Airpark toxic soil cleanup underway

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Toxic soil cleanup at McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark is moving into the second phase, which involves the design of a plan, Army Corps of Engineers project officials said Wednesday.

A recent study at the former Webb Air Force base concluded there were soil contaminants that pose little risk to the public or the environment.

Proposals and reports will be placed on display at the airpark and the Howard County Library until May 25 to encourage public examination and comment.

Project manager Steve Lemons said citizens who wish to comment after viewing the reports can write project officials at the address listed at both locations.

At a public forum held Wednesday, eight Big Spring residents attended, showing no opposition to tentative plans, said Corps official George Hanley. "Our next step will be to take a careful look and go ahead with the design phase of the project."

In the design phase, Florida architectural firm Environmental Service and Engineering, Inc. (ESE) will prepare a detailed plan to deal with contaminated soil in the two targeted areas, underground fuel storage and the waste lagoon. The firm has prepared proposed methods, but Lemons said there is no definite plan of action as public opinion and changing Texas Water Commission guidelines must be considered.

Fuel stored in three tanks leaked to a depth of 60 feet in one area and 40 feet in another, ESE Principal Engineer Rusi Charna said. Components of jet and airplane fuels discovered in the soil were found to present no health risks, but exceeded state guidelines, he said.

Clean-up of the area will begin with removal of the tanks and pipes, thought to be leak-prone as well, Charna said. ESE has proposed a vacuum extraction method in which only the dangerous substances are removed from the soil. Following it would be "bio-of underground storage tanks that contained aviation fuel that has leaked into the soil. The site is one of two that is scheduled to be cleaned up by the Army Corp of Engineers.

remediation" using naturally occurring substances to return the soil to its former state.

Proposed treatment for the waste lagoon, a former storage for sewage or industrial wastes is "capping" the area with synthetic materials to eliminate the possibility of direct human contact. The pesticide chlordane was found in the upper five feet of the soil, which would be a carcinogen if such exposure was continued over a period of time, Lemons said.

The risk, Lemons explained, is best expressed as that if a child ate a teaspoonful of dirt once a month for ten years, it might present health problems. The capping procedure would involve "burying" dangerous chemicals, he said. Grass and vegetation would grow on top of the cap, returning the area to a normal appearance.

ESE officials said the lagoon could be made into a park without danger, but construction of a building would not be possible without bringing hazardous waste back to the surface.

An investigation and risk assessment by Department of Defense and Corps of Engineers officials found the airpark to be of low priority as compared with more serious contamination levels around the country, Toxicologist Alan Chandler said.

Tests, he said, were conducted under conservative standards.

Testing procedures have improved greatly over the past 20 years, Chandler said. Soil samples were taken and examined in more complex tests than those performed on blood at a clinic, Chandler said.

After clean-up, Lemons said, the only way the sites could pose future problems would be if TWC guidelines were changed.

Charna said after ESE completes the design phase, action will be the responsibility of the Corps of Engineers Fort Worth district. Local construction contractors will have the opportunity to bid on the work of clean-up.

Murdered couple had multiple stab wounds

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Jeane Davidson suffered 16 stab wounds and Lloyd Davidson, 14 stab wounds, in their gruesome murder a week ago, a preliminary autopsy reported.

Pathologist Robert Rember released the findings to Justice of the Peace Bill Shankles, the coroner in the double homicide case, Wednesday afternoon.

The report said the couple had died of massive internal and external hemorrhaging caused by the stab wounds. A time of death has not been determined precisely, but apparently occurred at least several hours before the deaths were discovered by a family member.

Jeane Davidson's body had seven penetrating wounds to the chest cavity and mid back, including two that struck the heart. She also had nine superficial cuts to the head, right shoulder and arm and both hands. The report said she had a scalp wound probably caused by a blunt instrument.

Lloyd Davidson's body had one stab wound to the front base of the neck and five additional wounds to the chest and upper abdomen that struck organs. He also had eight wounds the report termed non-fatal to the right arm, chest, finger and thumb.

Rember's report said the instrument used in the murders appeared to be a five- to six-inch double-edged object.

Shankles had no comment on the report, saying it spoke for itself. He did not know when a final report would be released.

Clements fights school tax bill

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — After fighting in the halls of the Capitol, Gov. Bill Clements plans to take his no-tax message straight to Texans with a special television broadcast.

Clements said Wednesday he wants air time, probably Friday night, to explain why he is vetoing a sales tax increase that lawmakers want for public schools.

"It's important that the people of Texas understand the situation down here and the lack of serious activity in the Legislature," Clements said.

Clements has vowed to veto a one-half cent sales tax hike that would fund most of a $555 million

AUSTIN — State Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley, listens as Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, tries to amend a measure that would have kept state money flowing to schools, even if no reforms are enacted. Gibson and Rep. Harvey Hilderbran, R-Uvalde, sponsored the "escape hatch" plan which eventually fell short of the votes to be enacted immediately.

BIG SPRING — Volunteers who have dedicated long hours to improving the appearance of downtown would love to remove all their handiwork.

However, until the burned-out and abandoned buildings are demolished, volunteers with Big Spring Main Street, Inc., will continue to give the ugly structures a face-lift. Beverly Franklin, downtown coordinator for the group, said local artists and carpenters have donated their time, energy and talents to cover the old building's faces with 1920s-era scenes painted on plywood panels.

Flooding routs campers at lake

COMANCHE AP — Scores of people, most of them elderly, were plucked off the tops of recreation vehicles and mobile homes at a Proctor Lake campground early Thursday.

Officials said law enforcement officials and other emergency workers spent more than two hours ferrying more than 100 people to safety at the Sowell Creek Park. Estimates of the number rescued ranged up to 130.

"They came out in boats, many of them with their pets," said Sam Marshall, local Civil Defense coordinator, of the evacuation that began at 3:30 a.m.

One of those rescued was an infant only a few months old, Marshall said.

Marshall said authorities were trying to determine why the campers were not warned about the rapidly rising water.

There has been no damage estimate yet, but Marshall said it probably will be substantial.

"A lot of the motor homes under water are $100,000 jobs," he said. "And 28 to 30 have lost new Blazers or new automobiles."

Inmate bottoms out in escape attempt

BAIRD (AP) — Authorities got to the bottom an inmate's failed escape because they found scratches on the man's buttocks from where he failed to squeeze through an opening sawed in a jail window, Callahan County officials said Thursday.

"It was a case of getting him in the end," said Chief Deputy Wayne Knowles of the incident that occurred Wednesday.

Another inmate, Bob Harold Leach, had disappeared early Wednesday morning after two bars had been sawed away from a second-story jail window.

Knowles said jail officials discovered Harvey Glen Edwards, 26, of Falls County, had tried in vain to follow Leach after conducting a strip search of inmates.

"The imprints of his body matched the pattern of the screen," Knowles said. "The evidence was imprinted on his buttocks."

Edwards, who already was being held on charges of aggravated kidnapping, aggravated robbery and aggravated rape, has had a charge of fabricating an escape added to the list.

Leach, 26, of China Springs, was recaptured later on Wednesday at his mother's home in McLennan County.

Legal battle raging within Confederate Air Force

HARLINGEN (AP) — A legal battle is heating up within the Confederate Air Force over the moves taken to move the historic aircraft group's headquarters.

Dissidents are angry that the CAF board never asked the 8,000 members for final approval when it chose to move to Midland instead of five other cities vying for the tourist attraction. The board on April 9 announced it would begin negotiating the move with Midland officials.

A member group calling itself the CAF Preservation Committee is threatening to sue the CAF's board of directors so that members can have the final say on whether the organization should move to West Texas.

The CAF, an organization devoted to keeping World War II's history alive, started looking for a place to relocate last year after learning the group's World War II museum and vintage airplanes did not fit into expansion plans at Harlingen's Valley International Airport.

Soon after the announcement that the board selected Midland, many CAF members complained that the board was authorized only to take a look at potential sites, not make a final decision.

Board member Bob Austin of Brownsville quit the 11-member board after it voted on the Midland move while in an upstairs room at the San Antonio International Airport on April 7.

"One of the members read a prepared motion, and it was hurriedly seconded. There was no discussion allowed. Ten voted for it and I voted nay. And then I resigned," Austin said.

Austin said he voted against it because there was not enough information available to make an informed decision.

"I just didn't think, and I still don't think, that anybody had taken the time to give proper consideration to pick up and move something the size of the CAF," Austin said Wednesday.

Austin said he never understood why the board rejected an offer from San Antonio to pay $75,000 for market analyses of all six cities, with the only condition being that the study include San Antonio.

The CAF Preservation Committee enlisted the help of a San Antonio law firm and notified the board it must allow a membership referendum on the move, or face a lawsuit that would seek to force the vote.

A letter to the board, drafted by the San Antonio law firm of Cox & Smith Inc., notified directors that according to CAF bylaws, any move would require approval of three-fourths of the members voting in a referendum.

Directors entering into a contract with Midland without first seeking membership approval "may be personally liable as a result of breaches of their fiduciary duties to the corporation," the letter stated.

The CAF is a non-profit corporation.

The board, formally known as the General Staff, maintains that a January general membership vote authorizing board members to take a look at Midland, San Antonio, Longview, San Marcos, Brownsville and the Nashville-Smyrna, Tenn. area, also authorized a final decision on where to relocate.

"It seems perfectly clear that the General Staff has followed the governing bylaws of the CAF," CAF Executive Director Ralph Royce said Wednesday.

Royce said he expects discussion on it at a board meeting this Saturday, and that "anything's possible."

Steve McClellan, leader of the CAF's Old Dominion Wing in Virginia Beach, Va., and a leader of the CAF Preservation Committee, said he expected the group to file a class action lawsuit on behalf of the membership.

McClellan and other dissidents said they think the board decided on Midland without giving the other cities serious consideration.

"We are trying to keep this organization from being railroaded," said Jon Schill, a CAF member who will coordinate membership involvement in the litigation from a San Antonio office the CAF Preservation Committee soon will open.

Federal mediator plans day of meetings at UT

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas administrators and black student leaders said they will meet today to try to agree how to start eliminating campus racism, only one day after a U.S. Department of Justice official's offer to help met with skepticism.

Nancy Ferrell, a conciliation specialist in the Dallas office of the Justice Department, was on campus Wednesday meeting with UT officials and students.

She works for the Justice Department's Community Relations Service, which attempts to mediate racial disputes through formal and informal negotiations.

The office suggested its services when mediators became concerned about the possibility for civil disobedience or violence at the university in the wake of recent protests over racist acts by fraternities.

But black students said the school needs structural changes, not outside assistance.

"There's no reason for me to talk to her. I don't think she can help me," said student body president Toni Luckett after a brief meeting with Ms. Ferrell.

Eric Dixon, another black student, said, "We're being repetitive. I really don't think it's productive."

"We're telling her what we've been telling the administration for the last three years that I've been here, and longer than that. They need to institute major policy and curriculum changes that are substantive."

Administrators did not say Wednesday whether they will accept Ms. Ferrell's offer. UT president William Cunningham issued only a brief statement saying that he and Ms. Ferrell "had an interesting and productive meeting."

But he was quoted in the Dallas Morning News as saying on Tuesday, "I think we know how to deal with the problem."

"We're telling her what we've been telling the administration for the last three years that I've been here, and longer than that. They need to institute major policy and curriculum changes that are substantive."

"We would hope that we can talk directly to all those involved. It would be very nice if we could have that kind of dialogue, and resolve the problems alone," said James Vick, UT's vice president for student affairs, on Wednesday.

Ms. Ferrell said that although she did get some positive response from administrators, she acknowledged that participants have "a level of mistrust about our involvement."

Cunningham said he would meet with members of UT's Black Student Alliance today.

Protests organized by the group have rocked the UT campus since members of two fraternities painted racial epithets on a car and sold "Sambo" character T-shirts nearly three weeks ago.

Ms. Ferrell also met with the presidents of the two fraternities involved, Delta Tau Delta and Phi Gamma Delta. John Young, president of the latter group, said he is uncertain whether the mediator could help.

But he said, "I think if she can get people to sit down and talk, that's great. I think that's how you solve problems."

The Community Relations Service was established by the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and employs about 75 mediators nationwide.

Ms. Ferrell said the office has intervened at several state universities in recent years.

Ethics reform appears to be dead issue

AUSTIN (AP) — Ethics reform appears to be a dead issue for the current special session, key lawmakers say.

With less than a week remaining in the current special session, "There's no realistic hope we can address it now," said Sen. Bob McFarland, who heads a special ethics subcommittee.

"I think everyone's looking at addressing it in the" next special session, said McFarland, R-Arlington.

"Even if it were put on the agenda today and we fast-tracked it through, we could be subject to criticism that it was done too fast. And I think everyone agrees it shouldn't be done that way," he said.

Several members of the House State Affairs Committee, which also has been studying ethics reform, agreed. And aides to Gov. Bill Clements said he has no plans to add ethics to the session's agenda before it ends on Tuesday. Governors control special session agendas.

Environmental measures rejected

HOUSTON (AP) — Exxon Corp. shareholders rejected six measures urging the company to do more to protect the environment and hooted speakers who criticized the company's actions in the wake of the Alaskan oil spill.

Although the resolutions Wednesday received more support than is usual for shareholder proposals, none got as much as 10 percent of the vote during the nearly four-hour meeting.

Chairman Lawrence G. Rawl said the results indicated "support of the management by large shareholders."

Management had urged shareholders to vote against resolutions that included pledging Exxon to reduce emissions of pollutants and toxic waste, create a special environmental affairs committee and follow the so-called Valdez Principles for corporate environmental conduct.

Park officials ban wolf posters

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — The National Park Service has banned sales at two parks of a poster favoring the return of the wolf to Yellowstone.

Defenders of Wildlife, a private agency, was using proceeds from sales of the $25 posters to ease opposition to the animal's return in Montana by compensating ranchers whose calves and sheep are killed by wolves.

But the Park Service, saying it was improper for park stores to advocate wolf restoration when the issue is being debated in Congress, banned sales of the posters this week at Yellowstone and at Glacier National Park in Montana.

The posters portray four howling wolves with the legend: "Restoring the Wolf to Yellowstone."

Park officials appear to be divided over restoration.

Polio threat almost eliminated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Polio probably will be stamped out by the end of the year in the Western Hemisphere, according to public health experts who say there has been surprising progress reported against the crippling disease in Latin America.

At the moment we're having a hard time finding the virus at all," D.A. Henderson, dean of the Johns Hopkins School of Public Health, said in an interview Wednesday.

He credited efforts that included health workers going door-to-door with the vaccine in urban and other high risk areas.

Clint Black wins most awards

CLINT BLACK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gentleman cowboy George Strait brought the night's big prize home at the Academy of Country Music Awards, but fellow Texan Clint Black, an ironworker with a hot first record, came away with the most trophies.

The only other multiple winner during Wednesday's 25th anniversary awards show on NBC was Kathy Mattea, voted top female vocalist and song of the year winner for "Where've You Been."

But the night belonged to Black.

"It feels very emotional. It feels great. It's wonderful. It's just a big thrill. It's hard to describe," said Black, whose first single, "A Better Man," earned him single record of the year honors.

Black also took home top male vocalist, top new male vocalist and album of the year trophies.

Special interests add to appropriations bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $3.4 billion spending bill in Congress includes everything from former Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega's court costs to money for fish farming and a war on grasshoppers.

Through the magic of amendments, President Bush's $870 million aid request for Nicaragua and Panama has multiplied along its route to the Senate, which begins debate on the measure today.

The add-ons include such items as:

- $185 million to build an automated fingerprint identification laboratory planned in Clarksburg, W. Va., the home state of Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va.

- $7.4 million to cover increased court expenses in Florida, Georgia and Alabama, which have handled not only Noriega's case but an influx of other extradited drug suspects. Noriega is awaiting trial in Miami.

- $8 million for the Agriculture Department to combat grasshoppers in the state of committee member Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., as well as in South Dakota and Minnesota.

- An order for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to begin building a fish farming experimental laboratory at Stuttgart, Ark. Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., is a member of the appropriations panel.

Supplemental appropriations bills, regarded as "must-pass" measures because they are requested by the president, each year become vehicles for pet projects of lawmakers.

The bill began as an $870 million request from Bush to pay for three items not envisioned in the 1990 budget: $300 million in aid for Nicaragua, $500 million for Panama and $70 million for refugee programs.

When the House took it up, the measure grew to $2.4 billion with the addition of disaster relief for flooding in the Southeast (House Appropriations Chairman Jamie Whitten is a Mississippi Democrat); low-income energy assistance for the Northeast (senior committee Republican Silvio Conte is from Massachusetts); money for veterans' health care and pensions, food stamps and Forest Service firefighting.

There was no controversy over the $300 million for newly democratic Nicaragua. But other congressional initiatives were causing headaches at the White House.

A fight appeared certain, for example, over language added by Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., that would allow the District of Columbia to use local funds to pay for abortions for poor women.

Bush vetoed other bills twice last year that contained similar abortion language, and administration budget director Richard Darman said it was "virtually certain" the president would do the same thing again unless the provision is dropped or changed.

Power outage blackens Toronto

TORONTO (AP) — A blackout plunged much of this city of 610,000 people and its environs into darkness for several hours, and traffic chaos downtown gave way to a big street party.

The power outage occurred about 8 p.m. Wednesday after equipment failure caused a transformer at a midtown station to explode and catch fire, Ontario Hydro spokesman Bill Friday said. Several people reported seeing a fireball after the blast, but officials said there were no serious injuries at the plant, which was evacuated. The fire was out by 10 p.m.

"Everything was back on as of 1:10 a.m.," Friday said today. "Ninety percent of the people affected had their power back by 11:30 p.m."

Palestinians, Israeli soldiers clash

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers shot and killed two Palestinians and wounded about 120 today in the worst violence in the uprising in nearly a year, hospital officials and Arab witnesses said.

The clash began as thousands of Moslem worshippers were passing an army base in the Gaza Strip en route to a cemetery for a religious holiday to honor the dead, witnesses said.

An army spokesman who demanding anonymity said some of the Palestinians started to throw rocks and bottles at the soldiers. The soldiers, concerned about the potential danger to their lives, responded with tear gas and later various types of ammunition, the spokesman said.

The casualties represented one of the largest tolls of wounded from a single incident since the uprising began and contrasted with the low level of conflict in recent months.

Polhill returns to United States

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Freed hostage Robert Polhill returned to the United States today after three days of medical checks and intense debriefings that officials said showed him to be an astute observer.

Polhill was escorted out the back of a U.S. military hospital to elude waiting reporters.

The former hostage declined to be interviewed by reporters during his stay at the U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden, and the military said Polhill "has decided he is not up to talking with the media yet."

A U.S. source said the debriefing team was impressed with the vivid details the 55-year-old business professor provided about the conditions and surroundings in which he was held for 39 months in Lebanon.

Politician stabbed during rally

SUSPECT IN CUSTODY

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Top opposition politician Oscar Lafontaine was said by doctors to be out of danger today after being stabbed in the neck by a woman who offered him flowers and asked for his autograph at a rally.

The 46-year-old Social Democrat, Chancellor Helmut Kohl's leading challenger in elections set for Dec. 2, lost a lot of blood in Wednesday's attack but friends who visited him today said he was cracking jokes.

He was attacked near the close of campaign rally in Cologne at about 9 p.m. by a black-haired woman in a white dress who approached him on the dais seeking his autograph, witnesses and officials said.

The woman stabbed Lafontaine with a butcher knife as he was about to sign a poetry album she presented him, police said.

Yosemite needs help

As more Americans pack into cities, John Muir's call to "come to the mountains, for here there is rest" is increasingly seductive. Unfortunately, vacationers from urban congestion are taking with them many of the problems they are trying to escape — traffic, overcrowding, pollution.

This is particularly true in Yosemite National Park, with its spectacular landmarks such as El Capitan, Half Dome and Bridalveil Fall. Annual visitation is expected to exceed 3.5 million this year. On busy weekends, the park resembles a big city, with long lines of cars, shoppers and tourists.

Yosemite's urbanization upsets environmentalists, who want it to become more like the paradise that greeted the first explorers. But the booming business isn't without beneficiaries. The biggest is the Yosemite Park & Curry Co., a subsidiary of the MCA entertainment conglomerate, which made $84.7 million in revenues last year from a virtual monopoly on park concessions. Only a relative pittance of that was returned to the government in the form of franchise fees.

In 1980, the National Park Service adopted an ambitious 10-year plan for preserving the Yosemite Valley's natural beauty. It called for removing private cars from the valley, shifting many of the more than 1,000 buildings 14 miles outside the park's western edge and reducing overnight accommodations.

A decade later, congestion in Yosemite is worse, and the preservation goals are in danger. A park service status report on the plan focuses on cost and other obstacles to fulfilling it without offering possible solutions. "Events have altered the reality of reaching those goals," says Park Superintendent Michael Finley.

The Yosemite Park & Curry Co., which runs the hotels, restaurants and other businesses in the park, has done more than question the objective of a more natural Yosemite. Critics say it has urged its guests to lobby the park service to abandon parts of the 1980 plan, which would clear the way for the firm to build more hotel rooms, increase parking space and upgrade facilities at Yosemite.

The 100th anniversary of Yosemite is no time to retreat from efforts to protect the natural integrity of the park. The park service needs to reconfirm its commitment to preserve this natural wonder by doing its job, which is primarily to protect the environment. After decades of increasing urbanization, it's time to give the upper hand to preservation.

As for funds to carry out the plan objectives, the park service should demand a much greater contribution from the park concessionaire. While ringing up $84.7 million in sales last year — more than six times greater than the park's annual budget — the Yosemite Park & Curry Co. paid only $635,000 in fees to the government. The franchise fee paid by the Yosemite Park & Curry Co. is one of the lowest among 500 concessionaires' pacts in force at national parks.

When the lucrative concession contract is renegotiated, it should be changed to provide for a higher assessment. And more of the concession profits should be rolled back into Yosemite to help save the scenic beauty of California's most stunning preserve.

After-prom party deserves support

To the editor:
This Thursday, April 26th, the "Parents Who Care" group will have their second after-prom meeting at 7:30 in the Big Spring High School cafeteria.

We desperately need all junior and senior parents to attend if we are to make this evening another success.

We could not have this affair if it weren't for the parents giving their time and donations.

This is the fourth year the parents have put on this evening. It ensures that our young adults have a safe and fun alternative event after the prom.

Our biggest thanks should go to all the wonderful merchants in town. Parents are now going around asking for donations and merchandise. This help is outstanding and each and everyone of them should be applauded.

Thanking you all in advance,
TONY & MARTIE GEANOPULAS
Co-Chairman of Parents Who Care

A raw deal for Panama

To the editor:
When I see such a shameful thing as the so-called "just cause" invasion of Panama, the awful atrocity put on the poor people in the name of democracy, to kill hundreds of innocent men, women and children and break an international law to assassinate one two-bit crook, I fail to see anything just about it. For the last nine years the Reagan and now the Bush administrations have interfered in the Central and South American countries by way of CIA covert operations such as lies and propaganda, cover-ups, and misinformation by the media, networks and newspapers.

Now President Bush has spent millions backing a puppet government in the poverty stricken country of Nicaragua. I understand the same old bunch that Ortega ousted in 1979 have a part in this new so-called democracy. This small poor country has something like six ethnic groups of people. Most speak different dialects and had no schools, no health centers until Ortega took over. He began trying to improve his country in spite of the embargo and infiltration of Somosa's military who had fled into Honduras and were trained by Ollie North and crew, backed by the CIA and the Reagan administration. All these things would never have happened if not for Congress approval. I'm ashamed to say I'm proud of the few men in our Congress who had the guts to speak out against the disgraceful things that were allowed in Panama.

What has become of our values, strong leadership and respect for other cultures! These are my opinions.

The preservation of the union

WASHINGTON — The voice was reedy, high-pitched, solemn. It belonged to Abraham Lincoln, delivering his first inaugural address, trying desperately to preserve a union. But the sentiment could come these days from Mikhail Gorbachev.

"In your hands (said Lincoln addressing the South, or could say Gorbachev, addressing Lithuania) and not in mine, is the momentous issue of the civil war. The Government will not assail you. (But) I hold that, in contemplation of universal law and the Constitution, the Union of these States is perpetual. No state, upon its own mere action, can lawfully get out of the Union."

The parallel — between Lincoln, seeking to preserve the Union, and Gorbachev, seeking to preserve the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics — has occurred. At least, it occurred to Yuri A. Reshetov. He runs the Soviet Foreign Ministry's department for international humanitarian cooperation and human rights. At a news conference on April 9 he sought American forbearance by comparing Lincoln's and Gorbachev's struggle to preserve their unions.

Reshetov said he had visited the Lincoln Memorial the previous day.

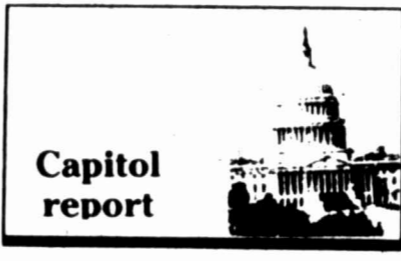

"Abraham Lincoln saved the American Union," he said. "We (the Soviets) have been together with Lithuania, with Estonia and with Latvia for many, many years," he said. "I still hope that what unites us is much stronger than what is capable of leading to dissolution of our union."

All of which draws a deep, hooting laugh from Harold Hyman, a Rice University professor and expert in both constitutional and American Civil War history.

"Let me call it a strained analogy, a kind of twisty instead of history," says Hyman. Says Mary K. Bonsteel Tachau, a constitutional historian at the University of Louisville, "I appreciate his position but I think his analogy is unhistoric. He is obviously grasping."

William M. Wiecek, son of an immigrant, professor of law and of history at Syracuse University, attacks the analogy most succinctly.

He points out that the original 13 states of the American union voluntarily formed and ratified the union and the other 37 states petitioned to be admitted.

University of Louisville, "I appreciate his position but I think his analogy is unhistoric. He is obviously grasping."

William M. Wiecek, son of an immigrant, professor of law and of history at Syracuse University, attacks the analogy most succinctly.

He points out that the original 13 states of the American union voluntarily formed and ratified the union and the other 37 states petitioned to be admitted.

Lithuania, by contrast, was taken over by the Russians under the terms of a secret pact between Stalin and Hitler, which Wiecek calls "one of the most loathsome agreements of modern times."

In both instances, the people of the seceding entity, through their elected representatives, voted to secede. However, in the case of the South, no one polled the vast numbers of residents who happened to be black and in bondage. Those who held the whip were those who had the vote.

And yet, Wiecek is willing to grant Gorbachev — and Reshetov — a point: the Soviet leader perhaps has the right and duty to try to oversee a smooth secession rather than a chaotic one.

Says Wiecek: "As a historian, it is always misleading to argue from parallels drawn from completely different civilizations. With that qualification in mind, I think there is something to be said for the Soviet official's idea in the sense that the chief executive officer of any modern state has a responsibility, if not to prevent secession, at least to manage a change in relations so that the interests of the state itself and the seceding entity are preserved."

"What would George Bush do," he asks, "if Alaska attempted to secede?"

So the Reshetov attempt to bend American history into a Soviet parallel doesn't work, but anarchy doesn't work either.

No one, not Soviets, not Lithuanians, not Americans, wants to see the price — half a million lives — that was paid on American soil to establish the anti-secessionist principle that Lincoln laid down and Reshetov would adopt as his own.

BIG SPRING — Howard College's "Little Shop of Horrors" cast and crew gathers for a family portrait at the end of dress rehearsals Tuesday night.

'Horrors': Gruesome good fun

The Green Revolution turns ugly on Howard College's stage this weekend when the cast and crew of the theater department present "Little Shop of Horrors," directed by Bill Doll.

Botany has never been a staple of the musical genre until now. But the lack of historical precedent doesn't bother Audrey II one bit. As an obnoxious, blood-thirsty succulent, it handles its part with aplomb in this wacky fifties-style musical, complete with all-girl group.

It's hard enough to animate a plant on the big screen, where "Horrors" began as film by Roger Corman, but to make the Plant That Ate Big Spring work on stage, where its presence makes or breaks a production, takes finesse. Fortunately, Shawn Hughes' designs, Brick Santiago's manipulation and Adrian Olivares' voice bring Audrey II to life quite convincingly.

The rest of the cast is no slouch either. Though Audrey II asserts itself in florid gestures, it is the humans, poor dupes of the plant, who are the real stars of the show.

As Seymour, the amateur botanist and nerd, Terry McMahan does a fine job of acting but can't carry a tune in a bucket. At the beginning of the show his consistently off-pitch voice grated on my nerves, but as his character developed I found it rather endearing. It contributed to the personality of the gangly, clumsy, painfully introverted Seymour.

Moises Molina, as Mushnik, the owner of the Skid Row florist shop and surrogate dad to Seymour, has fun with the role but he, too, can't sing. The shtick between Mushnik and Seymour is great, especially when Mushnik holds his breath until Seymour agrees to be adopted by him.

As Audrey, the love interest, Nancy Brough redeems the early music numbers with her clear voice. A good comic actress, she adopts the persona and whiny voice of the bleached-blond bimbo with a heart of gold and maintains it throughout the play. Her song with the all-girl group about her longing for a suburban paradise with Pinesol-scented air is both funny and poignant and her duet with Seymour in the famous "Suddenly Seymour" song rivals the movie version.

Scooter Timms makes a marvelously evil Orin, the villainous biker-dentist. His song about how he got into dentistry is priceless and his swaggering machismo in leathers, chains and a high-necked white dentist shirt threatens to steal every scene he's in. Not to give away the plot, but his death throes are a fine testimony to "Just Say No" campaigns. Timms also makes a good looking woman in a cameo role as Mrs. Luce.

Rounding out the main characters is the all-girl group. Stacey Leonard, Susan Phillips, Lanelle Markgraf, Jennifer Shirey and Kristy West have got the doo-wop sound down pat and the beautiful voices to carry it off. They act as a bad-girl Greek chorus, commenting on the passing scene with finger-snaps, synchronized swaying and plaintive woo-oos.

As Seymour's fortunes improve they trade in their jeans for chiffon dresses and bouffant hair-dos that are to die for. I especially liked their opening number, when they popped up from behind the flower counters like some spoof on a 50s B-grade movie. John Waters would love these gals.

In multiple supporting roles, Timmy Brunson, Kathryn Burrow and Jim Koerber show their versatility with accents ranging from wino to Hollywood mogul.

The elaborate set is beautifully constructed and gives a fine skid row atmosphere to the play. However, it seemed to give the crew no end of problems during dress rehearsal Tuesday night. Set changes were interminably long and the tinkly piano music, perfect for the musical numbers, wears thin during blackouts.

Sound also was a problem. At times the musicians drowned out softer numbers and Audrey II's amplified voice was fuzzy. But glitches like that can be fixed.

"Little Shop of Horrors" runs tonight through Saturday at 8 p.m. An art show and snicky-snacks precede it at 6:45 p.m. each night. For reservations, call 264-5156.

'Vasectomy was a mistake'

DEAR ABBY: I read about that woman who tried to get her husband to get a vasectomy, but he refused. She called him "chicken." Well, I think he was a wise bird. Listen to this:

My wife and I had been married for a year when she gave birth to a beautiful baby boy. (It was her second child. She had a daughter by a previous marriage.)

When the baby was 3 months old, my wife asked me to meet with her and her doctor to discuss birth control. I agreed to this meeting, thinking how nice of her to let me have a voice in the matter. Well, during the meeting, she and the doctor suggested that the best method of birth control for us would be for me to have a vasectomy! I didn't want to appear "chicken," and my wife said we had a perfect family — a boy and a girl — so I said, "OK." Nobody mentioned that it might be good insurance for me to make a deposit in a sperm bank.

The vasectomy was no picnic, but I got over the discomfort in a couple of days. Well, I suppose you can guess the rest of the story. Three years later, my wife decides that she doesn't want to stay married to me! She said, "It's over. I'm not happy. Let's call it off while we are both young." (I was 36 and she was 34.)

So, now I'm a single man who has given up his ability to become a father again. — MINNESOTA MULE

DEAR MULE: Thanks for telling your story. Your experience may remind other men who are considering a vasectomy to make a deposit in a sperm bank first. One day it could pay big dividends.

P.S. Have you checked with your physician? Some vasectomies can be reversed.

DEAR ABBY: So many people — you included — use the term, "Please enclose a self-addressed envelope."

Abby, I do not mean to be rude or impertinent, but how can an envelope "address" itself?

Why can't people use the term "pre-addressed envelope"? I await your reply. — GEORGE E. VOGEL, APPLE VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR GEORGE: Read my lips. Not everyone will understand that a "pre-addressed envelope" means "an envelope addressed to yourself." (Actually, the prefix "pre" means "in front of" or "before.")

In requesting an envelope addressed to oneself, "self-addressed envelope" conveys that message clearly. While "pre-addressed" suggests that the envelope be addressed beforehand, it doesn't indicate to whom.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you have room for one more letter on the subject of people bringing children to restaurants. No one mentions "training" children at home so they will know how to behave in public.

We were always very proud of how our three sons conducted themselves in restaurants. Waitresses and customers used to stop by our table to say "what little gentlemen" the boys were.

I'll never forget the time we were in a restaurant waiting to be served when a couple came in with two boys about the ages of our children. They were seated across from us. The parents sat calmly smoking their cigarettes (permitted at the time) while their two sons literally took over the place! They raced around the room between tables, knocking over chairs, screaming and laughing — completely out of control. Then they went into both the men's and ladies' restrooms, locked all of the stall doors from the inside and crawled out from under the doors, so no one could use the facilities.

If parents don't want to take the time or trouble to teach their children how to behave in public, they should leave them home. If they can't afford a sitter, they should stay home with them. — MRS. F.E.K., FREDERIC, MICH.

Residents attend crime prevention seminar

Crime seminar

Nearly 30 people attended the crime prevention seminar April 19 at the community center. Deputies Woodie Howell, Ben Lockhart and Barney Edens presented an interesting and informative program on the many ways citizens can avoid becoming victims of burglaries.

Several helpful tips to confuse would-be burglars were explained. Using security lights inside the home, having a neighbor turn on the television at appropriate times, as well as the tried and true methods of securely locking doors and windows and placing valuables in a safe place, along with the benefits of participation in a neighborhood crime watch, are just a few of the ideas presented at the meeting.

Several crime watch packets were purchased at the meeting and the possibility of Coahoma becoming a crime watch neighborhood was discussed. If you missed the meeting and would like more information, please call Woodie Howell or Barney Edens.

Irises color central Texas garden

By DARLENE MCILVAINE

Waco Tribune-Herald
ROBINSON — Adolph and Frances Kurtz have a definite bias toward the iris.

They don't have to say how much they admire this particular species of flower. Infatuation is in their voices, and at least three acres of their farm land in Robinson is devoted to the flower.

"They say in the iris society that it's a disease," Frances said. Developing different colors or finding those you don't have can become an obsession, she said.

What started out as a winter hobby has turned into something special, Adolph said.

Adolph and Frances call their fields of flowers "The Waco Iris Garden." They have two big patches and various flower beds around their house full of them.

Adolph said he doesn't know exactly how many plants he has.

"It would be like counting ants in a fire ant mound," he said. He thinks, however, that he has the largest iris fields in Central Texas and probably the state.

"I'm not going to brag too much further than that," he said.

Adolph, a vegetable farmer, said he started planting irises in 1978, because he wanted something to keep him occupied in the winter. "Till then he used to mow them off with a lawn mower," in the front yard, Frances cut in.

It's clear Adolph's iris mowing days are over, though. A cool evening was falling on the iris field this week as the Kurtzes strolled through the blooms.

Adolph's red hat stood out against the gray backdrop of dusk. It was the only color not visible in the sea of flowers behind him.

"Got all different kinds of purple, blues, whites, yellows. We've got right about 1,000 colors," he said, his voice undergoing an audible change as he talked about the flowers.

He looked out over the field. It was a kaleidoscope of color — from striking midnight purple to ordinary white.

"It just goes on and on just like the human race. No two seeds produce the same color," he said.

To the untrained eye, many of the colors look the same. But each is subtly different, he said.

Trying to find the color differences can be fun, he said. "This is a grownup's Easter egg hunt."

Overall, the iris is a hardy plant requiring a minimum of care, he said.

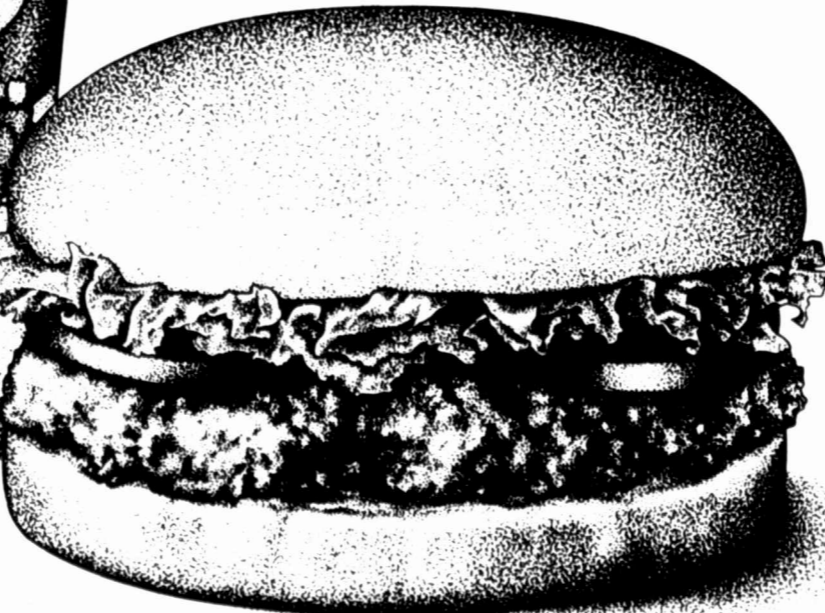

"I can't fuss over these," he said.

Paul Quinn College move delayed

WACO (AP) — Paul Quinn College will remain in Waco until trustees make a decision on whether to move to Dallas, the Paul Quinn board chairman said.

The college's trustees decided Wednesday to stay in Waco while trustees decide what to do with the 517-student liberal arts college. Bishop Robert Lee Pruitt of Dallas, the board chairman, said a decision is expected within three months.

The school could be relocated to the empty Bishop College campus in South Dallas. Pruitt said after the four-hour closed meeting that a move to Dallas would be "desirable."

"It's a good idea, but far from being plausible or possible at this moment," said Pruitt, who is the top official in the 10th District of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, which owns Paul Quinn.

While Pruitt said the chances of Trustee Comer J. Cottrell told The Dallas Morning News that his proposal to move the school is contingent on requirements that the college include schools of nursing and allied health sciences, education and business.

Paul Quinn moving to Dallas are remote, he stopped short of predicting that the school would remain in Waco.

"There will always be a Paul Quinn College," he said.

"In Waco?" a reporter asked.

"There will always be a Paul Quinn College," Pruitt repeated.

Paul Quinn vice chairman Lyndon Olson Jr. of Waco said it would be premature to say the school was moving for certain.

He said feasibility studies have not been conducted, and that financial and legal issues have not been resolved.

Bishop College, which closed in 1988 after going bankrupt, is owned by Comer J. Cottrell, a Paul Quinn trustee. He also owns Pro-Line Corp. in Dallas, the nation's 18th largest black-owned company.

Cottrell told The Dallas Morning News that his proposal to move the school is contingent on requirements that the college include schools of nursing and allied health sciences, education and business.

Trustee Jack Bryant of New York, vice president of the National Black Network, a network of 125 radio stations across the nation, said Wednesday he believes that most trustees will back the move.

Man kills himself following shootout

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The parents of a 38-year-old man who killed himself after a short standoff with police described their son as a non-violent man who became despondent when his marriage broke apart.

William Thurman of San Antonio turned a pistol on himself Tuesday night after he allegedly pointed his weapon at police and officers shot him once in the arm.

Police said Thurman appeared at a convenience store where his estranged wife worked and threatened to shoot everyone in the shop and himself. Thurman had fled by the time police arrived, but police spotted him a short distance away and began chasing him.

Thurman lost control of his pickup truck and crashed off railroad tracks, reports said. He climbed out of his truck with his pistol's barrel pointed in his mouth, police said, and three officers at the scene ordered him to drop the gun.

Thurman allegedly pointed the weapon at the officers, who fired, striking him once in the right arm, reports state. Thurman then stuck the pistol in his mouth and shot himself.

The medical examiner's office ruled the death a suicide.

"He wasn't violent; he had marital problems," said his mother, Jean Thurman. "He was overwrought."

Thurman's father, Mel Thurman, said his son had separated from Linda Thurman, his wife of 15 years, about six months ago. "He had been pretty despondent because of the separation," Mel Thurman said. "It just got to him."

The patrolmen involved in the incident have been placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of a police investigation. They are 12-year police veteran Tommy Bearden, 34; five-year veteran Mark Frost, 25; and probationary officer Carl Zimmerman, 26.

Murdered couple's family supports sheriff's probe

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Family members, hoping to clear the air of rumors running rampant in the area, discussed the Howard County Sheriff's Office investigation of the Davidson double homicide case Wednesday afternoon.

"There're details that can not be let out, but there's been a lot of rumors about how things have happened (at the murder scene in the I-20 Mobile Home Park last week)," Greg Sherrod, one of Jeane Davidson's sons-in-law, said.

"The basic thing is that they were just stabbed. There were no guns, no sexual things. Nothing like that," Sherrod said.

He expressed the diligence of the sheriff's office and said the

"The Sheriff's department has done an excellent job in investigating this thing. They've been in contact with us day and night, putting in 18 to 20 hours per day. They've got a lot of different avenues they're checking right now and we as a family feel like this could not have been handled any differently," — Greg Sherrod, family spokesman

Davidson and George Quintero, Jack Howard and George Quintero, are "on top of the ball."

"The Sheriff's department has done an excellent job in investigating this thing. They've been in contact with us day and night, putting in 18 to 20 hours per day. They've got a lot of different avenues they're checking right now and we as a family feel like this could not have been handled any differently," Sherrod said.

Donnie Buchanan, Jeane Davidson's son, sought the public's help in solving the crime. "The family would appreciate anybody who knows anything or thinks they know anything to contact the sheriff or Jack Howard," he said.

Sheriff A.N. Standard confirmed that the family had heard all intimate details of the case as they became known and said he hoped the family's statements would end confusion about the investigation.

"It's important that it be known that the city and county have been working on this from the beginning. We've kept in contact with Chief Cook and Captain Smith, most recently with a letter from the sheriff's office to the police department asking them to stay with us until this is resolved. They have affirmed this by assigning personnel and equipment who are working out of this office," Standard said.

He said his office wants to give the case as much exposure and draw as many law enforcement people together as is possible to solve the case. He has also asked the Texas Ranger who handles this district to audit the investigation.

"We have made the family aware that we're working with the city and the Texas Ranger on this and that they have the ability and our endorsement if they want to hire a private investigator. We said we'd make all our information available to (a private investigator) and at this point the family has found it unnecessary to hire one," Standard said.

"This case could be solved immediately or be a long drawn-out process. We're foreseeing further down the road to answer any questions that might come up about this investigation," Standard said.

Artists

Franklin said she would love to see the buildings come down, but until they do the volunteers aim to make downtown Big Spring as pleasant as possible.

"We want those buildings torn down," she said. "(But) we don't want everyone thinking this is going to waste," she said of the volunteers' work.

"What an improvement. It's just an unbelievable improvement over what it was... It was so ugly and depressing."

Franklin said the scenes, installed on the fronts of the Kilgore Building and Moffett 1 and 2, should be completed by today — just in time for the Fina Greatrace luncheon stop set for Friday.

The race drivers' vintage cars will fit perfectly with downtown's new look. Each of the burned-out buildings was covered with scenes from Big Spring of 1920.

Doris Vieregge, who has coordinated the art work, said she researched the downtown area to find out what kind of business each of the old buildings housed. Then she found photographs from the era and modeled the scenes after the people and the store-fronts in the photos.

"The whole design was supposed to be a turn of the century street scene, Vieregge said. "We're trying to keep it coordinated with those buildings. Some of the figures are based on Howard County residents at that time."

The Kilgore building used to house a theater and barber shop, Vieregge said, so she decided to turn it back into a barber shop.

"The two figures in front... they are based on Bud Roberts and his wife, one of our first families in town," she said. "We gave him his beard, his mustache, his goatee."

While Vieregge drew the two characters, Linda Rudard painted the one volunteers have dubbed the "Cowboy," and Jean Money painted the lady's figure, dubbed the "Cowgirl."

The Moffett 2 building depicts a street scene from early Big Spring. Five figures stroll across the storefront, all garbed in the proper dress.

Vieregge said she researched the scene, then came up with a scale drawing which Main Street, Inc., approved. She then sketched larger copies for the artists to work from, while Doris and Pauline Long traced the scene on the plywood boards. Five artists filled in each figure.

D.W. Overman painted the man with the cane, Revae Pool, the Big Spring High School art teacher, painted the lady in the doorway; Jerry Rudinger painted the second lady; Betty Conley painted the man resembling W.C. Fields; and high school student Lyle Rogers painted the little bum.

As an added touch, Vieregge said, members of the Big Spring Art Association created new upstairs "windows" for the building. Each artist painted a window scene to cover the building's own broken windows.

The Moffett 1 building may be the volunteers' most ambitious project — before the 1920s, it was a hotel, Vieregge said.

"We're going to have on the corner doorway a doorman and probably a little girl standing with him," Vieregge said. "On the east door I believe we're just going to have a little kid going in the door, maybe with a slingshot hanging out his pocket."

"On the back entrance, which faces the north on Second Street, it will look like the lobby of a hotel and maybe a little view of looking into a restaurant."

Goliad art teacher Judy Treletsky will trace the drawings, Vieregge said, and a host of volunteer artist will do the actual painting.

Vieregge, who operates Art Focus, said it wasn't too hard to get the project rolling. Everyone was excited about the plans, she said.

"I know all of them and I just got on the phone and said 'Hey, we need it.' And everybody chipped in," she said. "Anything to make a difference down there."

"After these are through, in another couple of weeks we've got our eye on some other places in town."

Vieregge and Franklin both say that if the covered buildings are torn down, the scenes can be taken down and installed on other abandoned buildings.

"When Beverly first came to me to draw the board off... we fixed it where those boards would come down," Vieregge said.

The Kilgore building already is scheduled for demolition, and the volunteers either will move the scenes to another building, or the store owner may build a false-front and allow them to reinstall the panels, she said.

"If they tear the Moffett 2 down, what we may do... we may install it inside on one of the existing walls or we could move it to another building in town," she said. "We're not going to lose them, we're going to move them somewhere."

And as Franklin points out, there're a multitude of buildings that could use a face-lift.

"There're so many buildings down there," she said. "It's not going to be a problem to use them. We will use them."

Sands kindergarten sets registration

ACKERLY — Sands Schools announce kindergarten pre-registration set for May 9 from 2:40-3:15 p.m.

Parents of children who will be at least five years old by September 1 should bring immunization records, social security number and birth certificate to the Kindergarten Room at Sands School in Ackerly.

Greatrace Texas begins 4-day event

BIG SPRING — The "GO" flag waved this morning in Dallas, sending more than 60 antique cars to the streets on first day of Greatrace Texas, a four-day event to end in Irving Sunday. Friday afternoon will bring participants and their rare cars to downtown Big Spring for lunch.

Downtown Main Street from Third to First Street will be blocked from traffic to allow the vintage autos a grand entrance into the welcome party. It all begins at 1 p.m. with a presentation of $250 to the Howard County Library by Hemmings Motor News, a car hobby magazine. Plans include food, music and a joint sidewalk sale by downtown businesses.

The cars range from Alfa Romeo and Rolls Royce to Chrysler and Cadillac, aged from 1911 to 1959. The drivers are from 16 states all over the country, but Texans lead the group with 27 natives competing for the $25,000 purse.

Fina Oil and Chemical Co. will give away eight mini-Indy racers at stops along the 1,500 mile course. A $750 prize, also compliments of Hemmings Motor News, will go to the city which gives the warmest welcome.

Big Spring Main Street, Inc. is sponsoring the clean-up and beautification of downtown for the event.

Construction on the plaza should be completed, and the first tenant, Handmade'n, will hold grand opening celebrations.

A group of U.S. Navy musicians will perform beginning at 1 p.m. in the outdoor plaza and free barbecue and drinks will be provided by Fina. In the event of rain, festivities will be held inside at 123 Main Street.

TU rate hike hearings begin

AUSTIN (AP) — A hearing was scheduled to begin today at the Public Utility Commission over Texas Utilities Electric Co.'s request for a rate increase of 10.2 percent, or $442 million a year.

TU Electric's rate request is opposed by consumer representatives who say the company already is earning too much.

In testimony filed at the PUC, TU Electric Chairman Erle Nye said his company's request is the "absolute minimum necessary to provide us the opportunity to restore the financial integrity of our company."

The Dallas-based electric company will be unable to attract capital investment at current rates, he said, citing among other items insufficient cash earnings.

But C. Kingsbery Ottmers, state attorney for residential and small commercial customers of utilities, said TU Electric's rates should be reduced by at least 1.14 percent, or nearly $50 million.

That recommendation doesn't include costs associated with the utility's $9.25 billion Comanche Peak nuclear power plant, under construction near Glen Rose, 45 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

The utility's rate increase request includes costs of the plant, which is about 10 years behind schedule. Its original price tag was estimated at about $800 million.

Hawks set for crucial series

By STEVE BELVIN

BIG SPRING — The Howard College Hawks will play their most crucial five baseball games of the season starting Friday when they host the McLennan Community College Highlanders in a doubleheader at Jack Barber Field.

Coach Bill Griffin's Hawks are hot right now, very hot to be exact. The freshmen-laden Hawks recently completed a three-game sweep over Hill College, moving Howard's winning streak to 18 games.

The No. 5 Hawks, 40-8-1 overall, currently lead the Highlanders by a half-game. MCC, also ranked in the top 20, is 17-4; after just completing a sweep over Ranger Junior College.

Friday's doubleheader are makeup games from a three-game series that was postponed in March. The two teams will square off again in a three game series Monday and Tuesday in game series.

In the two team's first meeting, Howard came away with a 6-5 victory in 12 innings at Jack Barber. In that game Howard pitchers, Steve Walter, and relievers Mike Cople and Rene Benavidez pitched, with Benavidez getting the win in last inning relief.

For MCC, Bill Huffman started and Steve Nix relieved him. In fact Nix, who also plays shortstop, hit two homers in the game.

The Hawks won the game in the bottom of the 12th thanks to a single by first baseman Franklyn Johnson and an infield hit by right fielder Mike Hughes.

Howard coach Bill Griffin says both teams are evenly matched. "MCC has an outstanding pitching staff, pretty good hitting and they've got good speed. They are pretty well the type team we are," said Griffin.

Griffin says a sweep is unrealistic. "I'd be happy to split with them. There won't be a sweep by either team."

"I don't think there's any pressure. I really haven't seen any on the ballclub," he said. "I haven't detected any nervousness. They seem relaxed and quiet. They just have to go out there and play."

Falcons, Patriots do excellent in draft

By The Associated Press
Rodney Hampton, the Georgia running back drafted by the New York Giants in the first round last week, unwittingly had the most profound comment on the perils of prognostication.

"This is my first trip to New York, but I haven't been there yet," he said on arriving in the New Jersey Meadowlands for rookie mini-camp.

The same can be said of the 331 players drafted Sunday and Monday. None has yet been to the NFL. As commissioner Paul Tagliabue proved during a first round in which he lacked the instinctive microphone moves that Pete Rozelle developed over 29 years, it takes time for rookies to learn.

So how can anyone forecast what kind of days Sunday and Monday were for the 28 teams?

For those who need to know now, here's a guess at who had good days and who didn't.

Excellent Days
ATLANTA — The Falcons go first because they got two proven commodities, Chris Hinton and Andre Rison, PLUS what figures to be a high No. 1 next year for the rights to Jeff George. Throw in running back Steve Broussard and linebacker Darion Conner and things may have turned for a team that's done little right recently. (see Bruce, Aundray).

NEW ENGLAND — Joe Mendes' Bobby Beathard-like trading made him rookie of the year, IF ... the players he got can play. Linebacker Chris Singleton and defensive lineman Ray Agnew, the two No. 1s he traded down for, SHOULD provide instant help on defense. Fifth-round running back James Gray doesn't have great

NEW ORLEANS — The New Orleans Saints' two top draft choices talk to the press after the National Football League draft Tuesday. They are speed but produces. Plus, (see Beathard) Mendes made five trades and ended up with seven picks in the first four rounds next year.

DETROIT — Andre Ware teamed with Barry Sanders puts fans into the Silverdome, which overrides all else. If third-round defensive tackle Marc Spindler plays like the first-rounder he was supposed to be, these guys could actually challenge for a division title.

Very Good Days
CINCINNATI — Need a linebacker? Take three, with James Francis (1st round) a potential star and Bernard Clark (3rd) a potential starter. The traditional second-round running back (see Ickey Woods and Eric Ball) is Harold Green, who was supposed to be a No. 1. Still need offensive line depth.

SAN DIEGO — Purely on Beathard's track record, half the eight guys he got in the sixth and seventh rounds will turn out to be steals. Added to Junior Seau, at No. 5 the highest pick Beathard's ever had, the 17 choices should become at least 10 playable bodies, enough to move up in a weak division.

NEW YORK JETS — Needed defense, took offense ... but fast of defense. Won't produce an instant title, but Blair Thomas is worth 1,000 yards-plus (assuming blockers are located); Reggie Rembert is an AI

Too bookend; Tony Stargell an instant starter at cornerback and center Roger Duffy an eight-round sleeper.

Plus this: Fourth-rounder Troy Taylor gives the Jets and Dick Steinberg three quarterbacks represented by agent Leigh Steinberg.

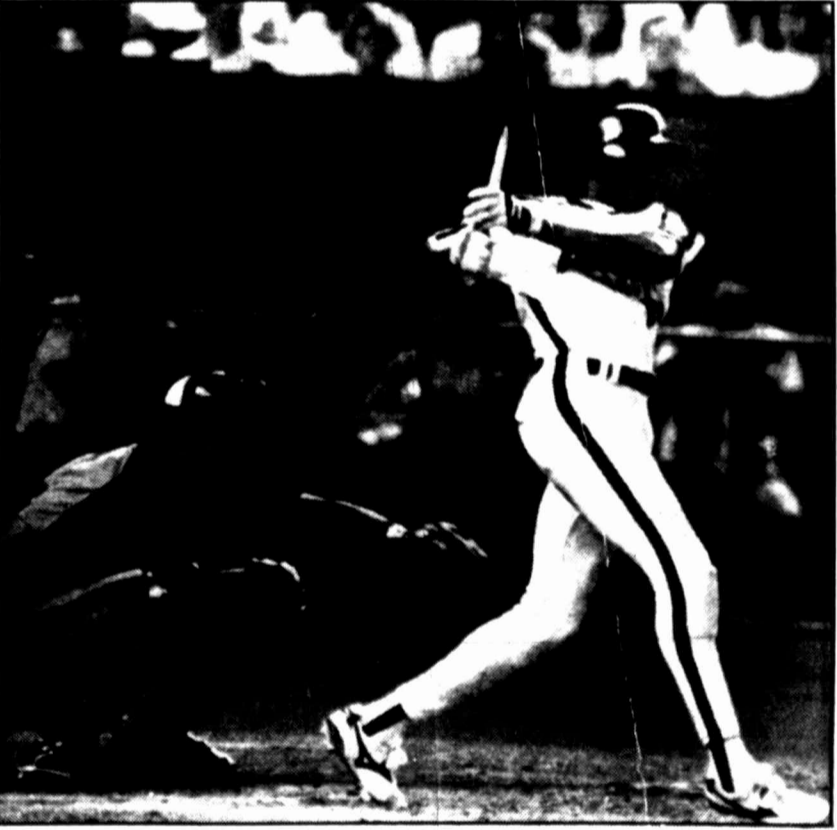

GREEN BAY — Darrell Thompson either takes a load off Brent Fullwood or replaces him. First-round linebacker Tony Bennett belonged in San Francisco and may be a bit of a reach. But Bobby Houston, a third-rounder, is there if Bennett's not up to the task of bookending Tim Harris. Defensive back Leroy Butler fills a need.

HOUSTON — If Lamar Lathon is healthy, everything about him is positive. And Jack Pardee, his college coach, certainly know what he's getting. Jeff Alm and Willis Peguese should help defensive line and mini-receiver Tony Jones, a 6th rounder, fits the run-and-shoot.

SEATTLE — Cortez Kennedy is new blood to the front three of Jacob Green, Joe Nash and Jeff Bryant that's been intact for seven years. Kennedy and fifth-rounder Eric Hayes, a Fridge weigh-alike, should provide work for the dieticians, and linebacker Terry Wooden, the No. 2, is a good catch if his knee holds up.

Good Days
PHOENIX — George Boone, who made the strange picks of the past, has been downgraded and Larry Wilson did well without a No. 1 pick. Anthony Thompson is a bit slow but fits the need for a heavy duty running back. ("A perfect pick for them," says a personnel man who considered Thompson in the first round.) Fifth-rounder

Umpire caught stealing

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — National League umpire Bob Engel has been charged with stealing 4,180 baseball cards from a retail store, authorities said.

Engel, 56, was released on $5,000 bail from Kern County Jail Saturday and is scheduled to be arraigned May 2 on misdemeanor counts of commercial burglary and petty theft, police said Tuesday.

A security officer at the store told police that Engel put seven boxes of Score baseball cards, valued at $143.98, into a brown paper bag he pulled from the waistband of his pants.

He allegedly removed the cards from a display, walked to a corner of the store and placed them in the paper bag.

Engel was detained as he walked out of the store with the bag on Saturday, police said.

Engel, who completed his first full year in the major leagues in 1966, was back at the ballpark on Sunday, when he worked the Los Angeles Dodgers game from first base.

When Bakersfield police asked why he took the cards, Engel reportedly replied "to collect and trade."

Engel, who resides in Bakersfield, is a crew chief and was the home plate umpire Tuesday night for a game at San Diego.

Through the Padres' public relations department, Engel said he would have no comment about the incident.

Violence prompts urban schools to go back to dress codes

CHICAGO (AP) — It is a modern urban phenomenon: kids robbing — and sometimes killing — other kids over the hottest designer sneakers, sunglasses or athletic jackets.

In Chicago alone, four young men have died in little more than a year over multi-colored, satiny jackets with splashy team logos across the back.

Those not dying for their clothing might instead be robbed.

On an icy day this winter, an 11-year-old boy was forced to hand over his $61 gym shoes to four youths, then walk the several blocks to his home barefoot, one of scores of incidents that occur each month, police say.

"Kids who try to keep their jackets are beaten or killed," said Solly Vincent, commander of the Gang Crimes Section of the Chicago police. "It's a very cold, callous frame of mind."

To combat the problem, schools from Baltimore to Miami to Los Angeles are falling back on an old idea: dress codes.

Some public schools even have instituted uniforms, traditionally associated with parochial schools.

"It's a definite trend," said Tim Callahan, a spokesman for the National Association of State Boards of Education. "Kids are going to learn best in an environment free of undue, inappropriate pressures, and certainly one that's free of violence."

"If clothing becomes a disruption to education, then we certainly are supportive of removing that barrier," he said.

"Starter" jackets — athletic jackets named for their manufacturer, Starter Sportswear Inc. of New Haven, Conn. — have sparked numerous crimes in Chicago, including four murders, police say.

In a grim acknowledgement of the garment's popularity, the police department last year created a separate category for CHICAGO — Students at Chicago's Henderson Academy display uniforms they will wear to school in light of the recent robberies and murders over trendy sportswear.

"Starter jacket murders" in its citywide statistics.

"We are hoping these are isolated situations that are not long-term," said Thomas McAuliffe, human resources director for Starter. "We have a responsible attitude towards the communities in which we have operations."

Educators say dress codes that eliminate some popular items and, in some cases, gang colors, not only help stem violence but allow students to concentrate on learning.

"We try to discourage children from buying hot items," says Jim Murray, assistant principal at a middle school in Chicago's troubled Englewood neighborhood.

"When they don't wear those items to school, they don't have problems."

"We have found that, subtly, it is changing attitudes," Alberta Mitchell, counselor at Hendricks Academy, said of the Chicago public elementary school's new uniform policy.

"The children are not supposed to wear gym shoes, so that eliminates the problem of buying brand-name gym shoes symbolizing status," Miss Mitchell said.

"We are trying to eliminate the problem of children feeling like they have to have designer-type clothes. It seems to have a calming effect."

In Chicago, as in many of the nation's largest school districts, dress codes are the prerogative of individual schools.

In Baltimore, uniforms are recommended, although not mandatory, for elementary school

Region hopefuls; red hot Hawks

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The Region I-4A track meet in San Angelo is this weekend, and I'm wondering what the Big Spring Steers have up their sleeves this time. It's going to be hard to outdo their expected district championship two weeks ago.

The Steers have a total possibility of 90 points in a fairly tough region which stretches as far west as Fort Stockton to as far east as Pflugerville, near Austin.

The Steers have four legitimate chances to get to state. They are Rye Bavin in the 110 meter high hurdles and 300 meter intermediate hurdles. Then there's Pete Buske in the discus and Chris Minter in the 800 meters.

An outside shot is the 1600 meter relay team of Nick Roberson, Waylon McGee, Bavin and Minter.

Bavin's time of 14.22 in the highs and 38.90 in the intermediates are second best going into regional. A runner from Pflugerville has a better time in the highs, and a runner from Levelland has run a 38.8 in the intermediates, although Bavin has beaten him this season.

Steers coach Randy Britton said if Bavin will just run his race, the state track meet might be the next stop.

In the discus, Buske has the second best throw (169-0) going into the competition. What he'll run up against is Brian Tighe of Pflugerville, who has the state's best throw of 181-0. Britton says he thinks Buske could throw in the mid-160's and get to Austin.

"Since Pete's gotten out of that slump, he's been real consistent the last five weeks. If he could throw 164-5, he'll have a good chance," said Britton.

For a while Minter had the fourth fastest time in the state in the 800 (1:56.47). He hasn't been beaten in the event this year, and has been a picture of consistency. Britton ranks him the best bet to bring back some regional gold.

"Chris should win the 800. It might not have to be that fast of a time, but he should be the favorite," said Britton.

The 1600 relay team is a darkhorse. They go into the meet with the fourth fastest time. Lubbock Dunbar has run a 3:20.1. Sweetwater a 3:21.1 and Levelland a 3:21.9. Big Spring's best is 3:23.2.

But Britton isn't telling all. "I think we've got a chance in the mile relay. I've got one trick up my sleeve, but I'm not telling anybody."

The Big Spring Lady Steers will have a hard time getting anyone to state. The Lady Steers have a possibility of 40 points.

The 400 meter relay team of Amber Grisham, Vernice Ross, Marta Mathews and Annie Rodriguez took eighth-tenths took off the best last week in a regional qualifiers meet. Rodriguez, a sophomore will compete in the 400, and Brenda Johnson will run the 3200.

The best thing about this group of Lady Steers is they will all be back next year, and the experience will prove invaluable.

Other area tracksters that have good shots at regional are Stanton super frosh Jeremy Stallings in the 800 and 1600; Colorado City discus throwers Christy Hulme and Rosemary Rosas; Coahoma hurdler-jumper LaTisha Anderson and distance runner Sarah Hanks; Forsan intermediate hurdler Paul Bailey; Garden City sprinter James Soles; Grady high jumper Sherri McMorries and Klondike half-miler Corbett Foster.

Switching the subject to baseball. How about those Howard College Hawks? If someone would have told me the freshmen-dominated Hawks would have been leading the region at this time of the season, I would not have believed them.

How are they doing it? First there's good coaching by Bill (Daddy) Griffin and assistant Frank Anderson, and secondly there has been excellent pitching from Curt Schmidt, Tom Leahy, Steve Walter and Mike Copple.

Thirdly Tim Demerson, Jeff Schulz, Franklyn Johnson and Steve Ramos have been swinging very hot bats.

Reds blow away Philadelphia, 12-7

By The Associated Press
Once Barry Larkin cooled off, Mariano Duncan kept the Cincinnati Reds red-hot.

Duncan took over the National League batting lead from his teammate Wednesday night, raising his average to .448 with three hits, including a three-run homer, and Todd Benzinger drove in three runs in the Reds' 12-7 victory over Philadelphia.

Larkin hit 512 in Cincinnati's first 10 games, but is 1-for-9 in the last two, allowing Duncan to surge past him.

The Reds, 10-2 for the season, used big innings to beat the Phillies, scoring three runs in the second, four in the fifth and four in the eighth. Cincinnati had 16 hits, tying its season high.

Duncan, who hit only three homers last year, hit a 1-2 pitch from Bruce Ruffin (1-2) for his third of the season in the second inning.

Expos 1, Astros 0
Montreal and Houston combined for only nine hits, and it took a ninth-inning wild pitch by reliever Dave Smith to score Tim Raines with the winning run.

Raines singled with one out in the ninth and moved to third on a two-out single to right by Andres Galarraga.

Galarraga moved to second on the first of two consecutive wild pitches by Smith (0-1), but Raines was unable to advance on the play. The second wild pitch hit in front of the plate and bounced by catcher Craig Biggio, allowing Raines to score.

Steve Frey (1-0) worked the eight for the victory, and Tim Burke recorded his fifth save, pitching the ninth.

Three Montreal pitchers held Houston to four hits, and the Expos had only five.

Padres 3, Cubs 0
San Diego handed Chicago its sixth consecutive loss as Ed Whitson pitched a seven-hitter for his 10th career shutout and hit his first major-league homer.

Whitson, in his 14th season, outdueled Chicago starter Mike Bielecki (0-2), who in the seventh inning gave up Whitson's first homer in 461 at-bats.

The Padres scored their first run in the third on a run-scoring single by Joe Carter after Joey Cora singled and stole second.

"After 460-some at-bats, it's about time I found one," Whitson said. "I don't remember if I touched the bags or not going around the bases. I was on cloud nine when I went around first. I saw it go over and that was it."

Cardinals 5, Dodgers 1
Bryn Smith, who got four runs of support in his first three starts for St. Louis, pitched a seven-hitter for eight innings and delivered the first two runs with a double-play grounder and a bases-loaded single against Los Angeles.

Smith struck out two and walked one, and the only run he allowed was unearned in the eighth inning. In the fifth, Orel Hershiser (1-1) surrendered the first run allowed by Dodgers pitching in 23 innings. A walk and a single by Jose Oquendo put runners on first and third before Smith bounced a double-play grounder up the middle.

Pirates 7, Giants 4
San Francisco's home record fell to 0-7 after Andy Van Slyke's two-run single off Steve Bedrosian snapped a 3-3 tie in the 12th inning. Pinch-hitter John Cangelosi singled to lead off the 12th against Bedrosian (0-2) and Wally Backman walked.

Mets 8, Braves 5
New York won its fourth straight game, rallying for five runs in the eighth against Atlanta, which has lost eight consecutive times at Shea Stadium.

Gruber hits seventh homer; Blue Jays win

students, and a dress code is suggested for secondary schools. Educators say uniforms now are the norm at 74 of the city's 118 elementary schools.

School officials can't recall any crimes over clothing since the policy was instituted last fall, and Baltimore police say the problem virtually has disappeared.

"It still happens, but not with any frequency," said police spokesman Dennis Hill.

Next fall, high schools in Detroit will have the option of adopting a dress code. The new policy by Johnny Johnson also has potential as a runner.

If Timm Rosenbach, on whom they used this year's top pick, is the quarterback of the future, this draft moves to the top. Watch 9th-round linebacker David Bavaro on hustle and bloodlines alone.

MIAMI — Got the best (on potential) offensive lineman in Richmond Webb, who's in for a surprise if he thinks Don Shula is laid back because of his tan. Also added guard Keith Sims, who could be instant starter. But unless there are sleepers on lower rounds, the defense still leaks.

NEW YORK GIANTS — Some scouts think Hampton, a steal at No. 24 overall, may be a 1,500-yard rusher. If defensive end Mike Fox is what the Giants think and undersized Greg Mark is as productive as he was at Miami, it's a good draft regardless of how Craig Kupp, the mystery quarterback from Pacific Lutheran, turns out.

DENVER — The REAL No. 1 pick was Bobby Humphrey in last year's supplemental, and helped earn them the right to be trounced in the Super Bowl again. This draft won't get them much closer to San Francisco, but inside linebacker Jeroy Robinson should help.

KANSAS CITY — IF, the biggest word in football, Percy Snow lives up to his billing, the Chiefs now have one of the NFL's best defenses two-run homer and RBI double. He is 8-for-11 in three games against the Indians.

White Sox 5, Rangers 4
In Texas, Bobby Thigpen got even with Pete Incaviglia as Chicago ended a four-game losing streak.

Thigpen got Incaviglia to ground into a double play with two on and none out in the eighth, and finished for his fourth save. On Tuesday night, Incaviglia's two-run homer off Thigpen capped a five-run rally in the bottom of the ninth that gave the Rangers a 5-4 victory.

Incaviglia homered in the fourth

Detroit's Board of Education was prompted in part by the December shooting of a student over his $135 goose-down jacket.

Detroit police say crimes over clothing are on the decline.
"It's not like the old days 10 years ago," said Sgt. Christopher Buck.

In New York's Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood, a high school principal earlier this year barred students from wearing removable gold caps on their teeth, saying the faddish caps were robberies waiting to happen.

But the new policies have not been cheered in all quarters.

In March, high school students in Palmdale, Calif., enraged by a new anti-gang dress code, boycotted classes and pelted a sheriff's patrol car with rocks.

And there is some support for student resistance to the dress-code trend.

Laws allowing schools to require uniforms are "a way of trying to see that all students look alike, act alike and think alike," said Jane Whicher, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union in Illinois.

"It's important for children to have an appreciation of their own individuality as well as the constitutional values that protect that individuality," she said. "Orthodoxy in apparel is not something a school board should be involved in."

Requiring uniforms might also pose a financial hurdle for the poor, Whicher said, but some families are applauding the trend.
"Parents seem to really like the idea," said Shel Erlich, a spokesman for the Los Angeles Unified School District, the nation's second-largest public school system. "It certainly cuts down the amount of arguing in the morning over what the kids should wear to school."

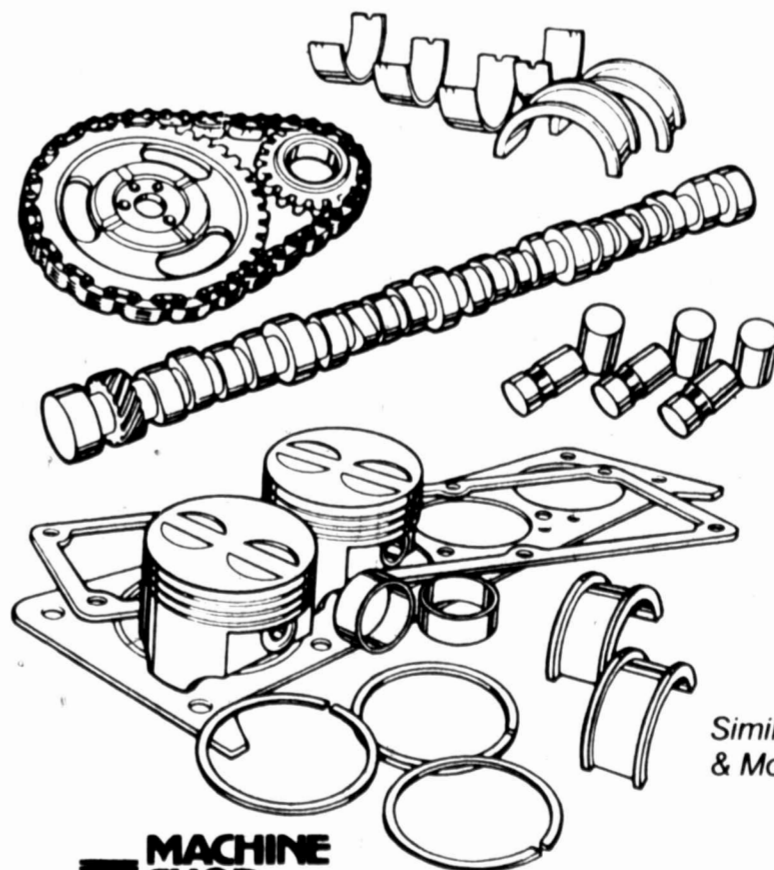

And some parents are instituting their own dress codes when the schools are not.

with a home run.

Athletics 4, Orioles 3
In Baltimore, Jose Canseco got four hits, including a two-run homer and the go-ahead single in the 12th inning. Oakland is 3-0 in extra innings after losing its first eight extra-inning games last season.

Tigers 6, Twins 4
Detroit won its first road series since last May as Cecil Fielder drove in three runs with a pair of singles. The Tigers were 0-16-3 in road series, going 15-50 in that span, since winning a set in Chicago.

Tarpley expecting trade

DALLAS (AP) — Forward Roy Tarpley says he is tired of being projected as the Dallas Mavericks' "bad boy" and says he expects to be with another National Basketball Association team after this season.

Saying he is tired of the "bad boy" image, Tarpley said Wednesday he expects the team to trade him this summer and, if not, he might request a trade.

Tarpley spoke about the situation at practice, one day before the team opens its NBA playoff series in Portland.

"I have had to deal with the (trade) rumors for the last couple of months, but I've tried to put that kind of stuff in the back of mind and do whatever it takes to make the Dallas Mavericks successful," Tarpley said. "I'm just going to wait and see what happens, because I don't want to add to any more distractions for the team at this point. I think I've done enough of that already. I'm just a little tired of some things, that's all."

Mavericks vice president and director of player personnel told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram the team would not comment on trade speculation.

Tarpley twice has been suspended by NBA drug counselors for violation of the league's anti-drug policy. A third strike would carry a lifetime ban from the league.

Tarpley also has been suspended by the team this season for two games for missing a team practice.

"I feel like the front office is tired and has had enough of all of my mess," Tarpley said. "Usually when you hear about what kind of a disappointment and letdown you've caused, your time is running out. You just know that something is up and something is going to happen."

"But they keep saying that nobody wants me, and I can't believe that's true," Tarpley added. "I know this much: If (the Mavericks) do trade me, it's going to come back to haunt them."

"I know that I've brought a lot of the problems that I have on myself," he said. "But I think a lot of things have gotten blown out of proportion by the press. Everybody else always has the answers about me and what I should do."

Tarpley said he would like to be traded to a team that will contend for the league championship.

leg, says he isn't fit enough to return for the playoffs. Tarpley is bothered by a pulled groin and center James Donaldson has a bruised toe.

Then there have been the other problems with Tarpley. The 7-foot power forward missed much of the season because of substance abuse. He returned in March, and later was suspended for two games when he missed a team flight and practice.

Throughout all this, coach Richie Adubado, who took over after John MacLeod was fired a week into the season, has managed to direct the Mavericks to 47 victories.

Portland center Kevin Duckworth has averaged 21.4 points against the Mavericks, so Adubado has made a defensive switch. Donaldson will guard Williams and Tarpley will guard Duckworth.

"We feel Roy can get out on (Duckworth) and stay with him on his drives, while Buck Williams isn't going to be such a big offensive force that James can't handle him inside," Adubado said. "It's a big area of concern, because Duckworth is playing more of a perimeter game than ever before."

The 244-pound Tarpley said he isn't intimidated by the prospect of guarding the 7-foot Duckworth, whose weight is conservatively listed at 275 pounds.

"Duckworth doesn't put fear in my heart," Tarpley said. "I'm just going to go out there and play as hard as I have been playing all year. I think I'm due for a good game, a good series against them. I really feel like we can win."

Williams said he doesn't mind if things get rough against the Dallas front line.

"It gets rougher (in the playoffs) but that's the kind of game we play," he said. "I think

High-flying Blazers to open against Mavs

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — For years, Clyde Drexler has played on a team that did a fast fade in the NBA playoffs. Across the continent, Buck Williams toiled for a squad that rarely made it to postseason play.

Both say things are much different this year.

They feel they are on a Portland Trail Blazer team with the potential to go all the way to the top.

"A chance to have a shot at the championship," Drexler said of his team's ambition. "I think that's very big to all of us."

The Trail Blazers will be out to prove they've gone from playoff patsy to title threat tonight when they open a best-of-5 first-round series against the Dallas Mavericks.

Williams, obtained in a trade with New Jersey before the season started, is elated to be on a successful team.

"All the elements are there," he said. "We're just very happy to be in the playoffs and to be matched against a team we've played well in the past."

The Trail Blazers won a franchise-record 59 games during the regular season and swept four games against Dallas. But Portland coach Rick Adelman thinks the veteran-laden Mavericks will be much tougher now.

"When you have a team with Derek Harper and (Rolando) Blackman and (Roy) Tarpley and (Sam) Perkins, you've got a lot of talent," he said. "With their talent and playoff experience, they're going to be a very tough team."

But it will be a wounded Dallas team that comes to Portland.

Backup guard Brad Davis is out with a pulled hamstring. Adrian Dantley, who missed most of the season with a broken leg, says he isn't fit enough to return for the playoffs. Tarpley is bothered by a pulled groin and center James Donaldson has a bruised toe.

Then there have been the other problems with Tarpley. The 7-foot power forward missed much of the season because of substance abuse. He returned in March, and later was suspended for two games when he missed a team flight and practice.

Throughout all this, coach Richie Adubado, who took over after John MacLeod was fired a week into the season, has managed to direct the Mavericks to 47 victories.

Portland center Kevin Duckworth has averaged 21.4 points against the Mavericks, so Adubado has made a defensive switch. Donaldson will guard Williams and Tarpley will guard Duckworth.

"We feel Roy can get out on the rougher it gets, the more we'll be playing to our advantage."

Portland is one of the league's best running teams. Dallas likes to slow the game to a crawl. The style of play will be dictated by the rebounding, Williams said.

"Whoever controls the boards controls the tempo of the ball game," he said. "That's been our trademark all season long, to play well on the boards."

Portland has a history of quick playoff exits. The Blazers have won only two playoff series in 11 postseason appearances since their 1977 championship and are 3-12 in postseason play the last four seasons.

But that history has no bearing on this year's team, Adelman said.

"I believe this team has some basic strengths that are conducive to winning in the playoffs," he said, "and I don't think we've had that in the past."

NEW YORK (AP) — As surely as a tree grows in Brooklyn, a "Bonfire" burns in the Bronx.

Workers at the Bronx County criminal courthouse may glimpse Tom Hanks, Bruce Willis, Morgan Freeman, Melanie Griffith and other celebrities as their environs get filmed for the celluloid version of "The Bonfire of the Vanities."

The actors have already shot some Manhattan exteriors for the film based on Tom Wolfe's best-selling novel, but filming goes in high gear when it moves to the Bronx on Monday. Warner Bros. received a special three-day permit to film key scenes at the neogrecian limestone courthouse.

Michener, who bought a summer residence in Brunswick, Maine, last fall, said he will spend May through early October there and February through mid-May at the University of Texas assisting with classes.

Canadiens prevent sweep

MONTREAL (AP) — When Montreal coach Pat Burns announced that rookie center Stephan Lebeau would dress for his first NHL playoff game, co-captain Guy Carbonneau made a prediction.

"I'll bet he scores a goal. He always scores when he comes back into the lineup," said Carbonneau, who turned out to be right on target.

So, too, was Lebeau, who scored twice as Montreal, averting a sweep in the Adams Division final, beat the Boston Bruins 4-1 Wednesday night.

Lebeau, who had 15 goals in 57 regular-season games, connected twice in the third period to save the Canadiens the embarrassment of having Boston celebrate a sweep inside Montreal's Forum.

The Bruins can end the best-of-7 series on Friday at Boston.

"I wasn't expecting to play much in the playoffs," said Lebeau, a center who was the American Hockey League's most valuable player last year. "I just tried to keep a good attitude and be ready to play if they needed me. I know I can play in this league."

Lebeau started and finished the plays on both of his goals — at 4:22 and 11:51 of the third period. Carbonneau got Montreal's other two, including an empty net goal with 41 seconds to go.

Lebeau likely wouldn't have seen action had scoring star Stephane Richer not been sidelined with an ankle injury. Now Lebeau's unlikely to miss Game 5, even if Richer returns.

Lebeau helped Montreal avoid its first four-game playoff sweep since losing to Detroit in 1962. They now face trying to become the third team in NHL history — after Toronto in 1942 and the New York Islanders in 1975 — to come back and win after trailing 0-3.

"It's tough to win four in a row," said Carbonneau, whose goals were his first of the playoffs. "But you have to win one before you can think about winning four."

"At least now we can think about it."

Coach Mike Milbury's Bruins have a policy not to react to provocation, but to try and punish the opponent by scoring on the power play.

Caps one victory away

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Considering all the misery the Washington Capitals have endured in the NHL playoffs, maybe it's simply time for their luck to change.

That's the way it looks so far in their series with the New York Rangers, where they're one game away from winning the Patrick Division playoff title for the first time after seven previous failures.

Rod Langway, a veteran defenseman who endured most of those other playoff disappointments, led the way Wednesday night with an overtime goal that put the Caps on the brink of the third round with a 4-3 victory over the Rangers.

Langway's first goal in 14 months, 34 seconds into overtime on a shot he was merely trying to put near the goal, gave Washington a 3-1 lead in the best-of-7 Patrick finals which resume with Game 5 on Friday night at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Until Langway scored his game-winner, the contest was typical of Washington's agonizing playoff past. The Capitals, on the brink of victory, let the Rangers back into the game by blowing a 3-1 lead in the final 4:03 of regulation.

After blowing the late lead, Washington appeared to have once again wasted another great opportunity — but Langway changed all that.

Langway's first goal since Feb. 17, 1989 came on a wrist shot from the left circle. The shot flew past New York goalie Mike Richter, who was screened by teammate Randy Moller.

"Believe it or not I made a bad play," Langway said. "I wasn't trying to score, just throw it toward the net. (Mike) Gartner came out and blocked my first shot, and I was just lucky it came back to me. Otherwise, I was lost and they had a breakaway."

"When you see an opening like that and you're a non-goaler, you just throw it toward the net and hope for a break. I got lucky."

Langway, the Capitals' captain since joining the team in 1982, has agonized through seemingly countless playoff disappointments. This made up for some of them.

"We've had high hopes for this organization and have come up short," he said. "Winning franchises overcome setbacks, and we're still trying to learn to do that."

Now it's the Rangers who must bounce back after a disheartening setback.

"This loss puts them in the driver's seat," New York coach Roger Neilson said. "Now we've got to win at home and come back here again."

"We're disappointed, but it's not over," Rangers center Carey Wilson said. "If we play like this next game, at home, I think we'll beat this team."

The Rangers got even in third period when John Ogradnick scored a power play goal with 4:03 left and Bernie Nicholls forced the overtime by beating Washington goalie Mike Liut on the stick side with 1:12 remaining.

Before New York's 1d4f flurry, it appeared that John Druce would once again be the Capitals' hero. Druce scored twice within a 103-second span to give Washington a 3-1 lead early in the final period.

Druce's first goal, with the Capitals enjoying a two-man advantage, gave Washington a 2-1 lead with 47 seconds left in the second period. His second, 56 seconds into the final period, gave him 11 in the post-season, best in the playoffs.

But New York wasn't finished. The Rangers, who won the Patrick Division regular-season title but have not won a Stanley Cup since 1940, fought back before losing their third straight game after winning the opener 7-3.

Druce has at least one goal in five straight games and seven in the last three. This, after spending the first part of the season in the minors and scoring only eight goals in 45 regular-season games.

After Troy Mallette gave New York a 1-0 lead with a first-period goal, Washington tied it with Tim Bergland's first-ever playoff goal at 13:13 of the second period.

Druce got the go-ahead goal with Nicholls and Moller in the penalty box. Scott Stevens floated a shot toward the net that was tipped by Dale Hunter off Richter's chest, and Druce slapped the rebound out of the air and past Richter into the net.

Then, in the opening minute of the final period, Druce redirected a shot by Kevin Hatcher into the net to make it 3-1.
