their lives in the face of very real challenges ahead.

Giving thanks for any gift, but especially the gift of life, needs to include a sense of commitment, if it is to be true gratitude. This is the spiritual reality of Thanksgiving and that is what makes giving thanks difficult for us. If we only count our blessings and rejoice in our good fortune without acknowledging the relationships we have with the source of our gifts, our thanksgiving is little more than arithmetic.

Saying "thank you" is difficult, because it demands that we live in growing relationships with our family, our friends, our community, our world, and our God, who sustains us from day to day.

Long is pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Big Spring.

'Drugs are devastating'

By BILLY GRAHAM
 DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I'm scared because I just found out my boyfriend is into cocaine, and, in fact, I think maybe he is dealing it as well as using it. He laughed at me when he offered me some and I refused, but I had a friend who killed herself in a car wreck after using drugs and I'm afraid of them. But I don't want to lose my boyfriend, either. I don't know where to turn. — W.D.

DEAR W.D.: First, you have done the right thing in refusing to take drugs. Drugs are destructive (as your friend's death tragically illustrated), no matter what people say who are involved in them. Every day I receive heartbreaking letters from people who are living with the devastation that comes from drugs, and God wants us to be free of them.

Unless your boyfriend radically changes — which I don't believe he can unless he turns his life over to Christ — you need to face the fact that there is no future in this relationship. It can only bring you heartache, disappointment and insecurity — and at some stage you might weaken and give in to the temptation to become involved in drugs yourself. Don't let your fear of being alone keep you from doing what is right and breaking off this relationship. The Bible says the only way to deal with sin is to flee from it. "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you" (James 4:7). Perhaps your action will bring this young man to his senses and help him realize the dangers he is dealing with.

The most important thing you can do, however, is to turn to Jesus Christ and let him be your guide and strength. God has a perfect plan for your life; don't settle for anything less.

Names in the news

LONDON (AP) — Novelist John Le Carre, whose best-known books powerfully evoke the Berlin Wall, said the breach of that Cold War symbol has left the West uncertain about how to react.

"The West, having got what it's been saying it wanted all those years, doesn't know from Adam what to do with it," he wrote in Thursday's Guardian newspaper.

But Le Carre said the changes in the East bloc present no obstacles for spy writers: "Don't imagine for one second that, just because the Cold War's over, the spooks aren't having a ball."

The 58-year-old Englishman, whose real name is David Cornwell, said his first best seller, "The Spy Who Came In From The Cold,"

Le CARRE emerged from the anger he felt on first seeing the Berlin Wall. In it, his two main characters are shot to death as they try to get over the wall to West Berlin.

GRAHAM Le Carre said "The Russia House," his latest novel, "drew on the Cold War in order to show that it was over for everyone except the professionals. That the wall should be coming down while my book is still around fills me with quiet joy."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A rock 'n' roll extravaganza to aid earthquake victims will unite some of music's biggest movers and shakers in a daylong, three-site marathon, promoter Bill Graham announced.

"Here in Northern California, we always thought we had the best vibrations anywhere, until Oct. 17," said Graham, who compared the disaster to "a 15-second war."

The Nov. 26 concerts will feature John Fogerty, Carlos Santana, Sheila E., Crosby, Stills & Nash, Neil Young, America, Eddie Money, the Chambers Brothers, Taj Mahal

DENNIS THE MENACE

"That's right, dear, God is always listening. You never have to wait for a beep."

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"My mom bought it and wrapped it. I didn't know it was a comb and brush!"

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1989

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Linda Evans, auto racer Tony Bettenhausen, pollster George Gallup, actor Jameson Parker.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Write influential people who can be helpful in the near future. Discard outmoded methods at work. A long-term romance works out better than you thought possible. Loved one shares an important secret.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An opportune day for making special requests and seeking bank loans. Romance will surprise you. Look for evening entertainment that will not put a crimp in the family budget. Potluck suppers are fun.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A tricky personal or financial problem demands your utmost discretion. Originality will bring the results you want. An unusual encounter arouses your curiosity about an attractive stranger.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Seek professional advice before signing documents. This is no time to get involved in other people's disputes. Scheduling appointments could prove frustrating. Wait for another day. Romance looks great.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Give full rein to your creative talents. Romance is exciting. Do not be afraid to ask old friends for advice. Accept a last-minute invitation with enthusiasm. You are apt to have a ball!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your ego gets a big boost when you come into contact with an old flame. Write to someone influential if you are in need of advice. An unexpected letter could contain a check.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Negotiations should be undertaken with caution. Think twice before signing your name on the dotted line. Stay within your budget. You risk alienating an older person if you fail to observe protocol.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A former love returns. Reject an offer that has too many strings attached. Although the financial picture improves, you should not go overboard when shopping. Cash in an I.O.U. to help your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Before tackling a monumental task that will rob you of time with your children, put things into proper perspective. You need to spend more time relaxing with those you love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Singles need to slow down and look where they are headed. You could find that you are on the wrong track. Call someone you have not talked to in a while. Family life beckons.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Treat yourself with more respect and your relatives will follow suit. A contest is fun if you don't take it too seriously. Work on projects that will benefit the whole family.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those who work with their hands can earn a nice bonus today. Creative endeavors enjoy highly favorable influences. Keep your ears and eyes open at social functions. You could meet someone very special.
