13,000 served by area cancer group

BIG SPRING — Almost 13,000 citizens of Howard and Glasscock Counties were served by the American Cancer Society District II division during fiscal 1988-89, according to the annual report.

While fundraising events planned by volunteers brought in $15,540 from area patrons, patients received $8,835 worth of free treatments and $37,104 was spent on information and education.

Senior Field Representative Melissa Null said figures this year are up. "We're ahead of where we were last year. The outlook is good."

Null said the Cancer Society provides all its services free to the public, including medical payments, housing, recovery groups and education. Educational programs are present in 31 schools from pre-school level to high school and adults.

The most dramatic increase occurred in worksite education programs, in which twice as many people were reached as projected. Program volunteers were scarce this year. Only 38 percent of the goal was met.

The report states that out of every 200 contacts, education can potentially prevent 12 cancers and early detection techniques can guard against nine more.

Murder suspect was considered a hero

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — Co-workers say a Colorado City man suspected of murdering his wife last week was considered a hero only four days before his wife's death.

Roy Iglehart, 49, arrested in connection with his wife's death on Friday, may have saved the life of a child while on duty at a local convenience store, a co-worker said Tuesday.

Iglehart was working at Skinny's convenience store last week where he was a manager, according to co-manager Don Banta. A child who had been left alone in a car started the engine and the car began to move. Banta said that Iglehart ran to the car, got into the driver's side and prevented it from entering

"I just don't know what happened. Every time he talked about his wife, he had nothing but praise... You'd think it was the happiest family in the world." — Co-worker Don Banta traffic.

Before Iglehart could stop the car, Banta said, it struck a post. Iglehart sustained lower back injuries and was unable to work for two days. When he returned to work Thursday, the day before his wife's death, he was in a great deal of pain, Banta said.

Like others who knew him, Banta expressed shock and disbelief that Iglehart is being held in connection with the shooting death of his wife Viola. Mrs. Iglehart was killed in the couple's Cooper's Cove home

Friday morning.

"I just don't know what happened," Banta said. "Every time he talked about his wife, he had nothing but praise."

The family, including Iglehart, his wife and five children had been lifetime residents of the area.

"Everybody in Colorado City had known him (Roy) all his life," Banta said. "You'd think it was the happiest family in the world."

The family lived on several acres east of Lake Colorado City. Banta said they had a farm, kept animals and worked in the out-of-doors often. He said Iglehart and his wife shared a love of the land they lived on.

Children were another of Iglehart's loves, Banta said.

"When little kids came into the store, he would talk to them, you know, he really liked kids," Banta said. Iglehart enjoyed the antics of his own five children, he said, often taping them with the family's video camera.

Everything about Iglehart seems contrary to the possibility that he could have committed the crime, Banta said.

"He always did things around the store he didn't have to do," Banta said of his co-worker. He had always been a good worker and honest. I've known him all my life."

Iglehart surrendered to the authorities he had called to the scene early Friday morning, but Sheriff Wendell Bryant refused to say whether the man had confessed to the murder.

Iglehart, held in Mitchell County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond, took the time to send a message to Banta about 6 a.m. Friday that he would not be in to open the store that morning.

Area personal property appraisals near finish

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The Howard County Appraisal District met last night to hear an update on appraisals and discuss priorities for the office for the next three years.

The personal property appraisals should be finished by April 20. Lead Appraiser Weldon Peoples reported that the office had finished appraising the Forsan School and Capehart areas but still had to check about 200 "go back" and new construction sites and some mobile home parks.

Chief Appraiser Keith Toomire said the notices would be sent out one month early on personal property because they have been totally reworked. "I hope we will have worked most of the problems out by the time the next ones are sent out," he said.

Toomire presented a list of 25 three-year goals for the district, ranging from improvements in computer record-keeping to new office furniture. He would like to obtain a fleet of cars for appraisers, get new software or possibly a new computer system to streamline work, and microfilm old records to free up storage space, among other items.

He asked the board to rank his list by order of importance so that he can begin work on a budget. The preliminary budget is due in May so the taxing units that provide monies for the district's budget can consider the district's needs in preparing their budgets.

The district's 1990 budget totals $369,665. Toomire anticipates the 1991 budget staying about the same. Although his list has some big-ticket items, including a computerized mapping system, most of the goals require manpower rather than capital increases.

Toomire also reported that the one and a half months' worth of work lost in a computer error had been reentered into the system two weeks faster than he'd anticipated.

Burglars nabbed at Cameo — again

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — The old Cameo Energy Mobile Homes has been popular with the police department lately — on Wednesday two more men were arrested inside the building.

The arrests, in which two men were charged with burglary of a building, followed the arrests on Tuesday of two men found by police inside the abandoned building, which is on the East 11th Street extension.

"We're going to back a paddy wagon up to the door," said Big Spring Police Sgt. John Leubner.

Leubner said the police were tipped this time by a man who became suspicious about the two in the building.

"The management company hired a local man... to go clean up some of the mess that's been caused by vandals," he said. The maintenance man found the two inside clipping electrical wiring, Leubner said.

"They said they'd been contracted by some outfit in Abilene," he said. The two first told the maintenance man they were preparing the place for a new manufacturer, then said they'd been hired by the Texas Employment Commission and told to "clean up the building," Leubner said.

The maintenance man left the building, he said, and called the police, as well as the building's owner, NCNB Bank of Fort Worth. "By the time the officers got there the bank had confirmed that (he) was the only one supposed to be in there," Leubner said.

Police arrested Ricky O. Smith, 34, Route Box 112M, and Donald F. Atkinson, 40, 2706 S. Monticello. Both were charged with burglary.

Experts clash on state gaming

AUSTIN (AP) — A House committee has begun taking testimony on the feasibility of using a state lottery — touted by Democratic gubernatorial nominee Ann Richards and other officials — as a means of funding public education.

Lawmakers are considering the lottery and a number of other tax and fee increases to finance court-ordered school finance reform.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, has filed two lottery bills during the present special session.

One proposes a non-binding referendum on the lottery issue; the other outlines a constitutional amendment to create a lottery. All constitutional amendments must be approved by state voters.

Both measures mandate lottery profits be used to fund public education.

Tapes will teach chemical handlers

AUSTIN (AP) — Cassette tape recordings are being made available to farmers so they can easily inform agricultural workers about chemicals used on the job, which is required by the state's 1987 "right-to-know" law, the Texas Agriculture Department says.

"Not only can these tape recordings make compliance with the law easier for many producers, they also are a good way for producers to feel confident that they are providing the correct information," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Wednesday.

One requirement of the Agricultural Hazard Communication Law is the distribution of "crop sheets" that include information on the most commonly used pesticides, months of pesticide application, length of time required to wait before entering a pesticide-treated field, symptoms of pesticide exposure and emergency procedures.

"This tape recording is a generic crop sheet in both Spanish and English. The employer may play the tape instead of reading the crop sheets to the laborers each work season," Hightower said.

The recorded crop sheets are available at no charge from the Agriculture Department's Austin office or district offices.

Hispanics find fault with Cavazos speech

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos has again come under fire from leading Hispanics over his comments about education.

Cavazos, in San Antonio for the first of five hearings across the nation on Hispanics and education, said Hispanic parents deserve much of the blame for a high dropout rate among their children.

"He is absolutely incorrect," said Cruz Chavira, chief of staff for the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Cavazos was still smarting from a confrontation with Hispanic lawmakers last month after he told the Texas Legislature that more money wasn't the answer to the state's school funding woes.

Chavira, whose San Antonio-based organization claims to be the largest Hispanic group in the United States, said he was upset by Cavazos' remarks and that scores of educators had been calling LULAC to voice their anger.

Cavazos, who is Hispanic, told a San Antonio news conference Tuesday night that although Hispanics have traditionally valued education, "somewhere along the line we've lost that. I really believe today there is not that emphasis."

The Cabinet official spoke after the first of five hearings across the nation on Hispanic education.

Cavazos said problems Hispanics have in school cannot be attributed completely to economic difficulties or language barriers because other ethnic groups have overcome such barriers.

"We really have not cared that youngsters have dropped out of school," Cavazos said. "We don't care, either teachers, parents, business community, elected officials."

"We must have a commitment from Hispanics, from Hispanic parents especially, that their children will be educated," he said. "That is the first vital step."

"That is incredible," Chavira said. "I just can't imagine how he can direct the guilt at parents. I don't know of a single Hispanic not concerned about education."

During the 1980s, about 40 percent of Hispanics nationwide left school before high school graduation, Cavazos said. The rate for all groups in the United States is 30 percent.

Only 11 percent of Hispanics complete four or more years of college by the time they are in their early 30s, Cavazos said.

Cavazos didn't intend to imply that Hispanic parents don't value education, U.S. Department of Education spokeswoman Etta Fielek said in Washington. She said he meant to say that the Hispanic population lacked leadership, not values.

Jose Cardenas, executive director of the Intercultural Development Research Association, disagreed.

"There is a lot of leadership in the Hispanic community," said Cardenas, whose non-profit, San Antonio-based organization deals with educational issues. Hispanic leaders have not been able to become involved in making decisions because they've repeatedly been stymied, he said.

Louis J. Agnese Jr., president of Incarnate Word College in San Antonio, said lack of money, lack of preparation and perceptions of failure cause Hispanics to leave school.

The hearing and others to follow in Miami, Chicago, Los Angeles and Boston, were organized by a federal task force on what President Bush has called the crisis in Hispanic education.

Cavazos, meanwhile, defended his remarks to the Texas Legislature last month that a large infusion of money is not necessarily the answer to the state's school funding woes.

After that address, several Hispanic legislators angrily confronted Cavazos, demanding an apology, saying he didn't fully understand the crisis and had no right to tell them what to do.

"I said that it is not appropriate for me to come here and tell you how to find the money," Cavazos said Tuesday. "I also said I do not doubt that there are some school districts in this state that need additional funding."

Cavazos said his statements to the Legislature last month were taken out of context. He insisted that he did not tell Texas lawmakers that money was not the answer. He said his statement was that money wasn't the only answer.

The state is under court order to fix funding for public schools, which discriminates against poor school districts.

Both parties confident of general election win

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republicans and Democrats both are boasting about their chances in the general election, with each party touting its ballot top-to-bottom.

With Democrat Ann Richards and Republican Clayton Williams battling for governor, leaders of both parties said Wednesday that the November election will be a crucial test of strength for the 1990s.

"It's terrific. We've got the strongest ticket we've ever had. It's up and down the ticket. We've got a Phil Gramm running for U.S. Senate and other real high points," said Texas GOP Chairman Fred Meyer.

"We've got the extraordinary ticket. The Republicans, below the big-dollar camouflage that coats Phil Gramm and Clayton Williams' deficiencies, they've got nothing on their ticket," countered Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party.

Williams, the oilman-rancher nicknamed "Claytie," won the Republican primary without a runoff last month in an $8 million campaign. He says he'll bring to government the same management style that made him a multimillionaire in business.

Ms. Richards, who became an overnight celebrity after her no-holds-barred oratory at the 1988 Democratic National Convention, had a tougher fight but retains her "star" status and brings voters an eight-year record of managing the state Treasury.

"She's somebody who can make state government work. She's not the guy who has an $8 million mask and wants to take us back to the thrilling days of yesteryear," the Democrats' Martin said.

"I think we've got a clear choice between a national liberal Democrat and a moderate-to-conservative Republican, Claytie Williams... that's exactly the kind of matchup we like in Texas," GOP boss Meyer said.

The gubernatorial faceoff immediately makes abortion a hot issue.

Ms. Richards is strongly pro-choice, while Williams has said he opposes abortion except in cases of rape, incest or danger to a mother's life.

That's going to be the case in the U.S. Senate race, too, where Democratic nominee Hugh Parmer already is airing television commercials attacking incumbent Republican Sen. Gramm.

The pro-choice Parmer has been sharply critical of legislation Gramm introduced in Congress to restrict abortions.

A former Fort Worth mayor and current state senator, Parmer won the nomination last month, as did Gramm.

Gramm, who overpowered Democrat Lloyd Doggett in 1984, has said he is prepared to spend up to $20 million to hold onto his seat.

Republicans also are challenging down the ballot, a fact that makes GOP chairman Meyer feel good about his party's chances.

"We've got 15 statewide candidates. We've got an excellent chance of picking up state representative seats. We're going to continue to march forward and elect local officials, too. We're feeling very good," Meyer said.

Democratic National Chairman Ron Brown countered by saying his party's going to pull together to hold power in the nation's third-largest state.

"Ann Richards is ready to lead modern Texas into a new decade and a new century. The Texas of tomorrow can ill-afford the prehistoric notions of Clayton Williams," Brown said. "Together, we can make 1990 the stepping stone to a Democratic White House in 1992."

The race for the No. 2 state job — lieutenant governor — pits Democratic state Comptroller Bob Bullock, who has held that office since the mid-1970s, against Houston oilman Rob Moshbacher, son of U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Moshbacher.

Although Bullock has run ahead in recent polls, it wouldn't be surprising to see some high-level Republican help for a cabinet officer's son.

Doctor sues abortion protestors

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A judge has ordered anti-abortion protestors to stop picketing within 100 yards of the home of a local doctor after the gynecologist filed suit against protestors for a second time.

Dr. Edward Aquino, who performs some abortions at his clinic, filed the suit Wednesday against anti-abortion leader Rex Moses and the Body of Christ Rescue.

Judge Robert Blackmon of the 17th District Court signed a temporary restraining order Wednesday prohibiting picketing within 100 yards of the Aquino home until an April 23 hearing on a temporary injunction.

It is the second time Aquino has taken anti-abortion protestors to court to stop picketing at his home. Aquino last year was granted a permanent injunction against South Texans for life and was awarded $810,000 in damages.

Moses has said he expected to be sued and that he and his fellow protestors are "judgment-proof" in that they lack sufficient assets to be taken as payment for damages.

The doctor, represented by attorney Tony Bonilla, also is seeking an unspecified amount of actual and punitive damages.

The suit alleges that the picketing "has raised the level of fear and panic within the Aquino household to unbearable levels which is adversely affecting the health of the children and the well being of the family."

Moses and the others have picketed Aquino's home every day except Sunday since the demonstrations started last Saturday. He said there have been 9-12 demonstrators each time.

Aquino sued South Texans for Life and several of its members last year and was granted a permanent injunction and $810,000 in damages by a jury. The case is under review by the 13th Court of Appeals.

The injunction, which prohibited South Texans for Life from picketing within 400 feet of the Aquino home, applies only to that group.

Moses told the Corpus Christi Caller Wednesday that he did not intend to harm the doctor's wife, Mercedes, or her children.

Former stockbroker pleads guilty

MIDLAND (AP) — A former Midland stockbroker has pleaded guilty to two federal counts of wire fraud in connection with an alleged scheme to defraud an El Paso widow of more than $1.2 million.

The guilty plea came Wednesday from Jacob Cardwell "Jake" Young, 50, who was accused of manipulating funds entrusted to him.

Young, who had been a sales representative for the Merrill Lynch brokerage house since 1967, was charged with devising a "scheme" to defraud $1.265 million from the account of Frances Weaver.

Merc makes members take ethics

CHICAGO (AP) — At least one trader at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange wasn't enthusiastic about the mandatory ethics course that professors at a downtown law school will teach the Merc's 2,500 members.

"To get some lawyers to try to tell us what's ethical and what isn't ethical is kind of funny," said the livestock trader, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "I don't think I'm going to come out of there doing anything different than when I went in."

Members began signing up Wednesday for the mandatory two-hour class, part of a reform effort implemented after FBI moles infiltrated the Merc and the Chicago Board of Trade in a probe of suspected fraud. Forty-eight people, mostly traders, were indicted last summer.

The Board of Trade already has started a mandatory ethics session for all new members, said spokesman Michael O'Connell.

He said BOT officials also are working with the Center for Ethics and Corporate Policy in Chicago to create an ethics course that could include other members as well.

James Oliff, second vice president of the Merc's Board of Governors, said anyone who trades at the Merc must take the new course. He said they will first be given "a definition of what ethics is all about."

"Basically, we want to impress upon our members that in addition to looking at rules, that there are other actions that should govern their conduct and that's ethical behavior," he said. "They are guardians of the exchange as a financial institution as well as guardians of themselves."

Americans lead Japanese in leisure

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Japan is leading the United States in areas of productivity, education and trade but, not surprisingly, it lags behind in one category: leisure time.

American men spend on average 20.5 hours a week at leisure, compared with 13.3 hours taken by Japanese men, according to a University of Michigan study. The disparity is even greater between American women, who take 21.8 hours of time out each week, and Japanese women, who take just 10.6 hours.

Economics professors Frank P. Stafford and F. Thomas Juster said they studied time spent on "active leisure," or sports and hobbies, and "social interaction" in the United States, Japan and six other countries.

Using statistics from surveys of 1,000 or more adults conducted between 1964 and 1987 in the United States, Japan, the Soviet Union, Finland, Hungary, Norway, Denmark and Sweden, they found a gradual decline in the number of hours men spend at work in all eight countries.

Problems delay shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said today it is unlikely the shuttle Discovery will be launched with the Hubble Space Telescope before the week of April 22.

Shuttle managers estimated after a meeting Wednesday the launch delay would last seven to 14 days. But the agency learned overnight that a malfunctioning shuttle power unit would have to be replaced entirely.

A decision on the launch date was not expected until next week. Discovery's launch was postponed four minutes before liftoff Tuesday when the auxiliary power unit failed. Technicians on Wednesday removed the unit's 15-pound controller, which controls its speed, for shipment back to the manufacturer for testing. The manufacturer informed NASA the controller was fine, indicating an unknown problem elsewhere in the unit.

NASA is not sure how long it will take to replace the unit since it has never changed one at the launch pad before, Buckingham said.

Teen's death prompts riot

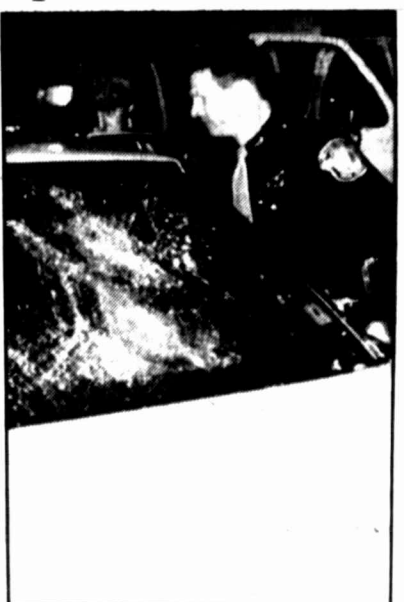

TEANECK, N.J. (AP) — Youths overturned patrol cars, smashed windows and looted stores in a violent protest over the slaying of a black teenager by a white police officer. At least five people were injured.

About 1,000 people had rallied peacefully Wednesday night, demanding that a special prosecutor investigate the killing of 15-year-old Phillip Pannell.

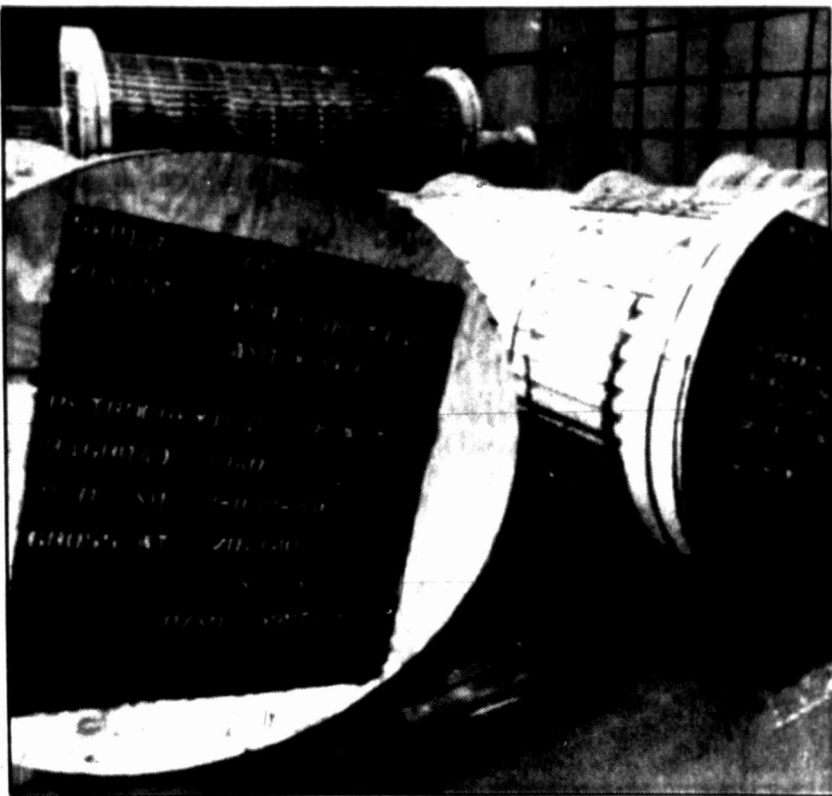

The boy was shot Tuesday evening after he was questioned at a park by two officers responding to a report of a teen-ager pulling a gun.

Pannell died of a gunshot wound that entered his back, the Bergen County medical examiner said. Police said Pannell had a gun, but his friends denied it and said the killing was racially motivated.

Violence began Wednesday night after a candlelight vigil, when about a dozen police officers in riot gear appeared at the edge of the crowd to try to force people to disperse.

POLICE CAR SHATTERED

MIDDLESBROUGH, England — Crates which authorities say contain parts of a 40-meter (131-foot) gun sit in a shed at Tess Dock at Middlesbrough in northeast England Wednesday after being off-loaded by British customs agents from a ship bound for Iraq.

Iraq says impounded weapons are only pipe

LONDON (AP) — A weapons expert today inspected what authorities believe to be pieces of a huge gun ordered by Iraq, but which the manufacturer insisted was a petrochemical pipe.

The Iraqi government denied the impounded goods were parts of a gun barrel.

The domestic British news agency, Press Association, said the consignment included parts for a 130-foot-long gun barrel and a bore of 40 inches. This would be the longest ever made.

Arms experts said a gun of that size could fire nuclear or chemical warheads as far as Tehran or Tel Aviv.

A spokesman for the Customs and Excise Department would confirm only that the inspection was under way today on the docks at Middlesbrough in northeastern England, where the shipment was impounded Tuesday night.

"The goods appear to be of a military nature," a Customs spokesman said Wednesday. The goods would not be formally seized unless they were identified as armament, the spokesman said.

"Everything that is said about these pipes is baseless," said Naeel Hassan, press attache at the Iraqi Embassy in London.

"The British and the Israelis are trying to make a fuss about this matter. Even the company itself said that these pipes are used for only petrochemical industries," Hassan said.

A spokesman for Sheffield Forgemasters, which has been identified in news reports as the manufacturer, said the order had been approved by the government Department of Trade and Industry.

"The Department of Trade saw specifications, drawings, everything. We were supplying a pipe for a petrochemical production unit," said company spokesman Tony Peck.

"We received a verbal assurance (from the agency) at first, then there was contact on six occasions and written clearance was gained," Peck said.

A spokesman for the department, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it was department policy not to comment on dealings with individual companies.

A Customs spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said officers raided offices in the northern English steel-making city of Sheffield and in the industrial city of Birmingham in central England on Wednesday.

He said they "took away papers relevant to the specifications, ordering and delivery arrangements for this piece of equipment."

A spokesman for Walter Somers Ltd in Halesowen, near Birmingham, said Customs officers seized documents there on Wednesday. The spokesman, who requested anonymity, said the company produced some steel piping "of very much smaller dimensions" for Iraq in 1988 and had no pending orders from the country.

The Customs spokesman said the goods were consigned to Iraq and were being loaded aboard a ship chartered by the Iraqi Maritime Agency.

Britain banned all arms sales to Iraq and its enemy Iran following the outbreak of the eight-year Persian Gulf War. There has been a cease-fire since 1988, but Iran and Iraq are still not officially at peace and the British embargo remains.

Two weeks ago, Customs officers seized 40 American-made components for nuclear bomb triggers as they were being put aboard an Iraqi Airways flight to Baghdad. Five persons were arrested; three are facing charges, one was deported and one was released.

The Iraqis are widely believed to be building a nuclear bomb, and there has been increasing concern about the country's weapons program.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein last week threatened to use missiles armed with chemical warheads against Israel.

Christian clerics protest settlement

JERUSALEM (AP) — Police fired tear gas today to disperse Christian clerics, including the bishop of the Greek Orthodox Church, who protested the settlement of about 150 Jews in the Arab Christian Quarter of Jerusalem's Old City.

Police moved in after one priest tore down a poster with an Israeli Star of David that was put over a cross on the main door of the building taken over by the Jews, witnesses said.

The Jewish families, most of them headed by ultra-Orthodox seminary students, moved into a four-building complex in the heart of the Christian neighborhood Wednesday under police guard.

The site, near the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, was viewed as particularly provocative by Palestinian Christians, as was the timing in the midst of Easter week observances. It was the largest and most significant settlement of Jews outside the Jewish Quarter in the old, walled city.

Previously, two Jewish yeshiva seminaries were set up in the Moslem Quarter and about 40 Jewish families took up residence in the area, including former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

Jerusalem's Old City, divided into ethnic quarters, is home to 50,000 Moslems, more than 7,000 Christians and about 4,000 Jews. It was controlled by Jordan from 1948 until 1967, when it was captured by Israel in the Six-Day War and immediately annexed.

Gypsy congress calls for unity

JADWISIN, Poland (AP) — At what they billed as their largest congress ever, Gypsies from 27 countries demanded respect for their culture and an end to the stereotypes that have long seen them scorned as thieving fortunetellers.

The weeklong meeting of some 300 delegates ended Wednesday with the appeals from the worldwide wanderers that they be treated as any other disadvantaged minority.

Delegates to the fourth Congress of the World of Romany Union discussed issues including standardizing their Roma language, discrimination, memorializing Gypsy victims of the Nazi Holocaust and the potential dangers for Gypsies posed by rising nationalism in Eastern Europe.

Gypsies or the Romany as they prefer to be known, are descended from nomadic tribes that left northwestern India sometime during the first millennium and made their first recorded appearance in Western Europe early in the 1400s.

Their worldwide population is variously estimated at 5 million to more than 10 million.

The Romany have been associated in popular lore with fortunetelling, stealing and music-making, and conference participants said the stereotypes had been forced upon them by "gaje," or non-Gypsies.

Europe's Gypsy population was devastated during the Holocaust, when 500,000 to 1 million were put to death in gas chambers.

Chinese student leader escapes

HONG KONG (AP) — Another fugitive student leader of the crushed pro-democracy movement has escaped China through an underground railroad, which is still operating 10 months after the crackdown on dissent, a reliable source said.

"I want everybody to know that the channel is still alive, there's still hope," said the source, who is close to the railroad. The source refused to be identified further and asked that the date of the interview not be published, for security reasons.

He refused to divulge details of the escape route.

The source said Wang Chaohua fled China on or about Jan. 7.

Authorities cancel king's visa

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — After citing fears of violence the provisional government today canceled the entry visa of King Michael of Romania, who was en route to his homeland after 43 years in exile.

The state news agency Rompres said officials acted after the ex-monarch rejected the government's appeal that he postpone his trip until after elections set for May 20.

The government said Wednesday it feared the king's visit could provoke violence, but members of Michael's entourage said he planned to visit anyway.

Rompres said today "a family member confirmed that Michael of Hohenzollern got the message, but gave no further details." Michael and his family live in Versoix near Geneva, Switzerland.

Rompres said "instructions were issued to all border crossings to take action accordingly," and that the Romanian embassy in Bern had informed Swissair that his entry visa had been withdrawn.

Reservations about reform

Two years ago, the U.S. Senate launched what it promised would be a major investigation into mismanagement of the nation's Indian reservations, assembling a staff of 30 and a budget of $1.5 million for the purpose. But what began with a bang has wound up as a whimper, and the hope for any long-term improvements in relations between the federal government and the tribes has ended, once again, in bitterness.

The committee never lacked for sensational charges or compelling evidence to back up its calls for reform. In the course of the probe, the investigators revealed a widespread pattern of bribes and corruption in the tribal administration of Indian lands, a long history of shoddy and unsafe construction on reservation projects and increasing signs that organized crime has infiltrated the high-stakes gambling operations that many tribes operate around the country.

Conditions were no better at the Bureau of Indian Affairs, which, the Department of the Interior now admits, has lost millions of dollars that were being held in trust for American Indians. In addition, the committee accused the BIA of hiring convicted child molesters to teach in some of the reservation schools, and it charged that the federal government in recent years has helped private corporations exploit some $3 billion worth of natural resources on the reservations without providing adequate compensation to the Indians who live there.

To change all that, the committee proposed to abolish BIA, turn over the $3.3 billion it currently spends on Indian programs to the tribes directly, and then make the tribal governments accountable for their own affairs. But now, those sweeping legislative proposals have been all but abandoned by their sponsors, the committee staff was recently disbanded, and everyone involved is angry.

What went wrong? In part, the hope for reform was another victim of Charles Keating and the Lincoln Savings and Loan scandal, which tarnished both of the committee's co-chairmen, Arizona senators Dennis DeConcini and John McCain. But the fault lies as well with splits among Indian leaders, many of whom are often critical of BIA and proclaim a desire for greater tribal control but who, it turns out, are extremely reluctant to consider making any changes in their historic relationship with the federal government.

Indian rights activists contend that the Senate effort was just a waste of money, recalling that this was the 43rd probe of the BIA that Congress has undertaken since 1907 without accomplishing much in the way of significant reform. Sen. McCain complains that he never wanted to serve on the committee at all, "because I knew this would be the result.... You cannot please anyone when you work on issues of Native Americans."

Probably there's blame enough for all to share for this disappointing conclusion. But though the committee has gone away, the problems still remain, waiting for someone to lead, and someone to act.

Congress sending get-tough message to Gorbachev

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the struggle over Lithuanian secession, get-tough pressure from Congress sends Moscow a signal that President Bush has purposefully muted.

That relayed message is blunt: if President Mikhail S. Gorbachev clamps down more harshly on Lithuania, Bush will have no political alternative but to retaliate diplomatically. And their May 30 summit meeting in not specified.

Gorbachev eased up a bit on Tuesday, saying he still hopes to work out a solution and would decree presidential rule only as an extreme measure in case of civil conflict.

"I would just appeal to all sides and anyone with any influence to encourage dialogue and discussion," Bush said Tuesday night in Toronto, repeating his warning against the use of force.

The White House has a rule of silence on steps and counter-steps in the Lithuanian crisis, all in keeping with the president's effort to calm the controversy, here as well as there.

Hard-line demands that Gorbachev put down the secessionists sometimes seem to serve a tactical purpose for the Soviet president, echoing in Washington as warnings that if he bends too far on Lithuania, he could be undercut or even pushed from power.

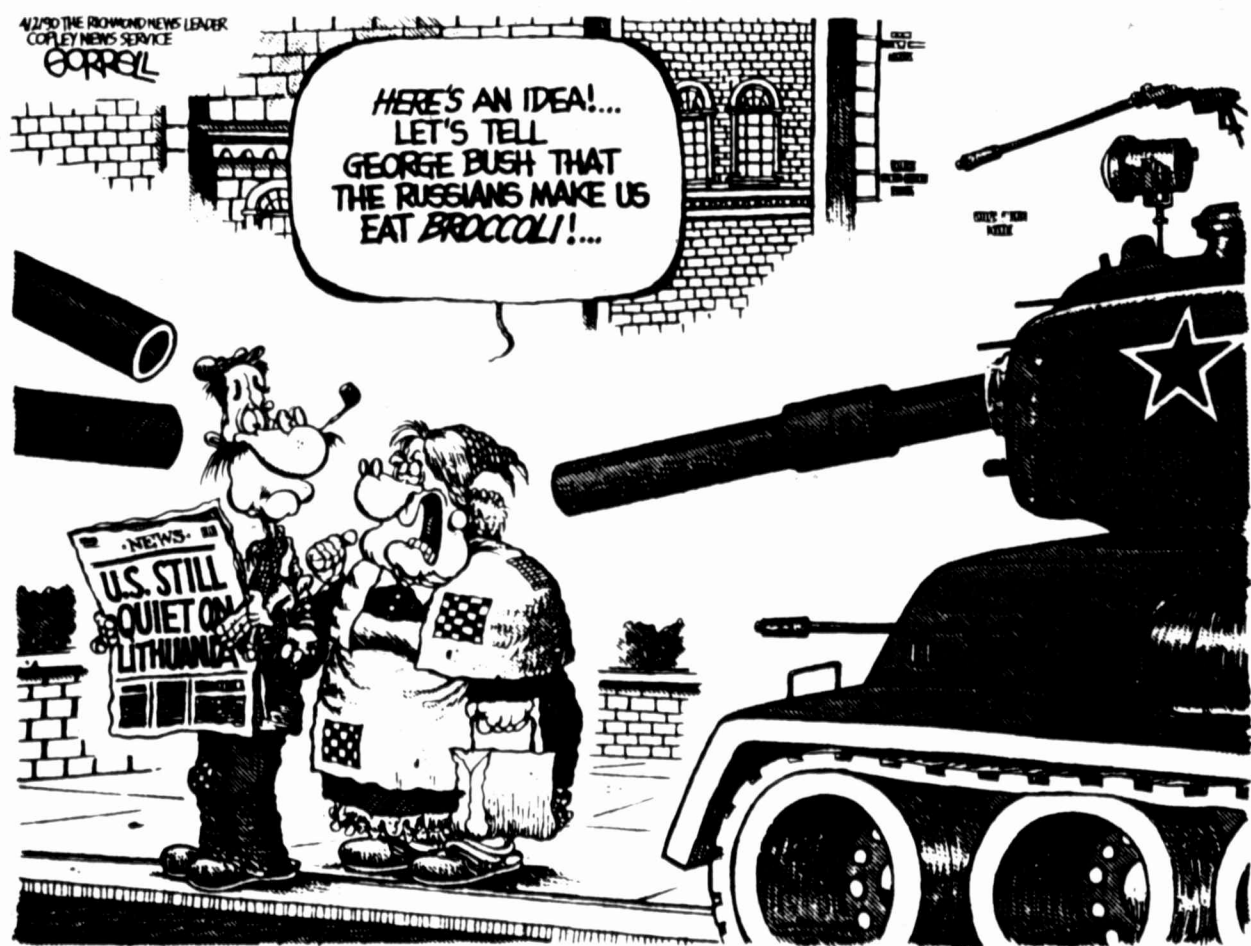

Conservative Republicans have suggested that if Gorbachev is that fragile, the administration may be wagering too much on him. The Bush course seems more attuned to the advice of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who saw Gorbachev in Moscow late last month and returned to counsel caution in Washington.

Bush and Kennedy discussed the visit. The president sent Gorbachev a letter said to have reiterated his support for the right to self-determination in Lithuania and his urging that the secession controversy be settled without force, through peaceful negotiations.

"I want to be sure that the Soviets understand our position and understand that we're not trying to make things difficult for Lithuania or the Soviet Union or anybody else," Bush said.

Congressional leaders in both parties have endorsed the cautious, measured Bush approach. But it is clear that a crackdown involving Soviet force would undo that, and a lot more. All bets would be off, said Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole.

The first casualty in an escalated crackdown would be a new trade agreement with preferences Moscow seeks. The administration is trying to get one ready for the Bush-Gorbachev summit scheduled in seven weeks; the meeting itself would be at risk should the Soviets clamp down hard.

But there already are suggestions in Congress that what Moscow already has done against Lithuanian secession should derail a trade deal until the unequal struggle is settled peacefully and on terms giving Lithuanians their independence.

Thirty-one senators signed a letter to Bush last week, saying the United States should take a stronger stand for Lithuanian independence. "Now is the time to inform the Soviet leadership what specific actions our government may take in response to the further use of armed force in Lithuania," they argued.

While the heaviest pressure comes from the Republican right, there are Democrats on the case, too, arguing for sterner steps to free Lithuania from the Soviet rule decreed by Hitler and Stalin 50 years ago.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., tried to have the Senate urge Bush to extend immediate diplomatic recognition to the government of Lithuania; that was rejected 59-36. A day later, on March 22, the Senate voted 95-0 for a toned-down version warning against Soviet force and asking Bush to consider recognition.

The House passed a similar resolution April 4, saying that the president should normalize diplomatic relations as soon as possible.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.,

Washington is hostage to Soviet forbearance.

Both presidents have to guard their political flanks against hard-liners. Gorbachev faces Soviet conservatives who want him to crack down hard on Lithuania. Bush has heard demands from the ranks in both political parties for economic and diplomatic measures to support the breakaway Baltic state and punish Moscow for what it already has done to bar secession.

The hard-line pressures on Gorbachev were underscored Monday when about 300 conservative members of the Supreme Soviet told him he should retroactively annul the parliamentary elections that led to Lithuania's March 11 declaration of independence, and dissolve the Lithuanian parliament.

Another warning came from the 16-member presidential council headed by Gorbachev, which was said to have decided that "additional economic, political and other measures" should be taken to unless the independence declaration is rescinded in favor of the slow, tortuous process the Soviet constitution sets for secession. The threatened steps were

Richards' waltz across Texas

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — In her waltz across Texas, Ann Richards rallied women to her "cause," enjoyed surprising strength in all regions and showed that Jim Mattox's drug charges may have backfired.

Swamping Mattox in the Democratic gubernatorial runoff, Ms. Richards not only got all of her primary voters back to the polls — she gained votes.

Ms. Richards received 63,014 more votes than she did a month ago while Mattox dropped off an almost identical number, 62,855. Ms. Richards' total rose from 576,112 on March 13 to 639,126 on Tuesday. Mattox plunged from 542,239 to 479,384 as total turnout dropped from 1.4 million to 1.1 million.

"She had an extraordinarily dedicated and motivated core of followers who stayed with her," said Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party.

"There were renewed efforts by her organizational people. A lot of her vote turnout ran ahead of last month, which is unusual for a runoff," said Jerry Polinard, a University of Texas-Pan American political scientist.

George Christian, Austin political consultant, said Ms. Richards appeared to do well with former Gov. Mark White's supporters, even though White had said he would "never" vote for her.

"I'm sure a lot of Mark White supporters didn't vote this time. But she was able to reach out and collect some voters who may have been for White or even Mattox in the first primary," Christian said.

Ms. Richards' strong feminist credentials certainly helped.

Throughout the campaign, and during her victory speech, Ms. Richards talked about her race as a movement. "You were giving your days and hours and money to a cause that we believe is a just cause," she told supporters.

Observed University of Houston political scientist Richard Murray: "The gender factor was huge."

Mattox blamed his first political loss since 1966 on the strength Ms. Richards enjoyed among women.

"I just think we were caught up in the phenomenon of women wanting to put a woman in the govern-nor's office — didn't matter about the qualifications or experience or anything else," Mattox said.

Not surprisingly, Ms. Richards disagreed with him.

"Women don't vote for women just because they're women," she said. "They will support a woman if they feel roughly all things are equal. But I can't have a win like I did tonight just because women supported me. I had men and I had women and I had people of all walks of life."

Christian said 1990 may be the year of women in Texas politics.

"She is a very attractive candidate to a lot of women. There's no point in trying to avoid that notion," he said. "To a lot of people, both male and female, this appears to be the year that a woman ought to get her shot. That's been a thread through this election all along."

Although Mattox had been expected to run strongly in rural Texas, the final results showed Wednesday that Ms. Richards held him off even in those areas.

Mattox won only one of six regions — and that by a very narrow margin. He claimed the Panhandle by 3,700 votes, but West Texas was a draw with only 17 votes separating the two.

Ms. Richards swept north, east, south and central Texas by big margins.

Yes sir, that's your baby

By ART BUCHWALD

Some people who believe that everyone should have babies tend to throw out the bathwater as soon as the baby is born.

"It's a boy! What a wonderful thing, a beautiful baby boy."

"Who takes care of him?"

"Don't worry. He belongs to all of us."

"The baby is 1 year old. He needs some milk."

"That's not my department. I was only concerned with making sure he was born."

"The boy is 6 years old. He's awfully thin and not getting much nourishment. Would you send someone over with food?"

"How did you get this number? Let me tell you something, I don't have any use for welfare cheats. If he's able-bodied, he can go out and get a job in McDonald's."

"He's 9 now and he seems slightly backward in school. The doctor said it was lack of a balanced diet after he was born. Do you have any idea how that happened?"

"There is just so much I can do. Once a baby has his own latchkey, it's everybody for himself."

"I'm calling to tell you that there was an altercation at school. The child you sponsored picked up a knife and tried to stab his teacher. He needs some immediate psychiatric treatment before he goes off the deep end forever."

"I can't afford psychiatric treatment. The trouble with kids today is that they are coddled by society. Give him a taste of a hard knocks' school and he'll straighten out."

"The boy has just turned 16 and he's joined a gang. The police believe he is into dope. If you give us $2,000, we can get him out of the neighborhood."

"That's ridiculous. Why should I bail out this child?"

"We assumed that since you campaigned so hard for his birth, you might help him in his teenage years."

"You had no right to think any such thing. He was a problem kid to start with. I saw it on his face in the hospital."

"He's 20 now. You probably read about him in the newspapers. The doctor who interviewed him said that he didn't have a chance. From the day he was born the boy felt that no one cared about him, and all he was trying to do was get even."

"You're not going to blame me for what that boy did. I haven't seen him since he was in the nursery."

"You fought so hard for him to see the light of day."

"I fight to bring a lot of children into the world — I couldn't take care of all of them even if I wanted to. That's the government's job."

"He got 15 years in prison. He still has no idea why he did it."

"What am I supposed to do?"

"Not too much. But it would be nice if you had a plan for a few of these children."

"I think you've got the wrong number. I'm with the 'Right to Life' not 'Right to Live.'"

Guitarist shines in last concert

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Symphony Orchestra has learned that first rule of show biz — Leave 'em wanting more.

From the rousing rendition of the "Star-Spangled Banner" that opened the concert to the flying fingers of guest guitarist Javier Calderon to the final chords of Dvorak's "New World Symphony" the orchestra, under the baton of Dr. Marianna Gabbi, kept the audience, including 17 Coahoma Elementary music students, enthralled in its final performance of the season Saturday night. There were no encore pieces despite the crowd's "bravos" and we're unlikely to see the musicians again until the fall.

The orchestra did a nice job on Rossini's "Overture to 'La Gazza Ladra'" and Dvorak's "Symphony in E Minor 'From the New World,'" but I have heard these pieces so many times that they didn't really capture my attention. However, hearing them both in the same program I was struck by their similarity.

True, "La Gazza Ladra" is very Italian and early nineteenth century, while the symphony is a late nineteenth century piece inspired by spirituals and native American melodies, but both have lovely springtime motifs framed with dramatic flourishes — martial percussion, the sound of storm clouds rising, a medieval pagent, dinosaurs lumbering through primordial ooze.

Both are narrative works that allow the listener to "see" a story in the music. The overture introduces the elements of the opera to follow and the symphony describes the creation of the New World, from the aforementioned dinosaurs to cowboys loping across the plains. It is to Gabbi and the orchestra's credit that they made these popular works sound fresh again.

But it was Bolivian-born classical guitarist Calderon who made the evening special. He played Rodrigo's "Concierto de Aranjuez" with incredible passion and energy, his guitar's versatile voice covering the spectrum from fiery Flamenco rhythms to the melodies of classical strings.

At times the piece sounded like a lush score for a classic western — the lone gunfighter walking through a deserted town, the good guys riding off into the sunset as the credits scroll and the signature theme swells. But at other moments it was almost baroque in its complex layering.

Rodrigo said he wanted the concerto to be "as nimble as a butterfly and as controlled as a bullfighter's lunge." The same could be said for the guitarist.

The orchestra accompanied Calderon beautifully, elaborating on themes established by the guitar with strings and mariachi-flavored horns.

The only thing that spoiled the effect was the loud snoring of a seat-mate. Since she woke up at the intermission and seemed a bit livelier, I had great hopes that she'd stay awake through Calderon's second piece. Much to my surprise, he didn't return to the stage and we never saw him again.

Since the Symphony Association made such a big deal about his performance and since he had such a harrowing experience getting to Big Spring, I expected more than one appearance by Calderon and his glorious guitar. He could've played the concerto again and I would've been happy.

The concert left me calling for more.

Ninja turtles invade the cinema

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. — Xenia and Victor Velez look at a large poster as they arrive to view the movie "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" at a theater in Universal City, Calif. The movie opened in Big Spring last week.

All "turtled out" on the TV screen

NEW YORK (AP) — The hit "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" will come out of their shells even more next fall when they join CBS' Saturday morning lineup.

Judy Price, CBS' vice president for children's programs, announced Tuesday that the network bought rights to 26 original half-hour "Turtles" cartoon episodes, none of which have previously appeared in a separate 65-episode package syndicated last year to local TV stations for weekday broadcasts.

The cartoon turtles are "the hottest thing going now," Price said. A live-action movie version also is a box-office hit, grossing more than $50 million in only two weeks.

Price said CBS signed an option for the shows last fall, and "the movie has been the frosting on the cake."

CBS' shows, produced by the same company that makes the syndicated version, will appear as a one-hour program, consisting of two half-hour episodes that complement each other's story lines, she said.

Price said she was unconcerned that, with five weekdays of turtles on TV, their addition to CBS' Saturday schedule would eventually leave young viewers all turtled out.

"In fact, quite the opposite has happened," she said. She cited as an example CBS' "Muppet Babies," which also is syndicated for weekday broadcast, and still is doing well in its sixth season on CBS.

It's been shown that children prefer the familiar on TV, she said, while it's difficult to lure them to the new and different. "The things that get sampled are the known things, the comfortable."

The only other new series in CBS' Saturday schedule is "Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure." Based on the movie of the same name, the half-hour show is about two teenagers traveling through time, aided by a hipster whose voice is that of comic George Carlin.

CBS' turtles purchase had been expected by many in the TV industry. It came as CBS became the last of the networks to unveil its fall lineup for Saturday mornings, an increasingly competitive arena in broadcast and cable TV.

Unlike NBC, which on Monday said it was dropping such old cartoon reliables as "ALF" and "The Smurfs" and bringing in the most live-action children's programming in its history, CBS' new schedule remains predominantly animated.

CBS axed "California Raisins," "Dungeons and Dragons" and "The Adventures of Raggedy Ann and Andy," but is bringing back "Garfield," "Muppet Babies," "Dink, The Little Dinosaur" and "CBS Storybreak."

Its new schedule has only one live-action show, the partly animated "Pee-Wee's Playhouse," a ratings success returning for a fifth season.

Price said "animation is the most tested and true form for Saturday mornings."

"One thing you have to remember: children are exposed to live action seven days a week," she added, asserting that contrary to commonly held beliefs, cartoons only account for ten percent of childrens' total TV viewing.

Beauty and Beast sold to cable

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Beauty and the Beast," canceled by CBS earlier this TV season despite its avid cult following, will return both to cable and syndicated television.

The drama, about a Shakespeare-quoting subterranean brute and his love interest with a prosecutor, will make its debut on cable's The Family Channel come fall. Republic Pictures said Thursday.

The package will feature three never-seen original episodes.

The 56-episode package featuring Ron Perlman and Linda Hamilton will go into syndication next year, said Republic, a producer and distributor of TV programs.

The show, already has been sold into syndication to stations in New York, Dallas, Miami, Chicago, Boston, Houston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Phoenix and Detroit, the company said.

Competition

"A Young Lady of Property" the play directed by Blaine Buchenau returned from Kermit Saturday with an area win behind it and regional competition ahead. Thursday evening I watched an outstanding cast and crew in the final dress rehearsal before area competition and had no doubt in my mind they were winners. The story that unfolds on stage has touches of sadness, humor and small town concern and is portrayed in such a precise and authentic way, one can easily forget it is a play.

Cast members include John Overton as Mr. Walter Russell, Melinda Mitchell as Miss Martha, Shawnte Bryant as Wilma, Leah Mathison as Arabella and Trina Whitaker as Minna. Other cast members are Denise Walker as Miss Gert, Cody Wells as Lester, Stephanie Mauch as Mrs. Leighton and Shane Sayles as The Man. Alternates Rachel Phillips and Shele Reid who also assist crew members Clifton McFadden, Bryan Black, Corky Mitchell, and Sheree Marr make set changes so professionally the show flows from one scene to another without pause. After Saturday's competition, Leah Mathison and Trina Whitaker received All-Star Cast medals and Shante Bryant received honorable mention All-Star Cast. The play travels to Odessa on April 20 for regional competition.

Basketball

Saturday night the Berryville Bombers, coached by Ace Berry, defeated the Seven Dwarfs by a score of 8 to 6. Starting players Tommy Scott, Rodney Collinsworth, Jack Howard, and Dusty Choate and substitutes Bobby Fryar, Mike Cathey, Ace Berry, and Robert Crenshaw may have had an unfair advantage, however, the Seven Dwarfs are all girls. Katie Cobb, Tammie Harmon, Kim Gee, and Tiffani Ward and substitutes Shelly Keenan, Rachel Phillips, Mandy Wallings, Kim Walker and Melanie Cobb played their first basketball game on donkeys!

The second game between Havoc on Hooves and the Odd Balls was more evenly matched as Jeff Rawson, Coley Dobbs, Thomas Hoggard, Jon Tod Wright and substitutes Darrell Spears, Marshall Blythe, and David Grant faced Corey Anderson, Rex Denton, Sam Justiss, John Ed Ezell, and substitutes Gerald King, Chris Schneider, Ross Jackson and Gary Redlin. The Odd Balls won the game 14 to 10 and advanced to the championship game. The Berryville Bombers luck prevailed and they won the championship game 2 to 0. All the games had moments of suspense as players tried to keep within the rules, one enterprising player stood on his donkey's prone form and made a basket.

Announcer Stanley Blackwell and score keeper Quail Dobbs had a hard time keeping track of everything while laughing with the fans. Bob Crosby's Donkey Basketball was sponsored by the Coahoma Lions and proceeds from the event will be used to replenish the scholarship fund.

Fight over friends' divorce pits husband against wife

DEAR ABBY: Dear friends of ours, "Sue" and "Don," are in the process of getting a divorce after 37 years of marriage and three children. We have been best friends for nearly 50 years. My husband and Don were Army buddies, and Sue and I were childhood friends and are very close.

Now I feel that I no longer want Don in my house as he is the one who instigated the divorce. My husband, however, insists on remaining friends with Don, saying, "He needs friends more than ever now."

I totally disagree and think my husband should terminate his friendship with Don instead of feeling sorry for him. My husband says, "Sue got the beautiful house, and poor Don is living in a dinky little apartment and needs friends to stand by him."

I say: "Sue has been a good wife and mother and didn't deserve this."

My husband says: "Don did his duty and tolerated Sue all these years for the sake of the children, and now that they are grown, he deserves some peace and happiness."

This is causing a great deal of disruption in our house and we need a clearer head to settle this. Your opinion, please. — A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

Dear Abby

DEAR DIFFERENCE: So your friends are divorcing, and you took Sue's side and your husband took Don's side. Fair enough, but the home in which you are living is your husband's home, too, and you have no right to bar Don from your home; neither have you the right to ask your husband to terminate his friendship with Don.

DEAR ABBY: Last Christmas we were at my grandmother's house for supper. The kids were asking when we were going to open the presents because everyone had finished eating except Grandma. We were told, "As soon as Grandma finishes eating."

Well, just as Grandma was lifting her fork to her mouth, my 10-year-old cousin, "Bobby," walked over to Grandma, took her plate away from her and threw the food into the garbage!

Bobby's mother said, "Well I guess Grandma should have eaten a little faster."

I wanted to say something, but didn't want to start an argument.

Abby, Grandma is 75 years old, and I was taught to have respect for my elders. I thought about getting Grandma another plate, but she probably would have said she was finished anyway.

Did I do the right thing by keeping quiet? — ANOTHER GRAND-

CHILD (AGE 13)

DEAR GRANDCHILD: A child as rude and undisciplined as Bobby might have hit you over the head with a drumstick, so you probably were wise to keep your mouth shut. However, one of the adults should have taken Bobby to task for his rudeness. And also Bobby's mother for not having stood up for Granny.

Local census forms trickling in

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

CROSSROADS COUNTY — The Census questionnaire has generated just a trickle of responses here, rather than the flood officials anticipated. Eleven days after the much-touted Census day, only 10,000 forms have been returned to the Abilene district office out of 200,000 mailed to the 29-county region.

Bob Oetting, a recruiting operations supervisor with the Abilene district office, said there have been few requests for Spanish-language questionnaires and few homeless people found in the region.

In addition to counting the homeless, census workers also took a tally of transients, including people moving to new homes over the census weekend and carnival and circus employees.

Each person missed by the census costs Texas $150 in federal funding. In 1980, an estimated 300,000 Texans were not counted, costing the state $45 million a year and a congressional seat.

As a result of the 5 percent response rate, the U.S. Census Bureau is looking for approximately 20 additional workers to go door-to-door in Howard County and collect demographic data. Forty people have already signed up for the two- to eight-week job.

"A lot has to do with the postal service not being able to deliver the forms. There are apartments with small mail boxes that the envelopes won't fit and a lot of vacant homes," said Oetting.

"But it's very likely the enumerators will come visit if a household won't respond. They'll call and if that doesn't work, then they'll knock on the door," he said.

Questionnaires sent out to country addresses will be picked up by census workers, rather than mailed back by respondents, Oetting said. The enumerators will also check census maps for accuracy.

"That's why it's important for us to get locals to do the work," he said. "We want people from here because they're more likely to know the people and the area and more likely to be interested in it."

The job is interesting but not too hazardous, Oetting said.

"We've had one dog bite so far. Maybe we've been lucky. But one of the recruiters almost got bitten by a snake."

People interested in applying for the temporary jobs should contact the Texas Employment Commission at 267-7437.

Man who CAREs travels the world

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

Pedaling a specially-built bicycle around the world is Cody Anderson's way of encouraging donations for CARE, a third-world relief charity.

Anderson, a 34-year-old New Hampshire resident, made a stop in Big Spring last night to pass out donation envelopes and publicize his "Pedal for Life."

Anderson may be remembered by some for a covered-wagon trip across the country for the American Heart Association 10 years ago. For the past 12 years, Anderson has made a career of giving his time to causes.

"I feel it's my moral obligation as a Christian and as a human being to try to make the world a better place," Anderson said. He will continue to ride his 60-speed bike from West Texas to Los Angeles, then traveling to many foreign countries including the Soviet Union to spread his message of giving.

"I want to know how we can look in the mirror unless we are doing something to help these countries where 40,000 children starve every day," Anderson said. "In a little over half a day, there is a dead child to match the population of Big Spring."

Anderson said he received a warm reception from Big Spring's Days Inn Tuesday evening. The motel, which is one of the sponsors of his ride, donated his room and breakfast this morning.

Though he left with only $5 in his pocket, Anderson said he has had no problems so far. His ride has been featured on several TV programs as well as national magazine and newspaper articles. When he arrives in L.A., he will be a guest of "Good Morning America."

Since he began his trek, Anderson has been given the key to 69 U.S. cities and two Presidential letters of appreciation. He expects to complete a round-the-world tour in about two years, and hopes to raise several million dollars for CARE.

Donations can be made in honor of Anderson's ride by sending them to: CARE, Pedal for Life, 600 1st Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Wheelchair Olympics urges vets to register

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Paralyzed veterans who depend on wheelchairs for mobility can register for the 10th National Veterans Wheelchair Games, which will be held June 26-30 at Tulane University in New Orleans.

"I urge eligible veterans to register for the 1990 games, which promise to be the best yet," said Conrad Alexander, the director of the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

West Texas was not represented in the 1989 games and rehabilitation coordinator Sammy Dennard said no one from the hospital had signed up yet for the games this year.

"Through VA recreation therapy programs, our veterans came to realize that, with proper training and the help of adaptive equipment, they can participate in sports they never thought possible when they were first injured. This type of achievement builds their sense of self-esteem and gives them the confidence to face the challenges of their everyday lives," Alexander said.

"These games are a showcase for the remarkable athletic abilities and personal achievements of our nation's disabled veterans," he said.

The games, the largest wheelchair sports event in the United States, are open to all U.S. military veterans who use wheelchairs due to spinal cord injury, certain neurological conditions, orthopedic amputations and other disabilities.

Organizers expect 500 athletes from around the nation. Puerto Rico and Great Britain to compete in track and field, swimming, basketball, weightlifting, slalom, bowling, table tennis, archery and billiards. Tennis, racquetball and quad rugby will be exhibition events.

"We are committed to this event because we've seen the difference that sports can make in the successful rehabilitation of an injured veteran," said F. David Parker, the president of and the Paralyzed Veterans of America, which cosponsors the games with the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Registration packages are available from Elizabeth Moltz, a recreation therapist at the VA center, by calling 263-7361, extension 7224. The registration deadline is May 1.

Army shooting animals gets doctor's goat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is abandoning a long-held practice of shooting goats at a Texas base to train doctors in treating military trauma, but a medical group that sought the moratorium says the woundings are continuing at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine said 800 to 1,000 goats a year were being shot in the legs at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio until the moratorium. The practice, however, continues at Fort Bragg, and as many as 1,200 goats are involved, the organization said.

Dr. Neal D. Barnard, a

Dr. Neal D. Barnard, a psychiatrist and president of the committee, said he believes the Army decided to use goats because "no one would care about an animal with an unpopular face, not a cute and cuddly face. However, the military was wrong."

psychiatrist and president of the committee, said he believes the Army decided to use goats because "no one would care about an animal with an unpopular face, not a cute and cuddly face. However, the military was wrong."

Barnard said the physicians group sought in moratorium in part after such Army specialists as radiologists and psychiatrists, who normally don't treat trauma victims, were being told to participate in the training at Fort Sam Houston.

"I was very angry, for a couple of reasons," Barnard said Wednesday. "The first is that it's not a very nice thing to be shooting these animals. Secondly, it's not even very good training. If you really want to be good at treating wounds, there's no substitute for going into a clinical setting, an emergency room or an operating room, and that's the way all competent trauma physicians are trained."

Barnard said the wound of a goat is far different than a human's wound, and that shooting a goat in the leg "has no relation to an abdominal wound or a chest wound or a head wound... The tissue feels different in the goat — it's got thick, hairy skin."

Barnard said the Army had been shooting goats to train doctors since 1958, and that he learned of the ban late last week.

Pat Davis, chief of public affairs for the Army's Academy of Health Sciences at Fort Sam Houston, said she could not confirm how long the woundings had been taking place. The ban took effect about 90 days ago.

Ms. Davis said the Army did not use firearms to inflict the wounds.

Voters 'fickle' about drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrat Ann Richards overcame allegations of drug abuse to win the gubernatorial nomination in Texas, but analysts say voters can be fickle about judging politicians with drugs in their past.

Age, sex and the drug of choice all may have something to do with it, they say. And so can the candidate's opponent.

Accusations of drug abuse and related character attacks so dominated the four-week Texas gubernatorial runoff between Ms. Richards and state Attorney General Jim Mattox that one commentator said the contest had sunk from the gutters to the sewers.

But the same issue created few ripples in Massachusetts, where 11 politicians last month admitted they had tried marijuana. And similar admissions appeared to play no role in the losing 1988 presidential campaigns of Democrats Bruce Babbitt and Al Gore.

Just last week, the Senate approved Timothy Ryan as the nation's chief savings and loan regulator after senators displayed little concern that he had tried marijuana and cocaine while in law school.

In Texas, Mattox pursued Ms. Richards relentlessly on the drug issue after she refused to say whether she had used illegal drugs.

"Did she use marijuana? Or something worse, like cocaine? Not as a college kid, but as a 47-year-old elected official sworn to uphold the law," Mattox asked in one television ad. Later he alleged outright that Ms. Richards, the state treasurer, once had a cocaine addiction. But by the end, he, too, was fighting off drug use allegations.

Still to be seen is whether the drug issue will dog Richards in her general election contest against Republican Clayton Williams. Analysts say there are many potential difficulties, starting with her age. At 56, she is substantially older than the generation usually associated with and excused for experimental drug use.

The issue also is harder to overcome for women, analysts said.

Investigators don't feel Wednesday's burglary was connected with the break-in on Tuesday, Leubner said.

"These guys were just after reclaimable metals," he said.

Police were tipped to Tuesday's break-in, and were able to watch two men enter the Cameo building. When the officers caught the men inside, one of them was in possession of property stolen in an earlier burglary, Leubner said.

One of the men was charged with burglary, while charges are pending against the other.

School reform funding eyed

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements' chief of staff warned that lawmakers should "quit playing games" and heed the governor's vow to veto new state taxes for court-ordered school finance reform.

"The governor is going to veto a tax bill, so if they want to go play chicken with him, they can do it, but that is senseless," Mike Toomey said Wednesday, after outlining for the Senate Finance Committee Clements' plan to fund school finance reform by transferring money from other programs and increasing the state fee for obtaining driving records.

Clements favors a $234 million school finance plan for 1990-91, although he has said he would allow a bill with a higher price tag if it didn't require new taxes.

Speaker Gib Lewis said the House will consider ways to fund school finance reform next week. Lawmakers are considering cuts in other state budget areas; a state lottery; and fee and tax increases.

Rep. James Hury, chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, said all options will be considered in funding the school finance plan that emerges from a legislative conference committee, which is trying to work out differences between a $450 million House bill and a $1.2 billion Senate measure.

But he said if non-tax revenue measures aren't enough, the difference will be made up in taxes.

"I don't call it a game at all. I call it just as serious as you can be. We've passed a bill, and we're going to fund it," said Hury, D-Galveston.

There are enough votes in the 150-member House, where tax bills must originate, to pass a sales tax increase, said Hury and Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the budget-writing Appropriations Committee. But they don't see the two-thirds margin needed to override a gubernatorial veto.

"It seems like everybody's coming down on that — everybody except Governor Clements — is coming down in favor of that (a sales tax increase)," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, Finance Committee chairman.

Record chaser

Steers discus thrower after 36-year record

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — The year was 1954 and Pete Buske wasn't even born. When Frosty Robinson hurled the discus 169 feet, he established the longest standing track record at Big Spring High School.

Now that record is in jeopardy and Buske is quickly closing in on it. The Big Spring Steers' senior weightman is the favorite in both the shot put and discus heading into today's District 4-4A track meet at San Angelo Bobcat Stadium.

Buske has the best throw in district in both events. He's tossed the shot put 50-10 and the discus 164-8. He figures this will be the climax of a four-year varsity track career. During his freshmen year, a young, inexperienced 175-pound Buske threw the discus 125-feet and finished fifth at district.

The next year, he hurled the oval plate 148-feet, finishing second in district behind Andrews' Joe Don Finley. Last year, he was a good discus thrower in a district with two very good discus throwers.

Buske threw 156-feet, but Finley was throwing in the 180's, and teammate Ronnie Seals was throwing in the mid 175's.

"Without Finley and Seals, the quality of discus throwers has gone down some in the district," said Buske. "With them (Finley and Seals) I always had something to shoot for. Now I go after my own goals."

And what are those goals? "At the start of the year, I set my goals to get the school record in the discus and throw over 50-feet in the shot put," he said. Well one of the goals have already been reached. His throw of almost 51 feet is about eight feet further than he threw the 12-pound ball last year. He credits strength and quickness for most of that.

"Over the summer I worked hard on my strength and quickness. I improved a lot," he explained. His 4.9 40-yard dash time, and 360-pound bench press also helped him on the football field, where he was an all-state offensive tackle. His 6-foot-2, 230-pound body makes him a good prospect for a college football player. He says he's thinking about playing ball for Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls, or West Texas State University in Canyon.

Buske started the season slow in the discus. "Before the season I was throwing about 150. Then in the first three meets I was throwing in the 130s," he said. "I got in a slump. I wasn't throwing real good. I think it was mental."

"Then I watched a lot of films of professional throwers with coach Basinger (weight coach Kenny Basinger), and I just tried to do what they did. It worked. The next week I threw 164 in Snyder."

And since then, Buske has been

BIG SPRING — Big Spring Steers senior Pete Buske will be shooting for district championships in both the discus and shot put today at the District 4-4A track meet at San Angelo Bobcat Stadium.

nothing but consistent, throwing 160 feet the next three weeks.

Buske's main competition in the shot put will come from Pecos' Angel Tarin (49-6), and discus (154-11); and Snyder's Jody Iglehart in the discus (152-8). He's counting on winning both events, and thinks the sophomore year he qualified to regional will help.

"I was really frightened my sophomore year (regional meet) because it was my first time in major competition. I didn't throw very well. This year I shouldn't be scared. I know what to expect," he said. "At district there's no pressure on me, the way I see it, they have to beat me," he said.

"I'm going to get that school record. It's either going to be this week or at regional. I hope it stays around as long as the other. It's hard to believe it's been around that long."

Sounds like a 36-year-old record might come tumbling down.

Hurlers toss gem

ANAHEIM (AP) — Mark Langston wanted five good innings in his debut with the California Angels.

He got seven no-hit innings. When Mike Witt contributed two more, the pair got a rare gem — a combined no-hitter.

The California pitchers teamed up Wednesday night for only the fifth combined, nine-inning no-hitter ever in the majors and the first since 1976, as the Angels beat the Seattle Mariners 1-0.

Langston, the Angels' $16 million left-handed free agent signee, was amazed at what happened in his first appearance for the Angels — and against his former team, no less.

"It was stunning," he said. "I tried to imagine what my first game would be like, against Seattle and all. Believe me, I didn't imagine anything close to this."

"I couldn't have written it any better. You want to start off on the right foot and I feel very grateful for the way it turned out."

Langston, who worked just 16 innings in the lockout-abbreviated spring training, said he made the decision to leave after seven innings.

"The last two innings, I was just pitching on adrenalin," he said. "I gave up the ball after the seventh. My arm speed just wasn't there."

Langston struck out three and walked four. He had control problems early and often fell behind the hitters, but still never allowed a runner past first base. He threw 98 pitches.

ANAHEIM, Calif. — California Angels pitcher Mark Langston makes his season debut as an Angel against his former teammates, the Seattle Mariners. Langston and Mike Witt combined for a no-hitter.

Langston's arrival this year, pitched a perfect final two innings, getting the Mariners each time on a pair of grounders to second, then a strikeout.

Ken Griffey Jr. struck out to end the game.

The Angels scored in the seventh against Gary Eave on a walk to Johnny Ray, Wally Joyner's double, an intentional walk to Chili Davis and a one-out walk to Dante Bichette on a full count.

said the fact that Langston's control wasn't at its best actually made it harder to hit him.

Asked if being no-hit was harder to take because it was Langston, Lefebvre shot back: "What's the difference if you have a no-hitter thrown against you? A no-hitter isn't hard to swallow. Losing 1-0, when we had good pitching and should have won, is hard to swallow."

"It's a weird feeling to combine on it," Witt said.

Gregg named Mustangs A.D.

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist football coach Forrest Gregg will find himself charged with the unique task of picking his own successor after the 1990 season.

Gregg became the school's athletic director on Wednesday after Doug Single resigned to become president of Special Olympics International.

The 56-year-old Gregg will hold both jobs for only a year, and will name his own replacement when the football season is over.

"This could possibly be the happiest day of my life, other than when I married my wife Barbara," Gregg said. "I love this school and I want to see it back on top."

Gregg said he has no successor in mind.

"I have time on my side," he said. "I'm not ready to fire the coach yet. Right now, I don't have to make that decision."

Gregg was 2-9 last year, playing mostly with freshmen on the Mustangs' first team since the NCAA imposed a "death penalty" in February 1987 for an alumni slush fund scandal.

SMU president Kenneth A. Pye praised Single "for restoring progress to SMU athletics and bringing football back to the campus."

"I told him in February he should interview for the Olympics job. We'll miss him, but it's a prestigious position," he said.

Single called his new job an "opportunity of a lifetime," and said one of his biggest achievements at SMU was "public credibility in the type of program we were running."

"It was a very emotional decision for me," Single said by telephone from Washington, D.C. "I didn't want to leave unless I felt good about what I could achieve at SMU. I felt we got the situation turned around and made an impact with NCAA compliancy."

Single came to SMU on Oct. 2, 1987 to face the challenge of rejuvenating the Mustangs' athletic program, which was battered by the "play-for-pay" scandal.

Boz's future in doubt

SEATTLE (AP) — Former Oklahoma standout Brian Bosworth, the Seattle Seahawks $11 million linebacker, is still having problems with his shoulders casting a pall on his injury interrupted NFL career, his agent said.
 Gary Wichard, who negotiated Bosworth's 10-year contract with the Seahawks, told KIRO-TV Wednesday his client used to be able to bench press 225 pounds 30 times in a row, but now he struggles to do it once.
 Wichard said Bosworth still wanted to play football and his future was up to the Seahawks.
 The Associated Press was unable to reach Wichard in New York by telephone.
 Shoulder problems have plagued Bosworth the past two seasons.

Leona Helmsley, who is appealing a federal tax evasion conviction, said she and her real-estate tycoon husband, Harry, dine at home these days to avoid harassment.

"It's rare that we go out," she said in the May issue of the Ladies Home Journal. "The one time we did, it was a cruel experience. A restaurant customer shouted at me."

A federal judge has sentenced her to serve four years in prison and pay a $7.1 million fine for evading $12 million in taxes by disguising purchases for herself and her $11 million mansion as business expenses.
