Garbage fees may increase $1 a month

By RUTH COCHRAN

City Editor

BIG SPRING - Recent state legislation and probable federal regulations could force the City Council to increase garbage fees by as much as $1 a month.

According to a recent memorandum from the city public works director to city council members, the city may have to increase fees to pay for a garbage tax imposed by the state and to cover the the costs that could result from proposed federal regulations for landfills. The city also needs money to meet equipment needs, the memo reported.

In the memo, Tom Decell said state senate bill 1519, which became effective Jan. 1, establishes a fee of 50 cents per ton for solid waste disposal at a state permitted landfill. Decell told the Herald that the city's landfill, the Signal Mountain Landfill, is state permitted as are all legal landfills within the state. He said Signal Mountain processes about 26,000

BIG SPRING — A significant number of cats in Big Spring may carry the Feline Immunodeficiency Virus, a virus similar to AIDS in humans.

A local veterinarian, and a Texas A&M feline specialist agree the virus, which they say can't be transmitted to humans, can't be contracted through casual contact.

The virus, according to an area veterinarian, is similar to the feline leukemia virus. However, unlike the FeLV, there is no vaccine for FIV.

Discovered in 1986 in a California cattery, cases of the virus have been diagnosed in Texas, as well as throughout the United States, Canada, Japan and Great Britain, according to Dr. Alice M. Wolf, feline specialist at Texas A&M College of Veterinary Medicine

Burt said of the 60 cats he tested in the last six months, 10 were FIV

Dr. Alfred Vardeman, of the Mitchell County Veterinary Clinic, reported of 15 cats he tested for the virus, seven were positive, adding

"There's more than that around." Vardeman also reports that most of the cats that tested positive were Male cats are twice as likely as females to contract the virus, Wolf said. "Males are more prone to get the disease. It's not that they're more susceptible, it's just that they're more likely to protect their territory," she explained.

When asked to comment on the virus, Stanton veterinarian Dr. Philip Whisnand said he didn't care

HOG-wild Santas grant girl's Christmas wish

Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — For the second year in a row, a hog-wild Santa came to the aid of a needy Big Spring family?

After helping a homeless family of nine celebrate Christmas in 1988, HOG (Harley Owners' Group) members decided to give a sevenyear-old cerebral palsy victim "the only Christmas gift she wanted" a king-sized tricycle.

Catrina Dodderer was born with the disease and pedaling on a tricycle is about the only kind of physical activity she can do well, her mother, Irene, said.

'She walks with a walker,' Irene said, "and she can stand on her own for a few seconds, but she doesn't have very good balance. About all she can do is ride her

And a tricycle is what Catrina wanted most of all for Christmas

"I asked Santa (for a trike) at the mall when I went to see him there," Catrina said. "I knew he might bring me one.

Although Catrina is average size for a seven-year-old, finding a tricycle large enough for her was a problem. Compounding the problem is the fact that Irene is unemployed, with precious little money to spend on over-sized

U.S. ships may blockade Columbia to stop drugs

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — The aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy has been chosen to lead an anti-drug interdiction effort off the coast of Colombia, but final decisions about when the warship may be put to work haven't been made yet, a Defense Department source said Saturday

The carrier and an accompanying guided missile cruiser, the USS Virginia, left Norfolk, Va., on Thursday to engage in routine training exercises in the Atlantic, a Pentagon official said, but he added that a question mark remained as to when and if the warships would see duty in a proposed U.S.-Colombian anti-drug interdiction effort.

"That's the group. The JFK is the one to be used," said the official. "But it's still a question when they'd he put to use

Two Colombian radio networks, Caracol and RCN, on Saturday quoted unnamed Pentagon sources as saying the ships were headed toward Colombia to begin setting up a blockade to try to stop drug smugglers.

But the Pentagon official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the final plans were still being worked out on a Pentagon proposal to launch a virtual air and sea blockade of the Colombian coastline as part of an effort to help Colombia curb the illicit narcotics exports of its drug cartels.

An administration U.S. official Saturday denied that any blockade was under way.

"Nothing's been initiated," in terms of activating such efforts, he

"We are consulting" with the Colombians and will continue to do so over the next few days, the administration official said.

Dr. Bobby Lawdermilk said he wasn't aware the virus existed. "As far as I know I haven't seen any (cats) with the virus," he said. FIV. Wolf noted, is in the same family of viruses as the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, which is known as Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, commonly called AIDS. However, because it is a feline virus it can't be transmitted to humans, Burt said.

"It's a separate virus . . . As far as we know the virus can't be or other animals,'' he said.

Because the virus has only recently been isolated, there is some debate as how the virus is transmitted.

Although the virus is present in saliva, blood, and cerebrospinal (brain fluids) fluid, according to Wolf, biting is the only proven method of transmission. However, Burt contends the virus can be transmitted through saliva, tears and sexual relations. As in human AIDS, the FIV's origin is still unknown.

"Who knows where it started. don't know all the ins and outs of it . . . But it is here," Burt said.

The incubation period, which is similar to human AIDS, could take vears before the cat shows any signs of illness. However, after infection, a cat may show signs as early as four to six weeks after innoculation, including a fever that lasts for several days, and enlarged lymph nodes may appear anywhere from four to nine weeks after becoming infected.

Other signs include an enlarged abdomen, re-occurring infections, chronic diarrhea, and a negative leukemia test, Burt noted.

'The virus itself won't kill. It's the secondary diseases that will . . . urinary tract infections. respiratory infections," Burt explained.

Because the side effects of AZT - which is used to treat human transmitted from cats to humans AIDS patients — are too severe in cats, at this time there is no treatment for the fatal feline virus, he said

"There is sufficient minority population geographically concentrated in such a way that if single member districts are created. minorities will be able to elect representatives of their choice,' the suit states.

The filing of the suit followed a 4-3 council vote in September to reject a deal worked out by Rees and LULAC attorney Rolando Rios of San Antonio which would have allowed Rios to devise a singlemember district system for a $7.500 fee.

Baum, who voted to approve the deal, said he still hopes an agreement can be worked out before the suit goes to court.

Dissenting Councilman Brian Bassham said he wants to wait until the council has more legal advice before they decide on a deal.

"I just want to wait and see, let whoever we find look over all the data and see what they think," he said. That data may include information on who has been elected to the City Council in the past, he

Baum says that the city has elected minorities in the past and was surprised by the suit when he found out about it last month. However, he said he agrees the council should be elected from single-member districts.

The city does have a history of electing minorities which I thought was the criteria for having a court test," he said previously. However, he said he thinks minorities do need more involvement and representation.

Bassham has said he does not believe single-member districting would help minority voting strength because their population is spread throughout the county.

He has also critized an estimated jump from $1,000 to $6,000 in costs to hold an election. On Friday he expressed further dissatisfaction that the city must now pay the costs of hiring attorneys.

"The only thing I'm sure of right now is it's going to cost the city a bunch of money," he said. "That's the only thing I'm really disappointed about.

City Manager Brenda Hammond said Friday that she does not know how much it will cost the city to hire two attorneys Similar LULAC lawsuits were filed against the Colorado City Independent School District concerning school board elections and the state of Texas regarding district judicial elections in nine counties.

In September, an agreement was reached by attorneys on both sides in the suit against the Colorado City ISD, which was filed in January 1989. Last year's March board elections, suspended by a U.S. District judge in Abilene, will be held sometime this year.

Under terms of the agreement, all seven school board positions will be up for election once the voting plan is approved by the U.S. Justice Department. School officials expected that approval to come in December and are still waiting to hear from the Justice Department.

BIG SPRING — Emma Leos is hoping the spirit of the holiday season will spill over into January.

Leos, who works at the Jiffy Car Wash on Fourth Street, was working on a car when her keys fell unnoticed from her jacket pocket into the car. Leos said when she realized the keys, which include her car and house key, were missing she asked her co-workers if they had seen

Her co-workers said no — but the lady who just drove off has them. Leos said the woman, a tall blond driving a red 1989 or 1990 Chrysler New Yorker, noticed the keys in her car. When no one at the car wash claimed them, however, the woman drove off with them.

Leos said she will fetch the missing keys if the woman will call 267-8538, or the keys can be dropped off at 1208 Marijo.

Youthful heroine

DALLAS (AP) - An 8-yearold girl who rescued her vounger sister from their burning home is being hailed as a role model and a hero.

Kate Cargill drew on her fire safety lessons to save herself and 6-year-old Erin Cargill as flames engulfed her Dallas home last November.

"She's a brave little girl," said Carolyn Garcia, spokeswoman for the Dallas Fire Department. "We cannot stress enough the importance of visiting with children about fires and telling them what to do."

"I just knew what to do," the second-grader said matter-offactly after receiving a commendation for bravery from the fire department on Friday.

Kate and Erin were asleep in a front bedroom when the fire broke out Nov. 30. Their parents were out of town and their baby sitter fled the burning house after a smoke alarm sounded.

Smoke poured under the bedroom door, waking Kate. Remembering what she had been taught by her parents and in school, she crawled along the floor and touched the doorknob. It was hot. Crawling back across the room, she found her second exit: a picture window.

Cold weather sends oil prices to four-year high

DALLAS (AP) — Domestic oil prices, driven by falling temperatures and rising demand, have hit the highest level in four years, already topping what many petroleum industry analysts had expected as a peak for 1990.

Many said the Wednesday surge to levels approaching $24 a barrel for February delivery of West Texas Intermediate crude oil probably couldn't last long. Nonetheless, they were busy revising their forecasts for the year.

At the 20 bucks that we saw in November, I forecast a trail off to $17 or $18 by April, and then I expected things to recover in the balance of the year," said Stephen A. Smith, an analyst at Bear Stearns & Co. in New York.

"Now it won't go a lot lower than 19 bucks," he said Friday. Others were looking for a drop of about $2 the price fell back 27 cents on Thursday and 33 cents Friday to close the week at $23.08, vs. $21.50 a week earlier.

The so-called posted price, what refiners are willing to pay for immediate delivery, also jumped $1.50 during the week to $22.50, before several refineries began cutting back to $22 Friday the decline," he said. afternoon.

Except for a one-day jump last April, the levels were the highest since 1986, when oil prices began to fall from the high $20s before bottoming out in the $10 per barrel The runup was caused by a

Analysts said the demand for crude oil to replenish the stock likely will keep the price from falling rapidly, although they expect a decline before prices climb again toward the end of the year, perhaps to $24 a barrel.

For consumers, the recent jump in oil prices already has made a stiff impact, especially for users of home-heating oil. Gasoline users Milwaukee, said the weather, passengers are getting socked with

that's happened since the 1970s oil crises

Some industry analysts say the sudden surge in demand for oil has revived respect for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, a key source of supplies. Only a few months ago when OPEC decided on a combined production level of about 22 million barrels a day, many analysts thought that was too much and would depress prices. But now that level seems about right.

'The weather may have bailed OPEC out a bit here," said Smith of Bear Stearns

Others said increased international demand, especially in Brazil and Japan, had soaked up any excess supplies.

Even if the price retreats, the domestic industry's recovery from the price collapse a few years ago prices back down, he said.

After Wednesday's high of $23.68, coupled with problems at domestic fuel surcharges, the first time should continue, said David Lee Smith, analyst at Eppler, Guerin &

> "My sense is that most of the major oil companies test their projects at $15 a barrel," he said. "If they become convinced as time goes on that we've got stable prices above that, it bodes well for the continuing recovery."

Many of the major oil companies already plan to increase spending on exploration this year, and new technology is helping revive fields once thought to be dry.

The increased prices carry some danger, warned Lysle Brinker, editor of Petroleum Outlook, in that they could persuade OPEC to increase quotas at its spring meeting. More oil would send

Mattox investigates propane prices

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox says his office is investigating the recent quadrupling of the price of propane, a fuel used for heating and Wholesale propane prices rose to about 80 cents per gallon during the first week of January, from a low of about 20 cents per gallon the first week of December, Mattox said.

The prices rose while Texas endured an Arctic freeze that plunged temperatures across the state to record lows just before Christmas.

"As soon as the freezing temperatures hit Texas, the price of propane rocketed," Mattox said. "We do not believe the price increased because of a shortage of propane. We believe the prices increased to take advantage of consumers dependent on the fuel for

"That's wrong. That's pricegouging. That's illegal," Mattox

The attorney general said all of his regional offices in Texas have received consumer complaints about the increase in propane prices.

Retailers and wholesalers have blamed the price increase on low supply and high demand due to a winter that has been colder than

A challenge for our courts

Manuel Noriega, wearing his general's uniform, has surrendered to American soldiers and drug enforcement agents and is now sitting in a Miami jail. Even as he was being flown north, they were dancing in the streets of Panama City. There will not be many, either in Panama or anywhere else, who will shed a tear.

Yet as Noriega was marched into the federal courtroom Thursday (Jan. 4) to face his indictment on drug, racketeering and money laundering charges, he was followed by a battalion of legal questions, domestic and international, that may be devil this case for years.

Given the circumstances of his capture, can he get a fair trial? Do U.S. courts even have jurisdiction and, if so, where can a jury be found that will not have prejudged his case? Are there really people who have not made up their minds about his character, if not his guilt? And what of the classified documents pertaining to Noriega's extended relationship with the CIA and a series of U.S. officials, including George Bush himself? If the government attempts to withhold some of the documents that his lawyers are certain to insist will be essential for his defense — no matter how tangential to the case — will it not reinforce suspicions that the administration is trying to cover something up? Noriega's lawyers will march into court with briefcases full of commendatory letters, the most recent of them from Ed Meese, Richard Thornburg's predecessor as attorney general, about his wonderful cooperation with the United States in its efforts to control the flow of drugs.

Yet even these questions may be relatively simple compared to the precedents that this case may generate. If the United States can seize — can indeed send 25,000 troops to seize - any alleged criminal anywhere in the world, why can't the Soviets or the Chinese or anyone else? One nation's terrorist can easily be another nation's hero: Think of Yasir Arafat or Menachem Begin.

What is certain in this case is that it will put enormous burdens on every element of the legal system that comes in touch with it, even if a plea bargain is struck, because that system is being asked to do something for which it was never designed — to take a foreign despot who was seized by an American force in a foreign country and treat him as an ordinary criminal.

Because Noriega was Panama's dictator, and because Panama is in some respects a particular U.S. concern, there are good reasons for bringing him to book, but those reasons will hardly be comfortable in an ordinary court of law. As Noriega's trial goes forward, said Sen. Edward Kennedy yesterday, "the world will have a unique opportunity to see the fairness of American justice and its essential role in our democracy." In these circumstances, that is as much a challenge as a prediction.

Helping hands

The holiday season may already be all but forgotten. but the example of Allen Dong should be an example for all seasons. A researcher at the University of California, Davis, Dong saw a way to make his own small contribution toward alleviating world hunger. And the results could pay off in a hig way - not for Dong, perhaps, but

For many of the undeveloped nations that rely on rice. the only way to remove the hulls is by laboriously grinding the kernels in a bowl, just as people have done for centuries. Mechanical rice hullers cost anywhere from $2,000 to $40,000 and are even more expensive to operate and to maintain. So Dong began tinkering with the idea of making a mechanical huller that would be powered by hand and sell for less than $200. By the time he was through, he had come up with one that costs no more than $2.50 as a kit.

Dong isn't bothering to patent his idea. There's not much need for his device in the United States and other industrialized nations, and it's not likely that a patent would be respected in the parts of the world where Dong hopes it will be used. Besides, putting barriers in the way of hungry people wasn't the idea at all. "I'm living in a wealthy country," Dong observed. "I don't need to get wealthy off the Third World."

Hurrah.

Script beats out issues in 1990

By JESSE TREVINO

When legendary Texan Sam Rayburn first saw a political campaign ad on television, he retorted that televised political campaigning would one day put an actor in the White House. But even Mr. Speaker Rayburn could not have imagined the transformation wrought by the campaign successes of that first actor in the White House, Ronald Reagan: The 1990's will be the first decade in which every successful political campaign will be directed like a movie with the candidate in the

The campaign manager of the 90's needs two things: a good script (that is, one which will win votes). and an actor that fits the role called for by the script. With the official opening of the 1990 campaign year and the last-minute filings by anxious candidates, one can already assess the degree of success likely to be achieved by several campaign movies in the Texas political academy award balloting that will take place in March and

Current leader in the race for best picture goes to the Clayton Williams campaign. Both its script and its actor are vintage Reagan. Williams is Texas' Ronald Reagan. Charming, secure, confident, the epitome of the rugged, romantic West, Williams can Aw, shucks you to death, and win lots of votes in the process. His response to the drug problem, You tell them they haven't met Clayton Williams, is eerily reminiscent of Reagan's 1980 response to questions about how he would control federal spending:

the job done) - falls short of the Williams script. The proof of this lies in the outcome of the 1988 competence, not ideology vs. don't worry, be happy campaign bet-ween Michael Dukakis and George Bush. The script, not issues, is what sells today

The script of Kent Hance — we can restore Texas to her former greatness by rebuilding our oil industry — is frighteningly similar to what Adolf Hitler was preaching during the 1930's: that Germany could be great again by rebuilding its industrial and military might. This script casts Hance in the role of extolling the past, a story line that perhaps might sell. Jack Rains is still looking for an available script in which he can star. So far, no luck

On the Democratic side, Ann Richards appears to have the qualities of Clyaton Williams. She can play the Aw, shucks routine just as well. But Richards may let her campaign drift toward a discussion of the issues, forgetting that in the 1990's, discussion of issues can kill a campaign.

Richards, consciously or not, has been using the Williams approach to cruise past primary opponents Jim Mattox and Mark White with little or no effort. After all, who the issues? She got to her pollleading role certainly not because voters know where she stands on the issues. Late entry Mark White has a good script, but it casts White in the role of Sam Houston and somehow, White doesn't fit the part. Richards may be able to discuss issues in the primary and still beat Mattox and White, but if she wants to be governor, she will have to confront Clayton Williams on his own terms. If she tries to confront him on the issues, it will be like Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale against Reagan all over again.

The worst casting snafu comes from the Rob Mosbacher for Lt. Governor campaign. Mosbacher is attempting to portray himself as the outsider, anti-Austin, antiestablishment candidate. But Mosbacher, whose Daddy Warbucks father is multi-millionaire Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher Sr., oozes establishment from every pore. Worse still, Mosbacher Jr.'s establishment credentials are the inherited variety, not the earned ones that belong to his father and his father's crony, George Bush.

Mosbacher's opponent for Lt. Governor, Comptroller Bob Bullock, has the best of all possible scenarios. He fits the Reagan mold and can Aw shucks with the best of 'em down at the American Legion hall. But Bullock's aggressive prosecution of delinquent taxpayers and right-on-the-nose financial and economic analyses have earned him a reputation as a consummate get the job done and get it done right political executive.

The 1980's put an actor in the White House. The 1990's will put acting in all political campaigns. This does not necessarily mean putting actors in all political offices. But as long as the American public re-successful candidates for public office will have to act well enough to get elected. We have already seen what it is like trying to teach an actor to govern. We can only hope that campaign managers will have more success teaching politicians who already know the issues how to

OK, then have a nice life

BY ROBERT WERNSMAN Publisher

Admit it now — there are phrases that bug you, aren't there?

By assuming that, I presume that you're also affronted by certain everyday comments that people use so often that they become part of our language. That doesn't necessarily mean that they are correct or should be encouraged, but they remain part of our conversation.

It seems to me that this first column of the new year of the last decade of this centry is the perfect opportunity to vent my spleen — so to speak — on the matter.

After all, as I tell my closest friend, it gets wearying being so perfect and having to put up with others less perfect when all I need do is share these few pointers and there might be more perfect folks around.

As Steve Reagan is prone to say after his column is written, edited, published and distributed -They will understand that this is tongue in cheek, won't they?'

Perhaps, but probably not Despite that real possibility, I offer you this, my plea for sanity in the use of the English language during the 1990s. I write that at the same time I admit the English has been mangled in this space on occasion, but that doesn't prevent me from doing battle with these phrase

These are not the painful remnants of the '80s — like "Greed is good" and "downtime" and the other goodies that the "me decade" had to offer. I'll hope those die a painful death thanks to the natural course of time.

No, the phrases I refer to have been with us longer and, therefore, may be more difficult to eradicate Among them:

 Completely destroyed. No need for that extra word Destroyed; now that is a pretty powerful word. Can you imagine telling someone that your car was destroyed and there being any doubt that it was beyond repair? Destroyed. That seems pretty complete all by itself. Let's give this "completely destroyed" a long overdue rest.

• Behind your back. Okay, you might think I'm walking perilously close to the edge on this one, but where do you think behind your back really is? Presuming that when someone stands behind you stand in front of you they must be

'behind your back'' — right? Okay, I'll grant you that this won't change the world much one way or the other, but when you ac cuse someone of having said something "behind my back," is that what you really mean?

• Hi, I'm Susan and I'll be your waitress today! I'll pin this one on my older daughter. It was Kate who brought to our attention one evening the annoyance of hearing this phrase. Of course, my daughters tend to see waitresses more often than some people, thanks to their father's reluctance to get too deep into the cooking business too often.

No, I never begrudge friendly waitresses. Yet, I must tell you that everybody at the table enjoyed a big laugh when Kate informed us that she thought it would be a good idea to respond: "Hello, my name is Kate and I'll be your customer today!

• Have a good day. I'd grown accustomed to this phrase and even accepted the graciousness with which it's usually offered until a friend shared her New York cabbie experience. Being a West Texan through and through she offered a friendly "Have a nice day!" as she exited his cab, only to have him respond: "Only one!?" All right buddy, have a nice life

however long a New York cabbie's life might be And finally, my most bothersome phrase:

 You can't have your cake and eat it, too. Of course you can have your cake and eat it too. We do it all the time. Why, I'll bet the average person typically has their birthday cake and eats it, too. Unless, of course, calories get in the way.

But that doesn't mean they can't have their cake and eat it.

What is really meant is this: You can't eat your cake and have it, too." Either you eat your cake, or you have it, but you can't eat it and have it; but you certainly can have it and eat it.

Rally ends without confrontation

ATLANTA (AP) — More than 2,000 law-enforcement officers sealed off the area surrounding the state Capitol Saturday morning and maintained order as about 50 white supremacists and 100 counterdemonstrators rallied. The Klan-led rally ended without any confrontations after about 75 minutes. However, a shouting match broke out as Klansmen returned to their cars. Counterdemonstrators a halfblock away began jeering and the supremacists responded with shouts and Nazi-style salutes As a Klan motorcade left the Capitolarea counterdemonstrators burned a figure made of sheets as a Ku Klux Klan effigy. Officials said 1,594 Georgia National Guardsmen, 300 Atlanta police officers, 184 state troopers and 145 agents from the Georgia Bureau of Investigation were present during the rally, separating the Klan contingent from about two dozen counterdemonstrators who marched two blocks away.

Invasion angers Latin Americans

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Joyful Panamanians applauded the GIs who ousted dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega, but for many elsewhere in Latin America, the U.S. invasion left a bitter taste.

In an angry response to the Dec. 20 invasion, Peruvian President Alan Garcia initially suspended anti-narcotics operations with U.S. agents in his country and said he would not show up at a drug conference with other Andean leaders and President Bush.

Mexico, traditionally a critic of American military intervention, announced it would continue relations with Panama but said it would not send back its ambassador, Carlos Planck, to Panama City.

A leading political opposition group, the conservative National Action Party, called the American invasion a "transgression of the most elemental principles of international law by a country who says it is respectful of juridical norms."

Panamanians took to the streets to applaud Noriega's surrender to U.S. authorities Wednesday and his departure to Florida to face U.S. drug trafficking charges. Public opinion polls show wide Panamanian approval of the U.S. actions.

But independent newspapers in Mexico, Chile and Brazil, mindful of a history of U.S. intervention in Latin America, lambasted the invasion.

Calling Noriega's capture "a tiny war trophy for the biggest power on earth," Chile's Ultimas Noticias

"We don't like General Noriega, nor the way he ruled his country. Nevertheless, neither his bragging, nor his links to corruption, nor his lack of respect for the verdicts of the polls, justify that the United States, which always likes to pontificate about juridical principles, tramples these in order to get its

The Brazilian newspaper Jornal do Brasil called the capture "a Pyrrhic victory" for the United States and praised the Vatican, in whose embassy Noriega was a refugee for more than a week, for "maintaining an impeccable line of conduct - the same cannot be said for U.S. intervention.

"The occupation forces established an aggressive ring around the Vatican embassy, invaded the Nicaraguan ambassador's residence and dealt violent blows to continental cooperation,'

Haiti announces election dates

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The Electoral Council has scheduled presidential elections for October and legislative elections in July, state-run Radio Nationale said Saturday.

The council said the elected president will be installed in ofice on Feb. 7, 1991, five years after ex-dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier's fled during antigovernment protests. Duvalier is now living in France.

The balloting will be Haiti's third attempt at general elections since the end of Duvalier's rule in

In the November 1987 elections. thugs supported by soldiers attacked voters, killing at least 36 people. Then-military ruler Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy canceled the vote and dissolved the Electoral Council, accusing it of being controlled by foreign powers.

Namphy organized elections in January 1988, which most voters boycotted. Leslie Manigat was declared the winner, but Namphy ousted him in a coup in June 1988.

Namphy was ousted three months later in a military revolt that brought Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril to

Iran dismisses Iraq peace talks

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran dismissed an Iraqi proposal for reviving peace talks between the two countries as "a new campaign of public deception," Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Saturday.

The dispatch, monitored in Cyprus, said Iraq's three-point plan offered Friday only reworded previous Iraqi demands. Talks on a permanent end to the eightyear conflict have been stalemated since a cease-fire in August 1988.

The announcement came as Iraq displayed new weaponry, including Iraqi-built missiles, during its annual Army Day. Iran did not reject President Saddam Hussein's offer outright but described it as "a new campaign of public deception to undermine (U.N. Security Council) Resolution 598," the ceasefire resolution.

"In fact, Saddam reiterated Irag's previous proposals that were extraneous to the resolution, only giving them a new wrapping," it said.

they know what they don't like. At the head of the list is a planned bit of "performance art" that consists of squashing Sniffy the rat between two canvases with a 55-pound concrete block.

Rick Gibson plans to dispatch his pet in the name of art this afternoon at the Vancouver Public Library. A stand Gibson built for the event bears signs reading, "This rat is going to die" and "Free Art Lesson Soon. But a number of animal lovers

Very low-calorie diets can be dangerous

CHICAGO — Television talk show hostess Oprah Winfrey shows off a new trimmed-down figure doing a November 1988 taping of her show in Chicago. Doctors warn that very-low-calorie diets similar to Winfrey's can cause complications and even death if not supervised by trained physicians.

CHICAGO (AP) — Overweight people fighting the battle of the oulge can diet themselves to death in improperly supervised very-low-calorie programs that are used by more than a million Americans, doctors warned today

Such liquid diets require management by a specially trained physician, and by a behavioral psychologist and dietician, the doctors wrote in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Although the diets are "unquestionably safer" than their liquidprotein predecessors, which were blamed for at least 58 deaths during the 1970s, they still have dangers, said the article's authors.

"The recent and zealous marketing of various formula products to physicians, as well as the public's appetite for such diets, could lead to yet another round of complications and fatalities," wrote the doctors, who are from the University of Pennsylvania, Columbia University and Harvard Medical School.

Very-low-calorie diets provide 400 to 800 calories daily through a high-protein powder. The dieter'adds water or milk and drinks the liquid three to five times daily instead of eating food. After 12 to 16 weeks on the regimen, the dieter gradually resumes eating normal food.

Such diets, like the Optifast program used by talk show host Oprah Winfrey in her celebrated 67-pound weight loss, should be avoided by people who need to lose less than 40 pounds or 30 percent of their body weight, said the authors, two of whom are consultants for the maker of Optifast.

People with certain heart problems also shouldn't go on the diets, they'said.

Short-term health problems from the diets can include dehydration; an imbalance of electrolytes, the chemicals that carry electrical impulses sparking the heart'to pump; inadequate blood pressure after standing or sitting up rapidly, which can cause fainting; and increased uric acid concentrations, which promote gout, the authors said.

Long-term complications could include severe abnormalities in heartbeat — the culprit in the liquid-protein-diet deaths especially by dieters who lose control and go on eating sprees during "refeeding," the authors

Such problems can be headed off early or prevented entirely with proper supervision, the authors said.

In November, Ms. Winfrey announced on her show that she had regained 17 of the 67 pounds she lost a year earlier

But "she has maintained 75 percent of her weight loss, which we consider to be consistent with an average patient going through the program," said Jim Parsons, a spokesman for Sandoznutrition Corp., which markets the Optifast

Intensive supervision is a requirement of the program, Parsons said Thursday in a telephone interview from Minneapolis.

Optifast, which costs about $3,000 and requires at least a year's commitment by the patient, has been available since the mid-1970s and has been used by more than 600,000 patients, Parsons said.

It contrasts sharply with products marketed directly to private physicians, with the promise of greatly increasing their income, said Thomas A. Wadden, associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine and co-author of the journal article.

Wadden said as many as 12,000 doctors are now providing verylow-calorie diets as part of their outpatient practice

'The problem is that these persons are going to help their patients lose weight, but the patients are destined to regain the weight, because they have not learned to modify their eating, exercise and dietary habits, Wadden said.

ax

Liquid-protein diets of the 1970s used a poor-quality protein, while the newer diets use high-quality protein, plus vitamins and other nutrients, said Wadden.

INFORMATION REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

Unreported income accounts for billions of dollars of lost tax revenue each year. Stiffer reporting requirements have been written into tax legislation of recent years, and each year the IRS looks for unreported income by matching these reports to individual tax returns.

You can expect to receive a Form 1099 (an information slip much like a W-2 wage statement) by January 31st if you had income from the following sources: (1) $10 or more of interest, dividends, royalties, unemployment compensation, state or local income tax refunds, original issue discount, patronage dividends, or retirement plan or deferred compensation plan distributions; (2) $600 or more in a liquidating distribution from a corporation, rents, prizes, or awards paid by a business, or payments for services performed for a business where employee status did not exist; (3) any amount paid crew members of fishing boats on the sale of fish, sales of securities, futures transactions or commodities, and bartering exchange transactions; (4) $5,000 or more for consumer products sold to someone else for resale anywhere other than in a permanent retail establishment.

The payor who sends the Form 1099 to you will also be submitting the same report to the IRS by February 28th. Those who receive $600 or more of mortgage interest or $10,000 or more in cash in connection with a business transaction must file an information return both with the IRS and with the payor of the money.

Lenders who foreclose in a transaction connected with trade or business must file a report with Trustees of IRA accounts are required to report the amount of contributions and the year for which they are made. Real estate transactions and the sale of a business must be reported to the IRS. Contact our office if you need more information or assistance with these or other reporting requirements

Elderly faced with soaring insurance rates

WASHINGTON— Elderly to hold hearings on the SOC Americans, who celebrated the "The repeal of catastrophic canillness insurance program last fall, now are facing whopping increases in private "medigap" insurance rates - a change insurance officials blame on the demise of the government program

Medigap is the generic term for insurance plans that cover medical ests not paid by Medicare. About 10 percent of Americans aged 55 and older are enrolled in some sort of supplemental policy.

As the federal catastrophic illness program expires next month, most insurers will react by raising their medigap rates 20 to 25 per-surance Association of America.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield state programs, which write 40 percent of all medigap policies, expect rate increases averaging 29 percent in 1990 for supplemental programs.

The Blue Cross increases will vary from state to state. For example, the monthly premium for West Virginia Blue Cross will increase from $44.73 to $59.44 — an increase of $176.53 for the year. New Jersey Blue Cross was proposed increasing its monthly premiums from $38.33 to $48.66

The large rate increases have sparked protests from consumer groups who say the insurance industry is looking for a windfall. At least two Senate committees plan repeal of the federal catastrophic not account for anything but a small proportion (of the rate increases) because a great majority of those benefits were never implemented," said Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Medicare and Long-term Care. But insurance officials defend the higher premiums, saying a large part of the increase can be attributed to the repeal of the catastrophic illness insurance program, the largest expansion of the federal health-insurance program since Medicare's inception in 1965. "Health care costs are continu said Alissa Fox of Blue Cross "Everybody knows that providing those (long-term) benefits are going to cost a lot of money. It's logical that someone has to pay for

Even if the federal government had continued the catastrophic illness program, medigap rates still would have increased by 7 to 12 percent because of soaring healthcare costs, said Donald B. White of the Health Insurance Association.

The federal insurance program was repealed last fall after upperincome seniors protested the plan's annual surtax of up to $800 levied on higher-income beneficiaries

Water deliveries

BIG SPRING - Water deliveries to municipalities served by the Colorado River Municipal Water District showed a 7.13 percent gain for December, but broken water mains accounted for part of the increase.

Total deliveries stood at 1,117,660,838 gallons, of which 1.000,155,050 gallons went to municipalities and 117,505,788 gallons to oil companies.

Municipal gains amounted to 66.57 million gallons more or 7.13 per cent, but the nearrecord pre-Christmas freeze wrought havoc on city distribution systems. For instance, demands by the four principal municipal users increased in the five days starting with Christmas by 36.8 million gallons over the preceding five days. Take this out, and the percentage of gain for the cities would be 3.21 for the month. Oil company deliveries dropped 26,092,000 gallons, of 18.71 per cent from December a year ago.

By cities, Big Spring received 236,397,250 gallons, a gain of 7.59 per cent, but it had by far the biggest post-freeze jump; Midland 276,956,000 gallons, down .44 of one per cent (Midland was pinching down to stay within its contract quantity); Odessa 404,035,000 gallons, up 11.80 per cent; Snyder 71,536,000/gallons, up 9.56 per cent: Stanton 7,472,000 gallons, up 87.36 per cent. Robert Lee took only 1,568,000 gallons as against 4,932,000 a year ago, and San Angelo took 2,190,000 gallons whereas it used none in December of 1988.

For the year deliveries amounted to 17,274,906,032 gallons, up nearly a billion gallons over 1988 or 5.94 per cent. Cities used 15,790,338,000 gallons up 1.1 billion gallons or 7.59 per cent; oil companies 1,484,062,192 gallons, down 8.89 per cent.

Crossroads Chambers plan annual banquets

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Martin County

STANTON - Restructuring the state's school finance system will probably be addressed by Rep. Jim Rudd, D-

Brownfield whenhe speaks at the annual Martin County Chamber of Commerce banquet Jan.

Rudd will be attending the RUDD second meeting of the Governor's Task Force on School Finance, which will be held Jan. 8-10 in Austin, before he travels to Stanton to address the Chamber.

The Task Force was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements in November to come up with a new state school finance plan by March. The Texas Supreme Court ruled in October that the present system unfairly discriminates against poorer school districts.

''I'm sure I'll talk about that a little," Rudd said Thursday.

"All we're going to do at that meeting is hear testimony on ideas that have been brought up by different organizations," he said. "There's three days of it so there's going to be a full load.

"This is our first full-fledged meeting," he said. The Task Force first met in December following a special session of the House to pass a workmen's compensation bill, he said. That meeting was to get organized

Look-alikes often get a second glance

By JOHN McMILLAN Staff Writer

If you're tempted to ask for the autograph of former President Jimmy Carter or NFL quarterback Joe Montana when you run into them at the grocery store, you might want to think twice.

Guy A. White Jr., who resembles Carter, freely admits he voted for Reagan in the 1980 presidential election. And Steve Herm, the Montana look-alike, says his quarterbacking days ended in high school.

"I wasn't that good," said Herm, 36, a certified public accountant in Stanton. Herm said he does not remember what percentage of his passes he completed at Sands High School in Ackerly. Although he enjoyed playing football, Herm said, he remembers Sands as "not a real strong football school.

Herm doesn't mind basking in Montana's glory, however.

"It's kind of flattering, to say the least," he said of people telling him he resembles the San Francisco 49ers quarterback. "It's nice to be told I look like him. It would be nice to be making the kind of money he makes."

football team, Herm said, 49ers finish a close second, and Montana is his favorite player in professional football.

"He's real poised, he never seems to get flustered at all," Herm said. "He just stands back in there, stands in the pocket under pressure and always seems to be able to get the pass off — and most of the time to get it completed."

The Herm family may be offering a professional player of its own someday — Herm's 9-year-old son, "He's always telling me he's go to be a professional football player," Herm said. "He doesn't lack for confidence. He's got his

Browns win thriller; 49ers romp

By CHUCK MELVIN AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND - Bernie Kosar threw three touchdown passes, rookie Eric Metcalf scored on a 90-yard kickoff return and the Cleveland Browns held off the Buffalo Bills 34-30 Saturday to reach the AFC championship game for the third time in four seasons.

The Browns (10-6-1) will next play the winner of Sunday's Pittsburgh-Denver game. Cleveland lost AFC title games to the Broncos at the end of the 1986 and 1987 seasons

Forced to go for a touchdown because of a crucial extra-point miss minutes earlier. Buffalo moved 63 yards to the Cleveland 11 with 20 seconds left. Jim Kelly, who threw for four TDs and 405 yards, then had Ronnie Harmon open in the end zone, but the ball glanced off his fingertips.

On the next play, Kelly's pass was intercepted by linebacker Clay Matthews at the 1 with three seconds remaining and the Browns ran out the clock

Kosar, playing despite hand and elbow injuries, completed 20 of 29 passes for 251 yards and was not intercepted. Kelly was 28-for-54 with two interceptions as the AFC East champion Bills finished 9-8.

With Cleveland leading 24-21 in the third quarter, Metcalf took Scott Norwood's kick at the 10, darted through a huge hole up the middle and raced down the right sideline for a 31-21 lead with 4:23 left in the period.

Metcalf, overcoming a bruised toe, gave the Browns their first touchdown ever on a kickoff return in the playoffs, and their first in any game since 1986. The Bills, meanwhile, have led the league in kickoff coverage for two straight

SAN FRANCISCO - The San Francisco 49ers got a jump-start Saturday in their quest to become the first repeat Super Bowl winner in a decade, routing Minnesota 41-13 as Joe Montana, Roger Craig and Jerry Rice tore apart the NFL's top-rated defense. Montana led the way with 247 yards and four first-half touchdown passes, two to Rice, who had six catches for 114 yards, as the 49ers raced to a 27-3 halftime lead.

Craig completed the triple by the NFL's 1989, '88 and '87 offensive players of the year, carrying 18 times for 125 yards, making him the first player to rush for 100 yards against the Vikings since he did it in a 34-9 win at the same stage of the playoffs last year.

The offensive line also chipped in by holding sackless a defense whose 71 sacks this season were one short of the NFL record. Ronnie Lott returned an interception 58 yards in the fourth quarter for one more score, then Tim McKyer brought one back 41 yards to set up the final score on a 4-yard TD run by Craig.

The victory put the 49ers into the NFC championship game next Sunday against the winner of Sunday's game between the Los Angeles Rams and New York Giants as they seek to tie the Pittsburgh Steelers' record of four Super Bowl wins and emulate Pittsburgh's feat of four titles in a decade. San Francisco's 14-2 regular-season record, the best in the NFL, guarantees it will be played at Candlestick Park.

That record (the Vikings were 10-6) was characteristic of the level of play although the Vikings actually took the lead 3-0 with 5:21 remaining in the first quarter.

But that lasted exactly 23 seconds as Montana, who completed his first eight passes, combined with Rice on a 72-yard scoring play and the rout was on.

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco wide receiver Jerry Rice (80) raises his arms after scoring a touchdown against the Minnesota Vikings in the first quarter of their NFC playoff game here Saturday

By halftime, it was 27-3 as Montana threw for three scores in the second quarter - 8 yards each to Brent Jones and John Taylor and 13 to Rice. All were set up by the slashing runs of Craig, who had 95 yards in the first half alone as the 49ers ran up 320 yards of total offense, nearly 60 more than the 261.5 Minnesota had allowed per GAME in the regular season.

Montana passed for 210 yards in the first half and finished 17-for-24. The 49ers also knocked out quarterback Wade Wilson - after two sacks and two interceptions, Tommy Kramer came out to start the second half. In fact, the Vikings never did stop San Francisco before intermission — the 49ers never punted and failed to score only when Craig fumbled at the Minnesota 9, Mike Cofer missed a field goal and Montana fell on the ball when they got the ball back with two seconds left before intermission. BSHS basketball fans, take note: Tuesday night in Steer Gym is the place to be.

The Big Spring Lady Steers, 4-1 in District 4-4A play, will take on their perennial arch-rivals, the Sweetwater Lady Mustangs (5-0) at 7:30 p.m. These two teams met three times rolled around, however, Big Spring returned the favor twice, downing the Lady Mustangs 49-43 in Steer Gym and 50-41 in a district playoff game in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

With such a rivalry, one would assume that fan attention would be intense. One would be wrong. The Lady Steers, despite three consecutive years as district champs, have always been poor relations when it's come to fan attention — and this season is no exception. Despite the fact that Big Spring is once again in the thick of the District 4-4A race, few fans attend the games - and some of those seem more intent on insulting the referees than supporting the Lady That the girls continue their winning ways, despite this lack of support, makes their success all the more remarkable. Can you imagine what they might do if they had a partisan crowd on their side? I've heard all of the arguments:

Big Spring is a football town; hardly anybody supports basketball of any kind; girls basketball is boring; ad infinitum, ad nauseum.

Well, Big Spring sports fans may favor football, but have shown a willingness in the past to attend basketball games. In fact, about 2,200 people showed up for the Big Spring-Sweetwater game at Garrett Coliseum last year, and if they considered the game boring, you wouldn't-have known it from the amount of noise generated.

I think one of the factors for non-attendance has been that the Lady Steers are victims of their own success. They have won so regularly and by such large margins - in the past that a Big Spring victory was almost a pre-ordained matter.

And I'll also admit that watching a totally one-sided basketball game male or female - can be about as exciting as watching the paint peel from your house. But it's highly doubtful that Tuesday's game will be one-sided. On the contrary, if the past few meetings between these teams are any indication, it should be one of the more entertaining contests this

Lady Hawks down WTC for fifth place

ODESSA — Linda Waters scored 19 points and Lisa Moore 17 to lead the Howard College Lady Hawks to a 62-50 win over Western Texas in the fifth place game of the Odessa

College tournament here Saturday. Waters, who was selected to the all-tournament team, and Moore, who filled in for an injured Shannon Lawson, were singled out for praise by HC coach Royce Chadwick

"You can put it in there that Linda (who sank five three-point shots) really filled it up; she really shot it well," Chadwick said. "Shannon bruised her foot and was unable to play, and (Moore) came in and scored 17 points. She really took up the slack.

Despite the final score, Chadwick said the game was a closely contested one.

The Hawks will also continue working on limiting the things that always cause problems for teams: "Turnovers and not executing — those kinds of things can beat you in critical games, Green said.

The Hawks got off to a quick start in conference, pounding traditionally strong Midland and beating a good Odessa team. Both those games were played in the security of Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, however, and Green said it will be harder for the Hawks on the road.

After their January opener with sity, the Hawks travel to New Mexico Junior College, Clarendon College and Frank Phillips College. Green figures NMJC will be especially tough; they also are 2-0 in the conference but they won both of their games on the road. Because this conference is traditionally tough for road teams, Green said home games take on added importance. "You've got to win your home games to be in a spot to win a conference championship," Green asserted. "You've definitely got to win your home games Although he knows it will be difficult. Green said his team will

That all adds to a legitimate shot at the conference title, if not at the playoffs.

Oilers' owner Bud Adams fires head coach Glanville

HOUSTON (AP) — Jerry Glanville, the controversial man in black who led the Houston Oilers to the playoffs three straight years and often feuded with opposing coaches, was fired Saturday by owner Bud Adams.

Adams said he and Glanville met for more than two hours Saturday afternoon, and "at that meeting we mutually decided that Jerry would not return as our head coach."

Adams was emotional during the announcement and at one point could not hold back the tears. During the news conference, he embraced both Glanville and Glanville's wife, Brenda.

"As you can tell, we have had an emotional day," Glanville said. 'We decided that we wanted to be friends the rest of our lives.

Adams said General Manager Mike Holovak would return next season and that a coaching search would begin immediately. "I have no names to give you now. This all happened just this afternoon," Adams told a packed news conference at the Oiler offices Adams said former Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill, who has been rumored as a candidate for a position with the team, likely was more interested in a managerial position than in coaching. The owner also said University of Houston coach Jack Pardee "is a"

qualified coach, but I don't know what his position is at UH." Glanville said that during their meeting he gave Adams a list of suggestions about how to improve the team. He would not elaborate. Glanville had been seeking an extension on his contract, which expires at the end of next season, and has said he wanted more input into draft day decisions.

"As you can tell, we have had an emotional day. We decided that we wanted to be friends the rest of our lives." - former Houston head coach Jerry Glanville on Oilers' head coach Bud Adams.

Adams said Glanville's contract was not a problem in negotiations. Glanville said he would receive the $300,000 payment on the final year of his contract.

Glanville held a lengthy meeting with Adams and Holovak on Wednesday and obtained permission to interview for other jobs. Formerly an assistant coach at Atlanta, he interviewed on Thursday for the Falcons' vacant head coaching job with Adams' permission.

Falcons owner Rankin Smith Sr. told WAGA-TV in Atlanta Saturday night that Glanville is still a candidate for that head coaching vacancy.

"We are still looking for a one of the guys we are talking to. He's somebody we've interviewed. We'll continue our search for a coach as we've done in the past. he's still a candidate.

Glanville, known as the man in black because of his game-day attire, became the 13th coach to be fired in the franchise's 30-year history and the fifth in the past 10

The Oilers joined Phoenix, Atlanta and the New York Jets in seeking new coaches

Glanville reportedly intended to talk with Phoenix and the New York Jets about their vacancies, but the general managers of those teams said they had no plans to talk with the Oilers coach.

The Oilers' inconsistency on the field and Glanville's aggressive style caused growing friction in the organization. The Oilers were the most penalized team in pro football in 1999, receiving an NFL-record 148 infractions.

AFC Pro Bowl starting quarterback Warren Moon had his best season, but the defense faltered in the stretch drive when it was slowed by injuries. They prided themselves in not losing consecutive games since 1987, until their three-game losing streak finished the 1989 season.

Glanville's desire to have more control in the draft process and his refusal to hire offensive and defensive coordinators also led to problems. And his brash personality and outspoken comments often have created controversy.

• Continued from page 1-B a frenetic first half that was an omen of things to come. They extended it to 24-14 early in the third quarter on Kosar's 44-yarder to Slaughter, who was wide open at the 18 because of a blown coverage in the secondary. The touchdown came three plays after Mark Harper intercepted Kelly's badly underthrown pass at the Buffalo 46.

But an exchange of fumbles, one by Buffalo's Larry Kinnebrew and another by Cleveland's Kevin Mack on the next play, gave Buffalo a first down at the Cleveland 21, and six plays later Kelly hit Thomas with a 6-yard pass that made it 24-21.

Metcalf's return widened the lead to 10 again, but Kelly, undaunted, marched the Bills 68 yards to set up Scott Norwood's

30-yard field goal. Cleveland then ate up nearly up Matt Bahr's 47-yard field goal with 6:50 to go for a 31-24 lead. Kelly, however, hit Thomas on a 3-yard TD pass with four minutes left, but Norwood's extra-point kick hit the back of his own center, leaving Cleveland with a four-point margin. The lead changed hands three times during a first half that featured four touchdown passes, a frightening incompletion and a couple of minor injuries that appeared worse at the time.

Cleveland took a 17-14 halftime lead on Kosar's pass to Middleton, whose only regular-season catch was a 5-yard touchdown. Middleton held onto the ball at the back of the end zone with linebacker Cornelius Bennett draped in front of him.

Buffalo took an early 7-0 lead on Kelly's 72-yarder to Reed, who caught the ball at his own 35 and outran three defenders to the end seven minutes on a drive that set zone. A 45-yard field goal by Bahr brought Cleveland within four, and the Browns took a 10-7 lead when Slaughter stutter-stepped at the first-down marker on a thirdand-14, then ran past Nate Odomes to catch Kosar's 52-yard bomb. Kelly put the Bills back on top with his strike to Lofton before Cleveland went ahead for good on the pass to Middleton.

Kosar, already playing with a sore elbow, had to ice his right hand after he hit it on a defender's pads during the second quarter, and Mack remained in the game despite bending his right knee badly on the same play.

49ers

Helton's first punt finally came five minutes into the second half with the offense in cruise control.

The rout started when Terrence Flagler returned the opening kickoff 58 yards to the Minnesota 41 and the 49ers moved from there to the Minnesota 9.

But Montana and Craig botched a handoff and Ray Berry recovered for Minnesota, starting the Vikings on a 70-yard drive.

But as happened often this year, they stalled within sight of the goal line and led to Rich Karlis' 38-yard field goal that gave Minnesota a 340 lead. Herschel Walker, making his NFL playoff debut, carried six times for 18 yards in the drive.

But the 49ers came back in their characteristic way.

With Joey Browner on a safety blitz, Montana found Rice with Carl Lee covering him man-toman. Rice caught the ball about 10 yards downfield, swerved away from Lee, then hurdled Mark Dusbabek and sped down the sidelines to complete a 72-yard scoring play.

San Francisco made it 14-3 1:59 into the second period, driving 74 vards in 7 plays capped by Montana's 8-yarder to Jones on a play that looked markedly like THE CATCH from Montana to Dwight Clark that put them in their first Super Bowl. Montana rolled right and seemed trapped at the sideline start of the second half before finding Jones in the back of the end zone.

Then, after a Montana-Rice TD pass was called back because Montana was over the line of scrimmage and Cofer missed his 31-yarder, the San Francisco defense made the play as Chet Brooks intercepted a Wilson pass and returned it 31 yards to the 21. Three plays later. Montana hit Taylor in the corner of the end zone to make it 20-3 — Cofer's extra point attempt was wide right.

Then Montana capped off the half with a 13-yarder to Rice to make it 27-3 at the end of a 51-yard

By BRADLEY WORRELL

Staff Writer BIG SPRING - Radio station KBEST FM has changed its format to 24-hour country music, station owner David Wrinkle confirmed, saying the change was made in an effort to increase listeners and advertising.

A successful station should have the "most mass appeal," and comtry music's wide support in the area should help increase KBEST's popularity, Wrinkle said. The station officially made the switch Dec.

"A certain amount of people listen to (KBEST) news but maybe another station for music," he said. "Now maybe those people will continue to listen to KBEST. We already have pretty big share (of the radio market), we're just trying to get people to listen longer. Wrinkle said KBEST did not make the switch from a mix of top 40 music and country to country only in connection with defunct radio station KBYG's exit from the air, but said he believes the switch is timely. Wrinkle said he's already had to defend himself against charges that the station changed format in an effort to keep KBYG still too early to predict how much

'That's ridiculous," he said. The real answer for the change is that our research has been showing us that country is more popular," he said. "We did it for money reasons. This format is proven in other

"AM radio is kind of gone. Even if (KBYG) comes back, people are going to go where their needs are Wrinkle predicted, "We're going to keep all of our listeners, pick up some of KBYG's and some of (Midland rival) KNFM's.'

FM country stations in other cities such as Midland, Abilene and San Angelo have demonstrated the success country stations have, he said. Wrinkle noted KNFM Midland is the second most popular station in Big Spring.

Sales of country records and tickets for concerts confirm country music is more marketable, he said. The radio station's top advertisers have also stressed how popular the country music format

Wrinkle said he does not forsee any problems in changing the station's format, although he said it is

"There's only one radio station in town, it can just as well be a country station. If you can't be a country station in Big Spring, where can you be country " - David Wrinkle, radio sta-difference the change will make. The change should also help the station to be consistent in the type of music it plays, he said.

'We were going against the grain trying to be all things to all people," Wrinkle said. The station had attempted to mix the two since

Wrinkle added that the mix of country and top 40 at times "sounded kind of goofy." That mix became increasingly difficult as top 40 music has evolved into a dance-theme music, he said. It also caused some confusion among the listeners, who never knew if they were going to be hearing country or rock music, he said. Now the station will change its focus to a contemporary country, featuring artist such as The Judds and Ricky Van Shelton and other top 20 country favorites. The station already has a large number of country records but intends to buy more, he said.

Wrinkle said the change means the station won't always be able to play some of his personal favorites

"I've always preferred country (but) there are some rock songs I liked," he said. "Before we were able to play some of both." But station marketing is more

"It's a money-making decision. Personal preference doesn't have anything to do with it.

'We don't feel it was such a drastic change," Wrinkle said, ad- "The town is growing ding that the station was already playing about 60 percent country music before the change-over.

"We made the change a gradual thing. It wasn't an abortion," he said. Instead, the station's change has been a natural transition, he

"We've kind of grown up with Big Spring. Our music needs to reflect that," he said. "As we enter new decade, (the community) has gotten 10 years older. Our tastes have changed.'

The town is growing older, and there are not as many young people locally with the absence of Webb Air Force Base, he said. "There's just not enough young people here (for a top 40) station," he said.

The change is permanent, he said. "We may do something with the AM, but we'll leave the FM alone," he said.

KBST AM will continue to offer Luther Kelly's Nostalgia Night and at least for the time being the FM important than personal choice, he station will continue to play the rock n' roll nostalgia program "Solid Gold Saturday Night," he older, and there are not as many young people locally with the absence of Webb Air Force Base, There's just not enough young people here (for a top 40) station." — David Wrinkle, KBEST owner

KBEST will also keep what Wrinkle described as "our heavy emphasis on news," on the FM station and strong emphasis on news and sports on the AM station. The radio station has added "The Sound of Texas," by Tumbleweed Smith, which features characters all across the state.

"There's only one radio station in town, it can just as well be a country station," Wrinkle said. "If you can't be a country station in Big Spring, where can you be

Water rates

BIG SPRING — Water rates for the year 1990 will be established by Colorado River Municipal Water District directors in their January 11 meeting in Big Spring.

Rates will be fixed for member cities Big Spring, Odessa and Snyder, but all indications are that there will be no major changes in 1989.

Also on a crowded agenda are authorization of fund transfers from the Water Rate Stabilization Fund for overruns in the O.H. Ivie Reservoir account. This would run slightly over a million dollars for the District and slightly less for West Central Texas Municipal Water District (Abilene), San Angelo and Midland combined as con-

Final adoptions of rules and regulations for the three CRMWD reservoirs is up for consideration, along with tentative plans for limited recreational use at Lake MH. Ivie

Possibility of refunding part of the 1985 (Ivie reservoir) issue will be considered. Authorizations are due for providing cathodic protection on a stretch of 36-in. pipeline spanning Buzzard Draw west of Big Spring; $50,000 to cover water royalty payments in Ward County; consideration of changing trustee for the Employee Pension Trust and Retirement Fund; employment of a consultant to review all district insurance coverage. A management plan for lands acquired for terrestrial mitigation (wildlife management) has been cleared by the U.S. Corps of Engineers and is due for adoption by the district. Besides reports from legal counsel and management, the Employee of the Year will be recognized.

Stanton woman writes rural electric history

By JOHN McMILLAN Staff Writer

STANTON - In the early days of Cap Rock Electric co-op, H.W. Deavenport, a director of the co-op, would announce board meetings by hovering above directors' homes in an airplane.

Peggy Luxton, who recently completed a history of the rural electric co-op to commemorate Cap Rock's 50th anniversary, said the airplane technique worked because there were few airplanes in the area in the 1940s. The plane of Deavenport, a pilot, was easily recognizable for that reason, she said.

Announcing board meetings was one of the many obstacles faced in the history of the electric co-op, which celebrated its 50th year in September of last year.

"The biggest problem we ever experienced was during World War II, when we could get no wire, no equipment," said Luxton, who is communications advisor for Cap Rock. "We had a skeleton crew that kept the lines going that we already had built, and everyone else was laid off.

Cap Rock was one of the first rural electric co-ops in the United States. It has grown from nine members in 1939 - all of whom were board of directors — to 7,013 active members in 13 counties. Among the members are nonfarming residents of the suburps of Big Spring, Stanton and Midfand. Though the co-op originally served farmers almost exclusively, today 84 percent of its customermembers are not associated with agribusiness, Luxton said.

Cap Rock, which distributes electricity supplied by TU Electric, serves about 17,500 active meters and maintains 5,206 miles of electric line. Cap Rock is one of 82 rural electric co-ops in the state. With 94 full-time employees, it is the second largest employer in Stanton.

STANTON — Ronnie Christian, director of member services for Cap Rock Electric Coop, and Peggy Luxton examine the book she wrote regarding the coop's history.

The co-op history was the first book ever completed by Luxton. She undertook the project after David Pruitt, chief executive officer and general manager of Cap Rock, requested the book. "I told him the only way to make sure that the book was correct was to do it myself," she said.

Luxton said she spent about one year doing research and writing the 260-page book, which was published by Housouer Printing Company in Lubbock.

'It was something that I thought should be written down before there was no one around to remember it," said Luxton, who interviewed area residents, Jewell Forrest and John M. Hale among them, who were among the co-op's earliest customers.

Luxton's effort, which included research trips to area libraries, proved to be all-consuming. "My husband (J.A. Luxton), bless his heart, when I was working on that book we didn't have any weekend trips, no out-of-town dinners," she said. L'uxton estimates that she spent from 10 to 45 hours a week on the project, which she did during her spare time.

The book, "Cap Rock Electric cooperative: Preserving Our Heritage - Facing Our Future," was presented at the September 1989 membership meeting of the co-op in Midland. The book, 2,500 copies of which have been issued, is available for $5 at Cap Rock Electric co-op on Highway 80.

"Based on what I have read, it's a fantastic survey of the history and progress of the co-op through the years — and the people who contributed to that progress," said Ronnie Christian, director of member services for the co-op.

Christian said the most avid readers of the book so far have been the co-op's older members.

"We are a very close group of employees, and I guess I felt like it was everybody's book - not only present employees but everybody that had ever been here, and the customers on the line," said

The book is dedicated to O.B. Bryan, manager of the electric coop from 1940 to 1973, whom Luxton also interviewed. "You have to have a lot of co-operation in making a co-operative work, and his talent was in being able to bring about this co-operation in diverse groups of people," Luxton said. 'He was a people person."

The original impetus behind the co-op came from Riggs Shepperd of Courtney, who quit his job as a school teacher to serve on the original co-op board, Luxton said. Shepperd was on the committee that drew the co-op's first bylaws. "He thought the rural electric movement was the finest thing going on in the country," she said. The rural electric co-op movement began in the United States after the Rural Electric Administration, or R.E.A., began offering loans to electric co-ops in 1939. Rural electric co-ops were established because investorowned utilities in cities were not willing to serve farmers, Luxton said. The utilities regarded service to rural areas as not profitable enough, she said.

"Part of the philosophy has been that a rural co-operative does not turn a customer down," Luxton said. "No matter where they live, we'll build the lines to them.

Local man is finalist

AUSTIN - A man who designs and builds wheelchairs for persons with severe physical impairments has been selected to receive the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation's fourth annual Preston E. Harrison Award.

In addition to the winner, nine finalists for the Preston E. Harrison Award have been named, including Harris G. Davis, Ph.D., Chief Clinical Psychologist, Big Spring State Hospital.

Tony Skokauckas, an Orthopedic Equipment Technician at Abilene State School, was chosen from among TDMHMR's 28,000 employees to receive the agency's most prestigious honor. A sevenmember panel of employees from TDMHMR facilities across the state and TDMHMR Central Office in Austin selected Skokauckas for the 1989 award, which honors "outstanding employees who have made significant contributions to and have had a positive impact on the agency in terms of creativity, efficiency and innovation.'

The annual employee award was created in memory of Dr. Preston E. Harrison, who died in 1975 after serving for 22 years as superintendent of the Big Spring State Hospital. Harrison was a pioneer in the field of mental health whose efforts led to new and better ways to treat persons with mental disabilities.

Finalists will receive certificates of commendation at the March 30 ceremony, and all nominees will receive congratulatory letters from TDMHMR Commissioner Den-

Jobless rate drops slightly

DALLAS (AP) - Workers moving out of the labor force spurred a drop in the Texas jobless rate in December, a Bureau of Labor Statistics analyst said Friday.

The state's unemployment rate fell from 7.2 percent to 6.6 percent last month as 50,000 Texans left the labor force, the bureau reported.

"They're either going into housework, going back to school or . . . they're not looking for work because perhaps they don't believe they can find work," said Nic Santangelo, a bureau analyst.

Retailers hired extra help for the holiday shopping season, but Santangelo said he wasn't sure that made an impact on the jobless rate. An industry breakdown of December unemployment will not be complete for another month.

The size of the Texas labor force, which is the number of people working and the number of people looking for work, declined from 8.27 million in November to 8.22 million in December Santangelo called the fall in the unemployment, rate "not particularly significant because we're not getting any growth in the labor force and we're not getting any strong growth in the number of people who are employed."

He said he believes a more accurate picture of Texas joblessness can be found in a rate assembled by averaging each month's unemployment figure with the previous two months. The three month figure has held at about 6.8 percent since August, Santangelo said

It was there that I promised Lynn Rudd there would never be another girl like her in my life. And it was there under the gigantic stands that I made the same promise to Judy Hollingsworth and Donna McNutt.

But most of all it was there, in that glossed over aluminum stadium, that I decided the odor of feedlots and oil rigs didn't make the smell of money quite so sweet . . . especially when it rained.

Last year, I went back to Hereford, Texas — my first time back to the town where I graduated from high school — to cover a football game. It brought back lots of

If you've never been to Hereford, Texas, when it rains you don't have a real feel for Texas.

It is then, and only then, then you realize what people are willing to put up with for hard, cold cash.

It is then that you know, that the real smell of Texas comes not from tortillas frying on the grill, or coffee cooked on an open mesquite campfire, or bluebonnets growing along the highways.

It is then that you come to the ultimate knowledge of Texas why this Panhandle town is named Hereford and the football team is called the Whitefaces.

Surrounding Hereford on almost every side are feedlots. Not just one feedlot, or two feedlots, but several feedlots. And in each of those feedlots there are hundreds debate squad. Bob Nelson. That was his name. It seems old Bob quit playing football because he didn't like the attitude of football players of that day and age. And when I agreed and refused to put my squatty body on that field they began to call me a "minature football player" — I suppose in reference to the wide shoulders and big arms on a 5'6"

I guess they thought it would work and make old Bob and me change our minds. It didn't and everyday, the speech club and its detractors seemed to grow. But we were the ones who learned to think and see that there were two sides to every story.

There were even two sides to football. Unfortunately, at that time, even our debate coach Mal Manchee wasn't able to make us see that.

All we could see, was that the football team was getting all the school funding, while we were going hungry.

Eventually we got to go to more and more debate tournaments, and yes, like in all good stories, we got more and more respect from students and teachers alike.

Even from the football team.

I don't know what happened to Bob Nelson. Last I heard, he was going to Brigham Young University and going to become a chaplain. But Mal Manchee, the debate coach, is now in the administration in the Hereford school system. And me, I broke that vow, I moved back to the Texas Panhandle for a year.

We've all changed in 18 years. Only Whiteface Stadium and "the smell of money" have remained the same.

Mack Underwood took his first sirplane trip during the holidays and he'll remember it in more ways than one

Mack flew to Los Angeles to spend Christmas with his daughter and son-in-law, Helen and Harry Gibbons, his eight grandchildren and nine greatgrandchildren. Grandaughter Debbie Prudhomme was all set to pick up Mack at the airport, but Mack had failed to note that he was changing planes in Albuquerque. Informed that her grandather's flight was landing in Ontario, Debbie rushed there to pick him up. Mack, in the meantime waited at the L.A. airport two hours before finally locating grandson Pat Gibbons; he sent his wife Ann to fetch Mack - but they had never seen each other! Finally five hours after his arrival. Ann picked Mack out of the crowd and he was reunited with Ann and Pat and a tearful Debbie. Mack took turns staying with Mike and Priscilla Frey; Joe and Debbie Prudhomme and Tyler; Tom and Beth Gibbons with Chrissy and Danna; Pat and Nan Gibbons with Shana; Tony and Bobo Mendez with Christopher and Catrina; Ronnie and Lorie Justin, with Katie Lynn and Bethany; Steve and Cyndi Towler and John and Joan Gibbons.

Today, most of Texas faces serious water problems and the use drought-tolerant native plants could have a significant impact on water conservation.

Despite this fact, many Texans are cool to the idea of landscaping with natives. A common thought among many West Texans is "No plant is worth a hoot unless a cow will feed upon it!" Some still think of natives as somehow lacking in "class". In fact, as native land becomes exceedingly precious, so do native plants, and they are beginning to have as much or more nostalgic value as antique roses.

And cost every bit as much! It isn't hard to educate people to the water-saving virtues of native plants and people are open to hearing how natives provide lowmaintenance, easy-care landscapes. They are also willing to believe that natives are ideal for organic gardening, and can usually thrive with no chemical pesticides and fertilizers at all!

Convincing these same people that natives are beautiful and should be a significant part of their landscapes, and that is another deal all together! Many people tend to think of native plants as just ugly weeds and prickly shrubs.

There are more than 5,000 native plants across the state and most of us do not realize we have this variety to choose from. True, some natives do have thorns, but so do roses and no boy cotton their sales seem to has occurred! Much work has been done by plant breeders in

It stands to reason that a native that thrives near Lufkin or Longview probably would not be too happy in the Big Spring or Midland area and vice versa. Wilburn Cross is an expert at calling animals. He can stand in the woods around his house near Atlanta, Texas and call up deer, fox, racoon, turkey, bobcat and other types of wildlife. Wilburn doesn't use any mechanical device. He uses only his mouth.

He has been known to walk in a grocery store and meow like a cat. Customers all over the store are looking for it. Wilburn just loves to fool people that way

He can sound like a frog, a dog, a hog, a horse, a mule or just about any other four legged creature. He says he learned how to do it by just listening to the animals.

He makes bird sounds, too. Owls are his specialty. He occasionally will explore an owl's nest. "Boy, vou've never had a scrappin' 'til you try to look in an owl's nest," says Wilburn. "They'll sure getcha. They'll tear you up. Until an owl is older, he's completely white. Then he'll feather out and turn owlcolored. Hawks and buzzards are the same way. They're snow white until they feather out.

When Wilburn drives into downtown Atlanta he usually brings his pet roosters along. He leaves them around his pickup while he goes into the drug store, barber shop or post office. Wilburn's pickup with roosters resting on it is a common sightaround Atlanta. "See, they're familiar with that old pickup.

Everything in town is new to them, but that pickup is like their home. So they won't run off. Every once in awhile the town noises will set them off crowin'. Some people like them, others don't. Some people walkin' by act like they're scared to death of my roosters.

One time Wilburn was visiting his father in law and went out to take a walk. He stopped when he got to a fence separating his fatherin-law's place from a ranch owned by a man named Ed Peel. Wilburn got the urge to call up something. So he climbed up a redbud tree and looked around. He saw a bull.

"I commenced making a bull sound," says Wilburn. "In a minute, here comes this bull just a runnin'. Now old Ed Peel had a good fence there. It was webb wire at the bottom and three strands of barbed wire on top of it. It was a strong fence. That bull hit that fence and it just came apart. He just tore it all down. That bull came over to that redbud tree and started pawing dirt. Man, he was

who watched the Cotton Bowl parade on CBS (not WFAA because they have the lousiest timing ever!) If you did perhaps you were privileged enough to see Colorado City's very own Sluefoot, Brittany Bridgford. Our school mascot competed against 54 other mascots at the National Cheerleading Competition held in Dallas Dec. 28. Brittany finished fifth and was selected to participate in the Cotton Bowl Parade. Sluefoot and several others showed their stuff to the eager audience along the parade route and the anxious Colorado City residents watching at home. Our cheerleaders also did very well although they will not be advancing to the finals which will be shown on ESPN. If you were watching the parade on Channel 8 WFAA, you unfortunately missed the mascots because ABC (which channel 8 is an affiliate of) chose to show the New Year greeting from President Bush and the Russian leader Gorbachev, and that was exactly the same time that the Channel 8 cameras would have been showing the mascots. Channel 8 went back and showed everyone what they missed while they were away from the parade but they did not show the mascots.

New Year's parties

The First Baptist Church si brought in the New Year together at the home of Scott Gassiot. Everyone enjoyed playing crazy bridge while snacking on sandwiches and chips and dips. Later they exchanged "white elephant" gifts, which is giving something you don't really like as a gift. This proved to be fun as the dreaded chicken plaques (which have been given back and forth for several years now) were waiting to find a new owner. As the hands on the clock drew closer to 1990 each one took a turn sharing what they were thankful for and sharing their New Year's resolutions.

On New Year's Eve, three former Colorado City residents and their spouses along with two present Colorado City residents spent the first 35 minutes of 1990 locked outside of their home lay four sleeping children, the oldest being six. Trying to wake the oldest by yelling at her bedroom window, only succeeded in disturbing the neighborhood dogs. One cracked window was saved from the hammer as one of the men suc ceeded in opening a window that was thought to be locked. It could only happen to this bunch of • COLORADO CITY page 5-C

With the high incidence of child abuse in Texas (some 68,000 reported cases in 1988), people are extremely sensitive to the behavior of parents with their children in such places as the grocery store, church or other public places.

Child abuse prevention agencies are examining preferred alternatives to spanking as a way to help parents in the demanding role of disciplining and guiding their children. Spanking is usually associated with parental anger or frustration and has been proved to teach the child that hitting is an acceptable form of responsewhen he/she is angry or frustrated.

The Family Information Services (1989) suggest ways to help parents respond positively to their children's needs or wants in the grocery store instead of spanking, hitting, or yelling. Some "proactive" approaches to making grocery shopping a positive experience for both parent and child

 Discuss rules before entering the store. Let your child know that there will be no junk foods purchased, but that your child can select one acceptable item if he/she remembers the rules. When my son was little we selected a new food instead of a toy or "junk foods" during shopping trips. One time it was artichokes, another time we tried ugly fruit. We didn't always like the new food we tried but the spirit of adventure developed an attitude of willingness to try new things. Artichokes have become a favorite.

Pack #29. During the Christmas vacation, the Webelos had an all day meeting. Dale Ahler, Brandon Curry, Cody Carlile, Travis Hiltbrunner, Todd Moland, Clay Thixton and two adults traveled to the Tandy Leather Shop in Odessa for a workshop. Each boy made a belt and learned some of the basic principles of leathercraft. A picnic lunch was planned, but as it was snowing, lunch was at Whataburger

The group visited the Boy Scouts of America office in Midland where they examined all the badges and awards that could be earned.

Next stop was the Petroleum Museum. The simulated explosion proved the favorite exhibit, with the undersea walk a close second. Knot-tying and Ojo De Dios occupied the boys during highway ment, or a blanket or toy to help time. A great big Webelo thank you to the driver, Patti Meeks.

Pack 29's regular meeting was held Dec. 21 in the Elbow cafeteria. Attendance was low, due to cold weather. Pack members worked puzzles, played a game collecting signatures (some of which were pretty wild), sang songs, ate snacks and awarded badges. Derek Wash and Brandon Curry received Bobcat badges. Dale Ahler earned his Webelo badge. Traveler pins were awarded to Dale Ahler, Brandon Curry, Todd Moland and Clay

The meeting opened by lighting a large candle, representing the Spirit of Christmas. To close the meeting, each person present lit a smaller candle to show that many little lights, or kind deeds, spread the glow of Christmas.

The youth of the First United Methodist Church have been very busy over the holidays. In November the young people prepared and delivered 12 baskets of food to needy families in our community. December proved an age old Bible truth, as the kids learned it truly is more blessed to give than receive. The youth group was given a family and the Methodist youth were responsible for purchasing a gift for a child in that family. The young people were excited to show and share what they bought for "their" child to the rest of the youth. As a whole, the First United Methodiost Church "adopted" 12 families to surprise with Christmas gifts as the

Those at Oak Street Baptist Church combined a lot of fun and excitement for themselves with doing a good deed for others. December 18th was the date set for an old fashioned hay-ride and caroling. Everyone aboard would sing beautiful Christmas Carols while one of them presented a shutin from their church with a gift basket of breads and fruits. The shut-ins weren't the only people blessed with a visit from them, they also caroled at the homes of several other members. Afterwards when the cold finally got the better of them, they traveled back to the church to thaw out and enjoy a steaming cup of hot chocolate.

Two scholarships were awarded in 1989, Ms. Couch being on the Scholarship Committee to help choose the deserving students. Tonya Rock and Vance Christie were awarded the college funds in 1989.

The 4-H Club scholarship aspirants apply to the County EHC Agent, Naomi Hunt, showing their record books which they compiled while in HC 4-H. The Scholarship Committee then meets to read their records and award the funds for one semester. The student's record is then reviewed to see if his/her grades are high enough to warrant the next semester's help. In addition to these various duties to Home Extension work. Mrs. Couch serves as president of the American Association of Retired Persons for 1989-'90.

Power play

If you read Steve Reagan's column last week about his catching the dreaded Nintendotitis and realizing he was quickly on the road to becoming a couch potato, and if you have kids with one of the Nintendo machines, you've probably been bitten by the same bug (the hammer brothers get me all

Well, we purchased a new game, 'Zelda II' and have been spending many sleepless nights trying to locate the hammer. Then, I came up with the idea of having a Power Play corner in the column and see if others had the answer to our dilemma. So, here it is, the first question of the new corner, Where's The Hammer On Zelda II???" If you have the answer, call me immediately and then maybe, we can get a good night's sleep around here

If you have a question or tip for Nintendo players, call me and maybe we can whip the little devils and such . . . 393-5501.

Answering machine

After several months of coaxing and rationalizing to my husband the benefits of having an answering machine, I finally got my wish. I've now got a sure way not to miss a single phone call . . . well, so I thought. I hurriedly rushed to my new toy after arriving home each day only to play back nothing, except click, click, click. Actually, not everyone has refused to talk to the thing; since Dec. 25, I've had at least four messages! (They have not all been real polite, but someone left me a message! Exciting!)

Let's get serious here. If you have any news, call me and if I'm not home, well, lower yourself to talk to my machine. The column has been a success and I would like to thank everyone who has supplied tips and stories. Remember, you make the news

If you just can't bring yourself to talk to my machine, (my husband still hangs up when he gets it) write me a note and mail to Karen Hays. P.O. Box 20, Coahoma, Texas 79511 and we'll get the scoop.

to find the best price and sell their cotton. Everyone was hoping since cotton production was so short this year, prices would be higher to compensate. Cotton prices are very unstable as usual. The buying power seems to be slim when the market for cotton is this way. Some area buyers have been offering between 54 cents and 59 cents per pound this week. If the farmer was fortunate and his cotton quality was exactly what a buyer wanted, he might get 60 cents to 62 cents per pound. Local farmers are hoping for rain so that 1990 might be a somewhat more productive year. I know our neighboring Big Spring friends are hoping for rain so that the sand from the north will settle.

It has performed in several area cities, including Odessa, Midland and Colorado City. After a performance last week at Mountain View Lodge, Nell Walker, 69, a resident there, called the music "great. "I like to dance, and I'd have gotten up to dance to every set if I'd been able," she said.

"It was real tempting," agreed Helen Mahoney, 80, also a resident at Mountain View. "If I'd felt good, I would have gotten up

The band gives its amateur musicians a chance to ham it up a bit, judging by their comments.

"I've composed a song or two, and I sing it and do a little dance," said Roberts. "It's called "The Bow-legged Chicken." To demonstrate her talent, Roberts proceeded to sing: "I'm a bow-legged chickenI'm a knock-kneed hen.Haven't been anywhere since I don't know when I walk with a giggle and a giggle and a

Christine Perez does a Mexican hat dance to the tune of "Gay Caballero," which is played by Helen Green, the pianist; and Oma Anderson, who often serves as the lead singer, writes her own songs. In addi tion, 83-year-old Alton Allen serves as a stand-up comedian for the group.

One "Chuckle of the Day" used by Allen begins: "Remember, old folks are worth a fortune, with silver in their hair, gold in their teeth, stones in their kidneys, lead in their feet, and gas in their

A sad note for the group came last December, when its band leader, Bob Covington, died. The band canceled its planned performance in Big Spring's Christmas parade to attend the funeral.

Hot Potato members said their group had 24 members in 1984, but has lost three members from death and four others because they dropped out of the band.

Others study history by gathering memorabilia about specific events or people and displaying them. Linda Shobert of Temple lives history every day in her antiquefilled home with her wardrobe of vintage clothing and accessories. Her closets are filled with Victorian gowns, silk dresses from the 1920s and 1930s, silk-lined day and evening coats, a 1920s negligee with crystal pleats and maribou feathers, and Japanese kimonos "from my oriental period," she But she doesn't simply store the clothes, or bring them out occasionally for display or admiration. Ms. Shobert wears vintage clothing, either entire outfits or individual pieces, "for fun" and when she goes out in the evenings. "It would be impractical to dress completely in vintage clothing," she admits, "so what I like to do is combine selected pieces with modern clothing." For instance, she will combine a vintage jacket with jeans, or wear an embroidered silk coat over an evening dress, or wear antique jewelry with street clothes — "to make my wardrobe eclectic," she

However, Ms. Shobert admits that "in my kind of work, I can't She is a customer service representative at TU Electric, specializing in marketing and electrical distribution engineering.

Ms. Shobert became interested in clothing and fabrics while studying home economics at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, and estimates that she began collecting vintage clothing and accessories in the mid-1970s.

"Someone gave me the first piece of antique clothing," she said, "and I've been collecting it ever since. The first antique piece I bought? it was probably a hat."

She now owns approximately 100 pieces of clothing, 50 hats, 200 pieces of jewelry, and 10 to 15 pairs of shoes, including a pair of satin evening pumps. A desire to know more about some of her collected pieces led her to study fashion history, which in turn led to general historical studies. She can now explain which world events changed fashions and what people had the biggest effect on the popularity of certain styles. For instance, Joan Crawford popularized the "big shoulder" look in dresses in the 1930s. Ms. Shobert has a black silk dress from that era, the heavily padded shoulders further accented with silver beading. Napoleon Bonaparte, emperor of France, brought his wife Josephine a shawl woven with an interesting pattern from India. The shawls became popular in England and were eventually produced in Paisley, Scotland, gaining a name in the process.

Even Queen Victoria of England affected fashion styles. Small bonnets became popular as head gear, and Victoria's habit of always dressing in black inspired the creation of jewelry with jet stones. Ms. Shobert's jewelry collection began with Victorian-era jet jewelry, but Bakelite (plastic) ewelry from the 20s and 30s now
