Piercefield files

BIG SPRING — The open district 3 seat at the Big Spring Independent School District's board of trustees' table is getting to be a hot property in town. Gene Piercefield is the second candidate to file in the district 3 election, which will be conducted May 5. The filing period extends through March 21.

Piercefield is the assets inventory control manager at Scenic Mountain Medical Center. He has lived in Big Spring since he was transferred to Webb Air Force Base in 1974. He is a member of the Greater Big Spring Rotary Club.

He wants to serve on the school board because he has two children in the district, Michael, a sixth grader at Goliad and Mathew, a third grader at Bauer. Kyle, two years old, will attend school in a few years. Piercefield's wife Lana teaches computer courses at the high school.

"I feel that Big Spring has a good education system and with Butch (Fraser) leaving, I'd like it to stay that way," Piercefield said. He said he'd been thinking of running for years and thought he'd wait until his district came open.

Dwayne "Butch" Fraser has said he will not run again for the district 3 school board position. Billy Pineda, the incumbent for district 1's position, which will also be decided in this election, has not said whether he will run again.

John Arrick is also running for the district 3 spot.

Piercefield said he is qualified for the position because of his experience in purchasing, budgets and administrative duties.

"I think we've got a good school board and administration that does the best it can with what it has, but changes need to come from the state. I feel like we need more funding and more backing from the state," he said.

Piercefield is particularly pleased with Bauer Magnet School and the vocational programs in the district. "It's good for kids to get hands-on experience and learn about the real world."

Collection drive

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Junior Women's Club will be collecting items for donations to the M.D. Anderson medical complex beginning today through Friday.

Items can be dropped off at South Mountain Realty on FM 700 during business hours.

Items requested by the center include: baseball caps, wigs and wig heads; bud vases; calendars; paperback books; magazines; jigsaw puzzles; craft kits; kitchen supplies; stationery; and toiletries.

Still counting

BIG SPRING — Lana East, the assistant city secretary, said the city would have no comment on the petition to recall Mayor Max Green until this afternoon or Tuesday morning.

"We're hoping to finish this afternoon but it could be tomorrow morning," East said.

The deadline for petitions was 5 p.m. last Thursday. In order to recall the mayor, the petitions must have collected 894 legitimate signatures of registered voters who voted in the mayoral election.

City Attorney Jean Shotts and East will verify and count the signatures.

Sandinistas fall in stunning upset

By DORALISA PILARTE
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Opposition leader Violeta Barrios de Chamorro defeated President Daniel Ortega in a stunning rebuke to 10 years of leftist Sandinista rule, election returns showed today.

Sunday's peaceful balloting — the freest elections in Nicaraguan history — was closely scrutinized by thousands of international observers and, with more than half of the vote in, Mrs. Chamorro was winning nearly 55 percent.

Ortega, 44, stopped short of formally conceding, but said in a television appearance: "These numbers and these percentages form a tendency that cannot be ignored."

He said the precincts that had not yet reported held 50 percent of the vote, but admitted a Sandinista victory would "break mathematical rules."

"I want to tell all Nicaraguans and all the nations of the world, that the president of Nicaragua, and the government, will respect and accept the popular mandate," Ortega added.

Flanked by his aides and his common-law wife, who looked pale and shaken, Ortega told Nicaraguans he was proud, in any case, that the Sandinistas had brought a democratic election to Nicaragua.

Ortega had branded Mrs. Chamorro, the 60-year-old newspaper La Prensa, an instrument of U.S. policy and had hoped at standing up to the colossus of the North. But the voters rejected Ortega's one-party rule, which led to economic decline that the Sandinistas blamed on the U.S.-supported Contra insurgency and a U.S. trade embargo.

In Washington, Secretary of State James A. Baker III hailed the election results, saying "freedom won another victory" and commending the Sandinistas for conducting the elections under international supervision.

The Supreme Electoral Council said that with about 60 percent of precincts counted, Mrs. Chamorro had 459,655 votes, or 54.8 percent, to Ortega's 347,778, or 41.5 percent. Eight other parties split what little remained.

"The Nicaraguan people have shown that they want to live in democracy, in peace and in freedom," Mrs. Chamorro told more than 1,000 cheering supporters at the headquarters of her United National Opposition, a fractious coalition of 14 parties from far left to far right whose only common interest was getting rid of the Sandinistas.

If her victory is confirmed, Mrs. Chamorro will take office on April 25th.

Aristides Sanchez, a Contra leader, called the election result "a triumph of the people."

"All Nicaraguans must now back the new government and attempt to achieve a national reconciliation."

Hispanics consider C-City contests

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — Hispanics here are working to make their presence known at the voting booth.

Though only two are running for the 10 county offices up for election in the March 13 primary out of a field of 30 candidates, three more are considering running for the May 5 Colorado Independent School District board election, which for the first time in history will have trustees elected from single-member districts.

The single-member districts were formed as the result of an agreement in a January 1988 lawsuit between lawyers representing the school district and the League of United Latin American Citizens. LULAC officials say that the old at-large system diluted minority voting strength.

Last year's May elections were postponed and in this year's election, five of the seven trustee positions are up for election, including one in a "minority" district and another in an "impact" district which could swing either way, according to the lawsuit agreement.

A similar suit is pending against the City Council and at least two politically active Hispanics are already planning to run for seats for next year's election.

"The time has come for Hispanics to take charge of their own..." said Oscar Ortiz, 42, who plans to run for a Council seat for the second time in two years.

Ortiz, who with his wife, Sara, organized the local LULAC chapter in April, 1988 in order to help get minorities hired by the Colorado ISD and elected to the board, could not find the last word to finish his statement.

He said that "destiny" was not quite the right word but said, "We're going to be the majority (population) in Colorado City in the next 5-10 years. It's time we got involved in city and county government and got that experience."

Continuing, he repeated a phrase he had heard another Hispanic leader make at another time. "Decisions are going to be made whether we're part of those decisions or not," he said.

Ortiz, the owner of Ortiz Auto Sales and an employee of Arco Oil and Gas Co. in Coahoma, said his biggest concern is to have better minority representation. "One of the things that I would like to see is

Coahoma 'different' for students

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

COAHOMA — Talk about culture shock.

Gemma Campabadal Monfa and Wagner Pessini Netto are spending a year broadening their horizons at Coahoma High School. Both are exchange students; Gemma, from Barcelona, Spain, came to Coahoma via the American Intercultural Student Exchange program. Netto, from Campo Grande, Brazil, had his visit sponsored by Rotary International.

Both students live with host families — Netto with David and Patricia Barr on their ranch in Vincent and Gemma with Stan and Deedee Phillips in Sand Springs.

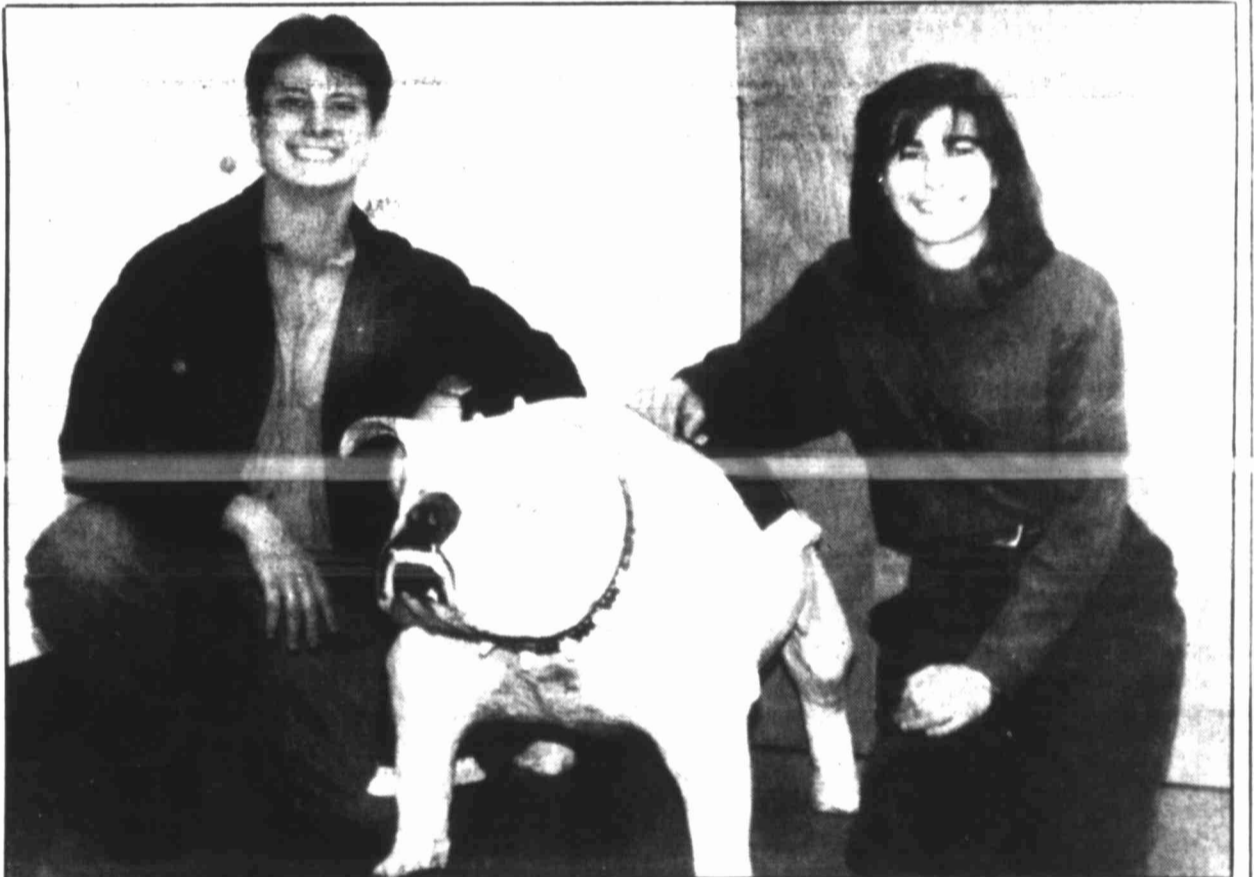

Gemma, who has been here since August, said Coahoma was different, but she likes it.

Netto, who's only been here a month, is not so sure.

"Everything is different. My city has 700,000 people and here there are 1,000. I've had a hard time adjusting," he said.

They said the hardest thing to get used to is the language. They both studied English for seven years prior to coming to the United States and Gemma had spent a month in Ireland and a month in England brushing up on the lingo. Nevertheless, they had difficulties.

"When I arrived here I didn't know anything. You can study a language but it's different speaking it here. I understand Gemma's

Some businesses profiting from detour

HERALD STAFF REPORT

BIG SPRING — Businesses along the temporary five-mile detour over Texas 350 and FM 700 are profiting from the detour, in some cases.

"We've been seeing a lot of new faces," said Jan Moser of Jan's Grocery, along the Snyder Highway.

Business has "picked up some," she said. "We have no complaints about that."

Robert Crane, of Mary's Grocery, said business is about the same as before the detour. The detour "helps me in the evening," he said. But in the morning, he said, cars often avoid taking the detour by going some other route.

Glynn Harrell, sales manager for West Texas Auto Parts, said business has dropped since the detour began. "They take the detour, but they come flying by here," he said, noting an increase in traffic on the detour route. "There's so much they don't want to take the chance of crossing the lane."

Detour

Highway Department officials said last week that the section of Interstate 20 will be closed until the middle of March because of a fire-ravaged overpass, forcing about 10,000 vehicles a day to take the five-mile detour.

I-20's eastbound Birdwell Street overpass in Big Spring must be torn down and rebuilt — a process that could take up to a year — because of damage caused when a gasoline tanker fell off the westbound overpass and exploded last Monday, the highway department said.

Advocacy group calls for insurance investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private advocacy group today accused the insurance industry of widespread abuses in the sale of nursing home insurance to the frail elderly and called for a government investigation.

The Families USA Foundation said many insurers, including some top-rated companies, sell policies to vulnerable old people by exaggerating their coverage and later refuse to make good on promised benefits.

"There is so much evidence of insurance industry abuse of frail elderly consumers that the Federal Trade Commission should investigate," said Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA. "This problem is too widespread to be swept under the rug by insurance industry public relations agents."

The group's report was endorsed by two members of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations, which plans to hold hearings on the subject.

Long-term care insurance was virtually non-existent before 1980 but the market has grown rapidly in recent years amid rising concern about the high cost of nursing home care, which averages more than $2,000 a month.

More than 100 insurance companies now offer nursing home insurance and more than 1.3 million policies have been purchased, according to the Health Insurance Association of America. The association maintains that its members that sell long-term care insurance are committed to providing affordable protection.

An estimated 40 percent of all elderly will spend some time in a nursing home, with half of all stays lasting six months or less and the other half averaging 2½ years, according to HIAA.

Families USA said the most common problems detected in its preliminary study of nursing home insurance sales in more than a dozen states were misrepresentations by insurance agents, company refusals to pay benefits, and extensive payment delays.

In one case, an insurance agent visited a 74-year-old widow in Minnesota in the hospital to collect her first premium, and later denied her nursing home benefits because she was hospitalized when she bought the policy.

In another, an elderly Iowa man was promised he need never worry about paying for a nursing home if he bought a policy that turned out to be so restrictive it would not cover 97 percent of the nursing home beds in Iowa.

Rep. John Dingell, a Michigan Democrat who chairs the House Commerce Committee and its oversight subcommittee, said the foundation's report was in line with what his investigators are finding.

"Too often, long-term care insurance hastens financial ruin and destroys families emotionally," Dingell said in a statement. "When untamed avarice and constant prevarication become the trademarks of a product, it is time for reform."

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., also on the subcommittee, said long-term care insurance "often seems worth little more than the paper it's written on."

Both legislators were supportive of Families USA's request that Congress seek an FTC inquiry. Only the House and Senate Commerce Committees can direct the commission to investigate the inurance industry.

Currently, roughly half of nursing home costs are paid by individuals and the other half by the government, mainly through Medicaid. Medicaid coverage of nursing home costs is available only after people become impoverished.

Families USA believes the best solution to the long-term care problem is a broad-based social insurance program akin to Social Security or Medicare.

In anticipation of today's report, the Health Insurance Association of America on Friday distributed two private studies, one concluding that a social insurance-type solution would primarily assist upper-income Americans and another showing that 92 percent of long-term care policyholders who filed claims with AMEX Life Assurance Co. did receive benefits.

Upset

he said in a telephone interview from Miami.

The United States ended military aid to the Contras in February 1988, but, at Bush's urging, Congress has continued to supply the Contras with non-lethal aid to pressure the Sandinistas into holding free elections.

Mrs. Chamorro was asked as she left her house for campaign headquarters if she thought a transfer of power after 10½ years of Sandinista rule would be smooth. "That's the commitment. We want peace and reconciliation."

As they battled the Contra rebels, the Sandinistas muzzled dissent for years. Most pre-election polls said Mrs. Chamorro was trailing Ortega, but many Nicaraguans were afraid to reveal their true feelings outside a truly secret ballot box.

Under the Sandinistas, the centrally planned economy was wracked by inflation and mismanagement.

Celebrations began breaking out in various neighborhoods of Managua before dawn, with people burning many of the thousands of Sandinista banners that had been draped across city streets. However, the celebrations appeared to die down quickly, and only a few fires were set.

A midnight celebration at Sandinista headquarters had been canceled.

Turnout was heavy in what was considered Nicaragua's freest vote ever, with people lining up for as much as four hours to cast ballots and more than 3,000 international observers monitoring the peaceful election.

Voters also selected 90 National Assembly members and representatives to 146 regional, city and town councils.

The electoral council was extremely late in reporting votes, and opposition officials initially said they believed the council hadn't expected a Sandinista loss and was withholding announcement because it didn't know what to do.

Mrs. Chamorro favors market-oriented reform, but the Sandinistas recently softened their socialist line, promising a mixed economy and saying they would no longer expropriate private property. They also released political prisoners.

A festive mood prevailed at Mrs. Chamorro's headquarters, while at the Sandinista party headquarters the mood was funereal, with long faces and few smiles.

When the scheduled time for reporting results came and went with only a few scattered results being released, the state television started showing movies, including "Dirty, Rotten Scoundrels" and "Bullitt."

After the polls closed, former President Jimmy Carter, head of one observer group, called the ballot "very fair." About 1.75 million of Nicaragua's 3.5 million people were registered to vote.

President Bush had said that said whoever won the election would "find a better climate" with the United States, as long as the vote was fair and the government maintained a democratic system.

Inflation, which ran 1,700 percent last year, and the draft were on the minds of many voters. Barely a Nicaraguan family has escaped losing a member to the war with the Contras, which has claimed 30,000 lives.

"If I voted for the Front (Sandinistas), I'd be voting for things to be more expensive every day. I'd be voting to send my kids to military service," said Ramon Mendoza, a truck driver from Managua.

In a poor barrio of western Managua, Socorro Neira Padilla said she was for the Sandinistas.

better representation of employment (of minorities) by the city," he said.

He said he has similar concerns about county government and the school board. His sister, Cristela Castillo, 37, is one of six candidates running for district clerk and his wife Sara, 41, said she will file for the Colorado ISD school board election.

"We're over 40 percent of the population here," said Castillo, a former employee with the county clerk's office. "Why can't we have a Hispanic in there?"

Yolanda Molina, 39, who is a candidate for Precinct 2 commissioner, expressed a similar opinion. "I think it's time we start getting involved in county government," said the substitute teacher with the Colorado ISD.

Castillo and Molina are both running for office for the first time. The races they entered are also the two most contested races in the county. Both have six candidates running.

The 30 candidates running for county offices this year may be a possible record, says County Clerk Joan Beach and Democratic County Chairman Tom Rees. Only one of those candidates is running as a Republican and that is for the Pct. 3 commissioner race.

Another possible candidate for the Colorado ISD board election may be Molina's husband, Apolinar, 40. He had also filed for last year's election.

"I haven't decided whether I'm going to run or not," said Apolinar, who works for Lawrence IGA in Sweetwater. If he does run, it will be the first time that he has ever run for a political office.

Ruben Alvarez, 44, who's school board trustee position in Pct. 2 is up for reelection, said he has not decided if he will run because of a recent job transfer to Dilley which is south of San Antonio.

"I'd like to run again but I've been transferred. I'll know next week for sure," said the C.C. Tank Rental Company employee. "I enjoyed working for the school district."

Alvarez, who was appointed to his position early last year, said he has never ran for an office before.

Although Feb. 19 was the first day to begin accepting applications from school board candidates nobody has filed yet as of Friday, said Geneva Findley, the school district's business manager and tax collector. Candidates must file before 5 p.m. on March 21.

Sara, who has run for a school trustee position at least two times before, said she is not even sure yet what districts she and Apolinar would be running in yet. Information from the school district shows that the minority district is Pct. 4 on the westside of the city and the impact district is Pct. 3 in an area north of Highway 80.

Next week at least two maps will be displayed at the tax assessor collector's office showing the division of the precincts, Findley said.

Maps will also later be displayed at the seven polling places and the school district's office, she said. Finalized city maps were supposed to be completed and delivered by the end of last week but were not, she said. A bill was recently received for completed county maps and that indicates they are probably being shipped right now.

Also considering running for the City Council next year is Sammy Contreras, 40. "I'm thinking about it," he said. "I think we need better management."

Contreras, a maintenance supervisor at Mitchell County Hospital is active in a local civic group called Concerned People Rebuilding Mitchell County. He said he has never ran for a political office before.

CPR, which addresses local political and economic issues, is currently conducting preparatory questions and answer forums for county candidates.

Meanwhile, Sara, who runs Ortiz Auto Sales at 341 E. Second doubles the use of the office as a LULAC headquarter for a voter registration drive which has been ongoing since the summer of 1988. She estimates that she has registered about 1,000 people since she started. About 100 people have been registered so far this year, she said.

course of study focusing solely on her profession, pharmacology. Netto has finished high school in Brazil, which takes only three years. He hopes to take classes at Howard College next semester. His university education will also be in a single subject, veterinary medicine.

When Netto and Gemma finish college, they will have a degree roughly equivalent to an American doctorate. They say the difference is that their high school courses are very structured and they are expected to know everything they need to know about the basic math, science, history, literature and languages before they enter the university.

The only choice the students get in high school is whether they'll concentrate on sciences or humanities.

"In Coahoma I have seven classes, there I had 23," said Netto.

Gemma said she took ten classes in Spain. Neither had classes that met every day, as Coahoma's do.

The landscape is also a big change.

At home Gemma is two hours from the mountains and two hours from the Mediterranean.

Netto lives in ranching country in Mato Grosso do Sul. "My state is like Texas, it has ranches and cattle, but here there's no green, no water, it's desert," he said.

They've had a chance to see some other parts of the region since they've been here. Netto went to the livestock show in San Antonio and decided it was a beautiful city. Gemma will go there with the Spanish club later in the spring. She has gone skiing in Ruidoso and Netto will ski there next weekend with a Baptist church group.

Gemma has been filming the varsity Bulldogettes games. She played basketball back home and she'll be running track in the spring, a new sport for her. She's also competed in UIL science and math tournaments.

Netto is still finding his place in Coahoma. Settling in is complicated for him by the fact that he'll have three different host families during his year here.

"When I go back, I'll never leave Brazil again," Netto said. "When I arrived here I thought this was the best country in the world but now I love my country."

Gemma agrees that going abroad is a good way to find home. "Ever since I was a freshman I've wanted to come here. It's kind of hard and I'm homesick sometimes, but this helps with my English and with knowing the culture. I like traveling. It helps me to be more independent," she said.

"Yes," Netto said, "this has made me more independent too."

HOUSTON — Jody C. Utter, left, and David Campbell of Lake Highlands High School congratulate each other after their team won the Texas Academic Decathlon Sunday in Houston.

Artifacts found
EL PASO (AP) — Tigua Indian lore for generations told of a Dutch anthropologist who visited El Paso's Ysleta del Sur pueblo in 1882 and returned to Europe loaded with tribal artifacts. Tigua leaders spent decades trying to track down those now-priceless artifacts. They were found in a museum in the Netherlands.

Next month, 11 Tiguas are going to the Netherlands to examine a part of their history that no one in the tribe has seen in 108 years.

The items gathered by pioneering ethnologist H.F.C. Ten Kate in the 19th century were found in a museum in Leiden, the Netherlands.

"We were pleasantly surprised to know that the Netherlands has a fine collection of Native American arts and crafts, including a beautiful drum and war shield from our pueblo," said Joe Sierra, a member of the Tigua tribal council.

The tribe's eight-member dance group and three tribal leaders will visit Leiden March 5-7. The dancers will perform and the Tiguas will see the Rijkmuseum Voor Volkenkunde, the Netherlands' national folk museum that houses the Tigua artifacts.

Water dispute settled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today closed out a 16-year-old dispute over water from the Pecos River, saying New Mexico has agreed to pay Texas $14 million for past violations of an agreement between the two states.

The justices unanimously accepted the huge payment suggested by "special master" Charles J. Meyers, and previously agreed to by lawyers for both states.

The high court in 1987 had ruled that Texas was entitled to either money or extra water as compensation for New Mexico's past violations of the water-use agreement.

The dispute began in 1974, when Texas sought to sue New Mexico in the Supreme Court. A year later, the court agreed to hear the case even though it had not previously been aired in a lower court.

Legislature to face school finance and election reforms

AUSTIN (AP) — Under the gun from two courts which ordered reforms in school finance and judicial elections, the Texas Legislature convenes Tuesday with many lawmakers agreeing on little except the lack of easy answers.

Their predicament revolves around two of the toughest subjects they can face — money and politics.

And compounding those difficulties is the timing of the 30-day session, which opens exactly two weeks before the March 13 primary election, taking lawmakers facing opponents away from home.

"They don't want to have to choose between taking care of business in Austin and taking care of business in their districts ... It's just really not fair," said Rep. Ric Williamson, D-Weatherford.

"It's one of the reasons most of us felt like we should have been in session last year on public education," he said.

A unanimous Texas Supreme Court ruled last October that the $11 billion a year school finance system unconstitutionally discriminates against property-poor school districts. The nine justices gave the Legislature until May 1 to write a new plan.

Last November, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton declared that countywide elections for state judges in nine urban counties violated the federal Voting Rights Act by watering down the power of minority voters.

Bunton ordered special elections for 115 judges this year, but the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals stopped those and said the Legislature deserved a chance to take action first.

"They don't want to have to choose between taking care of business in Austin and taking care of business in their districts ... It's just really not fair." — Rep. Ric Williamson, D-Weatherford.

Given the delicate nature of the issues, Texas Association of Taxpayers official Bill Allaway said, a second 30-day session may be needed. "What will be building over that time is the incredible sense of doom and gloom and fear of the 'big bang' that is going to come May 1," he said.

"Every Tom, Dick and Harry and Mary around the state that you ask about this (school) issue has their own idea. You can ask 100 different people and get 100 different answers," Gov. Bill Clements said.

"There needs to be a really strenuous effort put forward to come to some kind of consensus. Right now, I don't find that consensus. I know what some of the negative feelings are, but that's not what gets the job done," Clements said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate, said finding a judicial election plan that can win majority approval is equally tough.

"I just don't know of a consensus existing on the judicial selection problem ... I don't foresee any action on that issue" in the upcoming special session, he said.

But House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he thinks legislators will get the job done.

"Each day indicates to me we will be able to get out of here within the 30 days. I find a great deal of willingness to do that," Lewis said.

At least a half dozen major school plans have been proposed to respond to the Supreme Court, with costs projected as high as $15 billion over the next five years. Clements opposes new taxes.

"I have made it very plain that I will veto any kind of an increased tax to cover these costs that are being discussed. I'm absolutely firm about that," Clements told The Associated Press.

Only the Texas Research League has a proposal to equalize public education spending without more state money. Public schools are financed by a combination of federal and state aid and local property taxes.

A plan suggested by the Governor's Task Force on Public Education holds out the hope of avoiding a state tax increase, but some have called its $234 million first-year spending boost insufficient.

Texas Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said about $525 million in the first year is the minimum needed to meet the Supreme Court ruling without robbing rich districts.

Age proof sought to keep boy in jail

DALLAS (AP) — Prosecutors searching for evidence to prove that they did not send an underaged Vietnamese refugee to prison are also trying to make sure the right person was convicted.

Luan Van Hoang, believed to be 17, has already spent four years in a maximum security prison. Documents show he was only 13 when he was sentenced to 38 years in an adult prison.

Luan originally was tried in 1986 as an adult on charges of aggravated robbery after he gave police a fictitious name and claimed to be 17, officials said.

Last week, District Judge Jack Hampton ordered the teen-ager returned to Dallas for a hearing to determine his actual age.

Luan's age, however, no longer remains the only question about his conviction. The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday. A transcript of testimony in his trial raises the issue of whether officials prosecuted the right person.

Luan said he told authorities his name was Michael Nguyen and that he was 17 to avoid being returned to the Juvenile Court in Riverside County, Calif., where he had spent eight months of a nine-month term for joyriding and auto theft.

The boy said he believed Vietnamese friends who told him that lying about his age would result in probation. Dallas County authorities accepted Luan's story and tried him as an adult.

In 1986, police portrayed Luan as the "ring leader" of a youth gang that committed a series of armed robberies in Dallas County. Luan was identified during his trial as a gun-wielding robber.

But Luan, who did not testify in his trial and appeared with an interpreter, said he waited outside the home of a Vietnamese couple in Carrollton, a Dallas suburb, while they were robbed by four of his companions. He said he did not enter the home, use a gun or receive any of the proceeds from the robbery.

Testimony in Luan's trial reveals several inconsistencies.

Luan, abandoned by his companions, was arrested less than an hour after the robbery at a car wash, where police found a broken watch worth $50 and a costume jewelry pin worth $5, taken during the robbery. A $1,500 gold chain and $2,000 in cash were among other items stolen in the robbery.

Not explained in the trial is why the alleged gun-toting "ring leader" of the robbery gang would be stranded at a car wash by his subordinates and left with the least valuable items taken in the heist.

Carrollton police obtained what appears to be a statement from Luan that says he was at the scene of the robbery. But his signature doesn't match other signatures on family letters and official documents, the newspaper said.

"I never signed it," Luan said. "I know it was somebody else. It was somebody else's statement, not me."

The statement, in which Luan purportedly admits to being a "lookout" but not entering the house — wasn't used as evidence in the trial.

Testimony showed that police were unable to find Luan's fingerprints at the robbery site. The state's case against Luan hinged on the testimony of a victim who, according to the police report, was blindfolded during much of the robbery, the newspaper reported.

Prosecutors, however, have requested information from California authorities that they hope will challenge the growing number of records — some of them sworn statements — that show Luan would have been 13 at the time of his trial.

Luan was returned to Dallas from the Texas Department of Corrections last week after the newspaper reported that immigration and school records show he was born Oct. 10, 1972.

White House dinner

WASHINGTON — Gov. William Clements and his wife Rita arrive at the White House for dinner Sunday.

New rules affect campaigns

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas primary isn't until March 13, but balloting has begun under the state's new "no excuse" absentee voting system, which politicians say has made big changes in the way they campaign.

This is the first governor's race under the 1987 extended voting law, which lets Texans cast ballots during an period that began Wednesday and ends March 9.

Before 1987, absentee voting was allowed for about 10 days, and voters needed a valid excuse to cast an absentee ballot — a trip out of their home county, for instance. Now, voters just have to show up at polling places and cast their ballots.

In the 1988 presidential primaries, ballots cast before election day more than doubled compared with the 1984 primary, results showed.

George Bayoud, Texas secretary of state, said the new law gives voters no excuse not to vote in the primary.

"Those old excuses about being turned off by having to stand in long lines or having to take off work on a weekday are no longer valid," he said.

Bayoud planned to vote absentee and make several public appearances to tout the new law.

His spokesman Mark Toohy said, "This will be a bellwether. This will be a good test to see how many people this attracts to the polls."

Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, agreed, saying candidates must have television ads going and mailouts arriving each day of the absentee voting period or they stand to lose a certain number of voters.

"It forces the candidates to stretch out their media dollars and not just concentrate at the end of the campaign," said political consultant George Christian of Austin.

Less service to cost more

The U.S. Postal Service plans to slow its service as well as raise its rates. Currently 4 percent of letters scheduled for overnight delivery arrive late. The new plan will increase that figure to 7 percent.

But Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank denied that this will amount to a "degradation of service." He said in a recent interview that what Postal Service customers will lose in timeliness will be offset by more important improvements in consistency and reliability.

That's another way of saying that if consumers lower their expectations far enough, it will be easy for the Postal Service to reach its own.

The problem with the Postal Service's plan is that it assumes a great public willingness to reduce standards. That's a lot to assume along with a possible 20 percent rate increase next year.

Columbians did a good job

Although many Colombians found the additional security surrounding the four-nation anti-drug summit in Cartagena an annoyance, the Colombians did a good job in looking after the safety of their president and the presidents of the United States, Peru and Bolivia.

The significance of this meeting was mostly symbolic, a courtship. It was the chance for the presidents to come together to respectfully discuss a common problem, if only from different perspectives.

Put another way, it was a meeting of coca-supplying nations and the leader of the hemisphere's No. 1 consumer of cocaine.

(President) Bush said that an anti-drug cartel was born. That cartel is only as good as the commitment to it and the understanding of situations unique to each nation.

The Kansas City (Mo.) Times

More U.S. effort needed

While some still claim the futility of fighting a drug war, contending we have already lost it, others forge ahead, however haltingly, refusing to lie down and die.

The drug summit in Cartagena, Colombia, concluded with President Bush admitting to the presidents of Colombia, Peru and Bolivia that the United States must do something to curb the demand. Without demand, there would be no production and sales.

We were encouraged by that conclusion, but we must see more tangible efforts made to convince the American public of the dead-end road exemplified by drug use.

Too little is being done — either in terms of funds for education or in direct communication — to show all our citizenry how terminal their drug use activities are.

Only a matter a time

The reunification of Germany is only a matter of time. West Germany has the vigor to nurse the sick East back to economic health and put it on a sound course.

The question of keeping Germany in NATO is a stumbling block. The Soviets are not keen about the prospect.

But the stumbling block may not be insurmountable. Membership in NATO could widen a reunified Germany's ties with the Western community and deepen mutual trust between Germany and other members of the alliance.

If the current era of good feeling between the USSR and the Western community continues and progresses into a phase of general demilitarization and disarmament, NATO could evolve eventually into a peace-keeping alliance in which even the Soviet Union and former Warsaw Pact members have votes.

Budget reflects lack of plan

In the wake of Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's presentation of the military budget for (the) next fiscal year, the big word in Washington is strategy.

Rep. Les Aspin and Sen. Sam Nunn, respective chairmen of the House and Senate armed services committees, are saying that the budget lacks an overall scheme.

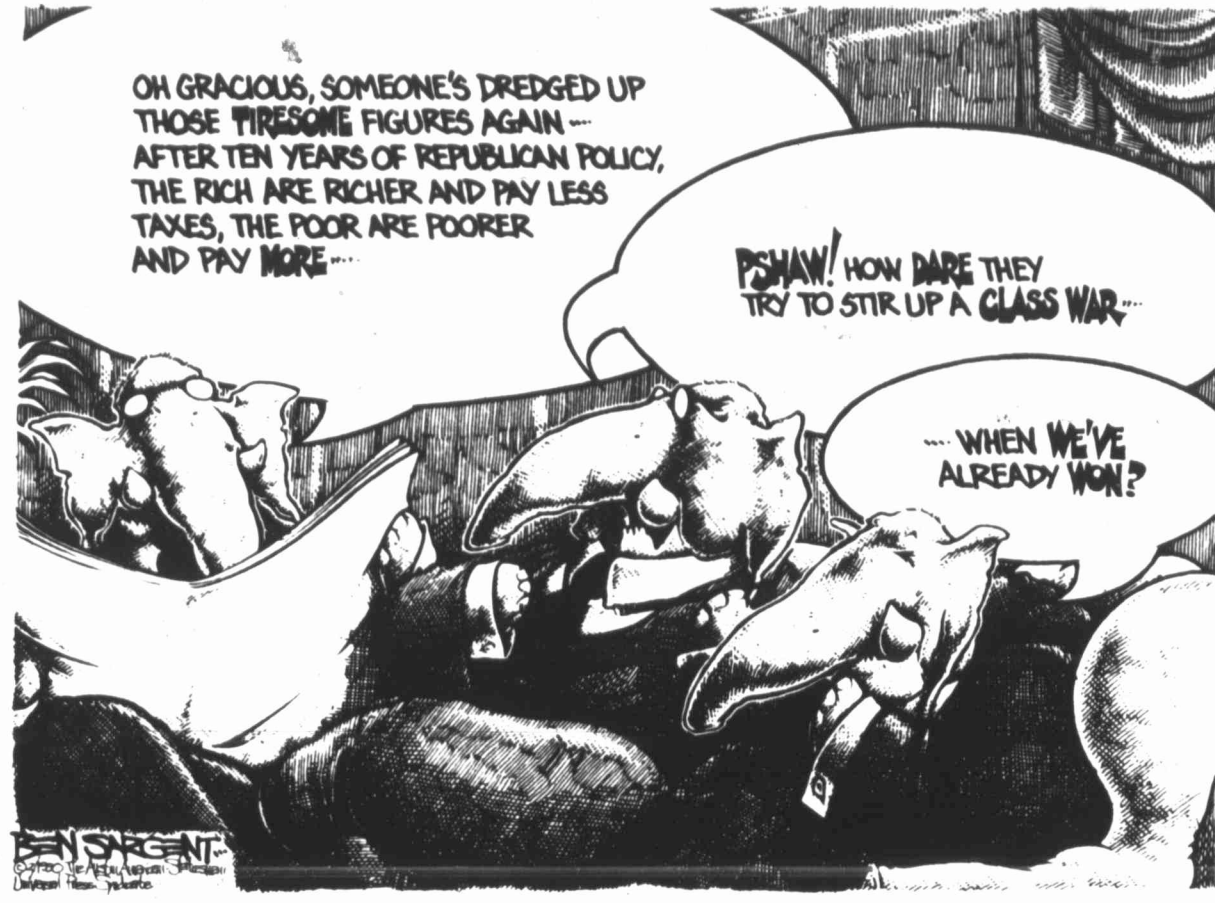

Nunn says that Congress would be inclined to support a defense secretary who could show that his numbers are part of a long-term plan to redesign America's military capacity relative to a reduced Soviet threat. Cheney admits he has no such plan.

No one in Washington does.

The reason no one has a grand strategy is that no one saw the changes coming in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Grand strategy emerges from bold choices. So far there has been no perestroika in Washington.

Irony abounds in changing world

EDITOR'S NOTE — As Alice said in Wonderland: "It gets curiouser and curiouser." In another context, Future Shock is already here. That's what the news is like these days, foes become friends, dictatorships become democracies, and the old shock of recognition is gone. In the following, a veteran AP newsmen tells of his efforts to keep up with events.

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

I'm having trouble absorbing the news these days.

History now seems to march in exclamation marks. Irony abounds, the time machine looks warped, credulity is stretched and you can't tell the players WITH a score card.

The Cold War ends in a strange admixture, reviving both the fears of World War II about a triumphant Germany and the hopes of World War I about a world made safe for democracy.

Now a wildly cheering Congress greets the president of the new and independent Czechoslovakia, who was in prison four months ago. It was an American president, Woodrow Wilson, who created Czechoslovakia in the first place, before it was swallowed by Hitler and shackled by Stalin.

And here is Vaclav Havel, out from the Soviet shadow, telling the government of the United States that the best way it could help his country and the world was to help the Soviet Union on the "immensely complicated road to democracy."

In this way, says the man from a recent slave state, the Cold War can be replaced by "an era in which all of us, large and small, former slaves and former masters — will be able to create what your great President Lincoln called the family of man."

This is but the latest in a racing river of change.

In the first joyous rush west after the Berlin Wall came down, it seemed unseemly to recall that the last time there was a unified Germany it tore the world apart. In the 45 years since Hitler was smashed,

Capitol report

Western and Eastern Europe mostly worried about each other. Now both seem to be on tiptoe looking for a polite way to get a guarantee of peace from the merging Germans.

Said an East German official: "Our friendly neighbors should understand the desire of Germans for reunification." Said Foreign Minister Roland Dumas of France: "Germans should also understand the worries of their friendly neighbors."

For most of the Cold War years, the vocabulary of the Kremlin seemed to be limited to one word, nyet. Now suddenly we find the Moscow leadership agreeing on a Thursday to what it positively opposed on Wednesday. There are days when our Bolsheviks sound like friendly Rotarians.

The two superpowers, whose mutual enmity kept the world nervous for four decades, now seem like one and a half superpowers, maybe less. The Soviets appear to be shrinking in a sea of troubles and, after Panama, Uncle Sam looks less than a giant astride the planet.

Germany appears to dominate the thoughts of the old world. Drugs command the attention of the new.

In Washington, the mayor of the capital of the United States is indicted for possessing cocaine and lying about his drug connections. On the same day, in Colombia, the president of the United States seeks ways to stop cocaine smuggling from South America.

In Miami, a sullen little man with an utterly resistible personality awaits trial on charges of cocaine trafficking. Getting him to trial took 12,000 U.S. soldiers, scores of planes and ships and the lives of 23 Americans and several hundred Panamanians. The world was also treated to the picture of American fighting men trying to flush out their quarry with thunderous rock music.

In Colombia, four presidents agree on the need to find other crops for Andean farmers to grow instead of coca, from which cocaine derives. President Bush promises to try to expand U.S. markets for coffee and cut flowers.

Will the next Marshall Plan be designed to stop coca not communism, dope peddlers not agents of Karl Marx? Or will the next Cold War be fought with midget mercenaries dropped from the air? In an accelerated secret program, the U.S. Department of Agriculture was reported studying the killing power of malumbia, an inch-long white moth which, in its caterpillar stage, adores dining on the green leaves of coca plants.

The cocaine summit was guarded by warships, frogmen, high-speed patrol boats, swarms of helicopters, at least one submarine and 5,000 security agents on land. All were there to protect the commander in chief of the United States and his conferees against the gangsters of Colombia who, we are told, now hone their public image with the aid of public relations consultants.

In other areas rife with strife, Nelson Mandela of South Africa said that toward the end of his 27 years in prison his jailers let him see old Don Amechie movies, a New York judge ruled that to deny a beggar the chance to beg is to deny him his right of free speech; Ivana Trump said $25 million was nowhere near enough for a divorce; Soviet officials toured the Kennedy Space Center while NASA readied a secret shuttle to spy on their homeland; and tiny Albania, said to be the poorest nation in Europe and one of the most suspicious — it has no diplomatic relations with the United States or most of the world — Albania let it be known it would welcome foreign investments but not let foreigners own anything.

Suit-ing players to a 'P'

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I've got an idea for a great new television game show — which is just what the world needs.

I'm going to call it "Sports Celebrity Paternity Suit Challenge," or "Sports Celebrity Paternity Suit Family Feud," or maybe "Sports Celebrity Paternity Suit Wheel of Fortune."

It doesn't matter what I call it, the show can't miss. Here's how it will work:

A lucky contestant will be chosen by lot from the studio audience. Hence, "Marvin Gloggenhammer, come on down!"

Then Marvin, who will be wearing a leisure suit, will be introduced to a woman who has filed a recent paternity suit against a sports celebrity.

His job will be to pick the defendant in the suit from three sports celebrities who will also be on the set.

Marvin will ask Melinda Milsaps, Atlanta Waffle House waitress, certain questions in order to figure out who the defendant might be.

He might ask, "What is your favorite sport? Do you prefer infielders over outfielders?" or "Have you ever been offered tickets in the president's box for an Atlanta Falcons' football game?"

After listening to her answers, the host (perhaps Bob Eubanks can be lured away from the "Newlywed Game") will say to Marvin, "OK, Marvin, is the defendant in this paternity suit Steve Garvey, Wade Boggs, or Atlanta Falcons president Rankin Smith Jr.?"

If Marvin picks the right fellow, he wins his choice of prizes, such as a free trip to the National Hockey League All-Star game or a date with Melinda after the show.

If he doesn't pick the right sports celebrity, heavyweight boxing champion Buster Douglas comes out and decks him for being stupid.

The idea for this show came to me after I realized that hardly a day passes another sports celebrity isn't hit by a paternity suit.

Former major league baseball player Steve Garvey leads the league in that category, having allegedly impregnated enough women to form an all-pregnant girls field hockey team.

Then we got the recent news that Atlanta Falcons President Rankin Smith Jr. has been hit by a paternity suit alleging that he is the father of, not one, but two, children born to a Norcross, Ga., woman.

In the suit, the woman alleges when she first met Little Rankin — as his friends call him — he told her he wasn't married.

(You wonder, here's a guy with one of the highest profiles in town. Where has this woman been?)

After she has one baby, she says she finds out Little Rankin is indeed married with three children.

She says he promised to divorce his wife and marry her at that point, which he doesn't do, but gets her pregnant again instead.

Is Little Rankin one of the smoothest talkers around, or are we dealing with bimboosity at its purest level here? Perhaps the impending trial will tell us.

Regardless, now we know that one reason the Falcons have been so lousy may have been that Little Rankin has been too busy fooling around on his wife to run a football team.

He has had the good sense to announce he is taking a leave of absence from the Falcons front office to straighten out his private life, which is going to take some serious straightening out.

Not only is there the matter of the paternity suit and the two children, his present wife also has filed for separation.

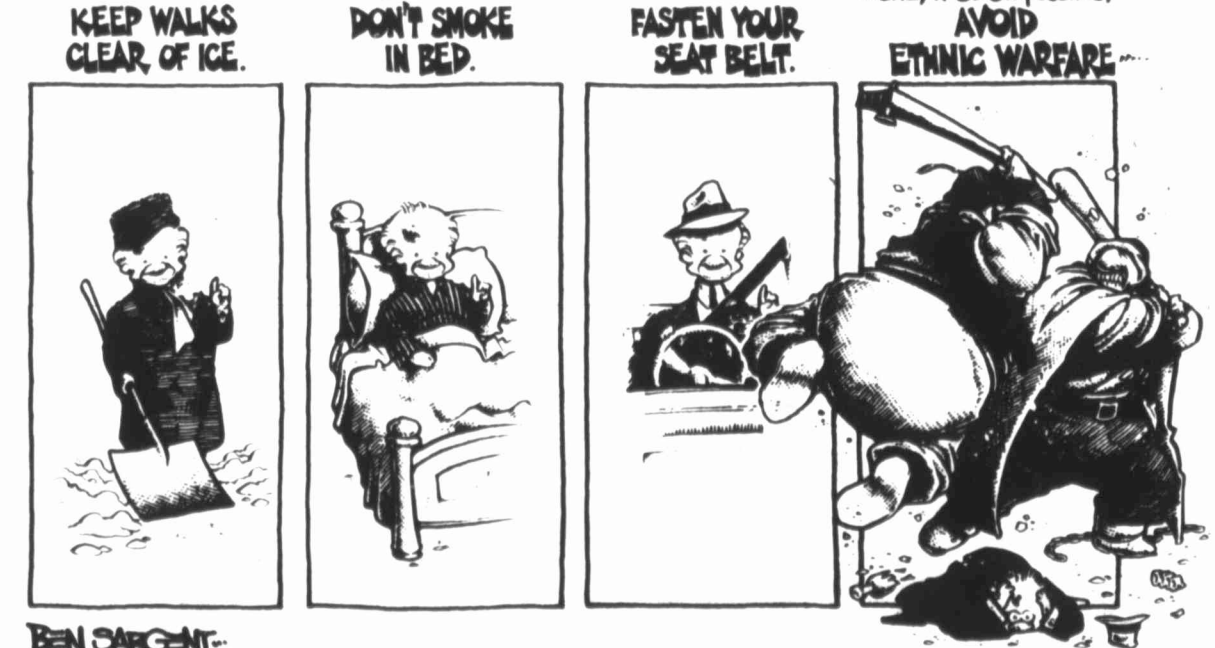

Before all this is over, Little Rankin's lover and Little Rankin's wife may wind up owning the Falcons, which might be a blessing to long suffering fans of the team.

Two women certainly couldn't do any worse than Big Rankin, the owner, and Little Rankin, el Presidente, who, after a quarter century of less than mediocrity, appear to have all the pro football knowledge of Vanna White.

Back to my show. I'm looking for a sponsor. Surely, a condom manufacturer will step forward any day.

Teachers need better salaries

To the editor:
In Sunday's Dallas Morning

News, an article presented information on the education plan of the leading candidates in each of the two parties. Neither of the four Republican candidates mentioned an increase in teachers' salaries in their plan to improve the education system. All three Democratic candidates included an increase in salaries "to at least the national average."

For what they do, teachers are the poorest-paid group in our society. They deserve being paid for the critical work they do, and paid above the national average.

Shuttle launch delayed, again

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Poor weather forced the launch of shuttle Atlantis' secret military mission to be scrubbed today for the fifth time, the most delays since the doomed Challenger.

NASA set the next attempt for early Wednesday.

Peekaboo clouds and erratic winds tantalized NASA with possible launch opportunities for almost two hours early today and officials kept Atlantis and its five-man crew poised and ready for any momentary break in the weather. But the break never came. At 2:32 a.m. launch director Robert Sieck abandoned the launch attempt and announced NASA would not try again until early Wednesday.

Experts saw little chance that launch weather would improve later in the week.

NASA spokesman Kyle Herring said exhaustion among the astronauts, launch-pad technicians and engineers played a role in the decision to delay the next launch attempt until early Wednesday.

Jackson not to run for mayor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jesse L. Jackson has decided not to run for mayor and instead will continue his drive to gain statehood for the nation's capital, say top advisers to the civil rights leader.

Jackson planned to announce at a news conference today he will not run for mayor, said the advisers, who spoke Sunday on condition of anonymity.

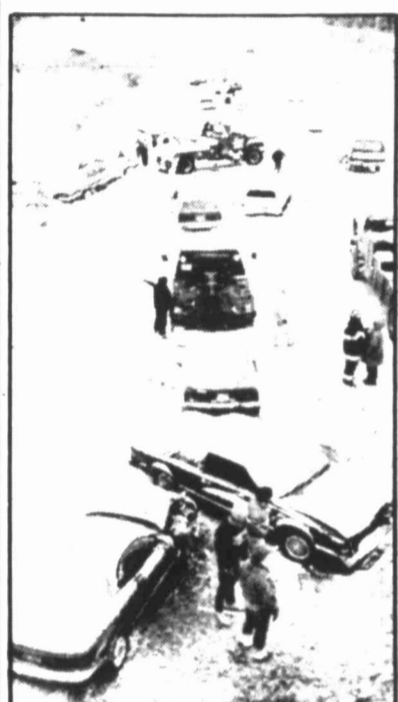

"We have tried to persuade him to run, but he remains convinced that he should not," said one local supporter. "He is convinced he should work for statehood."

The supporter, who said he spoke to Jackson for more than three hours over the weekend, said the two-time Democratic candidate for president is committed to gaining statehood for the District of Columbia.

Jackson declined to comment on his plans after preaching at a Washington church on Sunday.

Jackson spokesman Eric Easter confirmed that Jackson planned a news conference today "to discuss his mayoral plans," but declined to elaborate.

East faces coldest weather of year

PILEUP IN NEW YORK

The coldest weather since December slid further down the East Coast today after a snowy weekend in which at least 19 people died in weather-related accidents in five states.

Up to a foot of snow fell over a wide area on Saturday and Sunday, causing numerous traffic pileups.

The worst of the crashes occurred Saturday evening in western Ohio on Interstate 75 near Tipp City, where 30 cars and two tractor-trailer rigs were involved in a fiery chain-reaction crash in which nine people died and 55 were injured.

Still larger pileups north of the Tipp City crash effectively closed I-75. Three separate crashes within three miles of Findlay involved a total of 99 cars. The highway reopened Sunday.

"In my 18 years, this is by far the worst I've ever seen," patrol Lt. Dan Dickerson said of the Tipp City pileup.

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand — Hilary Foretich, the 7 1/2-year-old child at the center of a custody battle now spanning two oceans, tries a new bike inside the compound of a motel in Christchurch.

Father in New Zealand to pursue custody battle

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — The father of a 7-year-old American girl whose mother was jailed for 25 months for refusing to disclose her whereabouts arrived today to press on with the couple's highly publicized custody battle.

The mother of Hilary Foretich, who claims her ex-husband sexually abused the child, accused him of hunting down their daughter like "an animal."

Dr. Eric Foretich denies he abused the child. Last week, the Falls Church, Va. dental surgeon traced his daughter to New Zealand, where she has been living with her maternal grandparents.

Hilary reportedly hasn't seen either of her parents in two years.

Dr. Jean Elizabeth Morgan was released from jail in September after Congress passed a law tailored for her that limited civil contempt imprisonment in Washington, D.C. to a year.

"My daughter deserves to come back and have a normal life," Foretich, 45, said today.

After arriving in the northern city of Auckland, he immediately went to meet his New Zealand lawyers to discuss the next step of action: "Certainly we're going to do what we need to do to rescue my daughter."

Aided by private investigators, Foretich found that Hilary was living in the South Island town of Christchurch, 190 miles southwest of Wellington.

The Family Court in Christchurch granted an interim order Friday giving the grandparents custody of the girl, and today William Morgan, the child's grandfather, vowed to call police if the father approached the girl.

Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer, noting intense U.S. media interest in the case, said it was for the family court in Christchurch, not his Labor government, to rule on the matter.

"The paramount consideration in those cases is one issue: the welfare of the child," Palmer said.

Mexican marijuana production up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration confirmed Sunday that it has determined marijuana production in Mexico is much higher than it previously estimated but downplayed reports of a tenfold increase.

The Los Angeles Times on Sunday reported new U.S. figures, to be released this week, concluded Mexico produces 10 times more marijuana than previously believed.

The newspaper said the official

U.S. estimate — derived from CIA spy satellite photographs — concluded that Mexico produced 47,500 metric tons of marijuana in 1989. In 1988, the U.S. estimated Mexico's production at 4,750 metric tons.

Katherine Shaw, spokeswoman for the State Department's international narcotics section said the agency would release an annual report on foreign narcotic production and anti-drug efforts later this week.

Bush, Kohl: Nothing to fear

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, following "extraordinarily frank" talks at Camp David, say the world has nothing to fear from a united Germany and promise it will stay tethered to the Western military alliance.

Emerging Sunday from two days of talks at the presidential retreat, Bush and Kohl sought to allay fears from Moscow to Warsaw to London that the two Germans are marching to the altar too rapidly.

Bush said they shared "a common belief that a unified Germany should remain a full member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, including participation in its military structure," but with "a special military status" for the territory of what is now East Germany.

Kohl ruled out a Warsaw Pact connection for the new Germany, saying, "A united Germany cannot belong to two different pact systems." He added, "We will have transition situations" which will have to be negotiated.

Soviet activists ignore warnings

MOSCOW (AP) — Despite ominous government warnings and a high police profile, pro-democracy activists marched by the hundreds of thousands in more than 30 Soviet cities to demand an end to one-party Communist rule.

The rallies Sunday, unprecedented in scope in the Communists' 72-year rule, came a day after voters in the independence-minded republic of Lithuania apparently stripped the Communists of their parliamentary majority. The day also saw republic-wide elections in another restive republic — Moldavia.

A series of official warnings last week that extremists would provoke violence kept the turnout low in some cities Sunday and prevented some protests altogether. Riot police dragged away people who tried to hold an unsanctioned demonstration in Leningrad, but there were no reports of major unrest.

Measles booster

Several of our students have been attending stock shows in the last few weeks. The school nurse has received word from the Texas Department of Health that anyone who will be attending out of town stock shows or other events should receive a measles booster from their family physician.

Football & basketball

The 1990-92 realignment for football and basketball is as follows: Football Region II District 9 will include Bronte, Garden City, Robert Lee, Roby, Roscoe, Rotan and Sterling City. Basketball Region II District 27 includes Bronte, Garden City, Robert Lee, Sterling City, and Water Valley.

Special legislature

There has been a special legislature called to construct the refinancing of public school finance. Your input to your legislator would be appreciated. We are a balanced budget school district and receive very little state aid which is guaranteed. This is the opposite of a foundation school which receives up to 95 percent of its total funding from the state. At the present time it appears that they might raise taxes in some manner such as a state income tax to help schools who are foundation.

Decathlon

This year's academic decathlon will again be held at Coleman April 29. Last year we won this decathlon over several AA schools with the winners bringing home $4,500 in scholarship money. This year we are entering two teams.

Relays

Our Annual Bearkat Relays will be held March 10. Helpers are needed to work. Please contact Sam Scott.

Spring break

Spring break will begin Feb. 26 through March 4.

Bake sale

The fifth annual Mexican Restaurant and Bake Sale, sponsored by the Home Economics Department will be conducted

Lengthening school days

There is talk in the legislature at the present time to lengthen the school day and the following information should be presented to you. Texas high schools attend 7 hours a day on the average. The average in the United States is 5 hours 28 minutes. The lowest state is Connecticut who attends 4 hours per day. The average elementary is the same as high schools in Texas. The average U.S. elementary is 5 hours 15 minutes. The number of school days range from 174 in Missouri to 182 in Ohio, which only attends five hours per day. This information is from the Texas Education Testing Service out of Austin.

Welcome to America

Imagine not ever having seen or heard of one of our traditional favorite foods — gravy. That's the situation that Wagner Tessini Netto of Campo Grande, Brazil, found himself in when he came to live with David and Patricia Barr at Vincent the last of January.

Gravy also became his favorite American food. Another favorite of Netto's, a foreign exchange student of the Rotary Exchange Program and the Friday Rotary Club, is Ranch Style dressing which he eats on hamburgers, tacos and even popcorn. In Brazil the natives eat popcorn with mustard.

Outside of a natural homesickness, Nieto, 17, is enjoying his visit to America and his new family which includes Dutch, 17 and Lindy Barr, 6.

He felt especially good when he discovered the world is a small place after all while attending a Howard College basketball game. He met and conversed in Portuguese with three Brazilian students. Hutson Soto of Victoria; Carlos Tumb of Porto Alegre and Natan Vierra of Sao Paulo, Brazil.

The Barr family and the Larry and Leslie Fryar family accompanied Nieto to San Antonio recently where they visited the

A version of the Newlywed Game was enjoyed by all.

Smoker wants equal time for the hazards of coffee

DEAR ABBY: I am an adult woman whose mother-in-law is always telling me how bad smoking is for me. Every time you have something in your column about smoking, she clips it and mails it to me. I read your column every day and she knows it — but she sends these articles anyway.

Dear Abby

The point is if my mother-in-law didn't have any bad habits of her own, I would be touched by her concern about my health. But she drinks coffee all day long. Everybody knows that coffee is a health hazard, so look who's talking. I wish people would clean up their own backyards before criticizing someone else's.

Abby, please print something about the dangers of too much coffee. And thank you for not using my name or town. — ME

DEAR ME: The most important ingredient in coffee, which accounts for its popularity, is caffeine — a drug that stimulates the central nervous system and provides that "lift" most coffee drinkers enjoy. It's also a morning wake-up and a quick pick-me-up during the day. (Legend has it that its sleep-inhibiting properties led to coffee's discovery thousands of years ago by Arabian shepherds who noticed that their sheep walked around all night after eating berries of the coffee plant.)

Most physicians agree that an excess of caffeine can cause insomnia, irregular or rapid heartbeat, upset stomach, high blood pressure and nervousness.

Obviously, habitual coffee drinkers hurt only themselves, while habitual smokers (unless they never smoke in the presence of others) offend — and possibly harm — those around them.

DEAR ABBY: "No problem" is getting to be a replacement for "You're welcome." This irks me. I didn't mean to be a "problem." — JANE IN SUN CITY WEST, ARIZ.

DEAR JANE: Apparently it doesn't take much to irk you. In response to "Thank you," "You're welcome" acknowledges, rather stiffly, that a "thank you" was in order. "No problem" is a less formal way of saying, "Aw — it was no big deal."

DEAR ABBY: Albeit a very late but heartfelt response to "Alone in Wichita, Kan.," who caught herpes from her husband: Please let her know that she is not alone.

Having herpes made it easy for me to say "No." I never let it keep me from dating and having a normal social life, but if it came to the point where sex was the question, I would ask myself if I knew this person well enough to tell him that I had herpes.

If the answer was no, I said no to sex. I felt that any man who was interested in me as a person would stick around anyway — and they generally did.

I was not promiscuous. I was a healthy, attractive young woman who was divorced at 24 and had only one relationship at a time. So, please tell "Alone" that there are plenty of right people out there who will not let a little thing like herpes stand in the way of a loving relationship. I know. I was lucky enough to find one. We've been happily married for four years. — ALIVE AND WELL IN GEORGIA

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc., because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Thank-you

Ralph Proctor came home Feb. 15 after a three-week stay at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, to Anna and their daughter, Gwenn Newton, who had been helping look after him since Feb. 12. While in the hospital, sitters watched over him each night, among whom were his son, Lanny, from Midland, neighbors, friends and fellow church members from 14th & Main Street Church of Christ.

Everett Newton, Gwen's husband, arrived Valentine's Day to stay until relieved by their sons, Mike and Steve, who remained until Sunday.

Ralph and Anna wish to take this opportunity to thank their relatives, friends, neighbors and church members for the invaluable aid and assistance they were privileged to receive on his behalf. "May God richly bless you all — we do."

Roadrunners bop Hawks, 14-9

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — The Angelina Roadrunners broke their losing skid in a big way, defeating the Howard College Hawks 14-9 in the final game of a five-game series Sunday afternoon at Jack Barber Field.

It was Angelina's only win in the series and, more importantly, ended a 10-game losing streak by the Roadrunners. Angelina is now 2-11 for the season, while Howard falls to 14-4-1.

The Roadrunner bats were alive and kicking on this windy day that had the wind blowing toward left field. Angelina took advantage of the breeze; eight of its 13 hits were for extra bases, including five homers.

Howard spotted the victors an 11-3 advantage after four innings of play. The Hawks gamely battled back, but the deficit was just too much to overcome.

Howard starter Steven Spencer didn't stay around very long against the hot Angelina bats. Spencer lasted one and two-thirds innings, surrendering six runs on five hits. Julio Jimenez went the rest of the way, allowing eight runs and eight hits. It was no cakewalk for Angelina starter Allen Hayes either. Although he stuck around until the ninth inning, he gave up nine runs on 10 hits. Clifton Foster got the last two outs for the Roadrunners in the ninth.

The Angelina hitting attack was paced by second baseman Paul Arthur and right fielder Bubba Carlin. Arthur singled, doubled and homered. Carlin hit two homers.

For Howard, left fielder David Perez and designated hitter Richard Ackley had two singles each. Second baseman Steve Ramos and shortstop Jose Gomez homered for the Hawks.

After a scoreless first inning, Angelina took control by scoring six times in the second. The Roadrunners did it on four hits and three stolen bases. The big blows were a triple by James Durham and a two-run homer by Abbott Clack. Carlin and Michael Canton pulled off a double steal in the inning, and Scott Ollison also stole a base.

In the top of the third Angelina padded its lead to 9-0, thanks to two Howard errors. Arthur singled, scoring Carlin, Ollison's base hit scored Arthur, and Shane Dixon's sacrifice fly scored Charles Jenkins.

Howard played long ball and scored twice in the bottom of the inning on solo blasts by Gomez and Ramos.

Angelina answered with two runs in the top of the fourth on Hayland Hardy's double and Carlin's blast over the left field fence.

In the bottom of the inning, Howard's Todd Kolbicka walked, and eventually scored on Todd Toledo's grounder.

Angelina added a run in the fifth

Sooners whip top ranked Missouri

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — It was quick, just like the team which did it.

Oklahoma, certainly one of the fastest and most athletic teams in the country, sent top-ranked Missouri back to the rest of the Top 25 with a 107-90 victory on Sunday.

The 10th-ranked Sooners took off and ran away from the Tigers with an 11-0 run early in the second half. It took just two minutes, and it was followed by another quick 9-5 burst, which meant a 71-54 lead with 12:37 to play.

"It was a great first half, and then we got on that run in the second half which gave us the game," Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs said. "We maintained control from that point. We made the right run at the right time."

It started with 3-pointers by Skeeter Henry and Jackie Jones. Jones followed with a field goal and then Damon Patterson had a three-point play to end the 11-0 run.

Doug Smith scored for Missouri and then Patterson and William Davis answered for the Sooners. Travis Ford's 3-pointer got the Tigers within 66-54, but Jones scored on an alley-oop pass and added his second of four 3-pointers and it was over right there.

"The first half was our pace, but that run changed everything," Missouri coach Norm Stewart said. "They showed the mark of a good team," said Smith, who led Missouri with 27 points and 11 rebounds. "They got us down and kept us down."

Fouls kept Smith on the bench and he fouled out with 6:24 to play.

And Smith was the only Tiger doing any damage to the Sooners. Forward Nathan Buntin was 2-for-9 from the field, while guards Travis Ford and Anthony Peeler were 3-for-9 and 3-for-16, respectively.

NORMAN, Okla. — Former Midland College Sooners defeated No. 1 ranked Missouri Sunday afternoon. (right) and Jackie Jones celebrate after the game.

Patterson was assigned to handle Peeler, who came in with an 18.4 scoring average, including 21.6 in conference games.

"Peeler is the kind of player who I wouldn't say we really did anything to stop him," Tubbs said. "A guy like that usually stops himself by just missing shots. Damon Patterson drew the assignment and I thought he did a good job, but we didn't overwhelm him."

You can probably chalk it more up to his bad game than what we did." Peeler, who needed a 3-pointer with 1:02 left to finish with 10 points, was playing just his second game without backcourtmate Lee

Couples holds on for win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred Couples thinks his Los Angeles Open win may finally start him rolling toward more victories.

"Of course," he said, smiling wistfully. "I thought that after I won the Byron Nelson Classic."

That was in 1987, and Couples had won nothing else until Sunday, when his 2-under-par 69 gave him a three-shot victory over Gil Morgan.

PGA
The 30-year-old Couples, who joined the tour in 1981, has been one of the more consistent players over the past three years and finished 11th on the earnings list in 1989.

But he's had trouble winning. "I hope I don't have to go another 2½ years before I do this again," he said after winding up 72 holes at Riviera Country Club with an 18-under-par 266 total.

"I felt like if I was going to win one, this was it. Even in the pro-am, I was hitting the ball well. Winning this was a big help. If I hadn't, it would have been tough on me because everybody would be saying, 'Well, you did it again.'" Couples faltered briefly during the final round, losing the lead to Morgan by missing a 6-foot putt for par on the ninth hole. But he bounced back to birdie three holes down the stretch — as Morgan hurt himself with a double bogey on No. 13 and wound up with a 70.

Daniel takes unusual victory

HONOLULU (AP) — Beth Daniel isn't used to cashing a winner's check in February.

"Normally I'm a very slow starter," she said after winning the $350,000 Hawaiian Ladies Open, the fourth event on the 1990 LPGA Tour. Daniel won four tournaments last year, all in the last six domestic events.

LPGA
Could this mean bigger things in 1990? "I think I'll take the rest of the year off," she joked. Daniel earned $52,500 by shooting an even-par 72 Saturday to hold off Amy Benz and Patty Sheehan by three strokes.

Five golfers, including defending champion Sherri Turner, tied for fourth place, five strokes back.

Daniel finished the 54-hole tournament at 6-under-par after shooting two birdies and two bogeys on the rain-soaked 6,206-yard Ko Olina Golf Club course on Oahu Island's west shore.

Daniel, who now has won 19 LPGA events, was the model of consistency on a difficult day. A heavy morning downpour soaked the course and the tournament ended in passing showers.

Benz, who started the day two strokes behind Daniel, tied for the lead twice and went into the par-4 18th hole two strokes behind. Benz dropped her approach shot in the water fronting the green and had to sink a 15-foot bogey putt to salvage the second-place tie.

Daniel went ahead to stay on the 13th hole. Tied with Benz at 5-under, she hit 3-wood to the fringe, chipped to a foot from the hole and made birdie. Benz landed in a bunker and three-putted for bogey.

TROMSOE, Norway (AP) — Bonnie Blair of Champaign, Ill., won the women's 1,000 meters Sunday at the World Sprint Speed Skating Championships but fell short of winning the overall title, claimed by Angela Hauck of East Germany.

Blair finished with 169.395 total points to 169.090 for Hauck, who won both 500-meter events. A fourth-place finish in Saturday's 1,000 meters cost Blair the sprint championship.

Ki-Tae Ba of South Korea won the men's overall championship without winning any of the four races. Ba finished second in the 1,000 and upset defending champion Igor Zhelekovsky of the Soviet Union for the overall title.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Virgil Hill retained his World Heavyweight Association light heavyweight title with a unanimous 12-round decision over David Vedder Sunday night.

It was Hill's eighth defense of the title he won in 1987 from Lesle Stewart. Neither fighter went down as Hill (27-0) racked up points with his quick jab and counter-punching left hook against Vedder (22-8-3) before 8,000 at the Bismarck Civic Center.

The fight was close in the early rounds with Vedder moving well and the two exchanging jabs and lefts. Vedder drove the champion against the ropes several times, but Hill either escaped or tied him up.

In the sixth round, Hill began moving well to left, scoring with jabs and lefts to the challenger's head and dodging most of Vedder's punches.

From then on, the 26-year-old champion controlled the fight, shaking the challenger in the 11th round with left hooks and backing Vedder against the ropes twice.

Vedder survived but couldn't keep up with the quicker Hill in the final round. All three judges had Hill winning handily. Donald O'Neill of Massachusetts scored the fight 119-110, Carole Polis of Philadelphia 119-111 and Julio Roldan of Venezuela 119-107.

Until this week, Hill had a verbal agreement to fight Charles Williams, the International Boxing Federation champ, in a title unification bout, but promoter Bob Arum of Top Rank Inc. said Williams backed out because of "legal difficulties" in a contract with another promoter.

Arum said Williams apologized and promised to fight Hill in the fall. On the undercard Sunday night, U.S. Olympian Keicic Banks won his seventh straight professional bout after losing his pro debut. Banks knocked Arturo Lozano down three times in the opening round and the fight was stopped at 2:44.

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Fehr and Chuck O'Connor didn't have much to say to each other Sunday, leaving just one day before baseball talks take a break that threatens the start of the season on April 2.

Fehr, as promised, spent the 11th day of the spring training lockout at his home in suburban Rye Brook, N.Y., waiting by the telephone for owners to change their stance on salary arbitration eligibility. In the evening, he went to his office in Manhattan to prepare for Tuesday's meeting of the union's executive board.

O'Connor and his staff were at the Player Relations Committee offices four blocks away, preparing for Monday's 30th negotiating session — possibly the last chance an agreement can be reached that would allow the season to open on time.

Since players need between three and four weeks of spring training before the season and owners have scheduled their own meetings in Dallas on March 6-8, going past Monday threatens opening day.

Tony C dies of kidney failure at 45

BOSTON (AP) — As family and friends of Tony Conigliaro mourned the former Boston Red Sox outfielder's death from kidney failure, those who watched him play in the 1960s recall the promising career of a man who got "knocked down every time he was the happiest."

Conigliaro died Saturday of pneumonia and kidney failure at Salem Hospital. He was 45.

He had been in poor health since he suffered a serious heart attack in 1982, and he had been in the hospital since Thursday, said his uncle, Vinnie Martelli.

"For eight years I cried for Tony," his mother, Theresa Conigliaro, said Sunday. "He suffered so much. God finally took him, and now he's at peace."

She said after her son's heart attack, he required constant care from nurses. He stayed either with his brother Billy or with Mrs. Conigliaro, she said. He would watch television with the family and sometimes laugh, but he was not fully aware of his surroundings.

Conigliaro, known as "Tony C," was the youngest major league player to hit 100 career home runs at age 22. But the promising young player was hit in the face by a pitch at Fenway Park in 1967.

Conigliaro played for the Red Sox from 1964 to 1968, and again shortly in 1975. He also played for the California Angels, but quit before completing a season.

"It was a very tragic finish for Tony. The Red Sox are deeply saddened," said Red Sox spokesman Boston Red Sox outfielder Tony Conigliaro is carried off the field after he was struck by a pitch thrown by California Angels Jack Hamilton in this 1967 photo. Conigliaro died at age 45 of kidney failure at Salem Hospital in Massachusetts Saturday.

Dick Bresciani. "He was a good person and a good ballplayer," said Bresciani, who knew Conigliaro personally. "He was a part of the Red Sox family."

After his baseball career ended prematurely at age 30, Conigliaro became a sportscaster, worked in a sports agent's firm and ran a family food store. In 1982, he was a leading contender for a position on the Red Sox telecasting team. But two days after his audition, he suffered the debilitating heart attack.

"The whole thing has been so incredibly tragic," said Bob Woolf, an attorney who represents Hall-of-Famer Carl Yastrzemski, among other players. Woolf, who said he was a family friend, had not heard of Conigliaro's death until informed by a reporter Sunday.

"I'm really shocked. It makes me really sad," he said. The pitch, delivered by California Angels pitcher Jack Hamilton in 1967, fractured Conigliaro's cheekbone and dislocated his jaw. The crowd fell silent at the sound of the pitch hitting Conigliaro's face, said Dick Dew, who was a sportswriter covering the game.

"It stopped everybody in the place because of the sound of it. It was unmistakable," Dew said. "You knew the injury was serious the moment you heard it."

Blurred vision, stemming from the injury, kept Conigliaro off the field for the rest of the season and through 1968. In 1969, however, after a successful stint in the minor leagues, Conigliaro launched a comeback with the Red Sox in right field.

In 1970, he had his best year at the plate, belting 36 homers and driving in 116 runs, both career highs.

"He made a great comeback," said Rico Petrocelli, a shortstop who played for the Red Sox in 1967. "Not too many people could have done that. He never gave up."

After the 1970 season, however, Conigliaro was traded to the Angels for second baseman Doug Griffin, relief pitcher Ken Tatum and outfielder Jarvis Tatum. His career suffered with the Angels, and after half a season he retired, citing recurring vision problems.

In 1975, Conigliaro again attempted a comeback with Boston, but it ended after 21 games.

Conigliaro was born in Revere, Mass., and reared in Swampscott, north of Boston. He attended high school in Lynn.

Mrs. Conigliaro said the family was making arrangements for a funeral service.

Becker overpowers Lendl

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — When Boris Becker had a chance to move closer to the top spot in men's tennis, he went to his power.

The reigning Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion overpowered top-ranked Ivan Lendl 6-2, 6-2 Sunday to capture the Eurocard Championship.

"Breaking him in the first game of the match was very important," Becker said. "I knew the key was to serve very well and take the ball early and not to rally too much. I played the perfect match."

It was the first time the world's top two players had met since the U.S. Open in September. Becker won there, also.

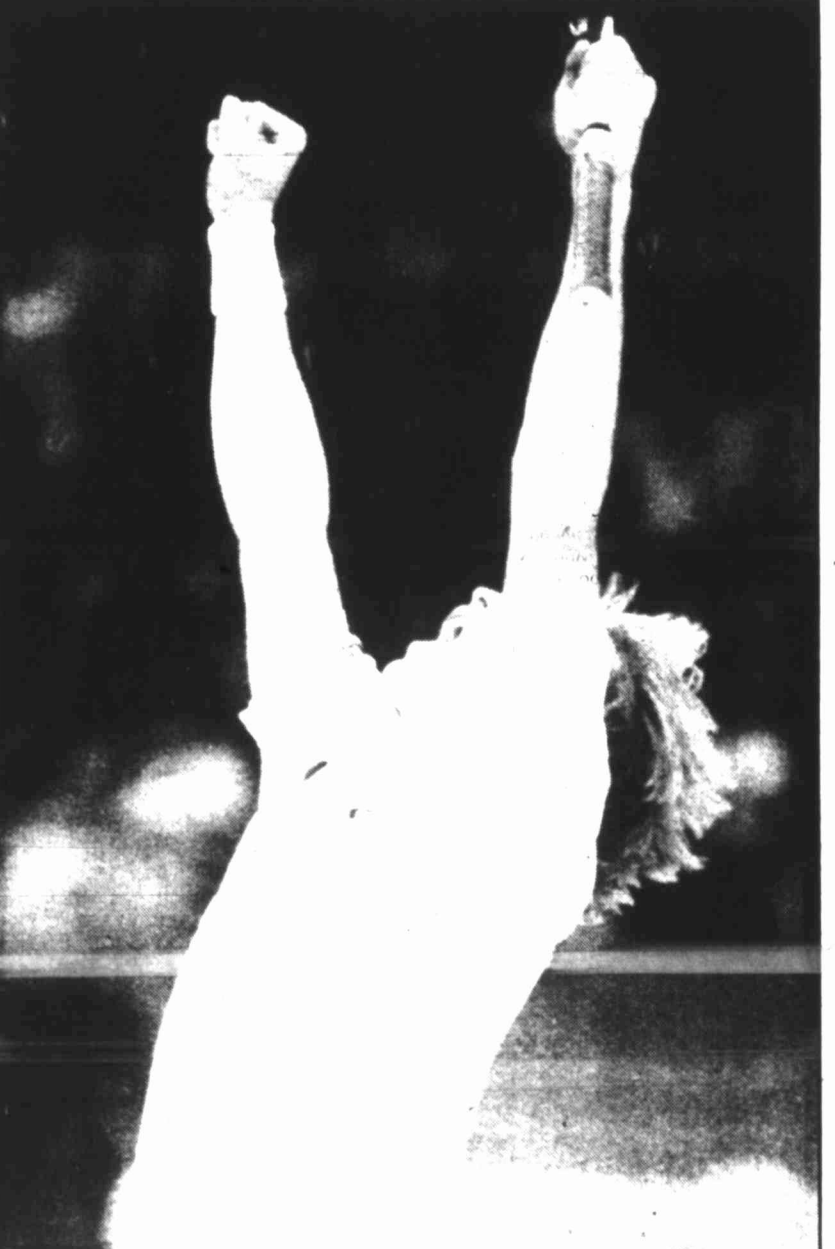

Lendl captured this year's first Grand Slam tournament, the Australian Open, in January. He had won 21 consecutive matches and was seeking his fourth straight tournament title Sunday when he ran into Becker.

The West German needed just 73 minutes for his fifth straight victory over Lendl, who got into trouble immediately when he dropped his serve to begin the match. With Lendl attempting, uncharacteristically, to charge the net on almost every shot, he became an easy target for Becker.

Becker broke Lendl's serve for the second time to lead 5-2, then wrapped up the first set in just 32 minutes, holding his serve at 15.

Becker was down two break points in the second game of the second set, but two easy Lendl errors gave him the chance to fight back. He then broke Lendl's serve again in the third game before serving three successive aces to hold serve for a 3-1 lead.

That appeared to be the end for Lendl, who allowed Becker to score his easiest win over the Czechoslovak in 14 attempts.

STUTTGART, W. Germany — Boris Becker raises his arms in jubilation after he defeated Ivan Lendl in the final of the Stuttgart Classic ATP tennis tournament Sunday. Becker won the match 6-2, 6-2.

Lakers lose at buzzer

By The Associated Press Utah's Karl "The Mailman" Malone made a delivery and the Los Angeles Lakers paid for it.

Malone's 3-point jump shot with six-tenths of a second left gave the Jazz a 104-103 victory over the Lakers Sunday night in a game between the NBA's Western Conference leaders.

NBA

"My first position was to post up, but they had it packed in so I backed out and yelled to John for the ball," said Malone, who scored 27 of his 34 points in the second half as Utah overcame a 56-46 halftime deficit.

The Lakers' Magic Johnson just missed a 36-foot hook shot at the buzzer for the Pacific Division leaders. Johnson had 32 points and 16 assists and scored 11 of the Lakers' last 17 points, including a short hook shot with 1:30 to play that gave Los Angeles a 102-101 lead. His free throw with 12.8 seconds remaining made it 103-101.

Pistons 98, Knicks 87 Detroit won for the 14th time in 15 games as Joe Dumars continued to dominate New York, scoring 15 of his 31 points in the third quarter. Dumars, averaging 28.7 on 63.5 percent shooting in three victories over the Knicks this season, made seven of 11 shots in the third period.

The Pistons led 77-62 with 1:54 left in the third period before New York's Patrick Ewing scored eight of his 37 points during a 12-5 run that closed the gap to 82-74 early in the fourth quarter. But the Knicks, now 22-3 at home, got no closer and none of Ewing's teammates scored more than 12 points.

Mavericks 87, Timberwolves 82 Dallas won for the seventh time in eight games behind Roy Tarpley's 26 points and 16 rebounds and Sam Perkins' 20 points. Derek Harper's five straight points keyed the Mavericks' fourth-quarter comeback and gave them an 83-82 lead with 16 seconds remaining.

Herb Williams stole Minnesota's inbounds pass and Perkins was fouled in the ensuing scramble. He made both free throws with 11 seconds left, sealing the outcome. Tod Murphy led Minnesota with 16 points.

Spurs 107, Clippers 106 David Robinson scored 26 points, including the tying and winning free throws with 7.3 seconds left, as San Antonio extended the Clippers' losing streak to seven games.

Los Angeles forward Charles Smith, who committed the foul on Robinson, scored seven of his 23 points during a 2:20 span late in the fourth quarter.

MIAMI — Race driver Geoff Brabham of Noblesville, Ind. shakes up a magnum of champagne Sunday in the winner's circle after he and teammates Chip Robinson (center) of Oldwick, N.J. and Bob Earl of Larkspur, Calif., drove their Nissan GTP-ZXT to victory in the three-hour Grand Prix of Miami.

Pontiac 400 winner slapped with big fine

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — After slapping Mark Martin with the biggest fine in stock car history, NASCAR officials stopped short of accusing his illegal engine part of helping him win the Pontiac 400.

"We don't know if it's an advantage or not," Dick Beatty, competition director for NASCAR's Winston Cup circuit, said in announcing that Martin's winning Ford Thunderbird had failed technical inspection.

Pole-sitter Ricky Rudd wound up third, followed by Bill Elliott, Dick Trickle, Wallace, Morgan Shepherd, Brett Bodine, Jimmy Spencer and Ken Schrader. All were on the lead lap but far off the pace.

Martin was not stripped of Sunday's victory, but he was fined $40,000 and penalized 46 points in the season standings because a spacer between the carburetor and intake manifold was found to be a half-inch too tall. NASCAR rules limit the height of the spacer to two inches. Martin's was 2 1/2 inches.

"The rule is to make sure the carburetor and air filter fit under the hood," Beatty said.

The announcement came three hours after the event at Richmond International Raceway, and Martin had already left for his home in suburban Greensboro, N.C.

"I didn't know anything about it until I walked into the house," Martin said.

Martin said the half-inch discrepancy "doesn't amount to a hill of beans at Richmond. It really doesn't amount to a hill of beans at Daytona. But it wasn't something done to gain an advantage. It was a mistake."

Team owner Jack Roush, who can appeal the ruling to NASCAR within 30 days, left the track without comment.

The penalties meant Martin's winning purse was reduced from $59,150 to $19,150, and instead of moving up from 21st to sixth in the points, he went to 13th.

NASCAR's biggest previous fine came in 1983, when Richard Petty was docked $35,000 after his winning car at Charlotte, N.C., was found to have an oversized engine and illegal tires.

"We decided after the incident in Charlotte, the fans have the right to leave the race track knowing who won the race," NASCAR spokesman Chip Williams said.

NASCAR rules prohibit competitors from challenging Martin's 1.02-second victory over Dale Earnhardt.

Rusty Wallace, who led four times for 149 of the race's 400 laps, was pulling away from Martin and Earnhardt when the 12th and final caution flag flew for a spin by Larry Pearson on the 384th lap.

Wallace and Earnhardt each took on four new tires during their pit stops. Martin, whose crew saved time by putting on right-side tires only, was the first out of the pits.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Criticizing Paul McCartney's records has been something of a blood sport for rock writers since the breakup of the Beatles 20 years ago.

"The perception after the Beatles was that nothing was any good," McCartney admitted in an interview.

He refers to the past decade or so as his "wilderness years." On the other hand, McCartney said, somebody must like his stuff.

The interview is published in the March issue of Fame magazine.

"Linda and I have since looked back at that period," he said. "We were sitting with Dave Bowie, looking though (a rock book). We look-

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Psychic Uri Geller claims to be able to bend spoons through mind-power, and now he is aiming to get Rhode Island voters to bend his way and support a politician who is into parapsychology.

U.S. Sen. Claiborne Pell, whose penchant for the paranormal is well publicized, was praised by Geller for standing up to the heat his beliefs engender.

"I will beam my energy for him to win the election," Geller told The Providence Journal-Bulletin during a recent interview at the American International Toy Fair in New York. Geller was there to promote a trivia game.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1990

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: superstar Elizabeth Taylor, poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, crusader Ralph Nader, actress Joanne Woodward.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be careful not to show your whole hand in business matters. Give yourself time to evaluate the people you are dealing with. Financial worries subside when an unexpected check arrives.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Refuse to make a financial decision until you have all the facts. What other people do today will have a direct bearing on your business plans. Do not expect social events to relieve tension.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not be in too much of a hurry! Contracts should be negotiated with great care. Use the evening hours to patch up a disagreement with your mate. Trips are best postponed.
