Ryan death probe

BIG SPRING — Police have not closed the investigation into the Dec. 2 death of Virginia Ryan.

Big Spring Police Capt. Lonnie Smith said earlier this week that investigators are waiting for reports from the state crime lab. Until the department receives that information, the investigation is at a standstill, he said.

Ryan, who was 43, was killed in the early morning hours of Dec. 2 after she was arrested at a pickup truck in the 3600 block of Parkway Drive. Justice of the Peace Willie Grant ordered an autopsy, which Dr. Robert Rember performed later that day.

The truck was owned by Johnny Mack Brown, 46, 1001 Hearn, who was arrested at the scene and charged with public intoxication and resisting arrest. Police have not said who was driving the truck when Ryan was struck.

ABILENE — A CAT scan taken Tuesday shows no significant change in the condition of Brandon McNally, 15, who was wounded in the head in a Feb. 25 hunting accident, family members said.

The Stanton High School freshman remains in critical but stable condition, his father Billy said. Two CAT scans last week showed some swelling of the brain.

He noted, however, that his son, who has been in a medical induced coma since arriving at Hendrick Memorial Trauma Center, has been showing a little more movement.

BSISD meeting

BIG SPRING — Big Spring Independent School District will have its monthly board meeting today at 5:15 p.m. in the board room at Big Spring High School.

On the agenda for discussion are textbook recommendations, tax abatement guidelines, resignations, election of officers for region ESC 18, and a resolution honoring Dwayne Fraser.

The board will enter into executive session to consider teacher contract extensions and recommendations.

Officials: Star Com cleared in probe

HERALD STAFF REPORT

BIG SPRING — A satellite TV business searched by federal authorities in August for alleged TV piracy has been cleared of wrongdoing and property confiscated in the search has been returned, officials said today.

Star Com Satellite Systems — whose Big Spring and Mission businesses were searched by the FBI, federal agents and local police detectives for alleged tampering with circuit chips for TV pirating — was cleared of allegations after a study of the chips determined they had not been altered, a press release from the business stated Thursday.

The FBI office in Abilene could not be reached for independent confirmation.

"The people of Big Spring deserve to know that we're not a shady bunch up here," said C.L. Carlile, owner of the Big Spring-based business, on the reason for the news release.

Star Com officials said in a news release that 65 integrated circuit chips were taken by the federal agents to determine if they had been illegally altered so that satellite TV customers could

FBI nabs man who abducted local woman

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — Lanette Lister, kidnapped at gunpoint on Sunday night, has returned to Big Spring unharmed.

Big Spring Police Det. James McGuire said Lister, who was abducted by her estranged husband, returned to Big Spring Wednesday evening. Her husband, James Henry Lister of Midland, is in custody in Amarillo after his arrest Wednesday afternoon by FBI agents and Texas Rangers, McGuire said.

"We're making arrangements and expect to have him in Big Spring sometime later today or early tomorrow," McGuire said of James Lister. "The victim is back in Big Spring. Physically she's all right."

James Lister's abduction of his wife from Sunday-night church services sparked a three-day statewide search for the couple that focused on Midland, Dallas and the South Texas area. Authorities got their first break Wednesday afternoon, McGuire said.

"He called his parents in Midland using an MCI credit card that we already had the number to," he said. FBI agents immediately contacted Lister's parents and gave them a number for Lister to call.

Lister placed a second call to his parents then called the number provided by the FBI, McGuire said. He told authorities that if anyone tried to arrest him, he would kill himself, McGuire said.

"He wanted to turn himself in, but he didn't want to go to jail," McGuire said. However, within eight minutes of placing the call to FBI agents in Midland, Lister was in custody in Amarillo, he said.

"An FBI agent there in Midland kept him on the phone until the arrest could be made," McGuire said. "It was a pretty well-planned operation."

Agents traced the call to an Amarillo mall where Lister was taken into custody at about 3:30 p.m. without a struggle, McGuire said. Lister and his wife had been registered at an Amarillo motel under fictitious names, he said.

McGuire said Lanette Lister never had an opportunity to escape from her husband.

"At no time did he allow her any mobility to make a phone call or attempt an escape," McGuire said. "He kept her in constant fear of her life."

Chairman disagrees with effort to reopen hospital

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Cheryl New is trying to get Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital back on its feet, but Harold Hall, chairman of the hospital's board, said she should stop "kicking an old dead horse."

New, the hospital's administrative assistant, began circulating a petition in January to reopen Hall-Bennett, which closed in December.

Yesterday at the hospital's board meeting she introduced six prospective members whom she wants approved as a new board to replace the current board, which she believes is in the process of resigning. The prospective board favors reopening the hospital.

The by-laws of the non-profit hospital foundation require the outgoing board to vote in the incoming board.

"As far as I'm concerned, the hospital is shut down. We're trying to close this down without debt, but New's trying to salvage jobs. I guess this board will sit here with the building empty until a nursing home comes along and uses it as a facility." — Harold Hall, chairman of the hospital

Hall said he has no intention of resigning from the board, nor does Mike Thomas or Jerry Grimes, the other two board members, as far as he knows.

"We haven't resigned yet," Hall said. He said they might consider resigning and approving a new board if there was tangible proof that a reopened Hall-Bennett would be viable.

"If New came up with three or four doctors willing to come out here and three or four million dollars, we might resign," he said.

Hall doesn't believe reopening the hospital is feasible. He said the foundation is losing thousands of dollars a month on the facility, which closed in December after 61 years of service.

Decreases in Medicare payments and two malpractice lawsuits drained the hospital's coffers during the 80s, Hall said. Only its clinic and radiology department remain open, operated by doctors Joe Ellis and Louise Worthy.

"As far as I'm concerned, the hospital is shut down," Hall said. "The board hasn't authorized anything." He said the handful of staff that remains will be gone by Saturday, except for a janitor and someone in the accounting office.

"We're trying to close this down without debt, but New's trying to salvage jobs," Hall said. "I guess this board will sit here with the building empty until a nursing home comes along and uses it as a facility."

New said the Saturday deadline for the staff to be out is premature, since the board has until March 14 to approve the prospective board. New said she has authority to retain as many staff members as are necessary, to close down the facility, so no one will be asked to leave until a decision has been reached.

New has submitted the names of Dana Turner, Randall Reid, Larry Miller, Marcellous Weaver, Jim Stewart and Jerry Worthy as prospective board members. "They have expressed an interest in making

Shotts resigns as city attorney

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — City Attorney Jean Shotts has announced he is resigning his position with the city.

Shotts made the announcement at Tuesday's council meeting, telling council members that he is leaving Big Spring for a job in Lubbock. The resignation becomes effective March 26.

Shotts, who has been city attorney since January 1988, said he will become a litigation attorney for the city of Lubbock. Shotts said he couldn't afford to turn down the position in Lubbock.

"They offered me a full-time position with their office," he said. The city has been able to afford only a part-time city attorney for several years.

Although Shotts has put in overtime, City Manager Hal Boyd said he's been paid only for 20 hours of work each week. Boyd said Shotts

Flag desecration

MIDLAND (AP) — Two Midland men may be the first people in Texas to be prosecuted under a recent state law against flag desecration, Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman says.

Dettman said Wednesday that charges of burglary and two counts of desecration of a venerated object were filed against Timothy Holt, 17, and Steven L. Pyles, 18. A third man is being sought, he said.

The desecration charges are a Class A misdemeanor, punishable by a maximum fine of $2,000 and a year in jail.

The U.S. Supreme Court in June 1989 ruled 5-4 that flag burning was protected by the U.S. Constitution.

The act of desecrating a U.S. or Texas flag became illegal in Texas last September after the Texas Legislature passed section 42.14 of the Texas Penal Code.

Dettman told the Midland Reporter-Telegram the charges on the Midland men were the first in the state under the new law.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's a constitutional law and we're going forward with that," he said. "Saying how this law would be reviewed by the U.S. Supreme Court would be pure conjecture on my part."

Detective Jim Sevey said all three were arrested Feb. 23 when an officer looked through an open doorway of an apartment in Midland and saw a collection of city street signs. The officer was investigating a disturbance at the complex, Sevey said.

After obtaining a search warrant, police entered the apartment, where the three men lived together, and found two U.S. and two Texas flags which had been desecrated, Sevey said.

Obscenities and heavy metal rock band symbols had been either painted or written on the flags, one of which was also burned, Sevey said. The street signs were found to be stolen, he said.

Measles control

DALLAS (AP) — Investigators from the national Centers for Disease Control will travel to Dallas to find ways of improving measles and other vaccinations for children here.

Dallas County health officials said the 3-month-old measles epidemic proves that too many children are not being immunized, the Dallas Times Herald reported Wednesday.

By Monday, 1,013 measles cases had been reported in the county; more than half were preschoolers and most of them hadn't been vaccinated, the newspaper said.

The county's chief epidemiologist has asked the CDC to include Dallas in a nationwide study to help find long-term solutions to prevent future epidemics.

Plane crash

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Two people died today when a light plane crashed just north of Grand Prairie Municipal Airport, authorities say.

A fire department spokesman says the two died when a single-engine Tomahawk plane crashed about 7:20 a.m. near the airport property.

"We are investigating a plane crash at the municipal airport. We do have two fatalities confirmed, both males," said police Sgt. Brad Geary.

He said no identifications have yet been released, and officials of the Tarrant County medical examiner's office were en route to the scene.

Firefighters and police were sent to the crash site on the north side of the west Dallas suburb's facility.

Williams blasted for not participating in debate

DALLAS (AP) — Two of the gubernatorial candidates who drew the most fire at a broadcast GOP debate Wednesday weren't even there, and one is a Democrat.

CLAYTON WILLIAMS, Republican front runner Clayton Williams, who bowed out of the last of three statewide debates because of other commitments, drew criticism from the candidates after the close of the contest Wednesday night.

The other gubernatorial candidate making news at the GOP debate was Democrat Ann Richards, for her refusal to answer "yes or no" to a question on whether she'd ever used illegal drugs.

This was the first debate that included so-called "minor candidates," although one of them, Ed Cude of Houston, also did not show. As they had been in the second debate, the Republicans were con-dial. But only minutes after the hopefuls concluded the hourlong session at Richland College, three of them blasted Williams for not attending.

Williams had indicated he would not participate because of a previous commitment. He made an appearance in Houston Wednesday night.

"It's unfortunate that Clayton Williams is not here," said Jack Rains. "I think it's pretty clear that as this campaign has heated up, he has become less accessible."

"That's not fair to the people of Texas and it's certainly not fair to the people of the Republican Party."

Tom Luce said Williams was playing "political games" with Texas voters.

"My definition of toughness is that you fight for your ideas. You show up and fight for your ideas," Luce said after the debate. "That's what you're going to have to do in Austin. I think it's the old politics, it's just the political games."

"It's kind of a sad deal tonight that he wasn't here," Hance said. "I think that what's happened throughout this campaign is they've tried to keep him somewhat sheltered — afraid that he might say something controversial."

"He hasn't been scrutinized by the press like I have. In a runoff... he will get those tough questions and I look forward to that."

The candidates said during the debate that Ms. Richards probably should have answered the question about illegal drug use.

Ms. Richards, who has said she has not had a mood-altering substance in 10 years, contends the question is irrelevant. She also has said that by answering the question she would discourage substance abusers from seeking treatment.

"I think it would be an issue, but I think the main issue with Ann Richards is her philosophy," Hance said.

Luce said the question is relevant because the governor should be a role model in the fight against illegal drug use in Texas. "Drug and alcohol abuse is a very serious issue in our state and that's why I think the question of drug use in your past is relevant."

Rains reiterated his call for "zero tolerance" on illegal drug use and said he was "disappointed" Ms. Richards was not answered the question.

Royce X. Owens, a janitor from Merkel said "the people of Texas are the ones that's going to decide it."

The Rev. W.N. Otwell said his problem with Ms. Richards was that she is a "feminist," "pro-choice" and "pro-abortion."

After the debate, Otwell issued a statement saying he would announce his withdrawal from the campaign this evening. He said he felt he had accomplished his goal by "exposing the root cause of our social, political and economical problems in Texas — namely, the breakdown of the family."

His closing statement was mostly devoted to that theme. He called for working women to return home if their spouses had jobs and denounced homosexuals as perverted.

The candidates all agreed that they support campaign reform — with some indicating that they preferred a cap on campaign spending.

Most of the Republicans said they were against hiring quotas but supported being sure that qualified minorities are represented in state government agencies and elective offices.

When asked whether English should be the official language of Texas, Rains said such a move sends a "insulting message" to Hispanics and other minorities. Luce said he envisions the day when school children in Texas would be proficient in two languages.

Rains said he did not think the State Insurance Board was "doing a really good job representing anybody, the insurance industry or the consumer."

But he added, "Of all the things that are facing this state... I just (do) not see no-fault insurance as one of the great pressing issues of '91."

The debates were sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Texas Education Fund and KDFW-TV. Democratic gubernatorial candidates will debate tonight.

COOPER — Marion Miller, left, and his father, Manton Miller, pose behind the soda fountain of their drug store in Cooper. Greyhound bus service to the community has been eliminated during the strike. Miller's Drug serves as the town's bus station. Before the strike, four buses a day passed through the town, located between Dallas and Texarkana.

Greyhound halts negotiations

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

The first talks between Greyhound Lines Inc. and its striking drivers ended with the bus company saying it sees no point in further negotiations.

The operator of America's only nationwide bus system said Wednesday that talks "would not be fruitful at this time, given the present attitude" of the union.

Meantime, two Greyhound buses were seized at the U.S.-Canadian border near Plattsburgh, N.Y., after they were found to be illegally transporting Canadian security guards hired by the company, an immigration spokesman said.

Greyhound failed to get the special permission needed for Canadian citizens to enter the United States to work as security guards, said Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman Duke Austin.

When the first buses arrived at the border, officials discovered two passengers were employed by Greyhound as guards, Austin said. The individuals and the two buses in which they were riding were seized, he said.

It was not immediately known whether any charges were filed against the bus line or the Canadians.

A Greyhound representative in Dallas said the buses would be held overnight at the border. "The buses are still there but we're going to get them back," said Dana Neal.

Some 6,300 bus drivers and 3,000 maintenance and office workers walked off the job Friday after talks broke down over a new three-year contract.

The company has been operating at reduced levels, using about 700 replacement drivers plus union members who crossed picket lines. The company says about 350 union drivers are at work; the union says 95 returned.

"The cause of this strike is singular," union spokesman Jeffrey Nelson said after Wednesday's talks. "The company has refused to negotiate with the union that represents its 9,000 employees in good faith."

In other developments Wednesday:

— Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and 10 other senators asked Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole to intervene as she did in last year's Pittston coal strike by appointing a "supermediator." A spokeswoman for Mrs. Dole said she had no such plans because the dispute is still under the normal mediation process.

— In Richmond, Va., David W. Batchelor, president of Greyhound's Eastern division, reiterated the company's position that the replacement drivers are permanent hires.

Poll: Texans pro-choice

AUSTIN (AP) — A majority of Texans believe that abortion is a private issue the Legislature spends too much time discussing, according to a poll commissioned by the Texas Abortion Rights Action League.

Seventy-five percent of Texans believe abortion is a private issue, according to results of the poll, which was conducted by Washington, D.C. pollsters Greenberg-Lake: The Analysis Group Inc.

"What's new about this is that Texas polls very differently than other parts of the country," said Phyllis Dunham, TARAL's executive director. "Texas is 4-to-1 pro-choice, while other states are 3-to-1."

The poll showed that two-thirds of respondents believe when government restricts access to abortion, it interferes with a private decision.

A plurality of those responding — 41 percent — said they believe the state legislature spends too much time on the abortion issue. Eighteen percent said they believe it spends too little time and 24 percent say the time spent is about right.

Pollster Celinda Lake said 74 percent of respondents agree that programs to provide education and family planning would more effectively limit abortions than further restrictions.

This result shows that, "Voters believe that the Legislature's time would be better spent on prevention," she said.

Thirty-six percent of respondents agreed that the Legislature should decide under what circumstances, if any, abortion should be legal, while 58 percent of the respondents disagreed and 6 percent were undecided.

Lake said the results of her poll could be significant in Texas' upcoming gubernatorial elections.

"A pro-choice candidate, for either party, gains a slim lead — 4 percent — over a right-to-life candidate who opposes abortion except to save the life of a mother," Ms. Lake said.

She also said up to one-third of young, working and college-educated women, along with the same proportion of urban dwellers and people who live in households with a combined income of more than $50,000, said they would switch parties to vote pro-choice in a general election.

Forty-six percent of the voters say they would probably not vote for a candidate for the state legislature who disagreed with them on abortion.

More than half — 57 percent — of respondents agreed with the statement, "Pro-life stance imposes religious beliefs on everyone," while 68 percent agreed that "Women will die from unsafe abortions if it is illegal."

Sixty-five percent agreed that "People should follow their own convictions on abortion," while 28 percent disagreed.

The poll surveyed a statewide sample of 800 people who voted in the last two general elections, categorizing them as "likely general election voters," and is accurate within plus or minus 3.5 percent.

Tax pressure building

Texas legislators should dust off their report from the 1987-88 Select Committee on Tax Equity and bone up quickly on new-tax possibilities.

It appears they will have to find some more revenue in special session this month or next, plus a whole lot more in 1991. A tax bill of $600 million to $1 billion will probably be needed now, and $3 billion or more next year.

Meanwhile, Gov. Bill Clements should get off his no-new-taxes political high horse. He should drop his veto threat and let the Legislature pass whatever small tax increase is needed this year to satisfy the court order for enactment of a new school-financing system by May 1, and to take care of the other urgent revenue-deficiency problems.

Court right to uphold TEDs

Shrimpers have suffered another setback: U.S. District Judge Hayden W. Head Jr. refused to block enforcement of federal regulations requiring the use of controversial turtle-excluder devices, which the shrimpers say will deprive them of their livelihood.

This battle has been going on for months, with conservationists pushing for TEDs requirements and shrimpers just as vehemently resisting. What it all boils down to is the question of whether the shrimpers' wishes should take priority over the cause of preserving endangered forms of wildlife — in this instance, sea turtles which can be scooped up and asphyxiated in shrimp nets which are not equipped with TEDs.

On this planet, up to now, mankind has had things pretty much its own way. Approaching the year 2000, however, humanity is bumping up against some limits: Witness the continuing concern over the greenhouse effect, global warming, air and water pollution, and so on.

Not the least of the issues which the people — and governments — of the world must confront is that of just what humanity owes to the other species with which it shares the planet.

In the end the greater concern, that of striving to preserve the earth in somewhat the same condition in which man found it, must take precedence. The TEDs regulations should remain in force.

Bush policy skewed

While other captive nations around the world grope toward freedom, China tightens its totalitarian grip. The situation has steadily worsened since the massacre in Tiananmen Square last June, despite the Bush administration's misguided attempt to coddle the Beijing regime.

The rationale for the administration's policy was seriously undercut recently by its own State Department, which made public an authoritative review of human rights in China during 1989.

Workers are routinely screened for ideological correctness. Following the Tiananmen massacre, the entire freshman class of Beijing University was packed off to an isolated camp for a year of political indoctrination.

China has fallen under a Stalinist shroud the likes of which the world has not seen for a decade. But administration spokesmen refrain from criticizing China despite pleas from congressional conservatives and liberals. They accuse the president, who once served as envoy to China, of thinking of the country as a "client state."

The foreign policy successes of the 1980s should have taught us the value of tough rhetoric. China is overdue for a goodly dose of it — not only for the sake of future U.S.-China relations, but of the Chinese people as well.

San Antonio Express-News

State should back off

The controversy surrounding the proposed low-level radioactive waste dump near Fort Hancock has taken on two new and interesting twists.

Roberto Gamboa Mascarenas, the Mexican consul general in El Paso, has asked his government to review the case.

Also, the authority has drastically revised its plans for storing the radioactive waste.

Initially, some waste was to be stored underground in large, concrete bunkers. Now, apparently in response to El Paso County data showing that the site is in an earthquake-prone area, the storage philosophy has been radically altered to using individual concrete containers buried in trenches.

These are two more strikes against an environmental disaster waiting to happen.

We've said it before and we'll say it again: The state of Texas, in a desperate and completely political move, wants the dump at Fort Hancock. Texas is under a federal deadline to get a dump in place, and Fort Hancock (Texas thought) would give the least political fallout.

But in point of fact, the proposed dump poses too many dangers to the environment.

The state should cut its losses, back out of the Fort Hancock site, and look elsewhere.

I was glued to the set when Tom Brokaw did his "A Day in the Life of the White House" for NBC. I knew that it would be a tough show on Bush, but I wasn't prepared for so many surprises. First, the TV audience was given an exclusive look at the Bushes' pet dog, Millie, that has never been seen on television before.

In addition, we saw the president's "brain trust" calmly, and with dignity, carrying on the nation's business. We found out that President Bush not only likes children, but also the San Francisco '49ers.

It would have been a perfect, reassuring documentary as to how well the White House works — except for one glitch. At the beginning of the show we saw one of the president's men place a call to Gorbachev in Moscow. But at the end of NBC's day — it never came through. The NBC producer, Tim Russert, told Tom Shales, the Washington Post television critic, that White House telephone calls to Gorbachev normally take a day to complete.

"Holy perestroika," I said to no one in particular. "What kind of world are we living in when a missile can make it to Moscow in 20 minutes, and President Bush needs 25 hours to get a telephone call through to Gorbachev?"

I spoke to a top communications man at McDonald's to find out why it takes so long for the White House to make contact with the Kremlin.

He told me, "Well, to begin with, there are no telephone books in the Soviet Union. So when the president asks the operator to raise Gorbachev on the phone, she has to call information in Moscow. In the past there was no trouble getting the number, but because he is getting so many obscene calls from Lithuania, Gorbachev now has an unlisted number."

"Wouldn't the CIA have it?" "Yes, but unfortunately the CIA has an unlisted number too."

"It seems to me that Gorbachev would want instant contact with the U.S. and vice versa. These days a lot can happen globally in a short period of time."

"Everyone is aware of this, and there have been efforts to speed up the calls. The problems aren't mechanical. They are more related to protocol. President Bush's secretary will not allow him to pick up the phone until Gorbachev gets on first. Gorbachev's secretary refuses to let Gorby pick up the phone until Bush gets on first. It's impossible to put both men on the phone at the same time."

"That's the kind of stuff Brokaw should have told us," I said. My McDonald's man explained, "The other problem is that every time Bush calls, he is informed that Gorbachev is in a meeting. Every time Gorby rings Bush, he's told the same thing. It's very hard to catch two superpower leaders when they're not in a meeting."

"Maybe we should present Gorbachev with a cellular phone as a gift, and he can call Bush from his car. Even world leaders like to telephone from their automobiles," I said.

"On paper it sounds like a good idea. The truth is that Gorby's advisers are deathly afraid we would catch him in his car when he's least prepared for arms reductions."

"The biggest obstacle we have had to deal with lately is that, in its last economy drive, the Kremlin fired its night telephone operator and replaced her with an answering machine. We can only leave 30-second messages on it, so President Bush is not able to get much business done. For example, Mr. Bush cannot say on the machine, 'Mr. Gorbachev, because of a navigational accident, there are 500 B-2 bombers flying in your direction. Please ignore them. Their real targets are the Mediterranean fruit flies in Pasadena.'"

"Is there any effort being made to patch up the communications rift between the two countries?"

"The only hope we have is if each leader buys a stealth beeper."

Democrats avoiding early start

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — By Republican calculation, any Democrat who wants to challenge President Bush for the White House in 1992 should be at work by now, piling up primary campaign money at a rate of about $250,000 a week.

None is, and a GOP strategist claims that just about concedes Bush a second term.

Ed Rollins acknowledges his is a partisan analysis. It is a wishful one, too, with the next presidential election more than 30 months away. As Bush has said, popularity ratings that soar — as they have in his case — also can plummet.

Nevertheless, political circumstances may do what political reformers long have advocated, and abbreviate the campaign for the White House. The standard campaign plan has been based on an early, usually undeclared start by a presidential candidate, especially one running against an incumbent president.

It isn't happening this time. The prospective challengers all have other things to do. In the last two elections in which incumbents were unseated, the winners, Democrat Jimmy Carter and, four years later, Republican Ronald Reagan were full-time campaigners, former governors without other duties.

With the public opinion polls putting Bush at record approval ratings, running against him doesn't look like an inviting assignment at this point. That may change; the law of political gravity will pull the poll ratings down eventually. But if Bush can go into his next campaign at anything even approaching his current standing, the odds will be long against his challenger.

So a waiting game makes sense for Democrats, especially those with the ambition to run but the option of waiting until 1996 to do it. And that means most of them.

There's also an increased demand for pre-season fundraising in 1992, with costly California in the process of moving its primary election from the end of the schedule to near the beginning. That means assigning the biggest single bloc of nominating votes in March instead of June.

It will send Democratic contestants into the most expensive of primary campaigns in a state in which Jesse Jackson gained 35 percent of the Democratic primary vote in 1988. Jackson has just announced that he won't run for mayor of Washington, which probably means that he will run a third time for the Democratic nomination.

The new calendar works in his favor. The leadoff states, Iowa and New Hampshire, are not his territory — his 1988 percentages there were in single digits. But California would quickly eclipse them, and the southern Super Tuesday primaries follow that.

That raises the prospect that the Democratic nominee would have to get around a strengthened

Jackson, trying not to alienate his black and liberal constituency and struggling to stay near enough to the political center to have a chance against an incumbent Republican.

Rollins, co-chairman and operational chief of the Republican congressional campaign committee, said "we expect at this point for George Bush to have a tremendous victory."

"Democrats are almost conceding," Rollins told the National Association of Home Builders. The Democrats, of course, say they are doing no such thing.

Rollins, who managed Reagan's 1984 re-election campaign, said that for the first time in years there are no serious candidates for president working to round up the people and the money for a campaign.

"If you're not off and running four years in advance, you won't have the resources to be a viable candidate for the presidency," he said. "And now that they've moved California up front... think in terms of the cost."

Rollins said a candidate would have to have $2 million to $3 million committed in advance to be a serious contender in the California primary. And that's only the beginning.

"Which means if you start right today, you have to raise about $250,000 a week, every week," Rollins said. "So any of you who are interested in running for president, get started."

At least the slow start will put conventional wisdom to the test, breaking what has become a pattern of almost permanent presidential campaigns.

tax money. It all comes from the pocket of the creature called "The Tax Payer." That should include all, not just a designated few.

Taxes should be shared by all

To the editor:

It seems some members of our City Council have done everything they could think of to oust our duly elected city mayor (Max Green) simply because he opposed their liberal tax ideas.

During his campaign for that office he made it very clear that he opposed any increase in the tax foundation, except for an increase in the sales tax. Mr. Green, repeatedly, expressed his views on this issue and still he was elected by a large majority of those who turned out to vote. His goal has not changed except for a slight increase (1/2 percent) in the sales tax.

Just what do these opposing councilmembers want? Are they afraid their pet projects will not be funded? Perhaps they don't know where tax money comes from, or they don't care so long as their very vocal constituents don't feel the bite. There is only one source of

I know there are many forms of taxes, and different rates of taxes. However, it all boils down to the simple fact that people pay taxes, and they should be levied in such a way that all pay their fair share. Never should one group be singled out to bear the brunt of the taxation load for the benefit of the freeloaders.

Read history and you will see that great nations have crumbled and fell into ruin because the taxing authorities singled out a certain group to bear the burden of taxation for the benefit of the freeloaders. Our nation was settled by people who were trying to get away from the burden of selective group taxation.

Yes, I realize that taxes are necessary for the conducting of government business. However, excessive taxes on any one group can, and will, break down the national fiber of the people and the nation will fall into oblivion and become history. Our nation is approaching that status now because of the liberal uncontrolled spending by those in power.

Health proposal draws criticism

By JOHN KIMELMAN
Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A sharply divided health care commission recommended an ambitious plan last week to provide health insurance and long-term care for all Americans who need it.

The 15-member U.S. Bipartisan Commission on Comprehensive Health Care approved the universal health insurance portion of the plan by an 8-7 vote and the long-term health care portion by a 11-4 vote.

But the two-part plan, put forward by Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., the chairman of the commission, drew immediate criticism for its failure to come up with a method of paying for the federal share of the program.

Members of Congress also assailed any health plan that would cost American tax payers an estimated $66.2 billion a year. They contended that the Bush administration would veto legislation that proposed raising taxes to fund health insurance and long-term care for the needy.

"Without a way to pay for it, it's a non-starter," said Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., vice chairman of the 15-member Bipartisan Commission on Comprehensive Health Care.

But Rockefeller argued that the pressing need for a method of insuring the nation's 31 million uninsured citizens would compel Congress to find additional revenue to pay for it.

"You have a medical emergency out there," Rockefeller said.

Rockefeller said that the commission put off debating the issue of taxes because "we could have spent 500 years on the financing."

He said that the tax-writing committees of Congress would be entrusted with coming up with a tax scheme.

Beer recipe dated 1800 B.C.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The recipe was part of a Sumerian hymn to the goddess Ninkasi, written in cuneiform on a clay tablet that dates back to 1800 B.C. It calls for ingredients you might not think of, but it makes a smooth, mild beer — with a little fruity taste.

"It's very good," Professor Solomon Katz of the University of Pennsylvania said as he opened a bottle. "They used dates to make it taste that way."

The bottle's label had cuneiform characters calling Ninkasi, the goddess of beer, "the lady who fills the vessel with beer." The label also showed one of the earliest known tablets, showing two men using straws to sip beer from a narrow-necked jar.

The beer was the culmination of two years of research by Katz and Fritz Maytag, owner of San Francisco-based Anchor Brewing Co.

They sampled some of the last bottles of the beer last week in Philadelphia. They had brewed about 100 barrels in August, but said they were forced to use it up quickly since it contained no preservatives.

"The Sumerians didn't use hops, which help to keep beer from going sour," Maytag said in a telephone interview from San Francisco.

Modern beer makers usually use malted, or sprouted, grain, but the Sumerians used baked bread, which adds to the mild taste, Katz said.

"They did that because the bread was almost magical to them," Katz said. "You could eat it for dinner or you could brew with it."

The cuneiform tablet, originally translated in 1964, records a brewing process interspersed with praises to the goddess.

Life can be hard for children of presidents

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unusual study of presidents' children concludes that having a father in the White House brings "more problems than opportunity."

"Almost any enterprise is criticized," says the report on "All the Presidents' Children" commissioned by George Bush's eldest son, George W. Bush, while his father was still president-elect.

Douglas Wead reviewed the lives of presidential offspring from John Adams to Ronald Reagan and concluded that history "should be a sobering warning to any new arrivals" at the White House.

"Being related to a president may bring more problems than opportunity," Wead cautioned in his 44-page treatise, excerpts from which appear in the latest issue of U.S. News & World Report.

"If (an enterprise is) successful, it's assumed that it is because of the relationship. If not, the public assumes the son or daughter is lazy or incompetent," Wead reported.

Wead "found a consistent pattern of trouble for the sons and daughters of presidents," the magazine reported.

"There were higher-than-average rates of divorce, alcoholism and accidental death; a wide variety of scandals over real or perceived conflicts of interest, and constant frustration over lack of independence."

Some presidential offspring became prominent in their own right: John Quincy Adams became president himself, and Theodore Roosevelt's four sons were war heroes.

Others met tragedy during their father's term: Calvin Coolidge Jr. died of blood poisoning after a freak accident on the White House tennis court; Abraham Lincoln's son, Willie, died of pneumonia in his father's arms.

Calls about son's crime are insulting

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of 10 lovely (all wanted) children, all by one father, and we've been married almost 24 years. We have never been on welfare. My husband works, and I work in home day-care. Our 20-year-old moved out, fell in with an immature crowd and stole some beer. (He was waiting in the car — he didn't go in.) He was charged with theft, but because this was his first offense, he had to pay a fine and do 100 hours of community service.

His "crime" was reported in the newspaper. As soon as the newspapers were out, I had half a dozen calls from people I hardly knew saying they had seen my son's name in the paper. How terrible!

Why do people do this? We were hurt and embarrassed over the whole thing, and didn't need these phone calls to pour salt on our wounds. Also, many of my husband's co-workers brought it up at work; he carried a heavy heart for weeks.

Abby, I have had enough insults about having 10 children. They are all good kids — one is in college and the 12th-grader is an "A" student, but nobody calls to say, "Isn't that nice?"

Why are people so mean? And how can we answer them?

Thanks for listening. I feel better already. — MOTHER OF 10

DEAR MOTHER: Only the most insensitive and mean-spirited person would call, as these people did. Should anyone else bring it up, say, "He made a mistake, but he's our son and we love him. We appreciate your interest and concern, but be assured, his family is behind him 200 percent."

DEAR ABBY: I quote a paragraph from your column: "The heart of education is in our literature, so read for knowledge and read for pleasure. The person who does not read is no better off than the person who cannot read." The importance of reading has never been more succinctly expressed. I am inclined to think it's an Abby original. In all my 82 years, I have never seen it. Abby, those words should be posted in large type in every classroom, library and recreation center where people of all ages gather.

It would also make a fine slogan for our nation's effort to combat illiteracy. — MRS. MILLICENT ANDERSON, MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR MRS. ANDERSON: It's original, and I am complimented. And to anyone who wants to use it — help yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have been living together for early two years. Randy is 25. I am 23. He had given me a diamond ring (one carat), which I recently quit wearing because I wasn't sure where our relationship was going. Also, too many people kept asking me when we were getting married, and I couldn't handle it. When Randy gave me the ring, he said we would be getting married "in about a year," but I never could get him to set a date.

Abby, in order to plan a wedding, a bride needs at least three months' notice, right? Well, I never was able to get Randy to tell me which month — let alone which day. That's when I quit wearing his ring. Do you blame me?

I just discovered that the ring was missing. (I kept it hidden in the bathroom.) I asked Randy if he had taken it, and he said yes — since I wasn't wearing it, he just took it back.

Abby, I feel robbed — not so much in a material way; it's more like an emotional loss. What do you think? I need advice. — ROBBED

DEAR ROBBED: I think you and Randy never had a meeting of minds. You became engaged to be married, and he became engaged to be engaged. He is clearly not ready for marriage — at least not to you — so my advice is to quit living together. After you put some distance between yourselves, you will be able to think more clearly.

He should not have taken the ring; he should have asked you to return it, since you were no longer wearing it. And since the ring was an "engagement ring" only in your eyes — but not in his — you should have had the opportunity to return it.

People are eating them up! To order your copy of Abby's favorite recipes, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Students give teacher a handprinted reminder

Most parents and grandparents of young children seem to spend a lot of their time wiping off sticky, dirty, smudged handprints the little rascals seem to place everywhere. Yet one kindergarten teacher at Coahoma has a copy of all her students handprints that will be with her for a very long time, and the kind that one wouldn't dream of wiping off.

Ms. Sealy received a very special valentine at a recent Valentine's Day party — a quilt with all of her students handprints and names on it to remind her of her 1989-90 kindergarten class. All of the parents pitched a few dollars in and had the quilt made secretly. The kids enjoyed being able to put a "part of them" in the quilt.

Open house

Coahoma schools will host an open house tonight from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Parents are urged to attend and see the progress the students have made and meet with teachers.

The Variety Show is set to begin at 8 p.m. in the Coahoma High School auditorium.

Pancake supper

The Coahoma Lions Club will host its annual pancake supper tonight from 5:30-7:30 p.m. at the elementary cafeteria. Tickets are $3.50 per person and preschoolers can eat for free.

The timing couldn't be better. Mom can have a night out of the kitchen and there's plenty of time to catch the open house and show.

Spring break

If you read last week's column article about spring break you may have noticed a slight error in the dates. Spring break begins Friday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. Class will resume March 19.

Lorraine Sealy shows off her quilt that was handprinted by her kindergarten class.

Student of the Week. Erin is a kindergartener in Mrs. Meek's class. Congratulations Erin!

New correspondent

As of next week, Clara Justice will be the new Coahoma Correspondent. Most everyone in the community knows Clara and she is real excited about this new venture. Clara has written poems, short stories and even song lyrics. She began writing when she was seven years old and had her first poem published at age nine in Waverly, Ohio's high school annual. When Clara was in France in 1962 she had several pieces published in the Overseas Stars and Stripes. In 1986, she won 1st, 2nd and 3rd place in the Howard College Thistles publication. She placed first in all three places in 1987 and in 1988.

In 1986, Clara's first book was published and was a total sell-out. The book, Life Is, is an anthology of poems Clara has written about various subjects and life experiences. Clara hopes to publish her latest work, Reflections in the near future.

Clara received her associate of applied science degree from Howard College and was the only student with an A in the photography class she attended at Howard.

Clara is well-qualified for the correspondent position and will be an asset to the news reporting for the Coahoma area.

I have enjoyed being correspondent for the community and have met several good people and made some real good friends while serving as correspondent and will miss writing the column. Being an elementary education major, I will graduate from Howard College in May and will be commuting to UTPB and it will be difficult to give the community the coverage it deserves.

Sign up

March 19 is the date for signing up for UGSA softball and Little League. The sign up will be held at the community center at 7 p.m. for both leagues. Boys must be 6 years old by August 1 to participate, girls, 7. If you cannot attend the sign-up, application forms are available at Roberts Auto or at the school. Tryouts for girls is March 31 at 1 p.m. at the field.

Student nurses enjoy special program

BIG SPRING — Learning to help healthy people stay healthy is the focus of a special training program by the Licensed Vocational Nursing program at Howard College.

"LVN students were paired with residents of St. Mary's Episcopal Retirement Homes (Canterbury) over the course of several months," reported Roama Harris, director of the LVN program.

"LVN students worked with the retirement center residents not only to assess their health and nutrition needs but also to learn such things as how the residents are adjusting to the aging process, how their lives are changing as they get older, and how they are adjusting to life in the retirement center.

"I thoroughly enjoyed meeting Pauline," said LVN student Donna Ashly, who was paired with Pauline Barrington for the special program. "I don't think the people of this community realize the resources that are available with these people at the center."

"I think the program is just wonderful," added Pauline. "It was a pleasure for me to have her in my home. I always enjoy getting to visit with people."

Vada May and student Candy Arnold also had a chance to work with each other. Vada, a nurse before retirement knows how important a nurse's work is. "Where would we be without our nurses," adds Vada. "There are a big part of the health care."

LVN student Arnold said, "The elderly do have so much to offer us about the past and the program gave me the opportunity to take the time to listen."

Harris said the program was designed to give the students a chance to work with elderly who

Orchestra sounds the right notes

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra played a lovely concert for a sparse but enthusiastic audience Feb. 22 at the Municipal Auditorium.

The 35-member orchestra, under the baton of music director John Giordano, performed a mixed program of light classical music by Copland, Vivaldi, Haydn, Beethoven and Albanez.

The evening got off to a boisterous start with Copland's "Three Latin American Sketches," which consists of three movements: "Estrabillo," "Paisaje Mexicano," and "Danza de Jalisco."

The orchestra did a fine job with the work, proving Giordano's mastery of 20th century music.

"Estrabillo" is a rather cacophonous piece based on a popular Venezuelan song. It sounds similar to Copland's "El Salon Mexico." The percussionist used the claves, wood block, conga drum and ratchet to capture its Latin syncopation, while strident strings defined the melody.

"Paisaje Mexicano" seemed to appeal to the audience more than the first movement did, probably because it sounds more like the beloved Copland we know. It is a pastoral melody with a single mournful trumpet voice.

The final movement, "Danza de Jalisco," really hyped the crowd. Had it been a less formal concert, audience members would've been up on their feet dancing to the infectious rhythms of plucked strings and folk harmonies.

Vivaldi's "Concerto for Piccolo in C" provided a change in time periods but not in spirit. Soloist Karen Adrian made the piece sound easy as her piccolo leaped and trilled in long, complex solo passages.

The finale concludes with colorful fanfares. The trumpet's braggadocio anticipates Bourbon Street and mariachi melodies.

Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2 in D" followed a short intermission. It is a beautiful piece of music but the orchestra seemed less passionate about it than other works on the program. The violins were consistently shrill and dragged in places.

The symphony opens regally and establishes a relentless militaristic theme before settling down into a sweetly lyrical larghetto in sonata form. The middle movements are whimsical and happy, while the last movement begins with a musical sneeze. The piece is quirky and a bit tedious, but it is Beethoven and the orchestra played it well. The violins even grew less distracting as the symphony progressed.

The audience wouldn't let the orchestra leave until Giordano led the group in a rare encore. They played the highly colorful Albanez sonata beautifully. It nicely complemented the Latin mood of the Copland that opened the evening.

After the intermission, Ricky Mitchell, vice president of the Big Spring Symphony Association, honored the Dora Roberts Foundation, Dorothy Garrett and the Partee family for helping finance the Municipal Auditorium's renovation.

The turquoise-teal curtains and trim and the elaborate detailing of the hall's woodwork and tile have given the place a real facelift. It now has a post-modern medieval look that suits classical music, as do the hall's acoustics.

Q. Why is saffron so expensive?
A. Saffron comes from dried autumn crocuses. It takes 4,000 flowers to yield one ounce of saffron — hence its high price, according to information from North American Precis Syndicate.

Final approval given for recall election

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — The City Council approved the final reading of an ordinance setting a recall election for Mayor Max Green on Saturday, March 24.

The council met briefly on Wednesday afternoon to consider the second reading of the ordinance. It passed on a 4-2 vote, with Councilmen Sidney Clark and D.D. Johnston voting against the measure. Green did not attend the meeting. The first reading passed on a similar vote during the council's regular meeting on Tuesday.

Clark and Johnston have said they object to holding the election on a weekend. Clark almost voted for the ordinance because only five council members were present and the measure needed the approval of four to pass. However, Councilwoman Gail Earls got to the meeting in time to provide the fourth vote of approval.

"I would have voted for the measure if that's what it would have taken to do it," Clark told the council. "I'm in favor of the recall (election). It was my intent to vote against this just because of the date."

City residents who registered to vote by Feb. 23 are eligible to cast their ballots in the March 24 recall election. Voting will take place at two polling places in each of the city's three districts: District 1, Kindergarten Center or Northside Fire Station; District 2, Kentwood

Elementary School or Dorothy Garrett Coliseum; District 3, 18th and Main Fire Station or the Wasson Road Fire Station.

The polls will open on Saturday at 7 a.m. and will close at 7 p.m., according to the city secretary's office.

Absentee voting will begin on March 12 at the city secretary's office in city hall. Ballots can be cast Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. March 12-20.

City Attorney Jean Shotts said the election probably would be held even if a suit is filed to challenge the validity of it.

"The only person who could even possibly stop it would be a district judge," Shotts said. "Courts generally do not interfere in an election as a whole. Now, they will rule on the validity of an election after it's held."

Green has maintained that under the city charter, the mayor cannot be recalled. He has hinted that he is consulting with attorneys to determine if a court determination of the election's validity is advisable.

ing the hospital viable and giving Big Spring a choice in medical care," she said.

The petition to reopen the hospital collected more than 2,500 signatures, proof that the community is interested in reviving Hall-Bennett, New said.

"We've also had numerous merchants who have expressed interest in the yard area and indoors where they could donate services to upgrade the facilities and individuals have volunteered their time to clean up and paint," she said.

New has no estimate of the total cost of updating the hospital, but said it should be done in stages.

"What we're thinking of is doing parts of it and making it an ongoing project. It's going to be a long hard job. We hope it will be worth everybody's efforts," New said.

She said a fund-raising committee meeting will be held in the clinic waiting room at 5:15 tonight.

Shotts said it will be difficult to leave even though he will be accepting a good position in Lubbock.

did receive some overtime compensation recently because of the workload caused by the mayoral recall election.

Boyd also noted that the city will immediately begin searching for a new part-time attorney. The position pays $27,500 annually.

Shotts, who grew up in West Texas, said he and his family will be sorry to leave Big Spring and their friends.

"I had to go where I could make a living," he said. "I love this area, I've enjoyed living here and one of my major motivations for becoming city attorney here is I wanted to improve the city."

Shotts said rumors that he is leaving because of problems caused by the March 24 mayoral recall election are untrue.

"There's been a rumor going around... one, that I signed the petition; two, that I don't care company" that it was released. Cable rival Big Spring Cable was responsible for the information's leak to the press after police and federal authorities agreed not to release any press statements, the news release said.

The news release also said that the company has a strict policy against satellite piracy.

"I was embarrassing that Star Com's ethics would be questioned and our privacy violated by local and federal authorities but we are satisfied that we are doing everything possible to obey the many laws that business people are harassed with today," the news release said.

The value of the chips is relatively minor, but the government's raid on the business hurt the credibility of the Big Spring-based company, said C.L. Carlile, owner of the business. "It's a small portion (of chips). The money is not the significant thing. Damage to the reputation of the company is what is significant," Carlile said.

All of the chips were returned Tuesday and FBI agent M.W. Morris told Star Com officials that all the chips had not been altered, according to the news release.

Asked why federal agents had chosen to suspect Star Com of illegalities, Carlile replied, "He (Morris) didn't give me any explanations." No explanation was given why it took federal agents months before they returned the chips either, he said.

"He indicated that no other investigation was in progress on this issue," the news release said. "Star Com had not heard from the FBI since the chips were taken, but was not surprised that every chip was legal. Star Com is one of the largest electronic distributors in the U.S. with seven offices located throughout Texas and Oklahoma."

Carlile said the publicity carried by the newspaper and radio after the search by authorities is "harmful for industry (and) harmful for

Horror story began a year ago with Mark Kilroy's disappearance

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — A friend of Mark Kilroy, who was abducted and slain at a "human slaughterhouse" during the height of last year's spring break, is urging students to be careful while celebrating this year.

"I feel like I owe it to Mark to get the message out to everyone, especially college students, how important it is to have a safe spring break," said Bill Huddleston, who was partying with Kilroy the night of his abduction.

Kilroy's parents, meanwhile, say some good has come from the ritual slaying of their 21-year-old son: greater awareness of the evils of drugs they blame for his death.

The University of Texas student dropped out of sight about 2 a.m. on March 14, 1989, while out bar-hopping with three friends in the border city. After a month-long search, his mutilated corpse was found buried at a ranch west of Matamoros.

Fourteen other victims also were unearthed there and at a nearby farm. A drug-smuggling cult allegedly performed the ritual slayings seeking magical protection from the law and rival smugglers.

Huddleston, a Texas A&M junior who accompanied Kilroy to Matamoros, called a press conference Wednesday to urge vacationing college students to be careful on spring break this year.

"This means that everyone should use good judgement when making decisions and keep in mind that a bad thing can happen to anyone, even the best of us," Huddleston said.

Huddleston, believed to be the last person to see Kilroy before the abduction, said he would spend this year's spring break snow-skiing in New Mexico.

His advice to others: "People that are going to drink, to make their decisions before they drink. To stay in groups. When they get separated, to check up on one another periodically."

Alex Perez, sheriff of Cameron County in Brownsville just across the Rio Grande, described the scene of Kilroy's murder as a "human slaughterhouse," the most gruesome crime he has investigated in 14 years of law enforcement.

The case still haunts him, he said.

"In my life, I've seen a lot of it, but this was the one that got me not to sleeping at night," he said.

Huddleston, too, wonders about the people who killed his friend.

"There's not really much I would, you know, I could say other than asking them why, why they did it. I mean how do they feel about it now?" he said.

Mexican officials have started a voluntary sign-in program for spring breakers, as a means of keeping track of who's there, said Antonio Licona Lopez, immigration director for the Mexican government in Matamoros, 25 miles south of here.

"I think it's a great idea," Huddleston said. "I think students should do that, because in case something does happen, people will know that they were over there..."

Several books on the Matamoros case have been rushed to the market over the past year, including one with the title "Hell Ranch."

Kilroy's parents said they haven't read them.

"From what people have told us, it was strictly to sensationalize what happened there rather than for people to see that from such an evil thing that a lot of good has come out, come from that," said Mark's mother, Helen.

She and Mark's father, James, are writing their own book about Mark's slaying.

"In our book we intend to tell the true story, and exactly what all went on, how we felt about it all," said James Kilroy.

The Kilroys, who live in Santa Fe, Texas, near Houston, have waged their own war on drugs through speaking engagements and their anti-drug Mark Kilroy Foundation.

The slayings make up case No. 89-110 in the Fourth State District Court in Matamoros. Judge Francisco Salvador Perez has the task of sorting through the evidence and pronouncing verdicts on the seven accused.

Perez said he could not say when verdicts might be reached.

"We are trying to move the case along as fast as we can, but it is being slowed by the fact that two of the suspects are jailed in Mexico City," he said. "That slows the paper work."

He said the defendants still have the opportunity to prove themselves innocent, but added that there is "a great quantity of evidence. In this case, it is considered that they are presumed responsible, in accordance with Mexican law."

Judge Perez said the greatest punishment any single defendant in the case could receive would be 40 years, the penalty for homicide, the worst crime alleged.

Five men arrested last April in the case remain jailed in Matamoros, awaiting verdicts.

Former Big Spring Lady Steers volleyball player Dorothy Viasana has pulled in another honor.

Texas had three national champions — 106-pounder John Herrera of Corpus Christi, heavyweight Javier Alvarez of San Antonio and super heavyweight Edward Escovedo of McKinney.

Odesa's Martin Baldwin, a welterweight, was defeated in the opening match by Steve Johnson of Denver.

Lady Hawks fall short, 48-45

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

SNYDER — The Howard College Lady Hawks and South Plains Lady Texans split in four meetings this season. But it was the Lady Texans that won when it counted the most, defeating Howard 48-45 in the Region V semifinals at Scurry County Coliseum Wednesday night.

The win puts South Plains in the finals against Odessa, a 79-76 winner over Frank Phillips. The two teams battle at 7 p.m.

Playing without freshman guard Kim Robinson, the Lady Hawks put up a gallant fight against South Plains. Robinson twisted her knee in Howard's win over McLennan Tuesday night. But on this night, South Plains' constant pressure on the basketball, and Howard's poor free throw shooting would prove to be the just enough for South Plains to get over the hump.

South Plains constantly put pressure on whoever was Howard's ball handler bringing the ball downcourt. The result — 19 Howard turnovers, 13 coming in the first half.

Playing their aggressive style of defense, South Plains did commit more fouls than Howard. Whereas South Plains went to the line only four times all night (making three), Howard was 10 of 20 from the foul line.

Both coaches agreed that the missing Robinson was a factor in the game.

"Anytime you lose your leading scorer and rebounder, you've got to try a few different things. We didn't accomplish that tonight," said Howard coach Royce Chadwick. "We didn't play very well, but I don't think South Plains played very well either. It was a very good game for the fans."

"Defensively both teams played well, offensively neither team executed. They started standing around on offense and we did it."

"I know Howard was missing something without Kim Robinson out there, and I hated to see her out of the game under those circumstances," said South Region V Tournament at Scurry County Coliseum. South Plains advanced to the finals, downing Howard 48-45.

Plains coach Lyndon Hardin. "But we'd still like to believe that we would've still won if she was there."

"This took a lot of teamwork. We showed patience, we played good defense, and we shut them down when we had to. I felt we had to take their inside game away, take Carroll (Ana) and Lawson (Shannon) out of the game. We were not as successful against Lawson as we were with Carroll."

Carroll, who burned South Plains for 25 points in the last meeting, was limited to four points and five rebounds. Lawson was virtually nonexistent in the first half, not even taking a shot and getting two rebounds. She came back with a vengeance in the second half, and finished the game with nine points and 12 rebounds.

Linda Waters led the Howard scoring attack, gunning in 15 points. She found many ways to score, from off-balance bank shots to running jumpers.

Freshman guard Cindy Williams was the other Lady Hawks in double figures. She came off the bench and carried Howard the first half, scoring all 10 of her points in the period.

A pair of freshman forwards who almost went to Texas instead of South Plains carried the Lady Texans' scoring load. Carol Bailey of Levelland scored 15 points, 10 in the first half; and Sheryl Swoopes of Brownfield scored 13 points — well below her 26 point average.

The game was tight all the way but Howard never led. South Plains scored the first six points of the game and clung to its lead. South Plains' biggest lead in the first half was 18-11, and Howard pulled to within 22-21.

South Plains' Joy Muller scored off an offensive rebound, and Howard's Williams made two free throws. South Plains led 30-26 at the half.

The South Plains' lead stayed around three to four points for most of the second half. Then Swoopes nailed a three pointer, giving South Plains a 45-39 lead with 3:35 left.

After both teams missed shots, Howard answered with Waters' basket with 1:54 left.

Webb and Fraser want to do it right

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — Johnny Webb and Chase Fraser have taken different routes in their swim careers, but ended up in the same place.

The two seniors and the rest of the Big Spring swim team will be competing in the regional swim meet in Lubbock Friday and Saturday at Texas Tech.

Webb is a four-year letterman who's making his fourth consecutive trip to regionals. In fact, he started under the tutelage of coach Harlan Smith in the eighth grade, in the pre-swim program. Now he is one of the fastest 500 yard freestyle swimmers in the region.

Fraser is a two-year letterman, who didn't begin swimming until last year. He surprised everyone by making it to regional. This year he will be one of the top contenders in the 100 yard butterfly and 50 yard freestyle.

Swim coach Harlan Smith said there one is glaring similarity between the two — they both work hard.

CHASE FRASER

"Johnny has been with me all four years, he really started in the eighth grade," said Smith. "Johnny is a good performer, he performs hard every time he goes out. He's always thinking, he's improved. He's just a good young man to have around." Smith said that although Fraser has only been at it two years, he was a pretty good swimmer when he started.

"Chase knew how to swim already," said Smith. "He's a very coachable young man and he has a lot of strength. And strength is a big part of swimming."

Fraser said swimming was a different outlet from football. The former defensive end turned in his pads his sophomore year. The next year he went out for swimming.

"I had just gotten out of football and I wanted something else to do," said Fraser. "I was always in the grass and I had real severe asthma. Swimming was great because it was inside. I didn't really know what I was getting into. I didn't know the workouts would be this hard. But it's been good, it teaches self discipline."

Smith thinks Webb, who has a best of 5:19 this year, may have to go under the five-minute mark if he is to challenge for a state berth. The winner in each event of the eight regions qualifies for state, and then the next eight fastest ties in the event qualifies. Not more than four from each region can qualify, although Smith added that hardly ever happens.

Coach Smith thinks Fraser's best chance is in the 50 freestyle. Fraser has swam a 23.3 and Smith thinks he needs to get in the mid 22s if he is to challenge for a state berth.

Fraser's improvement in two years has been remarkable. Last year he started swimming the 50 freestyle in 28 seconds. By the end of the year he had chopped it down to 24.8. "My biggest difference is my 100 freestyle. When I first got here I could swim a 1:15. Now I'm down to 54 seconds," Chase said.

Mays heads All-SWC team

DALLAS (AP) — Senior guard Travis Mays, the University of Texas gifted gunner from Ocala, Fla., headlined the 1989-90 Associated Press All-Southwest Conference basketball team which included two members of the regular season champion Arkansas Razorbacks.

Mays, who fought through the last fourth of the season with an injured shooting hand but still produced double digit outings, received eight votes from league coaches as the SWC Offensive Player of the Year.

Mays led the SWC with an average of 23.9 points per game.

Other members of the mythical first team as picked by the nine coaches included sophomores Todd Day and Lee Mayberry, the one-two offensive punch of the ninth-ranked Razorbacks, junior Carl Herrera, the University of Houston's scoring machine from Guanare, Venezuela, and Texas A&M's Tony Milton, widely respected as one of the top point guards in the nation and the only senior on the top five.

Milton averaged 20.4 points, Day 19.4 points, Mayberry 15 points, and Herrera averaged 16.1 points per contest. Milton also was second in assists, doling out an average of 6.8 assisted hoops per contest.

The second team was also deeply talented and included Arkansas sophomore center Oliver Miller, Houston's junior Craig Upchurch, junior guard Joey Wright of Texas, Texas Christian's ace rebounder and scorer Craig Sibley, and Baylor's Julius Denton and Southern Methodist's John Colborne, who tied in balloting for the fifth and final spot. Sibley, Denton, and Colborne are seniors.

Herrera headed a crack newcomer team that included Rice's high-scoring Brent Scott, who was selected as freshman of the year by averaging 15 points and 8 rebounds per game, Houston's deadeye three-point shooter Byron Smith, Texas Tech rebounding demon Will Flemmons, and a tie for the final spot between Baylor point guard deluxe David Wesley, Locksley Collie of Texas, and shot-blocking David Harris of Texas A&M, who had over 100 rejections. Herrera received all nine ballots as newcomer of the year. Flemmons led the SWC in rebounding with an average of 10 per game.

Tony Edmond of Texas Christian, whose quick hands led to numerous steals, was named the Defensive Player of the Year by the coaches.
 For the second straight year, Nolan Richardson of Arkansas was named by his peers as the SWC Coach of the Year.

Baseball talks going slow

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball once again is down to the final days, and even now it might be too late to save the scheduled start of the regular season.

Today, the lockout begins its fourth week. Already half of the exhibition games have been canceled. And players and owners agree on one thing: It takes at least three weeks of spring training to get ready.

But after another full night of talking Wednesday, the two sides were further apart on the key issue of salary arbitration than they had been in the morning.

Even Commissioner Fay Vincent, who has tried to negotiate a settlement to baseball's seventh work stoppage since 1972, sounded pessimistic as he left his office shortly after midnight.

"It looks grim," he said. Asked if he thought opening day games might need to be set back, Vincent said, "I think that's right."

The sides say the April 2 opener will be delayed unless an agreement is reached by the weekend.

"We're inexorably moving toward that point," management negotiator Chuck O'Connor said, "whether it's tomorrow or the day after."

O'Connor and union chief Donald Fehr did not set a meeting for today, although they did expect to get together for their 32nd bargaining session.

Players and owners did resolve one issue: rosters will be restored to 25 players for 1991 and 1992.

The sides moved closer on minimum salaries, with the union proposing $105,000, $15,000 more than the owners are offering; players proposed a $57 million yearly contribution to the benefit plan, $7 million more than the owners offered.

"With an exception or two, maybe all of the other issues are settled," Fehr said.

The problem, as it has been from the start, is who will be eligible for salary arbitration. The union wants it for players with two years of experience; management wants it to stay at three.

On Wednesday night, Fehr said his side "took a step we never thought we'd take."

The union proposed that all players with between two and three years of service — approximately 80 each season — be ranked in terms of service. The top half would be eligible for arbitration, the bottom half not.

O'Connor said owners probably would reject the proposal.

"My feeling is that the prospects of that concept being accepted in its present form are slim to none," O'Connor said.

O'Connor was to present the offer to the owners' Player Relations Committee today.

guidance, thinks he's capable of going under five minutes. He added that the trip to regional is not nerve shaking after four years.

"I can remember when we were freshmen and Cade (Loftin, senior swimmer at the time) told us — if you can't make it to regional out this district, then I don't know what to tell you because this district is slow," said Webb. "That's because Cade had swam in 45A the year before, and it had faster swimmers."

"From that day, we felt like we weren't part of the team if we couldn't get to regional."

Webb said the two major things that make him feel confident is that he's rested and doesn't have any problems. Coach Smith has had some light workouts the last two weeks, Webb said the formula worked last year.

Webb just missed a spot making the regional finals last year, and probably would have made it if he hadn't caught the measles. Despite that, he still swam his fastest 500 time of the year (5:21) with a 104 temperature.

"Before this it seems it was always something," said Webb. "My freshman year I just wasn't very good; my sophomore year I broke up with my girlfriend, so I was mentally sick, and last year I caught the measles. But this year everything's all right, plus I'm going from swimming in the worst pool in the region, to the best pool."

He says the key to knocking 20 seconds off his time is mental. "The 500 is an endurance race. It depends on your pain endurance. I think I can endure more pain. This is the meet to prove it."

Johnny has come a long ways from a youth who was told he couldn't play basketball by his coaches because he had asthma.

"When I got into swimming in the eighth grade, I remember getting into the water and kicking. It was like a living hell, and I had no comprehension why I was there."

"I played just about all sports, but to me, swimming is the best sport this high school has to offer. It's the hardest sport. You don't get much attention, as compared to, say, football. But you work hard and it's with you all the time. Anyone who thinks you can be a swimmer, have a good social life, be good in the books and party on the weekend, then they're wrong."

Fraser doesn't expect to have the jitters like at his first regional last year. "Last year I got so sick I was nervous," he said, adding that he did swim his fastest time of the season.

"In swimming it's unfair because it's the only sport where everybody competes together. It's like some of the runners, if they had to compete against 5A schools, they wouldn't be doing as well. If there was just a 4A, here's no doubt

SNYDER — South Plains' Carol Bailey (54) plays tight defense against Howard's Shannon Lawson Wednesday night in the Region V Tournament.

Lady Hawks

Next a hustling Carroll grabbed an offensive rebound and was fouled putting it back up. Carroll made one foul shot, cutting the deficit to 45-42 with 36 seconds left.

The Lady Texans answered with two when Deborah Williams fed Bailey, who made a six-foot jumper in the lane. South Plains led 47-42 with 40 seconds left. On the other end, Swoopes blocked Williams' shot and Bailey was fouled moments later. Bailey sunk one shot, giving South Plains a 48-42 lead with 16 seconds remaining.

But Waters wouldn't let her team die. She promptly hit a three-pointer, cutting the lead to 48-45 with seven seconds remaining.

After a South Plains timeout, the Lady Texans turned the ball over to HC when they couldn't inbound the pass in five seconds, giving Howard one more chance.

The ball was inbounded to Cook, who was promptly double-teamed. She finally got it off to Waters, who let fly with a three-pointer deep in the corner over the outstretched arms of Swoopes. Water's attempt hit the side of the rim and bounced away, bouncing away Howard's chance to make the national tournament.

"We knew we had to shoot a three so I wanted Linda or Stephanie (Fletcher) to shoot it," said Chadwick. "I wanted to inbound it to Mo (Monique Cook) because she can shoot the three, too. When Linda let it go it looked like it might go in. I thought we were headed for overtime."

The game ended the Howard careers of seven Lady Hawks: Waters, Cook, Lawson, Carroll, Fletcher, Kristen Hedlund and Cecilia Harge.

The Lady Hawks finished the season 27-5, ranked 14th in the nation. South Plains advances with a 23-7 record.

NCPAC endorses Lezar

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — GOP attorney general candidate Tex Lezar has gained the endorsement of the National Conservative Political Action Committee State Election Fund.

"Texas deserves an attorney general who will spend his time protecting the people of Texas from crime and drugs not hunting headlines and courting the favor of vocal special interest groups," said Maiselle Dolan Shortley, chairman of NCPAC-SEF, on Tuesday.

The group supports the election of conservatives to state and local offices across the United States.

Ms. Shortley praised Lezar's "tough proposals for abolishing parole for criminals in Texas and using the attorney general's office to assist county prosecutors."

Three seek to face Mauro

AUSTIN (AP) — Garry Mauro once said he doesn't want to retire as land commissioner — but he's going to fight to keep the job he calls the best in Texas for at least four more years.

Although no Democrat is opposing Mauro's shot at a third term, he's not getting a free ride to re-election. Houston businessman Wes Gilbreath, one of three Republicans vying in the March 13 primary election, has pledged to use his considerable resources against the incumbent.

Gilbreath, best known for spending about $1 million in the 1988 U.S. Senate GOP primary, said he'll spend up to $2 million if that's what it takes to beat Mauro. This time, he said, he hopes most of the money won't come from his own pocket.

The other Republican candidates aren't talking in millions.

Flint teacher Grady Yarbrough of Flint, who ran unsuccessfully for land commissioner in 1986, and semi-retired petroleum geologist and real estate broker William John of Dallas have never held elective office. Both say they're campaigning on shoestring budgets.

Yarbrough, 53, said his background in education and experience in real estate qualify him for the job.

The land commissioner oversees the leasing of the state's 22 million mineral acres, which include oil and gas leases that provide public school funding.

The commissioner also administers programs that loan money to veterans to buy land and houses and has taken on such environmental issues as clean beaches.

Yarbrough said he believes he could streamline the General Land Office and find additional state revenues that could be used for education.

John, 66, is raising no funds. "If they (supporters) want to contribute, I'd rather they would contribute to the needy," he said. John said he'd like to give veterans more information about loan programs and also is interested in the environment and conservation.

Although Gilbreath never has held elective office either, he garnered 37 percent of the GOP primary vote in 1988's four-way Senate race, forcing a runoff. U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen ultimately kept the seat.

Gilbreath, 61, said that with a background in oil and gas investment and real estate, he could well administer the state's land and make money for its schools.

Gilbreath has questioned Mauro's ethics, passed out newspaper articles probing land deals by the General Land Office and noted that the FBI subpoenaed records on thousands of loans made by the Veterans Land Board as part of an investigation into the office.

Mauro, 41, said the questions raised by Gilbreath have been "fairly well put to rest" and added that FBI officials now "know we have the best veterans programs in the country."

"Everyone who has taken a look has said there is no basis for those questions," Mauro said. "They (the questions) were all politically motivated, as far as I can tell."

From his first term, which began in 1982, Mauro has audited oil and gas leases to make sure the state is getting its fair share of royalties. He said allegations against him have been prompted in part by his aggressiveness: "You don't bring the number of large lawsuits I did against large royalty owners and not make some enemies."

Although he has budgeted about $1.5 million for his re-election bid, Mauro said he's concerned about Gilbreath's spending power.

"I'm very concerned about anybody trying to buy an election," Mauro said, but he added, "I'm going to outwork him. I'm going to out-travel him."

Gilbreath denied he's trying to buy the election but suggested Mauro should be worried, saying, "We're committed to making a change in the General Land Office."

Mauro in the past has spoken of running for U.S. Senate, governor and attorney general, and said he doesn't want to keep his current job for the rest of his working life. But right now, he said, he can't think of a better post.

"On the one hand, I loan money to Texas veterans, and on the other hand, I make money for the education system in Texas and I protect the public interest on environmental concerns," he said. "It really is the best job in state government."

Law, order emphasized in AG race

AUSTIN (AP) — Law and order has become the battle cry in the fight to be Texas attorney general, even though the state's law office spends most of its time handling civil cases.

The attorney general's office needs reforming so that the attorney general has more power to combat crime," said Rep. Pat Hill of Dallas, one of four Republican candidates for attorney general.

"Crime and drugs are sweeping our state. The citizens of Texas want the attorney general to help fight this plague."

Crime-fighting has been a theme among most of the candidates to succeed incumbent Attorney General Jim Mattox, a Democrat running for governor.

The Republican contenders are Hill, Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson, Dallas lawyer Tex Lezar and Houston lawyer Bobby Steelhammer. Democratic candidates are Rep. Dan Morales of San Antonio and Houston lawyer John Odam.

Also running is Libertarian Ray Dittmar, a paralegal and engineer from Houston.

Lezar, former assistant U.S. attorney general, has taken the hardest line, saying, "The next attorney general of this state should be a tough, experienced crime fighter."

"I think it's time to end parole in Texas. I also think it's time that criminals in this state receive sentences that every are every bit as severe as the harm they do to our citizens," said Lezar, 41. "I've said many times throughout this state that drug kingpins deserve to die."

Brown, 49, said the attorney general shouldn't become a "super prosecutor," but should provide stronger leadership and assistance to local law enforcement officials.

Brown won a spot on the Republican primary ballot after a court fight, because there is a constitutional prohibition against midterm legislators seeking offices for which they have raised the compensation. The Texas Supreme Court ruled that even though the attorney general's retirement pay was raised, that didn't fall under the constitutional ban.

Steelhammer, 49, said he was concerned that some voters could be misled by the anti-crime arguments.

"I'm as much for law and order as anyone else, but the attorney general's office is more civil in nature than it is criminal," he said. Dittmar, 63, expressed similar concerns.

On the Democratic side, Odam has proposed a drug "strike force" in the attorney general's office that would work with local prosecutors.

"The ultimate prosecution of the case is with local prosecutors, but the attorney general's office must provide statewide assistance," said Odam, 46.

Morales, noting that the attorney general defended the state in a federal lawsuit over crowded prison conditions, said it's justifiable for that officeholder "to deal with some of the underlying problems and issues that gave rise to the lawsuit to begin with."

Those include early release and parole statutes, prison capacity, education, and efforts to prevent substance abuse, said Morales, 33. He is seeking to become the second Hispanic elected to statewide office in Texas; the first was Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez.

The attorney general has defended Texas in lawsuits involving not only the prison system, but school finance, judicial elections and the care given to mentally ill and mentally retarded people.

Lawsuits are initiated by the attorney general in anti-trust cases and to protect consumers, and the office pursues suits to protect the environment and public health at the behest of other agencies. The office also renders legal advisory opinions.

District and county attorneys have the primary responsibility for prosecuting criminal cases in their areas, but can request help from the attorney general.

Of about 44,000 active cases in the attorney general's office, excluding child support cases, 22,000 concern bankruptcy, said Mattox spokesman Steve Hall. Of the remaining cases, fewer than 4,000 involve criminal law.

The child support enforcement program, with about 420,000 cases, also is administered by the attorney general. Although Mattox defends his handling of the program, those running for the office cite delays in processing cases and say they could do better.

Odam suggested a management change, saying the child support division should contract with local domestic relations offices.

Cooperation with local attorneys, judges and domestic relations offices has been stressed by Brown, while Ms. Hill said the attorney general's resources could be reallocated to make the child support enforcement division more effective.

Names in the news

EL PASO (AP) — Tracy Scoggins is suing Miss USA pageant officials for $14 million, contending they gave the actress a car with markings that might have lured an attacker she says pulled down her dress in an elevator.

The lawsuit filed Friday in state court says pageant directors should have warned her she was a potential sexual assault victim and provided her security and an escort.

TRACY SCOGGINS

Ms. Scoggins was loaned a car with the words "Miss Universe" written on the side in bold letters, the lawsuit says.

The lawsuit, which names Miss Universe Inc., sponsor of the Miss USA contest, is the third multimillion-dollar suit filed since the alleged attack two years ago at the Marriott Hotel in El Paso.

Ms. Scoggins, who appeared in the television show "The Cobys," was in El Paso as co-host of the 1988 Miss USA Pageant.

Her screams in the elevator led hotel employees to detain Ramon Concepcion Padilla. The actress said she would not return to Texas to testify against him because a grand jury reduced the charge to misdemeanor sexual assault.

The charge was dropped and Padilla sued for $20 million, claiming his reputation was damaged. Ms. Scoggins countered with a $4.5 million slander lawsuit against Padilla and his lawyer after Padilla contended the actress invited him to her hotel room.

Efforts to get comment from the pageant company were unsuccessful. Sara Meza, spokeswoman for Madison Square Garden TV Productions, which produces Miss Universe, said she had not seen the lawsuit.

Census testing

STANTON — A representative of the Census Bureau in Lubbock will be here Monday to interview and test applicants to work as census enumerators. He will be at the Martin County Courthouse for interviews at 9 a.m. and again at 1 p.m. For more information, contact the county judge's office at 756-2231.

'Tough' mayor recalled

SAN JUAN BAUTISTA, Calif. (AP) — In this Wild West town, voters had enough of a mayor so tough that he allegedly mowed his lawn with a gun strapped to his leg.

In a recall vote Tuesday, Mayor Richard Hill lost in a showdown with voters by a 2-1 ratio. Two councilmen — Bruce Freels and Kurt Larrecou — also lost by lopsided votes.

"It's always a blood bath in San Juan," said Jill Bohn, organizer of the recall. "People got to council meetings instead of watching 'Jeopardy'."

Residents in the town about 40 miles south of San Jose said that Hill, Larrecou and Freels treated town employees poorly.

But Hill's alleged activities had townspeople buzzing the most.

Police, investigating a report of gunfire at Hill's home a few years ago, found Hill with a bandoleer across his chest, a knife in his boot, a pistol at his side and a shotgun across his lap. They also found a bullet hole in his ceiling.

Hill, a reserve police officer, said he had killed a pit bull in the line of duty, and was expecting the dog's owner to arrive.

Several townspeople also said that Hill would mow his lawn wearing a gun.

Hill, 42, denied that. "Maybe I should," he said. "I've got some big weeds out back."

Poison ivy saved

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — County commissioners hope they've stopped residents of a subdivision from killing a native plant: poison ivy.

Broward County planners say residents of the Oak Knoll subdivision have been going beyond their property lines to hunt poison ivy, clip tree branches, plant their own landscaping and dump lawn clippings.

Planners say residents are trampling on a protected public nature preserve near the subdivision.

The County Commission threatened Tuesday to fence the yards unless the families stopped destroying vegetation. They ended up agreeing to wooden posts placed at the lot's corners to make sure homeowners stay on their side.

"Poison ivy, while none of us likes it, is part of the native vegetation there," County Commissioner Lori Parrish said.

Some residents thought the concern over poison ivy was strange.

But resident James Inklebarger said people would cope with the decision.

County HRC scales back services

STANTON — A chronic disease program was among two programs eliminated and two others that were reduced at the Martin County Health Resource Center.

The cutbacks were the result of a Texas Department of Health hiring freeze in effect since January.

Mary Urquidez, the area supervisor for Martin, Reeves, Ward and Winkler counties, said the adult health program for chronic diseases was canceled. The program screened for chronic diseases such as cancer, high blood pressure, diabetes and anemia for the outreach clinics to Garden City and St. Lawrence, she said.

Services at the center have been reduced as the result of a vacancy since Dec. 1 for a registered nurse in charge of the Stanton field office.

Urquidez said. The former nurse in charge, Sandy Jones, moved to East Texas.

TDH Region 3 Director Gordon Cox of El Paso said they are trying to get officials with the state office in Austin to make an exception on the nursing position in Stanton.

"This region is actively seeking permission to release this position from the hiring freeze," he said. "We're giving it our best shot."

He said they have done that on three other occasions.

"I think two were allowed to be filled and one was not," he said. One of the positions opened for hiring was for a nurse.

Cox said the hiring freeze is the result of a $12 million deficit in the TDH's chronic disease program.

"It is one of the major programs," he said. "They're trying to use the savings in salaries to offset the deficit. If somebody resigns then that position is automatically frozen."

In Stanton there were 511 people screened for chronic diseases in 1989, said Urquidez, who is compiling information on the center's services and use by the public. The information will be given to Region Director of Nurses Laura Alvarado in El Paso to show what services

Elliott resigns as MCH administrator

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — Martin County Hospital Administrator Larry Elliott, 47, is leaving his $36,000 a year job here effective April 4 for another job offer in Lovington, N.M.

Elliott, who has been with the Martin County Hospital District for five years, said he will begin working in a similar position as chief executive officer for Nor-Lea General Hospital, a corporate hospital system, sometime in the middle of April.

"It's going to be an advancement," he said. "Basically this is the top, where I can go here (in this job field)."

"It's a corporation with multiple hospitals. So there's movement in the system."

Elliott tendered his resignation during a special meeting of the hospital board on March 5.

The board is now accepting applications for another administrator for an as of yet undetermined period of time, Elliott said. It may approve a deadline for taking applications at its March 15 meeting.

Elliott said the board will probably work through the Texas Hospital Association to look for applicants. "They do work as a middle man for a lot of hospital services," he said of THA.

He also said that Texas Tech Medical School may be a prime area to look for applicants when advertising in newspapers.

"Ironically, a major responsibility for his predecessor will be the recruitment of additional medical staff members, he said.

"It's really with mixed emotions that I'm leaving the people here," he said. "They do have a good hospital here."

Elliott said he'll also be sorry to leave West Texas.

"They've been very good to both me and my family," he said of the community. Elliott and his wife Julie are the parents of two children, ages 4 and 2.

Elliott, who was born in Oklahoma City, graduated from Midland High School in 1960. He went to North Texas State and graduated in 1966 with a bachelor's degree in accounting.

Before coming to Martin County, he was the assistant administrator of finance at Permian General Hospital in Andrews for five years. Before that he worked in the Ector County Auditor's office.

Fate of Hall-Bennett hospital uncertain

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Cheryl New is trying to get Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital back on its feet, but Harold Hall, chairman of the hospital's board, said she should stop "kicking an old dead horse."

New, the hospital's administrative assistant, began circulating a petition in January to reopen Hall-Bennett, which closed in December.

Yesterday at the hospital's board meeting she introduced six prospective members whom she wanted approved as a new board to replace the current board, which she believes is in the process of resigning. The prospective board favors reopening the hospital.

The by-laws of the non-profit hospital foundation require the outgoing board to vote in the incoming board.

Hall said he has no intention of resigning from the board, nor does Mike Thomas or Jerry Grimes, the other two board members, as far as he knows.

"We haven't resigned yet," Hall said. He said they might consider resigning and approving a new board if there was tangible proof that a reopened Hall-Bennett would be viable.

"If New came up with three or four doctors willing to come out here and three or four million

Safety stressed year after Kilroy's death

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MATAMOROS, Mexico — A friend of Mark Kilroy, who was abducted and slain at a "human slaughterhouse" during the height of last year's spring break, is urging students to be careful while celebrating this year.

"I feel like I owe it to Mark to get the message out to everyone, especially college students, how important it is to have a safe spring break," said Bill Huddleston, who was partying with Kilroy the night of his abduction.

Kilroy's parents, meanwhile, say some good has come from the ritual slaying of their 21-year-old son: greater awareness of the evils of drugs they blame for his death.

The University of Texas student dropped out of sight about 2 a.m. on March 14, 1989, while out bar-hopping with three friends in the border city. After a month-long search, his mutilated corpse was found buried at a ranch west of Matamoros.

Fourteen other victims also were unearthed there and at a nearby farm. A drug smuggling cult allegedly performed the ritual slayings seeking magical protection from the law and rival smugglers.

Huddleston, a Texas A&M junior who accompanied Kilroy to Matamoros, called a press conference Wednesday to urge vacationing college students to be careful on spring break this year.

"This means that everyone should use good judgement when making decisions and keep in mind that a bad thing can happen to anyone, even the best of us," Huddleston said.

Huddleston, believed to be the last person to see Kilroy before the abduction, said he would spend this year's spring break snow-skiing in New Mexico.

His advice to others: "People that are going to drink, to make their decisions before they drink. To stay in groups. When they get separated, to check up on one another periodically."

Alex Perez, sheriff of Cameron County in Brownsville just across the Rio Grande, described the scene of Kilroy's murder as a "human slaughterhouse," the most gruesome crime he has investigated in 14 years of law enforcement.

The case still haunts him, he said.

"In my life, I've seen a lot of it, but this was the one that got me not to sleeping at night," he said.

Huddleston, too, wonders about the people who killed his friend.

"There's not really much I would, you know, I could say other than asking them why, why they did it. I mean how do they feel about it now?" he said.

Mexican officials have started a voluntary sign-in program for spr-by shifting major responsibilities onto local governments and encouraging more private investment, while concentrating federal funding on projects of national significance.

Foster a "sound financial base" for transportation, emphasizing user fees "as the key element to financing the federal share of transportation expenditures," as well as spending some of the billions of dollars in the aviation and highway trust funds.

Keep transportation businesses strong and competitive by deregulating the trucking industry and further deregulating other transportation sectors, including repealing railroad employee liability and retirement laws opposed by the rail industry.

Ensure that the transportation system supports public safety and national security.

Protect the environment and the quality of life by reducing pollution emissions by motor vehicles.

Advance U.S. transportation technology for the 21st century by encouraging research into high-speed rail, magnetically levitated trains, tiltrotor aircraft and "intelligent" vehicle and highway systems that use computers to increase safety and efficiency.

Proposals that shift more of the cost to users are raising concerns in the aviation, mass transit and trucking industries.

Skinner had described the policy to industry groups, and some people outside government saw drafts before it was released.

The Transportation Department began working on the proposal shortly after Skinner took office early last year, holding 117 hearings in 48 cities to get suggestions.

The American Public Transit Association said the policy was "long on advice and short on help."

"The administration's policy would give Uncle Sam junior partnership in the traditional intergovernmental alliance that has underwritten mass transit for more than 25 years," the group said in a statement.

The Air Transport Association said it generally supported the new policy but opposed an airport head tax that is included. Bush called for such a fee, as well as other user charges, in his fiscal 1991 budget.

ATA, which represents major airlines, also has been looking for clear national standards on noise levels at airports and a timetable for phasing out older, noisier airliners. Neither is found in the new policy.

The Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, speaking for thousands of private pilots, said the policy would have the federal government rely too much on state and local governments for improvements in aviation.

The American Trucking Associations objected to Skinner's call for more toll roads and to the lack of a detailed plan for spending the $10 billion surplus in the highway trust fund, collected from federal gasoline taxes.

Jerry Bastarache, spokesman for the Highway Users Federation, said the group generally likes the policy because it calls for greater capacity and highway improvements.

But he said some areas cause concern, including toll roads and proposals for higher proportions of matching funds from local governments in Transportation Department projects.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service and the National Association of Conservation Districts have produced a How-To Videotape to help farmers carry out their conservation compliance plans under provisions of the 1985 farm bill.

will suffer, she said. "What we're doing is compiling some figures for her so she can present them to Austin," she said. In 1989, the center conducted 4,650 examinations and gave 766 immunizations, she said. There were 421 admissions to programs.

Cuts in programs include the reduction of prenatal care clinics from once a week to twice a month and accepting only infants from birth to 3 years old in the Well Baby Clinic, which used to accept children from birth to age 7.

The canceled outreach clinics in Glasscock County, which were conducted twice a month, were for immunizations and the Women, Infants and Children Nutritional Program.

Other services at the Stanton center still include immunization and tuberculosis programs, which are both conducted once a month.

But starting next month, the center may not have as many nurses on hand, said Urquidez, who is with the TDH's district office in Midland.

"I've been coming up to five times a month. Starting in April I'll just be here two days a month," she said. "Another nurse from Midland will be here only once a month. I'm talking about registered nurses."

She said the Stanton office has one licensed vocational nurse and two clerks working there.
