County attorney: Police football board not illegal

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — A police football board, that fueled gambling allegations against the Big Spring Police Department, was not illegal, according to the Howard County attorney.

Hardy Wilkerson said Friday that he reviewed a preliminary report on gambling activity at the police department and concluded that personnel did not participate in illegal gambling. The report, which apparently detailed gambling involving a football pool, was completed and submitted by police department personnel.

The county attorney's office was asked to review the information because if the activity had been determined illegal, it would have been a class C misdemeanor. Misdemeanor cases fall under the jurisdiction of county court.

Wilkerson said it doesn't appear that members of the department were engaged in illegal activities.

"After reviewing the activity that went on and looking at the statute as it's written, my conclusion is that no illegal activity took place," Wilkerson said. "In coming to this conclusion, I reviewed not only the law, but the defenses available under the law and the defenses the Legislature made available.

"It is my conclusion that the Legislature did not intend to criminalize this type of activity if the activity was conducted discreetly, if all participants had an equal chance of winning, and if the promoter of the activity was not taking a portion of the profits. In other words, all profits went to the winners."

Wilkerson said the report showed him no proof of illegal gambling or widespread gambling at the department.

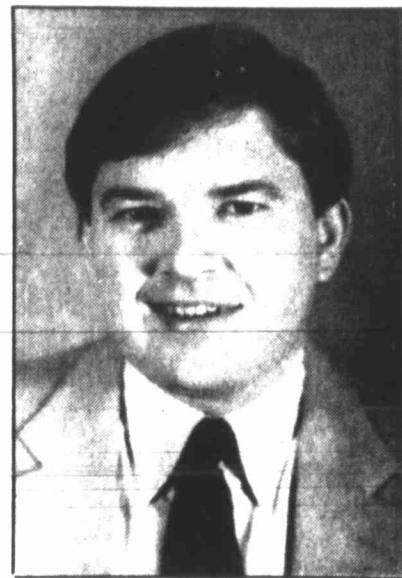

"The report indicated to me that it was just a plain and simple football pool," he said. "No more, no less. It appears as though the conduct may be questionable, but it certainly does not appear criminal and therefore not worthy of prosecution."

"There may be city personnel policies that prohibit this type of conduct and that would make it perhaps subject to an internal or administrative review and discipline."

City Manager Hal Boyd said Saturday he knows of no city policies that would prohibit activities such as the football pool from taking place.

Police Chief Joe Cook said Friday that he submitted the preliminary report to Wilkerson to determine how the department should investigate the gambling allegations. Cook said his department will continue to investigate. ● GAMBLING page 2-A

Budget seeks to cut deficit

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush's $1.23 trillion budget, due to be unveiled Monday, will seek to slash the federal deficit in half in 1991, administration sources said Saturday, in a spending plan based on pared-down defense outlays and optimistic economic assumptions.

Bush, sticking to his campaign pledge, will meet his deficit goal without a general tax increase, opting instead to save billions of dollars through trimming a variety of government programs, ranging from Medicare to college student loans.

The budget document, Bush's first solo effort to reorder the government's spending priorities, also will contain a somewhat whimsical overview written by Budget Director Richard G. Darman, who likens the federal budget to the "Ultimate Cookie Monster" — the voracious gremlin on the "Sesame Street" television program.

With a generally rosy set of assumptions about economic growth and with a host of proposed cuts in military and domestic spending programs, the administration projects that the deficit for 1991 will be reduced to $63.1 billion, just under the $64 billion deficit target established in the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law.

The administration projects a deficit for the current fiscal year of $123.8 billion, far above the Gramm-Rudman target of $100 billion, according to officials who have seen the budget projections.

BIG SPRING — Cheryl New looks up at the Hall-Bennett Hospital which was closed last month after 61 years of service. A clinic still operates at the facility but New wants the hospital reopened.

Employee wants hospital reopened

By ERIN BLAIR

BIG SPRING — Cheryl New thinks Big Spring needs a choice in hospital care. So she's circulating a petition to get Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital renovated and reopened.

The non-profit community hospital closed its doors Dec. 1, 1989 after 61 years of service. Now only its clinic and radiology department are open, run by two doctors and a handful of support staff, including New, the administrative assistant.

On Thursday, Hall-Bennett's

board of directors voted to close the hospital permanently. "We can't support it any more," said Harold Hall, chairman of the board. He said the board would hold onto the facility until a foundation could take it over and added that the clinic, operated by Drs. Joe Ellis and Louise Worthy, would remain open.

Hall said decreases in Medicare payments and two malpractice lawsuits that cost the hospital over a million dollars drained its finances during the 80s. The retirement of Dr. Clyde Thomas, a long-time associate, diminished the pool of doctors at the hospital.

"This is happening to a lot of small communities," Hall said.

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

CROSSROADS — Area electric cooperatives will join other utilities companies across the state in Austin Feb. 1 to protest moves by TU Electric to seek a 10.2 percent rate hike.

Cap Rock Electric of Stanton and Lone Wolf Electric Cooperative Inc. in Colorado City will be among the protestors at a pre-hearing on a TU Electric's request to increase rates. The Texas Public Utilities Commission will conduct a pre-hearing at the agency's Austin office in response to TU Electric's Jan. 16 filing of the request for a rate increase. That rate increase could go into effect this summer.

Cap Rock believes the proposed rates are unfair because it increases costs for wholesale customers such as Cap Rock more than it does for residential customers, said Steve Collier, director of power and supply for the company's Austin office.

But Dick Ramsey, director of communications for TU Electric in Dallas, said rates have to vary for different customers because of varying fuel costs and factors such as when and how much electricity is used.

According to a TU Electric schedule, wholesale base rates, which do not include fuel costs, are projected to increase about 35 percent as compared to 22.5 percent for residential base rates.

Wholesale total rates are about 12 percent compared to 10.5 percent for residential total rates.

Girl Scouts become Big Spring heroines

By STEVE RAY

BIG SPRING — Two local Brownies selling Girl Scout cookies became heroines Sunday after running for help to save a man who had broken his back earlier in the day.

Sisters Tammie and Julie Gross were selling Girl Scout cookies when they knocked on the door of Wayne Fitzgibbons.

"We went over to his house and he told us to please go get him an ambulance," said eight-year-old Tammie. "He thought he had a broken back. We went across the street and tried four houses and then finally got someone to call an ambulance."

When the ambulance arrived it took the 19-year-old Fitzgibbons to Scenic Mountain Hospital where he was diagnosed with a broken fifth vertebrae in his back.

Fitzgibbons said he broke his back in a three-wheeler accident earlier in the day while he and a friend were motorcycling outside of Big Spring.

"I hit a ravine and the three-wheeler came down on top of my head," Fitzgibbons said. "We both went up but I hit the ground before it did and then it hit me. My friend wanted to take me to the hospital but I had him put me in the bed of the pickup truck and told him not to worry about me."

"The more I laid there, the worse it got. The pain started getting so intense he said he was going to take me to the hospital."

But Fitzgibbons said he convinced his friend to just take him home instead.

Later that day, Fitzgibbons said he couldn't stand the pain and crawled to the door and tried to flag down a car but no one would stop.

Lucky for Fitzgibbons, it was time for Girl Scouts to sell cookies. ● COOKIES page 2-A

Queasy over owls

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A state study of owls' diets has unsettled some lawmakers who are uneasy about spending $180,000 to learn more about the little hairy balls of indigestible bones, teeth and hair that owls upchuck.
"We can't educate kids in our schools, and we've got a person studying the diets of an owl," said Rep. Ted Leverenz, who wants to cut off funding for the study.
But researchers said the Department of Conservation study of what owls eat during different seasons could help show how changes in the environment affect animals.

"We owe it to future generations to preserve as many species as we can. Without basic information, such as what they eat, it's rather difficult to do that," said Russell Graham, an Illinois State Museum biologist and bone expert overseeing the study.

Police identify murder suspect

BIG SPRING — Police have identified a suspect in the recent murder of a Big Spring man, but they have declined to release his name.

According to a news release issued by the Big Spring Police Department, an investigation conducted jointly by the department and the Texas Rangers has led to a suspect in the Jan. 18 death of Oscar Alvarado, 19, of Big Spring.

The department will not release the suspect's name pending a review of the case by the 118th District Attorney's office and presentation of the case to a grand jury, the release said.

According to police, no arrests have been made in the case.

Assistant District Attorney William Dupree said on Friday that his office had not yet received the case.

Alvarado's body was found the morning of Jan. 18 in the 1000 block of North Main near the Northcrest Apartments complex. According to an autopsy performed by Dr. Robert Rember, Alvarado sustained blows to the head and died through aspiration of stomach contents.

the hospital's plight.
"We're hoping it will strike up public interest," she said. "The idea is from the employees inside the hospital. They're the ones with the initiative. The people scratching around making ends meet are the ones trying to make it work."
New said architects and engineers have looked at the hospital and discussed what changes need to be made before it could be reopened. When the hospital closed it was licensed for 48 beds. Proposed plans suggest it would reopen with 29 acute care beds, two obstetrics beds, a new surgery and an updated intensive care unit.
"We'd be increasing services, decreasing beds, usage wise. The trend is overnight stays and same-day, in-and-out procedures. Insurance won't pay for long hospital stays anymore. Quick turnover is how to survive," New said.
New said she hoped a good response to the petition would show the foundations and individuals with which the hospital is working that the town backs a second hospital.
"The people need to have a choice. This would be a hometown hospital while the other is a corporation," she said.
New could not say how much the work would cost. She cited the age of the building and the need for updated equipment as two factors would have asked an outside agency to investigate the allegations.

"Since he (Wilkerson) has ruled it's not a criminal violation, we are conducting an internal administrative investigation," he said.
Cook said the department is conducting a full investigation. A completed report will be given to the city manager, he said.
Wilkerson said the key to whether the activity was legal was not where the gambling took place, but how the activity took place. He said he considered "what the law was attempting to prohibit."

"The statute appears to mean if you're disceet about what you're doing... as long as it's not commercially done... then the Legislature says this is not criminal conduct," Wilkerson said. "I look at the broad intent of the law... because what it really means is it's OK to do it as long as you're disceet about it."
"The Legislature is more concerned with how this conduct is carried on. The don't want it done in a big way. Apparently is wasn't conducted that way in this instance."

Two of the people most surprised by the girls quick action were Barbara and Jonel Smallwood, troop leaders of Brownie Troop 183, where the girls belong.
"The lady that is the publicity person for Girl Scouts has a daughter in our troop," said Jonel Smallwood. "She received an anonymous phone call concerning the girls heroic behavior and was making the rounds to see if someone could verify it. But they didn't know if the story was true or what the girls names were."

hard time attracting doctors to Big Spring and he thinks Hall-Bennett had the same difficulty. "We have trouble recruiting out here, you have to have a pretty good package to get doctors here." He said most doctors want to practice in metropolitan areas where they have access to a wide variety of support services and stand to make more money. Wise also said there was a shortage of the general practitioners that a small community needs because so many doctors are becoming specialists in narrow fields.
"I went to Hall-Bennett when I was growing up but you can't live on nostalgia I know they want other choices but we're providing services here if they'll take advantage of them," Wise said.
The petition, in circulation since Monday, reads: "We the undersigned, feel that there is a definite need for a choice in a medical facility for Big Spring and the surrounding communities. We wish to express our desire to have Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital renovated and re-opened so that we may have a home-town hospital whose only connections are here within our community and whose only interests are Big Spring and the immediate communities. The reputation of Hall-Bennett has always stood for medical care with the personal touch and we feel this is of great value to the people of this area."

customers, who are served through 13 counties, will see a bigger increase in rates than TU Electric's retail customers. "We don't want them to get a larger rate increase than other similar TU customers," he said.

However, Ramsey said that wholesale customers are not necessarily going to have a bigger price increase in electricity than residential customers.
"It depends on how much they use and it could make a difference on what time of the year they use it," he said. "Even in those 11 and 12 percent you're going to find people that are below 10 percent and Cap Rock may be one of them."

Ramsey said he did not have the figures available at the moment but thought that their total rate increase may be as low as eight percent. "I think Cap Rock comes out pretty well on this," he said.

But Collier said that even if their total rate increase is that low, they still do not like the large disparity in the base rate increase.

"We're getting hit in the base rates," he said. "We're getting a larger base increase than other TU Electric customers and that's what bothers us."

Explaining why there are differences in the increases of base and overall rates, Ramsey said one factor is that fuel costs will be much cheaper when the Comanche Peak nuclear plant goes on line in February.

Recovering the costs of bringing the plant on line is one of the reasons for the rate hike which is expected to raise annual revenues by $442 million.

"Nobody pays just a base rate," Ramsey said. "Sure base rates are going up more but fuel is coming down. You've got to look at the bottom line," he said.

"Nuclear fuel is around half the cost of the cheapest fuel that we use right now which is our own lignite coal," he said. Nuclear fuel is also less than a quarter of the cost of natural gas which along with coal produces half of the electricity that TU Electric provides, he said.

Collier, maintaining that there are discrepancies in the rate hikes for some customers, said they will definitely be at hearings in the upcoming months when the rate case as well as the prudence and cost effectiveness of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant will be questioned.

"Cap Rock will be down there saying, 'Look, this is hitting our customers harder than it's hitting TU's customers,'" he said.
Meanwhile, Cap Rock filed a motion with PUC asking them to halt any consideration of the rate increase request. They said that TU Electric did not comply with a PUC standing order to negotiate further rate increases with the intervening parties involved when the last rate increase was approved in 1984.
Two other parties in the motion, which was filed the same day that the rate request was filed, included Lone Wolf and Midwest Electric Cooperative Inc. in Robey.
Midwest General Manager Vesta Orr said they will have representatives present in upcoming hearings on the rate increase request. Lone Wolf General Manager Kenneth Rogers said, "We'll play it by ear."

Though TU Electric representatives met in the second week of December with some of their customers, Collier said they did not negotiate or provide much information.

"All they did was explain why they weren't going to do it (negotiate)," he said. "We wanted TU to give us enough information to make a proposal or negotiate."

Ramsey said, "We could not provide them with specific information in order to work out a settlement."

He said they did open a document room in Austin the same week that they filed their rate hike request. It contains more than one million documents of information for their use, he said.

Accidental fire
DALLAS — Dallas fire fighters talk as a five-alarm, $1 million fire rages in a laundry/cleaners business adjacent to Dallas Love Field Airport Friday. Several businesses were destroyed as the fire moved through a strip shopping center.

Medicinal pot
SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A South Texas AIDS patient has received and started smoking his first supply of government-grown, medically prescribed marijuana.

Steve, who asked that his last name be withheld to preserve his privacy, received approval Dec. 13 from the Food and Drug Administration to use marijuana as "an investigational new drug."
 He is the first person in the nation with acquired immune deficiency syndrome to be approved to use the drug.

Bob Randall, 42, a Washington, D.C., glaucoma patient, in 1976 was the first person in the country to get legal approval to medically use marijuana.

Randall, who heads the Alliance for Cannabis Therapeutics, was in San Antonio Friday to help Steve resolve the red tape that eventually led to his receipt of the drug.

"I am on AZT and my doctor agrees with me that the only other medication I need is marijuana to control the nausea and vomiting so I can deal with other problems," the 33-year-old AIDS patient told the San Antonio Express-News.

Randall said the marijuana supplied for him and Steve was grown in 1985 and packaged in 1986.

"It's dry and harsh. I'd say it is pungent without being fragrant," Randall said.

Steve said he has been trying for 2½ years to get marijuana legally. He was arrested last March on a charge of aggravated possession of the drug.

His trial is scheduled for February.

Poll shows Williams, Richards ahead in races

By The Associated Press
 Midland businessman Clayton Williams leads the Republican race for governor and State Treasurer Ann Richards is the front-running Democrat, a new poll shows.

But, with a sizable number of undecided voters in both parties, neither frontrunner has a strong enough lead six weeks before the March 13 primary to avoid a runoff, analysts say.

The poll for The Dallas Morning News and the Houston Chronicle also found that Texas voters think education is the state's No. 1 issue. The poll, published in the newspapers' Sunday editions, showed Williams gaining favor of 34 percent of likely Republican voters and Ms. Richards with support from 36 percent of the Democrats.

"Ann Richards and Claytie Williams are in a position in which keeping them out of a runoff is unlikely," said poll director Richard Murray, a University of Houston political scientist.

Ms. Richards' strongest challenger is former Gov. Mark White, who had support from 29 percent. Attorney General Jim Mattox was supported by 10 percent. The poll found 23 percent of the likely Democratic voters to be undecided.

On the GOP side, Williams bounced ahead of Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance, who led when the newspapers polled Texans in September. Hance had support from 33 percent of likely Republican voters then, compared to Williams' 12 percent.

The new poll shows Hance with support from 19 percent, followed by Dallas lawyer Tom Luce with 7 percent and former Secretary of State Jack Rains with 5 percent. Thirty-four percent of the Republicans were undecided.

A runoff would result April 10 if none of the candidates wins a majority in the primary.

Williams' jump can be attributed to a TV advertising blitz he has funded, Murray said.

"In this level race, in this big a state, there's nothing like television," he said, "and I think he got a terrific edge because he went up with a really aggressive early (television) campaign, and he had the medium to himself."

"I think it's a combination of the answers he's come up with and the competence that he's been able to relate to folks," said Bill Kenyon, Williams' press secretary. Kenyon said the campaign has spent $4.5 million raising Texas voters' recognition of Williams to Hance's level.

"When (Hance) has been in this situation in the past, he has opened up his negative campaigning. We expect the same to happen now," Kenyon said.

Hance spokesman Mark Sanders said, "This is clearly a two-man race. We will clearly be in the runoff against the opponent we wanted, Clayton Williams."

Hance has criticized Williams' prior support of some Democrats and has alleged that Williams exaggerates the number of jobs created by his businesses.

The only notable shift in the Democratic race since September was a six percent jump by White, who declared his candidacy in late November and launched an early but modest round of TV advertising.

"A six-point jump is pretty significant," said Gary Rast, White's press secretary. "People are going to start looking to see who can win in the fall and we believe Gov. White is the one."

A spokesman for Ms. Richards' campaign said she has held her base without much TV advertising. "We haven't had to spend any money yet, and we're still right where we are," said Monty Williams of Ms. Richards' campaign. She had support from 35 percent in September.

The new poll was conducted Jan. 15-23 by the Center for Public Policy at the University of Houston. The margin of error within each voter group is plus or minus 5 percent. The error margin for the entire survey is plus or minus 4 percent.

Texans fear base closures or reductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney is recommending troop reductions or base closings for military installations across Texas, including Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin, the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant in Karnack and Fort Hood, congressional officials confirmed today.

Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle said he has confirmed that Bergstrom AFB is among military installations to be studied for possible closure.

"I want to stress that this is a study which will not be complete for about a year," said Pickle, D-Austin. "I take comfort in the fact that this type of procedure may be the price for peace, but I am still convinced that we can make a good case for Bergstrom remaining a fully operational base."

A congressional source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant in East Texas would be recommended for closure in 1994. Established in 1941, the plant's primary mission is to load, assemble and pack solid propellant rocket motors and pyrotechnic and illuminating ammunition.

Pentagon and congressional sources said troop reductions were likely at Fort Hood, the free world's largest military installation, while Texas congressmen also feared for the fate of the central distribution center at Red River Army Depot in Texarkana.

Defense officials began briefing congressional offices Thursday about installations Cheney's budget proposal would recommend be closed. More briefings were scheduled today in advance of Monday's unveiling of the budget.

Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Waco, said rumors of troop reductions at Fort Hood appear to be well-founded. A Pentagon source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Cheney would propose completely disbanding the 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood.

However, a congressional source, who also requested anonymity, said only one brigade of three in the division would be cut.

About 12,000 soldiers, one-fourth of Fort Hood's troop population, are connected with the 2nd Armored Division.

"This absolutely could not be worse news for what I and many others consider to be the best installation in the Army inventory," Leath said. "Likewise, this will obviously have an impact on the surrounding communities that have totally supported the Army over the years."

Part of the 2nd Armored Division is stationed in Europe and Pentagon officials stressed that any reduction in forces there would be in line with superpower arms control reduction pacts.

No active Texas bases were among the 86 closed in 1989, but Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, predicted the state won't be as lucky this year.

"I don't see any way we're not going to be affected by these (pending) decisions," he said Thursday.

Gramm said he told high-ranking Air Force officials that closing Bergstrom, which has 6,416 civilian and military employees, is "a bad idea."

In addition to Fort Hood, Longhorn and Bergstrom, officials speculated the $156 million modernization of the central distribution center at Red River Army Depot would be discontinued.

The Red River modernization has been held up in a dispute among contractors bidding for the work.

"It has just produced chaos," Gramm said, "and we have the potential of the military saying 'Let's just put that on hold till we know where we are in terms of these legal disputes.'"

Ollie speaks for candidates

HOUSTON (AP) — Oliver North, the prime figure in the Iran-Contra hearings, will make about $50,000 speaking in Houston, Beaumont, San Antonio and Corpus Christi on behalf of Republican candidates next weekend.

Among those is Steve Stockman, a Republican primary candidate for the 9th Congressional District seat currently held by one of North's antagonists on the Iran-Contra committee, longtime Democrat Jack Brooks.

Stockman contracted with North to talk for him in Beaumont and Houston on Feb. 3. North also is scheduled to stump for GOP gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance in San Antonio and Corpus Christi the preceding day.

Americans using less booze

A recent government report has some disturbing news for the alcohol industry — Americans are continuing the trend of drinking less booze.

The 400-page "Seventh Special Report to the U.S. Congress on Alcohol and Health" issued by the Department of Health and Human Services says per capita consumption was 2.54 gallons of pure alcohol in 1987, the lowest level since 1970.

The report, issued every three years, has tracked a steady decline in alcohol consumption since 1981.

Alcohol still is more widely used than any other drug or cigarettes.

The report also cites a U.S. household survey of people over age 12 in 1988 by the National Institute on Drug Abuse showing that 73.4 percent reported drinking alcohol in the past year, while 36.2 percent reported smoking cigarettes.

The decline of alcohol use shows a steady sign of Americans taking responsibility for their actions. If many of them are not practicing abstinence, then they are practicing moderation in how much alcohol they drink.

Maybe it is because of tough DWI laws passed at the insistence of such groups as Mothers Against Drunk Driving. Maybe it is because schools have instituted programs such as Students Against Drunk Driving.

But whatever the reason the report also found some facts that should be disturbing to all Americans:

- About 10.5 million U.S. adults show signs of alcoholism and 7.2 million suffer from alcohol abuse although they do not show signs of dependence.
- High school seniors showed a decline in alcohol use during the 1980s, but in 1988, one study showed, 92 percent had tried alcohol, nearly two-thirds were current drinkers and more than a third were occasional heavy drinkers.
- Nearly half of all motor vehicle accidents are alcohol-related.
- About 25 percent of hospital patients have alcohol-related problems.

Incentives reward safety, community

Fina Refinery employees are finding they can really cash in on Big Spring businesses.

The refinery is one of Howard County's biggest employers, and every year puts thousands of dollars in the area economy.

Additionally, it encourages those who work there to become involved in their community.

The company has developed an incentive safety program for workers at the plant and in doing so has taken their support of Big Spring one step further.

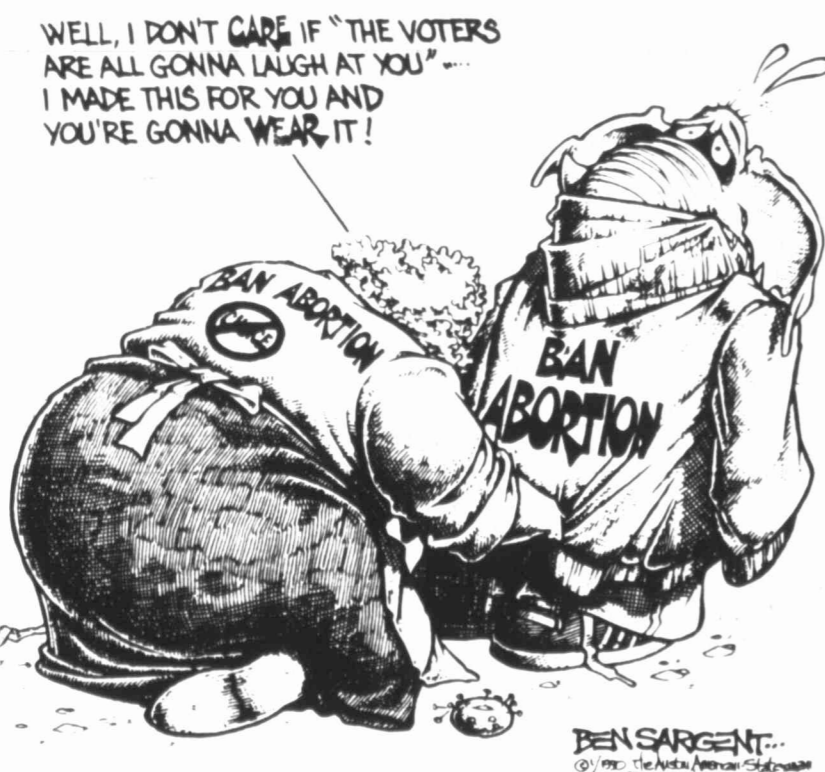

The program rewards employees who have completed a 90-day period without experiencing on-the-job injuries. Those employees who work in groups that meet that requirement get award certificates.

But there is a catch.

Those certificates can be used to purchase items only in Big Spring and only with participating members of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce.

More than 200 eligible employees received $5,300 worth of certificates this month.

That's an additional $5,300 that will be pumped into the Big Spring economy because a local company cared enough to promote both safety and the town of which it and its people are an important part.

Green keeping election vows

To the editor:

It would seem to me that the good citizens of Big Spring have gotten themselves wound up for a good old fashioned witch hunt.

When Mr. Green was elected as our mayor his campaign was no tax increase, which he fought to maintain. It appears to me this was listening to the citizens who elected him to office. Now again I hear the cries of him turning a deaf ear to the people of Big Spring. In the recent controversy concerning the police department he has openly admitted his mistake in the handling of the matter. Has anyone asked themselves how loud the screams of cover-up would have been had he done nothing?

I cannot and will not pass judgment on all involved, but I think it would do the community, the police, and the mayor all a lot of good if everybody quit looking for those chains they keep hearing rattling in the basement.

Green deserves voters support

To the editor:

I was hoping to go to the City Council meeting last Friday, but had to be out of town, so I missed it, and I'm glad I can't even imagine a group of seemingly grown people chanting "Ax Max." I know this is in poor comparison, but it must have been on the same order as when our Lord was tried, condemned and the crowd was yelling, "crucify him!"

This man was fairly elected to do a job, and that's what he was doing. He did not dream up these allegations that were the issues; rather they were brought to him. Granted, the situation may have been handled poorly, who's to say? Given the treatment this man has been subjected to and aired all over the state and possibly the nation since last September, I have to admire him for hanging in there. I don't know him but I have admiration for him as I do Chief of Police Joe Cook.

So the policemen were playing football on a bingo card, so to speak. What's the big deal? If this is the worse thing they ever do, they are to be commended.

I personally am proud of and respect our police department and intend to back them up in every way that I can. I also intend to support Mayor Max Green because he was doing the job he was elected to do, just as I have supported ex-Mayor Cotton Mize. We have to go to stand behind these people whom we have elected to run our city, rather than blasting them and having our local problems aired all over the state of Texas via radio, TV and newspaper.

We read of this in the Lubbock paper along with everyone else in Lubbock who said, "Hey did you know, or hey did you read..." There are members of our City Council who do not need to be there, but Mayor Green is not one of them. If he committed a crime, arrest him. Personally, I see no crime in doing his job. I implore each and every person in Big Spring to really think this out and see if the problem isn't somewhere else.

Hang in there, Max

To the editor:

For the second time Mayor Max is facing a recall, why?

I think the general public knows why. Not because he is mayor, but because he is not a puppet on a string for a chosen few.

This is the first mayor we have had in a long time that is interested in saving the average-class people money. He voted against taxes like he said he would and he is trying to let the public know what is going on inside Big Spring. Maybe his procedure was wrong, but at least it was not a cover-up operation.

All we hear from Deanda is recall, recall. What is she, a parrot, or is she the official spokeswoman for the city employees that want more of our hard earned money? They want more taxes for new cars, why?

I can't afford a new car so why should I buy them one. The average city police makes less than $2,000 a month, but they are furnished a car, car insurance, gasoline and upkeep. If you think this doesn't add up quick, just stop and figure up how much they are saving on car payments and insurance alone.

I think before the mayor is run out of office by a chosen few, that the people of Big Spring will see that he is really trying to help the town. The only mistake the mayor has, in my opinion, is trying to please the public instead of the officials of Big Spring and Ms. Deanda.

I say to Max: Hang in there!

I say to the people if you want higher taxes, new cars for the police department and raises for the city officials, all you have to do is sign the recall and maybe you can have ball park Mize back.

Where will it come from? You and I both know our pockets!

The mayor may have tried to talk to the chief about the gambling allegations in private, who knows? The chief says he has an open door, but I have been down there more than once to see him and I haven't yet got passed the dispatcher. You can talk to Lonnie Smith!

Sales tax not the answer

To the editor:

I have been in and around the Big Spring area for most of my life. I have seen public officials, but raising sales taxes in Big Spring is self-destructive.

The Chamber of Commerce and the area businesses are trying their best to keep business in town. I cannot believe that the city council would consider raising sales taxes.

I believe that the city council and other city officials should quit the back stabbing and get back to work national Airport, to rescue worker Jay Krui, 30, of Oyster Bay, N.Y.

'No comment' is useful phrase

To the editor:

Big Spring needs the financial expertise of Max Green to overcome some of the financial goofs of previous years.

I hope he will remain as Mayor, and, to protect himself, learn to say "No Comment" as a daily exercise until he can say these words easily and naturally.

Green is not the only party that mishandled phrases. Headlines to Friday's council meeting were extremely misleading. Also in the first paragraph a plural was used which, if the rest of the article is correct, should have been singular. Your writer is reaching for a sensational effect — cool it! You reached too far so you became misleading.

The council, the crowd, the official action did not ask Green to resign. One woman did so ask. She also told him to learn to say, "No comment." He must learn to do so!

Last year I attended a City Council meeting. The crowd filled the room, the hall, and the offices. I found a seat near the door, not inside the room. In all that big crowd of people I did hear two or three voices say "Raise taxes" I pay some taxes; I listened intently. The others did not say those words, just the two or three. I thought, "Sensible, responsible bunch of citizens here; only two or three want to throw away other people's money." Deanda and the Herald have quoted that "raise taxes" until you'd imagine there was a crowd chorus chanting it.

Financially we need Max Green. He must learn to say "no comment" in a most relaxed and pleasing manner so he causes his own and others ruffled feathers to drop gracefully into place. We are not a community of courteous people. Shin-kicking seems more our style.

But we have to live with ourselves!

Reasons for not resigning

To the editor:

Please, think very carefully before you sign the recall petition. You are giving up your right to elect the mayor of your choice. If the mayor is recalled, the new mayor will be appointed by the remaining six members of the council. Who will they appoint? Will there be another big controversy? Will the new mayor be perfect and never make any mistakes? Will you be satisfied with the council's choice?

Think carefully on all of these things. These are the reasons I decided not to resign from the office of mayor. We need to move on to better things; things that will cause our community to grow and prosper.

MAXWELL D. GREEN,
Mayor

How do you spell cherish?

By ROBERT WERNSMAN
PUBLISHER

I've probably seen more jokes about parents showing photo albums and video tapes of their kids to unsuspecting friends than almost any other subject.

Odd, isn't it? A subject could be so boring to the listeners that it draws derision, but then when you're talking about your own children it suddenly becomes immensely interesting.

So, I promise I won't run the risk of trying to show you photo albums or videos of my kids. However, does telling about Christmas gifts fall in the same category?

While I realize it's impolite to brag about something you've gotten, I feel an almost overwhelming urge in this case, so I'll have to ask you to humor me.

Several gifts were exchanged when my daughters paid a visit a few days before Christmas last month; some big, some small, some breakable, some unforgettable, some useful, some not. The one I'm here to tell you about today was homemade and is likely to last forever.

It's a book of poetry by my daughter Rachel, modestly titled: Poems to Live By.

This book is bound in a folded cardboard decorated by red, white and green striped Christmas wrapping paper and secured at the edge with a piece of red ribbon.

Inside the decorated cardboard are a dozen pages of glued and taped sheets of poetry by a twelve-year-old.

Maybe it's the distinction of having a book's dedication written in your honor, or the simple fact it touches my heart that this gift affected me so:

Dedication

To the father I love with all my might, who taught me to cherish life and all the writing I do, and now you too can cherish my writing and someday look back on it and say "If I taught Rachel anything it was how to love writing" and I do.

Love,

Rachel

So, at the risk of sharing more about this gift than you intended to read, I provide more of her Poems to Live By. She begins this way:

People think I am crazy because I like to write. But I'm not, honest. And in the pages to come I will share some poems with you and maybe then show the whole world my writing — then ask just how crazy I am.

Talking is for sharing and laughter. But to talk and laugh behind someone's back is unwise. Watch what you're saying about people — your tongue has no eyes. You may not want to talk to them, but certainly don't talk about them.

If they make fun of you or your name, consider this: They are probably a little jealous and they lack the knowledge to take time to find out the real you. And that real you just might be a special friend.

People are dying and children are crying somewhere they both are lying out in the streets, alone, cold and afraid of the world around them; A week ago's paper is their home and cover from the cold. They need help and we the more fortunate are the only ones that can do anything about it.

Somewhere in your heart, there is a place yearning to get out. That place might be imagination. When you find it, use it wisely, not openly unless yet another place is yearning to get out. That place might tell you to open up to the world. Together those two yearnings can make beautiful harmony.

Somewhere in this world that you and I live in, there is plenty of food. But stop and listen, for the other world is starving.

I cherish her writing. What more can I possibly say?

Striking miners shut down plant

DEHUE, W. Va. (AP) — Union miners shut down a coal plant employing non-union workers when more than 500 supporters from three states marched up an Appalachian hollow in the union's largest show of strength since June.

"We want to send a clear message that we're not going away," Bob Phalen, president of UMW District 17, said Friday. "When injustice is being inflicted upon our brothers and sisters, we'll be there to support them."

The United Mine Workers want Rum Creek Coal Sales Inc. to stop using non-union contractors to operate a preparation plant and the truck lines serving it. Union members had held the jobs until last August.

The miners chanted "UMWA all the way" as they walked up Rum Creek Hollow, blocking both lanes of traffic behind a West Virginia State Police escort. No violence was reported.

Judge: Begging form of free speech

NEW YORK (AP) — A no-begging rule in the subway is unconstitutional because the First Amendment applies to panhandling as much as any other form of speech, a federal judge declared.

U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand invalidated regulations of the Transit Authority, which runs the subways, and the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which prohibits begging in the World Trade Center and the Port Authority Bus Terminal.

He ruled Friday that the bans should be rewritten to include "reasonable time, place and manner restrictions."

The authorities can forbid begging on moving vehicles and near token booths, narrow platforms and on stairs and escalators, Sand said.

The lawsuit was brought by two homeless men who beg in the city's subway system.

Catholic bishop released from jail

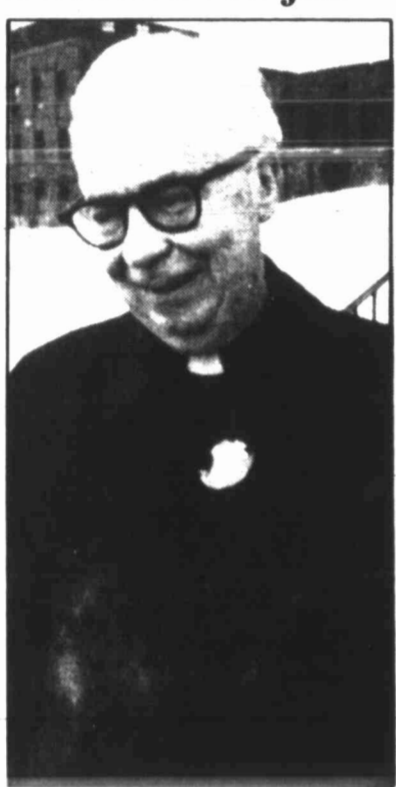

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Iron bars parted and Bishop Austin Vaughan walked out of the Albany County Jail last week to hugs, applause and even an autograph seeker. Anti-abortion crusaders had a new hero.

Vaughan, a 62-year-old auxiliary bishop of the Roman Catholic New York Archdiocese, had served a 15-day sentence for blocking the entrance of a Planned Parenthood office in a protest organized by Operation Rescue.

But what Vaughan said while in jail attracted far more attention than what he did to get there.

The bishop said Gov. Mario Cuomo risked going to hell for his pro-choice views. Vaughan described the New York Democrat as a "Sunday Catholic" who has done more than anybody in the state to promote abortion.

Cuomo, considered a potential 1992 Democratic presidential candidate, has said he accepts the church's teaching on abortion in his personal life, but that abortion is a matter of a woman's own conscience.

BISHOP AUSTIN VAUGHAN

COVE NECK, N.Y. — Wreckage from the crash of Avianca Airlines Flight 52 lies strewn through the backyard of Cove Neck homeowner Sam Tissenbaum. There were no injuries on the ground.

All four engines off before Avianca crash

COVE NECK, N.Y. (AP) — Investigators confirmed Saturday that none of the four engines was running when fuel-starved Avianca Flight 52 crashed into a hillside, killing 72 people.

The National Transportation Safety Board had reported earlier that three of the four engines weren't running. The fourth was dug out of the mud by workers Saturday.

"We did a quick, cursory inspection and there was no power on these engines when the accident did occur," NTSB spokesman Lee Dickinson said.

He spoke at a briefing at the wooded accident site, where investigators painstakingly examined the wreckage, focusing especially on the broken plane's fuel tanks, lines and gauges.

Investigators determined the engines were not rotating because debris inside of them had not been chewed up, he said. Fan blades in the engine did not show damage that would have indicated a working motor, he added.

Residents in the affluent Long Island north shore neighborhood reported that the plane made no sound until it hit the trees Thursday night. The crew had radioed that it was low on fuel shortly before the crash, and there was no explosion upon impact.

The absence of an explosion saved lives, authorities said. Most of the 89 survivors remained hospitalized Saturday, at least 29 of them in critical condition.

Dickinson said it is still unknown how long it was from the time the engines lost power to impact.

The plane had aborted its first landing at John F. Kennedy International Airport when an automatic warning device in the cockpit said it was dropping too fast and at the wrong angle. Among factors under study, Dickinson said, was whether the aborted landing affected the plane's fuel system.

Only one of the Boeing 707's seven fuel tanks was intact, Dickinson said. Investigators will inspect the tanks to see if any fuel remained inside, he said.

The NTSB has said that indicators showed the plane had about 10,000 pounds of fuel, or nearly 1,500 gallons of the 23,855 gallons of fuel a 707 can carry.

The flight from Bogota and Medellin, Colombia, was making its second approach to land at Kennedy airport when it crashed.

Polish communists dismantle party

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist leaders wrote off their fading party on Saturday and began issuing cards for a new party, one they hope stands a better chance of winning power in an increasingly democratic Poland.

They met for the final congress of the Polish United Workers Party — the communist party's formal name — as riot police clashed outside with hundreds of demonstrators still outraged by the Communists' long hold on Poland.

The agenda had called for dissolving the 41-year-old communist party with a resounding condemnation of its ideology and an endorsement of parliamentary democracy before starting work on the new party.

But after heated debate Saturday night, the 1,600 delegates voted overwhelmingly to suspend the communist party congress and immediately open the founding congress of a new party.

Saudis kick off anti-drug campaign

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Balloons wafted skyward and helicopters hovered overhead Saturday as a colorful caravan of camels, cars and a horse-drawn cart kicked off a Middle East campaign against drugs.

Saudis in the parking lot of the Malaz Sports Stadium cheered as the caravan began its five-day tour of the capital. It is to continue on to 11 other Saudi cities and then begin touring other Arab countries in the region.

While Saudi Arabia's drug problem is minor in comparison to most Western countries, the kingdom has responded swiftly to curtail drug imports. Three years ago, King Fahd issued a royal decree mandating the death penalty for drug smugglers.

Since then, 21 people have been publicly beheaded for drug offenses and, according to the National Commission for Combating Drugs, drug abuse and trafficking have decreased by 50 percent.

Soviets capture extremist leaders

MOURNER AT MASS FUNERAL

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet forces have captured leaders of extremist groups in Azerbaijan whom they accuse of planning to seize administrative buildings and prisons in a bid to take power in their republic, Soviet media reported today.

The daily Trud said army and security forces found more than 1,000 uniforms and a large cache of arms at the headquarters of the Azerbaijani People's Front, along with an unspecified number of leaders of "terrorist" groups.

It said some leaders of the front had gone underground and were preparing "new mass disorders."

Nearly 150 people were detained overnight in the Azerbaijani capital of Baku by Soviet troops, who intervened last week in an effort to quell ethnic strife between Armenians and Azerbaijanis and remain in control of the city.

Defense Minister Dmitri T. Yazov told Soviet journalists in Baku Friday that the troops were forced to enter Jan. 19 because nationalists were trying to take control.

Used car chaplain

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Gordon Dorian looks and sounds like a typical smooth-talking car dealer as he strolls around the showroom of Mel Hamblen Ford, shaking hands with customers.

But his name tag reveals he's a salesman of a different kind. It reads: "Dr. Gordon Dorian, chaplain."

Dorian is a retired Southern Baptist preacher who spends two or three days a week counseling some of the dealership's 115 employees.

Dorian, 67, joined the dealership last May at the invitation of owner Mel Hamblen, who seven years earlier had been converted to the faith by Dorian, then pastor of Olivet Baptist Church in west Wichita.

"What's good for me might be good for other people," Hamblen said.

Some employees weren't excited about the idea, but Dorian said he doesn't preach at employees and only offers advice when asked.

Employees occasionally stop by his cubbyhole-size office to talk about personal matters. At other times, Dorian speaks with workers on the job, sometimes offering a spiritual pick-me-up.

"It may be just a quick prayer," he said, snapping his fingers. "Just so it won't be obviously noticeable."

For his work, he receives a "small token" salary and the choice of any car on the lot to drive.

Dorian's job is not limited to counseling employees. Sometimes he tries to soothe ruffled customers waiting for car repairs.

Secret of old age

BOSTON (AP) — Frances Leary says a policy of no heavy lifting helped her reach age 104.

"My mother always told me to be a good girl, and if she was here today she'd say 'I guess you've been a good girl 'cause you made it to 104,'" said Leary, who marked her birthday Friday.

Leary, a lifelong Boston resident, worked in a shoe factory for 22 years before getting married at age 39.

A music lover, she fondly recalled taking part in Irish dances in Boston ballrooms and remembered when phonographs replaced live music.

"I would listen to that thing for hours," she said. "That's when I gave my piano away."

Leary said she has never been sick a day in her life. When asked for advice on how to reach her age, she said: "I just try to go along and not lift anything heavy."

Potent drink

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — The homemade strawberry and blackberry wine that Fairfax County Supervisor Gerald W. Hyland gave to fellow board members for Christmas had a real kick to it.

The wine was not properly aged and proved to be much more potent than Hyland ever expected. A bottle given to County Executive J. Hamilton Lambert exploded and made a mess of his wine rack.

"I smelled it, but I didn't get to taste it," Lambert laughed.

A cork flew out of a bottle given to Verdia L. Haywood, deputy county executive for human services, while it sat on his kitchen table.

Hyland joked that his wine could save him a trip to the state capital to promote glass recycling.

"These bottles eliminate themselves," he said.

GOP eyes effort to win in Texas

By BRADLEY WORRELL

BIG SPRING — Only 20 percent of all voters are interested in candidates or the issues, the rest will vote by political party, according to a GOP political consultant.

Despite protests to the contrary, 80 percent of all voters vote straight party line rather than by individual candidate or issues, said Royal Massey, a consultant for the state Republican Party. Massey, director of research and party development for the GOP, was in Big Spring on Saturday for a local Republican Party planning meeting.

"It just isn't true," he said of people's insistence that they vote for individuals or issues. Statistics show that a sizeable percentage vote by party and that no amount of advertising or campaigning will make a difference, Massey said.

Of the 20 percent who are undecided, 15 percent of those will vote on the basis of name recognition, he said. Less than 5 percent of the voters will vote for candidates or issues, Massey said statistics show.

"It's unfortunate, but that's the way it is," he said. However, Massey added, smaller faces are more personal, and there generally is more interest on the local level.

In spite of the fact research shows people place more emphasis on party and name recognition, Massey told the group of about 30 Republican candidates and supporters, "Don't ignore the issues."

Massey said planning sessions such as the one conducted Saturday are necessary because the Republican Party has only recently emerged as a real party in Texas. There were only six Republican office holders in Texas in 1967; there are 725 now, he said.

Massey told the group that the way to insure the Republican Party's continued emergence in the state is to build the party's power in the county courthouses across the state.

Quaker retaliates in oat bran controversy

CHICAGO (AP) — Quaker Oats Co. is using full-page newspaper ads to sprinkle some salt on the credibility of a recent medical study that found oat bran supplies no special cholesterol-lowering effect.

The cereal manufacturer has bought full-page ads in seven major newspapers nationwide to cite 10 previous studies supporting its claim that eating oat bran helps reduce blood-cholesterol levels and the risk of heart attack.

The plain black-and-white ads, published Friday in some papers, list the studies individually by author, title, publication and date.

"Quaker Oat Bran can help reduce cholesterol. Look at 27 years of research," say the ads, which ask consumers who want details on the research to write to the Chicago-based company.

The ads were bought in USA Today, The Wall Street Journal, The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Boston Globe, the Chicago Tribune and the Los Angeles Times.

The Texas attorney general's office filed suit against the company last year, alleging that Quaker Oats misled consumers by advertising that its product can help reduce the risk of heart disease.

Quaker holds about 70 percent of the oat bran cereal market. Its sales of Oat Bran Original Hot Cereal went from 1 million pounds in all of 1987 to 2 million pounds per month in 1989.

In all, 218 new oat bran products were introduced last year alone, according to Gorman's New Product News, an industry newsletter. But some analysts predict the oat-bran boom will go bust, or at least be deflated, because of a Harvard study published last week saying oat bran has no special cholesterol-lowering properties.

The study, which appeared in the New England Journal of Medicine, said the apparent cholesterol-reducing benefits of eating oat bran resulted from its replacement of fatty foods in people's diets, not from a special property of the grain itself.

Other cereals work just as well to reduce artery-clogging excess cholesterol in the bloodstream, said the authors.

Kellogg Co., another major cereal manufacturer that makes oat products such as Common Sense Oat Bran cereal, has "no plans to change our marketing strategy and no plans to change our advertising," spokeswoman Nancy Roach Quaker spokesman Ron Bottrell said his company has no plans to run additional ads or to change its marketing or advertising for Quaker Oat Bran hot cereal, Oat Bran cold cereal or oatmeal products.

The company has research findings indicating the Harvard study hasn't swayed people away from using oat bran, "but we wanted to reinforce with those customers (the fact that) a large body of research existed," Bottrell said.

Bonnie Liebman, director of nutrition for the Washington-based consumer group Center for Science in the Public Interest, agreed.

"Scientists are used to having studies with opposite results and they know that, over time, the truth emerges," Ms. Liebman said.

Borden County's livestock show tops previous efforts

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

GAIL Want to spend a couple hours getting your hair washed for free? How about having it groomed or maybe trimmed?

Then you might want to try to pass yourself off as a steer or a lamb.

That's the kind of attention 26 calves and 84 lambs have received to make them presentable for the 37th annual Borden County Junior Livestock Show, the county's biggest show so far. The 159 pigs and 45 goats got some attention too but not as much.

"Believe me it's a lot of hard work trying to make them look pretty," said C.B. Brummett Jr., a 54-year-old farmer who helped groom two calves for his grandchildren, Sandy Brummett, 11, and her brother John, 10.

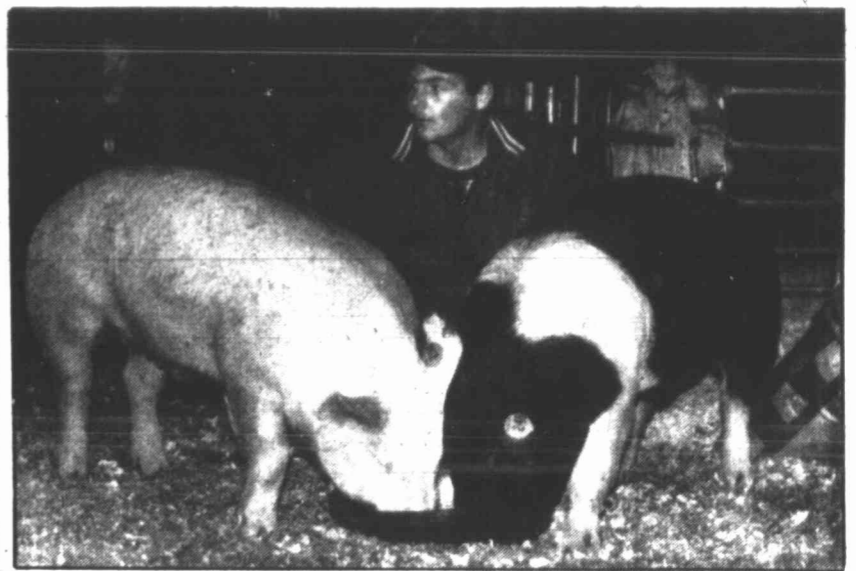

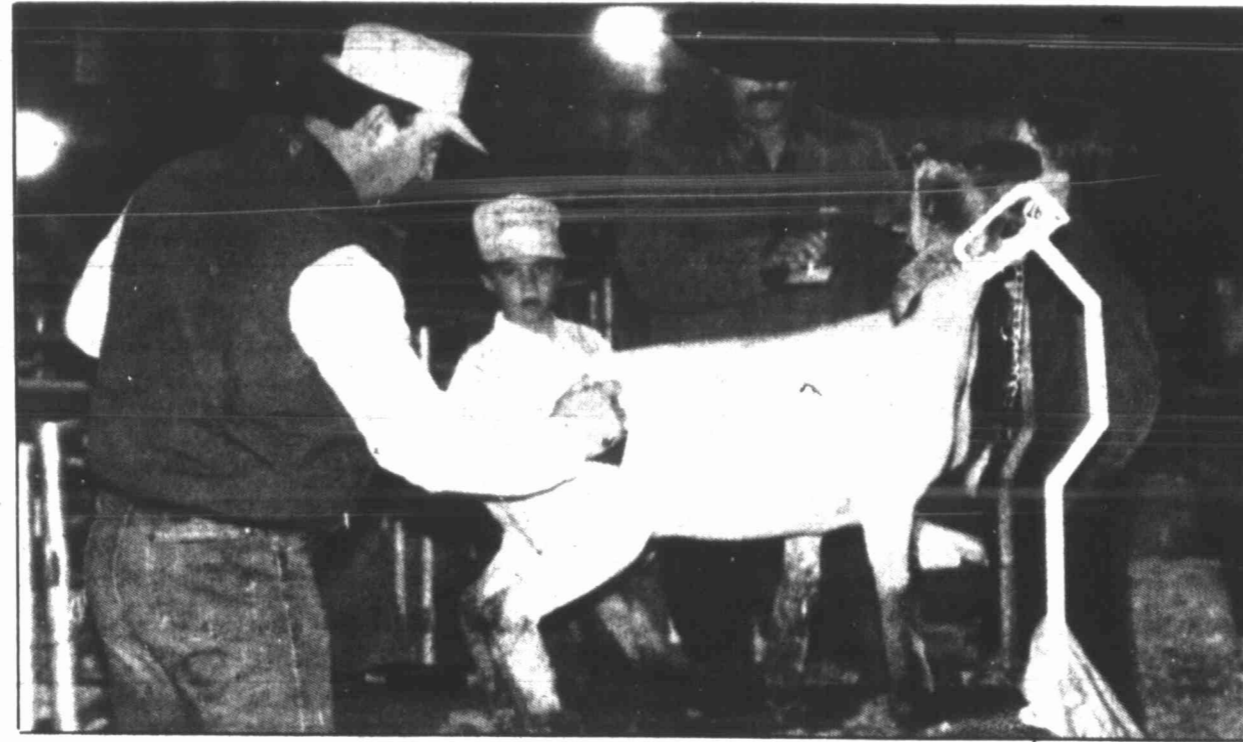

"Trying to get them kids to show them right is about 45 percent of it," he said pointing to his grandson's calf, about 18-months old, with its deep black coat.

Judges do look for straightness, width and depth such as in the hind-quarters and back legs, he said. "After that it's the pretty job that you put on them to make them look two places ahead."

It takes about an hour and a half to two hours to prepare a calf for showing, he said. "You have to wash him, give him a bath, dry him, put hair conditioner on him," he said.

He had not quite decided yet if he would paint the hoofs black for his grandchildren's calls. "Possibly," he said.

"It's just a hair spray that we put on our hoofs," he said. "It's the same stuff that they use in a beauty shop."

Ever notice that a little wool is left around the bottom of their legs and trimmed up nice and neat giving them a bootleg appearance? That's because they they have "chicken legs," Jones said.

"They look a little bit more squared up and a little bit more desirable to look at," he said of the smoothed tuft of wool that is left behind.

But judges try to look underneath the appearance, he said.

"How much meat this animal will produce when he's slaughtered and hanging in on a rail" is a criteria, he said.

"A prime cut of meat is what they're looking for," he said. "What the American people want to consume.

He said popular cuts come from the leg and hindquarters. "That's what they're going to be looking for," he said.

Even pigs get washed for a livestock show, said 17-year-old Borden High School sophomore Billy Howard who entered two in the show.

He said they're brought in, weighed and then washed using vinegar or water "to leave the hair down." Then they eat.

But the trick, he said, is not letting them eat or drink to much. A certain fat and muscle ration must be maintained, he said.

"If they eat too much and drink too much water they'll bloat," he said. "They'll start looking awkward."

Otherwise they are not that much trouble. "They're pretty easy to maintain," he said.

What will the judges look for? "Last year the judges were looking for a good rump," Howard said. A good rump is where it comes off the back and curves around without any real bad craters, he said. The judges also looked for flat backs as well as good muscle tone.

County Extension agent Dennis Poole said 111 children entered animals in this year's show, including 42 who entered goats in Little International, a goat show for children under seven-years-old.

Livestock Association President Kenny Hensley said it was the biggest ever. "We've got more entries and we've got more students and we have more community involvement," he said.

Hess also had the grand champion pig and lamb. Patrick Herdridge, a senior, had the reserve champion pig and Candy Belew, a senior, had the reserve champion lamb.

Mikenna Herring, a first grader, had the grand champion goat. Three-year-old Sterling Miller had the reserve champion.

Republicans making inroads in Howard, Mitchell counties

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

CROSSROADS Area party representatives agree that Republicans are gaining in strength and the trend could continue in the future.

There are a record number of Republicans running for state district and county offices in Howard County while Midland County, a former home of President George Bush, continues to be a Republican stronghold.

Mitchell County is the only other county of four other surrounding counties that has a Republican running for office. But it is a long time party chairman in that county predicts that conservative values will feed future Republican party growth in that area.

Contributing factors include having a Texas Republican in the White House and Republicans in the governor's seat and a senator's seat in a traditionally conservative state, said party representatives.

"Yes, I think there's a definite trend even in local offices," said Howard County Republican Chairman Spencer Wolfe on the future of the Republican Party in this area.

He said to his knowledge more Republicans are running this year in area races than ever before. "We've had contested races before," he said. "But this has more people running for offices."

There are four Republicans on the ballot for the offices of county judge, Precincts 2 and 4 commissioner positions and district clerk. All of those races are contested with nine Democrats running for them. The county judge is the only Republican incumbent.

In addition, Rep. Troy Fraser of Big Spring, and 118th Judicial District candidate Robert H. Moore, a Big Spring attorney, are running unopposed as Republicans for their offices.

Fraser was elected to office in 1988 and Moore is running for district judge for the first time. Moore may be appointed to the of-ice when James Gregg, a Democrat, retires Feb. 18.

"Troy Fraser is our first Republican state representative," Wolfe said. Moore will also be the first Republican district judge if appointed or elected, he said.

Other firsts include John Coffee as the first Republican county judge (he was appointed by commissioners court last year) and Bill Crocker as the first Republican commissioner. Crocker has been Pet. 3 commissioner for more than two decades, Wolfe said. Coffee is running for re-election.

"They're starting up more interest than they ever had in the last 2-3 years," said Howard County Democratic Chairman M.H. "Slick" Boatler of area Republicans. "They haven't had that many (candidates) since I can remember."

"It's changing," he said. "The country's in bad shape. It's just the times and all."

Being able to vote absentee without providing a reason and consolidating voting places in the past have contributed to a stronger Republican showing, Wolfe said.

But Texas Republicans in national and state offices help also, he said. He pointed out that the seven Republican candidates running for governor constitutes "more choices than people have ever had."

"We've got a strong slate of candidates," he said. "That's going to attract a lot of attention."

With only two Democrats and 15 Republicans running for 18 state district and county offices up for election in Midland County, the governor's race will be a factor in future local races there also, said Midland County Democratic Chairperson Janet Massey.

Those two Democrats are Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo and newcomer Ralph Petty who is running for the 238th District Judge. That leaves only Republicans running for the countywide offices.

"We're hoping that's going to change when we take over the governor's seat," said an optimistic Massey. "Midland is a Republican town. I feel fortunate we have this many running."

Boatler feels that the Republican influence in Midland County may be affecting Howard County. "I think that has helped on changing this down here some," he said.

Bob Reily, a Colorado City councilman and a former Republican County chairman there for about 20 years, expects the Republican Party to grow in that county but it may take a while, he said.

Right now there is only one Republican running in a field of 31 candidates for 10 state, district and county offices in Mitchell County. Republican Wyndell Inman is facing four other candidates in the Precinct 3 commissioners race there.

"Midwestern conservatives are beginning to vote Republican," Reily said. "Our problem is we need to get some good people running for county offices."

"I think it's just going to take a little bit of time," he said.

He said a problem in wooing good Republican candidates is a standing belief that too many people still vote a straight Democratic ticket. He said, "I think that fear is unfounded."

He predicted that more Republicans will be on the ballot for local races in 1992, a presidential election year.

Private drug clinics go unfilled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Middle-class drug addiction was good business for American hospitals until too many of them figured that out.

Clinics, hospitals and health-care companies that jumped to capitalize on the high-profit field of residential drug and alcohol treatment now frequently find themselves with empty beds, while public programs for those unable to pay struggle to keep pace with demand.

Addicts in some parts of the country wait six months or more to get into a publicly financed program, but about 40 percent of the beds in private treatment centers lie empty, experts say.

"If you can pay, you can get treatment. If you cannot pay, you're going to be put on a waiting list in most places," said Bill Butynski, executive director of the National Association of State Alcohol and Drug Abuse directors.

This disparity is growing, the experts say, despite an increase in public funds for substance-abuse treatment over the last decade and a growing awareness among employers, and society in general, of the need for treatment.

"The need for treatment is higher than it has ever been, but the demand is a little different," said Mike Ford, president of the National Association of Addiction Treatment Providers, which represents private treatment centers.

Treatment options are being dictated increasingly by economics, as the government, employers and insurers try to rein in the soaring costs of health care, he and many other experts say.

"The economic tail is wagging the clinical dog," said Norman Hoffmann, a clinical psychologist at the Ramsey Clinic in St. Paul, Minn., and director of the clinic's Chemical Addiction Treatment Outcome Registry.

The result is intense scrutiny over the need for residential or inpatient treatment, which can run upwards of $15,000, and an increasing reliance on less expensive outpatient programs.

Hospitals rushed into the extended-care, live-in treatment business but many now find they cannot fill their spaces. Studies have shown residential and outpatient treatment to be about equally effective, and insurance companies have seized on this in arguing that more addicts should be channeled into the less expensive programs.

But treatment providers say residential treatment, typically about 28 days, is more appropriate for some addicts, especially those who need to be physically separated from their everyday environment to break their dependency.

Private, residential treatment programs began popping up in the mid-1970s after Medicare began covering live-in treatment. Private insurance companies also began including coverage in their packages.

By the early 1980s, residential coverage was common practice, the number of free-standing treatment facilities was growing and more hospitals were setting aside beds for drug and alcohol treatment.

But in 1983, Medicare — which often drives medical practices in this country because of its huge budget, now more than $100 billion — implemented a program designed to cut hospital costs. Under this program, Medicare agreed to pay hospitals a specified amount for treatment of various disorders and illnesses, categorized in diagnostic related groups, or DRGs.

Before DRGs, a hospital could be reimbursed at the same rate for all in-patient care, whether it applied to a cancer patient requiring intense medical supervision or an alcoholic in for detoxification and needing less attention.

Participant recalls historic lunch-counter sit-ins

GREENSBORO, N.C. — James Baker, left, prepares to enter the downtown Woolworth store in Greensboro Thursday, where 30 years ago four black college students staged a sit-in demonstration at the whites-only lunch counter. Historians say the sit-ins, the first of which was held on Feb. 1, 1960, helped ignite the decade of civil rights protests in this country.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Joe Poole stood in the rain outside the downtown Woolworth store and recalled what it was like in 1960 for a black man to try to get a meal at some lunch counters in the South.

"There was a time when they wouldn't wait on you," said Poole, who is 85. "We've come a long way, but it won't be perfect until we get to heaven."

Thursday will be the 30th anniversary of sit-ins, which began when four freshmen from then-all-black North Carolina Agricultural and Technical College sat at the Woolworth store's whites-only lunch counter and asked for service.

Their refusal to leave when they were denied service sparked similar sit-ins at other segregated lunch counters and helped establish passive resistance as a tool of the 1960s civil rights movement.

The state since has erected a historical marker at the site and, on Wednesday, Greensboro begins five days of activities commemorating the anniversary with a panel discussion at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro.

"Not only was the South in for a time of change; more important, the terms of that change would no longer be dictated by white Southerners," wrote William H. Chafe, a Duke University historian, in his 1980 book, "Civilities and Civil Rights."

When the four students — David Richmond, Franklin McCain, Ezell Blair Jr. and Joseph McNeil — planned the sit-in, Greensboro was a segregated city.

Public buildings had separate water fountains for whites and blacks. Theaters had separate entrances for blacks, who were forced to sit in balconies. Blacks also were required to step to the rear on city buses.

The first sit-in will be reenacted at 7:30 a.m. Thursday. A plaque and footprints will be dedicated in front of the store and

"One week to the day after the demonstrations had started in Greensboro, black students in Winston-Salem and Durham held sit-ins at local lunch counters. The next day demonstrations began in Charlotte, and the day after that in Raleigh. By the end of the week students were sitting-in across the state."

a sculpture will be unveiled at North Carolina A&T State University.

All four demonstrators are expected to attend the celebration, which will include symposiums, an awards banquet, a performance of Alice Walker's "Down A Lonesome Road," and a jazz concert featuring Dizzy Gillespie.

Before going to Woolworth on Feb. 1, 1960, the four students agreed they would be courteous and would not miss any classes. They also agreed it would be a non-violent demonstration.

They targeted Woolworth because it was a national chain that allowed its lunch counters to be segregated only in the South. "We fully talked about the prospect of going to jail," McCain said in an interview five years ago. "In fact, we didn't think we'd come back to campus."

They were allowed to go back to school, and news about the sit-in flashed across campus. The next day, more than two dozen male and female students showed up at the lunch counter. They, too, were denied service.

On the third day, the demonstrations spread to the Kress five-and-dime store down the street. The sit-ins quickly became national news.

Gov. Luther Hodges called the sit-ins "counterproductive" and a threat to law and order. Soon, crowds began gathering to watch the students. Hecklers — including Ku Klux Klansmen — taunted the students.

The sit-ins quickly spread to other North Carolina cities.

Restaurant owners resisted efforts to persuade them to change their policy, saying they feared integration would drive away white customers.

On July 25, 1960, nearly six months after the first sit-in, Woolworth agreed to allow blacks at the lunch counter. Later accounts reported the chain lost about $200,000 in business during the sit-ins.

Today, the lunch counter looks about the same as it did in the 30-year-old news photographs, but black and white customers sit side by side on red vinyl seats, eating and talking about sports and events of the day.

"It's the way it should be," said one white customer, Mary Lou Nelson.

Cat burglar strikes twice

DANVILLE, Va. (AP) — A welding supply company was struck two nights in a row by a cat burglar — a four-legged one.

James Rich Jr., president of J.A. Welding Supply Co., said police responded early Thursday when the company's burglar alarm went off, but officers found nothing.

Then when employees came in, they found a huge 20-pound cat huddled in the bathroom. Rich put the animal back outside, and employees taking a look around the plant determined that the cat had fallen through some ceiling tiles to get inside the building.

On Friday morning, employees opened the store and were surprised to find insulation all over the floor. The cat apparently did not set off the burglar alarm this time, however.

Rich said the robust kitty didn't look like it wanted a bowl of warm milk or some Tender Vittles. He said it more closely resembled the junkyard variety that feeds on mice and rats.

Lots of mice and rats. "That has got to be the biggest cat I've ever seen," said Rich.

The animal refused to be coaxed into the box. Finally, two employees nabbed it and put it in the box.

Rich said the animal would be turned over to authorities to make sure it doesn't have rabies.

United Way exceeds goal, names new board members

United Way

BIG SPRING — United Way of Big Spring/Howard County went over their goal by $3,000 according to director Sherrie Bordofsky.

The goal of $212,000 was met and hit $215,000 when all the donations were counted, she said.

"We did it," Bordofsky said. "I never had any doubts that we could reach the $212,000. The money is certainly here and if we as volunteers can educate the people of Big Spring as to what the United Way is really all about, the donations and pledges will come in."

"Our citizens are beginning to 'See the Need' and are caring and supporting the United Way. I think this is super. Our United Way is getting better as the years go by and before the 1990s are over, I hope everyone who cares about our town and the people will give their fair share and we will do wonders. The volunteerism has been superb this year and we all appreciate that immensely."

New board members announced at a meeting last week of the United Way for one year terms include: Darlene Dabney, Security State Bank; Ann Duncan, Howard College; Hal Boyd, City of Big Spring; and Bill Crooker, Howard County.

Named to three year terms were: Steve Comstock, minister; Jeff Morris, Fina Refinery; Troyce Wolf, attorney; Arnold Marshall; Jean Broughton, BSISD; Bill Swafford, Fina Refinery; Larry McLellan, pharmacist; Betty Schoenfeld, Big Spring State Hospital; Jim Blakenship, Wal-Mart; Martha Hernandez, Fraser Industries; Ted Zobeck, USDA; Sammy Denard, VA Hospital; and Murray Murphy, BSISD.

Officers for the upcoming year include: Steve Fraser, president; Murray Murphy, first vice president - campaign chairperson; Jeff Morris, second vice president - co-chairperson; Joyce Crooker, secretary; and Steve Smith, treasurer.

Best of Big Spring

BIG SPRING — The Business Committee of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce has announced the inception of "Best of Big Spring" award.

The award which will be given monthly, is designed to recognize excellence in customer relations. Criteria will include friendliness, general attitude and responsiveness in meeting the needs of customers. The "Best of Big Spring" award is designed to recognize front line employees. These are the people who give first impressions, on a daily basis, of each business.

Winners will be chosen via nominations through the business committee, of the Chamber of Commerce, on a monthly basis. Each recipient will receive a monthly awards package, consisting of merchandise and prizes donated by participating merchants, a letter of commendation to the recipients immediate supervisor and the privilege of displaying an engraved traveling trophy at the winners business in recognition of their efforts.

The committee plans on choosing from the 12 honorees a "Best of the Best" recipient, who will be regarded as the best service provider of 1990. "The recipient," Cliff Attaway says, "will be announced at a Big Spring Chamber of Commerce meeting."

Lendl, Edberg advance

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Ivan Lendl and Stefan Edberg, both former champions, advanced to finals of Australian Open. The top-seeded Lendl beat Yannick Noah 6-4, 6-1, 6-2, while No. 3 Edberg defeated fellow Swede Mats Wilander 6-1, 6-1, 6-2. Both matches took under two hours to finish, and for three-time Australian champ Wilander, it was the worst defeat in 155 Grand Slam matches.

Makeshift morgue

COVE NECK, N.Y. (AP) — A makeshift morgue was set up on the front lawn of a mansion owned by John McEnroe's parents where some of the victims were brought from the crash of a Colombian jetliner.

The bodies were wrapped in white plastic and lined in rows. The McEnroe home is about a quarter-mile from the site where the plane crashed Thursday night, killing at least 67 of 158 people aboard.

Armour in lead

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — A ragged, tracked-up green foiled Tom Purtzer's last-hole birdie bid and let Tommy Armour III escape with the lead in the uncompleted second round of the Phoenix Open.

The miss left Purtzer with a second-round 68 and a 9-under-par 133 total for two trips over the TPC of Scottsdale.

Broncos, 49ers ready for Super Bowl

By DAVE GOLDBERG

NEW ORLEANS — Mark Jackson of the Denver Broncos went so far this week as to predict the score of Sunday's Super Bowl.

"28-6," he said.

"Broncos, of course," someone said.

"No," he replied. "28-6, 49ers."

Jackson, one of the best-natured players ever to participate in an NFL title game, was jesting, or at least that's what he said later.

But he captured the mood that has prevailed as Denver and San Francisco, two seemingly habitual entries in the NFL's annual festival of overkill, prepared this week for their meeting at the SuperDome.

Nearly everyone expects the Super Bowl to be another Stupor Bowl, like most of the previous XXIII.

The only difference: This one could make history.

A victory by San Francisco, which enters the game favored by almost two touchdowns, will certify its place as one of the NFL's great teams. Not only would the 49ers become the first team since Pittsburgh in 1980 to win two straight NFL titles, but they would equal the Steelers' 4-0 record, best of the Super Bowl era.

On the other hand, a loss by Denver would leave the Broncos at

"Hey," Denver linebacker Karl Mecklenburg said in a typically defensive Bronco comment, "I grew up in Minnesota. Those teams were pretty good. They weren't a team like the Lions who never got here. At least we're here and have a chance to win. Cleveland's sitting home."

How did we get to this point?

by the NFC, four by lopsided margins. Two were by the 49ers, including last year's 20-16 win over Cincinnati in the only Super Bowl

Landry gets nod for Hall of Fame

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Tom Landry has introduced three former players into the Professional Football Hall of Fame. Saturday, he learned he will have to choose someone to do the honors for him in July at Canton, Ohio.

Landry, who was fired last February after 27 years as the only coach the Dallas Cowboys ever had, was in Austin playing golf Saturday when he learned he was selected into the Hall.

"I'm flattered," Landry said by telephone. "It's a nice honor. It's nice to know that nobody forgot me."

Landry said he hadn't decided who would introduce him, but said former Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach would be a strong candidate.

"Sure, Roger would be a good candidate, but so would Sam Huff and Bob Lilly, two other guys I introduced to the Pro Hall of Fame," Landry said.

Huff was a linebacker for the New York Giants when Landry coached there. Both were close friends.

Lilly and Staubach were the defensive and offensive anchors, respectively, of the great Cowboys' Super Bowl teams.

"I think one of the greatest satisfactions I got out of coaching was seeing players like Lilly and Staubach go through the organization and then make big successes in business and society after they got out of football," Landry said.

"It was reward for them to come up to me years down the road and say, 'Gosh, coach, you knew what you were talking about in handling life. You were right,'" he said.

Staubach cried when he retired and got so emotional talking about Landry that he referred to him "as

Hawks' Mister Inside

BIG SPRING — He's Johnny Dangerous on court, using movie-gangster tactics to shoot out the scoreboard lights, but off court the Howard Hawks' Johnny McDowell is a modest but success-minded 19-year-old.

His solid 6-foot-5 frame, dominated by an imposing pair of broad shoulders, is effective inside when McDowell is muscling opponents out of the way. The freshman's aggressive appearance is matched by his attitude; a top player as a senior in Alabama, he said he was eager to join the college ranks.

"I was looking forward to playing against bigger and stronger people," McDowell said. "I was excited about it."

McDowell said he knew he was coming to a team with several fine players on the roster, but he wasn't especially intimidated by facing someone as good as the league's leading scorer, Terrence Lewis.

"Terrence and I don't play the same position, (but) it's good to know coming in there's a preseason All-American — a quality player," he said. "It makes the job easier."

"I didn't expect to start. I just wanted to come in and contribute. But the spot was open and I took advantage of

Bulldogettes self-destruct against Greenwood Rangerettes

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — Coach Truman Meissner and his Coahoma Bulldogettes would just as soon forget about Friday night's game against the Greenwood Rangerettes.

The Bulldogettes put on a display of "ugly basketball" as they dropped a 48-38 decision to the Rangerettes. The contest was a big one because the Rangerettes had won the first half of 7-3A play with an 4-0 record. The Bulldogettes finished second at 3-1, losing to Greenwood at the buzzer the first time. Greenwood is now 16-8 overall and 1-0 in the second half of district play.

But this time Greenwood didn't need to win in the last seconds; the Bulldogettes made sure of that.

Murphy's Law certainly applied to Coahoma on this night. It seemed every feasible thing that could go wrong went wrong for the Bulldogettes.

How bad was it? It was so bad that Coahoma's leading scorer and rebounder, Kelly Williams, and the team's second-leading rebounder, Kim Wilborn, stayed in foul trouble, and eventually fouled out in the fourth quarter.

At times it appeared the harder the Bulldogettes tried, the worse things got. For instance: Twice Coahoma made foul shots, and twice the points were nullified because a Coahoma player was in the lane too fast. Once on a Greenwood missed free throw, two Coahoma players took the rebound away from each other. A Greenwood player was waiting in the wings for an easy layup.

Even the officials' calls were against Coahoma. Once Greenwood in-bounded the ball underneath its own basket. On the throw-in the ball hit the side of the backboard, a violation. But there was no whistle, and a Greenwood player picked up the ball and promptly made a basket.

Shooting-wise and taking care of the basketball, Coahoma was terrible also. Normally a good shooting team, the Bulldogettes shot a miserable 26 percent from the floor and 62 percent from the foul line. In the turnover department, the usually skilled Bulldogettes turned the ball over 25 times.

A very peeved Meissner didn't have much to say after the loss. "I'm not sure we shot 20 percent tonight," he said. "We didn't do the things we had worked on doing. We didn't do the things we were supposed to do; that's the bottom line."

Williams was the only Bulldogette who had her shooting touch. The 5-foot-11 senior post made 8 of 13 field goals, and 6 of 7 free throws, for a game-high 23 points. She turned in an all-around strong game with 14 rebounds, two steals and two blocked shots.

Meanwhile the Rangerettes fielded a balanced scoring attack, one that didn't feature a single player in double figures. But Greenwood coach Steve Myatt used his bench to the fullest, and it responded well. Senior guard Shelly Mackey led Greenwood with nine points. Heather Donnell, Kendra Underwood and Monica Myers scored eight points each. Underwood and Myers fouled out in the fourth quarter.

After a cold first quarter, Coahoma trailed 12-5. Williams made her first basket of the game late in the quarter. Williams heated up in the second quarter and scored seven points, pulling Coahoma to within 19-16 at the half.

Coahoma started out strong in the third quarter, beginning with consecutive three-point plays by

Battle of Buffalos ends in split Friday night

STANTON — Talent usually tells in basketball games, and nowhere was this axiom more in evidence than at Buffalo Gym Friday night.

With their respective games on the line, the Forsan girls and the Stanton boys showed their experience and superior poise by taking wins here.

Kenny McCallister provided the scoring punch from the field and John Wyckoff helped ice the game at the free-throw line as the Stanton Buffalos held off a second-half rally to down the Forsan Buffalos, 61-57.

In the girls game, the Buffalo-Queens rallied from a first-half deficit to outlast the Stanton Lady Buffalos, 39-34.

Boys' game

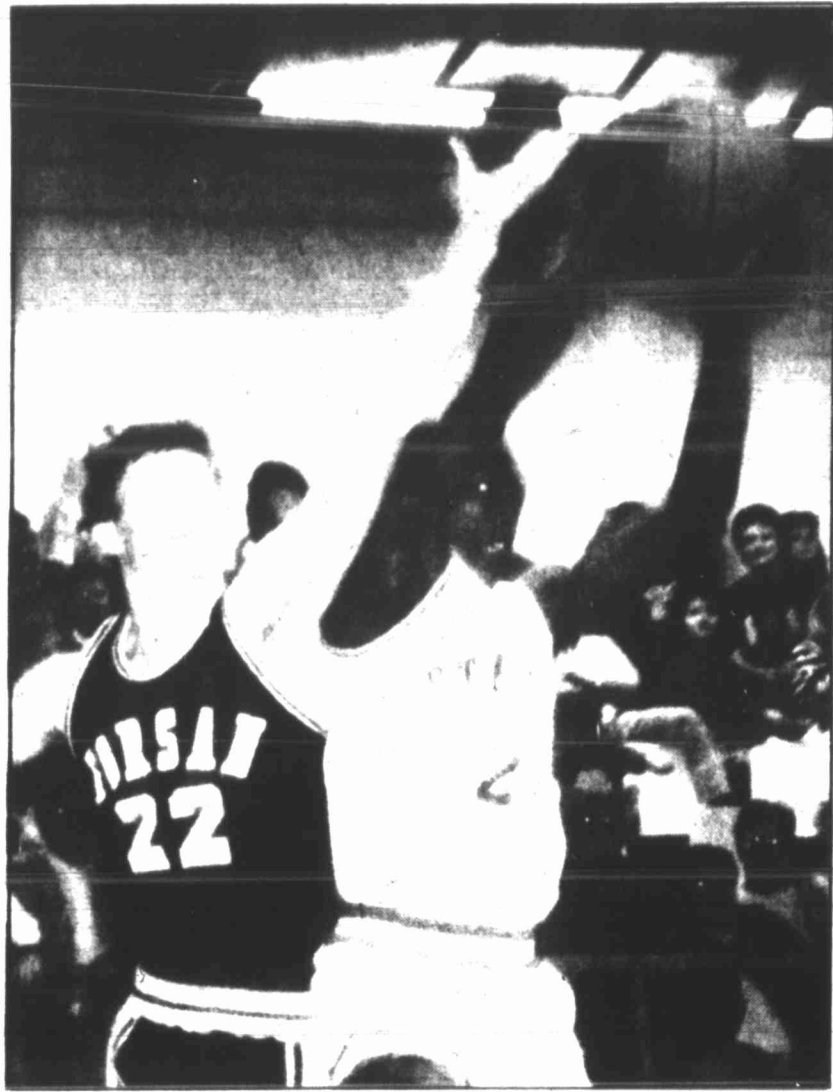

McCallister was a force for Stanton, leading all scorers with 22 points. But it was Wyckoff, who showed remarkable poise at the foul line in the waning minutes, who helped secure the win over Forsan.

Stanton dominated the first half. Forsan led briefly, 5-3, on Joey Henkel's jumper with three minutes left in the first, but Wyckoff and his mates soon took control.

Wyckoff sandwiched a two point and three point goal around a McCallister basket, and Stanton led, 12-7, after one.

The Battlin' Butts increased that lead to 19 midway through the second before Forsan, behind Henkel and Josh Wooten, whittled the deficit back down to seven at intermission.

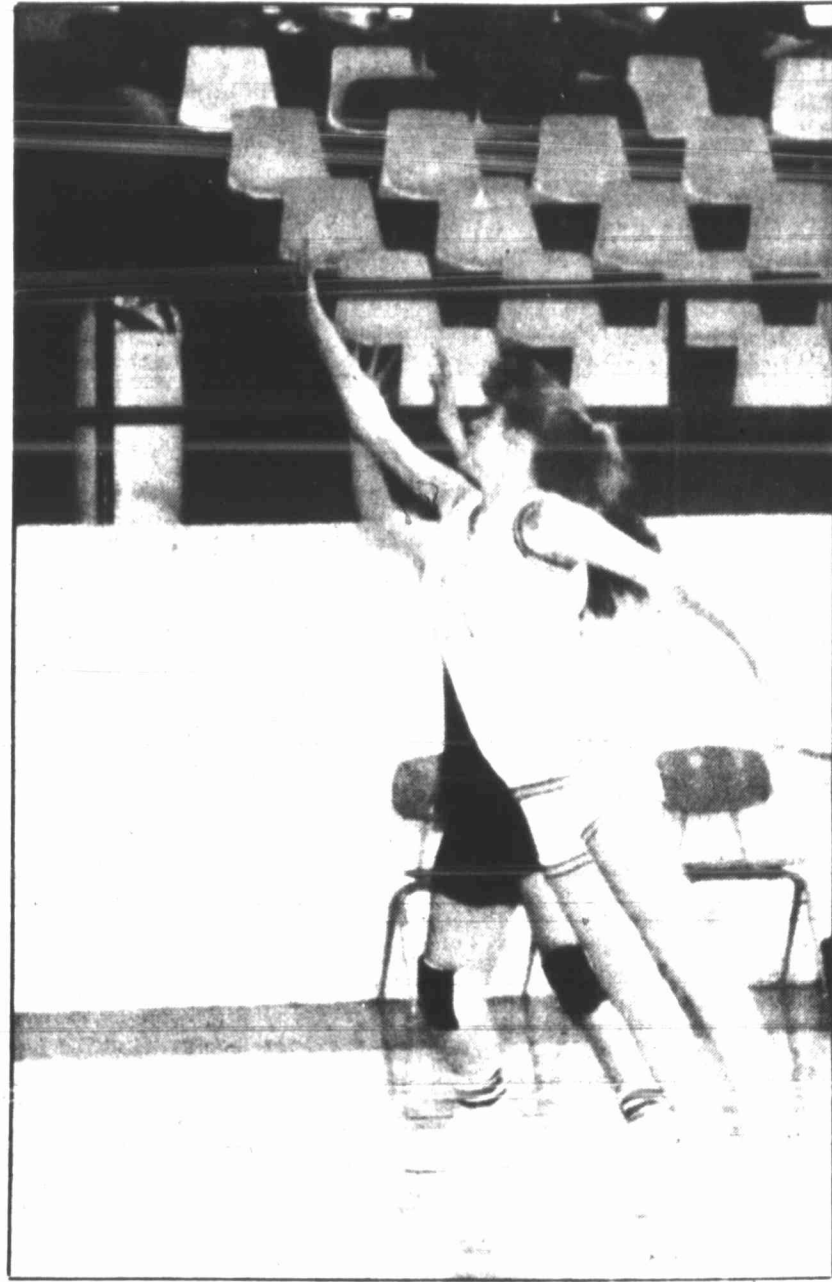

Stanton again used its superior inside game to gain control of the contest in the third quarter. The Butts went on a 12-4 run to lead, 43-29, with three minutes left in the quarter.

But Forsan responded with a run of its own, outscoring the Butts 11-4 in a two and a half minute span to once again trail by seven. The game really got interesting in the fourth quarter. Forsan guard

Charley Newton started things off with a three-pointer, then teammate Joey Conway sank a pair of free throws to bring the Buffalos to within two, 47-45, with 7:11 remaining.

But that was a close as the visitors would get. McCallister scored four points of a nine-point Stanton run, and Wyckoff nailed Forsan's coffin shut from the foul line to secure the win.

"The whole game, I was thinking: 'We're fixing to blow them out, we fixing to blow them out,'" Stanton coach Key Allred said after the game. "Then we'd make some mistakes and let them back into the game."

"The difference in the game was that we have a little more talent than they do," Allred said. "(Forsan coach Kurt) White's done a super job with what he's had."

According to White, Forsan just made too many mistakes to win. "We're not the type of team that can make a couple of mistakes in a row and still win. We've got to play above our heads to win."

Stanton, now 11-11 overall and 1-0 in the second half of District 6-2A play, returns to action Tuesday when it travels to Ozona. Forsan, 14-9 and 0-1, will also be on the road, travelling to McCarney.

the shotgun (or spread) offense in the 1970s, and was in the foreground of "situation substitutions" on both offense and defense in the 1980s.

Landry said in the "flex" defense he tried to eliminate the "daylight" that the late Vince Lombardi wanted his running backs to run to. As an assistant coach with the Giants in the late 1960s, Landry introduced the 4-3 defense to the NFL.

"The key of my defense was to coordinate it in such a way that there was no daylight to run to," Landry said. "Our defensive players played gaps to shut out the daylight."

Landry said he got a lot of his coaching inspiration from Paul Brown with the Cleveland Browns.

"He was a very precise coach and I admired him for it," Landry said. "He would start every season out saying, 'Now this is a football.' His teams were very fundamentally sound and that's how he won a lot of games and I believe that's how we won a lot of games."

Landry said winning two Super Bowls and producing a record 20 consecutive winning seasons would not have happened if the late and original Cowboys' owner, Clint Murchison, hadn't stuck by him.

"The biggest thing that helped me, probably the biggest thing that got me into the Hall of Fame, was the 10-year contract Clint gave me back in the 1960s when not very many people were happy with the way the team was going," Landry said. "It was the one thing that caused me to dedicate my life to coaching. Until then I hadn't given coaching for a lifetime much thought."

"Of course, Tex Schramm and Gil Brandt helped me mold winning teams. But it was Clint who gave me the chance to succeed."

of the '80s decided by less than a touchdown.

Add Denver losses in 1987 and 1988 that accentuated the NFC dominance.

In 1987, the Broncos led the New York Giants 10-9 at halftime, then were outgained 17-2 in the third quarter and lost 39-20.

Related stories, photos, pages 5-8B.

In 1988, they led Washington 10-0 after a quarter, then surrendered a record 35 points in the second quarter as the Redskins went on to win 42-10.

Third quarter, second quarter ... If the pattern holds, the blowout this year might come in the first quarter.

"We played a good half against the Giants and a good quarter against Washington," Coach Dan Reeves said this week. "This time we expect to play a good four quarters."

This game was on the collective minds of the 49ers almost as soon as John Taylor caught a 10-yard pass from Joe Montana with 34 seconds left to give the 49ers the 1988 NFL title. Added to 1981 and 1984 championships, it gave them the right to the title: "Team of the decade."

"I can remember players talking about it in the locker room," says George Seifert, who became the 49ers' head coach three days later, moving up from defensive coordinator when Bill Walsh stepped down.

"It was 'We've got to repeat. We want to repeat. We have to concentrate.'"

They concentrated well enough — actually, the buzzword they use is "focus" — to finish 14-2, the league's best record. Then they capped it with two one-sided playoff victories, 41-13 over Minnesota and 30-3 over the Los Angeles Rams, with whom they split two close regular-season games.

The players credited Seifert for a more relaxed atmosphere than they had under the austere Walsh. "A breath of fresh air," Montana called it, and center Jesse Sapolu added: "If Joe hadn't said it, I would have."

And while the players went out of their way to credit Walsh for devising the offense that was still the basis of their success, many quietly set out to prove that they could win on their own, without the man whose "genius" got most of their credit for the three previous titles.

In fact, when they weren't paying tribute to Seifert, they were coining a word to define their motivation: "JoeRonnieKeena," for Montana, Ronnie Lott and Keena Turner, three of the five 49ers to play in four Super Bowls.

But the on-field catalyst was the 33-year-old Montana, who had seemed on the downside of his career following a back operation in 1986 and again the next season when he was replaced by Steve Young in a one-sided playoff loss to Minnesota.

All he did in 1989 was have perhaps the best season of any quarterback in NFL history. He became just the third to complete more than 70 percent of his passes and his rating of 112.4 was the highest ever under the convoluted rating system instituted in the mid-'70s.

Not only was there Montana, but there was Jerry Rice catching passes at a rate that could give him a bushel of career receiving records. There was Taylor, emerging in his fourth year as a deep threat to rival Rice; multi-faceted running back Roger Craig; and fullback Tom Rathman.

Dr. Russell Chick said the transplant will be done in Los Angeles by himself and Dr. Larry Dorr, a hip replacement specialist from California. Lady Steers fall to Fort Stockton FORT STOCKTON — The hard-luck Big Spring Lady Steers had some cold shooting, and dropped a 45-40 decision to the Fort Stockton Prowlers Friday night in 4-4A basketball action.

With the win Fort Stockton advances to 8-16 and 3-7. Big Spring falls to 18-8 and 7-3.

The Lady Steers played this contest without three of its starters. Sophomore post player Teveyan Russell was a House Bill 72 casualty, and sister guards Stephanie and Peggy Smith were in Memphis, Tenn. attending a funeral. To make matters worse, post player Bridgett Black had the flu, leaving the Lady Steers with only seven players.

Big Spring led 14-11 after one quarter of play, then fell on hard shooting times the next two quarters. Normally a fairly high-scoring team, the Lady Steers tallied just 12 points in the second and third quarters.

Meanwhile the Prowlers took the lead behind the shooting of guard Angie Gomez. The Lady Steers trailed 37-26 going into the final quarter. Big Spring rallied in the final period, but couldn't overcome the deficit.

Gomez, who scored 35 points against the Lady Steers in the first meeting, had another good game. She was especially hot in the first half, scoring 20 of her game-high 24 points.

"The second quarter killed us. We just got cold," said Big Spring assistant coach Tracy Pierce. "We couldn't stop the Gomez girl. She was just driving the paint, and throwing 'em up and putting 'em in. If we had stopped her, there was no way they could have beaten us."

"Mentally I think the girls were a little nervous without the other players. I think we thought we could win though. Gisla Spears was playing on a sprained ankle, and to score 18 points on a sprained

Steers drop another close one, 73-69

FORT STOCKTON — The Big Spring Steers dropped another close game, this time by four — a 73-69 setback to the Fort Stockton Panthers.

The Steers fell behind by three after one quarter — 18-15. Using its fullcourt press, Fort Stockton upped the lead to 43-33 at the half. Then the Steer made a run in the third quarter, scoring 24 points, and tying the game at 57-57 going into the last quarter.

But the Panthers managed to come away with a four-point victory when it was all over. Fort Stockton coach Melvin Reynolds said it was team's constant pressure that paved the way to the win. "They (Big Spring) have some young guards and we fullcourt pressed them all over the court,"

Stanton, paced by Jana Heidelberg's 10 points, falls to 0-1 in second-half district action.

The Queens appeared on the verge several times of blowing the game open, only to have the Lady Buffalos rally to take the lead. Forsan used an 8-2 run late in the first quarter to take a 12-7 lead into the second.

However, Heidelberg got hot in the quarter, scoring six of her points during that time. Her three-point play allowed Stanton to tie the game at 14-14 midway through the stanza, and Cissie Hobbs' jumper with 1:32 left gave the Lady Buffs their first lead, 16-14.

Mitchell countered with a jumper to tie the score with 48 seconds left before halftime, but Heidelberg hit the front end of a one-and-one, and Sherry Johnson nailed a three-pointer at the buzzer to give Stanton a 20-16 intermission lead.

Bernadette Valles led Big Spring with 26 points. Vernice Ross added 16 and Wanda Petterson followed with 12 points. Syreta Shellman scored eight and Kayla Roberts tallied four points.

Stanton tied the contest at 25 on Brandi Bundas' basket with 6:42 left, but that proved to be the Lady Buffs' last hurrah. Evans connected on a two baskets, Amy Stockwell added a free throw and a field goal and Mitchell hit five of six free throws down the stretch to ice the game for the Queens.

Three minutes later Myers hit back-to-back bank shots, and Donnell scored off an offensive rebound. Greenwood led 44-32 and the game was over for all practical purposes.

"We got five points up on them and we should have held on to that lead," said Meissner. "We made a lot of careless turnovers. Now we've got to bow our neck and win the rest of them."

it." Now that he has several months of college ball under his belt, McDowell has found it harder than high school despite the Hawks' 22-0 record.

"It's been up and down," he said. "Like games that we should win — they're the hardest to play."

As far as his own performances go, McDowell said there's room for improvement.

"I'm satisfied for right now, but I'm looking to get better and better as the season goes on," he said. "The most important part of my game I need to improve is my free throw shooting."

Howard coach Steve Green said his post player is like that: always looking to get better and always pushing those around him to get better.

"His attitude, coming out day after day and working like he does, has set the tone for practice," Green said. "His basketball maturity is beyond the freshman year. He's a good kid. I think there's a reason he's been as successful as he has: Good things happen to good people."

"He's a pleasure to coach and I have a lot of respect for someone who comes out and works hard day after day. It's not easy and we're demanding."

Green said McDowell's attitude during games has been a key to the Hawks' undefeated season. His statistics — 19 points and nine rebounds per game — aren't astounding, but he manages to elevate everyone else's level of play, Green said.

"He's got a lot of heart," Green said of McDowell. "He's a great competitor. He's not going to allow us to sit back and get beat without trying to win the game."

McDowell credits his strong will to win to his Central Tuscaloosa High School coaches.

"That's the way my high school coaches established my toughness and mentality — play to win instead of play to lose," McDowell explained.

And he tries to instill that attitude in his Howard teammates too.

Steer swimmers finish in middle of pack at Midland meet

MIDLAND — Both the Big Spring Steers and Lady Steers swim teams finished about the middle of the pack in the Midland Invitational.

The two-day, 22-team meet concluded Saturday with Midland Lee winning the girls division, scoring 439 points; and San Angelo Central winning the boys division with 263 points.

Finishing second in the girls division was Central with 225 points. Third was Midland High School with 155 points, nosing out Pampa by six points.

Following Central in the boys division was Midland High with 222 points. Amarillo High had 199 points and New Mexico Military Institute of Roswell, N.M. was fourth with 162 points.

The Steers finished ninth, scoring 88 points. The Lady Steers were 13th, tallying 53.5 points.

The Steers biggest point producer was senior Chase Fraser, who finished second in the 50-yard freestyle and fifth in the 100-yard butterfly. He also swam on the 200 medley relay team that finished seventh.

In the 50 freestyle, Fraser was fifth after the start. He was fourth in the last turn, and his strong finish almost overtook first-place finisher Patrick Walker of Abilene. Walker's time was 22.81 and Fraser swam a 23.35.

Fraser swam a 59.41 in the 100 butterfly. Sophomore Matthew Houston of Midland High won in a time of 52.16, some five seconds ahead of the second place finisher. In the 200 medley relay, Fraser teamed with Abel Diaz, Russ Roten and Chris Fuqua to swim a 1:53.29.

Johnny Webb placed 10th in the 200 freestyle (2:01.48) and fifth in the 500 freestyle (5:25.44).

Leading the Lady Steers was frosh Christy Webb, Johnny's sister. Webb swam a 29.44 to finish 12th in the 50 freestyle, and gained a sixth-place finish in the 100 freestyle (63.86). She also teamed with Erika Clarkson, Debra McMillian and Sally Lopez for an eighth place finish in the 400 freestyle relay (4:34.39).

McMillian had season bests of 2:56.91 in the 200 individual medley, and 66.55 in the 100 freestyle. She placed 15th in the individual medley and 12th in the freestyle.

Big Spring coach Harlan Smith said he expected that his swimmers' times wouldn't be as good because of their rigorous workout schedule, but praised the performances of Fraser and McMillian.

Big Spring's next competition will be Feb. 10 in the Fort Stockton Invitational.

Super Sunday

Look for Denver to shine

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Somebody should wake up my buddy Steve Reagan. I know Reagan's a knowledgeable man when it comes to sports; but someone needs to tell him the favorites don't always win.

Oh sure the 49ers — the Team of the 80s, are a clear-cut favorite. I think the point spread in Vegas is something like two touchdowns. Those poor defenseless Broncos, what will they do?

I'll tell you what they'll do. They're going to pull off the biggest upset in Super Bowl history. It'll be shades of Broadway Joe leading the Jets to victory over the unbeatable Baltimore Colts in 1969.

First there's the No. 4 theory. If the Broncos lose they will tie the Minnesota Vikings' unenviable mark of four failures in as many trips to the Super Bowl. If the 49ers win they will tie Pittsburgh's record of 4-0 in Super Bowls.

Reagan says the 49ers are playing for greatness. I say the Broncos are playing for respect. When it comes down to it, it's easier to play hard to gain that respect, quenching that thirst for something he's never tasted before. San Francisco is already the best team of the decade, they're not quite as thirsty as everybody thinks.

This year the Denver Broncos are more than just a good team with a great quarterback.

For openers; there are two reasons the Broncos are much better than the teams that lost to the New York Giants in Super Bowl XXI 39-20; and 42-10 to the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XXIV — a running game and defense.

This year the AFC Champions have worked hard to get a running game established, and they got the job done. Cracked ribs or not, rookie Bobby Humphrey, will play, and his running will take the pressure off John Elway.

When the Broncos fired their entire defensive coaching staff last year, they sent out a message — we won't get pushed around anymore. They have discarded the old "bend don't break" defense, and employed a more aggressive system. New defensive coordinator Wade Phillips has done a remarkable job.

Now there are shades of the Orange Crush days with Tom Jackson, Lyle Alzado and Louis Wright roaming the field.

The Bronco "D" has to throw off Joe Montana's rhythm. The Broncos seldom blitz, which is good, because Montana is the master at picking up blitzes.

I think the Broncos are capable of making the 49ers actually earn their scores. I mean, no six-yard pass to John Taylor, that turns into a 80-yard score, and they won't let Montana float one out to Jerry Rice for a one-play scoring drive.

The Bronco defenders have been good tacklers all year. Great undercoverage by the linebackers and sure tackling is a must.

And Joe Montana and the 49ers offensive line can be had. He's been sacked 33 times this season, only twice less than Elway.

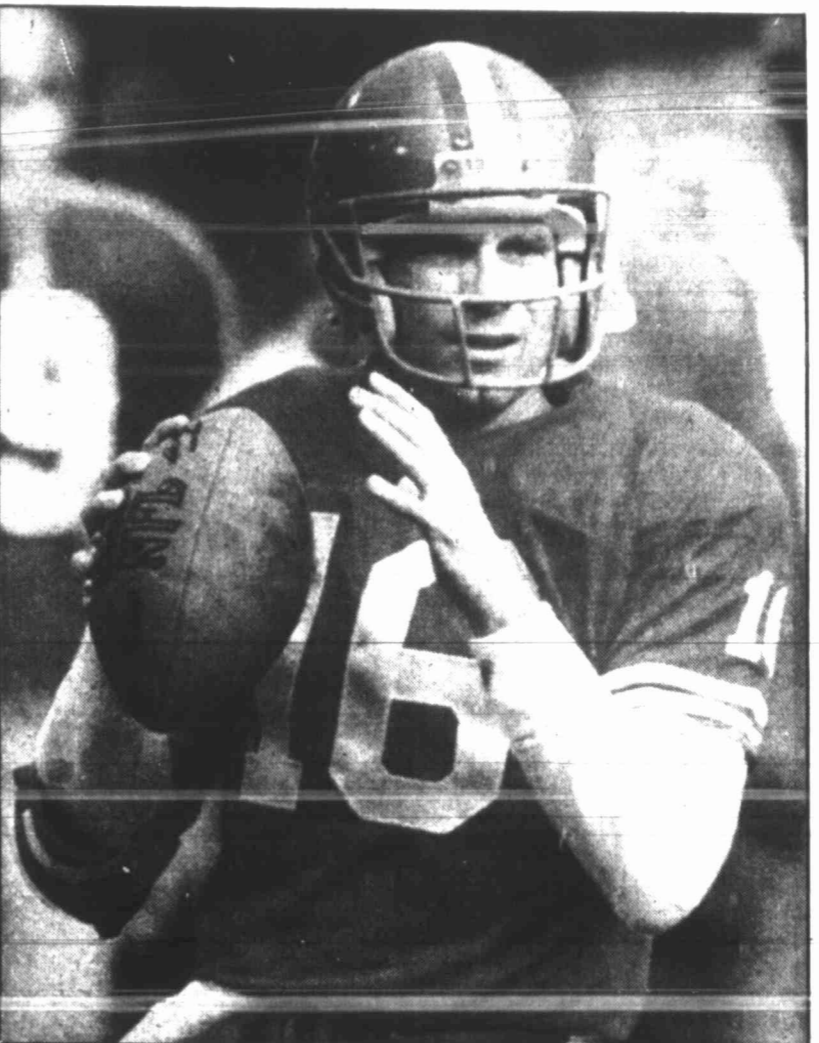

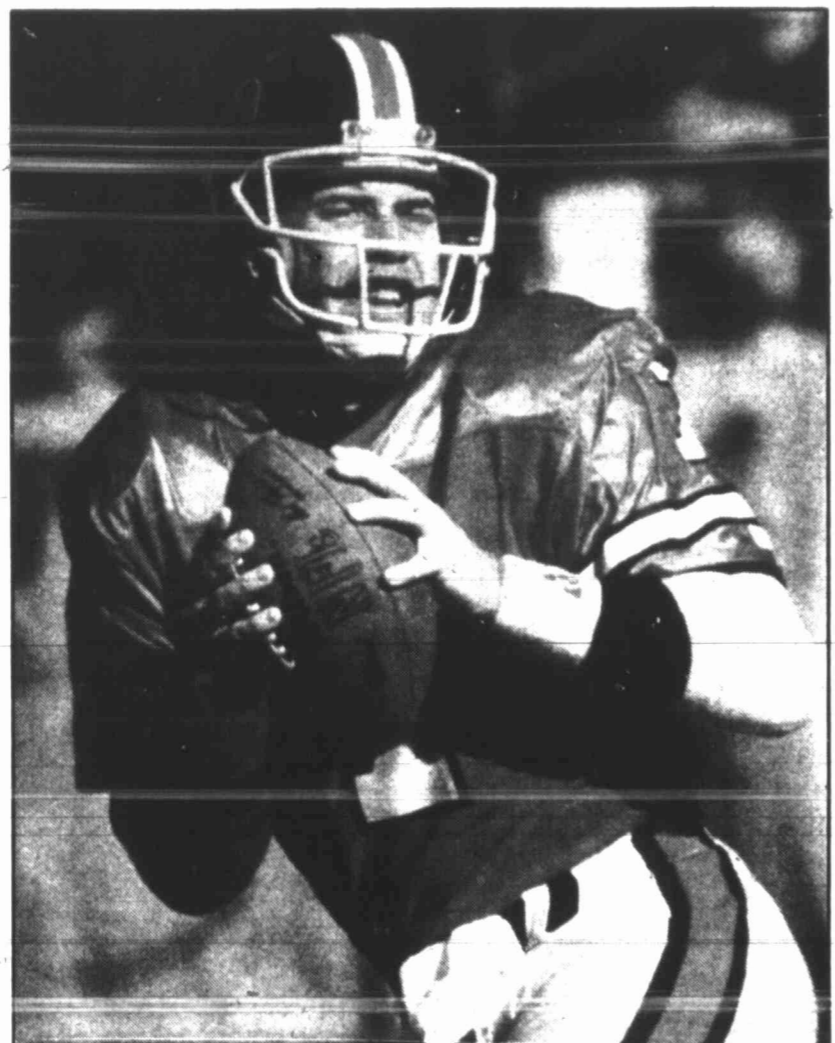

When it comes to the Bronco offense — I say John Elway. From the moment he came into the pros, I knew he was something special. John Elways, with that magical right arm, come around about once every decade.

He swaggers on the field like the town sheriff, aware of everything around him and quick and very accurate to the draw.

Elway will show just how great he is today. He won't let his team lose, and his confidence has rubbed off on his teammates.

Then there's the deciding theory. The Chinese New Year was last week. Guess what year it is in Chinese astrology? — The Year of the Horse.

Frisco to frolic, for sure

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Someone should wake up Steve Bevo. My buddy Bevo is knowledgeable about a great many things when it comes to sports, but methinks he is a bit daft by predicting a Denver victory in today's Super Bowl.

Denver? Win the Super Bowl? Against the Niners?

Get outta here. Nothing against Denver, mind you, but they don't have a snowball's chance of downing San Francisco in today's Ultimate Game.

Basically, Bevo states that there are four reasons the Broncos will win today: attitude, a running game, an improved defense and John Elway.

Let's examine these — ahem — Denver advantages.

● Attitude — Bevo says the Broncos are fighting for respect, so they are hungrier than the 49ers, who are probably bored to tears by winning all of those Super Bowls.

Well, folks, if attitude counts for anything, San Francisco should prevail easily. The Niners, after all, have won three Super Bowls, so they know only too well how to win one of these things.

The Broncos, on the other hand, have lost three Super Bowls, so they are still basically clueless on what it takes to be Number One.

What it all boils down to is that San Francisco will be playing to win, while Denver will be playing not to lose. And, as any coach will tell you, the team that plays not to lose is digging a big hole for itself from the outset.

● Running game — One of the main reasons Denver is winless in three Super tries is that the Broncos had Elway and not much more on offense. With the addition of Bobby Humphrey at running back, that has changed this season.

However, Humphrey suffered cracked ribs in the AFC Championship game against Cleveland, and it is highly doubtful that he will be able to withstand the punishment that Frisco's defense will mete out.

While we're talking running games, let's mention the Niners' ground game. Roger Craig and Tom Rathman have proved to be a deadly efficient combo all season — and they're healthy to boot.

● Defense — Granted, Denver's defense has come light years from the units that surrendered more than 70 points in Super Bowl losses to New York and Washington. And it is duly noted that the Bronco defenders allowed the fewest points in the league.

However, it should also be entered into the record that Minnesota had the highest-ranked defense in the league when it faced San Francisco in the playoffs — and the Niners only scored 41 points against the Vikings.

Is there any reason Joe Montana and his mates can't do the same thing against Denver? Of course not.

While we're talking about defense, how about a word for San Francisco's "D"? The word, by the way, is awesome.

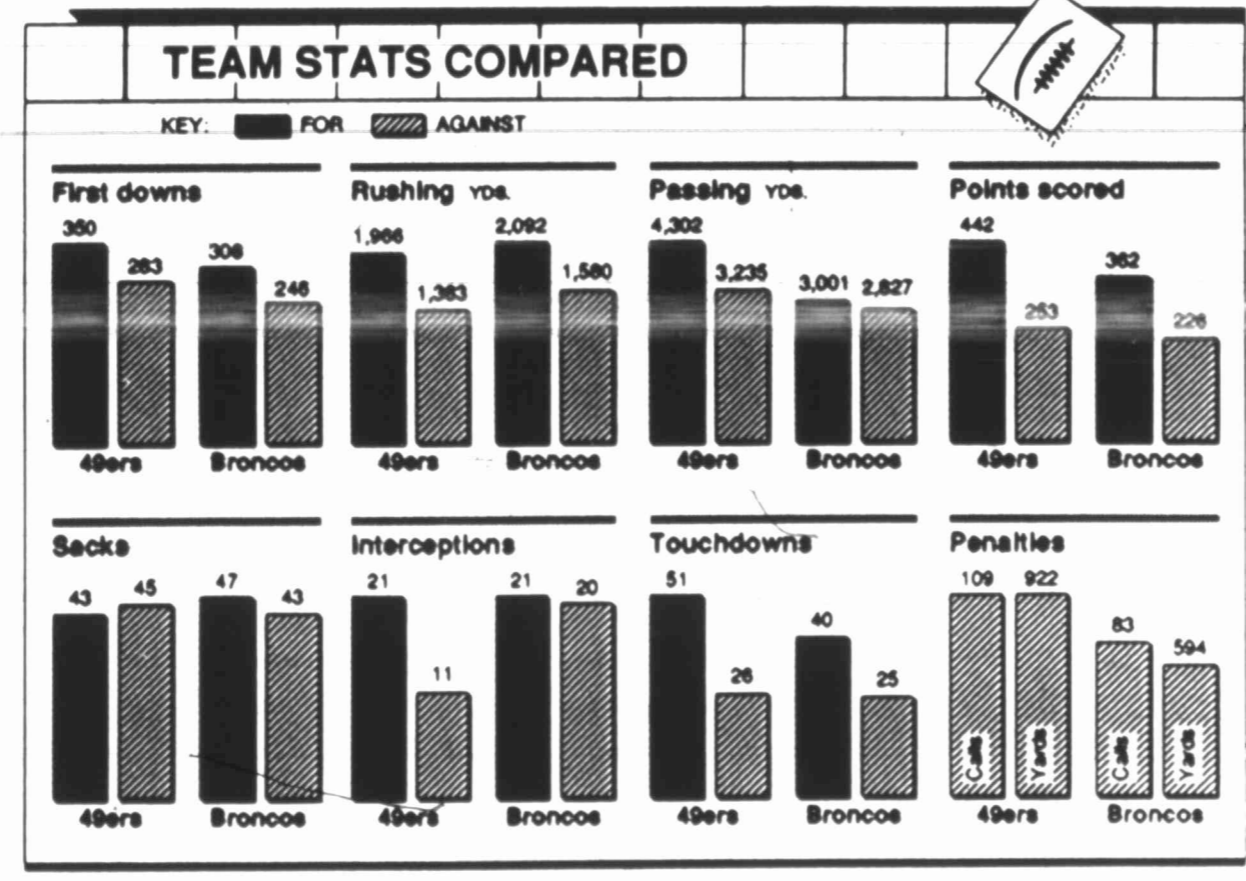

This has to be one of the most underrated groups in history. They don't grab many headlines, but they definitely get results.

● Elway — Bevo paints a picture of Elway as the rough, tough, swaggering gunfighter, ready to blow the San Francisco secondary to shreds.

Well, if Elway is the gunslinger, Montana is the Gary Cooper character from "High Noon." Granted, Elway is great, but Montana is arguably the greatest of all time.

Oh, I almost forgot Bevo's other "advantage": The Year of the Horse. Sorry to bust your bubble, Steve-o, but I can't help but remember that Denver was in the Super Bowl the last time it was The Year of the Horse. And guess what? They lost that one, too.

San Francisco 35, Denver 21

NEW ORLEANS — The San Francisco 49ers and the Denver Broncos will meet at 4:19 p.m. in Super Bowl XXIV. Among the people to watch in the Superdome today are, clockwise from top left, Denver quarterback John Elway, San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana, San Francisco coach George Seifert and Denver coach Dan Reeves. At left is a statistical comparison of the two teams.

Super facts

Super Bowl History
By The Associated Press
Super Bowl I
January 15, 1967
At Los Angeles—61,946
Kansas City 16-7
Green Bay 7-7
The National Football League's Green Bay Packers opened the Super Bowl series by defeating the Kansas City Chiefs of the American Football League 35-10. Behind the passing of Bart Starr, the receiving of Max McGee and a key interception by All-Pro safety Willie Wood, Green Bay broke open a tight game with three second-half touchdowns.

With Green Bay leading 14-10 early in the third quarter, Wood's 40-yard return of an interception to the Chiefs' 5-yard line set up an Elijah Pitts touchdown run which gave Green Bay an 11-point lead.

McGee, filling in for ailing Boyd Dowler, had caught only three passes during the 1966 season. Dowler in this game caught seven passes from Starr for 138 yards and two touchdowns. Pitts ran for two scores and Jim Taylor, who led all ground gainers with 53 yards, scored the Packers' other touchdown.

Starr completed 16 of 29 passes for 250 yards and three touchdowns, including the game-winning 35-yard pass to Pitts. The Packers collected $15,000 per man and the Chiefs $7,500 — the largest single-game shares in the history of team sports.

Super Bowl II
January 14, 1968
At Miami—75,546
Green Bay Packers 33-14
Miami Dolphins 7-17

Green Bay Packers 33-14
Oakland Raiders 7-14
After winning his third consecutive NFL Championship, Green Bay captured its second straight Super Bowl in a game that drew the first $3-million-dollar gate in football history. Bart Starr was again chosen the game's most valuable player as he completed 13 of 24 passes for 202 yards.

Starr's 62-yard pass to a wide-open Boyd Dowler gave the Packers a 13-0 second quarter lead. Don Chandler kicked four field goals and Herb Adderley, an All-Pro cornerback, capped the Green Bay scoring with a 60-yard interception return. The Raiders' two touchdowns came on a pair of 23-yard passes from Daryle Lamonica to Bill Miller.

The game marked the last for Vince Lombardi as Packers coach, ending nine years at Green Bay in which he won six Western Conference Championships, five NFL Championships and two Super Bowls.

Super Bowl III
January 12, 1969
At Miami—75,377
New York Jets 16-7
Baltimore Colts 7-17
Despite the fact that the Colts were coming into the game as 17-point favorites, Jet quarterback Joe Namath guaranteed victory on the Thursday before the game. He then went out and led the AFL to its first Super Bowl victory over a Baltimore team that had lost only once in 16 games all season.

Namath, chosen the game's most valuable player, completed 17 of 28 passes for 206 yards. The Jets had intercepted Colt quarterback Earl Morrall three times in the first half, each deep in New York territory.

The Jets finished the game with 337 total yards, including 121 on 30 carries by fullback Matt Snell.

The AFL squared the Super Bowl with the NFL at two games apiece. The Chiefs built a 16-0 halftime lead behind Len Dawson's superb quarterbacking. Jan Stenerud's three field goals.

The Vikings, who gained 222 yards rushing in the NFL Championship Game against Cleveland, managed just 67 yards on the ground against Kansas City.

Dawson, the fourth consecutive quarterback to be named the game's most valuable player, completed 12 of 17 tosses for 142 yards.

Despite committing five turnovers, Minnesota got right back in the game on Dave Osborn's short TD plunge in the third quarter. But the Chiefs came back as Dawson hit Otis Taylor for 46 yards and the final points of the contest.

The first Super Bowl under the new merger of the NFL and AFL ended in high drama but only after both teams suffered through 60 minutes of turnovers. The Colts fumbled five times (losing three) and suffered three interceptions. The Cowboys lost one fumble and also threw three interceptions.

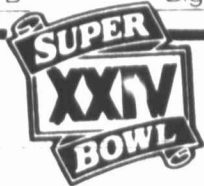

With Dallas leading 6-0 in the second quarter, John Unitas threw a pass off the fingertips of receiver Eddie Hinton and defensive back Mel Renfro and into the waiting arms of tight end John Mackey, who sped all the way for a 75-yard score.

Dallas regained the lead before the half on a seven yard pass from Craig Morton to Duane Thomas. The lead stood until the fourth quarter when Rich Volk picked off a Morton pass, setting up the tying touchdown scored by Tom Nowatzke.

Then, with 1:09 to play, linebacker Mike Curtis picked off another Morton pass on the Cowboys 28. Three plays later rookie kicker Jim O'Brien, who had an extra point blocked earlier, booted a 32-yard field goal to give the Colts a 16-13 win.

Dallas' Chuck Howley, who picked off two passes, became the first defensive player and the first player from a losing team to be named MVP.

Super Sunday

Life as a pro a kick for Treadwell, Cofer

AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — It may have been the truest statement uttered by any of the Super Bowl competitors all week: "Football is great, but it's not reality."

Denver Broncos placekicker David Treadwell, originator of that quote, knows something about the real world. Treadwell was working in a chemical plant at this time last year, putting to use the electrical engineering degree he earned at Clemson in 1988.

Back in fantasyland, he finds himself about to cap a season that for him has been, appropriately, "a kick."

Will Treadwell or his San Francisco counterpart, Mike Cofer, provide the key points in Sunday's Super Bowl? Both have shown that ability, ranking as the top scorers in their respective conferences this season.

Cofer scored 136 points, hitting on 29 of 36 field goals, 81 percent. He hit his first nine attempts of the season, setting a team record of 17 in a row dating back to the previous season. The 29 field goals broke his own club record.

Treadwell scored 120 points, converting 27 of 33, 82 percent. He was successful on his first 11 kicks before missing a 54-yarder, and his 27 field goals tied a club record.

Cofer was named to the All-Pro team, and Treadwell is headed to the Pro Bowl.

About the only way these former Atlantic Coast Conference rivals differ is in game-winning kicks.

Treadwell won two games for the Broncos in the closing seconds, both on the road. His 27-yarder in overtime gave the Broncos a 24-21 victory over Seattle and a 26-yarder with one second left beat Kansas City 16-13.

Cofer had no such opportunities in 1989.

"I haven't been in any late game pressure situations," said Cofer, a North Carolina State product. "I think that's a credit to the team."

"But that can be deceiving. The fans think a pressure kick is always at the end of a game with the game on the line. Kickers know that every kick is a pressure kick."

Cofer conceded that a lack of experience in such situations could be detrimental. "You're never quite sure how you'll respond if you haven't been there," he said. "And I haven't been in that situation for a while."

Both kickers have taken what has become the customary course to employment in the NFL for anyone trying to earn a living with his foot.

Cofer signed a free-agent contract with the Cleveland Browns in 1987 but was cut during the exhibition season. Later that season, he appeared in two strike-replacement games for New Orleans.

Replacing the retired Ray Wersching in 1988, Cofer set 49er records for field goals attempted (38) and made (27).

Treadwell was in Denver's training camp in 1988. Despite converting all three of his field goal attempts, including a 51-yarder at Miami, he lost out to incumbent Rich Karlis and was cut.

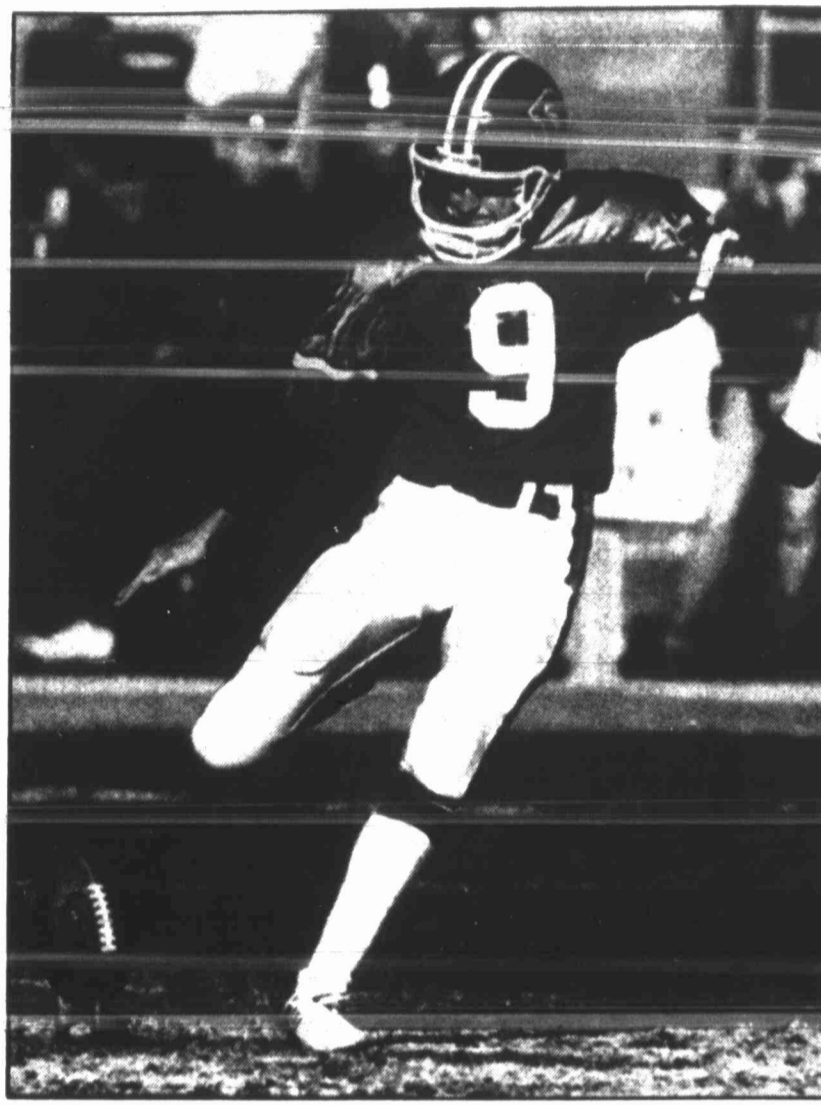

He had tryouts with Green Bay and Miami midway through the season, and signed a free-agent contract with Phoenix at the end of the season. On May 30, the Broncos acquired him in a trade.

Karlis and the Broncos couldn't reach contract terms, and Treadwell beat out veteran Rafael Septien in training camp to win the job.

"At our position, a lot of guys go through that," Cofer said. "You have to knock your head against the door several times before people notice you. Very few kickers in this league are with the teams they should be with."

Treadwell said his biggest feat of the season wasn't winning those two games but "making this team."

"You can't believe what an emotional roller-coaster 1988 was for me," he said.

NEW ORLEANS — If Super Bowl XXIV comes down to the final moments, either of these two men could decide the game. Placekickers Paul Cofer, left, of the San Francisco 49ers, and David Treadwell, right, of the Denver Broncos, will meet today in the Superdome.

Beuerlein sings the praises of Party smart

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In this most wicked of party cities, at the height of the Super Bowl Zanies, a quarterback from the rowdy Los Angeles Raiders talks quietly about drinking responsibly.

"I guess you could find a little irony in that. But I am like the old time Raiders in other ways," Steve Beuerlein said. "You can ask the guys on the team. I'm pretty intense out there. I'm vocal on the field."

Beuerlein is honorary chairman of Party Smart, an organization promoting moderation in alcohol consumption.

"We're talking to people over 21 who have already made the decision to drink. We're not encouraging or discouraging. What we are saying is that if you are going to drink, be intelligent about it," he said.

"I'm here to have a good time, just like anybody else. I'm going to see Bourbon Street," he said. "But if you're going to drink, be smart about it."

That involves, among other things, knowing your capacity and lining up a designated driver to stay sober and get you home safely, he said.

Party Smart is an education project of Beer Drinkers of America, which got its seed money from the brewing industry but now operates entirely on membership dues.

One of the organization's success stories is a designated driver program instituted by the Chicago Bears this season. About 1,200 fans signed up, agreeing to drink nothing but soft drinks at games. In return, concessionaires gave each of them two free soft drinks. To prevent cheating or backsliding, the signers' hands were stamped, and nobody with a stamped hand could buy alcoholic beverages at Soldiers Field.

Super facts

Cowboys used a punishing ground attack in setting a Super Bowl record of 252 yards rushing.

Leading only 10-3 at the half, the Cowboys marched 71 yards to start the third quarter and scored on a three-yard run by Thomas, who finished the game with 95 yards on 19 carries.

Chuck Howley's interception of a Bob Giese pass set up Dallas' final score: a 7-yard pass from Roger Staubach to Mike Ditka. Dallas controlled the ball most of the game, running off 69 offensive plays (for 352 total yards) to Miami's 44 plays (for a Super Bowl record low of 185 yards).

Miami became the first team to not score a touchdown in a Super Bowl. Staubach, voted the game's most valuable player, completed 12 of 19 passes for 119 yards and two scores.

Super Bowl VII

Washington 0 0 0 7-7

Miami went 14-0 in the regular season, but had struggled in its two playoff wins over Cleveland (20-14) and Pittsburgh (21-17). Washington was 11-3 during the regular season but was impressive in playoff wins over Green Bay (16-3) and Dallas (26-3).

The Dolphins, a slight underdog, played virtually flawless football in the first half. Late in the first quarter Bob Griese directed Miami on a 63-yard drive capped off by a 28-yard pass to Howard Twilley. Then, just before the half, Jim Kick went over from the one-yard line to give Miami a 14-0 lead.

Washington was apparently going to be shut out when, with two minutes remaining in the game, Miami's Garo Yepremian attempted a 42-yard field goal only to have it blocked. Yepremian then attempted to pass, only to have the ball slip out of his hands right to Mike Bass of the Redskins. Bass ran 49 yards for the score.

Miami safety Jake Scott picked off two passes in the game and was named MVP.

At Houston—71,882

Minnesota 0 0 0 7-7

Miami 14 3 7 0-24

The Dolphins made it two Super Bowl wins in a row in their third straight Super Bowl appearance.

Miami marched 62 and 56 yards for scores in the first 15 minutes. Larry Csonka, the game's most valuable player, scored on a five-yard run and Jim Kick blasted over from a yard out.

Trailing 17-0 near the end of the half, Minnesota faced a fourth-and-one from Miami's 6. Electing to go for the first down, Minnesota came up short when running back Oscar Reed fumbled.

Minnesota got on the board when trailing 24-0 early in the fourth quarter on a four-yard run by Fran Tarkenton. Csonka gained 145 yards on 33 carries and Bob Griese threw only seven passes in the game, completing six for 73 yards.

Super Bowl IX

At New Orleans—80,997

Pittsburgh 0 2 7 7-16

Minnesota 0 0 0 6-6

Making their first Super Bowl appearance, the Pittsburgh Steelers totally shut down Minnesota's offense to hand the Vikes their third Super Bowl defeat.

Fran Tarkenton botched a pitchout deep in his own territory. Tarkenton fell on the ball in the endzone, but was pounced upon by Steeler defensive end Dwight White.

The Steelers got another break at the start of the second half when Viking Bill Brown muffed the kickoff and Pittsburgh's Mary Kellum recovered on the Viking 30. Four plays later, Franco Harris scored from 12 yards out and Pittsburgh led 9-0.

Minnesota narrowed the margin to three points at 4-7 of the fourth quarter when Matt Blair blocked Bobby Walden's punt and Terry Brown recovered in the endzone. But the Steelers came right back on a 66-yard march culminating in a four-yard pass from Terry Bradshaw to Larry Brown.

Harris, the game's MVP, set a Super Bowl rushing record with 158 yards on 34 carries and led a 36-yard drive which outgamed Minnesota, 333-119.

Super Bowl X
January 18, 1976

At Miami—80,187

Dallas 7 3 0 7-17

Pittsburgh 7 0 0 14-21

The Steelers won the Super Bowl for the second consecutive year on Terry Bradshaw's 64-yard touchdown pass to Lynn Swann and an aggressive defense that snuffed out a late rally by the Cowboys.

Leading 15-10 in the fourth quarter on two Roy Gerela field goals, a safety and a Bradshaw to Randy Grossman touchdown, Bradshaw withstood a ferocious Cowboy rush to unleash his scoring strike to Swann.

Dallas came back on a Roger Staubach-to-Percy Howard 34-yard TD pass to close within four points. Then with 1:22 to go, Pittsburgh gave the ball up on downs. Staubach picked up a couple of first downs but his desperation pass on the last play of the game was picked off by Glen Edwards in the endzone.

In a game that saw only two penalties assessed (both against Dallas), Swann, with four receptions for 161 yards, was named the game's MVP.

Super Bowl XI

At Pasadena, Calif.—103,438

Oakland 0 16 3 13-32

Minnesota 0 0 7 7-14

The Raiders won their first NFL Championship and the Vikings dropped their fourth Super Bowl before a record Super Bowl crowd.

After a scoreless first quarter, Oakland erupted for 16 second-quarter points behind the running of Clarence Davis (who finished with 137 yards on 16 carries), the pinpoint passing of Ken Stabler.

Trailing 19-0 in the third quarter, the Vikings got on the board with an eight-yard Fran Tarkenton pass to Sammy White. But on the ensuing drive Stabler hit Biletnikoff for 48 yards to set up a two-yard plunge by veteran Pete Banaszak.

Defensive back Willie Brown iced the game in the fourth quarter by intercepting a Tarkenton pass and returning it 75 yards for the score.

Minnesota finished the game with 355 yards of total offense, but most of them came when the outcome had already been decided. In each of its four Super Bowl losses, Minnesota failed to score in the first half. The Vikes were outscored in the four games 95-34 and managed a total of 227 yards rushing (55.4 yards per outing) and 90 carries for a 2.5 yard average.

Denver 0 0 10 0-10

The Dallas Cowboys evened their Super Bowl record at 2-2 by taking advantage of eight Bronco turnovers. Dallas converted two interceptions into 10 points and Eiren Herrera's 35-yard field goal into a 13-0 halftime advantage.

Denver's Jim Turner then kicked a 47-yard field goal. But later in the third quarter, Dallas wide receiver Butch Johnson made a diving catch in the endzone to complete a 45-yard touchdown pass from Roger Staubach and put the Cowboys ahead 20-3.

Denver again cut the lead to ten, this time on a one-yard run by Rob Lytle. But with 7:04 to play fullback Robert Newhouse tossed a 29-yard option pass to Golden Richards for the final score of the game.

Staubach completed 17 of 25 passes for 183 yards with no interceptions and Tony Dorsett gained 66 yards on 15 carries.

For the first time there were co-MVPs of the Super Bowl. The award was shared by defensive linemen Randy White and Harvey Martin of Dallas.

Super Bowl XIII

At Miami—79,184

Pittsburgh 7 14 0 14-35

Dallas 7 7 3 14-31

Terry Bradshaw threw four touchdown passes to lead the Steelers to their third Super Bowl win in as many tries. Bradshaw, voted the game's most valuable player, completed 17 of 30 passes for 318 yards breaking Bart Starr's record of 250 yards passing by halftime.

Two Bradshaw-to-John Stallworth and one Bradshaw-to-Rocky Bleier scored in the first half to give Pittsburgh a 21-14 lead at halftime.

Franco Harris rambled 22 yards for a score after Rafael Septien had cut Pittsburgh's lead to 21-17 with a three-pointer. Pittsburgh then seemingly put the game out of reach with less than seven minutes to play when Bradshaw hit Lynn Swann for an 18-yard strike to make the score 35-17.

Roger Staubach threw his second scoring pass of the game with 2:23 left, a seven-yarder to Billy Joe DuPree. The Cowboys then recovered an onside kick and scored again on Staubach's third TD pass with 22 seconds remaining.

Dallas' bid for another onside kick recovery failed as Rocky Bleier fell on the ensuing kickoff with 17 seconds left.

Super Bowl XIV

At Pasadena, Calif.—103,985

Los Angeles 7 6 6 0-19

Pittsburgh 3 7 7 14-31

Terry Bradshaw completed 14 of 21 passes for 309 yards and set two passing records as the Steelers became the first team to win four Super Bowls.

Despite three interceptions by the Rams, Bradshaw brought the Steelers from behind twice in the second half. Trailing 13-10 at halftime, Pittsburgh went ahead 17-13 when Bradshaw connected with Lynn Swann for a 47-yard touchdown pass early in the third quarter.

Eyes on the prize

The Lombardi Trophy is named for the late coach of the Green Bay Packers, the team that won the first two Super Bowls.

AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS Tom Rathman still adheres to the old-fashioned philosophy that it's better to block than to receive. You wouldn't know it from his stats.

San Francisco's flat-topped fullback caught more passes this Tom Rathman season than Henry Ellard, Anthony Carter, Lewis Lipps, Mark Clayton or Mark Duper. He had more receptions this year than 49ers teammate Jerry Rice did in 1987 or 1988.

"If somebody had told me last year that Tom Rathman was going to catch 73 passes, I'd have asked them what they were smoking," former teammate Randy Cross, who retired to broadcasting a year ago, said Thursday.

Rathman isn't much of a threat to go all the way, scoring just one touchdown on a pass and averaging just 8.4 yards per catch. But those 73 regular-season catches — plus nine in the playoffs, including six in the NFC Championship game — have given the Denver Broncos something else to think about in the Super Bowl on Sunday.

"He has excellent hands and adds another good receiver to their arsenal," Broncos linebacker Simon Fletcher said. "He has excellent strength and power, and now he can make more big plays for them."

A 1986 third-round draft pick who backed up Roger Craig for a year at Nebraska, Rathman caught five passes in four years with the Cornhuskers. He averaged just 28 in his first three seasons as a pro.

But this year, first year offensive coordinator Mike Holmgren decided to spread the ball around more in Joe Montana's short passing game, and Rathman and tight end Brent Jones (40 receptions) were the prime beneficiaries.

A good time to watch for Rathman lurking just over the line is on third down when the 49ers line up four receivers.

The 6-foot-1, 232-pounder is modest about his new contributions, calling himself a "blue-collar worker" in the 49ers' flashy offense.

"If you're going to be able to play in this type of offense, you have to be able to catch the ball," he shrugged.

"My philosophy is catch everything that's thrown to you. I'm not the kind of guy that's going to go 60 or 70 yards with it. I just want to keep the chains moving."

In September, Rathman complained that he was being taken out of games in key situations as the 49ers shuffled backups Harry Sydney and Terrence Flagger in and out of the lineup. After carrying the ball 102 times in 1988, he had only seven rushes to go with 12 receptions in the first three games.

But all three were victories, and the team's season-long success has muted any further protests by Craig or Rathman about their decreased workload.

Lately it's been back to more of the old style, with Craig rushing for at least 94 yards in four of the last six games and Rathman getting his hands on the ball often. Rathman's season total of 79 carries for 305 yards, a 3.9 yards-per-carry average, gave him 152 runs and catches for the year, up from 144 a year ago.

But blocking is Rathman's pride and joy.

"I would say I take the most pride in a great block, then a reception and then a good run," he said.

"I get a lot of satisfaction out of throwing a good block and seeing Roger being able to turn the corner or break off my block and either score a touchdown or turn it into a big gain. I don't really get a lot of satisfaction out of scoring a touchdown myself."

Denver duo ready for speedy receivers

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tyrone Braxton and Wyman Henderson have been hearing all week how everyone expects them to be badly burned by San Francisco's speedy Pro Bowl receivers, who have 161 catches for 31 touchdowns in 18 games.

Braxton is a 1987 12th-round draftee from North Dakota State who's playing his first year at corner, and Henderson signed as an unheralded free agent in the off-season after being left unprotected by Minnesota.

"That's the way they should think," shrugged the 5-foot-11 Braxton, a third-year player who never started before this season.

"I'm not in the Pro Bowl and Rice is."

"People have been telling me all my life I'm too small and too slow, and now they say I can't guard Rice because I'm too small. But I'm not going to worry about it. I have a lot of confidence in myself."

So does the 5-10 Henderson, who will start at right corner and line up across from Taylor for much of the afternoon. He points out that one of his best games came when the Broncos held Washington's dangerous receiving trio of Sanders-Clark-Monk without a touchdown pass in a 14-10 Denver victory on Nov. 10.

The Broncos, after all, led the NFL in fewest points and allowed just 13 TD passes in 16 regular-season games.

"Public opinion doesn't faze me in any way, because we've been successful," Henderson said.

Ray Wersching kicked a Super Bowl record tying four field goals to help lift the 49ers to their first NFL Championship with a 26-21 win over the Bengals.

The 49ers built a game-record 20-0 halftime lead on the strength of two long touchdown marches and two Wersching

captioned an 11-play, 68-yard drive with a one-yard run to open the scoring; fullback

Earl Cooper caught an 11-yard scoring pass from Montana to climax a Super Bowl record 92-yard, 12-play drive; and Wersching split the uprights from 22 and 26 yards out.

The Bengals roared back in the second half, narrowing the margin to 20-14 on

The Dolphins had built a 17-10 halftime lead on a 76-yard touchdown pass from

receiver Jim Cefalo in the first quarter, a 20-yard field goal by Uwe von Schamann midway through the second period, and a

Super Bowl record 98-yard kickoff return

by Fulton Walker just before halftime.

The Redskins had tied the score at 10 on a four-yard TD pass from Joe Theismann to wide receiver Alvin Garrett. Mark

Moseley, who started the Redskins' scoring with a 31-yard field goal in the first quarter, cut the Miami lead to 17-13 with a 20-yard field goal in the third period.

After Riggins' run put the Redskins on top, Theismann capped the scoring with a six-yard TD pass to wide receiver Charlie

Brown with 1:55 left. The Dolphins gained only 176 yards, and only 34 in the second half. The victory gave the Redskins their first NFL title since 1942.

two touchdowns as the Raiders trounced

the Redskins, 38-9.

This was the most lopsided Super Bowl ever, surpassing the Green Bay Packers'

35-10 over the Kansas City Chiefs in Super Bowl I. The Raiders took a 7-0 lead 4:52 in to the game when Derrick Jensen blocked

Jim Plunkett hooked up with Cliff

Branch for a 12-yard TD pass with 9:14 re-

margin to 14-3 on a 24-yard field goal by

Mark Moseley, but with seven seconds left

intercepted a screen pass by Joe

21-3 halftime advantage.

Allen in the second half scored on runs of

record) to put the Raiders ahead 35-9.

Allen was voted the game's most

Running back Roger Craig caught two of

another to set a Super Bowl record.

The San Francisco defense sacked

Miami quarterback Dan Marino four

ball for a 37:11 to 22:49 time of possession

eclipsing the previous record of 429

Montana joined Green Bay's Bart Starr and Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw as the only two-time Super Bowl most valuable players. Montana was the most valuable player in the 1982 Super Bowl against Cincinnati. The 38 points scored by San Francisco equaled the Super Bowl record set by

Chicago 13, 10, 21, 2-46

New England 3, 0, 9, 7-10

Champions, who won by the largest margin in Super Bowl history, broke the

Francisco and the Los Angeles Raiders in the previous two Super Bowls.

The Patriots, capitalized on a Chicago

reach.

The Bears defense, who allowed only 10 points in post-season play, held New England to seven yards rushing and 116 yards passing.

Jim McMahon, who passed for 256

Richard Dent, who contributed 1 1/2 sacks, was named the Most Valuable Player.

completion rate was an NFL playoff record.

New York started the second-half with three plays for 9 yards, and the Giants' punting team ran onto the field to punt

from its own 46. Suddenly, the Giants

Rutledge, the second string quarterback,

Super Sunday

Coaches meet the media one last time

AP Football Writer

NEW ORLEANS — Dan Reeves noticed the other day that the helmet of the San Francisco 49ers was to the left of the helmet of his Denver Broncos on the facing of the Superdome. That's where where the winners of the previous XXIII Super Bowls are listed.

"Maybe someone's anticipating something," Reeves said. "We're going to have to do something to make them switch the helmets."

Friday was the final meeting of coaches and media before the Broncos take on George Seifert's heavily favored 49ers in Sunday's NFL championship game.

Reeves announced that running back Bobby Humphrey, nursing cracked ribs from the AFC title game, will start but will need to take a couple of hard hits to determine if he'll be able to go at full speed.

Seifert announced that nose tackle Michael Carter, who injured a foot midway through the regular season, will make his first start since then, that running back Roger Craig is ready after a couple of days with the flu, and that safety Ronnie Lott's bruised right thigh is still aching but that he, too, will play.

Seifert and Reeves agreed on one thing: The next two days will be tough.

"The emotion before this game is almost indescribable," Seifert said. "A great deal of emotion and anticipation goes into this game."

Both were asked about the allegations by a Washington television station that "three white quarterbacks" had once tested positive for cocaine but had never been given counseling. The program also alleged that the NFL drug testing programs protected whites and discriminated against blacks.

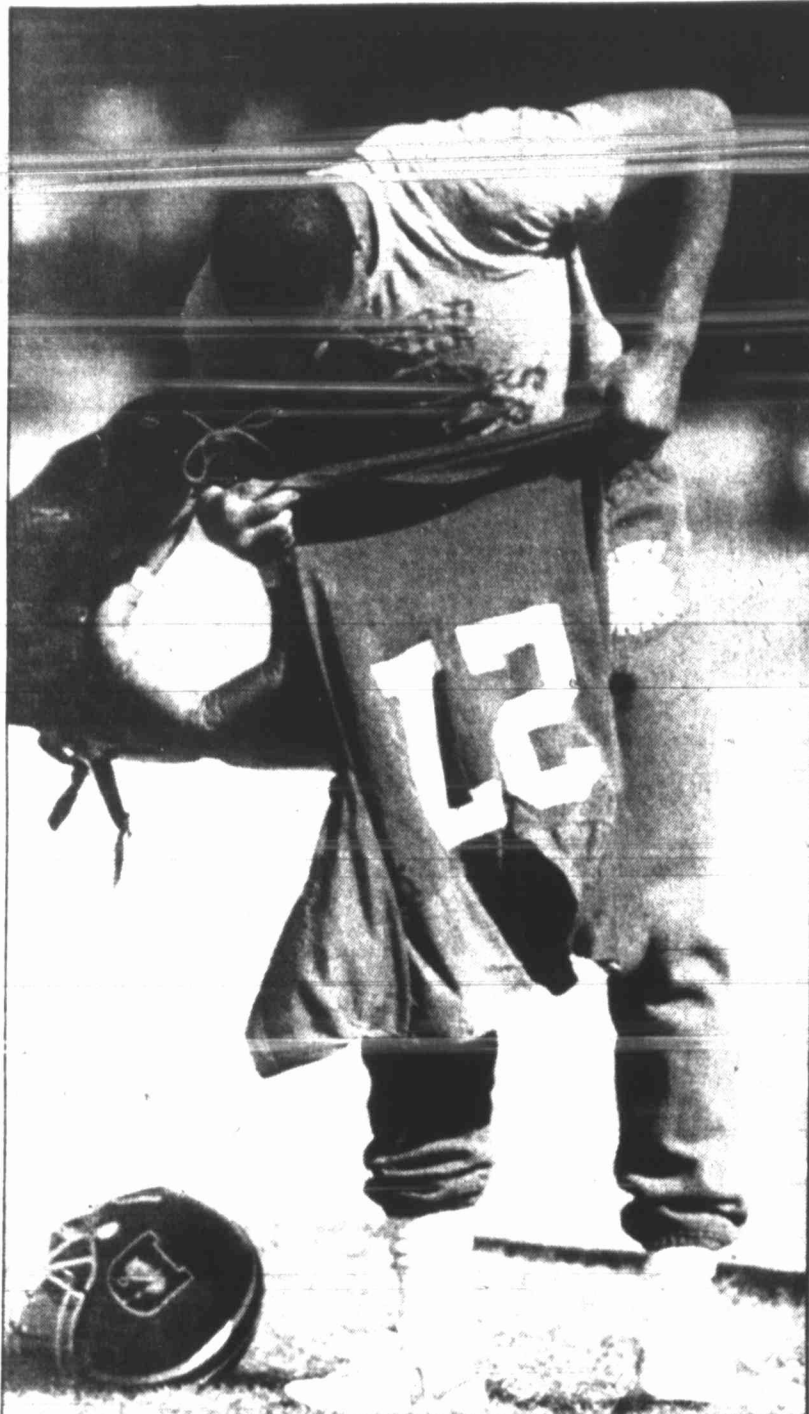

Reeves talked longer on the subject and from experience — one of his tight ends, Clarence Kay, missed three games in the 1986 season while undergoing drug rehabilitation and another, Orson Mobley, was suspended for four games this year after testing positive a second time.

"Our program has never been racial in any way, shape or form, and we've had some success with it," Reeves said. "If anyone is discriminated against, it's the players who aren't treated. We don't look at it as punishment. These people need help."

Then, Joe Montana's name and "unconfirmed" allegations of drug use by him came up. Montana, who in November 1985 called a news conference to explicitly deny drug rumors, emphatically denied on Thursday that he had ever used illegal substances.

"I think the key thing you said is 'unconfirmed,'" Seifert said, seemingly showing a bit of anger for one of the few times this week. "It's an injustice that ANYONE's name would be mentioned in this connection at this time."

San Francisco started the winning drive at their own 8 yard line. On the 11th play of the drive Joe Montana hit John Taylor with a 10-yard pass for the winning touchdown with 34 seconds remaining.

At halftime the score was 3-3, the first time in Super Bowl history that the game was tied at intermission. Both teams exchanged field goals and Stanford Jennings' 91-yard kickoff return gave the Bengals a 13-6 lead with 4 seconds remaining in the third quarter.

The 49ers came back with an 85-yard drive in four plays, concluding with Montana's 14-yard pass to Jerry Rice. Rice was named the most valuable player after catching 11 passes for a record 215 yards. Montana completed 23 of 36 passes for a record 357 yards.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Many practical reasons for owning your own home

"There's no time like the present to own your own home," says Kay Moore, owner of Home Realtors.

"Interest rates are low, there is a large selection of homes for sale in Big Spring, and home prices are lower here than they have been in many years," she adds.

"There are many practical reasons for owning your own home, in addition to the personal satisfaction."

Home mortgage interest is one of the few interest deductions we still have, Kay reminds. "At today's interest rates, approximately 95% of the principal and interest payment made by a homeowner during the first five years would be tax-deductible (according to a brochure from Realty Financial Services, Inc.)"

Another tax break is real estate taxes on personal residences; a significant portion of a homeowner's payment goes toward payment of these taxes

(which incidentally support our local government.) Homestead exemptions lower the real estate taxes you pay on your principal residence.

If you use your home as an office, there may be other tax deductions.

Homeowners over 55 who are thinking of selling may be encouraged to do so because they can sell their residence at a profit without paying capital gains tax. This exemption often puts many attractive homes in well-established neighborhoods up for sale.

"By taking into account the tax breaks and other considerations," Kay says, "a family can often own their own home for less than they are now paying for rent."

Let Kay Moore and her staff help you decide if this is the year for you to buy a home. They can help you determine what price home you can afford, help you find the home of your dreams, and even help locate a lender.

Home Realtors is a member of HMS (Homeowners Marketing Services, Inc.) Through HMS, Home Realtors can now offer home warranties to its sellers and buyers which will eliminate the worries of major repairs during the time the home is on the market and for the first year of occupancy for the buyer.

Home Realtors is exclusive local agent for RELO Relocation Service, the nation's referral network of independent real estate brokers, and can draw on RELO's expertise to provide tips and advice for buyers and sellers.

In addition to Kay, the staff includes Doris Milstead and Doris Huibregtse, brokers; Jo Hughes, Gail Meyers, Kay Bancroft, Carole Lawson and Shirley Burgess, sales associates.

THERE'S GOOD NEWS — Interest rates are low and home prices in Big Spring are lower than in many years. Let Home Realtors show you how to take advantage of the situation.

Sheriff's Posse to the rescue

By STEVE RAY
Herald Editor

The bad guys are riding away from a Western town after robbing the bank of all the town's money.

They stop to give their horses a drink when suddenly — from out of no where — the sheriff's posse appears on the scene.

The bad guys jump on their horses to try a quick get-away, but too late — the posse has already caught them and after the necessary shoot out, the bad guys either give up or wish they had.

Now if you're a fan of Western movies — you easily recognize the scene. Every since I was a kid, cowboys and Indians and sheriff's posses have held a special fascination for me.

But it was only in my imagination.

Or so I thought. If you're like me and thought the days of the sheriff's posse were over — think again. I saw it in action a couple of weeks ago.

It wasn't exactly the same sheriff's posse — there weren't any bad guys, just runaway girls. But there were the same guys in white hats, complete with horses, ready to give up their time to do good.

Earlier this month, just outside of Big Spring, two girls disappeared from a house they were visiting with one of the girls parents.

They had been gone several hours when law enforcement officers were called.

When sheriff's deputies found out the girls had been playing in a large pasture — they did the best thing they could do — called in the sheriff's posse.

"One of our duties as members of the Sheriff's Posse Riding Club is to help any time they need it... We've got horses so we saddle them up and help them."

Today the sheriff's posse is known as the Sheriff's Posse Riding Club, but that doesn't make any difference. They may not chase robbers any more, but they do mount their faithful steeds and search for lost girls.

In my book that's just as good. Frank Knapp and Joe Gamble were just two of the men who brought their horses to the site where the girls disappeared.

"We weren't really prepared," said Gamble. "Frank had his trailer apart fixing to paint it and I had my pickup apart... but we came anyway."

"One of our duties as members of the Sheriff's Posse Riding Club is to help any time they need it. Mainly they need our help when something happens out in the country like this. We've got horses so we saddle them up and help them."

The men knew what to do. They had already talked to Sheriff's Deputy Sgt. Barney Edens and they were to cover a specific area looking for the girls or their tracks.

Members of the Riding Club were joined by other volunteers to search for the girls. In a way, it was reminiscent of another time — a time when people pitched in to help one another and when the difference between good and evil was easily defined.

That day, it was like the Old West.

There were no bad guys — only two girls who could have been hurt, who could have been scared and who definitely needed to be found.

For those who began to search, the two girls were all that was on their minds.

The stark reality of what could have happened to the girls was not far from the scene. It was evident on the faces of everyone who began to look for clues.

"We've done it before," Gamble said. He told stories of how some of those they were looking for had been found dead.

Later that day, the two girls were found alive and well. They were hiding and probably never realized that so many volunteers had been concerned enough to give up their time to help find them.

But that's OK. A Sheriff's Posse doesn't want thanks. Just a tip of the hat, a nod of the head and the knowledge that this day — the good guys won one.

STANTON — Canuta Herrera says her prayers each day at the Stanton Care Center.

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

STANTON — Stanton Care Center threw a birthday party for Canuta Herrera this month to celebrate her 106th birthday, but she wasn't in the mood for partying.

"She mostly stays in her room," said Mary Rodriguez, a social worker at the nursing home. "She doesn't like the crowds. When we brought her out for the birthday party, she wanted to go (back to her room) right away."

Not that Herrera is upset about turning 106. "I feel good," Herrera said from a living room of the nursing home, when asked how it felt to be so old. "I want to go to my room."

"She's pretty alert, but she likes to stay in her room because her family comes to visit every day," said Rodriguez.

Herrera has one daughter, Felipa Brisenio of Tarzan, who visits her at least three times a week; her grandchildren also visit her regularly. The family members bring Herrera candy, which she especially enjoys, Brisenio said.

Brisenio, 73, said Herrera, a Catholic, prays regularly in her room. "She was always very religious," Brisenio said. "She used to love to help the people," such as by lending them money, Brisenio said. "When she was young, she suffered a lot."

A native of Mexico, Herrera was unable to answer when asked where she was born. "I don't remember," she said, speaking softly and in Spanish. "I'm too old."

Asked if she remembered how old she is, Herrera said, "Muchos, muchos." (Many, many.) But how many years, exactly? "Muchos," she said.

In answer to a question, Herrera said she felt lucky to be so old. But when Mary Rodriguez asked Herrera why God allowed her to live so many years, she replied only, "Muchos, muchos anos." (Many, many years.)

"When she first got here and we asked her why the Lord had let her live this long, she said there is a reason for it," Rodriguez recalled. "She said only He would know."

According to a biography on Herrera kept by Stanton Care Center, she was born in San Luis Potosi on Jan. 19, 1884. She emigrated to the United States in 1898; married Macario Herrera in 1901; gave birth to six children, only one of whom survived; and spent much of her life as a migrant farmworker and homemaker in Texas. Herrera lived in Tarzan from 1941 to January 16, 1989, when the widow entered the nursing home with a broken hip.

She is the oldest resident at Stanton Care Center, and appears to be the oldest person ever to live in that nursing home, said Toni Rodriguez, director of nurses.

Sitting in a wheelchair in the living room area of the nursing home, the frail, thin woman was unable to say which period of her life has been her favorite.

"I don't remember, I don't remember," she said. "I'm very old."

Herrera smiled frequently, though, and repeatedly kissed the hand of a visitor. "She loves doing that, to bless you," Mary Rodriguez explained.

When her roommate, Ida Mae Smith, from Brownfield, was asked if Herrera smiles much, she said, "Not much. She sleeps all the time."

Viet Vets take county courthouse as hostage

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The Vietnam Veterans of America took the Howard County Courthouse hostage Saturday and flew their black and white POW-MIA flag from its flagpole, threatening not to lower it until all the soldiers still missing overseas are accounted for.

Dan Boling, president of the Rackley Swords Chapter 379 of the Vietnam Veterans of America and commander of the Big Spring VFW post, and Ken Dunwoody, vice president of the Texas State Council of Vietnam Veterans of America and chairman of the POW-MIA committee spoke at the brief 11 a.m. ceremony, which attracted about 30 onlookers.

"This flag will remain atop the courthouse as a reminder that this is an issue as yet unresolved. We still see the Beirut hostage crisis on television and we know it's not just Vietnam," said Dunwoody, who was in Vietnam in 1970. He said there were still prisoners of war and soldiers missing in action from World War II, Korea, Lebanon and Panama, in addition to Vietnam.

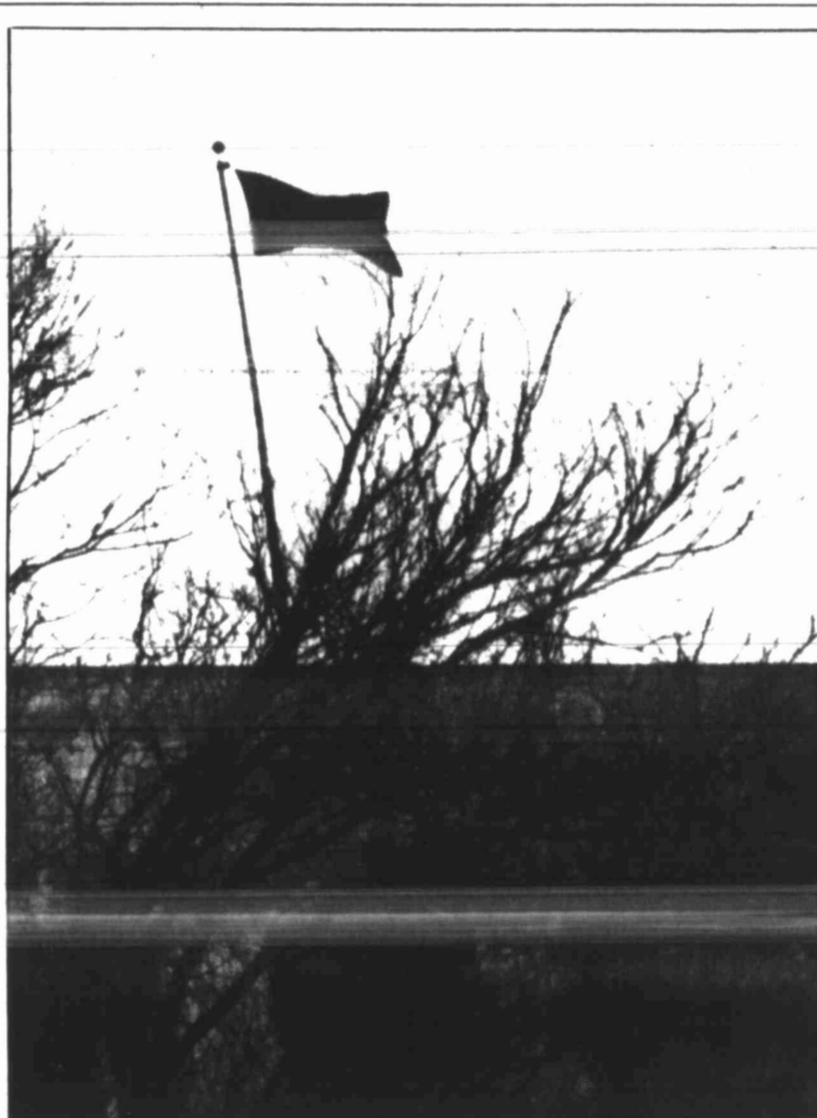

"On Jan. 27, 1973 the Paris Peace Accords were signed, ending the war in Vietnam. Seventeen years later, 2,323 soldiers are still missing in action, 156 of them are Texans," Boling said.

"The Vietnam war came to its conclusion because the American people rose up and caused the government to say enough is enough and brought us home," said Boling, who was in Vietnam in 1971-73. "These people are going to come home when Americans say enough is enough and bring them home. Our cry is simple — Freedom now!" he said.

Big Spring has three Vietnam MIAs: Col. Inzar Rackley, Col. Smith Swords and Col. Hudgins, all in the Air Force. A POW-MIA flag with the silhouette of a prisoner and a guard tower has flown over the Big Spring city auditorium since Feb. 12, 1988 the anniversary of the 1973 homecoming of U.S. troops from Vietnam, Boling said.

The Big Spring ceremony was held in conjunction with "Operation End Zone," a media event scheduled to coincide with the Super Bowl today. Veterans, friends and families of POW-MIAs will form a non-violent living wall around the Superdome, taking the game as a symbolic hostage to boost awareness of the POW-MIA issue.

BIG SPRING — Members of the Vietnam veterans organization in Big Spring symbolically captured the courthouse and flew the MIA-POW flag over Big Spring.

Kids want patriotism in classes

By ERIN BLAIR

BIG SPRING — Some students at Big Spring High School want to bring patriotism and the Pledge of Allegiance back to the classrooms.

"In school the price of freedom isn't talked about much and patriotism is way down," said Amy Parrish, spokeswoman of an organization at the high school so new it doesn't have a name yet.

"It's a veterans awareness group making us generally aware of veterans issues. We'll volunteer at the VA hospital and get more involved with the POW-MIAs. Education and appreciation are our goals," Parrish said. She and some of the charter members of the group attended the POW-MIA flag flying ceremony at the Howard County Courthouse Saturday morning.

"We're the next ones to go (to war) and we'd want someone to be yelling 'get my daughter back home,'" she said.

Keith Gibbons, minister at College Heights Christian Church and a humanities teacher at the high school, is the group's sponsor. He has been involved in veterans issues for a while and was in-

Brick by brick Heritage Museum builds a building

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Be a brick. The Heritage Museum of Big Spring is extending the invitation — and the museum means exactly what it says.

To raise funds toward furnishing a planned addition to the building, the museum is asking people to buy a brick from it for $45. In return, brick owners will be allowed a three-line message to be engraved on their brick (such as the brick-buyer's name or a memorial) and the engraved brick will be used in building the addition.

"This will be something very visible for all the people who visit the museum in the future," said Angie Way, curator of the museum. "Literally, they're helping us build the museum brick by brick."

The addition will triple the size of the 19-year-old museum, currently about 4,000 square feet, Way said. Construction is expected to begin about March 1, and be completed by the end of the year, she said.

"We simply have no space here," Way said. "We just simply had to increase our size, or stop taking in new items." In addition to offering more space for exhibit items, she said, the addition will allow the historical museum more workspace for the curator, more collection-holding areas, and space to begin offering summer classes.

The fund-raising project formally began this month and will continue for about six months, Way said. She said she is not sure how many bricks have been sold so far, but that a total of about $250,000 will be needed to finance the interior of the two-story addition.

Way said a family may wish to buy several bricks and have them placed beside each other in the addition. Engraving on the bricks will be done by Acme Brick of Tulsa, Okla., she said. Each line will be limited to 13 characters, and letters will be about one inch high.

Way said forms for requesting a brick message can be obtained by calling her at 267-8255. Or, people can send a check to the museum at 510 Scurry St., and a form will be mailed to the contributor, she said.

The museum already has raised enough funds to finance construction of the addition, Way said. The Dora Roberts Foundation, the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation of Tulsa, the American Petrofina Foundation and various businesses and individuals contributed a total of about $302,500 toward the construction, Way said.

Among the strengths of the Heritage Museum of Big Spring, Way said, are the approximately 100 ranching items, including saddles and a longhorn and steer horn collection; a collection of 48 phonographs; and an exhibit of the works of western artist H.W. Caylor, a Big Spring-area rancher who died in 1932.

DEAR ABBY: Now that hunting season is here and I see the birds heading south for the winter, I am reminded of a poignant poem you published about a goose whose mate was killed by a hunter.

Knowing that geese mate only once in a lifetime, I was moved to tears when I read it. Please publish it again, Abby. I love that poem. — A HUNTER'S WIFE, MANKATO, MINN.

DEAR WIFE: I love it, too. And here it is:

A HUNTER'S POEM
A hunter shot at a flock of geese
That flew within his reach.

The male bird lay at the water's edge

And just before he died
He faintly called to his wounded mate

And she dragged herself to his side.

She bent her head and crooned to him

In a way distressed and wild
Caressing her one and only mate
As a mother would a child.

Then covering him with her broken wing

And gasping with failing breath
She laid her head against his breast

This story is true though crudely

Dear Abby

I was the man in this case. I stood knee-deep in snow and cold

And the hot tears burned my face.

I buried the birds in the sand where they lay

Wrapped in my hunting coat

And I threw my gun and belt in the bay

When I crossed in the open boat.
Hunters will call me a right poor sport

And scoff at the thing I did.

But that day something broke in my heart

And shoot again? God forbid! — Lemuel T. Ward

DEAR ABBY: You requested a response to the St. Paul reader who didn't know if she should count the baby she gave up for adoption when she was 16 when she was asked how many children she had.

I was given up for adoption by a 16-year-old unmarried mother who

PEBES: What is it?

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

In 1988, the Social Security Administration introduced its Person Earnings and Benefits Estimate Statement to the public. Here are some of the most common questions people ask about PEBES:

What does PEBES have to offer?
PEBES gives each worker a year-to-year breakdown of earnings under Social Security and estimates of future benefits.

I'm not sure when I want to retire. Can my PEBES help me decide?

PEBES can help you make a realistic decision by providing estimates of your benefits if you retire at age 62, 65, or if retirement is delayed until age 70.

For me, retirement is 20 years away. Why would I want a PEBES?

There are several reasons. PEBES also estimates what disability or survivor benefits could be paid based on your earning history if you become disabled or died today. This is important to consider in your financial planning. In addition, you will want to check want your statement to make sure all your earnings are shown correctly.

How can I get my statement?

You can obtain a PEBES request form, SSA Form-7004, either by writing to the Consumer Information Center, Department 55, Pueblo, Colorado 81002, or by contacting a local Social Security office. After you complete the form and mail it, your PEBES will be sent to you.

What can I do if there is an error in the earnings shown in my statement?

Focus on family

You will need evidence of your correct earnings such as a W-2 form. Call the phone number shown on your statement, and the Social Security representative will help you.

Can I wait until I'm ready to retire to correct my record?

No. Earnings records are generally open to correction for only 3 years, 3 months, and 15 days after the year in question. It is recommended that you check at least every three years.

A training program for Master Volunteers in Clothing Construction will be offered in Andrews Feb. 12-16. The Master Volunteer program provides 24 hours of intensive training to volunteers who then "pay back" with 50 hours of assistance to extension educational programs.

There is no charge for the training itself. Meals and lodging for the week are estimated at $100. In addition, each volunteer will provide their own sewing equipment and supplies. If you are interested in this program please contact me at 267-8469.

Hunter bags heavy load when he kills geese wanted her baby to have a better home than she could give it at the time. My brother and I (he was also adopted) are blessedly "counted" by the most loving and supportive parents a child could hope for.

My family will always be grateful to the "birth parents" who made such brave and wise decisions.

My brother and I wouldn't have been here today if we hadn't belonged to those original parents for nine months.

I would be honored to be counted by two sets of parents, but your reader's decision is a personal one, and only she should decide.

Like the divorced parent without custody, her child may not count legally, but if her heart counts, let it give her the answer she seeks. — WELL ACCOUNTED FOR IN SAN ANTONIO

DEAR ABBY: I became a grandmother a short time ago, so would that make my sister a great-aunt or a grand-aunt? And what would that make my aunt — a great-great-aunt or a great-grand-aunt?

We have been discussing this back and forth within the family and can't seem to agree on the answer. Can you solve this relatively puzzling problem? — JACKIE P. IN COSTA MESA, CALIF.

Fisher County ranks first in quail

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH

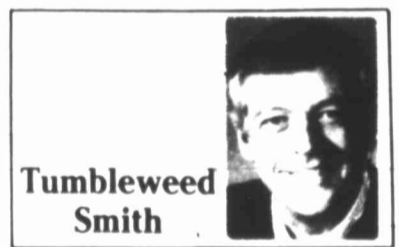

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department claims Fisher County has more quail per acre than any other county in Texas. Alvin Petty of Roby says "Even in a bad year, we rank first or second in quail population statistics."

To capitalize on the distinction, Fisher County folks have organized programs to attract quail hunters to the area. Farmers and ranchers formed a county-wide marketing cooperative. The plan has brought in hunters from half the states in the country.

Petty, a mmister, thinks the quail hunting cooperative in his county is the first in the state, perhaps the nation. "Local land owners join the cooperative and their land is made available to hunters who become associate members of the cooperative. We lease the land on a rotation basis to all hunters who sign up and pay a membership fee of $100. We lease the land one day at a time, which is better for everyone concerned."

Associate members pay $30 per gun per day to hunt. Non-members pay $40 per gun per day. A five day hunting license cost $25. Quail season begins in October and continues into February.

The membership entitles hunters to call the cooperative and set up the hunt just the way they want it. Guides take them to land with quail on it. "If you go out one morning," says Alvin, "and you don't sight enough birds to suit you, you contact the guide and he takes you to another place. We don't allow any one field to be over hunted. We rotate over several thousand acres which are part of the cooperative. We can guarantee you the best hunting in the state of Texas."

The first year the program operated, $100,000 came into the county from hunters. The county recently received a substantial grant from the Texas Department of Agriculture for research and promotion of quail retention so the county will keep having lots of quail.

Signs proclaiming "Fisher County, the Quail Hunting Capital of Texas" have started to dot highways within a 100-mile radius of Fisher county. The signs, by the way, were made by blow torch artist Joe Hull of Roby.

A brochure from the Fisher County Hunting Cooperative (c/o Courthouse, Roby, 79543) states, "You'll be hunting in rolling hills with brushy draws. The walking is pleasant and the weather during quail season is generally conducive to good hunting. In most years, you can expect to flush at least eight to 10 coveys of bobwhite a day, depending on how hard you are willing to work at it."

For a small fee, a local cafe will cook your birds and serve them with all the fixin's. Cleaning service is 25 cents per bird.

Dr. David Morris of Roby says the accepted way to prepare quail in his town is to make a slice in the breast, insert a small piece of garlic, marinate it overnight, then dip it into a chicken fry batter and deep fry it under pressure. At a quail dinner held each year in Roby, different types of domestic and European quail are served.

Every November Fisher County holds a quail cook-off. It takes place simultaneously with a domino tournament.

The domino tournament, organized quail hunting and other activities in Fisher County came about because county residents took a long look at where they lived and decided it was time to either do something or let the place dry up and blow away. They decided to do something. They formed the state's first all volunteer county-wide economic development commission. It is doing an amazing job in the areas of agriculture, manufacturing, health, tourism, retail trade, historic preservation, community improvement and retirement.

Tidbits

By LEA WHITEHEAD
Staff Writer

Watch out! The infectious fun is about to begin, as our town's celebrities are tapped to wait tables and entertain at the annual Celebrity Waiter Dinner benefiting American Heart Association.

This year's event is set for Feb. 10 at the Fair Barn. Here are some of the crazy antics already anticipated:

Greg Brooks, Gary Don Carey and David Rickey are throwing a birthday party at their table (with a bona fide surprise birthday boy-girl!); Rural Metro's table will take on a Sherwood Forest theme (complete with Robin Hood) with waiters James Furrelle and Steve Fleckenstein.

At Fina's table, Steve Poesi, Nigel James, Deborah Boran, Ernie Morgan and Chuck Carr will set up a Fina "service station" — cleaning glasses, filling you up (with refreshments) and dispensing the key to the restroom!

Ken Dunwoody brings a waiter contingent of Vietnam veterans; John McFadden, Ressa Harris, Jessie Jones and Barbara Kilgore will tote trays for the VA Hospital; and Larry Cordes commands a waiter team of doctors for Scenic Mountain Medical Center.

Other waiters signed on are John Leubner, Big Spring Police Department; Randi Smith and Dianne Purdue, Big Spring Herald; Mike Mancil, Energas; David Wrinkle, KBST; Angela Parks, Parks Convenience Stores; Carl Dorton, 911; Dennis Churchill, Howard College; Dionne Campbell, Carol Hansen, Carol Bunn and Becky Wash, Highland Coiffures; and Jack Lewis, Pollard Chevrolet.

Doyle and Virginia McClain's sons came home to help them celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary.

The visit was somewhat of a surprise, says Doyle. "We didn't know they were coming until the night before."

Richard McClain, Salt Lake City, and Michael McClain, San Diego, arrived on a Friday afternoon. The foursome went dancing at the Senior Citizens Center Friday night; the McClains were honored by Beta Sigma Phi at a party Saturday night; then the family — "We're all shooters" — spent Sunday afternoon at the Western Sportsman Club's range.

Marjorie Grissam's children planned her surprise birthday party "mostly by long distance."

Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Charley Grissam, Midland; Gary and Donna Grissam, and Paul and Carol Combs, The Woodlands.

Carol did most of the arrangements by phone, then came in early — ostensibly for "just a birthday visit."

Marjorie's friend, Lydia Minchew was given the task of getting the honoree to the party — Marjorie was completely surprised by the 45 friends gathered at College Baptist Church fellowship hall.

The sign over the gate to Ft. Wood, near Colorado City, proclaimed "Happy Birthday, Marie."

The sign was a greeting to Marie Bassham, whose 80th birthday party was hosted at Ft. Wood Cafe by her brother Billy Joe and Bernice Wood and their son Don and Leda Wood.

Nearly 100 guests dined on a buffet of fried chicken, roast and ham with assorted vegetables and desserts, including a two-tier cake iced in Marie's favorite color, lavender.

Among guests were Marie's brother, retired Texas Ranger Captain John and Jewell Wood, San Antonio; and neices and husbands, Charlotte and Walter O'Chesky, Lubbock and Shirley and Mike Savage, Seminole; and nephew Charles Garner, Jr., Seminole.

Marie's sister, Telitha Wiggins, phoned birthday greetings from Seattle.

Jean Jenkins is back home and "doing fine" after surgery at Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas.

At her side during the hospital stay were husband, Pete; son Terry and Emma Jenkins with Justin and John; son Brad Jenkins, Weatherford; and daughter, Becky Jenkins, Dallas — and friends and relatives who drove in from Big Spring, Weatherford, Tulsa, Okla. and Omaha, Neb.

Jean says she was "overwhelmed and grateful" for all the support, including the many prayers — "I must have been on the prayer list of every church in town!"

Becky returned to Dallas Saturday after a week's visit here. Jean will take her followup treatment in Midland.

SWCID students are looking forward to their annual ski trip, according to Diane Linhart.

Twenty-five students have signed on for a weekend trip to Ruidoso, with sponsors Sammy and Pamela Wilding, Keith and Paul Sibley, and Cheing Tan.

Hyperions meet

The 1955 Hyperion Club met recently at the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, 306 West Third Street. Hostesses were Mrs. Jim Percell and Mrs. Loyd Underwood.

Mrs. Jamie Killion, vice president, called the meeting to order and introduced John Yater, director of DRRC, who welcomed the group and presented a slide showing the various facilities available for patients and the community. He shared information concerning the history of the facility and the different methods of treatment. In the 1950s the Howard County Rehabilitation Center was established to help combat the effects of polio. In the 1960s Jim Thompson was a strong influence in the establishment of outstanding services. In the mid 1960s, the DRRC was presented as a gift to the city.

Physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech therapy, and audiology are available at the present facility for referral patients. The center depends largely on donations and contributions from the community for their services.

A tour of the treatment area was conducted by therapist Kaki Morton. A gymnasium is available, equipped with electronic ultra-sound and hydrotherapy treatment equipment. Morton demonstrated the techniques used in their orthopedic clinic to help patients that are being treated with braces as well as helping with the development of fine motor skills. The therapist works with the treatment of neurological disease that results in the slow development in children as well as evaluation for determining the level of development of fine motor skills, motion problems, communication difficulties, voice disorders, and learning disabilities.

Because early evaluation is so important, they work with day care centers and schools helping with class room placement of students in a remediation program. Because dignity and well-being is so important for the improvement of their patient and the family, they work to encourage the progress of their patient.

Knee and lower back patients are treated with heated gel packs and lotions used in conjunction with massages and whirlpool tanks. Hydrotherapy is an effective treatment because the therapist has more control of the patients. A hydro-lift chair is very effective in the treatment of bedfast patients for their placement in the Hubbard tank, an ultra-sound electronic stimulator with infrared radiant heat is used for muscle stimulation. The electronic stimulator allows the normal growth of one inch per month while a patient is recovering from deterioration of their muscles.

An intermediate traction room is equipped with mats for cerebral palsy patients that help to stimulate muscle growth and teach equilibrium balance. Parallel bars are used for side-stepping and cross-stepping. A psyber exococonic exerciser is used in the treatment of knees and joints, as well as pre-season testing of athletic injuries. The babptes board was donated by the Lions Club and is used to build ankle muscles. Morton demonstrated the process of moving the board using body weight. The gymnasium is equipped with knee tables, treadmills, and bicycles for exercising of body muscles. The Cybek Kinotron II is used for the exercise of lower extremities.

The occupational therapist uses an upper body therapy machine to help the patient retain the use of early junctions by using a variety of specialized utensils for effective daily living. The BTE Machine is the newest addition to the DRRC. The computerized machine makes information available for OT injuries by showing how severe the injury, the projected time for recovery, when the patient can return to work and what level of job he can perform effectively.

During the business meeting, a note was read from the Volunteer Services Council of the Big Spring State Hospital thanking the club for their Christmas donation.

The names of Ann Holt and Evelyn Lacey were presented for consideration as new members. The group accepted their nomination. Mrs. Roy Reeder sent a message of appreciation for the green plant and cards sent following her surgery. A card shower was recommended for Helen Mahoney at the Mountain View Lodge.

How and why it's important to prune fruit trees

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

One of the most frequent calls we get to the Howard County Extension Office concerns pruning of fruit trees.

Why prune at all? First of all, pruning promotes large, well-flavored fruit. A plant cannot produce the quality of fruit desired when it is allowed to mature the quantity of fruit which it is capable of maturing. Pruning removes some of the fruit buds which would mature fruit. By growing fewer fruit, the tree can use all available nutrients for those few fruit, thus producing a large, juicy product.

The fruit grower must decide whether he wants many small fruits or an adequate number of high quality fruit because a plant only has a certain production capacity.

Another valuable advantage of pruning is to establish a proper framework. A strong framework will support more fruit. This prevents tree breakage when fruit matures. Even distribution also enhances even ripening of fruit throughout the tree.

Preventing tree breakage results in longer life and a more attractive landscape plant.

Where possible pruning should be delayed until just before the bud breaks in the spring. At this time, pruning has the fewest bad effects and the most benefits. For this reason put off the urge to start cutting until the last possible minute.

Some other horticultural tips that are timely at this season is to be sure and prune back the top of established trees and shrubs before moving. Remove about 1/3 to 1/2 of the top to compensate for roots lost in digging.

Make your flower and vegetable garden plans now before the rush of spring planting. Time spent in armchair gardening before the fireplace will pay off in improved plant selection.

Prepare beds and garden area for spring planting.

Select and order gladiolus corms for February and March planting. Allow two-week intervals to prolong flowering period.

Check junipers and other narrow leaf evergreens for bagworm in the pouch and start the cycle again by emerging in the spring and feeding on the foliage. Hand removal and burning the pouches is an excellent means of reducing the potential damage next spring.

Working rigs decline

HOUSTON (AP) — Bad weather and a seasonal decline in drilling activity sent the number of working U.S. oil and gas rigs tumbling by 55 last week, Baker Hughes Inc. reported Monday.

The rig count totaled 964, compared to 1,019 a week ago. But the tally was higher than the 789 total posted this time last year.

Texas and Oklahoma were the big losers this week, accounting for more than half of the decline. Texas lost 23 rigs, while Oklahoma's rig count fell by 12.

Baker Hughes rig count — the widely watched industry index of drilling activity — reflects the number of rotary rigs actively exploring for oil and gas as of last Friday, not the number of producing wells.

Ike Kerridge, a Baker Hughes vice president and economist, said he expected the decay, and he added that there probably will be more losses.

"This is the time of year when drilling declines," Kerridge said, adding that the rig count usually drops by up to 20 percent during the first quarter of each year.

But recent bad weather contributed to declines in several states this year, especially Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado. Those states reported that a third of their losses were weather related, Kerridge said.

Rigs are not equipped to drill in severely cold weather, he said. Also, rigs can't drill in wet ground.

Kerridge said he expected the weekly rig counts to continue to post declines, bottoming out in March or April. But he doesn't expect declines to be as steep as the one reported Monday.

"You can have a week or two where the rig count goes up, but it's unusual to have very many up weeks in the first quarter," he said.

Kerridge said despite the loss, he was encouraged that drilling activity had increased from a year ago.

Houston-based Hughes Tool Co., an oil toolmaker company that merged with Baker International Corp. of Orange, Calif., has kept track of the rig count since 1940.

The rig count peaked at 4,500 in December 1981 — the height of the oil boom — but oil prices plunged to less than $10 per 42-gallon barrel in the summer of 1986, prompting a collapse in the rig count that bottomed out at 663 — the lowest since Hughes began compiling figures.

Among other major oil producing states, Colorado lost five rigs, Wyoming lost four and Pennsylvania was down by one. North Dakota, New Mexico, Michigan and Kansas each lost two rigs. Louisiana gained one rig.

strumental in bringing the traveling replica of the Vietnam Memorial Wall to Big Spring in 1987.

"At the high school the student council does a Veterans Day ceremony and they say the Pledge of Allegiance then — once a year," Gibbons said. He and the group would like to see the school observe the pledge at least once a week, preferably on Monday.

Don Boling, president of the Rackley-Swords Chapter 379 of the Vietnam Veterans of America, said his organization met with the fledgling group on Wednesday. "What stood out in our talk was the cost of freedom — why do we have the right to gather and talk about this?" he said.

Parrish, Gibbons and Boling agreed that education should be an aim of the group. They listed the wars, assassinations and protests that shaped history in the 60s and marvelled that history books devote only a page to the whole decade.

"The young adults here today are our children and they lived through that time period. Now they're asking questions that their parents may not want to answer or be able to answer, but they need to know," Boling said.

Ken Dunwoody, vice-president of the Texas State Council of the Vietnam Veterans of America, said attitudes about the war had changed for the better. "In the 60s they all said I'm a war protester but now in the 90s we can say I'm a Vietnam Vet," he said.

Penalties given

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission assessed a total of $35,500 in administrative penalties last week to six oil and gas operators for problems under Commission well plugging and pollution rules.

York Construction Company of Nocona was ordered to pay a total of $14,000 for seven unplugged and inactive Cooke County wells; two on the McCall lease; two on the W.F. Solomon -C- lease; and, three on the W.F. Solomon -B- lease; McCann Corporation of Big Spring was assessed $1,500 for one well on the Mauldin lease in Menard County; David Shore DBA Shore Oil Co. of Lott was ordered to pay $4,000 for two wells on the Shore lease in Falls County; Petro-Tech, Inc. of Rockwall was assessed $1,000 for one well on the Royal National Bank lease in Anderson County; and, Fred B. Shelton III of Dallas was penalized $5,000 for one well on the E.H. Jones Estate "A" lease in Gaines County.

In addition, Chispa Energy, Inc. of Alice was ordered to pay $10,000 for 2 unpermitted pits and saltwater injection without a permit on the Tree Sand Unit lease in Jim Wells County.

To date in 1990, the Commission has leveled $92,000 in pollution and well plugging penalties. Last year, the Commission assessed a total of $1,125,300 in such penalties.

Oil production tops

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has continued the Texas oil production rate for February 1990 at 100 percent of market demand.

Chairman Kent Hance and Commissioner James E. (Jim) Nugent continued the top production allowable after reviewing oil companies' nominations to buy a total of 1,850,033 barrels of Texas oil per day. The February nomination total, a decrease of 9,600 barrels daily when compared to January purchaser nominations, indicates market demand. February 1989 nominations totaled 1,954,371 barrels daily.

The Commission first went to the ceiling level for oil production in April 1972. It applies to all fields in the state except those that are assigned lower legal rates of production so that reservoir pressures will not be depleted before the maximum amount of oil has been recovered.

Chairman Hance also reported that February nominations for the purchase of Texas gas totaled 21,762,054 Mcf/d (thousand cubic feet per day). January nominations totaled 21,155,055 Mcf/d. February 1989 nominations amounted to 26,131,456 Mcf/d.

The next statewide oil and gas production allowable hearing will begin at 10 a.m. on Feb. 20, at the RRC in the William B. Travis Building, 1701 N. Congress in Austin.

Major purchasers filed these February nominations from the floor at the hearing: Amoco Production Company, 150,000 barrels, down 1,000; Conoco, Inc., 64,000, unchanged; Exxon Company, U.S.A., 163,500, down 4,500 barrels, and Phillips 66 Company, 76,000, unchanged.

Hance reported that crude oil and petroleum products imported into the U.S. averaged 8,035,000 barrels per day for the month of November 1989. This was an increase of 410,000 barrels per day from the same period a year ago.

MIDLAND — Mitzi Sevey, ACSR, of Midland, daughter of Gene and Frankie Simpkins of Big Spring, has been awarded the Accredited Customer Service Representative designation by the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas.

To earn the ACSR designation, Sevey had to attend eight days of intensive insurance training and pass four comprehensive examinations. In order to keep her ACSR designation, she will annually attend classes designed to give insurance industry personnel current information on changes in the industry.

Sevey has been employed by Mims and Stephens of Midland for the past 2 1/2 years and is one of only approximately 250 people in Texas to have achieved this designation.

Card Of Thanks 693

Perhaps you sang a lovely song, or sat quietly in a chair;
Perhaps you sent beautiful flowers,
If so, we saw them there.
Perhaps you sent or spoke kind words
As any friend could say;
Perhaps you prepared some tasty food,
Or maybe furnished a car;
Perhaps you rendered a service unseen,
Near at hand or from afar;
Whatever you did to console the heart
We thank you so much,
Whatever the part.

Woman remembers Spindletop boom days

BEAUMONT (AP) — Ethel Alice Slauson thinks all this fuss everybody's making over the recent opening of the Texas Energy Museum is just fine. And she recognizes the importance of educating the public about the impact the 1901 Lucas Gusher made on the world.

But Mrs. Slauson, 95, is one up on even the most edified of Spindletop-era historians. While the scholars research the days when a gusher would erupt and oil would rain over the village-turned-boomtown, Mrs. Slauson remembers tiptoeing over the black gold-covered grounds.

When the Lucas Gusher blew in on Jan. 10, 1901, Mrs. Slauson was 5 years old and living in Houston. Her father, J.T. "Captain Jack" Shockley, shrewdly realized that the oil blanketing the sleepy little village to the east meant opportunity.

"Word went out like wildfire when they struck that gusher," she said. "Everybody who could get here came. I mean they flocked here like fleas on dogs."

So Captain Jack and his wife, Polly Ann, pulled up a couple of kegs of nails and sat down and discussed the possibilities of a life for their family at Spindletop. "He wanted to get in on the ground floor," Mrs. Slauson said. "Papa said, 'That (Spindletop City) is going to be a flair, let's get into something there.'"

So he loaded his wife and eight children into a carriage and headed for the boomtown. And they didn't waste any time seeking their own sort of fortune in the new promised land. Going on the advice of her mother who observed "everybody's got to eat," Polly Ann opened a rooming and boarding house.

Captain Jack quickly realized the roughnecks would demand an occasional break from the fields, and hung his shingle on a saloon and gambling house. He also operated a livery and hack service, a sort of turn-of-the-century cab company. Mrs. Slauson said both family businesses turned a tidy profit.

Many of the oilfield workers lived in the Shockley boarding house. "Mama made money hand over fist," she said. "It was nothing for a boarder to drink a cup of coffee, lay a five dollar bill on the table and walk out." And even if a villager wasn't contributing to the Shockley family economy by living in or eating at the boarding house, they were likely belying up to Captain Jack's bar.

Mrs. Slauson remembers the men of Spindletop City as an earthy bunch who enjoyed the simple pleasures, like a shot of whiskey chased with a frothy mug of beer. "Cocktails?" she sniffed. "We didn't know what that was. A Fanny Lou cocktail or a Betty Lou, we didn't know about that kind of stuff."

Mrs. Slauson also remembers the "fancy ladies" who descended on the city to make money practicing the world's oldest profession. The children would tease the streetwalkers by stealing ribbons and bows from their elaborately trimmed dresses. "They'd be half drunk," she chuckled, "and they didn't know whether they'd lost the ribbons or what. But, boy, mama used to spank my little backside for that."
